IT'S A FACT as well as a joke, but all the people who lived before the latter part of the nineteenth century really missed out on something.

They just never had the opportunity to engage in that greatest of all man's hobbies, automotive tinkering. Some people call it "souping up" a car.

Cars today incite more joy, anxiety, tragedy, concern, pleasure and comfort than any other form of machinery in America's existence. They are used from everything from rum-running to the Indianapolis 500 racing without any qualifying. On the side, they also carry Mrs. Jones down to the super market to get the week's groceries.

Volumes could and have been written about the various and different types of cars in circulation—you can have cars for good gas mileage, cars for speed, cars for racing, cars for dragging cars for sex appeal, cars for status and comfort, cars for prestige, cars for "roughing it" and you can have cars for sleeping. Or you can have plain old transportation.

But before you slap on the dotted line you'd better be prepared to enter a world of competition, excitement and unrest seen nowhere else in the history of this old Planet Number Three. The car-owners' fraternity is a strange admixture of types. Wa intend to bring some of them before you in the months beginning with:

THE FORD RODDER—You see him in his back yard on Sunday afternoons, lying flat on his back and talking out and replacing parts from a manifold or from a cross shaft. Maybe a Rube Goldberg creation and a plini sized space

At The Movies

Child Star Makes Last Appearance

By BOB SIMMONS

BRANDON DE WILDE, the gravel-voiced child star of Shane, is making his last appearance—for a while anyhow—on the silver screen in Good-by, My Lady, showing Sunday through Tuesday at the Theatre. He's very good in the changing times and changing voice have taken their toll on young de Wilder.

In Good-by, My Lady the actors devote their energy, and much of the movie's 95 minutes of running time, to creating what Japan Basenji hound through the Mississippi swamps. Good-by, My Lady brings to mind a best seller of several years ago called Treading Water which was made into a money-making movie. In The Treading Water the hero spent his time driving a deer. Good-by, My Lady has possibilities if you like swamps and laughing hounds.

The acting is well illustrated all. This musical, which unfolds a strange and beautiful love story, told in unforgettable songs from the pens of Rodgers and Hart, opens at the Florida State Theatre for one week starting Wednesday.

JERRY LEWIS the carousel barker and the sweet, young mill worker blossoms into new dimensions on the wide screen. Worthy of note is the imaginative Busby Berkeley touch in the choreography for the dance scenes in the

Wandering With Wiljohn

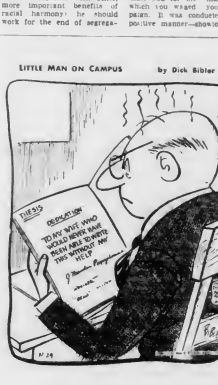
Art For And By The Neophyte...

By WILJOHN.

FOR THE PAST two issues, this space has been vacant. This may or may not have been noticed by you. The reason for breaking the Wanderings column was that the author was chancellor and the Art Symposium in Sarasota that the old "Wing-Watching" field fired him in the last issue.

The column will not be devoted to what was actually seen there but, rather, to some of the ideas and conclusions presented there. You might not think that this symposium would be of much meaning to someone not in art but you would be definitely wrong in that assumption.

To understand art, one needs but to realize that it is a language as really recognizable as any phonetic tongue and very often more direct, more descriptive. You may not always understand what is said, you may not like it and, just as likely, you may sometimes hear things that the artist hasn't said. The fact remains that there is always a message for anyone who will look for it.



I COULD TALK about the language of the artist till I'm blue in the face and you still might not know what I mean. I do not refer to the terms of the materials used in creating or even in classifying the work, although a knowledge of them would be helpful.

This may help you to understand it somewhat. Almost everyone realizes, when they read a book, that the author is writing not only words but that he is painting a picture and blending a harmony at the same time. By the same token, the composer has not only created a symphony but has painted a portrait of some sort and written a story in sound rather than words. It follows that the artist creates a symphony in color, a story in line, a picture in texture and all at the same time. These arts are interchangable and inseparable.

The difference lies chiefly in the media of the three. The author creates in words, semantic but formed in sound, the composer creates in tone, heard always but seen, too by the more refined musician. The artist creates in color, or clay and solid objects for the physical eye always and unbreakable.

FOR THIS REASON, art is necessarily entirely up to the individual as to whether he or she will like any given piece of art. It is a purely personal experience to be confronted with a painting or a piece of sculpture and asked to decide whether it is good or bad, or like or not. No one should be able to answer that for you. To be told that all Rembrandts are masterpieces and perfect and to believe that from this on is as stifling as being told that because apples were used to test the law of gravity, only apples will fall to the ground.

The most important thing I brought away from that symposium with me is the knowledge that I'm not as smart as I thought I was. But closed head to all innovations. If I had seen Franklin Adam's poetry in sound, I probably wouldn't have liked it. Now I can begin to see what he is doing does there and I appreciate it. Both the symposium and the exhibit were quite an experience and I'll probably expound upon them next week at greater length.

Foreign Countries

Education Group Reveals Summer Fellowship Offers

The Institute of International Education has announced various fellowships and scholarships available to American students this summer in various countries.

There are six fellowships for study or research in Spain available to American graduate students for the 1956-57 academic year. Information concerning these fellowships may be obtained from the Institute of International Education, 1 East 67th Street, New York City.

The closing date for application is May 1.

The fellowships provide $2000 for the academic year, for travel, maintenance and study.

Requirements

Candidates must be United States citizens between 20 and 35 years of age. Other eligibility requirements are: A bachelor's degree by the time of tenure; demonstrated academic ability and capacity for independent study or research and a plan for advanced study at a Spanish university or for research.

Good knowledge of Spanish; good moral character personality and adaptability, good health, and ability to provide for any dependents are also necessary.

Applications may be obtained from the U. S. Fulbright Department of the Institute of International Education.

The University of Vienna Summer School at Schloss Hetzendorf, Austria, will offer courses to American students from July 15 to August 25, 1956. The closing date for admission of June 15, 1956. Closing date for the competition for eight scholarships is April 15, 1956.

Designed to promote better understanding among Europeans and Americans, the curriculum features beginning, intermediate and advanced German courses and courses in Austrian history and music, the formation of the modern European mind, and the history of Middle Europe.

Courses in English

Psychology, political science and law are also offered. Courses other than German will be conducted in English. To be eligible for admission to the three or six week courses American applicants must have completed at least two years of college work by June

The opportunity for summer study combined with outdoor vacation life at a mountain lake, the school is held on a large estate on the shores of Lake St. Wolfgang in Austria's Salzkammergut district.

In addition to course work, the summer session's $200 tuition will include trips to Salzburg and the festival, and to nearby places of interest. Students will also be able to arrange for excursions to Vienna.

The eight scholarships are available to well-qualified students who would be unable to attend the summer school without financial assistance.

Applicants for these awards or for general admission should write to the Institute of International Education. The Institute is screening U. S. applications for the Vienna Summer School program.

Foreign Students Accepted

During the 1956 summer American industry will accept foreign engineering students for training and American engineering students will work abroad under a program which provides foreign on-the-job training for advanced students of science and technology.

The program in which 21 countries participate, is that of the International Association for the Exchange of Students for Technical Experience. The Institute of International Education at the request of the American Society for Engineering Education is serving as the central coordinating agency for U. S participation in the program this year.

Under the IAESTE program students are sent abroad for on-the-job training during their summer vacation for a minimum period of eight weeks.

Engineers Dominated

U. S. engineering colleges have been asked to nominate American engineering students who wish to do on-the-job training abroad.

A candidate must have completed his third year of engineering study, have had practical experience in this country, be able to pay for his international travel

Applicants may indicate their choice of country from among the IAESTE members as well as their particular field of specialization. About 80 applications have been received from U S engineering students for the coming summer.

The 21 countries participating in the IAESTE program are: Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, Iceland, India, Israel, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, the United States and Yugoslavia.

Courses Offered

The Summer Study Abroad 1956 offers courses in Latin America at schools in Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Mexico and Peru. There are also summer study opportunities at a number of Canadian universities and at the American University of Beirut in Lebanon.

The majority of courses offered to summer visitors are designed to give insight into the language, history and culture of the host country. In addition to such "civilized" courses, instruction is offered in art, music, world affairs and other subjects. There are often special courses for teachers of foreign languages. Most courses include excursions to nearby sites of interest.

Frosh Conduct Spirited Rally For Race Event

A spirited rally was held by the Freshmen Class Wednesday night in connection with its forthcoming race.

Class President Bill Clendinen announced to the crowd assembled in the Music Amphitheatre that tomorrow noon will be deadline for submitting petitions for class king and queen.

Each petition must contain at least 25 freshman signatures, none of which may appear on another petition, and may be submitted at the Longmire main desk, he said.

Clendinen said entries in the race, to be held April 24 and 26, may be made through sponsors. Organizations must submit the names of four riders and two alternates, he said, adding that the $10 entry fee need not be submitted immediately.

Students wishing to help in preparations have been asked by Clendinen to contact Cynthia Lawrence at Jennie Murphree or Bob Moreo at Senior Hall.

Collegians

Background

The "Chantwelle" resource-fully used political news, prose, newspaper headlines and local gossip to develop a sort of speed-up musical journalism known as Calypso.

The art of improvisation lives on in a ballad of recent origin, "Brown-skinned Gal," in which Danny Wright will solo. The singer is dispelling his feelings of loneliness through the creation of a happy sound, Harris commented.

Hallam will sing to Demoiselah, the snake god which figures prominently in their rituals, he added.

Memory Four

The Memory Four takes over the program temporarily before the Collegians return with four songs, featuring solo jazz. "Tea Train", by O'Hara - Dickson; "Memories Will Be Green" by soloist, "He Never Said a Mumbalin' Word" with Miss Mizell and Steve Kiedl as soloists, and "In Dat Great Gittin' Up Mornin'" a Negro spiritual with John Condra as soloist, will be sung.

The last part of the program is mainly contemporary in nature. Starting off with "This Nearly Was Mine" from Rodgers and Hammerstein's "South Pacific", it goes on to Hudson-De Lange-Mills' "Marie" with Jerry Murphy soloist director Danny Wright; "The Birth of the Blues" by De Sylva-Brown-Henderson, and "Fine and Dandy" by James-Kahn.

Also included is "My Lover is a Fisherman" by Dave Brubeck and "Mahalia" sung by the Delta Zeta Chorus. The chorus will join the Collegians for a "Carousel" choral selection, by Rodgers-Hammerstein, and "Hymn to the Garnet and Gold" by J. Dayton Smith.

Honor Court Sets Sentence

Honor Court gave a student "a suspended sentence of Honor Court probation" Monday night, Chief Justice Barbara Graham announced.

Miss Graham said the punishment was for "lying to other students."

She declined to issue details of the case.

Said Miss Graham, "The case is another example of a working system. The student involved himself is completely on his own, and, therefore, was given a suspended sentence. His attitude was excellent."

Dye Receives Membership In GAX Group

Dianalee Dye, associate retail coordinator of Mademoiselle, was recently awarded honorary membership in Gamma Alpha Chi, women's international advertising fraternity.

Miss Dye began her career as an assistant in Mademoiselle's fashion department in 1949. She later became assistant merchandise editor and was named to her present position in 1952, revealed GAX officers.

Her duties as coordinator have her traveling to retail stores reporting on fabric and fashion trends and telling key retailers about Mademoiselle's future editorial plans.

To help the magazine and stores in major college towns reach the market, Miss Dye was recently named editor of the Campus Merchandising Plan at Mademoiselle, they said.

She became acquainted with the local GAX chapter on a visit to Tallahassee and was awarded honorary membership because of her interest in the club.

Miss Dye received her BA at the University of Oregon, and completed the Radcliffe Summer Course in Publishing Procedure in 1949.

Her professional affiliations include membership in Theta Sigma Phi, national women's journalism fraternity, concluded officials.

GAX Pledges New Members

Gamma Alpha Chi, women's professional advertising honorary, recently pledged 21 students.

New pledges are Sara Atkinson, Nancy Buchanan, Sandra Champlin, Janet Conley, Nancy Cubboo, Charlotte Curry and Margie McCreight.

Also Pat Flynn, Ruth Fritchie, Jean Kitchens, Anne Purvis, Virginia Richie, Jane Salley, Lois Sloan, Jane Stone, Mary Stewart Bolooo, and Sally Gradding.

Gerry Lehner, Stephanie Powell, Madge Strain, and Hoay Greer.

New officers are Claudette Carley, president; Carole McCurey, first vice president and pledge trainer; Joseen Moore, second vice president; Martha Brigham, recording secretary, and Nance Henley, corresponding secretary.

John Harmon will serve as treasurer with Sarah Dell Gibson as reporter; Lisa Reno, marshall and Liz Slainer, historian.

FSU STUDENTS HEAR NELTON

John Melton, administrative deputy for the Leon Sheriff's office, spoke on general organization of the department yesterday to a Florida State University class in public administration.

Melton explained the fee system and arrest and investigation procedures of the office.

Yale Increases Faculty Salary With Student Funds

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (I.P. — Yale University will increase faculty salaries from 10 to 12½ per cent beginning with the present academic year, it was announced here recently by Provost Edgar S. Furnas.

At the same time he announced that in order to provide the funds necessary to finance the raise in faculty salaries, Yale will increase student tuition and other fees for both undergraduate and graduate students.

Provost Furnas said that the salary increase for the faculty "is essential if Yale is to attract and retain the best teachers and most productive scholars. The step is also essential for Yale to maintain its position in relation to other leading universities.

Long Step

"Yale is taking as long a step as is possible at this time toward improving the deteriorating economic position of its faculty. But it is clear that more must be done in the future by Yale and by all institutions of higher learning if the position of higher education in American life is to be safeguarded."

Salary increases will go to members of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and to faculty members of those professional schools at Yale who have adopted the same salary scale of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. Some of the professional schools must of necessity operate under different scales. Probable costs given as estimated increase of $600,000 in the salary budgets.

Increase Tuition

Most of this $600,000 will be forthcoming from increase in student tuition and fees. However, one-third of the total amount of new revenue expected from the increase in fees for undergraduates will be turned back into the undergraduate scholarship budget. Scholarships will be enlarged to help deserving students meet the higher fees. In addition, some students not now on scholarship aid but who will need help because of the boost in fees will also receive financial aid from the scholarship fund.

Landis Holds Fashion Show

Landis Hall sponsored a fashion show "Flying With Fashion" Wednesday.

Residents modeled formal, casual, sports and foreign costumes.

The Fashion Board was made up of Barbara Tranter and Barbara Pacheco, general chairmen; Sally McNutt, script; Betty Sheppard and Ann Holcombe, music; Mollie Carroll and Sally McNutt narrators; Nancy Van Cleve and Alice Lucas, advisers to models, and Mrs. Dana T. Davis, faculty adviser.

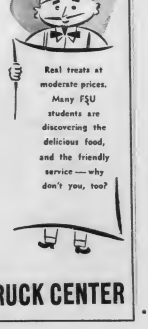
Band Problem Gets Response

Response has been "excellent" on the Homecoming Dance band problem, revealed Graham Carruthers, Gold Key president.

Most of the dorms, fraternities, and sororities have turned in suggestions for the dance band choice, he said yesterday.

"We're really rolling now," Carruthers commented "and contracts should be signed next month."

Although the final decision has not been made, "it will be a top band," he said.



The dates has been scheduled for the new Men's Gymnasium. This will hold more people than any present facility, he explained.

Jack Veghtke, one of the Semoles' most promising golfers, made the team's first hole-in-one of the season Wednesday, when he aced the 145-yard eighth hole in the match with Rollins.

Chapel Choir To Visit Here

The Columbia Chapel Choir will be guests of the Westminister Fellowship this weekend.

They will participate in a panel discussion at Westminister Fellowship following supper at 5 45.

There will be a program of sacred music in the Sanctuary at 7 p.m. followed by an Open House for the choir.

Breakfast will be served at the Westminster House at 9 Sunday morning. Cars will leave afterwards for Sunday School, announced spokesmen for the organization.

Students Pass Billboard Bill

The question of whether election posters should be limited to billboards was answered again Tuesday, this time by the Student Body.

They voted 1,876 yes, 561 no.

The administration had already decided the matter with its order of Tuesday, April 3, forbidding the placing of posters on administrative buildings.

The referendum measure, however, provides Student Government shall obtain at least 20 billboards for the displaced posters, placards and banners. The administration has erected twelve.

Bachman Ends Post 'Tradition'

When Dave Bachman is inaugurated Student Body President this spring, it will be the first time in four years the post will not be held by the son of an FSU professor or dean.

Coyle E Moore Jr., outgoing president, is the son of Dr. Coyle E. Moore, dean of the School of Social Welfare.

Pete Nimkoff, 1954-55 president, is the son of Dr. Meyer F. Nimkoff, head of the sociology department.

Milton Carothers, 1953-54 executive, is the son of Dr. M. W Carothers, dean of the graduate school.

Bachman is carrying on the tradition in part, however. The 19 year-old junior, a pre-law major and Sigma Chi, is the son of Harold Bachman, director of bands at the University of Florida in Gainesville.

Foreign Tours Are Scheduled

American Youth Hostels, Incorporated has scheduled trips through the United States and abroad for the coming summer months.

These trips, usually taken by bicycle, are planned to include tours of Mexico, Europe, Alaska, Hawaii, and the Pacific Islands.

AYH, founded in 1934 was organized to provide educational, recreational and inexpensive travel to bring about a better understanding and friendship among people in different countries.

A hostel group usually consists of a trained leader and ten other hostelers. Hostels, located about a day's journey apart, provide sleeping, cooking, washing, and recreation facilities.

The firing squad was escorting a Russian comrade to his place of execution. Rain was pouring down on the group and the march was a decidedly dismal one.

"What a terrible morning to die" muttered the unhappy prisoner.

"What the heck are you kicking about?" retorted a guard. "We have to march back in it!"

Dear Students,

I want to take this opportunity to thank you for electing me to serve you as Women's Vice President for next year. I sincerely appreciate all of the help and support that you gave me in the campaign and the election

I pledge to you, the students that I will devote my time and energy to serve you in every way possible as Women's Vice President and to constantly work for the welfare and improvement of our student body.

Thank you again for placing your trust and confidence in me.

Sincerely,
CAROLYN CLOSE

An Open Letter to the Student Body:

To make a personal expression of my appreciation and thanks to each person who contributed to my efforts on behalf of my candidacy for President would be nearly impossible; therefore, I am taking this means to convey to you my gratitude for your confidence in me.

We fought a good fight for the principles and ideals that were dear to our hearts. We are proud of each and every one who campaigned on our behalf and for our cause We shall always know that it was a good, clean campaign. Though we lost the material object, we have gained many intangible benefits.

I now urge all those who support me to turn their united efforts to the new president so that Florida State University may prosper in the forthcoming year with a united Student Body

Sincerely,
JEM MOORE

Dave Bachman

Dear Students,

I would like to express a sincere thanks to the student body for the confidence you have placed in me. My deepest debt of gratitude is to my friends whose help and work was so invaluable this week. Though I can only say thanks now, I hope that through my performance of the duties of President next year I can show myself to be worthy of your trust.

May student government continue to grow and serve the interests of you—the students of FSU.

Sincerely
DAVE BACHMAN

At Alligator Harbor

Open House Slated Sunday By Institute

The Oceanographic Institute will hold open house Sunday, at its marine laboratory at Alligator Harbor.

Dr. Sidney W. Fox, director of the Institute, said the exhibits will be more comprehensive than those at the first open house a year ago which drew a crowd of 1,500 from the area.

Dr. F. C. W Olson, associate professor in the Institute who is making arrangements for this year's open house, said the doors will open at 10 a.m. and close at 5 p.m.

Albert and Betty, the two porpoises who are the subjects of psychological experiments now under way at FSU, will be on hand, he said.

So will a multitude of other fishes and animals which inhabit Alligator Harbor and adjacent waters The open house, he explained, will provide a kind of "show window" of the Gulf's population of both strange and familiar sea life.

Background Music

Furnishing a "background music" during the entire day will be the noises of the deep picked up by special microphones and amplified through loud-speaking equipment.

"Many kinds of fish and other animals of the ocean make noises peculiar to those species," he said. "Dr Winthrop Kellogg of the Psychology Department here has conducted research on these sounds. Efforts during World War II to locate enemy submarines produced much of the know-how for bringing to our ears this under sea music.

"In addition to the 'live' music which will be heard, records have been made by Dr. Kellogg of the sounds made by such things as porpoises, the pistol shrimp, the pig fish or grunt, catfish, croakers and even crabs Since some fish sing only at night, like the frogs, we can bring recordings of their sounds to people at a time when they otherwise could not be heard.

Experts On Hand

Dr. Olson emphasized there will be experts on hand to explain at length the many exhibits and equipment used by the Oceanographic Institute in collecting and in examining what it has collected.

The Oceanographic Institute pulls together into one big study of the ocean everything from the Department of Psychology to the Department of Economics. Other co-operating departments are Meteorology, Physiology, Geography, Chemistry, Bacteriology, Botany, Zoology, Geology and Food and Nutrition.

Adlai Backers Meet Planned

An organizational and planning meeting of Students for Stevenson will be held Wednesday.

The meeting, called by Senator Wilson Carroway, Leon County chairman for Stevenson and by Graham Carrothers, head of the Stevenson for President nucleus group on campus, will begin at 7 30 p.m. in the Leon County Courthouse courtroom.

Literature will be given out and plans for Stevenson's planned visit to Tallahassee will be discussed.

Stevenson plans to be here in about two weeks.

OFFICE INSTITUTE

Dr J. Frank Dame, professor of business education at FSU, will appear in an office management institute in Tampa Friday.

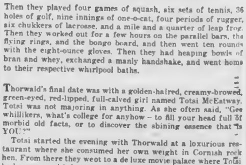
THE MANY LOVES OF THORWALD DOCKSTADER



When Thorwald Dockstader—sophomore, epicure, and sportsman—first took up smoking, he did not simply choose the first brand of cigarettes that came to hand. No, indeed! He did what any sophomore, epicure, and sportsman would do: he sampled several brands and then picked the gentlest, tastiest, most thumpingly, wondrously, unfailingly pleasing of all—Philip Morris, of corris!

Similarly, when Thorwald Dockstader took up girls, he did not simply select the first one who came along. No, indeed! Thorwald sampled. He took out several likely girls and then he compared their charms and then he made his choice.

His first date was with an English lit major named Elizabeth Barrett Grish, a wisp of a girl with luminous eyes and a soul that shimmered with a pale, unearthly beauty. Trippingly, trippingly, she walked with Thorwald upon the beach and sat with him behind a windward dune and listened to a sea shell and sighed sweetly and took out a little gold pencil and a little morocco notebook and wrote a little poem:

I will lie upon the shore,
I will be a dreamer.
I will feel the sea once more
Pounding on my femur.

Thorwald's second date was with a physical ed major named Peaches Glendower, a broth of a girl with a ready smile and a size 18 neck. She took Thorwald down to the cinder track where they jogged around thirty or forty times to open up the pores.

..They jogged around 30 or 40 times to open up the pores...

Then they played four games of squash, six sets of tennis, 36 holes of golf, nine innings of one-o-cat, four periods of rugger, six chukkers of lacrosse, and a mile and a quarter of leap frog. Then they worked out for a few hours on the parallel bars, the flying rings, and the bongo board, and then went ten rounds with the eight-ounce gloves. Then they had heaping bowls of bran and whey, exchanged a manly handshake, and went home to their respective whirlpool baths.

Thorwald's final date was with a golden-haired, creamy-browed, green-eyed, red-lipped, full-calved girl named Totsi McEatway. Totsi was not majoring in anything. As she often said, "Gee whillikers, what's college for anyhow—to fill your head full of morbid old facts, or to discover the shining essence that is YOU?"

Totsi started the evening with Thorwald at a luxurious restaurant where she consumed her own weight in Cornish rock hen. From there they went to a de luxe movie palace where Totsi had popcorn with butter and a bag of chocolate covered raisins—also with butter. Then they went to a costly ballroom and cha-cha'd till dawn, tipping the band wildly all the while. Then they went to a Chinese restaurant where Totsi, unable to decipher the large and baffling menu, solved her problem by ordering one of everything. Then Thorwald took her to the women's dorm, boosted her in the window, and went downtown to wait for the Morris Plan office to open.

While waiting, Thorwald thought over all of his girls and came to a decision. "It is clear," said Thorwald, "that I am not yet ready for girls." "It is equally clear," he continued, "that a man needs a gentle companion, and who," he asked, "will be my gentle companion?" "Why, PHILIP MORRIS, of corris," he answered. "Philip Morris will be my tender comrade, my solace and my strength, my friend in adversity, my shelter in vicissitude, my boon and bosom buddy," and, so saying, Thorwald lit a PHILIP MORRIS and was content.

The makers of Philip Morris, who bring you this column every week, hope that Thorwald will soon find the girl of his dreams, and that they will make beautiful smoke rings together—with Philip Morris, of corris!

The Press Table

By ALAN WHITMARSH
Flambeau Sports Editor

THEY'RE OFF—

It's baseball time again and next Tuesday 16 major-league teams begin the long grind to what they hope will be a 1956 pennant and a trip to the World Series.

In light of this reporters and columnists are throwing rash predictions around with reckless abandon, as they always do at this time of the year, as to who will represent the two circuits in the dream series.

So, though they will probably mean no more than anybody else's here's the Flambeau sports staff's predictions for the 1956 finish.

AMERICAN LEAGUE	NATIONAL LEAGUE
New York	Brooklyn
Boston	Milwaukee
Cleveland	New York
Chicago	St. Louis
Detroit	Cincinnati
Kansas City	Philadelphia
Washington	Chicago
Baltimore	Pittsburgh

Most of our writers seemed well convinced that both the Yankees and Dodgers will repeat without too much competition even from the top contenders.

Brooklyn's selection in the National circuit was unanimous, and the Braves' pick for the runner-up almost as heavy.

The Dodgers probably strengthened themselves considerably with the acquisition of Randy Jackson from the Cubs, while the Braves remained about status quo for the 1956 campaign.

A real battle looms for the third spot between the Giants, the Cardinals and the Redlegs all of whom were bunched closely in the voting.

The return of "Vinegar Bend" Mizall will add considerably to the Cardinals' hopes, and they have another rookie of the year candidate in infielder Don Blasingame.

The Redlegs still lack a dependable pitching staff, but the power of Ted Kluszewski, Gus Bell and company should keep Cincinnati in the running for a first division berth all the way.

The Phillies could move up, but they lack good pitching strength behind Robin Roberts and need more power to break into the top four.

There's little to choose among the Cubs and Pirates, both have fair pitching staffs but neither appears ready to move up in the standings.

The fight in the American League appears more likely to come in the scramble for second rather than first, as the defending champion Yankees are too solid for the other three contenders to pass.

The Bronx Bombers added to their fortunes with the acquisition of southpaw Mickey McDermott and Mickey Mantle appears set for his greatest year.

The Boston Red Sox appear to have come out on top in the winter trades by bringing Bob Porterfield and Mickey Vernon into the fold from the Washington Senators.

This coupled with probably the best young pitching staff in baseball makes Pinky Higgins' charges a prime favorite to battle the Yanks all the way.

The arrival of slugger Larry Doby gives Chicago just about the best outfield in baseball, but our staffers rate the importance of Cleveland's top pitching staff higher.

The three will most likely be matched highly in their fight for second, but it's doubtful that any of them can wrest the crown from New York, at least not this year.

The Detroit Tigers find themselves in a rather awkward position; unable to break into the top four, yet obviously head and shoulders above the other three members of the second division.

The Tigers have AL batting champion Al Kaline, Harvey Kuenn and Ray Boone, but lack a good second baseman and another outfielder.

Kansas City, Washington and Baltimore should make a scramble out of it for the cellar slot, though the Athletics may possibly pull out and leave the Senators and Orioles to fight it out among theselves.

The Athletics main strength comes from veterans such as Alex Kellner, Gus Zernial and Enos Slaughter, but they have many promising newcomers who may pan out.

The Senators generally got the wrong end of the bent in the deal with the Red Sox, and will be depending on a patch-work linedup to work their way out of the cellar alot that they occupied in 1955.

The Orioles have very little hope, depending mostly on a group of Yankee cast-offs and hopeful youngsters.

It's a long time from now to World Series time, but it appears that once again the fans in the big city will see one of their frequent subway series.

Volleyballers Win 25th Game By Beating Tyndall Air Base

Lead by all-American Bernie McCann, Florida State's championship volleyballers swept the Tyndall Air Force team last Tuesday night at the Demonstration school.

The Tribe won 15-6, 15-6, 15-13 as McCann was the leading spiker with 18 kills to his credit.

Coach Bill Odeneal started a team with four all-Americans; Eugene Lewis, Lyle Lesser, Ray Johnson and Bernie McCann. The other starters were Roger Clingerman, and John Miller.

The volleyballers now have a track of 25-6 for the season, and will play one more home game next week.

On May 5 to 10th, the Seminoles will defend their championship in the National Intercollegiate and National Open at Seattle, Washington.

FSU Frosh, Gator Nine Meet Today

Its Florida State and Florida in baseball all over again today and tomorrow, but this time its the Frosh that take the field.

Today's game will start at 4 p.m. at Centennial Field, while tomorrow's skiffs in Bak Campus at 1:30 in the afternoon.

The Frosh will be looking for wins two and three. They opened their season by defeating American International College, 15-6.

Slated to start on the mound for the baby Seminoles are Al Zyla with Warren Long, brother of Max Long, setting the nod in the second tilt.

Long also doubles as the team a first baseman when not on the mound.

The other probable starters are Peter Codella, catcher; Long or Dean Donnelly, first base; Dale Koch, at second; Mike Capps, shortstop, and either Jim Bailey or Gordon Caldwell at third.

John Banano, Hal Muchowier, and Bill Kolb will patrol the outfield for FSU.

Varsity baseball coach Danny Litwhiler is well pleased with the progress shown by the Frosh.

"They look good, and with them boys moving up to the varsity next year Florida State should have a terrific club."

Freshman coach is Jim Ralston, who Litwhiler terms "is doing a wonderful job."

Price Up For Olympic Coach

Dr. Hartley Price, Florida State University Gymnastics coach, was recently nominated to be America's coach and trainer for Gymnastics in the coming Olympic Games.

Dr. Price, coach of the Seminole gym team since its founding in 1950, was nominated by the National Association of American Gymnastics Coaches for the games to be held this summer in Melbourne, Australia.

The actual selection of a coach will be made by the National Olympics Committee, but they usually follow the Gymnastics Association nomination.

Price is regarded to be in gymnastics similar to what the Invincible Knute Rockne was in football.

Since his coming to FSU back in 1950, he has produced two NCAA and three NAAU team titles many Florida and Georgia AAU titles and constantly has kept the Seminoles the top gymnastics team in the South.

In addition, the team has been undefeated in all dual meets covering a three-year span.

On the 26th of this month, Coach Price will leave his gymnasts for State College, Penn. for the defense of their National AAU crown.

Seminole —Shorts—

Leading hitter in FSU's recent invitational baseball tournament was Wisconin first baseman John Demerritt, who hit .428 for the seven games and belied five home runs.

Florida State pitchers have already broken two records during the 1956 season. Max Long establishing a new mark for most wins in a career, and Tony Avitable breaking Long's old record for most strikeouts in a season.

Gators Nip Tribe Nine As Thinclads Make Bid

Tracksters Try For 2nd Win Over Florida

By ROBERT WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State Seminoles track squad lays its 3-0 record on the line against the University of Florida Saturday afternoon in Gainesville.

This dual meet will be the first direct competition in track between these intra-state rivals in history. The Gators, however, have competed against the Seminoles in the AAU meets and the Florida Relays.

Last spring, the Tribe, which was billed as a dark horse, upset the highly touted Gator team in the AAU meet. The ambitious Seminoles toppled the Gator juggernaut 91 5/6 to 41 1/6.

Earlier this year, during the Easter vacation, the two schools opposed each other in Florida Relays. In this meet, however, the Gator talent outweighed the Seminole strength.

Not Content

Seminole track mentor Mike Long is not content to rest upon the laurels of his victories against Randolph, Southern, Davidson, and Mercer.

He emphasizes that his charges are ready and ambitious to tackle the once-victorious Gators who have been far overwhelmed the Georgia Tech thinclads 97-3.

Coach Long footnoted this assertions by adding that the Gators are certainly a very capable team and very capably coached. His goal is as he said, "to get down and scrap for the best possible performances".

He later declared, "I believe we're ready, but we'll need the best effort possible to win."

However, the Gators have an imposing array of talent in quest of the Seminole thrust. Possible Olympic contenders Rutgers Watson and Earl Peacher form the nucleus of University of Florida Coach Percy Beard's track squad.

Watson, who placed second in the 100 yd. dash in the NCAA trials meet last year will oppose Seminole Jack Terwilliger, while Peacher, who tied for second slot in the pole vault in the same meet will oppose Tribe vaulters Warren Strickland and Don Ayers.

Golfers Face Auburn Away

The steamrolling Florida State golf squad will try to make Auburn its ninth consecutive victim of the season today at Auburn.

On Monday, April 16, the Seminoles head for Gainesville to meet the University of Florida for the second time this year. FSU has defeated both Auburn and Florida in earlier matches this season.

Rollins was crushed 16-11 by the red hot Seminoles last Wednesday at the Tallahassee Country Club. Highlight of the match was a hole in one on the eighth hole by Jack Venable of FSU. Venable finished the day with a 71.

Ed Jenkins also of FSU, shot a five under par 67. Bob Dunn the Seminoles number one man fired a 72. Bill Ross shot a four under par 68 for Rollins.

The Seminoles came from behind on Monday, April 9, to edge Georgia Tech 13½-4½. FSU avenged last year's defeat at the hands of the Yellow Jackets who were the only team to beat the Seminoles last season.

It was a type of ironic win for the Tribe because they won by the same score Tech beat them last year.

Georgia Tech's Ned Edge shot the best score of the day—a 68. Jenkins teamed with Dunn to breeze by Edge and George Johnston of Tech 6½-2½. FSU's Bob Shuman and Veable tied Jim Johnson and Ralph Barnes 4½-4½.

Bunk Berry and Bill Shelton finished the day for the Seminoles by tying Tom Hill and Jim Mathews 4½-4½.

LEADING HITTER. Dick Houser, a Sophomore outfielder from Montgomary, Ala., is currently leading the Seminole nine in hitting.

Dorm Volleyball Title Won By Methodists

The Methodists became 1956 Dorm-Independent volleyball champions on Wednesday night by beating the Baptists 16-14, 15-5 in the finals. A day earlier they beat the Penthouse by the score of 16-14, 10-15, 15-12.

Members of the champions' team were: P. Kilbourn, J. Adamo, R. Chisholm, Vic Babanks, Jim Bradford, Lou Admondova, Charles McNeil.

The Penthouse finished the season in second place by beating Senate Hall 15-8, 9-15, 15-9. Thatleft Senior Hall in fourth place, and Baptists in third.

The kid came off the intramural softball season these last few days, but the games were not so hot, and neither was the weather.

SN opened with a 12-2 win over LCA, then were set down in a tight game by PKT 9-1.

PDT took a 11-1 win over SPE, and SAE got a win by default from a "no-showing" TC outfit.

PKT were coasting with a 9-5 win until the last inning when the house fellers, with the ba clinax a four-run homer by manager Al Daves on a two out, 3-2 count, which gave KS a 10-9 victory.

KA beat TEP 10-8 and DTD beat PEP 8-1. ATO with a 12-0 lead, finally won what looked like a football score-game from SC 11-11.

Games are booked for every evening next week. See Student Center board for schedules and scores.

GOLF

First round golf results are as follows.

KS best SAE 2 and 1; LCA best SC 3 and 0; PDT won from KA 2 and 1; SPE best DTD; SN best PEA 3 and 1; PKP took a 3-0 win from TC and TEP won default from PKT.

Magnolia Hall eliminated the Feds.

Semi-finals are set for April 16 and the finals for Dorm and Fraternity leagues for April 18 at the Tallahassee Country Club.

VOLLEYBALL

The final windup of the volleyball season was on last night at Dorm Sandtraps and champions will be announced in the next issue of the Flambeau.

Florida Trips Seminoles, 7-5; Cinci Monday

By JOE GREENE
Flambeau Sports Writer

Monday night finds Florida State's baseball team facing the University of Cincinnati at 8:00 p.m. at Centennial Field, Tallahassee.

Tony Avitable, FSU's strikeout king, will be on the mound for the game with Cincinnati.

A thorn in the side of Cincinnati's meanderous will be the Seminoles' righthander Dick Houser. During the FSU base ball tournament Houser hit the ball at a .500 clip, and is at present the team's leading hitter.

Last Tuesday's scheduled game with the University of Florida at Gainesville was cancelled because of rain, and no effort will be made to set another date for a future meeting of the two clubs this year.

In the first meeting of the Octer and Seminole baseball teams, Tribe garnered runs trimped across the plate in the second inning to give Florida a 1-0 and 5 victory

A sixth inning rally by the Tribe came close to pulling the game out of the fire, but the duet with men on second and third when catcher Gerry Ashley grounded out.

Seminole runs came one in the first, a single tally in the fifth and eighth and two in the almost but not quite ninth.

Bad Inning

The disasterous second inning for the Seminoles went like this. With two men on first, a ground ball eluded shortstop Phil Hunt. John Ash, on the mound for the Seminoles was free to throw first to the next three men to face him.

Then Gator batters send off for three singles in a row, runs crossed the plate and there went the old ballgame.

Six errors by the Seminoles aided the Gator cause considerably. The Gators slipped just one time.

Florida scored two lone runs in the bottom of the first and sixth on homers by Bobby Barnes and Dale White.

Extra base blows from the bats of Seminoles came from Fred Twomey who hit a three bagger and pitcher Tommy Garcia, a double.

Lee Corso, Owen McCarron, and Dick Houser contributed two hits each to the Seminole attack.

University Professors Name Lawler Prexy

Dr. Eugene S. Lawler, professor of Secondary Education, was elected president Monday of the Florida State University chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

He succeeds Dr. Robert D. Miller, head of the philosophy department.

Other officers elected were: Dr. Earl Frieden, associate professor of chemistry, vice-president; Miss Marjorie Judy, modern language instructor, secretary; and Dr. Heberio Lacayo, associate professor of Spanish, treasurer.

Jeani Kitchens Crowned As Phi Delt Sweetheart

Jeani Kitchens, Kappa Alpha Theta, was crowned Sweetheart of Phi Delta Theta last Friday night at the annual fraternity weekend.

Members of the Phi Delt court were Jeannette Porter, ADPi, Jo Ada Williams, XO, Blanche Bunting Hall, ZTA, Scotty Dickinson Kelley, AGD, and Merlene Pittman, AGD.

The girls were presented at a formal dance which marked the beginning of the fraternity's festivities at Silver Lake and the coast.

New Trophy

Sigma Kappa will initiate the presentation of the "Best Host" Trophy at the IPC dance tonight.

Winner of the "Host" trophy was selected by a majority vote of the sororities according to June Silay, SK publicity chairman.

The award will be given annually along with the Kappa Sigma sponsored "Hostess of the Year" trophy.

SKs, Phi Taus

Sigma Kappa's Janice Grosser was named "Dream Girl of Phi Kappa Tau" last weekend.

The Phi Taus gave a real pig barbecue near West Campus to launch their annual festivities.

A formal dance, and a coast party at Alligator Point were held Saturday night and Sunday.

Sigma Nu

Sigma Nu's annual White Star Weekend mixed water skiing and steaks at Mystic Lake with a formal banquet and dance at the Floridan Hotel.

Jerry Simpson, alumnus of the FSU chapter, spoke on the increasing emphasis of youthful leadership in government at the banquet Friday night. He stressed the importance of developing the functions of the fraternity.

Following the speech, an official change of fraternity officers was made. Past commander Bob Andrews presented the gavel to Jim Parkhurst.

Peggy Worth, Chi Omega, was announced as the Sigma Nu IPC sweetheart at the formal dance. Music for the affair was by the Vevetones.

Favors for White Star Weekend were silver bracelets bearing the Sigma Nu crest.

Alems Fete

A chicken barbecue dinner was given for Sigma Phi Epsilons and their dates by the Sig Ep Alums at the home of Mack Humphreys, alumni president.

Research Vessel To Explore Gulf

The Sea Quest II, research vessel of Florida State University's Oceanographic Institute, is getting ship-shape for a new series of investigations in the Gulf of Mexico.

A new 85-horsepower Diesel motor has just been installed in the 36-foot craft, giving her a cruising speed of 10 knots and a top speed of about 14 knots, according to Richard Durant, superintendent of the Institute's marine laboratory at Alligator Harbor.

Open House

The Sea Quest II will be on hand at the annual open house of the marine laboratory, Sunday April 29, when the public will inspect the laboratory and exhibits on work of the Institute's scientists from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. that day. At other times the laboratory is open only to scientists and oceanography students.

Some 1,500 persons crowded last year's open house at the Alligator Harbor laboratory, about 45 miles from Tallahassee.

While speed and efficiency of operation will result from the new Diesel, its chief advantage will be increased safety to the scientists and students using the craft. The Diesel, replacing a gasoline engine, reduces danger of fire almost to the zero point, Durant said.

Confidence Expressed

The Sea Quest II was converted by the Oceanographic Institute for marine research from a Coast Guard rescue boat. Though she draws only about three feet of water, making her convenient for work in shoaly water near the coast, the craft is considered to be especially seaworthy. Durant said he would not hesitate to operate the Sea Quest II from 50 to 60 miles offshore.

Up to nine scientists and students plus a skipper can be carried easily on the craft.

Gamma Alpha Chi Wins Cup Award

The Florida State chapter of Gamma Alpha Chi, women's professional advertising group, has won second place in the A P Phillips Advertising Achievement Awards.

The award, a silver loving cup, was presented at the closing luncheon of the Southeastern Advertising Conference held recently in Orlando, revealed Sarah Dell Gibson, reporter.

A. P. Phillips, Jr., president of an Orlando advertising firm presented the award to Claudette Carley, president of the chapter, and to Mary Elizabeth King, past president.

Concert, Beauty Contest, Dance Spark 'Capers'

A concert, beauty contest, and formal dance will spark the Inter-Fraternity Council's annual "Capers" this weekend.

The Auburn Knights, well-known collegiate band, will play a concert this afternoon in the Music Annex theater and for the dance tonight in the Suwannee Room. These events start at 3:30 and 9 p.m., respectively.

Adding color to the concert will be the 1956 IPC Beauty Contest. Contestants, sponsored by each fraternity, will be judged on the basis of poise, beauty, and audience appeal.

Contest judges are Tom Brownlee, Chamber of Commerce manager; Tom Hyde, Tal-Cor theater chain manager, Dr. James Carr, assistant dean of men, and Ruth Chapman, Tallahassee Democrat society editor will judge candidates in shorts and tee shirts and in evening dress.

Winner of the IPC crown and her court will be presented at the dance Saturday night. Last year's Queen, Jean Harden, Pi Beta Phi, will be on hand to help with the presentation.

Award Made

"Hostess Sorority of the Year" an award sponsored by Kappa Sigma, will also be announced. Kappa Alpha Theta was voted award recipient by the fraternities last year.

Two more trophies, for fraternity scholarship and intramural winners, will be given out at the afternoon concert according to Jimmy Josnos, IFC president.

Dance committee chairmen are Frank Beckham, PIKA president, general; Vernon Edgar, ATO, beauty contest; Ray Heman, PKT, decorations and arrangements; Norman Burth, SPE, chaperones and refreshments; Dale Parker, PDT, publicity; Jim Ralston, PKP, tickets, and Bill Nesbitt, TX, band and invitations.

Fraternities will wind up IPC weekend with individual parties tomorrow night.

A woman called up her insurance agent and said that she wanted to change her beneficiary. "I've just had twins," she informed him.

The insurance man had difficulty hearing her and and asked, "Will you repeat that again, please?"

To which she shot back emphatically, "No! If I can help it."

Board Commends Recent Editorials

The Board of Student Publications Wednesday expressed its appreciation "to the current editor of The Florida Flambeau for editorial comments made in response to an article which appeared in a recent issue of New Republic magazine."

The board's statement followed on the heels of editorial discussion of an article written in the magazine by an ex-Flambeau editor labelling the board an attempt to suppress publications at Florida State University.

Board members said they wanted to go on record as supporting the Flambeau's stand, but said they felt the matter should be dropped there

Delegates Favor

In other action, the board delegated its authority to name the editor of the Summer Flambeau to Oscar Johnson, editor-appointee of the Flambeau. This step was taken, the board said, because no student had applied for the position by the deadline time for qualifying.

The board considered the Flambeau budget for next year, recommending that it be increased from $21,761, this year's figure, to $22,250.

Major increases recommended were for salaried positions, including $10 per issue for the editor; $5 for business and advertising managers; $7.50 for news and managing editors and the addition of an exchange manager to the salaried list.

OK's Pass Fee

The board went on record as favoring a $2 charge for portrait pictures in next year's Tally-Ho, and set a precedent by asking the editor, Barbara Ayala, to seriously consider charging a token price of $1 for the Tally-Ho to students who do not have pictures taken.

Miss Ayala agreed that the charge might be feasible and would "serve as an added inducement for students to buy pictures" since it would only cost $1 extra. The purchase of the $1 charge, the board said, is primarily to help defray on the amount of Tally-Ho's to be printed.

This year, the board said, the Tally-Ho initiated the idea of having students who wanted the annuals sign up for them by a certain date. The purpose in this was to determine the number to be ordered.

Time Runs Out

But, said the board, the time for signing the contract had run out before all students who wanted a book had a chance to sign up. The $1 charge, it continued, would be a more concrete method of arriving at the number of yearbooks to be ordered.

The board also recommended that the Tally-Ho consider selling advertising next year in order to help meet its expenses.

Yearbook Salaries

Recommendations concerning Tally-Ho salaries for next year were as follows: editor, $50 per month; business manager, $40; chief photographer, $40; assistant photographer, $20, and managing editor, $20.

Salaries recommended for Smoke Signals were: editor, $50 per month; managing editor, $30, and business manager $20 per month.

Complete budgets for publications other than the Flambeau were not recommended since the editors had not presented their proposals to the board.

ELECTED OFFICIALS MUST FILE STATEMENT

Candidates elected in recent Student Body elections must submit a final expense statement by Saturday, April 21.

These must be filed before candidates may receive a certificate of election, warned Bebe Williams, secretary of elections.

Statement blanks are kept in the director's office in Longmire, she announced.

FSU Bridge Team Second In Zone

A Florida State University bridge tournament entry recently placed second in the southeastern zone play.

Bill Williams and George Carver, Alpha Tau Omega, playing north-south, achieved the high-est local rating before their regional victory, announced Mercedith Payne, student bridge manager here.

Margaret Ann Young and Pat Rogers, east-west, also won honors as 1956 campus champions in the local Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament held here.

Dr. Claude Flory and Dr. Hilda Tinney, faculty directors of the tourney, presented the official national certificates at last night's session of the sorority-fraternity duplicate bridge contest.

Approximately 17,000 at 00 colleges and universities throughout the United States took part in the tournament, according to Dr. Flory.

The national tourney was won by teams from Harvard University and Dartmouth College.

Card by card play of each hand was recorded and sent to national headquarters for detailed analysis by a board of experts, who determined winners on the basis of both results and technique, he explained.

Air Force To Show 99' B-29 Fuselage

The 99-foot-long fuselage of a B-29 Superfort—a medium bomber of the type which dropped atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki—will go on display in an Air Force exhibit here next week.

The exhibit, which also includes an F-94C Starfire jet interceptor and two engines, will be open to the public south of the Geology Building Tuesday and Wednesday, according to Col Howard J. Withycombe professor of air science.

The B-29 was produced during World War II to carry out long-range bombing missions against Japan's island empire. It can deliver a 10,000 bomb load within a 2,900-mile radius.

Music Educators Leave For Convene

Faculty and graduate members of Music Educators' National Conference left today for a five-day convention in St. Louis.

Among those going, Dr. Wiley L. Housewright, will conduct a session on jazz, with the aid of Dave Brubeck, well-known pianist from Hollywood, California.

Others in the party from FSU include Miss Lois Schnoor and Dr. Robert L. Briggs, faculty, and students John Stanley, Erwin Hasmme, Ralph Gabriel and Maurice King.

The convention celebrates the fiftieth anniversary of MENC.

FSU Men Invited To Marine Reserve

Florida State University men will have an opportunity to join a Marine Corps organized reserve unit in Tallahassee May 15.

Lt. Joe Lauten, a graduate student here who is a recruiting officer for the First Tank Co., USMCR, said the regular Marine Corps staff directing the unit will arrive on that date.

The company will have eight tanks and an authorized strength of 193 officers and men, he said.

Drills will be conducted at Dale Mabry Field. A full day's pay will be paid for each drill, with checks sent to the Marines each three months.

All former Marines and most Navy personnel who join the unit will be given the same rank they held while in service, explained Lauten.

All freshmen and sophomore ROTC members are eligible to join the unit. Students who have not been in service and who are not ROTC or any kind of reserve unit are also eligible to join.

This participation in the Marine company will count as part of obligated service in the armed forces, he said.

Lt. Lauten may be contacted for further information through the Marine Corps recruiting station at the Tallahassee post office.

Campbell Says FSU Entrance Requests Heavy

Coed Applications 70 Percent Higher Than 1 Year Ago

Dr. Doak S. Campbell, president of Florida State University, said Friday that applications for admission to the university are coming in heavier than ever before and pre-paid applications in our category are 70 per cent higher than a year ago.

Talking to FSU Alumni in Miami, the president said paid room reservations in women's residence halls at FSU were 70 per cent higher than last year as of last Friday.

FSU, he said, has on-campus housing for 2400 women and 1600 men and is suffering from a shortage of classroom, laboratory and dormitory space.

We are building to try to catch up with the growth of the university from now on," he declared.

The university's growth reflects in part the growth of the state itself, he told the alumni, and this growth of the state does certain problems "which are upon us now."

Little 500 Race Preliminaries Friday At Track

Florida State University's "Little 500" freshman class bicycle race will swing into full action Friday afternoon with the time-qualifying preliminaries at the Florida High track.

Preliminaries will last through Saturday and will determine the top twenty teams in the final race April 28. In the qualifying heats, every team will race one mile with each of the four riders on the team making one lap around the quarter-mile track.

The preliminaries will commence at 2 p.m. and finish at 4 Friday and begin again at 10 Saturday.

Teams Entered

One four-man team with two alternates has been entered by each of the following organizations: Sigma Chi Kappa Sigma, Kappa Alpha Theta, Delta Delta Delta, Sigma Nu, Theta Chi, Tau Kappa Alpha.

Alpha Tau Omega, Phi Kappa Tau, Sigma Epsilon, Alpha Gamma Delta, Gamma Phi Beta, Delta Zeta, Lambda Chi Alpha, Kappa Delta.

Sigma Kappa, Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Xi Delta, Phi Mu Delta, Tau Delta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Chi Omega, Alpha Omicron Pi, Beta, Phi, Phi Delta Theta, Delta Phi Omega, Senior Hall, and the three units from West Hall—Rebels, Pirates and Penthouse.

Also Scheduled

Also on the agenda for Friday is the first of two elections for king and queen of the freshman class. Only members are eligible to vote.

The following petitions for queen were received before the deadline last week: Sally Ann Dean, Barbara Evans, Stephanie Gunderson, Nancy Beth Hesscock, Cynthia Lawrence, Peggy Needwood, Barbara Reedy, Linda Robins, Peggy Siedel, Pat Starnes, Bonnie Tapley, and Dawn Thomas.

Petitions for King were submitted for—Dean Donley, Gerry Gordon, Scott Harpe, Jim Mayer, and Jack Montgomery.

Junior Counselors Elect '56 Officers

At a meeting held Thursday night in Reynolds parlor the Junior Counselors elected officers for next year.

The president of Jennie Murphree will be Joyce Weatherup. Judy Gayle Gardner and Sarah Jane Griffin serving as vice-presidents.

Chris Ginocchio will be the president of Reynolds Hall and Catherine Dunn and Nina Williams will be the vice-presidents.

The president-elect of Bryan Hall is Glenda Bronze with Polly Atwater and Kay Decubellis as her assistants.

Barbara Jean Little will serve as president of Broward Hall. Linda Broderick and Shirley McLendon will be vice presidents.

SS Test Slated Thursday Morning

The Selective Service College Qualification Test will be administered Thursday, April 19, under the jurisdiction of Dr. Mark DeGraff, Director of the Test Service Bureau.

Students who plan to take the test should report to the Test Service Bureau, 310 Education, on Thursday morning at 8:30.

Starlight Serenade On Tap Tomorrow

The third annual series of Starlight Serenades in the Music Amphitheater will be begun tomorrow night by the Symphonic Band.

The concert, under the direction of Stanley R. Walcomb, will begin at 8:15. In case of rain, Walcomb announced, it will be moved into Opperman Music Hall.

Sax Solo

Charles Culbreath, saxophone soloist, will be featured in a rendition of Dorzy's "Oodles of Noodles."

The concert will open with the introduction to Act III of Wagner's Lohengrin, transcribed by George Drumm.

Other works will be "First Suite for Military Band," Holst; "Sheepskin Rag," from Lumsy Berry by Grainger; "Holiday for Winds," Gaser; "North Sea Overture," Hermann; "Tambour," Cavez-Yerger; "Can-Can Selection," by Cole Porter; arranged by Robert Russell Bennett; "Mascarade," by Walters; and "Caribbean Paradise," Morrison.

Four in Series

The Starlight Serenade is the first in a series of four to be presented this year. The others will be given on April 23, May 9, and May 16.

When the series was begun two years ago band director Walcomb said he hoped to make them a tradition.

"The Starlight Serenade," he said recently, "is the contribution of the University Bands to campus tradition and campus life. Its purpose is to provide pleasant entertaining and relaxing music in an environment which takes advantage of the Florida climate and the beautiful outdoor theatre on the university campus."

Travel Service Now Permanent

The student travel service has begun operating for weekend trips, announced Pat Milton, head of the bureau.

Since the travel service proved to be helpful over the Easter holidays, it has been decided to extend the service on a weekend basis from now until the end of the semester, she said.

Those students desiring rides or riders from Tallahassee to Miami may obtain complete connections by calling the student travel bureau at Ext. 2191.

Sales Begin For Speech Play, Ghosts

Tickets go on sale tomorrow for Henrik Ibsen's "Ghosts," a Speech Department production scheduled to begin a four-day run this Friday.

Available at the Westcott Ticket Booth, they will sell for 40 cents plus activity coupon No. 3 to students or 75 cents to the public. All seats are reserved.

The play, which will be given in Augusta Conradi Theatre April 20, 21, and 24 beginning at 8:15 p.m. is the department's final presentation of the 1955-56 season.

Under the direction of Dr. Lynn E. Orr, Marjorie Tindell is cast as Mrs. Alving, Bill King as Oswald Alving, Eb Thomas plays Pastor Manders, Phil Johnson is Engstrand, and Margaret Malloy appears as Regina Engstrand.

No Symbolism

"There is no symbolism in 'Ghosts,'" said Dr. Orr. "These characters are real people. It contains none of the fantasy of 'Peer Gynt' nor none of the symbolism found in 'The Master Builder' or 'The Wild Duck,'" he added.

"Broadly conceived, 'Ghosts' combines the bleakest realism with an intense protest against everything that shackles the individual in his pursuit of happiness and integrity," he said.

Dr. Orr pointed out that "even though Ibsen is often called the father of modern drama, his plays are often ignored by the average playgoer and seldom done in the professional theatre."

Lasting Influence

"But Ibsen's plays have had a lasting influence on contemporary drama" and "should be

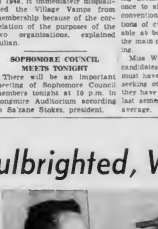
During Coming Year

Adams, Fulbrighted, Will Go To Paris

Franklin Adams, who will receive his master's degree in art this summer, has been awarded a Fulbright scholarship to continue his studies in Paris, France.

Adams, who was born 22 years ago in Jacksonville, had to get through high school the hard way—by correspondence course —because a large high school in Jacksonville had no art classes.

Adams relates he had to take algebra, languages, history and the other high school subjects from the International Correspondence School so that he could attend a commercial art school.



"It is a bit late as far as Adams is concerned, but the high school he chose not to attend has begun offering art classes this year."

Above Average

His correspondence work was satisfactory although he had to discipline himself to keep up with assignments, and later had to pass entrance examinations for FSU. He has been a better than average all-round student consistently during his five years at FSU both as a undergraduate and graduate, working under two of the country's foremost artist-teachers, Edmond D. Lewandowski and Karl Zerbe.

After two years of teaching at FSU and almost 20 years of heading the painting division at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts,

Party Conventions Slated For Class, Senate Races

Student, State Make Choices On Nominees

Student and State parties have slated nominating conventions for class officers, senators, and court members this week.

Student Party's convention is set tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in 124 Science. State Party members will convene Thursday at 7 p.m. in 120 Geology.

Dave Bachman, Student Body president-elect, will deliver the Student Party Keynote address.

Registration

Registration will be at 6:45, the Student Party will start nominating candidates for Honor Court, senior class elections, Juniors, then sophomores.

"If we don't get through tomorrow night we've got the convention hall reserved for Thursday night," said Karl Edwards, party chairman.

Edwards said, "We feel sure the enthusiasm which was shown in the Student Body elections will again be shown tomorrow night and we are looking forward to a very spirited turnout."

"At the present time it appears there will be a full slate of candidates, and there will propably be a lot more people running at the convention," he added.

State Party chiefs expect a favorable turnout for their convention, especially among the freshman class.

Registration will begin at 6:30. Art Moore, party chairman, said that he also expects a full slate of candidates.

Late permission can be obtained if women delegates will check with the Dean of Women's office, said the chairman.

Vamps Eligible For Cotillion

For the first time in eight years, Village Vamps are eligible for membership into Cotillion Club Organization, announced Cavalier-Cotillion president Julian.

The decision was arrived upon at a recent Cavalier-Cotillion meeting. As a result of this decision, the clubs organizations extend "a very heart-warming and special invitation to any Village Vamp member or tag, along with the rest of the student body, to try out for membership tonight and Thursday," Julian Cline was organized in 1948, it immediately disqualified the Village Vamps from membership because of the correlation of the purposes of the two organizations, explained Julian.

Says Honor Court

Honor Promotion Week's Purpose

To promote the Honor System is the purpose of the Honor Emphasis Week which started yesterday, according to Barbara Graham, Honor Court Chief Justice.

Sponsored by Honor Court and Honor Committee, Honor Emphasis Week is declared "to stress honor and promote the ideal freedom for being honest," continued Miss Graham.

During the week sororities, fraternities, dormitories, and campus religious groups will hold discussions with one male student speaker, one woman student to answer questions and one faculty member to advise.

Meetings Set

The Methodist student house and all fraternities, and all sororities with one exception, held meetings yesterday. Today Pi Beta Phi, the Baptist house, and West Hall have their discussions.

On Wednesday the Women's dorms and Magnolia Hall will meet, while the Christian Scientists and the Presbyterians get together on Thursday. Last on the schedule of meetings are the Episcopalians who are gathering Sunday.

A television program, Campus Talk, next Monday on Tallahassee station WCTV, will be used to drive home the Honor System's philosophy that honor is everyone's business. The program, written by Barbara Graham, will be shown at 6 p.m.

Miss Willson noted that only candidates for class president must have 2.300 averages. Those seeking other offices may run if they have a 2.000 average for the last semester or a 2.000 overall average.

Office-Seekers Must Declare By Saturday

Candidates seeking election to class offices in the May 1 voting have until Saturday to file declarations of candidacy.

Betty Willson, secretary of elections, warned yesterday that the qualifying deadline will not be extended past 10 p.m. Saturday.

This warning will include a lot of people. As far as could be determined yesterday, no one has filed for the more than 50 offices that will be at stake.

Miss Willson said the qualifying deadline has been extended once to allow for politics! But with one exception, held meetings yesterday. Today Pi Beta Phi, the Baptist house, and West Hall have their discussions.

On Wednesday the Women's dorms and Magnolia Hall will meet, while the Christian Scientists and the Presbyterians get together on Thursday. Last on the schedule of meetings are the Episcopalians who are gathering Sunday.

Cawthon Hall Sets Weekend Dance, Supper

North and South Cawthon halls will join in an annual weekend with the theme of "Southern Echoes" Friday and Saturday.

Social chairmen Mary Faith Sappington and Mary Frances Simmons said festivities will begin Friday night with a buffet supper and square dance at the Reservation.

A formal ball will be held Saturday night beginning at 8, with music furnished by Billy Bowles' "Deviators." A queen will be crowned at this event.

Dr. William Blair of the Reservation department will call the turns at Friday night's square dance.

Square dance chairmen are Anne Stickler and Winona Zeil, Auzzie Kelley and Carolyn Spence are conducting preparations for the formal dance. Other committee members are Val Rohs and Judy Dougan, publicity; Faus Parsons, Jane Morris, and Chris Eisele, decorations and Sissy Sumner, refreshments; Nancy Mitchell, hostess; Lil Olsen, Ellen Starbuck, and Betsy Thurston, entertainment; Dolores Symsack and Jacquelin Stires, favors, and Joyce Prats and Nancy Bradbury, clean-up.

Students Cop Debate Awards

Two FSU students were recognized for outstanding work in informal speaking and oral criticism at the recent Pensacola Debate Tournament.

Jimmie Bleyer placed second and Harold Williams third in both of these two events. In the oral criticism, Robert Martin was fourth and Leeanne Revis fifth.

Preliminaries of informal and after-dinner speaking are being held at 7 p.m. tonight in room 226-Social. Among those participating are Arnold Greenfield, Steve Hall, Jeanne Bochner, Jennie Murphree, Herbert Lacaze, Jr., Theta Chi, Barbara Brooks, Gamma Phi Beta; Charles Mixon, Kappa Alpha; and Jim Atwood, Alpha Tau Omega.

Three or four finalists in after-dinner speaking will speak next Monday afternoon, before the Junior Chamber of Commerce who will vote on the winner. Dr. Wayne C. Minnick will accompany and introduce the speakers.

Hillel Picnic Set At Reservation

Hillel Foundation will hold a picnic at the Reservation Saturday from 3 p.m. to sunset, announced Ronnie Goldman, social chairman.

In addition to picnic events at sunset there will be the Havdolah Service celebrating the conclusion of the Sabbath.

All those interested have been asked to contact Joan Cordish at 2904 or Box 63.

The group will meet at 3:45 in front of the Women's Gym.

An Open Letter On Honor

FELLOW STUDENTS:

We are now in the midst of one of the most important weeks of the entire school year.

This week will probably not have the same effect upon FSU students as IFC Weekend, a football game or some of the other seemingly important events that are looked forward to with great enthusiasm.

Granted that everyone has his own axe to grind about some particular grievance. But this is one time when we all have something in common.

Probably everyone considers himself a person of honor. But is this true? Do we, as leaders of the future, possess those values which are necessary qualities for leadership? If we do not, then we certainly have no business at an institution of higher learning.

This week has been set aside for us to see what we can do about FSU's honor system—for us as a student body and as individuals to examine ourselves and our values.

If you want this university to become just another diploma factory and, if you want your diploma to carry about as much weight as a piece of tissue paper, then shrug the whole thing off as garbage and take off for the Student Center.

However, if you are a person with values, I urge you to participate in this Honor Emphasis Week and to take part in upholding our honor system with all your available energy—for if we do not, then we are certainly headed for corruption within ourselves.

I personally have no use for a person who will cheat, steal or lie, and I am quite certain that most of you do not. However, we do have many people here who lose all conception of what honor is and they are the ones who are running the possibility of anyone receiving a higher education from this university and still having it mean something.

There is no place for these people here, and it is up to the students to rise up over this problem and solve it.

The honor system requires that a man shall act honorably in all relations and phases of student life. Lying, cheating, stealing or breaking of one's word of honor under any circumstances are infringements upon the honor system.

The honor system requires, in the second place that, when a student sees another student in suspicious circumstances, he shall investigate the matter as secretly and as speedily as possible, and if he finds evidence of guilt shall notify some member of the honor court.

It is through this that everyone recognize this duty of protecting the honor system and the student body. Anyone who sees a fellow student in suspicious circumstances and fails to investigate is himself guilty of a breech of honor.

Loyelty to the student body demands that one make this investigation. This can in no way be construed as spying or tale-bearing. It is the finest expression of loyalty, to a cherished tradition of honor among a community of self-governing students.

Every student should acquaint himself with the honor system and make every attempt to uphold its dignity.

It is your honor system. You, and only you, can make it a success or a failure. If you desire to attend a university of which you can be proud, now is the chance to prove it by participating in this Honor Emphesis Week and by doing your part in upholding the honor system.

Gators Go Too Far

It would be futile to attempt to stop the petty vandelism that is waged among colleges in the name of "school spirit."

We have all seen "U of F" and "API" splershed in paint on our sidewalks end buildings. No doubt, as long as there are more college boys than college men, we will always be reminded of the existence of the University of Florida and other "rival" institutions.

Yet even this childishness has the limit beyond which it is too destructive to sanction.

Take a look at the grass in front of Westcott Circle. Some clowns dumped chemicels on it last week, end the grass is now burned off—killed—dead—in the shape of a big UF.

Kids will be kids, we suppose. But can't the City and the Campus Police do a little bit more to apprehend people whose "fun" does that kind of damage?

"Patriotic" Education?

Education is a complex subject. Aside from its mere mechanical functions such as the securing of students and instructors in suitable locations for the transfer of knowledge, the actual process of instilling into untutored minds the learning necessary for competent living never has been—end probably never shall be — fully mastered.

The process involves many subtle factors, not the least important of which is the problem: how much of the knowledge should be complete end unbiased and how much selective and colored. The recurring argument on patriotism is only one example but perhaps the most important—should not the student be taught only those things which will make him think of the U. S. A. as a god-like creature which exists only for the benefit of the "good" nations (which include itself) against the "bad"?

One side of the question proposed thereto is being brought out in Washington at the 65th Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The theme of this congress is, "Protect America's Future Through Patriotic Education".

We realize, of course, the intention of these citizens. They wish to bring about more patriotism in whatever sector is their own only those things which point to good-like ideas. Then they conclude will lead to an unshakable faith in the goodness of American. We youth will have been protected from the bad influence of derogatory comment.

It could be pointed out that this argument is prima-facie evidence against itself. The people promoting this idea were, as best as we can determine, themselves educated in the United States. Since they realize that a "threat" to partiotic education exists, they must have been exposed to it. They have had derogatory comment, then, but still claim to be patriotic. In their cases, at least, exposure did not seem to shatter their faith in America.

But the problem goes deeper then that. The theme of the congress implies that this nation is afraid to admit to its youngsters all that it is. It must withhold one of the information so they won't get wrong ideas. This, we submit, is a fallacy. The United States does not have to be afraid to put itself alongside other countries for comparison of political and social philosophies. We believe our country can stand the test of truth—the whole truth.

As someone once remarked, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself." We wonder: is the stand of the DAR really patriotism—or fear?

In high school, our teachers used to boast of the fact that in the U. S. A., we are not afraid to tell our students what their country is like, but in dictatorships and milder forms of tyrannies, the people are told only what the government wants them to know. Is this what we now should have in America?

As for ourselves, we prefer education rather than indoctrination.

On Selling Honor To FSU Students

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

MANY SINCERE students will join this week in a concerted drive called "Honor Emphasis Week."

In effect, they are trying to sell honor to the Florida State University Student Body.

Honor is supposed to rank with Home, Motherhood, and Church as that to which no man takes public exception.

Yet, while most students prefer to earn their degrees, there are students who take what amounts to pride in getting through the easy way. They cheat.

That big mess during final exam week wasn't cleaned up when two men were suspended. Nothing happened to the large group whose combined efforts almost made it seem profitable to steal and peddle advance copies of tests.

This, undoubtedly, is what disturbs the students who are conducting "Honor Emphasis Week." Its publicity says they want to get across the importance of doing things the honest way.

They and most others appreciate the sensation that comes from doing one's own work—the resultant feeling of independence and pride.

UNFORTUNATELY this column has said before: there are many who are here not for learning, but for knowledge, not to equip for wisdom, but merely for a degree—the less trouble, so much the better.

So with these people, cheating is an expediency. The error lies in getting caught.

What can be done about them? One can preach the rewards of honestly till one gradually runs himself. The surest way to insure academic integrity would be to create the kind of university where only those with a genuine thirst for knowledge wish to come. This "ivory tower" would not be accepted by the taxpayers, nor, indeed, by the students.

So, in the absence of an educational millennium, dishonest students must be caught end punished.

Concludes Discourse On Car Fans

Notes On Collegians And Film Scores

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

THE COLLEGIANS presented their second concert of the season Friday night in the Opperman Music Hall, assisted by the Delta Zeta women's chorus and the Memory Four, a barbershop quartet.

The program chosen continued the high standards of the first concert, and director Jim Harris is to be commended on this point. Intonation, however was not as good as it had been before, and in neither concert was it as good as it should have been. Poor balance and uneven tone quality are usually present to some degree in every nonprofessional chorus, but out-of-tune singing can usually be avoided if the group is on its toes, and the director is threatening them with brickbats.

The second half of the program was better than the first, just as it was in the first concert. The Delta Zeta spiritual group came up the Collegians had hit their stride. One of the spirituals, "Humble," was well-high perfect.

ONE OF THE most commendable things about the concert was the fast-paced and variety section of Broadway. Accompaniments were provided by a variety of instrumental and rhythmic ensembles, creating a great deal of audience-interest. The lighting and costuming were both imaginative and fresh.

The Delta Zeta Chorus, directed by Marthe Sue Mizell, who also tripled as accompanist and vocalist throughout the evening, presented their prize-winning performance from Campus Sing. For a group that doesn't normally concertize or even rehearse regularly, their performance was nothing short of amazing. Balance and intonation were good, and spirit was evident.

The concert drew a capacity audience, with standees in the rear. They responded warmly throughout the evening and especially so for the comic interludes provided by the Memory Four.

IT IS GRATIFYING to note that Hollywood, in spite of itself, finally seems to be showing some concern over the quality of its background music. Originally, records of the classics were just dubbed under the films sometime resulting in ludicrous juxta-positions. This soon gave way to the hack-writing, who needs no pretensions to originality or "art" but did a passable job. Nowadays the practice is to commission established composers to do a score or two for the sake of "art," but the "old-guard" composers—Tiomkin, Newman, Young, Gershenson, et.al.—still handle the bulk of the work and get the Academy Awards, to the detriment of any sort of artistic standards. The best of the Hollywood composers is probably Miklos Rosa who, not surprisingly, is now beginning to achieve some recognition as a serious composer.

The best underscore I have yet heard was done by Leonard Bernstein for On the Waterfront, Bernstein, of course, is an "outside composer", which prevented him from getting the Academy Award; Tiomkin got it for installing a tune everyone could whistle—The High and the Mighty.

Other outstanding scores are those of George Duning for Picnic and Elmer Bernstein (no kin to Leonard) for Men with the Golden Arm. They show refreshing originality and skill.

Letters To The Editor

The FLORIDA FLAMBEAU welcomes letters to the editor on topic, and pseudo this space for student opinion. The letters do not have to coincide with the views of the paper, but must be in good taste. Unsigned letters will not be printed, and names will not be withheld except in cases where the reasons are deemed adequate by the editor. Letters should not exceed 250 words, or 25 typewritten lines.

RESOLVED—WE NEED A NEW POOL

It's an expensive task to satisfy the appetite of an ambitious and progressive athletic program. And with Florida State University's unprecedented hunger towards any aspirations that task is multiplied many times over.

Doubtless, such ambitions foster many problems for those who have to direct that progress. And perhaps the largest of these problems is the channeling of funds to the places they're needed most.

Certainly, those who have such power find themselves faced with endless tributaries—each deeming its respective needs the most important. The decisions made are not easy ones.

Under such circumstances it would seem the most important thing to do is to label the single need which would prove most beneficial to the University as a whole.

We firmly believe that need is a new swimming pool.

It's not an original suggestion we make. There's been such talk brewing around the University for many years. From the information we've gathered it seems everyone is in agreement that there should be a new pool. But nothing, publicly, has been said as to how it might be obtained.

That query, we cannot, and by all right, should not attempt to answer. It's one for the administration — those who handle the funds. But, as to the needs of a new pool, may we venture this opinion.

A new pool is needed for three reasons. We might label them athletic, scholastic and recreational. Certainly, each is an important part of a well-rounded University life.

Those students who tried to fight their way into the pool in the Women's Gymnasium to witness the FSU-Rice swimming meet earlier this year will vouch for the authenticity of that first reason. When filled to overflow the present pool seats not much better than 500 persons. Many, many words, translated into a major meet by banging from the window sills outside the building.

Certainly, it is not right that a team of the caliber of the FSU squad should have to host another institution under such circumstances. For more than five years the Tribe mermen reigned supreme over the southern collegiate swimming world.

Actually, a major swimming meet could never be held on this campus with the present pool. It isn't deep enough to handle a three-meter board which is a prime requisite for most meets; it isn't wide enough to be divided into the six lanes which would be needed if three or more teams were to compete at one time, and again, it wouldn't seat enough to merit a major meet.

Each year this FSU team has been a winner—and each year it's waited for a new pool.

The swimming team isn't the only reason the University needs a new pool. That second category—the academic reason—is an involved one.

At least six swimming classes a day use the present pool, many of them twice the size they should be. Quite often, there are life saving classes at night; the Armed Forces Club uses it during the early evening and somehow, there's an hour set aside for students at night.

During the swimming season, this set-up becomes even more unrealistic because the swimming team is crowded for time to work out. The mermen have to be out of the pool by the clock. And any athlete will tell you that's pretty inconvenient for the fellow who wants and needs the extra work—the stuff champions are made of.

And the recreation part. There's been much discussion about this one. Few, if any, care for the present set-up of having the "plunge hour" at night as the only time a student can do any swimming. As it is, very few even realize they have this slight convenience.

Such are the existing circumstances. Again we repeat that we cannot attempt to answer how such a pool need can be obtained. That question is one for the administration.

And to that administration may we say this.

Earlier this year you received a letter from FSU Athletic Director Howard Kelly promptly outlining the various needs for a new FSU pool. We do not know what Mr. Danford had to say in that letter, but we feel sure that coming from him, the letter was representative and considerate of the needs of the student body as a whole.

And we urge you to give it your utmost considera-

Gators Trounce Trackmen, 90-41

By BOB WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Writer

The University of Florida's swaggering stable of stars foiled the plans of an upset-minded Seminole track squad in a dual meet Saturday in Gainesville by a count of 90-41.

Gator sprinters, Lincoln Knowles, Jim Crosier, and Jim Smith, who won two events apiece, led the attack on the Seminoles in the first direct competition between the two schools. The Florida squad sobbed up a total of 13 of 15 first places in the meet.

The pair of first places which the Seminoles took were won by Ron Weaver and Joe Davis. Weaver heaved the javelin 194 feet, one inch to outdistance his nearest rival by almost 20 feet.

Davis picked up the other first place with a leap of 22 feet, 8¾ inches in the broad jump.

However, the highlight of the meet according to track coach Mike Long came not as a first place, but rather as a second place position. Florida's Jack West was given the nod over Seminole Mike Conley in a red-hot duel in the mile run.

West was named winner in a dead heat with Conley with a time of 4:29.8. However, Conley's time was 2.1 seconds better than the existing Florida State record for the mile run.

Seminole Ken Segner seeking a crack in the Gator armor was narrowly edged in the 880 as Gator Jim Crosier turned in a time of 2.02.3

It was the same Crosier, also, who beat the Seminoles in the mile relay. Crosier outdistanced Jack Terwilliger in the anchor leg of the nip and tuck relay to complete the run in 3:25.5.

The Gator freshmen, in imitation of their big brothers turned the trick on the Florida State Frosh 11-2. Pole vaulter Don Ayres and broad jumper Bobby Bryson contributed the only two wins for the Seminoles.

Coach Long in commenting on the teams performance admitted some of his team's showing were not up to snuff, but readily pointed out some of the outstanding performances by such men as Mike Conley, Joe Davis, and Ron Weaver.

He added, that despite the loss, the way the team rebounds in the meet against Georgia Tech next Saturday will determine the real quality of the team

HEAVE HO. Shotputter Jerry Jacobs picked up a second place in Saturday's meet with Florida and continues to be a consistent point-getter for the Seminole trackmen.

Frosh Baseballers Top Gators, 15-2; Lose Twice, 12-3, 15-11

Florida State's freshman baseball team came out on the short end of their weekend series with the Florida Frosh, winning one while dropping two.

The baby Seminole nine's victory came in the first game of Saturday's twin bill by the score of 15-2.

They lost the opener of the series 12-3 Friday night, and the rubber game went to the Gators, 15-11.

Right-hander Al Zyla, charged with Friday's loss came back to pitch strong ball for the Seminole Frosh allowing only six hits and walked none to gain the victory. Zyla fanned six in going the route.

The Tribe banged out 10 hits, one of which was a round-tripper by outfielder John Bananno.

Behind 1-0

Behind 1-0, the Tribe broke the game wide open in the bottom of the fourth with an 11 run outburst after two were out.

Hitting star for the Seminoles was first baseman pitcher Verne Long with three hits in four trips to the plate.

In the nightcap, Florida scored in every inning but the last to outlast Florida State 15-11 as Long was charged with the defeat.

SAE Trips Methodists For Intramural Volleyball Crown

After several years of getting to the finals and losing out, SAE became all-campus volleyball champions by beating PDT and the dorm-champion Methodists last Thursday night.

In the fraternity finals, PDT took 16-14 and 15-10 victories to even the playoff series at one defeat each, but the winning SAE's rallied for 15-6 and 15-10 triumphs to nail away the first title.

In the first match of the frat finals, the TEPs pulled an upset 15-6, 11-15, 15-9 win over Sigma Nu to finish third in the final standings.

Through trailing badly, 7-2 in the early minutes, the SAEs came on to score 13 straight points and eventually defeat the Methodists for the campus crown, 15-7, 15-3.

Golf

In the quarter-finals LCA beat KS 2-1; PDT won over SPE 3-0; PKP beat SN 1-0; and ATO beat TEP 3-0

Semi-finals are April 12 and the finals April 18 in both divisions. Matches at the Tallahassee Country Club.

Softball

Play in the intramural softball is still plenty loose with lots of errors, but the teams showed indications of better things to come in the week end games.

Sarah Nellums, SAE hurler pitched a no-hit game against SPE and struck out 16 batters in giving SAE a 10-0 victory. The next night TC's Schaefer also hurled shut-out, no-hit ball against KS with TC taking a 16-0 win. He struck out 4.

The Feds beat Magnolia Hall 10-0 with Molizan pitching no-hit ball and striking out 3

The next day Magnolia put on a big 6 run splurge against Penthouse in the first inning only to see the lead dwindle with Penthouse beating them out 16-9, the same going 3 extra innings.

The Day Students took an 8-1 game from the Air Force Senior Hall beat the Baptists 12-4 The Penthouse came from behind to beat Senior Hall 9-7

Varsity Nine Resumes FIBC Play Against Stetson Friday

After resuming action last night against Cincinnati, Florida State's baseballers move back into conference play against Stetson in games here Friday and Saturday afternoons.

The Seminoles have met only Florida Southern in FIBC play thus far, beating the Moccasins, 8-2 and 6-5 here earlier this year.

Veteran righthander Max Long, who has established a team-leading 1-0 mark thus far, will probably get the nod from Danny Litwhiler against the Hatters.

Untested 4-3 by Miami in the Magic City last Saturday, Stetson has only a 4-7 mark to show for the first eleven games of the season.

The two intra-state rivals have met 25 times on the diamond since FSU's beginning in 1948, and the Seminoles have a slim one-game advantage.

Saturday's Tribe hurler might be any one of three: Tommie Garcia, who looked so sharp in the recent tournament finale with Illinois, portsider John Ash, or unbeaten Jim Atwood.

Seminole —Shorts—

According to the recently released book schedule of the U. of Florida, the Gators will face Florida State's basketball team in the first regularly scheduled court game between the two schools early next season.

Last year's Florida State golf team went without a team captain being named. It was the first time since the golf squad was formed back in 1948.

Longest winning streak by an FSU baseball team before this season was seven by the 1951 team. This year's team won 11 straight before bowing to West Virginia, 13-12 in the FSU Base ball Tournament.

Fred Twomey FSU's slugging outfielder-first baseman, hit the ropes for a rousing .412 during the recent baseball tournament held here in Tallahassee.

Golfers Win 8th Straight Match

The Florida State golf team won its eighth straight match last Saturday by trouncing Auburn 25½–1½ at Auburn.

The Seminoles now have a fabulous streak of 18 consecutive wins in dual meets. This does not include yesterday's meet with Florida.

The win over Auburn marked the second time this season the Tribe has beaten them. The Tigers met defeat in Tallahassee on March 16, to the tune of 17–8.

Two of Dr. Don Vellers top linksmen, Bob Dunn and Ed Jenkins, shot a one-under-par 71 to lead the FSU squad. Don Kennington was low man for the Tigers with a 74

Bill Shelton and Harry Shomaker playing in the number five and six positions, shut out Auburn's Bill Williams and Don Smith with a 2-0 count.

As the records stand going into the Florida meet Sheltan has the best average on the team—a 71.5. He is followed closely by Jack Veghte, a 96 year old junior from New York, with an average of 71.6.

Jenkins holds a 72.3 while Dunn, who can expecte i to lead the team this season, has a 73.0 mark.

Netters Break Even On Road Matches

The Seminole tennis team managed to break even in their march through Georgia last week, beating Emory and Mercer while losing to Georgia Tech and the University of Georgia.

Florida State got off to a good start when they overpowered Mercer 7-2 in Macon, but then tripped over the Bulldogs from Georgia 6-3 in Athens the next day. In Atlanta, the Tribe ran into a brick wall when they tackled Georgia Tech. The Engineers proved too much for the Seminoles as they blanked them 9-0. The netters then moved across town where they out-classed Emory 8-1.

"We played three teams on rain drenched courts which of course didn't help the quality of play," said coach Keith Pitchford.

The Flambeau competition tha Tribe edged the Georgia from 2-1, FSU's Lex Hester scarred as he edged Georgia's number one freshman ace Lindsey Hopkins 2-6, 17-15 and 6-4.

This Saturday the team plays host to the Mocsins of Florida Southern at the Varsity courts at 2 p.m.

Florida State's record is now six won and six lost, with four games yet to play.

Posters; Booklets

During the week posters are to be seen on campus, and Coo Horn's "conversational" booklet will be distributed to all dorms and houses. Small discussion groups with the faculty will be held to discuss the importance of honor and to discover the problems that teachers may have in class.

Miss Graham urged students "to listen and think", as well as to talk to members of Honor Committee. Any suggestions are welcome, continued the chief justice.

FSU's Honor System, enforced by a student Honor Court, militates against cheating, stealing, and lying. As described in a letter sent to members of the faculty and staff it is "a spirit, not a set of rules. None of us expect it to work to perfection, but we must always strive toward that end."

Operation

According to the system, students who become aware of a violation are supposed to ask the offender to turn himself in to Honor Court. But if he does not, the witness should report the offense.

Also under the system, a faculty members is not supposed to proctor a class taking an examination. The professor is also supposed to refer a case to the student Honor Court, rather than deal with it himself.

Honor Court can fix various punishments from a suspended sentence, through probation, an "F" in the course, to suspension from school.

President Campbell Says New Pool Is 'Very Possible'

President Doak Campbell indicated this week it's "very possible" funds may be provided for the building of a new swimming pool at Florida State University when the state legislature meets in 1957.

But he pointed out "it is much too early in the game to determine whether any specific project will be included in fund requests from the next legislature."

Wants Facilities

Commenting on questions raised by sports columnist Pierce Lehmbeck in the Tuesday edition of the Flambeau, the University chief executive said "I want every facility I can get for the University."

"We're behind on housing, recreation, classroom space and everything else—and we can't predict now what will happen to any one project."

In his Tuesday column, Lehmbeck called on the administration to give its "utmost consideration" to a letter sent it by athletic director Howard Danford "reportedly outlining the needs for a new swimming pool" at Florida State.

Three Reasons

The columnist said a new pool was needed at FSU "for three reasons—athletic, scholastic and recreational."

Danford told WTAL newsman George Thurston Tuesday night he rates a new swimming pool the "No. 1 need in athletics at FSU." He said he has recommended that the University president do "everything possible to get funds from the next legislature for a new pool.

"We have one of the finest swimming teams in the entire south," Danford said, "and we don't even have adequate pool facilities for ordinary physical education requirements."

A new pool was originally planned for inclusion in the soon-to-be completed men's physical education building but a shortage of funds forced its elimination from the plans.

Seat At Least 1,500

Danford said a new pool should be able to seat at least 1,500 spectators. He said "it would meet Olympic specifications; would be 'L' or 'T' shaped so that swimmers and divers could work simultaneously, and would have roll-away walls which would make it an outdoor-indoor combination facility."

He said "our chances of getting such a new pool depend entirely on the president's asking for one."

President Campbell said preliminary work on a project list has already begun but is still in its early stages.

"We'll begin actively working on it in August of this year," he said. "It's too early now for anyone to make any commitments."

Goes To Board

The President said the final list of projects condensed from lists submitted by all FSU departments will go to the state Board of Control which will consider the FSU list along with similar lists from the University of Florida and Florida A & M University.

"All three of the lists will go to the state budget commission and from there to the 1957 legislature."

Senators Aren't Going Gung-Ho For Re-Election

Only 8 Running; Some Undecided

Student Senators who could run for re-election aren't jumping on any bandwagon to do so.

Among the eighteen who aren't graduating, three have been elected to major offices, eight say they will run again, and the rest either haven't decided or have said they won't seek re-election.

Six freshman senators—Art Moore, Cliff Gavin, Pat Finlay, Winnie Mae Douglas, Dick Blades, and Nancy Space, have said they will seek new terms.

Only two men and two women will be elected from each class this spring, however, according to the reapportionment bill that will go into effect with the class elections. A larger Senate next year will be made up mainly of representatives from living areas.

Among the sophomore senators only Polly Atwater has indicated a campaign for re-election. Lis Cerny has revealed she will transfer to Emory. Bill Feaver said he is undecided. Earl Edwards announced he will run instead for Honor Court, and Peter Dunn and Hank McGinn are withdrawing from elective politics.

One sophomore who knows Senate procedure because she has served as chaplain is Kamma, said yesterday there is a very good possibility" she will seek a Senate seat. She was recently defeated for women's vice-presidency.

Among the juniors, Jim Boles and Carolyn Close will be back in Senate as men's and women's vice-presidents respectively, and Dave Bachman will chair as Student Body President.

Jim E. Moore who lost to Bachman in the recent race, said yesterday he will seek re-election.

SPEAKING OF HONOR—Graham Carothers speaks at Reynolds Hall as part of Honor Promotion Week, which ends Monday. He was among students who spoke at various locations on campus earlier this week. A television program written by Honor Court Chief Justice Barbara Graham will be shown Monday at 6. Seated at right is Dr. Sarah Herndon, English department, who helped answer questions.

Jo Jones, women's vice-president, said she is not going to seek office in the forthcoming class elections.

Others in Senate are graduating seniors.

TARPON SPONSORS DANCE TOMORROW

Tarpon Club, women's swimming honorary, will sponsor a candlelight dance tomorrow from 9 to 12 p.m. at the Student Center.

The Aristocrats will supply the music for the evening.

Collins Here Tuesday, 3-4

Gov. LeRoy Collins will carry his campaign for re-election to the campus Tuesday afternoon, announced Coyle Moore Jr., president of the Collins for Governor student group.

Collins will speak in the large lounge of Leonitis Building, Moore said. He will be on campus from 3 to 4 p.m.

Collins has a very strong student organization here on campus in support of his candidacy," Moore asserted.

Housing Almost Gone For Next Year's Women

Campbell Says '57 Number 'Fantastic'

By IVY CAREY

University housing facilities for women are just about gone for next year, according to Dr. Doak S. Campbell, president of Florida State University.

Actual paid room reservation for women as of April 14 reached the "fantastic" number of 2,285, reported Dr. Campbell. That number is two-thirds above the corresponding week a year ago, he said.

Applications received this year from men students are greater than last by approximately the same percentage, Campbell remarked.

Cut Enrollment

"The administration assumes that the application of the new admissions regulation will have the effect of keeping some students from enrolling, therefore with very large numbers making applications the entire enrollment will at least be 10 or 15 per cent greater than last year," Dr. Campbell stated.

At present 691 freshmen have made applications for next fall as compared to 386 this time a year ago, Dr. Campbell reported yesterday.

With this great increase in enrollment, the question automatically arises—will there be students live?

Maximum number of housing facilities for women will be 2,485 next fall. This figure includes the space made available with the completion of four new sorority houses and the Leonitis Building-McCollum, Director of Women's Residences.

Growing Pains

"Florida State is suffering from growing pains," Dr. Campbell said, "and we aren't sure what the cure will be." Dr. Campbell said that the chief problem is that a greater number of students will have to live off campus next year.

The university shall decline admission to any applicants after the closing date for applications established for this institution by the Board of Control, he said.

The deadline for this university is August 21, 1956, except by special permission, the board has announced.

Curtain Goes Up Tonight On Speech Play, 'Ghosts'

Set At 8:15 In Conradi

Curtain time is 8:15 tonight for the first performance of Henrik Ibsen's "Ghosts", the Speech Department's final production of the season.

Directed by Dr. Lynn E. Orr, the play will be repeated Saturday, Monday and Tuesday nights in Augusta Conradi Theatre.

Marlene Tindell, has the role of Mrs. Alving who carries the tragic load of the play. She is a strong, dramatic character, and a proud mother as the play opens.

Cast Small

The cast is small, and all of the parts are well rounded and important. Bill King is cast as Oswald Alving, the mentally sick son. Eb Thomas has the role of Pastor Manders who carries a torch for Mrs. Alving.

Margaret Malloy is the maid, actually the half-sister of Oswald, and Phil Johnson is the maid's aggressive step-father.

All members of the cast are veterans in speech productions with the exception of Johnson. Thomas and Miss Tindell have been teamed together in several lead roles. King had major parts in recent presentations of "Hamlet" and "All Women."

Usable to Escape

Dr. Orr explained that "Ghosts" is the story of a woman, Mrs. Alving, who is unable to escape from the shackles of her bond. Events unfold when, upon her husband's death, her son returns for good—bringing an orphanage to his father's memory. He starts a lusty flirtation with the maid, who, as we learn a little at a time, is the illegitimate daughter of Alving.

The spectre of Alving is catching up with the present. The eulogies and memorials to him are ridiculous, of course, as he was in reality a drunken, lecherous man.

Burns Down

The orphanage burns down, the maid runs off in disgust when she learns the truth, and Alving's son suffers his final attack of syphilis. The outcome when he begs for this mercy is left to the audience.

"Ghosts" is the department's fifth production this season. Previously, they presented "Blithe Spirit" in October, "Rumpelstiltskin" in November, "Hamlet" in December, and "Ah, Wilderness!" last month.

BOTTOMS UP—Margaret Malloy, Margie Tindall and Bill King rehearse for Speech play, "Ghosts." Run begins tonight.

Weeks Solos, Edwards Plays Saturday, 8:15

The School of Music will feature a mezo-soprano and a pianist in a junior recital Saturday at 6:15 p.m. in Opperman.

Opening the concert mezo-soprano Char-lee Weeks of the studio of Betty Jane Grumm, will sing "Armida, dimmate" by Handel, "Fac ut Portem" by Hosmini, "Si le Bonheur" by Gounod, and "Adieu ma Mere" by Gabriel Faure, accompanied by Sara Torrey.

Pianist from the studio of Carlisle Floyd, Ryal Edwards, will then play Bach's "Partita in E Minor"; after which, Miss Weeks will sing "Serenella" from Carmen by Bizet, Edwards follow with Scriabin's "Sonata", and her concluding number, Miss Weeks will present Mac-Donvell's "Morning Eyes", Rich's "American Lullaby", and Charles' "When I Have Sung My Songs".

Edwards concludes the program with Godard's "Tarantella", Joio's "Prelude To a Young Musician", and Palmer's "Toccata Ostinato".

WESLEY SPONSORS BOX SUPPER

The Wesley Foundation is sponsoring a box supper Tuesday from 5 to 6 p.m. Tickets are on sale for 75 cents.

Rabbi Louis Josephson will speak Sunday morning at 9:30 a.m. on "What Jews Believe About Christ." Sunday evening Fellowship hour will feature race relations movies. Foundation officials announce.

Party Nominates Most Candidates

Student Party delegates nominated senators, judiciary, honor and traffic court members in a filled convention hall Wednesday night.

Class officers and state party candidates nominated last night were not available in time for publication.

Dave Bachman, student Body president elect, told the convention he "strength lies in the confidence of the students."

"The confidence was shown in the Student Party in the recent elections," he said.

Students rose from their seats to applaud Bachman who said, "the problem of the convention tonight is a peculiar one because we have to select the best from the best."

He praised Bill Cullom in the key note address for assuming responsibility for Honor Emphasis Week.

Nominated for senate by acclamation were Bennie Jo Conarr and Charlotte Patteo, seniors; and Polly Atwater and Majel Hixson, juniors. Cynthia Lawrence and Sandra Rosenberg were sophomore nominees.

Bruce Jacobs and Bob Porter are senior senate nominees; Rogie Blue, Bob Whitter, junior; Dick Rhodes, Cliff Gwynn, sophomores, by acclamation.

On the Honor Court ticket are seniors Love Scarborough and Lis Stainer; juniors, Barbara Burkhardt and Susie Tope; senior men's court, Don Alford and Dick Tregue; junior, Bill Strickland and Karl Edwards.

Nominated for Women's Judiciary are Ann Boeler, Gretchen Kerr and Mary Margaret Williams, seniors; Martha Grizzard, Barbara Hendricks, and Martie McGinna, juniors, Judy Dekle, Ann Munroe, and Jane Salley, sophomores.

Traffic court nominees are Mary Frances Bowers, senior; Joanne Thompson, sophomore.

Women's Glee Club Travels

Women's Glee Club will travel to Blountstown today to present their second concert of the week. The first was given at Brevard Correctional Institute Wednesday.

Leaving at noon, the group plans to give a musicale and evening performance returning to the campus late tonight.

"The numbers will delve into many moods, giving a wide variety to the program," said Louise McClure, publicity chairman.

Wednesday's program was also varied, ranging from sacred and folk music to popular songs. In the absence of Betty Jane Grimm, faculty director, the chorus was lead by Peggy Barber, graduate student in music education.

500 Preparation Well Underway

FSU's "Little 500" freshman class bicycle race will officially begin this afternoon at 3:15 p.m. with time-qualifying preliminaries at the Florida Hash track, a 1/2 minute-mile oval which through tomorrow will determine the top twenty teams in the finals race April 28. In the qualifying heats, every team will race one mile with each of the four riders on the team making one lap around the quarter-mile track.

One four man team with two alternates has been entered by each participating organization.

The organizations and their times to qualify are as follows: Friday—3:15, Penthouse and Alpha Xi Delta; 3:30 Sigma Nu and Phi Mu; 3:45, Theta Chi, 4:00, Chi Omega and Delta Delta Delta; 4:15, Alpha Delta Pi and Pi Beta Phi; 4:30, Lambda Chi Alpha and Alpha Tau Omega; 4:45, Phi Delta Theta and Kappa Alpha Theta; 5:00, Sigma Chi and Rebels.

Completing the preliminaries on Saturday will be the following: 10:00, Zeta and Sigma Phi Epsilon; 10:15, Sigma Kappa and Alpha Gamma Delta; 10:30, Gamma Phi Beta; 10:45, Pirates, 11:00, Kappa Delta and Sigma Nu; 11:15, Phi Kappa Tau, 11:30, Kappa Sigma; and 11:45, Alpha Phi Omega.

Delta Tau Delta and Zeta Tau Alpha ran yesterday.

Also on the agenda for today at the first of two elections for kms and queen of the freshman class. Only freshmen are eligible to vote. The following are bidding for each royalty: Queen—Sally Ann Delia, Barbara Evans, Stephanie Gunderson, Nancy Beth Heaton, Cynthia Lawrence, Bonita Nesselrod, Barbara Reedy, Linda Rollins, Peggy Slidd, Pat Stivrins, Bonnie Tapley, and Doreen Thomas.

Candidates for King are Dean Donley, Gerry Gordon, Scott Harpe, Jim Mann, Jack Montgomery and Dick Rhodes.

Commencing the final race day, April 28 will be a giant motorcade which will wind through Tallahassee and campus. Over 90 cars representing the fraternities, sororities, dormitories, and other organizations are expected for this parade which will start at the Alpha Omicron Pi house at 4:30 p.m.

Circus Set May 3, 4, 5

'Flying High' Sales Begin

Tickets have gone on sale for the home show of "Flying High," student circus, May 3, 4, and 5. They may be purchased at the athletic business office in the Student Center and at the ticket office in Westcott. Students may get reserved seats for 50 cents and coupon number eight from the activity book.

Eddie Cubbon, athletic business manager, said students must pay to see "Flying High" because it is not a function paid for from the activity fee.

Ask Early Sale

"We'd like the students to pick tickets up as quickly as they possibly can, particularly if they're interested in going on Saturday night," Cubbon said.

Students may bring guests who are in high school for the 50 cent student fee, Cubbon said. Adult tickets will cost a dollar each.

Four center sections in the east stand of Doak Campbell Stadium, where "Flying High" gives its home shows, will be reserved all three nights. The entire stand will be reserved on Saturday night. Tickets will go on sale downtown Monday.

Cubbon said 1000 were turned away Saturday night of last year's home show.

Leon County Night

Thursday night, according to circus coach Jack Haskin, will be Tallahassee and Leon County night, during which Tallahassee students will be featured performers. Friday night will honor students of Florida, Georgia and Alabama.

Coach Haskin said nearly 200 students will appear in a two-hour show that will include all of the acts given on the Sealtest Big Top television show March 31.

Coach Haskin said this year's home stand will be "the greatest" show both from a thrill standpoint as well as from the beauty angle that has ever been produced at Florida State University."

Rigging Moved

Circus personnel have spent the week moving equipment and rigging from the practice lot on West Call Street to Campbell Stadium.

The Circus Concert Band, made up of musicians from the Marching Chiefs, has gone into rehearsal.

"FLYING HIGH"—Charley Matthews and Faye Moses get in shape for coming performances.

SAI Spaghetti Supper Saturday

Sigma Alpha Iota, women's professional music fraternity, will sponsor its annual spaghetti supper next Saturday at 5 p.m. on the patio of the Music building.

Tickets will go on sale Monday for 75 cents each and may be obtained in the Music School office.

Tomorrow 10 P.M.

One of the most important moments on the school calendar is 10 p.m. tomorrow night.

That is the deadline for declarations of candidacy in the May 1 class elections, according to Betty Willmon, secretary of elections.

As of Wednesday, hardly more than a few had indicated any interest in the many offices at stake. Many undoubtedly will have declared after the political factory conventions Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Still, student interest is not encouraging. It hardly needs to be repeated that student government is what the students make it. Lackadaisical voter response doesn't matter if there are few running for office in the first place.

The Florida Flambeau urges all students who think they can serve with care and capability; who share the conviction that student government can be a vigorous and effective enterprise, to plunge into politics to achieve that end.

Money should not be a deterrent. One does not need to spend heavily on posters, handbills, and printed material. We are always more impressed by the candidate who gets out and sells himself be seen, who meets the voters, and who shows that student government is to him a serious business.

Grades And Cars

In passing a resolution recently concerning the traffic problem, Student Senate admitted that the question is past the stage where one can merely say, "It's bad."

Senate's resolution asked that freshman and sophomore cars not be arbitrarily banned; rather, Senate voted, the privilege should depend on grades.

Faculty and administrative spokesmen admit they are considering several schemes and have assured questioners that something will be done.

If Senate indeed does feel grades should be the criterion, and if Senate wants to do something on its own, it should pass a bill describing such a system.

We'd be inclined to agree with the general principle that grades should determine the right to a car. Most universities that establish car bans use scholarship to justify the rule. Thus we at FSU could solve the traffic problem and create an incentive to scholarship in one action.

Without question, such a system would be difficult in administration. Driving privileges would have to be issued and revoked in some people's cases; stickers for cars would be a great problem.

Yet if the Initiative were to come from Student Government the administration would probably go along. The difficulties could be handled. Appeals for exception would have to be heard.

A reasonable standard to apply, we think, would be a passing average. Freshmen should be allowed to have cars but would then be better way home if they did not make their grades. A person who didn't make his grades in a semester would not be allowed to drive; those on suspension who come up would regain the right.

Student Senate must establish this. Such action should be within their power, and there is no better way to make it so than by assuming the responsibility.

To Open Editorial Page

The quality of Florida's government and progress rests in great measure upon the governor. With little more than two weeks left before the first state-wide primaries, we think it time to devote our attention to the gubernatorial race.

A strong, inclusive platform which has a good grasp of politics in theory and in practice, a man who exhibits reason, forethought, judgment, and sincerity, can bring progressive and modern state government to Florida.

A weak person who lacks the confidence of the people, who lacks judiciousness and who plays the role of demagogue or grandstander, can make our Capitol and its actions a farce in the eyes of the nation.

For these reasons the Florida Flambeau will open its editorial page in the next issue to editorials by student organizations in support of their particular candidates for governor. In order that equal coverage can be given, these editorials should not exceed 450 words. Deadline will be Sunday at noon, and the editorials should be delivered to the Florida Flambeau office, second floor Longmire. The best editorial for each candidate will be printed in Tuesday's issue.

Letters Support Need For New Pool

The FLORIDA FLAMBEAU welcomes letters to the editor on any topic, and provides this space for student opinion. The letters do not have to coincide with the views of the paper, but must be in good taste. Unsigned letters will not be printed, and names will be withheld except in cases where the reasons are deemed adequate by the editor. Letters should not exceed 250 words, or 24 typewritten lines.)

Aids Team Also

DEAR SIRS:

I wish to congratulate Pierce Lehnbeck on his wonderful columns. It more than explains the reasons we need a new pool. I definitely think we should have a new pool something to be proud of and not to be looked down on, such as the women's pool is.

We have, as you know, the best swimming team in the south of which I am proud to be a member. But our present facilities are inadequate and practice time too short. This gives us a handicap when it comes to racing other teams. Take diving for instance. In all championship meets, the indoor meets as well as outdoor, we do not have a three meter board and we could not because the pool is too deep enough.

As a swimmer, my opinion is naturally swayed towards getting a new pool. But everybody knows that we need one for educational and recreational purposes also.

I have heard that some people think the pool should be located at the reservation. I don't think it should because it would allow us to use the pool only a few months out of the year. This basing of the pool out at the reservation would defeat educational purposes as well as swimming team's need.

I only hope the proper people will wake up and recognize the need for a new pool.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
DAVE MUNGER

Reasons Strong

TO THE EDITOR:

I wish to register my agreement with Pierce Lehnbeck about a new swimming pool for FSU. I think the reasons he gives are strong ones.

May I also commend Pierce for the interest he has consistently displayed in University progress. It's a thing to be admired.

SINCERELY,
BILLY F. PARRISH

Pool Necessary

TO THE EDITOR:

I agree wholeheartedly with Pierce Lehnbeck when he says that we need a swimming pool at FSU.

I know that there are many other areas which need added financial support, but I believe that we definitely need a pool.

Sincerely,
ARIEL R. DREYFUS

Realize Need

FLAMBEAU EDITOR:

We, the undersigned, wish to say that we agree with Pierce Lehnbeck's call for a new swimming pool at FSU. Being athletically-minded, we realize that the University is constantly under a financial strain in maintaining such an ambitious program. However, as Pierce points out, it's best to put the money in something which will benefit the University as a whole. We're sure that a new swimming pool would be due.

Sincerely,
MIKE TSCHIRERT

In Poor Taste

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing this letter concerning the picture of the student body elections on the front page of last Friday's paper.

Now I am well acquainted with the phrase of "Freedom of the Press", but I do believe there is an element of good taste involved in this freedom.

I think the headline dealt with Bachman wins, etc. but I fail to see how the pictures underneath were very relevant to the banner. I expected to see pictures of the winning candidates, not pictures at the expense of other people.

In the future, I think this would be avoided.

Guinness Is Good In The Swan; Lanza Returns With Serenade.

By BOB SIMMONS

EVEN THOSE who have never seen Alec Guinness perform before are sure to appreciate his acting abilities in The Swan showing through Tuesday at the State Theatre. Guinness plays the part of a ring-shy prince who faces possible matrimony with ease. Grace Kelly takes the roll of the princess-to-be. Her cause moves along slowly in spite of all the aid of the family. She, with the help of the Molnarian family litter, loses sight of her goal for a while, but finally winds up with the prince, just like the script said.

British cinema actor Guinness amply proves that humor is possible without corny dialogue or other supporting tricks of known comedy men. Facial and physical expression, in Guinness' case, do the job very well. The Swan is a charming movie that follows the school of thought that insists that it takes talent, not big names alone, to produce an outstanding movie.

MUSIC LOVERS will be distressed and Mario Lanza facetasted, knowing that the lion-throated Lanza has a new film, Serenade, in this tale of the hometown boy who makes good as a singer, with the help of a well to do lady friend, Lanza belts out his numbers with the volume of a storm calliope and the finesse of a trumpeting bull elephant. Mr. Lanza seems to expend as much energy in expressing a simple "How do you do?" as an actor would in reciting some dramatic line. Serenade, beginning Wednesday at the State Theatre, may well go an award for the biggest musical set-back of the decade.

A moment for Tribute To A Bad Man. This movie stars James Cagney and begins its booking at the Florida Theatre on Thursday. Cagney is a bad actor, and the toughie is his type of role. This may be another big one for James Cagney.

THE MYSTERIOUS man returns to cause another Bad Man At Black Rock at the Perry Highway Outdoor Theatre. Boomer Tracy is one of the actors that improves with age in Bad Day At Black Rock. Tracy has a dynamic role as the man who comes looking for the father of a Japanese friend who saved his life and instead turns the dusty whistle stop called Black Rock into a rip-roaring place. This movie is by no means short on action or suspense. It's a good change of pace from the love stories on most of the Thursthrough Saturday fare. In fact, it's almost worth the price of admission to see Tracy figure out why actor Tracy keeps his hand in his pocket during the entire movie.

Rainier-Kelly Hysterics Excessive

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

ONE WHO IS trained to speak of his profession in the highest terms is at a loss to explain the actions of American journalists these past few weeks.

To borrow a crude but highly effective term from carnival days, they went "ape."

Never has anything been so overdone; never have so many reporters, salaries gone to waste, than in the coverage of Grace Kelly's marriage to a fellow named Rainier.

To be honest, it is not actually been for naught. Many papers have been sold. If that is a measure of Journalistic success, so be it.

But now, suspect that it is time for reason to elevate the public, and that responsibility has been forgotten.

WHO IS Grace Kelly? She's a movie actress, and a well-paid one. So well and good. I hadn't thought she was a national idol.

Prince Rainier rules the fantastic principality of Monaco, which isn't as big as our campus, and is famed for one thing alone: Monte Carlo's gambling casino. The real reason the wedding is so important is because if Rainier dies without a male heir the principality reverts to France—and French taxes.

There you have it. A movie star—and royalty. (?)

So dozens of American reporters have dogged Grace Kelly like a housemother following a girl who gets too many phone calls; they've reported, guessed, and gone wild about what she may wear, they've written their own personal views on the whole charade; they've done everything but describe the bride's chamber and I'm surprised that hasn't been done.

THEY'VE HAD flights with the couple because not enough hours have been given to the press.

American newspapers have moved the international crisis, the opening of the baseball season, the presidential campaign—all to things that make genuine news—back to the classified ads and have run banner headlines screaming that Grace Kelly has successfully been married to a real live prince. Golly sez.

I think that the press has a different function from the nursery rhyme—And Jones, who feast on romance shouldn't demand it from a public institution such as the newspaper.

This one instance, which will probably get the most votes in the various polls for literary story of the year, is typical of American journalism's gravid weakness.

PEOPLE—no matter how rich or famous—are entitled to a certain degree of privacy. No one has a right to be a fish bowl for public publicize emotion. Yet because some people lap it up, papers go ahead and feed them a weekly mixture of evaluation, misevaluation, and novels.

Divorces, rapes, and domestic scandals don't belong in print, simply because no one has a right to get a cheap thrill at the offense of violated privacy.

We are prone to think Hollywood's a divorce mill—because that is so publicized.

There's no doubt, be a little, that a standard. The Kelly-Rainier hysterics are the last word in a sorry chapter of the otherwise noble history of the American press.

Group Pressures Stetson On Dancing

By OSCAR JOHNSON

IT WAS WALTER who said, "I disagree with what you say, but I shall defend to the death your right to say it." This philosophy is applicable to the University of Florida and occasionally in the south: Is it sinful to dance?

Now, we feel it would be safe to state that the University Council on Student Affairs see nothing especially evil in dancing. They might not quite dig things like bop and chase-the-rat, but, on the whole, they are favorable to the general idea.

And, with such widespread approval, it might be thought that this would smother all opposition. Not so.

There has been considerable and outspoken disapproval of the art of the dance. To get down to particulars, one of our Florida university professors has been quoted as saying it allows dancing among its students.

Another University, it seems, is the "Hatter Holiday" this school year, allowed its students to dance at the DeLand Armory. Hearing of this, a pipe-organ preacher from a anti-dancing group denounced the University. The publication is called "The Sword of the Lord" and is put out in Illinois.

IN ITS ARTICLE concerning Stetson, the publication stated the University was held off-campus "does not make the university authorities less responsible." The newspaper does not advocate the closing of Stetson, but merely says its charter should be changed so that it can be controlled.

But in another article, which criticized dancing at Furman University, mention is made of dancing and drinking at fraternity houses. So a group of anti-dancers asked the University Council to put an end to these organizations on the theory that "there was no way to stop dancing and some evenings WOULD be safe from drinking."

We sometimes wonder what would happen if the University of Florida should decide to every pressure group. Possibly a group opposed to dancing could successfully eliminate fraternities on the campus, and such are rumored as mentioned above.

THE SITUATION is enough to cause you to think. Should a University be run by people off the campus who want to see things done their way, or should it be left in the hands of professional administrators who would operate it for the benefit of students.

We prefer the latter; and we are left cold whenever outside interests begin putting pressure on the University's policy of leaving or to run the football program for us.

Swing to another subject, here is the latest crop of didjouknows.

Reviews First Starlight Serenade

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

THE SYMPHONIC Band presented the first of four "Starlight Serenades" Wednesday night in the outdoor auditorium. The purpose of these concerts is simply "to provide pleasant entertaining and relaxing music" and there is no point in criticizing the level of the program or the quality of all the music played. But since the band members have been asked to play musically and accurately some comment on the performance might not be out of order.

The first number was a stirring overture, third-act Introduction to Lohengrin, by Wagner, and it was a fitting take-off for the rest of the transcriptions. I must confess that this is one of the best ordinary reductions I've ever heard. Some of the brass players got carried away with the thing, and consequently split some of the notes, but on the whole it was quite impressive.

THE HOLST First Suite and Grainger group were pleasantly varied in form with clarity and warmth. Charles Culbreath, a saxophone soloist of graduate technique, unfortunately could scarcely be heard in his number. The band played softly enough, but the saxophone should have been amplified.

The rest of the program consisted of rather light fare, played with such finesse that the concussion section was too heavy in the concluding number — Morissey's Caribbean Fantasy. The band members must handle the light, delicate production, even though it is supposed to carry the melody. I counted nine percussionists in the section, but no kitchen sinks. The effect was one of muddiness and weirdness, rather than clarity and vitality. . . . .

FATE SEEMS to have decreed that I not hear Ryan Beard's solo this year. I have had to miss almost every performance by him one of his students has given, and Wednesday's performances of my own or out-of-town obligations such as Sinatra's trips or composer recitals. I'll guarantee that I'll hear Beard's performance last year.

This Beard-ian knight Ryan is acting in Junior Recital with Char-Laine Weeks, and again I will have to miss it. The occasion is the Reading Symposium at the University of Alabama, and John Roda of the music faculty and I are both having works performed.

The program Saturday night will be an interesting one. Miss Weeks will sing the "Seguidilla" from Carmen, and Ryan Beard and Faure's "Apres une Reve," among others.

IN ADDITION to a Bach partita and a Schubert sonata, Edwards will present a group of works by American composers—music definitely off the beaten path. Coupled with formidable Passacaglia will open the group, and a short piece by Norman Dello Joio will follow. Robert Palmer, an FSU graduate, prof now at the University of Illinois, will be represented by the Suite Ostinato—a work full of tension and rhythmic problems.

Wandering With Wiljohn

Exhibits Attract Students, Comment

By WILJOHN

THIS WEEK seemed to be our time to be stodgy, stuffy. The Air Force showed itself to everyone's life with a very impressive and interesting show of some of the planes that have kept and are keeping our country safe. It is difficult to find out whose idea it was to bring that exhibit here and allow it to be shown but it does seem a shame that whoever decides those things isn't a bit more choosy about all the exhibits given here this week.

The one I refer to in particular was the "Juvenile Delinquency" trailer from Jacksonville. "No admission, just your free-will silver donation." Did you fall for it, too? Don't feel like the Lone Ranger. I was a farce it was. Few of the things advertised outside were seen and most of these exhibited were either fake or else not worth it. There should be some sort of screening for these things, especially if they are going to be allowed to come right on the campus. And I wonder why it was thought necessary to blank out the words "Juvenile Delinquency" after the first day? Were we getting ideas or were they?) . . . . .

TO CONTINUE wandering around this week's campus, the bulletin boards that were set up for campaign posters were very nice and they certainly provided relief from the usual "let's-elect-Joe-Doakes" campaigning. I don't like everything else, you just can't put up things like that and then forget them. They served their purpose during elections but now they look like myriad patchwork quilts all over the campus. Bits of tape and staples are all over here to them like old tinsel on a discarded Christmas tree and a few posters about coming events have been haphazardly smeared onto them. Might be an idea to see a committee set up, though I'm not volunteering, to keep these boards clean and the newer posters over the older. Otherwise, we have replaced one eyesore with another. . . . . .

LAST NIGHT was the season's first Starlight Serenade. Dave has probably reviewed it in his "Wings" column and that is not my intention anyway. I would like to comment on one thing, however. The program was swell and not one soloist in the audience didn't think so and give warm applause at the end. The orchestra as a whole had been accomplished and the spell of music under the night skies had been very admirably cast. So why be tasteless enough to break that wonderful spell with the Fight Song for an encore? If there isn't supposed to be a time and a place character with the rest of the music heard, don't do another number. But not the Fight Song again. I think there would have been more lasting applause if it hadn't been played but everyone was afraid they'd get the Alma Mater or "That Ole Seminole Spirit" next. . . . . .

TIP OF THE WEEK As if you needed this one, Don't miss Grace Kelly in the show at the State. "The Swan." She proves once again that a real talent can take what would ordinarily be a colorless part and make it into something very worthwhile seeing. Alec Guinness is, of course, entirely capable of upholding the opinion that he is the worlds finest character actor. He is just marvelous. . . . . .

"How Ya Gonna Keep 'Em Down On The Farm After They've Seen Paritzee?"

"UGH!"

DEAR GEORGIE SEMINOLE,

NO PUBLICITY BUT—

Volleyball is a popular game when it's played for fun, and it's enjoyed by most of us all, either through some type of physical education program or maybe a camp recreation setup.

It seems strange, then, that the sport has never caught on at a varsity level in this country, and it's probably one of the few sports where a national champion fails to get more than a few paragraphs in the newspaper columnar.

Yes, we said a NATIONAL champion. Florida State's varsity squad under Coach Bill Odeneal brought home an NCAA title last year and found themselves with hardly any publicity to show for it.

Odeneal will tell you that this game of volleyball played by colleges and service teams is something quite different from the man on the street's conception of the sport.

It's a lot faster he'll tell you and you've got to see a varsity match to really appreciate the sport.

Odeneal and his volleyballers established a fantastic string of triumphs before eventually attaining the national crown last year, and have been long dominant in Florida.

The Seminoles won their sixth Florida AAU crown this year, and have been runnerup on one other occasion, not bad for eight years of competition.

They have high hopes of retaining their national crown come May in the Capital City. Washington and these hopes look good with four all-Americans back from last year's winners.

Leading the assault on the opponents at Seattle will be Bernie McCann, Eugene Lewis, Rav Johnson and Lyle Lewis, all selected for the all-America squad last year.

Sorely missed will be Phil Slaton, a January graduate. Slaton was selected captain of the first-team all-America last year and rated one of the most versatile men on the squad.

Others on the Tribe squad seeing most of the action are Elmer Johnson, Dave Hulse, Pehmi Zeko, Roger Hagerman, Ed Threadgill and John Miller.

Publicity or no publicity, and I'm sure they'd tell you the latter, the Seminoles like Old Man River keep rolling on and you can bet they'll be among the tops in the coming nationals.

IN APOLOGY—

A letter from one Stanley L. Smith objects that we have overlooked a record-breaker on the track team, and if we have we apologize.

The apology is directed in particular to Lloyd Lassen whose leap of 6'2" in the Davidson-Mercer meet did set a track record for Seminole high jumpers.

Lassens' jump broke an existing standard of 6'¼", set by Tenney Brown before he joined the service, in 1950. Brown is incidentally back with the squad now as a junior, scholastically.

Reader Smith points out that Lassen cleared the bar on an even six feet in the recent Florida meet for second place, and that again the Flambeau failed to mention it.

This we say in defense, Mr. Smith, it is difficult to mention all the athletes on a large organization as a track squad, particularly when all are doing a great job.

Nevertheless we apologize for not mentioning Lassen's record and we thank you for the note pointing it out.

ODDS AND ENDS—

Look for a thrilling duel in the mile run when the Seminole trackmen and the Gator thinclads get together again in the state AAU meet here May 5. Florida's Jack Test and the Tribe's Mike Conley finished in a near dead heat with a time of 4:29.9 in the recent meet in Gainesville.

Incidentally, it's the first time the state meet has been held in Tallahassee. . . . Track fans may see not only possibly two of the fastest dash men in the state that AAU meet, both unfortunately running for the visitors. Junior Bumper Watson has gone the 100-yard dash in 9.5 several times and Freshman Ellis Goodloe is credited with a 9.6. Watson didn't run in the Seminole meet because of a pulled leg muscle.

Seminole Nine Meets Stetson Tonight

Avitable Halts Cincy, 8-2

By JOE GREENE
Flambeau Sports Writer

Tonight at Centennial Field, Florida State's Seminoles go up against win number 17 in 20 starts as they meet the Hatters from Stetson.

Tomorrow afternoon at East Campus, the Tribe and Hatters will wind up the two-game series.

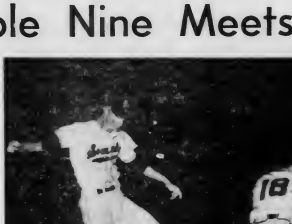
Serving the ball to the Stetson sticklems tonight will probably be Max Long with a 5-0 record. In tomorrow's game either John Ash, Tony Avitable or Tom Garcia will face the Hatters.

Behind the explosive bat of second baseman Carlee Hendrix and the good left arm of Tony Avitable, Florida State defeated the University of Cincinnati 8-2 last Monday night.

It marked Avitable's fifth consecutive victory of the current season and brought him up to par with Max Long's record

He allowed seven hits while fanning eleven batters, and gave up five hitters to first on two occasions.

The fine of the Florida State infield took on a new appearance as Coach Danny Litwhiler shuffled his deck and came up with Hendrix on second base and Foy Barton at third.



The change didn't hamper Hendrix as he rapped out four singles and drove in two runs.

The maneuver worked well defensively. Barton fielded five balls without error. However, his bat which clipped a single in the ninth inning to beat Wasden in the Invitational tourney semi-finals failed to contribute to the hit column for FSU.

Five runs in the bottom of the fourth inning when they starting 1-8 led the Seminoles to an easy victory.

Two-run singles by Avitable and Bisbee, and four Bearcat errors in the fourth aided the Tribe cause. The Bearcats, although muffing eight times in the field, came up with three double plays.

Other changes in the infield moved Dick Houser to shortstop and Ham Bisbee to first Houser, the team's leading hitter, came in from the outfield and Bisbee went in first in place of long ball hitter Fred Twomey.

SAFE AT FIRST Seminole third baseman Carlee Hendrix touches the sack just ahead of the throw to beat out a hit in Monday's 8-2 victory over Cincinnati.

Intramural Softball Features High Scoring And Protests

The midseason heat is in the intramural softball leagues, what with close games, wild games, protests, and counterprotests.

The "wild game" part of the activity is demonstrated by the 14-7 win the Methodists took over the Air Force. The ball was really sailing into the "wild blue yonder" from both the bats of the pitchers, and the hands of the fielders.

Friday with the finals coming on Saturday. The crowning of all intern N.A.U. champions and the presentations of the U.S. Olympic Gymnastics Team will take place Saturday night.

On the 20-2 win of ATO over TEP, which was called at the end of the 5th, for purposes of conservation of energy.

Then of course there was the overtime contest in which Pentagon finally scored the winning run for a 10-9 win, on a run in which the debate lasted long and was as to whether the runner had really touched home plate.

Senior Hall took a 12-4 contest from BST. SN beat KS 17-0, but they avoided a protest, something TC did not avoid when they beat KS 16-6, so that game will be replayed from the 3rd inning with the score 10-6, TC.

PKP beat TEP 7-2 and SAE won a real battle from LCA 5-0. But that one has been protested also. FKT won from PDT 10-3, and the Methodist beat the Feds 13-3.

The tightest game to date was the 1-0 win of the Festhouse over the Day Students.

B.S.U. won the golf championships of the Dorm-Independent league by winning a 2-1 decision over the Freshmen in the finals.

Gymnasts Try To Break Odd Year Streak At National AAU

By TOM HALE
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State Gymkana gymnastics team will leave Tuesday for State College, Penn., to defend their National A. A. U. team title.

Coach Hartley Price, coach of three previous N.A.A.U. champions at F.S.U. said, "The competition this year is expected to be tougher than ever before with over thirty teams entered."

He continued. "The Los Angeles Turners have three Olympic men and will be very hard to beat. Penn State, with two former Olympic team members will be equally as tough."

The Seminoles have acquired a habit of winning the team title on odd years, 1951, 1953, and 1955. "We will try our hardest to overcome this streak," said the defending N.A.A.U. all-around champion, Jack Miles.

Six Olympic spots will be filled at the meet. The top six men and finish in all-around will be the gymnasts that get the spots.

At the present time, there are about twenty-four men in the country capable of making the team, four from FSU.

They are Jack Miles, Don Holder, Rafael Lecuona, and Chick Cleio. Lecuona, however, has already accepted to be the captain of the Cuban Olympic Gymnastics team.

Other men on the squad who've seen most of the action this year include Roger Hagerman, Pehmi Zeko, John Miller, Elmer Johnson, Ed Threadgill, David Hulse and George Rodgers.

The volleyballers are scheduled to leave Sunday night for Camp Rucker to participate in a volleyball clinic there Monday

Volleyball Tilt With Rucker Canceled

A scheduled volleyball match between Florida State's national champions and Camp Rucker, Ala. has been canceled, reveals Seminole coach Bill Odeneal.

Odeneal said that the visiting Camp Rucker team wired in Thursday that they would be unable to make it for the match, scheduled for the Gymnasium school.

The Seminole coach said that the match would be rescheduled for a date later in the year.

Last year's all-Americans, Bernie McCann, Eugene Lewis and Ray Johnson, the Seminoles' 1955 national champs have run up a 25-4 thus far this year.

Others on the squad who've seen most of the action this year include Roger Hagerman, Pehmi Zeko, John Miller, Elmer Johnson, Ed Threadgill, David Hulse and George Rodgers.

The volleyballers are scheduled to leave Sunday night for Camp Rucker to participate in a volleyball clinic there Monday

Racketmen Host Southern Tomorrow

A victory over Florida Southern's tennis team tomorrow will place Florida State's netmen over the .500 mark in season's play.

The match will be played at the varsity courts which are located behind the ROTC building, beginning at 2 p.m.

Coach Hugh Willis expected to send a mixed team of lettermen and freshmen against the Moccasins.

Hal Schaus and Shelby Creash, the Tribe's top two racketmen, will probably play the first two opening matches, with Les Herrier, Fred Gerwig, Charles Nordinger and Frank Byran getting the call in the others.

Should the Tribe get by Southern and Mercer, which they played very well, it will insure Coach Pitchford of at least an even break for the year.

Other wins were over Ohio State, Southern Illinois, Georgia Tech, Emory twice, and Mercer.

Life Was Unbearable For J. Paul Sheedy* Till Wildroot Cream-Oil Gave Him Confidence

Sheedy's heavy kept giving him the cold shoulder. "This is more than I can bear! Why not be a-ser-f" he moaned. "What for?" the Grenadoid, "It is a frosty Friday before I Gee-you again. And just a glance woodening why, take a look at your shaggy hair." This made Sheedy sore and think, he got Wildroot Cream-Oil and now he's the picture of confidence. Trackstars Face 'Bulldogs,' Tech

By BOB WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State track squad, still licking the wounds of defeat after their loss to Florida, travels to Athens, Georgia, to engage Georgia and Georgia Tech in a triangular meet tomorrow.

Coach Mike Long's charges will be looking for their second and third wins on Georgia soil this year. However, these Georgia suns could be harder to crack than is expected.

Georgia Tech, flushed with victory after their 74-58 conquest of the University of Miami trackmen, have a keen eye for the form of two outstanding field event winners.

Spearheading the Tech effort were a pair of muscle-minded dreadnaughts—Carl Verreen and Fred Bedman. The Tech Yellow Jackets used the talents of this duo to overwhelm Miami in two events.

Verreen slung the discus 178 feet, 5 inches to win, while Bedman placed second with a toss of 155 feet, 1 inch.

In the broad jump, Berman reversed the order to win with a heave of 52 feet, 8½ inches, while his teammate Verreen stepped second with 48 feet, 11 inches.

Although the Yellow Jackets were impressive in the field events, their times in the running events were poor in comparison. Tech's best time in the 100 yd. run was 10.0 seconds. Torrance took the 100 yd dash in 9.7 seconds, and the 220 in 22.2 seconds.

The Seminoles in comparitive times were also behind in times in several track meets.

Linksters Seek Perfect Season

The high flying Florida State golf team will journey to Winter Park tomorrow to meet Rollins for the second time this season.

The Seminoles added another Gator scalp to their belt last Monday by dumping Florida 15-12. This was the second victory of the season over the Gators.

The Tribe whipped them six weeks ago by the score of 22½ to 5½ in Tallahassee.

Florida's Dave Ragan was medalist for the day as he shot a brilliant 75 under-par. Ragan beat FSU's Bob Dunn, although Dunn had a respectable two-under par 76.

The Gators had a lead at the halfway mark, but the Seminoles shot consistent golf and overcame the lead.

Ed Jenkins of FSU was also under par with a 71. Bunk Berry, Bill Shelton and Harry Shumaker all had a 72. Jack Whelchel finished off the scores with a 73.

The Seminoles now stand undefeated in ten matches, not including the Gator dual meet, or the state tourney.

Rollins and Georgia are the only teams that they will have to overcome in order to become the first FSU squad to go undefeated with an unblemished record.

PHI BETA KAPPA, I LOVE YOU!

Once there was a Chi Omega named Alfreda Pectate who was beautiful and well-formed and who smoked one of the most tasteful cut and smoked the gentlest of all cigarettes—Philip Morris, of course!—and had, in addition to these admirable qualities, a most impressive and retentive that she used to read the Britannica just for kicks.

Alfreda had one great ambition: to be elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Consequently she was all a-dither when she heard a rumor one night that a man from the Phi Beta Kappa selection board was coming to the Chi Omega house to interview her. Being all a-dither, Alfreda sat down and let a Philip Morris, as she always did when she was all a-dither, for gentle Philip Morris, as we all know, is comfort to the troubled, balm to the beset, and a haven to the vexed. But gentle Philip Morris, as Alfreda, with her mighty intellect, was well aware, is not only a cigarette for times of nerves and stress, but also the perfect accompaniment to happiness and light. For gentle Philip Morris is mild and savory and jolly and merry and yummy! All this Alfreda, with her giant cerebellum, knew.

By and by there came a loud, masculine knock on the door, and Alfreda, composing herself, went to answer it. "Won't you come in?" she said to the man outside. "I am Alfreda Pectate."

"And I am Ed Pester," said the man, entering with a friendly smile. Ed had found that a friendly smile was a great asset in the Venetian blind game, which happened to be Ed's game. He had nothing to do with Phi Beta Kappa; he had come over to see about a new blind for the house mother's bedroom. But, of course, Alfreda knew nothing of this.

"Be sit down," said Alfreda.

"Thanks, hey," said Ed. "But I can't stay long."

"Of course," said Ed Alfreda and proceeded without delay to demonstrate how wide and comprehensive was her learning. "Deer," she said, "have no gall bladders."

"Deer," she said, "have no gall bladders."

"Is that so?" said Ed, who until this moment had believed deer had gall bladders.

"Ben Jonson," said Alfreda, "was buried in a sitting position."

"Hmm." said Ed.

"Fortnight is a contraction of 'fourteen nights,'" said Alfreda.

"What do you know!" said Ed.

"Many people think it is forbidden to wash an American flag," said Alfreda. "That is not true. It is perfectly proper to wash an American flag."

"Learn something every day," said Ed.

"The smallest fish in the world," said Alfreda, "is the Pandaka Pygmaea, which is under a half inch when full grown."

"How come they buried that Jonson sitting up?" said Ed.

"It's always crowded in Westminster Abbey," said Alfreda.

"Oh," said Ed.

"Ann Boleyn had six fingers on her left hand," said Alfreda.

"Heavens to Betsy!" said Ed.

"Are there any questions you'd care to ask me?" said Alfreda.

"Just one," said Ed. "How big is your house mother's window?"

A tear ran down Alfreda's cheek. "Well, that's the way it goes," she sighed. "You work and slave and study and then they catch you on a trick question! . . . Oh, well, that's life, I guess."

Forlorn and bereft, she rose and shambled to her bed and fell upon it and wept for several days. But finally she pulled herself together, and today she is with Byrd in the Antarctic.

Unusual Hour Set

BY ARLIEDA RIES

English Coffee Hour does it again! Another out-of-the-ordinary presentation is slated for 4 p.m. today in the Westminster House.

"Around the World in Forty Minutes', a series of musical contributions made by various FSU students who come from foreign countries, will be presided over by Dr. R. R. Oglesby, Dean of Students.

As a part of the program Khaloul - Jadaan, junior social welfare major from Ana, Iraq, is going to play the improvised music of native shepherds on his flute.

The Tinikling, sometimes referred to as the Bamboo Dance, is to be performed by four natives of the Philippines: Pat Ejercito, graduate student in hotel and restaurant management from San Juan; Raul de Guzman, graduate student in public administration and political science from Quezon; Ernesto Cabigas, graduate student in government from Bulacan; and Marcial Lavina, graduate student majoring in history from Silang.

A freshman hotel and restaurant management major from Saskatchewan, Canada, Marie Locker, will sing the theme song of the Northern Manitoba Trappers Festival entitled "When the Ice Worms Nest Again".

As far as it is known there is no such thing as an "ice worm", but each year the Committee for the Festival, which is held during February in The Pas, Manitoba, offers substantial rewards to anyone who can produce an authentic "worm".

Although no one has produced a live "worm" yet, many have been created out of the imagination of the northern folk, and dominate the floats in the Festival Parade.

Yasukazu Kanemasu, native of Tokyo, Japan, a graduate student majoring in physical education and recreation, will interpret a story of life in dance, featuring three characters: the "funnyman", a girl, and the demon or "badman".

It features the traditional Japanese state costume and is completely presented in pantomime.

Phi Beta Kappa Takes In Eight

Eight persons were chosen Monday for membership in the Florida State University chapter of Phi Beta Kappa national scholastic honorary in the liberal arts.

Chosen for faculty membership is Dr. Anne Louise Pate, associate professor of bacteriology.

Students selected are Loretta Joan Bryan and Warren H. Cobb, both of whom have graduated, and Carol A. Irwin, a senior; Margaret L. Neller, senior; Marvin Glen Mayo, senior; Evelyn C. Moll, junior; and Clarence E. Vogelgesang, who has graduated.

They will be initiated Friday, April 27, in ceremonies to begin at 5 p.m. in Longmire building. The initiation will be followed with a formal banquet beginning at 6:45 in the Suwannee Room. Judge Dozier DeVane, of the Federal District Court in Tallahassee, will speak at the banquet.

MEDITATIONS SLATED MONDAY-FRIDAY

Meditations and short devotionals will be held in the clubroom of Longmire on Monday through Friday from 12:35 to 12:50 under the sponsorship of the Student Religious Association.

Students Planning Adlai Appearance

"Students for Stevenson" are making tentative plans for Adlai to speak on the Florida State campus May 3, according to Guy Millner, club chairman.

A motorcade to escort Stevenson to the campus where a breakfast will be held in his honor is being planned by the student group, said Millner.

The former Illinois governor's visit to Tallahassee was planned for last weekend, but Representative Bob Sikes informed the Leon County Stevenson for President committee that he will appear in Tallahassee a week before the May 29 primary.

Coordination

Millner said the FSU club is coordinating activities with the county committee headed by Senator Wilson Carraway. The two groups met this week to make plans to acquaint the students with Stevenson and distribute campaign literature.

FSU's "Students for Stevenson" organization is one of seven in state colleges and universities.

"Joining the campaign is an excellent chance for students interested in politics and the Democratic party to work for nomination of Stevenson," asserted Millner.

Officers

Senator Carraway urged the Democratic supporters "to get behind Stevenson and give him a good send off."

Officers of "Students for Stevenson" are Guy Millner, chairman; "Coot" Jackson, associate chairman; Toby Lovern, coordinator; Charlet Pollyeat, Cecil Johnson, publicity; Linda Bell, secretary; Bill Wright, supplies; Art Moore, special events; Mary Penn Cawthon, social chairman; Gary Gordon, men's dorms; Gloria Harris, Betty Bolton, Shirley Jackson, sorority representatives; and Mary Ann Snead, Rita Nelms, Barbara Toney, dorm representatives.

'State' Party Selects Almost Complete Slate

By CHARLET POTEVINT

State party delegates met Monday night to elect an almost-full slate of candidates for class elections.

Party chairman Art Moore said he was "well satisfied" with the outcome of the convention. "We have good qualified people running and the party has high hopes of winning."

Seniors

Nominated for senior class offices were Paul Ort, president; Jo Wagner, vice president; Judy Hrubika, secretary; Marvin Gunter, treasurer; and Betsy Cubson, social chairman.

Senior Senate nominees are "Jeep" Moore, Harvey Hall, Barbara Moore, and Claire Britt.

Juniors

Junior class officers on the state ticket are Graham Tesdell, president; Kate Ramsey, treasurer; Barbara Chambers, secretary; and Sue Shiver, social chairman.

Senate nominees are Juniors Shirley Priscilla Moss, James Orta and Bill Swigert.

Sophomores

On the sophomore slate are Doug Knight, for president; Sue Harpe, vice president; Roy Robertson, treasurer; Mickey McMillan, secretary; and Dave Green, social chairman. Senate nominees are Gerry Olson, Art Moore, Winnie Mae Douglas and Pat Finlay.

Honor Court

Running for Honor Court on the State Party ticket are juniors Dick Shadduck, Carrie Redd, Ida Crawford, and Carmen Bailey.

Cars Collide At Blind Hill

The blind hill on Call Street and new house construction building claimed two cars Sunday.

Involved in the crackup, which happened about 8 p.m., were Cadillac drivers by Mrs. Tatty Bludworth, 20, West End, and a 1956 Pontiac driven by Mrs. Marie B. Bray, Call Street housemother.

Mrs. Bray said Bludworth was driving west and Mrs. Bray headed east. The left front of Mrs. Bray's car was damaged. Police estimates placed costs to the Bray car at $150 and to the Pontiac at $50.00.

Mrs. Bray may have suffered injuries in the accident but did not require emergency treatment. Police reported Bludworth was charged with excessive speed and failing to have his car under control. He posted $100 bond.

Few other housemothers, the Florida Flambeau was told, were passengers in Mrs. Bray's vehicle.

Politics Club Slates Governor's Forum

Politics Club will present candidates for each of the gubernatorial candidates at tomorrow evening at 8 p.m. in the Long Hall Auditorium.

The speakers, leading Tallahassee men, will give a short preliminary statement about each candidate, explained Harold Lambert, president of the group.

A forum will follow the speeches. In addition, Charlton Pierce, Tallahassee attorney and Chairman of the Leon County Democratic Organization, will be present.

YETS CLUB MEETS TONIGHT

Veteran's Club will meet tonight in Room 120 of the Geology Building. The meeting is scheduled for 8:30 p.m., announced Jerome Bernstein, chairman.

This afternoon is also the deadline for turning in campaign expense estimates, according to Betty Willmon, secretary of elections.

"No late expense estimates will be accepted because the Elections Committee will immediately begin to prepare the official ballot," Miss Willmon warned.

Rules governing active campaigning have been changed since the Student Body Election Candidate may post one placard not over 12 by 18 inches in size on each of 24 bulletin boards. Printed material may also be posted on bulletin boards in residence halls.

Janleen Robertson Woods, editor of the Florida Flambeau, said typewritten campaign letters not to exceed 150 words in length may be submitted before 5 p.m. tomorrow for publication Friday.

Gold Key Take In 7

Seven men were tapped Friday for Gold Key, men's leadership honorary.

Those tapped were Don Powell, Verne Edgar, Don Allen, Bill Nesbitt, Bill Manning, Con Horn and Don Reide.

1955 'MAN'
Harvey Hall

3rd 'Ugly Man' Competition To Begin May 2

The third annual "Ugly Man" contest, sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity, is slated for May 2 through May 10.

All organizations, fraternities, sororities, and dorms are eligible to enter one candidate, putting an entrance fee of one dollar, said David Harris, chairman of the event.

All sponsors entering a candidate must have a glossy print photograph made of the candidate in the tallest form possible and submit it to the contest chairman before the end of the month, he continued.

Each picture will be placed above a container at the poll and selection of the Ugly Man for '56 will be judged on a penny a vote. Every five dollar bill will count double, noted Harris.

The winners for the ugly man and the last two years has been Delta Tau Delta and Alpha Delta Pi. Any organization winning the trophy for three consecutive years will be able to keep it.

Move Possible Banning Frosh Cars Next Year

Traffic Committee Considering Plan

By DAVE EVANS

Freshmen might be forbidden to drive cars on campus, and possibly from bringing them to Tallahassee next year.

This was one of the many proposals considered last week at a joint faculty-student and Faculty-Senate traffic committee meeting.

No action will be taken however, before all possible solutions are considered and watched as to their merits, said Karl Edwards, chairman of the student-faculty traffic committee.

ONLY 415

"If the Freshmen are forbidden to bring cars next year only 415 autos would be knocked out of the picture; this number would not relieve the congestion to any great degree," explained Harry Day, director of service units.

Day continued, "Drastic measures will have to be taken in order to relieve the parking problem on our campus. We have 250 blue sticker parking spaces and approximately 2900 cars with blue stickers; the proper ratio for cars to parking spaces should be about three to one."

Student Senate may consider a bill which would limit automobiles to those students whose grades are satisfactory, Edwards said.

OTHER IDEAS

Other solutions suggested by the two committees were: first, limiting blue stickers to faculty and seniors and possibly some of the Juniors.

Second, issuing black stickers, "parking in dormitory areas only."

Third, establishing a two-hour parking limit in certain areas as in front of Westcott so that there will be a constant circulation of cars cutting down on all-day parking.

Edwards commented, "No one solution will solve the problem; it will probably have to take the best aspects of the many ideas suggested and work out a practical plan."

Edwards and other members of his committee went to Gainesville over the weekend to study Florida's traffic program.

Collins Apears Here Today; Speaks At 3

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Gov. LeRoy Collins will speak on campus this afternoon in his drive to win a full-four year term in the state's highest office.

Collins, now serving out the unexpired term of the late Dan McCarty, will speak in Longmire auditorium beginning at 3 p.m.

According to Coyle Moore Jr., president of the Florida State University "Keep Collins Governor" club, Collins will deliver a short, "informal," campaign address.

Reception

A reception will be held afterward in the small lounge Longmire. All students are invited to attend, Moore said.

The appearance here is part of Collins' official campaign schedule. He will leave at 4 p.m. for Jacksonville where he will make a television speech tonight.

"This is the first big meeting held on campus by a gubernatorial candidate in some time," Moore commented.

At Convention

Collins, Brailey Odham, and acting governor Charley Johns spoke here two years ago, but they appeared before a convention meeting at FSU, and not at a student event.

Johns, Burley that campaign, visited informally on campus but made no publicized appearance.

Collins' speech today is being publicized by members of the "Keep Collins Governor" club, in which there are over 100 active members, according to Moore.

Dual-Band Starlight Event Set Tomorrow

Continuing a series of "Starlight Serenades," the Laboratory Band will give a joint concert with the Symphonic Band tomorrow night at 8:15 in the Music Amphitheatre.

On the first half of the program, the Symphonic Band will start off with a Toccata by Bonelli, conducted by William Cramer. This will be followed by "Canon Rondeau" by Gabrieli, "If Thou Be Near" by Bach, Cacavas' "Woodchuck," Wagner's Good Friday Music from Parsifal, and "The Shawl Dance" by Skinner.

Manley R. Wilcomb will take over baton for the next six numbers. First of these, "Concert Fantasia" from Bach's Brandenburg features clarinetist Frank Valdes. The program includes another clarinet number, "Clarinet Cake" by Hermann, followed by a Medley by Charles Carter. "Dream," "Relax Rhumba," Strauss waltzes from "Der Rosenkavalier" and "Blue Skies" by Irving Berlin's "Easter of the Fair," complete the Symphonic Band numbers.

Robert Brumagel, faculty member of the School of Music, will direct the Lab Band during the second half of the program. Brumagel has conducted the band since the origin four years ago.

Modern Music

The band is made up for the most part of students in the music school who are interested in modern music.

Odd sonnas such as "A Cottage for Sale," "East of the Sun," "In Autumn" and "A Cow Man Is Hard to Find" have been arranged by Roger McDuffie. Price Buhrman and Johnny Edmunds.

In addition, Edmunds has also arranged the lively "Mambo Nothing" and Gene Gee, the ensemble's pianist, will play "Lemon Drop."

Vocalist will also include two original compositions. McDuffie has contributed "Four Kinds of Blues," which features, from an Indian beat, while "Mood for Monday," an original by Dick Swain, features the ensemble trombone sound.

Three Singers

Three vocalists still be featured on the concert. Edmunds on his arrangement of "Love Is Here to Stay." Anne Verran singing "Tis Autumn" and June Kirk on "A Cottage for Sale."

The experimental orchestra is made up of five trumpets, five trombones, five saxes and four rhythm instruments.

The joint concert is the second in the series of weekly serenades, the first of which was given by the Symphonic Band.

None is scheduled for next week due to the circus performances, but the following two weeks will feature the Concert Band and Symphonic Band respectively.

Says Campus Official
Possible Fulbrights Await FSU Students

Many opportunities in the field of foreign studies are now available for students, according to Dr. Albert L. Leduc, chairman of the campus Fulbright Scholarship committee.

Twenty countries, located on every continent, have entered agreements with the United States, making it possible for students to study abroad, sponsored jointly by the United States, using foreign facilities, he explained.

The Fulbright scholarship program provides all expenses—room, board, tuition, living expenses, books, and travel abroad. The amount varies according to the country, but all give the student a comfortable living while he is away from the States.

Most Popular

The countries most applied for by FSU students, Dr. Leduc stated. Dr. Leduc, have been England, France and West Germany. Fields of study pursued have ranged from "A" to "Z"—art to zoology, with these courses available in almost any of the 20 cooperating nations.

There are three basic prerequisites to application for a Fulbright scholarship said Dr. Leduc. A high grade average is necessary, due to the great amount of competition. The applicant must also plan an appropriate project for foreign study, and have a good command of the language of the country he chooses to visit.

Year Study

With these necessities fulfilled, the next step in acquiring a Fulbright scholarship is to contact Dr. Leduc. All applications, which can be made only by seniors and graduate students, must be made through him, after which they are processed by the campus Fulbright committee.

Knowing about the wide possibilities under the Fulbright program, said Dr. Leduc, should encourage interested freshmen and other students to learn the language and improve their grade average in preparation for application when they are juniors.

IRISH SPEAKS IN BALTIMORE

Dohnanyi Plays Friday In Solo With Symphony

Ernest von Dohnanyi, composer and pianist, will appear in concert Friday with the University Symphony.

This concert in Westcott Auditorium, beginning at 8:15 p.m. will be free and open to the public.

It will be the first time Dohnanyi has appeared as soloist with an all-campus group, and it will also be the first time a member of the faculty has been soloist for the Symphony since 1948, according to Robert Sedore, conductor.

Mozart

Dohnanyi and the orchestra will play Mozart's "Concerto No. 25 in C Major (K 503)." in three parts—Allegro maestro, Andante and Allegretto.

Other selections presented by the orchestra will be the Overture by Tchaikovsky, "Scenes Musicales, Suite of Five Movements" by Benjamin Britten and "Russian Easter Overture, Op. 36" by Rimsky-Korsakoff.

Wind-Up

This will be the official wind-up of the orchestra's 29th season which has consisted of four public performances, including Dohnanyi.

During the 1955-56 season the Symphony played a homecoming Concert at the Garnet and Gold Banquet, joined choral groups on a performance of Handel's "Messiah," provided instrumental background for Samuel Romberg's "New Moon" and various other combinations for Church Union and the University Singers.

The orchestra will soon join Church Union in giving Bizet's "Carmen."

Wright will leave Monday for rehearsal. The concert similar to one he presented in Tallahassee early this month, will include the Concerto in F and the Rhapsody in Blue.

Re-Elect Collins

TO THE STUDENTS:

It was only 16 months ago that LeRoy Collins was inaugurated Governor of Florida. Since then Florida has enjoyed its greatest period in prosperity increase, population gains, employment, tourists, agriculture and new industry.

Governor Collins submitted the broadest set of recommendations in history to the 1955 Legislature. Although only one regular session of the Legislature has met during Governor Collins' administration, it has been said, "This session gave Florida a four-year program of progress, all in one."

Some of the accomplishments made by Governor Collins and under his administration include better educational facilities with a $200 per year raise for school teachers and an appropriation of $163 million for schools; creation of a merit system and placement of over 5,000 state employees under it; an extensive program for conservation and restoration of natural resources; improved labor, health and welfare standards with plans for enlarging and constructing mental hospitals, program of aid for indigent disabled financed for the first time, training of mental health workers, and suspension of risk price controls at the consumer and distributor level.

During the first year of Governor Collins' administration Florida had the greatest road-building year in its history under a new highway code which has placed the construction of roads on the basis of proven need rather than political greed. The "bobtail" turnpike is being economically constructed and plans are underway for a turnpike spur to the Tampa Bay area.

The Governor sponsored creation of a Constitutional Revision Commission which is preparing for the next Legislature a new Constitution to replace Florida's outdated 1885 Constitution; the state's promotional activities have been consolidated and expanded under the Florida Development Commission; and an aggressive campaign has been carried out to promote Florida's tourist business. The Governor led the successful fight to raise the dog track racing take for the state to a fair level, and he took a strong stand against any new taxation with the result that there have been no additional taxes.

Under Governor Collins, Florida has had honest, efficient Government that has been free of scandal, racketeering and hypocrisy. The Governor has made appointments which have won wide acclaim for high quality and integrity. The State Sheriffs' Bureau has been created and a inter-county system of communication for crime fighting has been established.

Governor Collins' program to attract new industrial development in Florida has brought tangible results for our state. There has been no integration in Florida, and Governor Collins has met the segregation question with the same level-headed, intelligent approach that has brought results in other areas and is the only course befitting to the stature of our great state.

We feel that Governor Collins has brought integrity, stability, and progress to Florida. He is a Governor of whom Floridians can be proud. We invite you to come to the Longmire Auditorium at 3 p.m. today to hear and meet your Governor—LeRoy Collins.

SINCERELY,
THE STERING COMMITTEE
FSU KEEP COLLINS GOVERNOR ORGANIZATION

(Editor's Note: Only two editorials were received in reply to the Florida Flambeau's invitation to lend its editorial space to students and organizations supporting candidates in the gubernatorial race. They are printed below in the hopes that such action will bring the governor's race nearer home to those members of the student body interested in their state government. To maintain an impartial stand in this race, the Florida Flambeau extends its invitation to publish the next issue as well. Editorials in behalf of candidates other than those below will be accepted until Wednesday at 5 p.m.)

Elect Lowry

TO THE STUDENTS:

Of all the issues in the forthcoming governor's race, the segregation issue stands out as the most vital, even to the extent that the very existence of our state and our freedom are in danger. In fact, there are no other issues worth mentioning when we are faced with this challenge to preserve our rights and liberties.

The people of Florida have voted loudly and clear their desire to keep segregation in their schools and public facilities. All of the four major candidates have said that they will fight integration, yet the records of three of them prove that they have taken this stand only because it is now politically expedient for them to do so. Only Sumter Lowry has taken a stand to uphold the will of the people on this issue, and his record does not betray his stand.

The present governor intergrated the State Attorney's Office in Dade County. What is to stop him from carrying this policy to all state offices? He commuted the sentence of a Negro rapist, after the sentence had been upheld by the state and U. S. Supreme Courts. The present Governor has said that he will fight intergration. A Negro is now sitting on the doorstep of the University of Florida waiting for admittance. The time for action has past, yet the Governor does nothing. It is no wonder that the NAACP has chosen LeRoy Collins as their standard bearer. It is no wonder that Time magazine, the leading Republican intergrationist magazine in the country, has supported LeRoy Collins. It is no wonder that the people of Florida are tired of being let down and are not supporting LeRoy Collins.

Former Governor Fuller Warren, in June of 1951, three years before the supreme court ruling, said that the fight against segregation was already lost and not worth any effort on his part, as he vetoed a bill designed to keep segregation in the state parks. Is he the man to lead the fight to keep the will of the people?

Farris Bryant said, meekly in a speech at Temple that "we will have to swallow it." Now he claims we can avoid integration. Now he claims we can avoid integration if we "make it difficult." Now he claims he stand on segregation when they all shouted "me, too!"

It has been said that General Lowry is not qualified to be governor. If the qualifications are that the Governor be a lawyer-politician who will cut his own throat for votes, then Sumter Lowry is not qualified. But if the Governor is to be an honest, capable man who will run the government on a businesslike manner, then Sumter Lowry is the only qualified candidate.

On May 8, the voters of Florida will say whether they want to maintain segregation or the professional politicians sell out their children.

CHAIRMAN,
STERING COMMITTEE FOR SUMTER LOWRY STUDENT ORGANIZATION.

1956-57 Calendar Forecast

The University Calendar for 1956-57 reached final stages yesterday in a committee meeting in Longmire. A survey of the tentative schedule of events proved interesting in light of predictions made possible.

For instance, the male population at Tallahassee will bear the lides of February, as six sororities and one fraternity all set their annual weekends—all on the same week-end of February 22. Also predict several George Washington themes for same.

Some alterations of tight scheduling will be seen in October, when Homecoming for once will precede mid-terme by a couple of weeks (P. S.—We play Wake forest.)

Prospective literary minds should begin action on a Sandpsur script for March of next year. Westcott has been scheduled for same for three nights. A lot of advance planning efforts prohibit the recurrence of this year's fiasco.

Only two Artist Series are planned thus far—Joy Bragg-Wagner chorale and the Ballet Company of Cuba. We've heard something of a funds shortage, but have no confirmation yet. Tarpon and the second Artist Series will tangle for spectators on one night of its three scheduled performances.

The University Symphony and the Third Major Speech production will also vie for an audience in March of next year. Duto same for the Light Opera Guild and the First Major Theatre production in December.

That leaves us with only one other question to ask of next year's schedule—there was a very evident omission of classes.

Dear Mama Seminole

DEAR MAMA:

Me buy'um dark glasses and put on hip boots so me be able to walk around campus for next few days. Glasses to keep eyesight from being ruined by all campaign posters. hip boots to keep George from getting bogged down in political hogwash. Last election it got so deep that me marooned on top ten story tepee for three days, hope this time me able to make it to classes. But guess me shouldn't complain . . . this time most stuff confined to certain bulletin boards . . . big improvement over past when people get lost for days in maze of posters and banners.

Me hear senators run for re-election. Maybe they decide that efforts better than received in other areas of campus life. Maybe them discover more self-satisfaction in other work. Or maybe them just tired of the petty arguments, petty prejudices, and petty party intrigues. Many competent senators not seek re-election, student government created in hope to hold people of outstanding ability unless it prove itself worthy of efforts.

Rumors of who be in the new cabinet for next year fly fast and thick. If reports of people chosen are correct, the cabinet should be an outstanding one. New Secretary of Elections has served long and hard . . . she deserve post. New Attorney General has great speaking ability; should make him very effective servant of student government. New Secretary of Finance is one of few people with actual ability to handle the position, excellent choice for any position. New Secretary of State come as surprise to many people. Past efforts make new secretary probably best qualified according to experience, is good to see New President put good of Student Body ahead of any other thing . . . friendship or party.

Hoop. Emphasis Week seem to go over pretty good. Every group seem to receive speakers well, take part in discussion afterwards. Too bad revision of Honor Court Procedure not coming along as fast as could be. At present it procedure that hurt court and reputation the most, should be corrected as quickly as possible. Good jobs for the new Attorney General. Me talking to Brutus the other day and he says he like Friendly Village fine, but not like pictures of self in Flambeau. Like pictures on poster much better. . .

LOVE ALL,
GEORGIE II

Students in any course three times examinations scheduled for one day, contact Mr. Pitts at room 211, Longmire Building, to have examinations rescheduled. Same day class conflict examinations in the student's school will be changed.

Any change in examination may be reviewed by the Dean of the School. Final examination of a course in which he has maintained, without question, a "C" average may be excused by the instructor.

Conflicts in Extern work are not excused. Students must take examinations scheduled with their instructors not later than Monday, May 21, 1956.

The time period of a laboratory course will determine its examination time.

Demagogues Have A New Word

The Dissenter

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

THE WORN-OUT term "states' rights" has been replaced with a new one in the jargon of the demagogues: "sovereignty."

The old words hardly have expected them to use it, as it has more than two syllables. But it is more confusing and makes good propaganda.

The Supreme Court, we are told, has infringed on the "sovereignty" of the states, in direct violation of the 10th Amendment, to which some are referring as if it were the Tenth Commandment.

The concept of sovereignty they offer, ostensibly drawn from the Tenth Amendment, is that which no one can ever realize the schools.

What does the Tenth Amendment say? Simply that powers not delegated by the Constitution to the Federal Government, and not sets not outlawed by the Constitution, are reserved to the states and to the people.

POLITICAL SCIENTISTS say that this is merely a truism, which is why it is so often given is kept.

It can only be admitted that the Constitution neither gives the Federal Government control of the state schools, nor denies the states the right to operate public schools.

But there is more to the Tenth Amendment, and it is this that the demagogues pass over.

"Nor prohibited by it to the states."

THE CONSTITUTION very definitely requires that certain states shall afford all citizens equal protection of the laws, and that it shall not deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law.

Thus the Supreme Court has held that separate facilities are inherently unequal in public recreation—does deny citizens equal protection of the laws. And this is forbidden by the Constitution.

The Court could not say that a state is obligated to provide education, but if that education is offered for some, it must be equal to all.

SAID CHIEF JUSTICE Earl Warren in the case of May 17, 1954, . . . "To separate [Negro students] from others of similar age and qualifications solely because of their race generates a feeling of inferiority as to their status in the community that may affect their hearts and minds in a way unlikely ever to be undone."

Education, the Court conceded, can't be measured by obvious and material factors. But the principle that states shall treat people who has not been denied, but limited according to the Constitution.

Certainly, state "sovereignty" has been limited, but this is no unwarranted action. The ultimate sovereignty within the United States rests in the people of the United States as a nation, and not as a collection.

THUS THE STATES are controlled by the Federal system. The people should not believe that their rights are thereby denied because they are the Federal system. It is a question of primary sovereignty and primary allegiance. In the words of Abraham Lincoln, "The primary allegiance of every citizen is due to the Federal government."

It takes only a little common sense—and stamina to resist the demagogue—to realize that a nation, to exist in the world today must be strongest as a nation, and not dependent upon its political subdivisions.

Actually, the states have a great deal of sovereignty, subject only to the limitations of the Constitution that make of them a strong nation. In turn, the Constitution provides that the Federal Government cannot encroach on certain acts.

No, "sovereignty" is not what the demagogue makes it out to be, but because it is so complex it could easily be his magic word.

MANHATTAN, KANSAS — (ACP) — The pitcher prickley story was included in the "Over the Ivy Line" column of the Kansas State College Iaian:

"The Hindu human pin cushions have nothing on one Kansas University student, Barbara Erickson. Research project includes experiments with several dozen assorted mosquitoes. Mosquitoes get hungry. They have to be fed. They happen to need and prefer human blood do . . .

"Someone has to feed them." Miss Erickson says. "No one wants to volunteer, so each night I'm dinner for my pets." Anyone would like to contribute to her blood bank, however, she would be more than willing to make an appointment for you with her pets. They might enjoy the menu change.

On the lighter side this thought came from the same column:

Of All Things

Suggests Bridey Murphy Fan Clubs

By OSCAR JOHNSON

IT IS RARE indeed that a new book receives the kind of overwhelming demand from the public that has been given the book by Morey Bernstein's "The Search For Bridey Murphy".

Although the book is dismissed by many scholars as pseudo-scientific nonsense, it nevertheless has a few points in its favor. For one thing, it is near the top on the national bestseller lists.

Indeed, it has caused such a controversy that psychologists have been forced to take notice of it both in praise and denouncement. LIFE magazine has focused its editorial eye on it, and Ripley has granted it space in his column. If the book in serial form, and long-playing records of it are available in record shops. In addition to this, indications are that a movie version is scheduled for release later this year.

Now, it is not to be said that there is something to the idea of hypnotic regression that appeals to the average person.

Knowing that there is a fad when it has become something of a national fad. It's something people can really go-ang-ho over. In Florida, for instance, a number of Miami hypnotists conducted experiments of their own, claiming later that they were successful in inducing memory of preexistate existence.

Even collegiate-ers have taken the thing a step further: they've formed fan clubs, subjects to tell of future lives while in hypnotic state.

IT APPEARS, then, that Bernstein's folly has become a blossoming field. It has assumed all the proportions of a national institution. As far as we know, only one song has been written about it so far—under the slightly modified title of "The Search For Bridey Murphy-cheese."

Now when you get right down to it there is no reason why this phenomenon should become a part of the new movement. If we were really on the ball we could jump to the front of the line with a number of other fan clubs based on this new pastime. All that would be needed to accomplish this would be the investigation of a year of several courses in advanced hypnotic experimentation.

Some courses could be dubbed with titles such as "Bridey Murphy 101". Bridey Murphy 102, 103, etc. The interesting part of establishing such courses can be seen when you realize that if people can be made to "remember" their previous lives, it can be done in reverse: search out and hypnotize the next Einstein and have him tell us his scientific discoveries. This would set the progress of science back immensely; in fact, we could forget about training physicists, rocket and concentrate solely on mind-readers.

SUCH THINGS are in the future, however. Right now, about all we as students can do is to form "Bridey Murphy Clubs" and become part of the new fad—one which promises to rival the goldfish craze of the twenties.

In fact, once student and other groups get well organized, it shouldn't be too long before we get another even more sensational movement—Bridey Murphy for President.

DID YOU KNOW? Mr. Bernstein recently carried the memory of Bridey Murphy back even further—and discovered that she was once a brontosaurus.

broken throughout. This young is a good actor and deserves bigger and better roles.

REGINA ENGSTRAND, his daughter, was done beautifully by Miss Jeanne Hall. Unfortunately, not as well as the others, which made her part all the worse than one did. Her bearing is very well executed, but her diction perfect, her stage presence unshakable and her general delivery colorless. It becomes a part that does not stand out in your mind when you leave the theatre and this is a fate which them inherited by the rest of the characters in this play. The part was quite difficult, however, but this one brought forth a show of this caliber.

Always I save the best for last. Dr. Thomas as Manders, pastor of the parish. A reviewer finds himself incredibly left with little to say about one of Ibs's most difficult parts and one usually always so fine. And edifying adjectives were tortured mercilessly in an effort to say it. Eb took the show in his two hands when he came on stage, and put it into something real, and handed it, over the footlights to the audience of his audience. Every mannerism, movement, mind, thought, and word belonged to the foolights at clear as day. The only fault was one that was present in everyone on stage. There seemed to be no continuity in the play. It was important to say, say it just as fast as possible. Garble then took over while audience-hension bowed out.

The set layout was wonderfully done. There was, in fact, only one detectable flaw. During the fire scene, the entire mom rea through the dining room door. And the fire and the whole family watched them do it, through the dining room door. A special hats-off for the great lighting effects courtesy: Charles Bates.

Sigma Kappa Wins Race Pole Position

ONE-HAND—Jack Mergins skids around with one hand on handlebars in preliminaries. Mergins will start for the Pi Beta Phi team in the Thursday night race.

PI BETA PHI EXCHANGE—Ken Abbott and Jack Mergins exchange places on their bicycle in the third lap of third qualifying run. The team placed in the seventh position at the pole.

All-Frosh Team Pedals Mile In Record 2:47

The Sigma Kappa-sponsored men's quartet typed out a new page in the book of tradition as they qualified for the pole position in Florida State's first "Little 500" bicycle race with a record-establishing time for the mile—2:47.6.

In turning in this record performance, the Sigma Kappa squad established themselves as the favorites in the race this Thursday night. Race time is 7:30 p.m with the talent show and crowning of the king and queen preceding it at 7 p.m. Tickets may be purchased in any fraternity or sorority house and at all dorms.

The dark maroon and invisible-clad Sigma Kappa squad, using a new bike, sped the low time on their second attempt Saturday morning. Team member Richard Fowler attributed the excellent showing, which was nearly eight seconds better than the second place team to the smooth, professional-looking hand-offs exchanges between team members.

Sigma Kappa's all-freshman entry included Fowler, Tommy Dunn, Bert Busby, and Frank Alcaster. Dunn set the example for his teammates as he pedaled the quarter-mile lap in the low time for the team of 37.8 seconds.

However the low time in the preliminaries for the lap was set by an Alpha Omicron Pi entry. Peaton Bennett, freshman from Winter Park, Bennett, sophomore Lillie Griffin in the weather and track conditions, sped the oval in a flat 37 seconds flat. Bennett was found the same poucher as thee finished second in the trial in a satisfactory 2:55 Comprising the rest of the AOPi-sponsored team were Gail Alford, Jim Rose, and Jo Ann Reese.

Oddly enough, though the Sigma Kappa entry was a full eight seconds ahead of the second place AOPi team the second, third and fourth place teams were all within three seconds of a second apart. The third place Sigma Chi team crossed the finish line in 2:55.1, while the Alpha Tau Omega entry finished in 2:55.4.

The Sigma Chi team qualified on their second attempt Saturday morning after a less-than-satisfactory attempt Friday afternoon. The Sigs clad in blue and gold Ld T-shirts, experienced little trouble on the sandy turns as the bike exchanges. Freshmen Rube Waddell and Glenn Hutchinson, sophomore Hallman and Bob McCall comprised the Sig team.

The preliminaries, though run before a crowed not larger than couple, did see any tales were both colorful and sometimes amusing. The contestants, usually clad in T-shirts and wearing shorts, provided an interesting study in Freshman around the bicycles, testing the tires, brakes, and handlebars. Accidents were frequent and it was commonplace to see both rider and bicycle "hitting the dirt" in fresh rider as they attempted an exchange.

Every team was allowed two chances to produce the best qualifying time for the finals. Only twenty-two teams competed for the coveted pole spot. There was a full thirty-second lapse between the low time and the twentieth position time.

Prizes Given As Trophies

To the victor goes the spoils—this old expression will hold true in the first running of the Frosh bicycle race as many trophies are up for grabs.

To the winner of the grueling 126 lap race will go a huge trophy costing approximately $80. Dean R. R. Oglesby will present the trophy to the champions along with a smaller trophy to the runners-up. The winning award of a traveling trophy which may be retired if a team wins the event three times in a row.

A trophy proclaiming the best-decorated pit will also be presented the night of the race. Each sorority or the associating organization has been invited to decorate a pit right feet long and three feet deep. Paper will be supplied by the class for the sponsors but all other articles of decoration must be supplied by the latter.

One restriction has been placed on the pit decorations, they must not begin decorating until Thursday morning—the day of the race.

Also on the list of awards will be the trophies for the Freshman Class King and Queen in the form of merchandise prizes. These will be presented during the crowning ceremony immediately prior to the race.

Finalists Chosen For Class Royalty

With 236 freshmen voting in the preliminary election, Florida Lawrence Ann Munroe, Linda Rolling Gerry Gordon, Jack Montgomery and Dirk Rhodes were selected as finalists for freshman class king and queen.

From these six frosh the final king and queen will be chosen in a run-off election tomorrow in Polling Places, which will be open from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. will be located in front of Byrnes Hall and the Student Center.

Once selected, the identities of the king and queen will remain unknown until April 26, the evening of the race. At that time the crowned hast preceding the beginning of the race and reign over the event. A handsome gift will be presented to each of the royal couple by the class, in honor of their selection.

GOVERNOR COLLINS
. . . issues proclamation

Collins Says Race Is Good

These two men won't be pedaling around the cinder track, driving the pace car, or watching riders in the Little 500 on campus, but Governor LeRoy Collins of Florida and Dr. Doak S. Campbell, president of the university, are a staunch supporters of the freshman bicycle race.

Governor Collins has issued the following statement in regards to the April 26 race: "I want to extend my best wishes to the members of the Freshman Class at FSU, as they undertake to establish a new tradition at their University Traditions are important in the education of our young people, and I appreciate the privilege of being asked to endorse such a spirited and wholesome event as the First Annual Bicycle Race."

Regretting that he won't be here for the big event because of a meetina out of town, Dr. Campbell declared that he was happy that the freshman class had chosen an activity which will grow and become a traditional affair. Besides becoming a tradition, our President hoped that the event would stimulate interest in the use of the bicycle as a means of transportation on campus.

Dr. Campbell went on to say that about the frosh class: "We're very proud of this year's class. They have deported themselves well and have proved that they are really here for business. We're very proud of them."

Keep Ticket Stubs For Door Prizes

In order to stimulate public interest in the race this Thursday night, the freshman class will give away door prizes when will be presented throughout the night.

A total of 35 prizes have been selected which range in retail value from $10 down to $1. To be eligible for a prize each contestant must retain the stub from his ticket which bears a number. Throughout the race tickets will be drawn out of a hat to determine the winners.

The following prizes will be given out during race night; baseball mitt, Gillette razor, perfume, belt, diapers, Marie Lanza album, pearl bracelet, stick deodorant and stationery.

Also a ball point pen, two silver ashtrays, one hair cut, shampoo and set, necklace and earring set, hose, pencils, memo book, perfume, figurine and dress shirt. Four meals and gasoline.

Tickets for the race are being sold in all dormitories, fraternities, sororities and at the gate of the Dem School the night of the race

FREDDY FROSH SAYS

Tickets for the Little 500 may be purchased in any dorm, fraternity, or sorority house. There may also be purchased the night of the race at the Demonstration school track.

Frosh Rally Explains Race

Acting as a spark plug for the freshman class, a rally was held the night of April 11, in the Music Amphitheater for the purpose of explaining the new race to the students. To commence the evening a pep meeting, an enthusiastic motorcade wound through campus, gathering students into the feeling of spirit.

Frosh Class President Bill Clendinen, introduced Dean R. R. Oglesby who spoke to the students on his approval and encouragement to the campus activities. After Claire Green, class social chairman, disarmmed the king and queen elections, the rally reached its climax and the crowd's cue loose with loud cheers, yells, manufactured noises, and the singing of our Alma Mater.

As the procession started back to his the hosts many comments were heard from the students. Nancy Jo Bowen declared "I believe the rally and the race in general is molding us into a real class instead of a group of individuals." Roy Jones stated he didn't know there was that much spirit in the school, while Rob Beer summed it up with the thought, "I'm glad I am in the Class of '59."

Host Of Students Work As Helpers

The Late Wilbur Shaw Advises Riders In Race

Editor's Note: Before the initial running of the Little 500 at the University of Indiana, the late Wilbur Shaw, president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and three time winner of the Indy 500, wrote a letter to the author of this article. Portions of the letter are printed below. The same rule may be of help to FSU students in their race:

I received word that your paper would welcome any comments I might have on the forthcoming "Little 500."

Having read the rules and regulations that have been prepared for the race and realizing that your race is patterned as much as possible our Indianapolis Speedway race, there are a few suggestions that might make to the riders who are going to participate. I would add that these suggestions are made to our contestants each year, but I believe are just as appropriate for your riders.

In any race that must go as many as 120 laps don't try to go on the first few rounds. Ignore in powerful race cars or bicycles, it's a long grind and it takes a lot of endurance to be around when they take the checkered flag out of the cider. You may lead the race for a few miles but the pay-off will come until you cross the finish line.

The pace lap is of particular value to me. If all the riders don't hold their positions as they cross the starting line, and they don't "take it easy" as they go into that first turn, it becomes rather dangerous as no other time in the race will all participants be bunched so closely. A mistake by any contestant can cause a lot of trouble.

Let me emphasize again, the race isn't won on those first laps so don't burn yourself out.

The racing game is a dangerous one. The sportsmanship standards have always been of the very highest. You can readily understand how any breach of sportsmanship could result in serious injury to all persons concerned. Ride hard and ride fast but don't try to win at any expense."

Parade Starts "Little 500"

Commencing "Little 500 Day" at FSU will be the freshman class motorcade which will form at the Alpha Omicron Pi house at 4:00 p.m.

According to John Howard, parade chairman, over 90 cars are expected to participate, representing sororities, fraternities, dormitories, and independent organizations. Howard also stated that the different team members who qualified for the race that night will ride with the qualifying the crowd to become acquainted with the Florida State campus on the finishing touches to the motorcade will be the FSU cheerleaders, and trick bike riders

In route for the parade is as follows: Departing from the Alpha Omicron Pi house, the motorcade will travel down Jefferson Street, turn left at Copeland, and proceed right on College until it reaches Adams. There it will turn left, continue down Adams to Park, turn right, and proceed to Monroe From there the parade will go onto Monroe, go south to College again, turn right and continue to the college Arm.

Besides stimulating interest on campus it is the hope of the race chairman that the parade will acquaint the townspeople of Tallahassee with the race.

Trainers, Doctors Ready For Action

Behind the scenes, along the sidelines, and in the individual pits stand the men who will provide the scientific backbone for the "Little 500."

These unseen men are the people who stand ready with medical supplies and know-how in case it is needed. Various individuals, faculty members, and private citizens have offered their time and services to keep "Little 500 Day" a "Safe 500 Day."

In the center of the Dem School track stands a small tent. In which will be medical supplies and a staff of University trainers. These trainers are part of the staff of Don Faile, subscriber at FSU.

It is anticipated that there will be cuts and bruises from spills on the track and possibly even bumps on heads resulting in dizziness or of opinions in the stands.

However, on the grimmer yet safer side, the Safety Committee of the Bicycle Race program has contacted A. Cully and Sons, undertakers, to stand ready with an ambulance to speed the more serious injured to the infirmary or Tallahassee Memorial Hospital. Mr. Cully has offered the use of his ambulance free of charge to the Freshman Class for this event.

In addition to medical services, faculty members and students have volunteered their services as track officials and timers. The track officials will operate the forty sixpatches used in timing the twenty individual teams.

Talent Show Preceeds Race

Preceding the first running of the "Little 500" will be a thirty-minute talent show featuring students from our own campus.

Claire Green, freshman class social chairman, has announced the following talent for the race performance: Clancy Thaxter, pantomime. Beverly Smith, singer; Delta Zeta and Lambda Chi Alpha campus sing quartets; Barney Ross, piano

Also Pete Holcombe, drums; Bernie Black, accordian. Talladega Nelson, singer; Jackie Arnold, trio-virtuoso; June Rodgers, singer and John Taylor, guitar

Presented with the talent show will be the crowning of the king and queen of the freshman class. Action of the royalty will be presented a gift by the class to honor their reconnition.

College To Install New BA Program

SPOKANE, Wash.—(I.P.)— A new phase in Whitworth College's history department's program will allow holders of bachelor of arts degrees to qualify for general certification in the teaching profession according to information released recently by Dr. John A. LaDese, head of the department.

The program, which is designed to attract women in the age group of 25 to 48 years, will be put into effect this spring semester. Candidate for certification could be filling her practice teaching hours left by starting her trained experience program during the spring semester, or even as late as the first summer session.

Grade-to-aid of one half the tuition fee, up to $100, will be awarded to students enrolled under the plan. Upon completion of the training period, these students will be 36 semester hours of study in education methods. This is fitting one into the requirements by most of our education leaders, Dr. LaDese reports.

Race Riders Hail From All Over The United States

Of the eighty riders participating in the "Little 500," fifty-five are from Florida with Jacksonville and Miami having the most representatives. Here is the official slate of prospective riders that will mount their cycles Thursday night.

Alpha Delta Pi — Brody Atwater, Lake Worth; Stuart Gould, Atlanta, Roy Harris, Lakeland, Bunny Strandhagen, Fort Lauderdale.

Alpha Omicron Pi — Gus Alford, Chipley; Fenton Bennett, Winter Park; Jim Reese, Bartow; Jim Scott, Miami.

Alpha Tau Omega — Bob Crenshaw, Miami; Ray Stubb, West Virginia, Count Zero Fielding Lakeland; Wes Milton, Jacksonville Beach.

West Hall Pirates—Bill Clendinen, Ft. Lauderdale; Jack Mayhaffey, Quincy, Don Schofield, Ohio; Ralph Wrihel, Lakewood.

Faster Speeds Not Dangerous

It has been estimated by the bicycle race chairmen that the riders will average 20 miles an hour for the entire race and as much as 35 miles an hour on the straight-a-away.

Although the speed of the race is very great, the safety of the event has not been hampered at all by the swift speeds. So as not to endanger the riders, the rules concerning traffic on the track have been made strict.

In order to pass another rider on a turn for instance, the passing rider must be one complete bicycle length in front of the rider he is passing.

Sellers Plays With Pensacola Symphony

Professor Owen Sellers of the Florida State University music department, conductor, first chair in the cello section of the Pensacola Music Guild Symphony Orchestra.

Professor Sellers is the only out of town guest in this presentation of two American premieres to be held Thursday in Pensacola.

FSU pianist Francis Zachara was one of the judges to select the soloist for the Junior concert.

Chairman for the contest to select the soloist was the former FSU alumnae Martha Wise Parker, who is the present Director of the Pensacola High School Festival Chorus.

An Editorial
The Value Of It All

Whenever a person becomes entangled in a great activity in college or in later life for that matter, it is often wise for him to try to get on the outside of that activity and examine the value it has for him and the benefit it will do for his school.

It is in this light that we examine the first running of the Florida State University "Little 500" bicycle race.

In one aspect this bicycle race can serve as a revival and an instigator in the spirit our school once possessed. If it becomes a tradition, which is the hope of everyone connected with the race, it could materialize into an event that would push our University up the ladder of prominence.

As has been the case at other universities, "Little 500 Day" on our campus could change from a one day affair into a weekend of excitement we would anticipate and be proud of. Skeptics need only to glance at our Circus Weekend coming, and see how it has grown year by year into a tradition at FSU.

In another aspect, one can grasp the effect this new venture can have on the individual students. Every person who has any connection with the race, whether he realizes it or not, devoted himself to something a little better and a little higher than what comprises his ordinary, daily life.

He has forgotten his personal self in his zeal to make his team, his university, and the "Little 500" a great success in the eyes of the community and campus.

In this forgetting of self in devotion to a cause, the life of the individual has become more meaningful and important to the person and to the college which he attends.

This philosophical awareness does not come to the rider as he circles the clay track, to the spectator in the stands, or the many persons who work to keep the race going to its proper end, but it's there.

In each of these aspects we see a common value and it is this common value that has prompted the freshman class to support the race wholehearted and to regard it as a most important event in the life of the FSU student.

We can all be justly proud of this portion of our college experience. It is the beginning of a tradition that can make us better men and women now, and after we are graduated.

Some Advice And Hypnosis

CINCINNATI, OHIO—ACP!—These from the University of Cincinnati News Record's "Cruising on Campuses" column:

From the University of Kansas comes this little bit of advice. Setting out on the auto trip at 4 a.m. enables you to minimize most traffic hazards, except being hit by the other driver who started so early he fell asleep at the wheel.

A Kansas State College freshman was cured to quit smoking. A doctor hypnotized him at a student assembly. The hypnotist told him he would be able to quit smoking because cigarettes would now taste like burnt rubber. The student was then released from the spell. "I still have the habit" he has since remarked —but that burnt rubber flavor annoys him!

A recent plea in our column for toothbrushes to help a girl at the University of Texas pay off a bet by scrubbing all the seats in the stadium with a toothbrush was answered by one of the fraternities on our campus. They sent her a load of toothbrushes and the senders received a letter of thanks for the contribution. We wonder if she made it to the fifty yard line yet!

Bits Of This; Some Of That

ST. PAUL, MINN.— ACP!— The following are from the "Scot Sketches" column in Macalester College's Mac Weekly:

There was the reporter for the Mac Weekly who recently called the Rice Hall girls' dormitory by mistake. The coed who answered the phone said: "Hello, Rice Hall bakery. Which cookie do you want?"

Several years ago an education spoke in convocation on the subject of "Academic Dry Rot." The educator left his manuscript to the college library and a librarian student assistant filed it under Fungi.

And finally, there's the Macalester student who took a babysitting job for three dollars and wound up with an extra 70 bucks. Seems that while she was taking care of the youngster, a telegram-dog master called the house and she was able to answer the question he asked.

Attention, Philatelists

LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA — ACP!—The Long Beach State College "Forty-Niner" reprinted from the machine at the Daily Trojan. It seems that Richard Hastings, 25-year-old USC sophomore architecture student, tried to pay off his tuition with 3,000 albeit unused United States commemorative stamps which he has been collecting since 1943. However, USC has a postage meter machine and doesn't use stamps anymore. Owing $350 in tuition, Hastings had brought about $275 in stamps with him. Stamp dealers, who were well-stocked with special issues, offered him 10 to 20 per cent under face value. At last report, he was still trying to unload the stamps to pay his tuition. Any collectors interested?

FREDDY FROSH SAYS

Tentative plans are in the process of being made to incorporate a system of bicycle racing in every college and University in the state of Florida. If everything works out a plan would call for the winners of each institution to meet to determine the Florida champion.

Although the "Little 500" race is the first event the freshman class participates in as a whole, there are many traditional activities in store for the class of 1959.

The race is being developed as a brand new tradition here at Florida State University. The present freshman class will carry the bicycle race throughout their remaining three years in college, using it as a means of supporting the class treasury. After graduation, the frosh class will leave the race to the University to become one of the established traditions on campus.

In the sophomore year, the events start off with the annual Freshman rat-cap period. The frosh will wear the hats, under the Sophomore's guidance until the Freshman-Sophomore track meet. The next activity for the year is the Sophomore Hop, an open dance sponsored by the second year students for the whole school. The dance is highlighted by the crowning of the King and Queen of the Sophomore Class. Ending the year's activities for the sophs in addition to the bike race is the traditional Sophomore - Senior breakfast held late in the year.

In the third year, according to Bobby Temple, elected president of the juniors, the class has its big job in the presentation of the Junior-Senior Prom. The juniors do all the decorating and other work plus bearing the financial burden. The class also sponsors the Junior Picnic, which customarily comes a month before graduation. Also on the agenda for the juniors are various charity drives by the class.

FREDDY FROSH SAYS . . .

Voting for the freshman class king and queen will take place from 9:00 a.m. through 6:00 p.m tomorrow in front of Bryan Hall and the Student Center. Only freshmen are eligible to vote.

and picnics. The one big event on the senior calendar is the ceremonial graduation of a FSU student in the middle of the year. This is usually in the form of a scholarship, is taken from the money earned by the class projects which in the case of the class of '59 begins with the "Little 500" bicycle race.

(Author of "Barefoot Boy with Cheek," etc.)

IT'S LATER THAN YOU THINK!

All year long you've been promising yourself to go there. Now summer vacation is just around the corner and you still haven't set foot in the place. Shame on you!

But it's not too late. Right now, this very minute, before you weaken, lift up your head and forward march to the place you have been avoiding ever since school began. I refer, of course, to the library.

"You plowed or anything?"

Now here you are at the library. That wasn't so bad, was it? Of course not! Go inside. What do you see? A sign that says "NO SMOKING." Go outside. Light a Philip Morris. Smoke. Go back inside.

Because now you are ready. Now your trembling resolution is rigid. Now your pulsing psyche is serene. You have been gentled by gentle Philip Morris. You have been tranquilized by a smoke that dotes and pampers and caresses, that lifts the fallen, repairs the shattered, straightens the bent, unravels the knotted, rights the askew, and fastens the unbuttoned.

In the center of the library you see the main circulation desk. Look in the card catalogue for the number of the book you want, write the number on a slip, and hand it to the efficient and obliging young lady at the desk. The efficient and obliging young lady then gives the slip to an efficient and obliging young boy who trots briskly back into the stacks, curls up on a limp leather encyclopedia, and sleeps for an hour or two. Then, puff but refreshed, he returns your slip to the efficient and obliging young lady at the desk, who tells you one of three things: (a) "Your book is out." (b) "Your book is at the bindery." (c) "Your book is on reserve."

Having learned that the circulation desk hasn't the least intention of ever parting with a book, let us now go into the periodical room. Here we spend hours sifting through an impo-sing array of magazines—magazines from all the far corners of the earth, magazines of every nature and description—but though we search diligently and well, we cannot find Mad or Confidential.

Next let us venture into the reference room. Here in this hushed, vaulted chamber, we find the true scholars of the university—earnest, dedicated young men and women who care for only one thing in the world: the pursuit of knowledge.

Let us eavesdrop for a moment on this erudite coupla poring over heavy tomes at the corner table. Hush! She speaks:

SHE: Whatcha readin', hey?
HE: "The Origin of Species." You ever read it?
SHE: No, but I seen the movie.
HE: Oh.
SHE: You like readin'?
HE: Naah.
SHE: What do you like?
HE: Hockey, licorice, girls, stuff like that.
SHE: Me too, hey.
HE: You pinned or anything?
SHE: Well, sort of. I'm wearin' a fellow's motorcycle emblem. . . . But it's only platonic.
HE: Wanna go out for a smoke?
SHE: Philip Morris?
HE: Of corris!

And as our learned friends take their leave, let us too wend our way homeward—a trifle weary, perhaps, but enlightened and renewed and better citizens for having spent these happy hours in the library. Aloha, library, aloha! © Max Shulman, 1956

The makers of Philip Morris, who sponsor this column, could write volumes about the gentleness of today's Philip Morris, but we'll only tell you this: Take a leaf from our book. Enjoy Philip Morris.

The Press Table

CAGERS VS. DUQUESNE?—

It's a little early to be speculating on basketball for 1956-57, but the schedule Coach Bud Kennedy's cagers is due out shortly, and from reports it should be a dandy.

The grapevine has it that the Seminole basketballers may have one of the ruggedest months of December in the school's history, and play some of the biggest names in college basketball.

Reports are that the cagers are set to open in Pittsburgh with Duquesne, long a power in eastern cage circles, then move to Morgantown, West Virginia, a day later to meet Hod Rod Hundley and West Virginia's Mountaineers.

Then they're supposed to come home, rest a day, then take off by plane (possibly) for Peoria, Illinois and a meeting with Bradley, a perennial Missouri Valley power.

A day later they're due in Gainesville for the first regularly-scheduled basketball game between the Seminoles and the Florida Gators.

Ken Loeffler's Texas A&M squad, a fast rising power in the Southwest Conference circles, may possibly be the home opener for the Seminoles' new million-dollar gymnasium, quite a debut.

In addition to these terms, Southeastern Conference opponent Georgia will undoubtedly be met twice with Tulsa of New Orleans and possibly Memphis State and Harvard, the latter maybe a home game after the Christmas vacation.

The five FIBC opponents will be played twice of course, and another meeting with North Carolina State is tentatively slated at Raleigh.

If this schedule works out, that means the Tribe cagers will face opponents from the Southeastern, the Missouri Valley, the Atlantic Coast, the Southwestern and the Southern Conferance plus a possible Ivy League opponent (Harvard), and strong independent Duquesne.

You can't get anybody's mind away of this, though, because it must go through the formality of passing the athletic committee before being released for publication. It should make interesting reading.

One the player side, Coach Bud Kennedy may have sailed at least one man to help out on the varsity side, but he won't be along until the second semester.

That's Dave Hoppmann, a product from Jacksonville Junior College's top-rated Green Dolphins. Hoppmann will probably join the team after most of the tough teams have been met, unfortunately.

On the Freshman side, Kennedy reportedly has two top Frosh prospects in Mike Williams, Bob's "little brother" (he's only 6'7 and Bob's 6-8) and Tom Gregory a 6-6 graduate of St. Petersburg High School.

It's estimated that the Seminoles will probably play about twelve home games in their new gym, scheduled for a display opening about the time the football clinic hits summer.

NO JACKSONVILLE—

Newspaper reports last week said that FSU and Miami officials were seriously considering taking their 1957 clash, originally slated for Tallahassee, to Jacksonville as a part of a doubleheader with a Florida-Georgia game.

This brought a general rouse of disapproval from most of the students we talked to, who were looking forward to the best home football schedule in the school's history in 1957, with Auburn slated here in addition to Miami.

Saturday's wire reported that FSU's athletic director Dr. Howard Danford had decided to turn down the offer and keep the game in Tallahassee. a move we were glad to see.

Danford stated further however, that FSU hoped to schedule one game a year beginning in the near future in Jacksonville with one of the bigger opponents on the Seminoles' schedule.

We don't know whether they're planning on playing that Jacksonville game as a replacement for a home game there, or just playing that a another away game, but if it's the former we're disturbed.

Tribe football fans as is get only five home games a year, less than a good many schools we know, and if this proposed Jax game would reduce that number, we're against it.

Moving a game 170 miles away would reduce the number of students able to see it by more than half, whereas a big name team played here would draw possibly more than 80 % of the student body, if played in Jacksonville it might drew less than a 1,000 students.

From my knowledge of athletic football teams are supposed to play for the students, and actions of the NCAA recently would seem to indicate a return to the gym movement away from the big cities and stadiums.

The NCAA last year moved their national championship basketball tournament from Kansas City to Evanston, Indiana, the home of Northwestern. in an effort to give more college students an opportunity to see it.

The University of Miami annually plays eight home games, and Florida has five scheduled in Gainesville with two in Jacksonville, considerably closer to their university than to ours.

Thus, we'd like to see FSU playing more home games rather than reducing the number by moving one or two games to Jacksonville, 170 miles away and out of reach from most of the students.

Tribe Nine, Georgia Meet Again Today

Seminoles Rout Stetson Twice

Florida State and the University of Georgia clash today in the second game of a two game series. Tommy Garcia is the probable choice of Coach Danny Litwhiler in this afternoon's encounter.

Last Saturday, Florida State picked up its 18th victory of the season as its bats boomed out 21 hits and its runners stole 10 bases to grind out a 23-2 win over Stetson University.

The win was the fourth out of four starts in Florida intercollegiate Baseball Conference play.

The victory marked big Mex Long's sixth win for Florida State. Long pitched his way through the first six innings and then give way to relief.

Coming on in the seventh for the Tribe was George Hehemann.

Linksters Unbeaten In Seasons Play

With a 21½-2½ win over the Rollins Tars, Florida State's golf team ended their season undefeated in a record of 10-0.

Jack Veghte of FSU and Frank Boynton led Bob Rosa of Rollins by identical scores with 75's one under par.

The linksters now have a string of dual wins which stands at 20 straight.

The last remaining competition for the linksters is the Southern Intercollegiate Tournament at Columbia, S.C. starting Friday.

Boynton (R) defeated Bob Dunn (R) 3-0; Veghte (FSU) beat Marlene Stewart 3-0; FSU best ball 3-0

Rose (R) and Veghte tied 1½-1½; Berry (FSU) beat Craig 2-1; best ball FSU 2-0.

Dineen (R) and Shelton tied 1½-1½; Shoemaker (FSU) defeated Parker 2-1; best ball Rollins 2½-1½.

Shaw (FSU) defeated Curtis 2½-½; Turpak (R) beat Huff 2½-½; best ball halved 1½-1½.

SEEKS REPEAT VICTORY. Co-captain Ronnie Amster of the FSU gymnastics team, the new horizontal bar champion at the NCAA will be out to pick up the same title again this week, but this time at the NAAU.

Strikeout King Has 71

'Learned To Pitch The Hard Way,' Says FSU'S Avitable

By LARRY BLOCK
Flambeau Sports Editor

In scoring a baseball game, the official symbol used to denote a strikeout is the letter "K".

And when the pitcher happens to be Tony Avitable, Florida State's top southpaw, anyone scoring the game will be using the letter "K" quite often.

So far this season Avitable has fanned 71 batters in the 75 innings he has been on the mound. One more strikeout will set a new individual record for most strikeouts in a single season for an FSU pitcher.

It's a safe bet to say that when that story is read the record will be broken as Tony looks to be the hill last night against Georgia, serving his ninth win. He has yet to lose.

In looking over last season's record, the name Tony Avitable is just another pitcher who appeared in three games for the Tribe.

Why the big change? First of all this is only the second season that the native New Yorker has been pitching. "I was always a first baseman, even when I played for Lindenhurst High," says Tony.

"When I started pitching in 1954 I was just another thrower. I was learning to pitch the hard way, in ball games."

Better Shape

"But this year I'm in much better shape than ever before. I've got better control and am getting the confidence that I need," continued Tony.

"I've gotten a lot of help from Coach Litwhiler and trainer Don Falls. Litwhiler had a lot of patience and stuck with me, giving me the confidence which I needed."

Tony's big break came last year while a member of the "B" team in a game against Turner Air Base. The turbuline southpaw struck out 11 of the 14 batters he faced.

According to Tony he has two good pitches; the fast ball and his overhand curve. "I also throw a change-up, and a let-up curve to keep the hitters off stride," commented Avitable.

Although the portsider fanned 26 Furmen Tigers in the season's opener, he does not think it was the best game he has pitched this season. "The game I beat Vicensa 1-0 was my best. They're a better club, and I only gave them one hit."

Concerning the future, Tony hasn't made up his mind as yet. "I've had some good offers from several ball clubs, but I'm not sure I'm going to hold off making a decision about turning pro until I graduate," commented Avitable.

Tony would like to get a chance at Florida this year and he might if the Gators win the SEC crown and FSU is selected as the outstanding independent in the South.

These two teams would have to face each other to gain a berth in the NCAA Baseball Tournament.

And with Tony Avitable on the hill for Florida State they just might do it.

1957 FSU-Miami Football Tilt Here

Florida State University and the University of Miami will definitely not play their football game in Jacksonville. It was revealed Saturday.

Seminole athletic director Dr. Howard C. Danford said that the FSU athletic committee had turned down a suggestion to play the contest as a part of a doubleheader with the Georgia-Florida game.

The two contests presently scheduled in Tallahassee and will be the first visit of a Miami football team here.

Danford added that Florida State did have hopes of scheduling one game a year in Jacksonville's Gator Bowl with one of the stronger teams in the South.

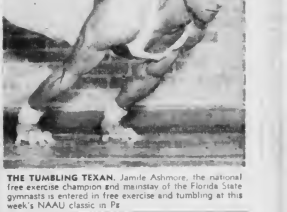
Tracksters Top Georgia, Tech

The Florida State Seminole track team put their cleats down firmly on Georgia soil and conquered Georgia and Georgia Tech in a nip and tuck triangular meet Saturday afternoon in Athens.

The Seminoles, scoring heavily in running events, amassed 66 1 3 to Georgia Tech's 59 1 3 and Georgia's 46 1-3 points.

Spredster Jack Terwilliger copped the individual scoring honors with a first in the 220, a second in the 100, and another positions in the victorious 440 and mile relay teams.

Terwilliger, having one of his better days, sped the 220 in his best time this year, 21.3. In the 100, Terwilliger was nipped at the finish line by Tom Bimonton, who put in a time of :09.8.



Seminole thinclad, Joe Davis, contributed heavily to the FSU win as he won the 220 low hurdles, scored second in the broad jump, and was a member of the winning 440 relay from Davis chased by teammate Wes Minton, turned in a time of :26.2 in the hurdles, and leaped 22 feet, 2⅞ inches for second position in the broad jump.

Minton later went on to win the high hurdles in 15.4, close in front of Seminole Tenney Brown.

Co-captain Ron Weaver, in the javelin throw, found his throw of over 192 feet second to the throw of Georgia's Bill Duckworth which sailed 207 feet, 2½ inches.

An ironical note was that an earlier throw by Duckworth which went over 221 feet was disqualified on a minor infraction of the rule.

Track coach Mike Long highly praised his charges on their showing by commenting, "This was the best overall performance that I have seen as long as I have been coaching here."

Gymnasts Leave To Defend Title

By TOM HALE
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State Gymkana gymnastics team leaves today to defend their National A A U team title and comete in the Olympics tryouts at State College, Penn., Thursday.

The Gymkana team has won the title on three previous occasions, all in odd years, 1951, 1953, and 1955 and according to Coach Price, the team will have a rougher time winning this year than last year when the Seminoles barely sneaked into first place with only 13 points out of a possible 360 separating the first and sixth place teams.

The big opposition for the Seminoles is expected to come from the Penn State team which has two former Olympic men, and the Los Angeles Turners with three former Olympic members, including John Beckner, the finest all-around performer in the country, according to Price.

In all, there will be about 20 teams vieing for the N A A U crown, representing high schools, colleges and universities, clubs, Y.M.C.A.'s, Turngemeins, Sokols, and the Armed Forces.

There will be six Olympic spots to be picked at the meet in Penn. Price thinks that gymnasts who place in the top six in the all-around event. There will also be three alternates.

At the present time there are about twenty-four men in the country who have a chance to make the Olympic team, and FSU has four of them.

They are Jack Miles, winner of the 1955 N A A U all-around title, Don Holder, 1952 Olympic team member Rafael Lecuona, Captain of the Cuban Gymnastics Olympic team, and Chick Cirio, outstandin Freshman and winner of various all-scholastic titles Lecuona, if he wins a spot will let first because he has already been picked a member of the Cuban team

There will be 17 men plus Dr. Price, coach of the squad, going on the trip.

The complete slate of the gymnasts and the events they are competing in are as follows; All-around—Don Holder, Jack Miles, Rafael Lecuona and Chick Cirio Side Horse—Ronnie Amster, Larry Beshman, and Joe Taylor, High Bar—Bob Murray, and Ronnie Amster Parallel Bars—Joe Gunn, Ronnie Amster, and Joe Taylor, Still Rings —Joe Taylor, Free Exercise — Jamie Ashmore, and Rodger Webb, Tumbling—Jamie Ashmore Long Horse—Jamie Ashmore, and Ronnie Amster Trampoline— Bob Elliott and Don Price, Rope Climb — Lloyd Anderson and Jim Hanks, Flying Rings—Larry Beshman Joe Taylor, Ray Tanaka and Bob Murray.

All preliminaries for the meet are to take place on Thursday, and Friday with the finals on Saturday. The crowning of the auteen N A A U champions and the presentation of the 1956 United State Olympic Gymnastics Team will take place on Saturday night.

Four Sororities, Frats Frolic At Parties, Formal Dances

Four sororities and fraternities celebrated their annual weekends with parties, dances and the usual Greek frolicking.

Theta Chi 100th anniversary provided the theme for their festivities which featured the Dream Girl Ball at the Floridan Hotel Saturday night.

Nancy Jones, Chi Omega, was named "Theta Chi Dream Girl" and presented a trophy. In the court were Barbara Hendricks, KAT; Barbara McCandless, Chi O, and Bobbie Plummer, AD Pi. Each was given a bouquet of red and white carnations.

Red and white, TC colors, were carried out in the decorations. A four-tier birthday cake was cut by the Dream Girl to honor the fraternity's founding in 1856.

The Velvetones provided the music at the dance and accordionist Nettie Black entertained.

Other activities of the Theta Chs included an informal party Friday night, and an all day coast party Sunday. Saturday, the actives beat the pledges in an inter-fraternity softball game.

Lambda Chi

A Pirate party was the start of Lambda Chi Alphas fraternity weekend. The annual Crescent Ball was held Saturday night in the American Legion Home.

Miss Alysse Rust was crowned "Pledge Class Sweetheart." Another award, "Outstanding Active of the Year," went to Jack Reeves.

Sunday the Lambda Chis gave a picnic at Mystic Lake.

Tri Delta

"New Orleans" was the theme of Tri Delt weekend which featured a gala Masquerade Ball at the Hotel Duval.

Sew Gregory, SAE, was named "Tri Delta Man" and presented a mug. The '55 pledge class was presented formally at the affair, as is the custom of the chapter.

Saturday, the girls held a picnic at the coast and a "French Quarter" party at the house.

The New Orleans theme was carried out in decorations and a combo played Dixieland jazz.

A buffet dinner at the house wound up the activities Sunday.

Pi Phi

John Palm, SAE, was named "Mr. P. Phi" at the sorority's formal dance at the Tallahassee Country Club.

"How Deep Is the Ocean" was the theme of the weekend which included an all day beach party at Panama City, the formal dance and a buffet dinner at the house Sunday.

Ex-AF Students Can Get Training

FSU students who have served as enlisted personnel in the Air Force may be eligible for paid training in the Tallahassee Air Reserve Squadron's leadership training flight.

The squadron meets every Thursday at 8 p.m. for specialized and general training in the Air Force ROTC building on the FSU campus.

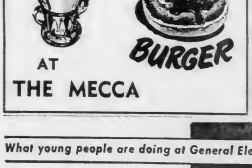
Former airmen and non-commissioned officers, both men and women, are eligible for membership in the squadron and may participate in general training for retirement and promotion credit. Qualified airmen first class, staff, technical, and master sergeants may enroll in the specialized training leadership course.

Class members receive one day's pay for each two-hour session. At least two paid meetings are scheduled per month.

FOUR ESE PAPERS BEING READ

Four Florida State scientists at a meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology at Atlantic City.

Two members of the bacteriology department, Dr Lloyd M. Bodiler and Don Tucker, are presenting technical reports on the nerve response to odors. Dr. Earl Frieden of the department of chemistry will also make a report along with Dr. Sidney W. Fox and Dr. Gordon Tollin who are conducting a research project with Milton Wintz of Iowa State College.



BAND SOLOIST

Job Opportunities

St. Regis Paper Company is interviewing junior and senior accounting majors Thursday for summer employment in Jacksonville.

Interviews may be arranged through the Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement in 203 Westcott.

Senate Considering Murray Gym Name

Student Senate was asked last Wednesday to suggest the new men's gymnasium be named after Perry E. Murray, late member of the Florida House of Representatives.

Senate acted the proposal, introduced by Senator Jim Soles, and created a committee of four to discuss it.

If Senate agrees on Murray, the resolution must go to the State Board of Control, which has final authority on the dedication of university buildings.

Lauds Murray

In his request, Soles cited the late legislator as an "outstanding Floridian," noting Murray served in the house for seven biennial sessions, holding the post of speaker in 1949.

Soles said Murray, of Frostproof, helped revive a failing citrus industry by his work in forming and presiding over the Florida Citrus Mutual.

Senator Cliff Gwyn suggested postponing action on the resolution, saying "I haven't had a chance to think over other people I have in mind."

Asks Poll

Senator Bill Swigert suggested establishing a committee to sound out Student Body sentiment. Senator Gordon Gaster also urged postponement.

Soles himself moved to table for a week, and a subsequent motion to set up a committee was passed. Those who volunteered for the committee, and who were chosen by vice-president Jimmy Johnson, were Cliff Gwyn, chairman; Greta Sims, Petey Dunn and Polly Atwater.

Faculty Deadline

Senate took no official action on any measure in the last meeting at which important legislation could have been passed this year.

Vice-president Joanos reminded the group that the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, which reviews most Senate actions, set Friday as the last day it could receive legislation for consideration.

Joanos said this will not apply to next year's student government budget, however.

Clothes Drive Nets 600 Pounds

The Junior Class collected about 600 pounds of clothes for the Salvation Army in its recent drive, according to Shirley Morgan, class vice-president.

Miss Morgan lauded the student body for "the fine cooperation." She said Landis Hall contributed the most used clothes.

'Ghosts' Finale Slated Tonight, Conradi Theatre

The curtain rises tonight at 8:15 for the final speech department performance of the year.

Henrik Ibsen's "Ghosts" ends the season at Augusta Conradi Theatre after two successful nights.

Directed by Dr. Lynn E. Orr, the cast includes Marjorie Tindell, who plays the leading role of Mrs. Alving, a strong, dramatic character.

The cast is small, but all parts are important and well rounded. Bill King is cast as Oswald Alving. He mentally sick son. Eb Thomas has the role of Pastor Manders who carries a torch for Mrs. Alving.

Margaret Malloy is the maid, actually the half-sister of Oswald, and Phil Johnson is the maid's aggressive step-father.

All members of the cast are veterans in speech productions with the exception of Johnson. Thomas and Miss Tindell have appeared on the Conradi stage several times as the leading team.

Tickets for the play can be bought at the door for 60c and activity coupon No. 3, or seventy-five cents for non-students. All seats are reserved when purchased at Westcott ticket booth.

"Ghosts" is the department's fifth production this season which has been a successful one. Previously Dr. Orr directed "Blithe Spirit" in October, "Rumpelstiltskin" in November, "Hamlet" in December, and "Ah, Wilderness!" last month.

URA Plans Canoe Trips

The University Recreation Association in conjunction with the Reservation, will sponsor two canoe trips this spring.

The first trip will be taken during the St. Marks river Saturday from 1 to 7 p.m. The trip will be climaxed with a seafood dinner at St. Marks.

The second trip will be made Saturday, May 12, down the Wakulla River from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. A picnic lunch will be eaten along the way.

Since each trip is limited to 36 people, students may go on only one trip. Those who wish to make the St. Marks trip this Saturday must register and pay a fifty-cent fee by noon Friday at the camp director's office, room 202 in the Women's gym.

A swimming and canoeing check is required of those planning to go on either of these trips. The check for the St. Marks trip will be made Friday night at 6:30 in the pool of the Women's gym.

Taylor Awarded Carnegie Grant

Dr. Howard E. Taylor, associate professor of mathematics, has been awarded a grant by the Carnegie Corporation of the University of Chicago to spend one year in Chicago as a visiting associate professor.

The grant is one of 15 awarded annually to foster study, discussion, and planning in the field of General Education.

While at Chicago, Dr. Taylor will participate as a regular staff member in teaching and curriculum planning in the College of the University and will also take part in seminars on the problems of General Education.

Professor Taylor received his M.S. degree from the California Institute of Technology and his B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees from the Rice Institute in Houston, Texas. He has been with the FSU faculty since 1950.

Dr. Taylor and his family will leave for Chicago in late August.

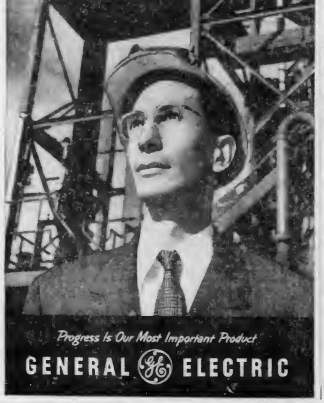
What young people are doing at General Electric

Young chemical engineer works on new ways to make silicones

Silicones are a new class of man-made chemicals with very unusual properties. Made from sand, they assume the form of rubber, grease, oil and resin. Under extremes of heat and cold, the rubber stays rubbery, the oil oily. Silicones added to fabrics make them exceptionally water-repellent. Silicone makes waxes spread easier . . . paints almost impervious to weather.

One of the men responsible for finding new ways to produce silicone products is 26-year-old Frank V. Summers.

Summers' Work Interesting, Important



As process engineer of the Silicone Products Department, Frank Summers first compares the results of small-scale, pilot-plant experiments with the production methods in actual use. Then, using his own knowledge of chemical-engineering principles, he designs faster, more efficient and more economical methods of producing silicone products. Frank Summers' excellent training, diversified experience and outstanding personal qualifications make him a valuable contributor to this engineering team.

25,000 College Graduates at General Electric

When Frank Summers came to General Electric in 1949, he already knew the kind of work he wanted to do. Like each of our 25,000 college-graduate employees, he was given his chance to grow and realize his full potential. For General Electric has long believed this: Whenever fresh young minds are given the freedom to make progress, everybody benefits—the individual, the company, and the country.

Educational Relations, General Electric Company, Schenectady 5, New York

FRANK V. SUMMERS joined G.E. in 1949 after receiving a B.S. in Chemical Engineering at Iowa State University the same year. He also graduated from G.E.'s Process Technology program and other specialized courses.

Indignant Senators Hit Faculty Attitude

Say Faculty And Staff Should Observe Same Laws On Traffic

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Faculty and staff members should observe the same traffic laws as students, Student Senate asserted Wednesday.

Indignant, the senators acted upon a letter from Dean Katherine Warren, chairman of the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, which said the committee had amended a Senate bill in order to exempt faculty and staff from a traffic law.

Senate rescinded the law and then passed it again, with a new stipulation: that it shall not apply to students unless Dr. Doak S. Campbell, president of the university, extends similar provisions to faculty and staff.

The measure imposes a five dollar fine on vehicles that do not bear campus parking stickers within two weeks after first being used on campus.

Fifth Offenders

Five dollar fines are also required upon every fifth traffic and parking violation. Students who do not pay would be required to take their cars home.

The bill was first passed March 28. The faculty committee's action was explained to Senate Wednesday.

Miss Warren in her letter to Senate, said the Government has no authority to prescribe rules for faculty.

Rule Agrees

Senator Karl Edwards spoke in agreement with this opinion. He said assistant business manager Harry Day now fines faculty members in a similar fashion to student punishments, but, under questioning said there is no written policy requiring Day to do so.

Men's vice president Hana Tews and Senator Gordon Gaster led the movement to pass a rule attached law Said Gaster,

"I don't think we should enforce a fine like this on our constituents if the faculty aren't going to be subject to the same rules."

No Opposition

He moved to rescind the bill, and to pass it again with the stipulation it not become effective unless similar rules are established for the faculty.

The protest passed Senate without opposition on a voice vote.

The faculty committee letter also noted changes the group had made in a Senate election law and in another part of the traffic law. Senate voted to send a liaison committee to the faculty group. Senators Art Moore and Clif Gwynn and vice-president Joanna will make up the committee.

Murray Resolution

Senate also adopted a resolution asking the Board of Control to consider the late Perry E. Murray, former member of the Florida House of Representatives in naming buildings on campus.

Senate passed with the regret of a special committee which amended the resolution introduced by Senator Jim Boles asking that the new men's gymnasium appreciation be named after Murray.

Vice-President Joanna told the committee her vice-chairman is Clif Gwynn, that it should consider other Floridians whose names might be appropriate for the several unnamed buildings.

120 Students Going After Class, Court, Senate Posts

Number Less Than Record

One hundred and twenty candidates, somewhat less than the record, will seek offices on Tuesday's class election primaries.

In 1955, there were 134 candidates. There were 114 in 1954 and 96 in 1953.

Betty Willmon, secretary of elections, said two central polling places will be open this campaign. Each will have four ballot boxes. Polls will be located at Westcott Building and at the Student Center.

Miss Willmon, criticized for conducting a dorm operation at the recent Student Body election, said "We are using this system in hopes of having a more efficient election and in getting the results out quicker Tuesday night."

She said results may be posted in the Education Building by 9:30 p.m.

All students, including graduates and seniors, may vote on the several court races. ID cards must be shown in order to vote. Voting will be by ISM ballots.

Following are the candidates, by classes:

SENIOR CLASS

President: Jim Kauffman, Student Party; Paul Ort, State; Vice-president: Fred Roberts, Independent; Ray Wagner, State; Charlie Ward, Student; Secretary: Ruthie Henshaw, State; Phyllis Langford, Student. Treasurer: Margaret Gunter, State; Donna Hardy, Student; Social Chairman: Leslie Bauer, Student; Nancy Chisholm, State.

Men's Senators (two): Roger Berry, independent; Harvey Hall and Jon E. Moore, State; Bruce Jacobs and Bob Porter, Student;

Women's Senators (two): Clare Beets and Barbara Burbee, State; Bennie Jo Conart and Charlotte Paine, Student.

JUNIOR CLASS

President: Graham Teschke, State. Bill Weaver, independent; Vice-president: Bill Roche, Student; Jim Webb, independent; Secretary: Barbara Chambers, State; Betty Faye Horner, Student; Treasurer: Barbara McGowan, independent; Kate Ramsey, State; Patsy Stewart, Student; Social Chairman: Ike Sloves, State, Alacn Templeman, independent; Adria Ann Whittle, Student.

Women's Senators (two): Polly Atwater and Mabel Mason, Student; Priscilla Moss and June Silley, State; Men's senators (two): Bennie Blue and Bob Whittier, Student, James Davis and Bill Swigert, State; and Bob Johnson and Don R. Lewis, independent.

SOPHOMORE CLASS

President: Bill Clendenen, Student; Phil Knight, State; Jerry Montgomery, independent; Vice-president: Ruby Combs, Independent; Scott Harpe, State; Robert Alan Moren, independent; Pat Starnes, Student; Secretary: Liz Barnes, Student; Missey McMillan, State;

Women's senators (two): Willie Mae Douglas and Pat Hamilton, State; Cynthia Lawrence and Sandra Peacock, Student; Nancy Space, independent. Men's senators (two): Art Moore and Gerry Gordon, State; Cliff Cowan and Dick Rhodes, Student.

TRAFFIC COURT

Running for Traffic Court are Joe Asaad, State, and Joanne Thompson, Student, who will be sophomores, Mary Frances Horn, Student, and Shirley Ann Morgan, independent, are juniors.

HONOR COURT

Senior men (two): Dick Prefoge and Don Alford, Student; Senior women (two): Phyllis Palmer, independent; Lisbeth Bishop and Love Scarbrough, Student.

Junior men (two): Earl Edwards and Bill Strickland, Student; Dick Crawford and Carmen Barnhill, State. Junior women (two): Barbara Burkhardt and Suzy Tope, Student; Carol Bush and Freda Shaddock, State; Rose Rehwinkel, independent.

JUDICIARY

Sophomore men (three): Bob Baden, Myron Herndon, and Charlie Sizer, Student; John C. Calhoun, Bucky Cohen, and Tom Pendley, State; Bob Ballz, independent;

Sophomore women (three): Ginger Conner, Ann Dunnin, Jo Anne Head, Ann Key, Weta Ann Melton, independent; Judy Debo, Jane Salter, and Anne Muncer, student, Jane Trimble, Nancy Trimble, and Nancy Worrall, State;

Junior men (three): John C. Brown and Doug Rosenblum, Student; Bob Duke and Ray McCoy State. A law examiner (three): Martha Grunzel, Barbara Hendrix and Martha McGinnes, Student; Mary Lou Bass, State;

Senior women (three): Ann Bohler, Gretchen Kerr, and Mary Margaret Williams, Student; Nancy Johnson and Betty Lou Price, State; Nancy Lee Young, independent.

Senior men (three): Neely Alexander, Richard Lukas, and Earl Peterson, Student.

Rally On Tap Monday Night

Candidates for class offices will have their final opportunity to meet the public Monday night at 7:30, when Gold Key conducts its annual political rally in the music amphitheatre.

The rally, sponsored by the newly-tapped pledge class of the FSU honorary, will feature short speeches by candidates for class presidencies and sensational offices. All others will be briefly introduced, said Gold Key pledges.

"Said One"

"As an extra attraction, a pep band will be on hand at the rally to break up the monotony and whip up tired spirits."

In charge of the proceedings Monday night are reps Don Alford, Vernon Edgar, Don Heidel, Gus Horn, Bill Manning, Bill Nesbitt, and Don Powell, who urged students to take advantage of the last appearances of erstwhile politicians. Preparatory and campaign rallies will be present en masse in support of favorite sons and daughters, and it is hoped that there will be a corresponding number of students present to lend encouragement to independents and unheard-of's."

In case of rain, the event will be held in Opperman Music Hall.

Travel Service Lacks Support

The Student Travel Service is suffering from a lack of cooperation, according to Bob Elting, secretary of student welfare.

The service, set up to help students with transportation problems, has had operations only a month.

A student leaving Tallahassee any weekend should notify the travel service to get a ride or provide a car. Call ex. 2191 for necessary arrangements, he explained.

The number of students taking advantage of the service has been small, but last weekend Florida students seeking transportation outnumbered those willing to provide it 70 to 1. The system will last as long as students cooperate, Ruth Johnson, student director, reported.

Most "riders" are headed for Jacksonville, Tampa, St. Petersburg and other cities in central, west and southwest Florida.

Car owners set their own fee for transportation. Miss Johnson said.

The travel service has been advertised on campus, and should but further cooperation is necessary in keeping the system an active process, the manager's said.

Book Exchange Opens Monday

The need book exchange, located in the Florida Union Building will open its doors to students Monday and remain open until May 23, revealed John Little, bookstore manager.

The exchange is operated by Alpha Phi Omega, national honorary service fraternity, to give students greater profits for selling their books.

The operation of the book exchange was explained by Little. A student wishing to sell a book brings it to the bookstore and fills out a form. On this form he states the price he wants for the book.

No Speech Set Here For Lowry

There is "little possibility" that Governor candidate Sumner Lowry will appear on campus, his unofficial Florida State University chairman said this week.

Dick Rosenfeld, who comes from Lowry's home town of Tampa, said Wednesday that the candidate's itinerary "does not call for any more stops in Tallahassee until after the first primary."

He said Lowry is spending most of his time in the Miami area, stating that Tallahassee is considered "lost" to Governor LeRoy Collins. Rosenfeld said that some Lowry supporters have indicated they will be pleased if he places "a strong third" in this city.

No mention has been held as of yet, he said.

Bachman Names Cabinet; Seeks Two New Posts

Student Body President-elect Bob Bachman named seven cabinet officers for next year yesterday.

He also announced two appointments which he said he will seek to have approved by Senate.

The cabinet appointees are Arnold Greenfield, attorney general; Miss McCullough, secretary of elections, Barbara Jaffries, secretary of the interior; Bob Elkins, secretary of student welfare; Elting holds the position now); Evelyn Bell, secretary of finance. Carmine Ranieri, secretary of student events, and Jan Kinlaw, secretary of state.

Bachman named Jim McIntyre under-secretary of honor and Norma Trippoon under-secretary of organizations. Both these offices are under the secretary of the interior but Bachman said he will ask Student Senate to elevate them to cabinet rank.

Other Duties

That would still leave the secretary of the interior with responsibility for the Student Faculty Traffic Committee and for the student accident insurance program.

The responsibilities of the secretary of student events were increased by Senate Wednesday, when that body passed a bill making the office chairman of a Student Artist Series Committee.

The committee's function will be to "sponsor campus appearances of any artists, bands, and any other type of professional entertainment." It is empowered to set dates and prices and handle publicity and advertising. Members are to be appointed by the president.

New Authority

The proposed Student Artist Series has been a project of Student Senate Senator Carolyn Close, who introduced the bill changing the authority. Said Bachman would better be vested in the executive branch of Student Government.

Bachman said his new appointments will be sent to Senate possibly next week. The Constitution, he said, does not specify that a president must have taken his oath of office to submit his appointments for confirmation by Student Senate.

Installation of officers, he said, may not take place until May 17, which date would be too late for Senate to act upon any appointees.

KILLIAN SPEAKS SUNDAY ON WILLIE PANEL

Millet Foundation will present Sunday night a panel on "The Moral Responsibility of the Religious House toward Educational Desegregation."

Featured speaker will be Dr. Lewis Killian, associate professor of sociology.

Dr. Killian assisted the attorney general in compiling his segregation report for the Supreme Court after the first of the school desegregation decisions.

Talks Before 300 Students

Collins Hits On Campaign Pegs In Speech

By OSCAR JOHNSON

Governor LeRoy Collins in a talk here Tuesday, hit on pegs he has been driving into his opponents all during his campaign for re-election.

In an informal speech before students in Lonsmire Auditorium Collins repeated his beliefs on matters such as sound state government, a calm approach to segregation, and increased industrial development — topics which he has discussed with voters during his campaigning up and down the state.

A large crowd of students heard Collins' half-hour address despite a drizzling rain which had begun an hour earlier. The candidate shook hands with students during and afterwards.

Hits 'Recklessness'

The patter of rain on the building provided a muted backdrop as Collins told his campaign supporters: "I've been astounded at the recklessness brought out in the latter part of this campaign."

He said some statements "have gone beyond absurdity—they're just fraud."

Collins has votes rough from extensive speaking, declared that "one candidate in particular" has been particularly violent in his attempts to "incite disorder and riot."

He said that kind of talk "worries me because it challenges Florida's progress and stability, which have meant a lot in achieving the kind of progress we have made"

Unspecific

Collins said he has specific references to discussion on segregation. He merely said that "in one sense (Florida politics) has reached a new low" due to attempts of one candidate to stir up hatred.

Speaking of soundness and maturity in state government, Collins said this was "vital" and maintained that it has been achieved since he had been

He stated that when he had run for the unexpired term of the late Dan McCarty in 1954, he had told voters he believed Florida "stood on the threshold of greatness.

"We have gone a step further since then," he said "We have now taken a step into this greatness."

Methods Education

Directing his statements to toward the student audience Collins said that "real" progress is dependent to the growth of Florida's institutions of higher education. He said that Florida State University (formerly Florida State College for Women) has "grown enormously" since he was elected to the Florida Legislature in 1945.

But, he said, the university should not merely strive for growth in size—"that will come naturally"—but should increase its efforts toward "providing the kind of training necessary for our boys and girls to meet the problems tomorrow."

"FSU must share responsibility for training the future leaders of this state."

Technical Studies

Collins said his talks with industrialist Howard Hughes had made a "profound impression" as to the need for more and better technical training.

He said that Soviet Russia is rapidly outstripping America in the training of scientists.

"Just how FSU can help fit into this picture of training engineers I do not know," he stated. "But we must gear our institutions of higher learning toward a greater emphasis on technical training."

The governor of Florida told his audience, "I hope all of you will seriously consider the opportunities awaiting you in Florida."

Interest Sought

He told the students that the state needs their interest, their work, their creative imagination and their drive to aid in creating "the kind of state we are all seeking."

Collins received a standing ovation. No question and answer session was held.

ROTC Rifle Team Ends Competition

The Army ROTC Rifle Team finished competition Wednesday in the National Intercollegiate Rifle Matches according to Col. Philip Greene.

The FSU team qualified for the national match in the Third Army Area Match in February.

In the national match, fired in four stages this month, the FSU team competed with teams from all over the United States.

Results other than participating from the state was the University of Florida.

SPAGHETTI SUPPER

Sigma Alpha Iota is giving a spaghetti supper at 5 o'clock and head somgrove at 8 on the music building patio.

A Job For Traffic Court

The most recent accident at the Call-St., campus-Gate intersection, affectionately termed "Blind Hill" by FSU students, again points up traffic hazards which seem both perpetual and unnecessary. We make the following suggestions to the student traffic court.

We would venture to say that most students coming cars on this campus have more than once narrowly escaped accidents on "Blind Hill." Call St.'s narrow width is enhanced not only by long-parked cars; 2. construction of buildings and sewer lines; or 3. the Slow-School sign at the foot of the hill which stands squarely in the middle of another campus intersection. And, in addition to the many almost-accidents, more than one parked car on Call St. has had the sheer of paint shaved off its left side by school buses, the city transit lines, and drivers "caught in the middle."

It is not too much to ask, we have concluded, that a "No-Parking" zone be established on the approaches to and at the top of the hill (possibly no more than eight would need be removed). We would also ask that the Slow-School sign at the foot of the bill be moved westward about 10 feet to a spot where it would still be as effective and yet not further impede traffic coming under the archway and making turns into and from the campus proper.

It is possible that a student committee could persuade the appropriate City officials that such action is necessary for traffic safety.

Along the same line, but in a lighter vein:

Someone finally told us what the yellow pipe is for at Western Gate—to make drivers swing wide and miss that side of the gate.

Do the many shades of paint embroidering the lower half of same attest to the soundness of this theory?

Soviet "New Look"

Political scientists and historians have been warning that the "new look" of Soviet leaders is to be feared more than their old audacity.

They have been warning that communism can be contained without war only if the free world recognizes that war is the least likely possibility.

This issue has now entered into the presidential race, and into the election-year battle between the parties, and it must be given due consideration. It is not an overstatement to affirm that the matter is the most serious that confronts us today.

Averell Harriman, who served as United States Ambassador to Russia from 1943 to 1946, wrote an admirable article for the April Atlantic. It is entitled "The Soviet Challenge and American Policy," and, because of its merit and topicality, we are compelled to describe it. Mr. Harriman has advanced perhaps the clearest and most competent analysis this year.

The new "friendly" strategy was expounded in the Kremlin at Stalin's command in 1952, and the current attack upon his status as a Russian diety is perhaps calculated to convince us that Bulganin and Khrushchev have nothing but the best intentions.

The Kremlin had to find a new strategy. Mr. Harriman notes, because their old one had failed. It did not succeed in Iran, Greece, Turkey, Berlin, Trieste, and South Korea.

The Kremlin policy is now to "use its diplomacy, propaganda, and economic power to the fullest to attract new subjects, to weaken and divide the free world, and to isolate tha United States. Eventually, as a consequence of an intra-capitalist war, the Soviet Union could take over without too much trouble. Meanwhile, it is basic to the success of Soviet policy that there be a relaxation of tensions and a growth of confidence in the peacefulness of Soviet Intentions."

And so the Reds have made overtures to India and the Arabs; they have offered to trade with Latin America; to millions of people who need, not weapons, but economic assistance, they have offered not weapons but technicians, commodities, and materials.

And what has the United States done? It has sent its Secretary of State traveling around the world, saying much but doing little. What he and others have said has not helped "massive retaliation," "agonizing reappraisal," "unleashing Chiang Kei-shek" and "brink of war."

Conclusion: Mr. Harriman, "Early this year our Ambassador to Pakistan made a public speech in that country in which he implied that the United States has little interest in aiding those countries that do not sign up with us in military alliances. He was not recalled or even rebuked by the State Department."

And further, "I have long stated my belief that the Kremlin does not want a major war in which it would be involved. But to say that it does want is 'peace' is to make a travesty of the word. The men in the Kremlin have made it clear that their aims are to carry on a mixed-ity, strife, and even war among other nations, to break up the North Atlantic Alliance, and to extend Communist control over the entire world through economic and political maneuvering, propaganda and deliberate troublemaking. This is not peace."

Mr. Harriman argues that America must cease her attempts at winning allies through military alliances and "foreign aid" consisting of armaments; that our greatest security rests in an economically stable world which will have no need to listen to the communists. We need not disarm, we should remain strong, but we should not bank upon military strength. The military is not that which the Reds will use in their consuming drive for world domination.

Mr. Harriman suggests international cooperation among the stronger nations to aid the weaker. He suggests an international lending authority not under American control, but supported by Americans. If the communists refused to assist, their aims would be bared, but a stable world is the last thing they want.

Adlai Stevenson said many of the same things in his recent speech before newspaper editors in Washington; Dr. Earl Beck, of our history department, voiced similar thoughts when he reminded us that foreign aid serves a purpose and is not an obligation nor a gift but a necessity.

Unfortunately, half of the Republican party is the spiritual descendant of the high-tariff, isolationist element that handicapped us during the twenties and almost kept us from fighting Hitler until it was too late.

We think that if the Republicans can throw off their isolationist anchor this year, all will be good; but if they cannot do that, then a Democratic administration is the only answer.

The brave heroes of this grade "B" thriller decide that the creature from Black Lagoon can be transformed into a man with a little effort, undoing by the results they should have left well enough alone. The product is gruesome enough to drive any respectable fish be drink.

NO SCIENCE-FICTION, this On The Threshold Of Space is a new breed of movie--science fact. It tells, in an adult way, of the advance of aviation medicine, dramatizing its heroic and often painful experimentation. Starring Guy Madison and the late Job Hodiak. On The Threshold of Space gets a bump on our chart by showing a ball-out at 90,000 feet, a test which this Air Force has actually scheduled for later this year. This film shows Sunday through Tuesday at the Florida Theatre.

Frosh Support "500" Insert

TO THE EDITOR:

We the undersigned, as members of the Freshman Class, and part of your readership, would like to express our opinion of the Freshman Class Bicycle Race insert.

We feel that Editor Bob Moore and his staff did an excellent job on this insert, the first of its kind. Despite the many obstacles which we are sure had to be overcome, the staff should be given a well-earned pat on the back.

This insert, we know, aroused much interest throughout the entire student body to come out and support our race.

In closing, we feel that the Freshman Class insert offers tangible proof that we, the class of 1959 can and will work together when the challenge is presented.

that he allowed one of his colleagues to say Negroes were being taught by FSU professors outside the campus classroom. The story happened to be true, but it was not "politically wise" to report it.

Dobert and his columnist made public apologies and denials in the Flambeau. If they should be censured for anything, it was this act. But the denials were not known, and the editor "resigned." It was near the end of the year, and that diploma seemed fearfully important.

I do not wish to become involved in your controversy with Folsom I have my opinions on this subject, also, based on four years' experience on the Flambeau. Perhaps my unwavering opposition to a Board of publications speaks for itself.

Travel Service Makes Request

DEAR STUDENTS:

Most of you have heard about the Student Travel Service on campus. Many of you have either gotten rides or riders from Tallahassee on the weekends. However, many students have failed to realize what a real service this is. Should a student who needs riders or a ride has to do is call the student travel service at 2191. Rollo Johnson, the student assistant there, will take your call any afternoon Monday through Friday from 2-5 pm. Ruth will make all the arrangements and call--letting you time of departure and all the necessary details.

If you should need now is people with cars. If you are going out of town any weekend from now and the end of the semester, call and register your car and destination with the Travel Service--Ruth will do the rest.

The only way to make the Travel Service a real asset to the student body is for the students to co-operate. Those having cars, those desiring rides and those needing riders. Won't you call the Student Travel Service today?

Honesty Refreshing In Candidate

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

The spirit of public service is strong in many hearts, but undoubtedly most officeholders are also concerned with the material rewards of the job.

Few of them admit it, however.

I heard a refreshing account the other day. It seems that a few nights ago a young man appeared on television over WCTV, in a program intended for the voters in and around Valdosia, Ga.

This fellow said the reason he was running for county clerk was primarily the money. He's a schoolteacher and has little hope of a decent salary ahead of him if he shrinks pays more. Besides, said, he, he can do the job better.

This forthright individual, according to WCTV's Thomasville studios, is Jim Clark, a graduate of Florida State University. He received his bachelor's degree in 1952 and his master's in August of 1954.

In spite of his frankness, I don't think his motives are entirely personal. He is already a public servant, a teacher, and his candidacy for the other office is perhaps not so much to be seen as a candidacy but as an indictment of the ridiculous wages paid teachers.

There is no reason why a candidate for office should pretend that he is a noble crusader out to lead the people to some glorious goal of good government. That's expected of him.

The officeholder should be regarded as just another employee. If he has merely pride in himself and a reasonable level of competence he will do the job as well as if he is possessed with a burning zeal for public service.

The platitudes about honesty and public spirit should be weighed for what they are, what little, and the candidate's competence and integrity judged upon instead.

We ask a person why he seeks office and says, "To serve you." This makes us feel a but, more often than not, it makes us a liar out of him.

What is wrong with a person entering politics because government and politics fascinate him, because he enjoys the work, or because is more competent to administer an office than is private clerical job the main respect needs the money the job will bring?

Of course, it is true that the candidate may think the government is in a sorry way for active competency, honesty, and efficiency and he considers, certainly, but the candidate other personal motives, if honest, should not be scorned.

No one should hold public office unless wants to do a good job and earn his pay, neither should he be engaged anywhere unless his work will be competent and honest. one case the people are the employer; in latter case the employer is a single person. There is no difference.

We need a certain type of person in politics, the person who is loath to enter one because of the filth that smears so many campaigns and the corruption that binds so offices. The person we need must be committed to other financial interests. To get we must pay him a decent salary--not entertaining salary. The average man cannot afford to be a public servant in most places, only those with other sources of income can such positions as legislative seats. You can how much honesty that arrangement means

Collins Stresses 'Quality' Education

By OSCAR JOHNSON

GOVERNOR Collins' very successful appearance on campus, Tuesday, illustrated not only a considerable interest among students in state politics, but also an interest in students among some politicians.

Collins devoted part of his speaking time to the need for more learning in Florida. He said that for some people "to do one's thinking" is name for the one-unit body-frame connected hind by a pair of legs." Then he puts a name Imum of four words) glorifying the retrieval parts of this division and you might see cr

However, it's much more creative to up names like "filibuster-buster" and "pork-barrel Box Design" or "Good Kind Of" constituents. About the best we've heard so far is the "Country Bump Kin."

AFTER WITNESSING the steady regression of men's fashions in the recent years, Collins changed periodically, in the manner of women's attire, we have no comment on that subject.

On the analytical question of bermuda shorts we didn't say anything. When Ivy league trousers the rage we kept mum. We even managed to the blue suede shoes craze, like.

But the olive-green thing is too much for us. If you will, here we consider it ridiculous more than a throwback on the order of Davy Crockett's coonskin cap. Quite this writer other hero—Robin Hood, the hermit of Sherwood Forest, with his suit of Lincoln Green.

Composer's Forum Quality High

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

LAST WEEK-END I attended the Regional Composers' Forum at the University of Alabama, and was pleasantly surprised to find that the quality of the works presented was much higher than I would have thought possible, considering what I had been exposed to in the last two years.

The University of Alabama and the Southeastern Composers' League sponsor the forum annually, with the university picking up the larger part of the tab. Each year a well-known composer and critic are invited to lecture or participate in a panel discussion. Past guests have included Norman Dello Joio, Ross Lee Finney, Lukas Foss, Robert Sebine, and others of like caliber. This year Vincent Persichetti was the guest composer and Robert Palmer the guest critic.

Only orchestra or band compositions are performed, but the contestants come from 48 states. Sixty per cent of the scores submitted were rejected, leaving twenty-two pieces represented. The university orchestra was augmented with about fifteen professionals brought in from neighboring orchestras for the occasion. The conducting chores were divided among a few professional conductors and the composers themselves. Arthur Linnet Bumkin of the Birmingham Symphony, James Christian Pfohl of the Jacksonville Symphony, and Joseph Hawthorne of the Toledo Symphony were some of those who conducted.

FSU'S JOHN SODA, who conducted my work, his own, and several others, was one of the two

Wandering With Wiljohn

'Four Kinds Of Blues' Outstanding

By WILJOHN.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT, the Symphonic Band and the Lab Band "took advantage of the Florida climate" and played their Starlight Concert indoors in Opperman Theatre. Since the "Wing Watcher" has hit the first half of the program, I remains for me to give a few comments on the performance of the Lab Band.

They opened the first of the evening with Price Buhrman's arrangement of "East of the Sun." Here was a fine example of very simple but effective voicings and arrangements. It will load down the place with all the instruments that can be crammed into the stage and show off the ability and freedom of the improvising soloist greatly. Price carefully avoided this and gave the soloists plenty of freedom.

"Mambo Nothing" is an arrangement by Aldridge, who, I believe makes his home in the Tampa area. Aldridge is an ex-Woody Herman man and the piece, at times, seemed to show evidence of this. A good rhythm number but generally not anything to sit up and take notice about.

"A Good Man Is Hard To Find" was a fine novelty arrangement by Edmunds. Johnny also did the vocal. He has aided in the number by several unrestrained lunatics who had disguised themselves as musicians and smuggled themselves onto the bandstand. They did everything but raise the Cheshire Cat.

THE OUTSTANDING number of the evening was Roger McDuffie's, "Four Kinds of Blues." The number is an original and contains many good moments to almost every kind of listener. There is a suggestion of the folk song about the theme given to the sax which I particularly liked. The number is outstanding in every way and the reaction of the audience to it clearly showed that.

However, McDuffie's "Cottage For Sale" fell exceeded to let things down a little. In place there was too much weight of sound, in places the bass was far too prominent. The pianist in the middle suffered rather badly and so did everyone else. Perhaps this is because the audience was too unsophisticated to hear it well.

Also, though her vocal rendition seemed to excellent, June Knight could scarcely be heard because of the mike section blasting over her.

The other vocal, "Tis Autumn," was done by Anne Vernan and was another Ellington arrangement. Particularly noteworthy was the effect of the trumpet, one trombone, and saxes (tenor, alto, bari). This gave a very cool and pleasing sound and allowed the voice plenty of chance to be heard—which was wonderful, because Anne is rapidly developing into one of the best vocalists you can find musical ideas are just short of perfect and her manner is the best. The only thing that might help would be giving her numbers judged by Her voice is much more pleasant in the lower register and she has a better command over it.

THE OTHER ORIGINAL, Swain's "Sunday Monday," was good but not as good as Swain can do. He was also featured on piano on which thought noise was the desired effect. The "Bop" left me cold, as did Goe's vocal effort at the end. The encore was "Morgo," Snorty Rodgers.

Senior Officers

President

Dear Juniors,

Our class has been designated as the Centennial Class of F.S.U. In causing this honor we must live up ourselves to be well deserving of this distinction and be outstanding in all our activities in the coming year.

We have had extensive experience in planning and organizing activities similar to which our class will participate in and I will have the time and a sincere desire to serve you as your President.

May I ask you to "Konsider Quitman" when you vote for your Class President.

Sincerely,
Jim Kauffman

Dear Juniors,

The Class of '37 has been outstanding for its successful activities during the past three years. Last year, while I had the honor of being President, the support of class members was really gratifying, and convinced me every way to my future interest in working again for the Class, as well as the school.

Until now, besides Sophomore Class President, I have been a floor governor two semesters, secretary of Rotaract, and an officer in AFROTC. Because of my fraternity, and service in Alpha Council and Masoking Chiefs. During the year I have acquainted myself personally with the duties of Senior officers.

Therefore, my main qualification is sincerity I request your confidence in my candidacy and support in the elections Tuesday.

Sincerely,
Paul Ort

Veep

Members of the Class of 1937:

I have never obsequiously asked a favor for a vote—and I am not starting now. But I do solicit your thoughtful consideration of my qualifications for the Vice-Presidency of the Senior Class.

Politics has been my main interest at College. I was asked to speak in our freshman year at the University of Florida. I have been a varsity debater for three years—in my junior year I won first place in the F.S.U. after-dinner speaking contest. This year first place in the All - Southern Debating Tournament.

Student Government is not new to me. I have held offices in Tau Kappa Alpha, Secretary of Univ. Ill. Board of Student Publications, and a Secretaryship Key. While a Dormitory Councilor I converted the West Hall Dormers Inaugural Ball (the first dormitory dance in the history) into an Inter-dormitory Social.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely yours,
Fred Roberts

FELLOW CLASSMATES:

As a candidate for office as Senior Class Vice President, I wish to express my desire to be elected to the vice president's office. In my last term of office as Sophomore Vice President, I was in charge of the Sophomore-Senior Breakfast. It was the most successful one on record.

To show my activity in politics, I wish to show my record. I was past president of Florida Hall (it was a men's dorm once), member of Alpha Council and active on other committees.

I think that I can do a good job and have a good record behind if elected. Thank you for your support.

SINCERELY,
RAY WAGNER

Dear Juniors—

As a candidate for Vice President of the Junior Class I want to take this opportunity to ask you for your help and support in next Tuesdays election.

I am aware of the duties and responsibilities of the office and I believe that I will be able to fulfill my expectations and help make YOUR LAST YEAR THE BEST YEAR AT FLORIDA STATE."

Sincerely yours,
Charlie Ward

Secretary

Dear Juniors,

We, the Class of 1937, are entering our Senior year. Our class has been closely watched since our matriculation when we were deemed the "Centennial Class" I have worked with our class since our freshman days on various committees and this year as your Social Chairman. At the present time I am seeking the office of Senior Class Secretary. I want to serve our class during our final year of college so please remember Ruthie Henshaw when you go to the polls.

Sincerely,
Ruthie Henshaw

DEAR FELLOW JUNIORS

In seeking the office of CLASS SECRETARY I have a sincere desire to serve. This is essential for carrying out the duties of this office to the utmost.

Next year our CLASS of 1937 will be the CENTENNIAL CLASS. I sincerely wish to have a part in working on our class activities to make as unforgettable year in the eyes of all. Competency, capability and dependability as the limited amount of time can make this possible. With my past experience and present enthusiasm I hope to serve you—the class of 1937.

Again I would appreciate your consideration and support of my candidacy as CLASS SECRETARY.

SINCERELY YOURS,
PHYLLIS LANGFORD

Treasurer

DEAR JUNIORS,

Tuesday you will be electing some of your classmates to be your officers for the coming year. First of all I would like to ask of you to vote—for every vote is important.

Now I am asking for your support in electing me Margaret Gunter, your senior class Treasurer. I would do my very best to represent each of you in the coming year.

Remember Tuesday you choose your officers and I hope I will be the one for Senior Class Treasurer.

THANK YOU,
MARGARET GUNTER

DEAR FELLOW "ALMOST SENIORS":

I know we all want our Senior class to be the best ever. I am most sincerely interested in promoting our Centennial class activities and feel that I am most qualified and could serve best as treasurer of our class.

For the past year I have served as treasurer of Alpha Epsilon Delta, national honorary, for the two previous years I held the office of sorority treasurer. Recently I have been elected treasurer of Sigma Tau Delta, national English honorary.

I hope you will consider these qualifications when you go to vote and elect Donna Hardy your Senior class treasurer.

SINCERELY,
DONNA HARDY

Social Chm.

DEAR CENTENNAL CLASS,

Do you want our class to have all the fun and honor which goes with a Centennial Class celebration? DO I! And this is the main reason why I want so much to serve you as Senior Class Social Chairman—to work for you and your ideas and to see to it that our class of '37 receives the 100th year recognition which it deserves!

Our last year together can be "the greatest" with a full, really successful social program, if elected. I promise you this—in no way you can lose.

Besides an all-out celebration for being the Centennial Class, I have plans for Washington Campbell's birthday and the Sophomore-Senior Breakfast the best ever. Thank you for your support!

SINCERELY
LESLIE BAUER

Men's Senate

DEAR SENIOR CLASS OF '37:

In this coming election I am seeking your vote for Senior Senator. I have had no previous experience in Senate, but I have been active in Student affairs. I served my class in the following capacities:

Freshman Carnival Committee
Sophomore Senior Breakfast Committee
Sophomore Hop Committee
Rat Court
Junior Clothes Drive Committee
Chairman of Junior Class Picnic

I will appreciate serving the class and the school to the best of my ability if I am elected to the Senate.

I am not affiliated with either party; however, we good things in both of their platforms and will endeavor to co-operate in the passing of bills which we will all benefit from.

Your support will be greatly appreciated in the coming election.

SINCERELY YOURS,
ROGER (BEEF) BERRY

DEAR CLASS OF '35,

I would like to take this opportunity to become acquainted with all of you whom I have not met personally.

As you know, on May 1, our class elections will be held, and it will be your duty and mine to go out and vote for those people whom we feel will be able to lead our class and FSU to even higher attainments in the coming years.

I do not seek the office of class senator only for the experience which it will surely bring to me but I also seek it in the light of the work that a conscientious senator can do for his class, if his class is behind him.

I have worked with our class very closely this year, and I have seen the work that all concerned have done, so that the Little "500" bicycle race would become something of which we could be justly proud. I have seen the dynamic spirit of our class and I feel that as a senator I could bring this spirit into the student body.

I shall appreciate your consideration of my candidacy for Senior Class Senator on May 1.

SINCERELY YOURS,
GERRY GORDON

DEAR JUNIORS.

With class elections being so close at hand, I hope that each of you will be giving some thought as to whom you want to represent our class in the Student Senate. As you do this, I sincerely hope you will give me your thorough consideration.

These are some of our ideas concerning the office I am seeking: Student Senate should not be the mock arena it has lately come to be—a sham battlefield where the politically over-ambitious can manufacture artificial hills which gain votes, but lose valuable Senate time. The time of the Senate should be spent in actual, constructive improvements for the students and University.

I want very much to serve you as your Senior Senator next year, and would deeply appreciate your vote and support on Tuesday.

SINCERELY,
BRUCE JACOB

Women's Senate

DEAR SENIORS-TO-BE:

I am a candidate for Women's Senate to represent our Senior Class. I feel that my interest in Student Government for the past three years has qualified me to seek this position. I have served as both treasurer and secretary of the State Party, and have served on various committees in my class as well as other organizations. I hope that because of my desire to serve you and my interest in our University Student Government, you will consider me as Your candidate for Senior Women's Senate.

VERY SINCERELY,
CLARE BEVIS

DEAR JUNIORS

Once again I ask for your support for election as your Senior class senator. This year I have tried to represent you as you would and have our class and student body represented. I have worked hard on various senate committees and have established a good record of which I am proud. Merit your consideration and support.

SINCERELY YOURS,
BARBARA HUGHES MOORE

DEAR JUNIORS:

I think that F.S.U. has some outdated laws which are not respected as they should be and I feel these laws are impractical. I believe that a complete set of simple S.U. get a complete set of up-to-date laws that have the backing of the student. For this reason I am seeking election to the Senate.

I want to meet as many students as possible during this campaign. If after I meet you, you would like to put your trust in me I will very much appreciate your vote.

SINCERELY,
CHARLOTTE PATTEN

Traffic Court

DEAR STUDENTS,

Traffic Court can mean something to you! maybe because you've been called up on the carpet for violations or because you are the recipient of a bill you couldn't get through the fines collected. However, it is a fact that this question on the court who is concerned with the traffic problems on this campus.

First of all I am familiar with the traffic problems as they are! and I want to help work them out. I have been a member of my sorority and I am a member of the Student Creter Soundlog Committee.

Remember, you need a Horn in Traffic.

SINCERELY
MARY FRANCES HORN

Wom. Judiciary

DEAR STUDENTS,

I am seeking the office of Senior Women's Judiciary in the election on May first. As many of you know, I have served on Judiciary for the past year and I feel I have invaluable experience from this time that I have served.

Not only do I have the experience, but I am very interested in Judiciary, much more than a cloaked fact by my seeking this office again. Judiciary is a very important part of our Student Government and takes someone very interested and willing to make the court functions run and good benefit the students most.

When you go to vote on Tuesday I hope you will remember me and mark the blank by my name. I assure you your support will be appreciated and I shall do my best in your behalf.

THANK YOU!
ANN BOHLER

DEAR STUDENTS,

A position on Judiciary is a very demanding one. It requires a person to live up to all the standards of the University, and it is a very time consuming position. It requires a person who has an interest in promoting right and a willingness to work. I am very much interested in such affairs, and I have a great desire to serve you on Judiciary. My experience in court work includes dormitory government and chairman of the campus court. So I urge every student to vote Tuesday, and please consider Nancy Johnson for Senior Judiciary.

SINCERELY,
NANCY JOHNSON

DEAR STUDENTS:

I am seeking a position on Senior Women's Judiciary for the coming year.

I feel I am qualified for this position because I have served as a dormitory officer for the past three years This means that I have been a member of the Inter-house council. I have also worked on the Social Regulations Committee for two years

I hope you will take this into consideration when you vote next Tuesday.

SINCERELY,
GRETCHEN KERR

TO THE STUDENT BODY:

In the coming election I am seeking the office of Senior Women's Judiciary. This position needs someone who has a thorough knowledge of the University's regulations from always being in contact with their applications. This year I have served on the U.G.A. as a Junior Counselor. With this has been working with Rose Quadrangle, the court just below Judiciary. So, you see, my next step is serving on Judiciary.

I am interested in the office, and I feel that I am capable of serving on the University Court. It is up to you, the Student Body, to decide whether I am more capable than my opponent in serving in this position.

SINCERELY,
MARY MARGARET WILLIAMS

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS,

For the past year I have represented my class on Women's Judiciary. It has offered the experience that I believe will enable me to be an even better representative in the coming year. With your support and vote I will again serve you, and do my best to fulfill all the obligations this office demands.

SINCERELY,
NANCY LEE YOUNG

Honor Court

DEAR STUDENTS:

The Honor System at FSU is now being revised and is more effective than ever before and respect of the students. As well as I realize I feel that the co-ed's much appreciation to the people who made Honor Emphasis Week possible and that now more than ever we need a responsible new idea and revitalize the old until we have a working Honor System of which we can be proud. This is the main reason that I am seeking election to Honor Court. I think it is imperative that every member on Honor Court need to work together to perfect a strong and satisfactory honor system. It can be done. Let's do it—NOW.

DICK FREGOE

Junior Officers

President

DEAR JUNIORS:

In our Freshman year we produced a carnival and took the first step forward in working together. The next year brought the Sophomore Hop and our second step. Now we are fast approaching a climax of our college life in the form of our Junior Year. Therefore we must put the finishing touches to a smooth cooperation class The best way to do this is to stimulate interest in our class as a whole. I believe that with your help and my past experience I can fulfill this challenge. The solution is simply more activities that will draw and interest you as a Junior.

As an Alpha I have been trained that of a first-semester Junior Weekend.

I sincerely believe that with your support our Junior Year will not only be the best ever, but one that future classes will model after. Let's make it so.

SINCERELY YOURS
GRAHAM E. TUSCHKE

DEAR STUDENTS,

My message to you is short as I hope that all of you will take time enough to read it through. I am a candidate for President of the Junior Class and it therefore goes without saying that it is my desire and intention to serve the best interests of the class if elected I am running independently because members of both parties have offered me their aid and I wish to side with neither group in the exclusion of the other.

I have had the experience of being Senior Class Presidents at Coral Gables High School and I feel that this plus a sincere interest and desire to serve would help to make me a successful president of our class.

SINCERELY,
BILL WEAVER

DEAR SOPHOMORES

Since I will not be able to see each of you personally, I wish to take this opportunity to ask you to help us by your vote in the election next Tuesday.

I am asking for your support on the grounds that I have shown continuous interest in Student Government in addition to other campus activities over the two years that I have been here at FSU.

Some of the organizations in which I have worked are Alpha Council, Methodist Student

Treasurer

Dear Sophomores and future Juniors.

"Since time and space are both limited and I know that there are many announcements for you to read, I will be as brief as possible I would like for you to consider Barbara McCartney for the office of Jr. Class Treasurer.

Qualifications:

State scholarship holder
Sophomore Council
Treasurer of sorority

I feel qualified to fill this position, and if elected will work to the best of my ability to keep our class where it is now—on top I would deeply appreciate your vote.

Sincerely,
Barbara McCartney

Dear Fellow Students,

Tuesday you will be voting for Junior Class Treasurer I, Kate Ramsey, have been nominated by the State Party for this office. I have had a great deal of experience in this type of thing before Class Presidents at Coral Gables High School and I feel that this plus a sincere interest and desire to serve would help to make me a successful president of our class.

SINCERELY,
Kate Ramsey

Attention all Sophmores!!!! Election time is here again and once more, there are many qualified candidates seeking office.

First, It's important the you vote and second, when the candidate you feel best qualified for the job.

I have served as treasurer of several organizations and now, I am asking you to let me serve you as Junior Class Treasurer.

I realize the importance of this office and in the coming year, we as a class will have projects such as the Jr.-Senior prom and Centennial.

The Campaigners Promise

Secretary

Dear Sophomores,

I wish that it were possible for me to talk with each of you personally. However, since it is not, I should like to take this opportunity to express my desires to serve you next year as Junior class secretary.

I feel that my past experience has prepared me to fill this post. In high school I was active in student government work, and since coming to FSU, I have served on the Freshman cabinet, the Secretary of State committee, house council, and Seminole Council. At the present time I am secretary of two campus organizations which, I feel qualify me for the position of class secretary. I would sincerely like to serve you in this office.

Tuesday will be your opportunity to help make next year's Junior class the best ever. Be sure to go to the polls to cast your vote for those candidates whom you feel are the most qualified.

Sincerely,
Barbara Chambers

DEAR SOPHOMORES,

Another election day is drawing near Tuesday, May 1st, you will be choosing people to lead your class next year. I would appreciate your consideration for Junior Class Secretary.

This year our class has shown its spirit and cooperation, great potentialities. Next year promises to be even greater and as your Class Secretary, I would try to do my part to make our Junior Year well remembered by FSU.

REMEMBER — FOR JUNIOR CLASS SECRETARY
"ON ELECTION DAY I — VOTE BETTY FAYE"

Social Chm.

DEAR SOPHOMORES,

Tuesday, May 1, you will be voting for your class officers. First of all, I would like to impress upon you the importance of voting. The people who are elected will be representing you, the Junior Class. Do your part to get a qualified person in office.

I am seeking the office of SOCIAL CHAIRMAN of the Junior Class and would appreciate the support of you, the Sophomores. I am a recreation major and have had experience in campus activities for the past two years.

Remember — The Time Of Your Live, VOTE FOR SHIVES."

for Junior Class Social Chairman.

SINCERELY,

DEAR "FUTURE" JUNIORS,

Election time is here again and many names and faces are being brought to your attention. May I submit my name for your approval. I would like very much to be SOCIAL CHAIRMAN of our JUNIOR CLASS next year, and I feel that I have the experience and qualifications necessary for the position. Your consideration and support would be greatly appreciated.

YOURS TRULY,
ALISON TEMPLEMAN

ATTENTION ALL SOPHOMORES:

I can hardly realize that we're about to reach that "half-way mark of our college days. This year's class officers have really done a good job in leading our Sophomore class, and the time has come once again to elect another group to lead us throughout our Junior year.

The Junior Senior Prom and the Junior Class Picnic are just two of the many events that we will be taking part in next year, and I hope that I will have the opportunity to serve you to the best of my ability as Junior Class Social Chairman. I realize that this will be a big job, but with your cooperation and support, I know we can continue to accomplish as much, if not more, as we have this year.

The elections are set for Tuesday, May 1 and I hope that the Sophomore Class will be out in "full swing" to vote for the people of their choice.

I will certainly appreciate your support for Junior Class Social Chairman.

SINCERELY,
MARIA ANN WHITTLE

Honor Court

DEAR STUDENTS,

On Tuesday, May 1, we will all go to the polls to elect the officers whom we would like to have serve us next year. Regardless of your choice of candidates, I strongly urge you to vote and support your student government. After all, the success of student government lies entirely in your hands.

I am seeking the position of a Justice of the Honor Court. I am extremely interested in this position, and feel that the strength-ening of the Honor System on this campus is of prime importance at this time.

SINCERELY YOURS,
DICK CRAWFORD

FELLOW STUDENTS,

I am independently seeking a place on the Junior Women's Representative on the Honor Court. In light of the duties of this office I feel that certain personnes are out of order. Therefore, I only feel that certain personnes are out-standing, as a fair and impartial member of this very important court.

I would appreciate your consideration of my candidacy now and your vote next Tuesday.

THANK YOU.
REBA REHWINKEL

STUDENTS:

I believe that we can have a WORKING HONOR SYSTEM at FSU. In the recent Honor Emphasis Week, many campus leaders devoted their time and effort to bring the issue to each of us. The Honor Court is becoming more significant to our University day by day than it has ever been before, therefore, we should all be interested in the workings of it. It affects each and every person but the entire student body.

I seek the opportunity to serve the student body and appreciate your consideration of me as the Junior Women's Representative to Court.

Be sure to VOTE this coming Tuesday.

SINCERELY,
BETTY TOPE

Women's Senate

DEAR SOPHOMORES,

I have devoted a large portion of my time for the last two years to serving you in the Student Senate. I feel that my record is one that you will approve. The experience and understanding of Student Government I have attained in the two years I have worked for you should enable me to serve you even more completely in the coming year. I seek your earnest consideration on Tuesday's election.

SINCERELY,
POLLY ATWATER

FUTURE JUNIORS

My interest in student government, which has always been active, has grown stronger during the past year. In fact, so strong that I wish to serve you as a member of the senate.

I have worked for the State Party the past two years serving on the Convention Committee, Sorority Committee, and this year the Executive Council. In these positions I have observed the workings of Student government and also the needs and wishes of the students.

With this understanding and desire I feel that I could serve you well as your senator.

SINCERELY
JUNE MILLAT

Men's Senate

DEAR SOPHOMORES

I would certainly appreciate your vote and support for Junior Senator in the forthcoming election. I represented you in the Freshman Senate. I was also in the Freshman Cabinet, and at the present time a member of Alpha Council.

I feel that I am qualified to represent you well in the student Senate next year. Hoping you will remember me when you vote—

SINCERELY
RONNIE BLUE

DEAR SOPHOMORES:

Once again I would like to solicit your votes for the coming election. Many of you supported me during the student senate election and I sincerely feel and would appreciate your assistance I feel that I am qualified for the position and am running with on thins in mind, to serve you the wishes and to promote the welfare of you. Thu, I will earnestly strive to do if I am given the opportunity to serve, so I ask that you will vote next Tuesday for James Davis for Junior Men's Senator.

SINCERELY
JAMES DAVIS

DEAR FELLOW-CLASSMATES.

The time of year has come when we must once again elect members of our class to represent and serve us in the various fields of University government. I feel I am well qualified to be your Junior Men's Senator. If elected, I will strive to maintain the high standards by which our class is known and at the same time seek more and greater recognition for the talents in all fields. Every year our class letters scoring in women's rules are out-dated, the students are continuing to set poor seats as the athletic events or that student employees are underpaid. I feel that many of our problems are appreciated and I will serve to the utmost to see the wishes of my class be carried out on all matters to which they are subject. Thanking you for your support, I remain,

SINCERELY,
BOB JOHNSON

DEAR SOPHOMORES:

As a candidate for Junior Class Senator, I would like to take this opportunity to express my qualifications and interest in serving you in this capacity next year.

At the present time I am serving as Vice-President of the Sophomore class and I am a member of the Alpha Council, which is a men's leadership honorary organization. Having taken part in dorm government and fraternity work, I feel that I can best serve your interests in the University Senate.

I would greatly appreciate your support in the coming election.

DON LEWIS

This Tuesday we go to the polls again to elect next years class officers. I hope all of you will take this opportunity to select the students you want to represent you.

I am a candidate for reelection to the Student Senate. I hope you will place your continued confidence in me as one of your representatives.

SINCERELY,
BILL SWIGERT

Wom. Judiciary

DEAR FRIENDS,

Realizing that this page will be filled with letters I'll make this short and to the point. I would like to ask for your consideration in re-electing me to JUNIOR JUDICIARY.

Following are five reasons why:

1. One year experience on Judiciary
2. Over 3.0 average 3.4
3. Member of Sophomore Council
4. Dorm Social Committee
5. Active at Student House

Thank you so much for your support. Eager to serve you I remain.

SINCERELY YOURS,
MARTHA GRIZZARD

TO MY FELLOW STUDENTS:

On Tuesday, May 1, we students here at Florida State will have the opportunity to elect to office those whom we wish to represent us next year in the various class offices. This opportunity is one that we shall all take advantage of as it is really a privilege.

I am running for a seat on Women's Judiciary. This is an important office and I feel that I am an office where one must try, as I do, to be fair to all students who come before the court.

This year I have served as a member of Junior Council. I would appreciate the opportunity to serve you next year as a Junior member of Women's Judiciary.

..THANK YOU
MARY LOU SNOOK

Men's Judiciary

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

In offering myself for a post on Junior mens Judiciary I have been firmly assigned by two major convictions concerning student government. I am convinced that this post can be one of effective service to the student body of the university. I want a part in making it serve effectively. I feel that in conformity with these views and in the same time seek more and greater recognition for the talents in all fields. Every year our class letters scoring in women's rules are out-dated, the students are continuing to set poor seats as the athletic events or that student employees are underpaid. I feel that many of our problems are appreciated and I will serve to the utmost to see the wishes of my class be carried out on all matters to which they are subject. Sophomore Officers

President

DEAR FRESHMEN,

My candidacy for President of our class, next year, is inspired by a sincere desire to serve in that capacity. I am fully aware of the activities for which the Sophomore Class President is responsible.

With understanding of the duties of this office in mind, I feel that I'm capable of leading the Class of '59 through its Sophomore year. I would appreciate your confidence and pledge my undivided service, if elected.

SINCERELY
JACK MONTGOMERY

FELLOW STUDENTS,

We feel it is no honor to introduce to you, Philip Knight, candidate for Sophomore Class President. Philip has proven his leadership ability in high school through many activities and honors, perhaps most significant of these it was being one of the eight freshmen tapped into Alpha Council.

It is extremely important for the one elected to this office to be of the highest caliber, initiative and character, we believe Philip Knight the man for the job, so we urge you to "Vote Right, Vote for Knight."

DEAR FRESHMEN,

Here at FSU the Sophomore classes of the past, have been respected highly for their outstanding achievements and activities.

They gained this reputation through the unity and enthusiasm of their officers and students.

Becoming a sophomore will be as new to me as it will be to all of you, however, if I'm elected Vice President of the Sophomore Class I will carry out the duties to the best of my ability, and strive along with the other officers to further the achievements of our class.

SINCERELY YOURS,
SCOTT HARPE

DEAR FRESHMAN,

As you go to the polls on Tuesday, you will be electing classmates that will guide you in sophomore functions, activities, and duties throughout the coming year.

It is of the utmost importance that you select the people you feel are best qualified for the respective positions.

In running for the office of Sophomore Vice-President, your interests are my main concern. I have worked this year as a freshman, on our class project and served as editor of our class newspaper. Being the Governor of Senior Hall has presented me with the opportunity of presiding over meetings, a necessity for any office.

The candidate who is elected to this position will work with the president to formulate our class activities—Freshman rat caps, Sophomore Hop, Sophomore-Senior Breakfast, and the bicycle race.

That is why, through your good judgement, you should elect a person of leadership who is willing to work wholeheartedly for our class.

SINCERELY,
BOB MOREN

DEAR CLASSMATES,

In the confusion of campaigning, many of us are drawn into whirlpool of meaningless political asserting. As he well knows, the clever slogans and brightly painted signs don't necessarily reflect the sincerity or ability of a candidate. This year I have served as a freshman vice-president, an experience which has meant a great deal to me not only in the sense of getting to know you as a group of wonderful individuals, but as an enthusiastic, interested class. It has indeed been a real thrill for me to watch our spirit steadily increase. I want to keep this spirit alive and to make not only next year's sophomore class, but the incoming freshman class a real source and inspiration to F.S.U. It is with this in mind and my sincerity in the best of betterment of the class, that I ask for your support in the coming elections.

YOURS TRULY,
PAT STARNES

Men's Senate

DEAR FELLOW CLASSMATES

It has been a pleasure and a privilege to serve you as one of your freshman senators this year.

Tuesday I come before you as a candidate for re-election as Sophomore senator.

During the year I have made every effort to represent you in a fair manner and to be responsive. The job of senator is one which requires many hours of hard work that I enjoy very much, and I certainly would not run for re-election if I did not want to represent your interests and work for good student government. During this week I hope to contact every freshman about this campaign. If I don't succeed in seeing all of you, this is my way of saying how much I will appreciate your interest and support!

This year in the Senate I have worked hard for those measures that I believed good and necessary for our school and class. If you approve of my record and believe I have represented you well, I sincerely appreciate your vote next Tuesday.

CLIFF GWYNN

FUTURE SOPHOMORE CLASS

In making your decision to vote for your Men's Senator I ask you to check the record of those who have served you. This is my record. Check it!

I. I worked to obtain fair representation in the Student Senate for dorms, day students, and other living units.

II. I authored a resolution which OPPOSED any move to preside in formulate our class parties with campus.

III. I introduced a resolution which requested compensation for Junior Counselors for their work in Freshman Dorms.

IV. I served as Chairman of one of the political parties (State Party) on campus.

V. I headed a committee to look into the seating problem at basketball games when this situation was acute.

VI. I was selected a member of Alpha Council.

Before you vote let me again ask you to check my record.

Art Moore

Sophomore-To-Be,

Again I am seeking the office of Senator. During my term as Freshman Senator, I feel I have served you to the best of my ability. I would appreciate your consideration and re-election to Sophomore Senate.

Yours truly,
Dick Rhodes

Women's Senate

SOPHOMORE-TO-BE

Once again I am seeking your support in my campaign for Senator. This past year I have tried to do my best by ability to represent your thoughts in Senate. As a native Floridian Senator, I have served on numerous committees: Social Regulations for Women, Registrations; Student Artist Series; and Labor, Student Services, and Education. Over the year I have accomplished a lot, namely repappointment to fit the needs of our growing student body. In the year to come we must have people who is experienced in these problems and needs. I feel I have the interest of your class of 1959

SINCERELY YOURS,
WINNIE MAE DOUGLAS

FELLOW FRESHMEN,

This year has been one few of us will ever forget! How grand it has been to have had the pleasure of working with such a wonderful group of students Our successes this year will continue to grow and expand only if we can keep up the enthusiasm support that has already been shown. In order to be able to work harder and more intimately with you for our class and FSU, I have placed my name before you as a candidate for re-election in the senate of Working together. A feel certain of a bright future for the class of '59. I shall deeply appreciate your vote and support.

SINCERELY,
PAT FINLAY

DEAR FRESHMEN,

I am a candidate for Senator more Women's Senator in coming class elections. I like to take this opportunity tell you a few of the things have done on campus this that may qualify me for position.

1. I am Vice President Broward Hall and have served on house council in this dorm.

2. I have served on various boards and committees and chairman of Honor Emphasis Week in Broward Hall.

3. I am Vice President Freshman Flunkies and I tried to further this organization on campus.

4. I have been active in freshman class project and cycle race, as a member of publicity committee.

I hope that this brief description of my campus activities to you my desire to of service to my class and university. I have attended state meetings and I fully realize the duties and responsibilities of this office.

If I am elected, I will do in my power to further the interests of students and faculty on this campus, being mindful of the wishes of my next Sophomore Class.

SINCERELY SUBMITTED FOR YOUR CONSIDERATION,
SANDRA ROSENBERG

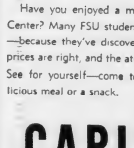
Men's Judiciary

FELLOW STUDENTS:

I wish that I had the opportunity to meet each of you personally and give you the chance to judge for yourself my qualifications for the office I seek. During my campaign I will try to get to as many of you as possible.

I ask for your vote and use to you in return that if elected, I shall do my best to give every time and efforts to fulfill the duties of Men's Judiciary and do the very best that I know how.

Please vote in this important election.



SINCERELY,
BUCKY CANON
Candidate for Men's Judiciary

FELLOW STUDENTS:

With the elections coming up I am sure you are thinking seriously about who you are going to vote for. You probably think a little of judiciary a minor office. Let us keep in mind that the judiciary is responsible for representing and who has violated the rules set up by our campus government. It is for this reason that I ask you to study serious before you choose the people who will serve you on the judiciary.

I can promise that I will do my utmost in serving you on sophomore judiciary. I have worked in the West Hall dorm government and have served on the committee under the Senate

FOR THE RECORD—

A look at a few statistics picked up at random gives a good idea of the progress Florida State has made in sports in the past four years, though it doesn't tell the whole story.

Both the baseball, golf, tennis and track teams still are having finished their dual schedules, the Seminole squads have run up a 73-27 count this year, not including volleyball since Coach Odeneal's squad plays a service and and amateur teams.

It breaks down thus, including only dual or triangular meets: Football 5-5; Basketball 16-9; Swimming Gymnastics 9-0; and in incomplete records: Baseball 10-0; Tennis 7-6, and Track 5-1.

This compares favorably with a 56-39-1 count run up by the Tribe athletic units in the 1952-53 campaign, a 67-39-3-54 and an 80-21 record in 1954-55.

More outstanding and perhaps even more surprising to a good many Seminole fans is the school's record against teams from the Southeastern Conference in the last four years.

Only two teams, baseball and football have losing marks in SEC teams in that time, and overall the Tribe baseball count against SEC squads from 1952 to date, which would be a strong argument for the Seminoles to be given a crack at a membership in the SEC the next two or three years, and we strongly believe they will be.

The Tribe hasn't been in competition with very many other big conferences in the country, but they have done work against Southwest Conference teams, a 5-6 mark against those from the Atlantic Coast Conference, and on the Southern Conference and 14-2 against the Big Ten Conference squads, mainly in baseball.

In the nawly-formed FIBC, with competition presently limited to basketball and baseball, a 19-1 mark in the cage sport and an 11-3 count on the diamond.

All of them up and you find the Seminoles have run 4 victories in the past four years against 117 losses. This doesn't count the major or minor tournaments they've been in.

Let's keep it that way.

FORWARD OR BACKWARDS?—

Statements are that Florida State athletic officials are considering re-scheduling Tampa in 1957, in fact it would appear a certainty at the moment.

There is more than one way of looking at that possibility, but all and all, we believe it would be a move beneficial to FSU's athletic progress.

True, the Seminoles have always been a good drawing card in Tampa, mainly because Tampa fans seem to get a certain joy out of rassing the Seminoles, and the game might mean a profit to the school.

But strictly from the progress point of view, as we mentioned it both Tampa and Stetson were dropped from the few years, as a part of a program to bring big name squads to the Seminole grid schedule.

Both universities are still small schools in the world of athletics and it would seem almost like an admission of defeat in the big-time circles to start scheduling them again.

The big-time program would seem to be off to a good start with such teams as Wake Forest, Auburn, Miami, Georgia, Georgia Tech and Villanova on the docket for the last two seasons and in the near future.

The 1957 home schedule seems to be one of the greatest in the schools' history if it works out, with both Auburn and Miami slated for appearances here, along with Villanova.

We think it would be a definite step backwards to drop Tampa back into the fold, and we ask this question of athletic powers-that-be:

"Is it forward we're going or backward"

Loyola's Jinx On The Line Here Tomorrow

By BOB WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Seminole track squad tries to break the hex put on them when they clash with Loyola in a dual track meet tomorrow night at 7:30 at the Dem school track field.

Unsuccessful in three attempts to conquer Loyola, the Seminoles are resorting to night tactics to break the years of famine from victory

Last year, Loyola drubbed the Seminoles 73-58, capitalizing on wins in the running events to pave their attack.

This year, Coach Mike Long hopes, will be the hex-breaker. Coach Long noted the absence of Loyola's three top point-makers from this year's squad and said, "The meet should be extremely close. We have as good a chance of winning as they."

But the Loyola squad, always strong, though undermanned, has a versatile trio of trackmen this year to main their attack Saturday night.

Most Versatile

Probably the most versatile is Jerry Reap, entered in six dash and field events. Reap is entered in the low hurdles, high hurdles, 440 yd. dash, high jump, broad jump, and the pole vault.

Thus far this year he has recorded his best results in the high hurdles, with a time of 15 seconds flat and the low hurdles, in 25.7.

Dash specialist Erwin Caswell, who is entered in only three events, has successfully mastered the 100, 220, and the mile relay.

His best record this year has been in the 100-yd. dash, which he ran in :09.7. Caswell also holds the FSU-Loyola meet record in the 220 with a time of :21.5.

Sam Acuna emerges as the man the Seminoles will have to best in the field events. Acuna holds the broad jump and the high jump records in the dual meet competition

Last year he leaped 22 feet, 5½, inches in the broad jump and 6 feet, 10 inches in the high jump.

Saturday's meet will mark the first time in FSU history that a track meet has been held in Seminole territory at night. The field events which will launch the night meet start at 7:30.

The Seminoles are risking their 5-1 record against the once-beaten Loyola squad. They have beaten Davidson, Mercer, Mississippi Southern, Georgia, and Georgia Tech, with only a loss to Florida to mar their record.

Don Faulk, FSU's outstanding trainer was formerly connected with the St. Louis Cardinals baseball organization as a trainer.

Gymnasts Defend AAU Title Today

The Florida State Gymkana team began competition today in defense of their N.A.A.U. title at Penn State University in State College, Penn.

The meet will not only determine this year's national champions in gymnastics, but also pick the six members of the United States Olympic Gymnastics team.

There are three members of the FSU squad capable of winning a spot on the United States team, Dr. Jack Miles, winner of the N.A.A.U. all-around title last year; Don Holder, 1952 Olympic team members, and Chirk Cirle, outstanding Freshman gymnast and winner of many all-around titles.

Other possible winners from Florida State in the individual events include Jamile Askmore, N.C.A.A. champion in free ex, co-captain Rosalie Amster, N.C.A.A. champion on the bath bal. Joe Gaske on the parallel bars, Bob Elliot, N.A.A.U. champion on the trampoline and Jim Hanks and Laird Anderson, rope climb.

Coach Hartly Price exclaimed, "The competition this year is far greater than it has ever been in the past, with almost 30 teams from throughout the country vieing for the team championship."

Racketmen Tackle Mercer Tomorrow

Florida State's tennis team faces Mercer this Saturday in hopes of improving their record of 7-6.

The match will get underway at 2:00 p.m. on the varsity courts.

Coach Pritchard will use his ace, Hal Schaus and Shelby Creagh in the two top spots. Lex Hester, Fred Serrett, Frank Bryan, and Charles Nordlinger will round out the team.

Pritchard has not decided who will be used in the doubles.

The Freshmen travelled to Gainesville Tuesday to play the University of Florida, but were rained out after beating them in one match. The Frosh were ahead of the baby Allagators in all but one match when the rain came.

Coach Pritchard said his boys looked sharp and played better than they had all season.

Volleyballers Aid In Rucker Clinic

Coach Bill Odeneal and his Florida State championship volleyball team put on a volleyball exhibition earlier this week at Camp Rucker, Alabama.

All teams in the third army were present for the clinic and included a total of 10 teams.

Members of the squad that parisedh in the clinic were Lyle Lassar, Bernie McCann, Eugene Lewis, John Miller, Roger Clingerman, Felmi Zeko and Bob Nelinma.

The Tribe played exhibition matches with Camp Rucker and Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

FSU's volleyballers swept past Rucker 15-2, and 15-9, and defeated Bragg 15-2, 10-14, 15-5.

Coach Odeneal and Lewis are still in the Alabama camp officiating the volleyball games among the various Army teams.

It has been two weeks the Tribe will defend their national championship at Seattle, Washington in the National Open.

Intramural Swimming On Tap Monday At East Campus Pool

Monday at 7 p.m. in the east campus pool the intramural swimming meet will be held.

Nine fraternities have entered teams and four dorm-independent teams are entered. A number of finals will be held on Monday, but where a heavy entry list predominates, swimmers will compete in qualifying rounds for a final on May 7th.

Members of the FSU swimming team, and the athletic staff will officiate.

Softball

Next week is the final week of the regular season for intramural softball and all teams with rained out games are urged to contact opponents and play off the games before the May 5th deadline.

Championship playoffs in the frat division will be between the high two teams of the two leagues on a double elimination basis. In the dorm division the two high teams play a best 2-out-of-3 game series for the title. Play begins May 7th and continues daily

Results of recent games:

Sigma Nu struck out 9 and Callahan struck out 2. At the end of the regular 7 innings it was 8-8, with Callahan scoring the winning run with one out in the 8th. PDT had winning runs on the bases in the 8th but could not score them.

TC beat LCA 5-0. Schafer allowing LCA 5 hits, but he was tight in the pinches.

SAE beat PKT 8-2 to remain out in front in the American League.

Monday 9 p.m. Florida State's assistant football coach Bob Harbison has been coaching football for eight years. He came to FSU from Indiana in 1948 and has been coaching here ever since.

Baseball coach Danny Litwhiler broke his own school record for the most wins in a season when his baseballers won their 18th against Stetson last Saturday. The old mark was set in 1952 (17-4) and tied in 1953 (17-6).

Seminole Nine Tackles Miami

The Florida State Seminoles war path waits on residents for the big wind from Miami to blow in at eight o'clock tonight at Centennial Field.

Tony Amable, all-round chief for the Tribe will be throwing some left handed lead pellets at the Canes in tonight's encounter.

Probable medicine man for tomorrow afternoon's game at 2nd Campus at 2:30 is Max Long who carries an unmarred 6-0 record into the scrap.

Providing the batting punch for the Hurricanes will be infielders John Matthews and Frank Piccininas who are the only Miami players close to or over the .300 mark.

The Georgia Bulldogs plucked a few feathers from the Seminole war bonnet last Monday night as the boys from the Peach state came out on the long end of a 2-0 score.

Duane Grice proving that the Bulldogs bite was as vicious as its bark, smashed a two run triple in the fifth inning to give Georgia the winning margin.

John Chisholm of Georgia became the final hurler this season to mystify Seminole bats at the same as he allowed but a pair of hits on the Tribe. He gave up five scattered hits.

Rally Fails

A Seminole war cloud appeared in the ninth inning but it failed to materialize when Dick Howser's speed lost a race with the ball from left field.

He was caught and tagged out at second as Stetson's pitcher tried home as he attempted to score on Fred Twomey's double with two out.

Although he lost, Avitable was still top man on the hitless pole with Stetson's Ross Carter and southpaw added 13 K's to his record breaking diamond pace.

Calhoun gave no quarter in the clutch, and held Seminoles to six hits when runners were on base.

Lee Curso, Hower, Bob Rossell and Phil Hurr each reached the initial sack once.

Rain became the virtue over both teams on Tuesday as a very high humidity prevented them from taking the field.

An attempt to replay the washed out game will be made next month when the Tribe journeys to Athens.

Bowling Alley Sets New Open Times

The bowling alley will open at 7 p.m. on Friday and Saturday the remainder of the year, announced Earl Blakely, manager.

This change is due to longer daylight hours and better weather, he said. The 6 p.m. opening will go into effect Monday through Thursday and the closing time will continue at 10 p.m.

Circus Preporotion

Stadium Scene Of Strange Things

By BOB SIMMONS

Strange thinga bave been happening at Doak S. Campbell Stadium for the past week

The whole field looks as if some giant spider had spun a tangle of web on the field; but after a closer look, the web turns out to be a mass of poles, ropes, and auy wires from which pretty young women and muscular young men suspend themselves.

This is an introduction to the Florida State University circus —Flying High.

Flying High was organized eight years ago by Coach Jack Haskins, who came to FSU from the University of Wisconsin Every year since its founding, Flying High has astounded viewers with its talented group, which is as near professional as any group can be.

Once again this year, under the direction of Coaches Jack Haskins and Jim DeCosmo, Flying High will perform at FSU. For three nights, May 3 through 5, Campbell Stadium will echo the music of the "big-top."

The Circus Band, under the direction of Manley Whitcomb, furnishes the mood music during the two hour performance which includes some 23 acts.

Ringmaster Kent Schroedet calls the acts in best circus tradition. Some of the acts that the audience will hear him announce include "The Star Dusters", featuring Faye Moses and Charlie Matthews on the high trapeze with a background of 18 lovely ladies, and "Iron Jaw Wizards", an act making the most of dental stamina

Some other acts are "A Sensational Aerialist", starring beautiful Janet Graff, balancing on the swinging trap, and "Comical Cut-ups And Side-Splitting Maneuvers", with Kent Hearn, Floyd Jordan, Tommy Waits, and Jackie Fortune.

The acts mentioned constitute only a small cross-section of the program offered by Flying High.

The FSU Circus, needless to say, is one of the biggest features in the Big Bend area at this time of the year

Tickets for reserve seating are available to students at Westcott Ticket Booth for 50 cents and student activity coupon number eight.

IMITATIN' EMMETT — Eddy Wycoff and Tommy Waits apply makeup for "Flying High" practice session.

Kappa Alpha Kicks Off Its 'Old South Weekend'

Kappa Alpha will kick off its annual Old South Weekend at 2:30 this afternoon with the traditional parade through Tallahassee, followed by the mock "Declaration of Secession" in front of Bryan Hall.

The parade, complete with horse-drawn surries and wagons, marching units, mounted horsemen, and a "Military Band," will form at the Floridan Hotel and move west on Munroe Street, turn down College Avenue, and terminate at Bryan Hall

Kappa Alpha members will parade in full Confederate Army uniforms or southern gentlemen costumes, and their dates will be wearing hoop skirts, and carrying parssols to conform with the Old South theme.

This year, however, KA National Headquarters has asked its 77 chapters, with whom the parade and mock secession is an annual event, to dedicate the weekend to the four ex-Confederate soldiers who founded the fraternity in 1865, and as an memorial to KA's spiritual founder and leader, Robert E. Lee.

With this in mind, the secession ceremony wil ltake on a new aspect, that of "American first, Southerner second"

The Kappa Alpha Rebellion Ball will be from 9-12 tonight at the Woman's Club, preceeded by a buffet dinner in the chapter house

Saturday the troops and their ladies will spend the day at Lake Mystic, and return to the chapter house that night for a "South Sea Isle" party.

Sigma Chi

Florida State's chapter of Sigma Chi will be host this weekend to the First Annual Southeastern and Florida Bi-Provence Conference.

The Conference will be composed of representives from chapters throughout the states of Alabama, Georgia, and Florida.

There will be discussions on fraternity values as well as instruction on chapter administration and functions. The meetings and discussions will be climazed by a banquet on Saturday night

Main speakers for the conference are Gardner B Allen, National Headquarters, Grand Officer, William Wade, Southeastern Provence, Grand Preator; and Marvin E. Ebelmesser Florida Provence, Grend Preator.

Over-all conference chairman is Bob Johnson.

Newly elected SX officers for the coming year are: Bobby Temple, president; Bruce Jacob, vice-president, Al Scott, recording secretary; Frank Sattler, correspondina secretary; Lynn Wollschlager, sergeant-at-arms, Bob Moren, associate editor; Rufus Jenning, historian, Niles Ray, treasurer; Bill Phillips, manager, Jim Kauffman, pledge Trainer, Art Moore, rush chairman.

Jim Kauffman received the "Outstanding Athlete Award", and Graham Carothers was named "The Man Who Most Exemplifies the Ideals of Sigma Chi."

Honor

ADPIS and the CHI OS had a joint Honor Emphasis meeting recently. Tom Woods was the main speaker. Woods, Dr. Ellis, assistant professor of Mathematics and Polly Swain, Honor Court representative, were guest of the ADPIS for dinner.

Mrs. G. E. Lewis, Gamma alum of Chi O, was elected "Florida Mother of the Year." She will go to Washinaton to participate in the "National Mother of the Year" contest.

Martha Grizzard, Chi O president, was selected to be a member of the All Star Basketball team.

AXO

Alpha Chis from all over Florida gathered for their annual State Day in Jacksonville last Saturday The FSU chapter received the Scholarship and Fraternity Education cups.

Phi Delts and DGs held a charity drive to aid the Occupational Therapy organization.

ZTAs national vice president, Mrs Harold W Kerr of Detroit, spent three days with the sorority last week A reception was given in her honor at the house.

New Phi Tau pledges are Al Zyla, Mike Kopytchak and Tom Totler.

Sigma Nu brothers and pledges are building a patio in back of the chapter house. The SNs recently serenaded Marilyn Moore, Betty Lou King, and Angie Howell.

Sigma Nu

The Sigma Nu's entertained the Alpha Chi Omegas with a watermelon cut Wednesday night at the Sigma Nu house.

Group Sponsors Social Shop For Greeks, Dorms

An effort to bring about better social relationships between fraternities, sororities and dormitories will be launched Monday.

The departments of physical education and recreation will sposor a two-night clinic or workship in which students who attend will be instructed in better ways of presenting parties and other social functions

Officials said one clinic will be held Monday night from 7 to 9 in Longmire Auditorium for fraternities and sororities.

Tuesday night instruction will be for dormitories, and will be held at the same time and place.

Heading the arrangements will be Dr. Catherine Allen, chairman of undergraduate women's program in physical education-recreation at New York University.

Dr. Allen is judged one of the most outstanding social recreation leaders in the country and has gained international recognition in her field, officials concluded.

tary of State.

I urge you all to strengthen Florida State University and its government by coming out and voting.

SINCERELY,
TOM PENDREY

DEAR STUDENTS:

During my first year at Florida State, I have developed a great interest 'n the school court system. My interest in serving on Sophomore Judiciary is quite sincere.

In the past I have been connected with organizations whose main objectives were along the lines of honor and service It is my desire to continue in that type of activity here.

Your help and support will be greatly appreciated

SINCERELY,
BOB SALTZ

FUTURE SOPHOMORES:

In going to the polls next Tuesday you will not only vote for your and my class officers, you will also vote for offices of the various courts in student government.

In the light of past experiences it has been proven that these judicial offices are also very important.

I am seeking one of these important judicial posts—Sophomore Men's Judiciary. I also feel qualified to hold it It is for this reason I am asking for both your support and vote

CHARLIE SIZER

Wom. Judiciary

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS,

I am seeking the office of Sophomore Representative to Women's Judiciary in the comina election on May 1, 1956.

I am fully aware of the importance of this office and its responsibilities in serving our university. I also understand that the ultimate goal of this position, keeping hiah standards and thoughts, must be maintained.

I am eager to serve in this capacity, and if elected will consider it both an honor and privilege to serve you on Women's Judiciary

SINCERELY YOURS
ANN DUNCAN

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS,

It's campaigning time again, and the "poster storm" has hit the campus. I know you've all probably seen the black posters with the yellow letters which say "Jane Salley for Saphamore Judiciary!" Well, that's me!

Seriously, I think that Judiciary is one of the most important courts in our government. I'm interested in tha job and will work very hard if you elect me to serve you. When you vote, don't forget Jane Salley.

VERY SINCERELY,
JANE SALLEY

DEAR FUTURE SOPHOMORES,

Because the members of Judiciary must be impartial, just, and have the time to devote to this office, it is important that you carefully consider your candidates for this position.

I feel that I fulfill these qualifications, and I would appreciate your support in the comina elections.

Thank you.

SINCERELY,
JANE TRIMBLE

Integrity Is Termed Primary Requisite Of Good Teachers

Integrity—"the combination of uprightness and sincerity"—is the most important and fundamental quality of a teacher, the Dean Emeritus of the College of Arts and Sciences said Tuesday.

Dr. William G. Dodd, speaking at an English department program bonoring Miss Sara Blanding, Dr. William H. Rogers and Dr. Hazel Stevenson, listed what he termed "four requisites of a good teacher."

He told the retiring faculty members, students, and English professors that good teaching "has so many intangibles in it that it is exceedingly difficult to define with much precision"

Reaches Student

The first requisite of a good teacher, Dr. Dodd said to his Westminster House audience, is that he must reach his students. "This is so obvious it calls for no comment; for if he cannot reach them he fails before he begins"

Secondly, be stated, a teacher must be a scholar "How much scholarship must the good teacher have? When we stop to think of it, it is surprising bow little is needed to teach the ordinary undergraduate course

"But what the teacher needs for such instruction is by no means the measure of what he needs for himself For he needs and must have the self-assurance and self-confidence that only broad learning can give him . . Of one thing, be may be sure: be cannot even begin to know enough until he can stand before his students and, if necessary, say without bluff or embarrassment, 'I don't know.'"

The speaker continued that "know-how" is the third necessary factor. "By this I do not mean 'methods' as that term generally is used," he said. These can become too mechanical. "An ounce of sparkle and spontaneity in the classroom is worth a pound of pre-fabricated methodology."

Dr Dodd said that the three qualities he had mentioned were concerned with the "doing" of teaching. But, be added, there is a "being" side also A good teacher, he said, must first of all "be something.

"And if be wants to reach his students he bad better be something positive"

Integrity

The best important thing a teacher can be, be explained, is a person of integrity. Th[illegible] he stated, "is very simply [illegible] bination of uprightness a[illegible] cerity . I wish only [illegible] here that integrity imp[illegible] teachers to do an hones[illegible] job of teaching for the sake of the job itself and not in order [illegible] show off or to advance ourselves professionally."

The past-dean said "If [illegible] qualities of abaundant schola[illegible] animation in the classroom a[illegible] high integrity, a teacher can s[illegible] attractive personal qualit[illegible] a culture something broad[illegible] his specific field of study [illegible] mands, be is the kind of teacher who can add lustre [illegible] own achievements, and give [illegible] to the department to which he belongs."

Coffee Hour Features India Music, Dance

A program of South India classical music and native dances is to be featured at the English Coffee Hour today at 4 p.m. in the Westminster House.

A post doctorate in organic chemistry from Madras, India, Dr Krishna Rabindran will explain the string music, songs, and dances, while Mrs Rabindran, also of India, will demonstrate.

Mrs. Rabindran, a graduate from Punjab where she received degrees in music and political science, plans to accompany herself on a "tambura", a string instrument native to India She has prepared in advance tape recordings to which she will dance

Purely Melodic Art

According to Dr. Rabindran, who obtained his BS Tech and PhD from the University of Bombay, the classical music of India is purely melodic art which stresses the singing with musical instrumentation used as a background.

Mrs. Rabindran will sing varna, which is sung at the beginning of a concert, kriti, a musical composition; and sanskrit, which is in four different sagas.

The three dances, which Dr. Rabindran explains are a means of conveying ideas and emotions through the use of symbols, body gestures, and facial expressions, to be performed are "Abhinaya", the story of Krishna and the gopis, "Alarippu", invocatory exercises; and "Bharata Nalya", which means India dancing

Notre Dame

The Rabindrans plan to go to Notre Dame in September bringing to a conclusion a year's stay here.

After more study there, they will return to India where the doctor will teach with the faculty to do research.

GLORIFIED UKELELE — Today's Coffee Hour program will feature Dr. and Mrs. Krishna Rabindran, of India Mrs. Rabindran will play the tambura and sing during first part of program, then dance to recorded music. Krishna, a post-doctoral student in chemistry, will narrate.

First Semester's Flambeau Listed As All-American

Highest Rating Is Received For First Time Since 1932

The Florida Flambeau received this week an All-American rating for its first semester. It was the first time any Flambeau had been so judged in 24 years.

Ordering was made by G. D. Gibert of the Associated College Press, who rated all newscollege dailies and semi- and once-weekly papers. Flambeau Editor Jaclyn Woods stated in comment, said she was delighted with the news.

"I feel my comment should reflect the dignity and maturity with the Flambeau has strived to maintain throughout the year," she said in her formal statement.

"I should express the joy of the staff in seeing their work appreciated 30 hours per week, combined for its off-campus value. It should be a phrase of generous journalistic intellect therefore my comment is, 'HOOPEE!'"

Others Deserving

Editor Woods said that while the Flambeau has been the recipient of All-American rating at other times in the past years of "near-misses", it was also deserved this year.

The kind of staff we've had this year, miss the likes of which she said, "They tried, made it, and they deserve every-earned credit that goes with the rating."

Flambeau editor-to-be Oscar Gibbons said he was pleased that the paper was recognized for the high quality that it and that he expects next year to be "the even better" than this year's.

Gratified

Advisor of Publications Reid Montgomery said he was gratified by the year the staff had as hoped it would "set a tradition for future years."

Editor Hiebert gave especial praises in his rating of this year's Flambeau to the editorial staff. Let me say that by perhaps the best editorial-feature page that I have read lately," he noted.

He also gave high ratings to the coverage features and layout and photography.

Senate, Judicial, Class Elections Are Held Today

Elections Chiefs Release Facts On Vote Methods

By FLAMBEAU STAFF

Surprise! You thought we'd run a BIG story on elections, didn't you? But 120 names, those of the candidates, are too many to repeat. Get them from the posters, and from the ballot when you vote.

Who can vote? Freshmen vote on next year's sophomore offices, sophomores on junior offices, and juniors on senior offices. All students currently enrolled can vote on candidates for judiciary, traffic court, and Honor Court.

Where to vote: Polling places will be located at the Student Center and in Westcott Building.

When to vote: Polls will be open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

How to vote: Bring your ID card. The poll workers will have to punch it.

The Ballots: Ballots will be counted by IBM machines. Mark them with a special pencil and don't fold them.

A Referendum: Voting will be taken on a constitutional amendment to clear up certain technicalities relating to reapportionment of the Student Senate.

Results: Will be posted about 9:30 in the education buildings, according to Betty Willmon, secretary of elections.

'Ugly' Contest Starts Tomorrow

Alpha Tau Omega service fraternity's "Ugly Man" contest begins here tomorrow.

The contest, the third to be held in Florida State University, is aimed at selecting the "ugliest" man here.

Organizations, fraternities, sororities and dormitories have submitted entries. Deadline for submission of entries has been extended through Friday.

Students may vote on the entries they consider ugliest judged by photographs which will be displayed at the polling places, sponsors said. Voting will be at the Westcott Building, the Student Center and Dormitory Club.

Selection of the ugliest man on campus will be judged on a penny a vote basis. Every five dollar bill will count double, according to David Harris, chairman.

Delta Tau Delta and Alpha Pi have won the trophy for the past two years. The contest closes May 9.

PHI ETA SIGMA MEETS TONIGHT

Phi Eta Sigma, freshman men's honor group, will meet tonight in the Westcott Building.

University President Doak S. Campbell will speak to the 78 members who have maintained a B or better average.

Estes Kefauver Talk Slated Here Friday

Begins 9 A.M. Amphitheatre

Senator Estes Kefauver, running hard for the Democratic presidential nomination, will speak on campus Friday morning.

His speech will begin at 9 a.m. in the Music Amphitheater, under the sponsorship of the Florida State University Politics Club.

Kefauver, now stumping the north Florida area, will arrive on campus Thursday night, spokesmen of the politics club said.

The senator, best known for his committee investigation of organized crime in the nation will speak Thursday night at the Leon County Courthouse after having dinner with the local chapter of his fraternity, Kappa Sigma.

Kefauver will meet with students after his Friday morning speech, said Politics Club members.

Harold Lambert, president of the politics club, will introduce Kefauver. Lambert said efforts are being made to organize Kefauver boosters.

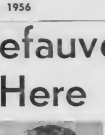
Kefauver is concentrating his campaign for the Democratic presidential primaries. Florida's new presidential primary law makes the state more worth while campaigning in, but political science department members have said.

Kefauver sought the nomination in 1952 but lost to the "draft Stevenson" movement.

Some political observers theorize that his recent defeats in New Hampshire and Minnesota primaries give him a better chance to edge out Stevenson at the convention this summer.

Joanos Wins Balfour Award

Jimmy Joanos, Florida State University Senior, has been named winner of the coveted Balfour award of Sigma Chi fraternity for outstanding campus service.



The award is given annually to the member of the fraternity who is elected as the outstanding undergraduate in his province. He is chosen on the basis of "scholarship, personality, campus activities and fraternity service."

Winners are awarded keys and scrolls in recognition of their achievement.

Joanos was president of Sigma Chi fraternity at FSU, received the award for a long list of accomplishments.

They included his presidency of the Florida Student Council, student body vice-president, president of Omicron Delta Kappa, president of the freshman class, award for highest grade-point scholarship, student senator, membership in Arnold Air Society, membership in Who's Who and the FSU Hall of Fame.

Balfour award for the southeastern province was won by Samuel W. Van Leer of Georgia Tech who compiled an extensive list of major activities.

Bootstrapper Makes Phi Beta Kappa

A 23 year-old Air Force master sergeant was inducted into Phi Beta Kappa here Friday as the first 'Bootstrap' student to achieve this honor.

The highest scholastic honor was conferred on M.Sgt. Clarence E. Vorelgesang now stationed at Moody Air Force Base at Valdosta, Georgia. He began his off-campus bootstrap studies in June, 1952, shortly after being assigned to the base

Piano, Voice Events

Music Students Perform Today

The School of Music student recitals this afternoon will present both vocal and instrumental performances.

Starting out at 3 p.m. Campus Broadway will play Mendelssohn's piano Prelude and Fugue in E Minor. Audrey Blomgren will follow with Wieniawski's Second Concerte in D Minor on the violin, and Benjamin Prewitt will play Schumann's piano Concerto in A Minor, 1st movement.

A percussion ensemble, composed and directed by Dr Robert L. Briggs, will complete the first recital.

Beginning at 4, the Bach-Busoni "Chaconne" will be performed by Daniell Rosenquin on the piano, followed by Dorothea James playing Edvard Lalo's violin rondo 'Symphonie Espanol ' Sheldon Torn will then sing "Adieu et Reve" by Faure and 'La Belle Taste au Miel', an old Provencal song. Robert Leeb will conclude the program with Reuba's Sonata on the 94th Psalm, 1st movement, on the organ.

Following the recitals, the Music Educators National Conference will have a coffee honoring their deleates from the nation group. Coffee and cookies will be on sale in the first floor hallway at 3:45.

OGBURN LEAVES FOR CHICAGO

Dr. William F. Ogburn, who has been visiting professor of sociology the last three years left Sunday for Chicago.

The sociologist said he has to leave Tallahassee so that he can get down to some concentrated work on a sociology textbook he is writing with Dr. Meyer F. Nimkoff, head of the sociology department.

Called 'Sociology,' the book was first published in 1940 and is still widely used in colleges and universities. The co-authors claim their revision of the text book amounts to stating anes-

Vets Meet To Choose Heads

Election of officers for the fall semester will keynote tomorrow's Veteran's Club meeting announced acting president Jerome Bernstein.

"The meeting, he continued, "which will be held in Room 120 Geology at 8:30 p.m. will choose the first elections held under the club's constitution."

He added that the club's membership has almost doubled since the first meeting was held two months ago, and that "we are very hopeful of attaining a membership of seventy hundred by the end of the fall semester next year."

When asked about the club's activities on campus and the Student Educators National Conference at the Student Center last Saturday, Bernstein said that the club hopes to have more resources and other activities next year.

He also mentioned that the club is very interested in intramiseral sports and applauded the freshman class for sponsoring the recent "Sing Song".

FSU OFFICIALS ELECTED TO OFFICES

Two Florida State officials were elected officers at the annual associations of university administrative personnel.

Dr. A. B. Martin, FSU vice-president, was elected vice-president of the Florida Association of Colleges and Universities.

Charles Culler, registrar, was also elected first president of the Florida Association of College Registrars and Admission Officers.

23 Acts In Two-Hour Show

CIRCUS COMES TO TOWN STARTING THURSDAY

By ARLIEDA RIES

The circus has come to town, or at least to Campbell Stadium for three performances starting Thursday at 8 p.m.

Florida State University's renowned "Flying High" will present 23 acts in a fast-moving two hour show with an infinite variety of performances.

Under the co-directorship of Jack Haskins and Jim DeCosmo such events as trapeze acts, hand balancing a "live" animal act, comic routines, iron jaw trampoline, a western act, tumbling, cloud swing, and a flying act are included in the program.

Tickets

Tickets are available at the Westcott ticket office where students may get reserved seats for 50 cents and coupon number eight from the activity book.

According to Mrs. Kathryn Vernon, Saturday tickets are "pretty well gone, but there are still good seats left for Thursday and Friday performances." She warns that "students should not wait for the day of the event to buy tickets because they are going fast."

According to Coach Haskins certain nights have been set aside for different groups. Thursday townspeople are invited, while Friday is for high school students, and Saturday is for alumnae fraternities and sorrorities.

"Anyone though may come any night" continues Haskins, to watch Rittmaster Kent Schroeder and almost 300 students perform.

WHEE!—Charlie Matthews and Faye Moses go through trapeze act.

After the Flying High overture the program begins with trapeze.

Another unusual trapeze act Ballerinas of the Revolving Trapeze," which involves four women on a revolving crossbar features Faye Moses and Charlie Matthews, using a background of 18 women, doing a continuous iron jaw and trapeze routine.

TOPSY-TURVY—John Mabee makes attempt at catching Jackie Fortune As best as can be determined, picture is right-side-up.

"Comical Cut-ups and Side-splitting Maneuvers" features Ken Hearn in a comic routine on the trampoline, while "Jungle Fantasy" stars Les Childs in a "Jungle" thrilling performance. Skating and cycling exhibitions, entitled "Wheels A Rollin' are designed to keep students, faculty, townspeople, and visitors on the edges of their seats.

Rodeo

A new type of act has been added to this year's list of events — a rodeo routine with rope spinning and whip cracking by Les Childs and Fred Burkhart are featured in this event.

One of the most unusual acts this year is Faye Moses' "Cloud Dancing." Miss Moses who is billed as "Queen of the Clouds," is the only known woman to perform this type of act without the aid of loops.

Probably one of the most colorful displays is entitled "A Symphony in White" which features 12 women each night on the Spanish web.

Adagio

A traditional feature is the quartette adagio, this year called "Sophistication." Another tradition is the finale, termed the "Triple DeCosmo" starring Gail Hanshaw, Arlene Schmitt, Jackie Fortune, Ken Hearn, John Mabee, and Leon Dewey.

An unusual aspect of the circus is the fact that the students not only perform but also make costumes, scenery, props, and advertise. They do "everything but the music" comments Coach Haskins.

Along the line of music, a specially selected band stays under the direction of Manley Whitcomb. Musical arranging and conducting is done by Charlie Carter.

"All-Campus" Is Best

With the banner still before our eyes, "All-American", it is hard to make an unbiased review of the honor which, having been gained, tumbles away the rationalizations of the past. There is yet another honor, even greater, which successive staffs have fought to obtain—the respect of the students on this campus.

It goes without saying that the best honors are those at home, and without them, the others are somewhat shallow. While the Associated Collegiate Press judges serve as an impartial audience, the many partial audiences of a University cannot be overlooked, even though all cannot always be satisfied.

The editor of any publication usually catches the flame and the flowers on any issue, but much more of the credit belongs to the staff—the reporters, copy editors, proof-readers, advertising and business staffs, photographers—all of whom are seldom celebrated for anything except mistakes.

Campus honoraries rarely take notice of people who spend the better part of their college lives behind a typewriter or desk in Longmire, commenting that they're "too narrow in their activities." Yet unlike other organizations on this campus, the publications require even more of a student's time then do sororities and fraternities, a fact which some will find hard to believe.

It is for these reasons that the editor makes the following request once more—that students read the masthead and pass a word of congratulations to the staff, letting them know they're "All-Campus" as well as "All-American."

'Til The End Of Time

We heard this one the other day, and thought it worth repeating—

Ced-About-The-Campus applying for an ed in the Flambeau: "Only 18 more shopping days until final exams."

Introducing Arnold

We have often been tempted to introduce "Arnold" to the FSU student body, but only recently did our budget allow us to do so.

Today for the first time, he appears in the Flambeau with some weighty intellectual problem which we feel has a home on this campus. Somewhat more of a bookworm than "Little Man", he sit mainly to have a suave, cosmopolitan outlook on the humen-inanities of the liberel (end extracurriculer) arts.

If the student body takes to Arnold, we'll keep him en with "Little Man" for next year.

Farmer In The Dell...

Can envbody tell us why President Eisenhower, who said he tried not to let political considerations enter into his veto of the farm bill, went to extravagant efforts to "explain" his decision to the public?

We think the little plev should be titled "When Is a Politician Not A Politician?" or "A Rose By Any Other Name . . . ."

Suggestion Ironic

There is a strong odor of irony in the suggestion of Florida Senator George Smathers that the Supreme Court be "taken out of the political arena."

"The Supreme Court," Smathers declared, "should not be a refuge for appointees drawn from the ranks of politicians, professors or friends of the influential."

He hes proposed that five years of judicial experience be a requisite for service on the Supreme Court. Only one of the present nine justices would qualify: Sherman Minton.

Justices Harlan and Bleck have had courtroom experience—but what of the tothers? Frankfurter was a professor of law at Harvard, and a most able professor at that; Douglas was likewise a professor and head of the Securities and Exchenge commission.

Justice Clerk was former attorney general. Justice Stanley Reed was solicitor-general, first assistant to the attorney general.

Earl Warren was governor of California. He is the most often criticized appointment but he has served well. Mr. Justice Burton likewise lacks ectuel courtroom experience.

Bu: so did one of the greatest Chief Justices of them all, Joh n Marshall!

Cuurtroom experience is not the primary qualification. The justices do not preside over trials nor do they suffer through the hustonics of trial lawyers. Their function is to sit apart from the tumult of politics and conside the law—the Constution—the theories—of our government.

According to the Smathers proposal, not even so eminent a scholar as Roscoe Pound, dean of the Harvard Law School, could serve on our Supreme Court.

We are afreid that the Smathers suggestion is meant more as a political attack upon the Court than as a helpful, well-thought out proposal. The Court, Sen. Smathers and numerous dissidents to the contrary notwithstanding, ruled on law and the Constitution in throwing out segregation.

Had the Court thought of the political implications of their decision they might have avoided the ruling, for the hysterics that have followed the solemn deliberations have surely cost the country a hard price.

It is true that from time to time people who are not of the highest caliber are appointed to the Supreme Court. This is also true of the United States Senate, or of any other governmental body.

Men are not divine. They can make mistakes. They can not be perfect.

This reasoning has been used to attack the Court; to negete its desegregetion rulings. But in answer, we inquire whether any government can exist if it does not establish and achere to an orderly procedure.

The Supreme Court's power of judicial review over stete and federal actions is perhaps the most essential element in our nation's orderly procedure. We are appalled by the attacks that ere made upon it, particularly when they are committed by a senator from our own state.

Letters To The Editor

The FLORIDA FLAMBEAU welcomes letters to the editor on any topic, and provides this space for student opinion. The letters do not have to coincide with the views of the paper, but must be in good taste. Unsigned letters will not be printed, and names will not be withheld except in cases where the reasons are deemed adequate by the editor.

New Rating

TO THE EDITOR:

Receipt of the coveted "All America" rating — the Pulitzer Prize of collegiate newspapers — is a tribute to the initiative, ambition and perseverance of the entire Flambeau staff.

Craftsmanship is e varying factor and readmire without the above three. The reward, in terms of basic publicity and good will goes towards the institution and its student body throughout the whole nation, readily relieves the small pressures and disappointments inherent in the routine necessary in producing a one newspaper phrasing of a multitude of readers, displeasing to another multitude, or basically, all things to all readers.

The Flambeau outstripped competition which by the nature of the game should have had it all over them. College newspapers which receive full support from the management by virtue of close supervision by "professionals" fall by the wayside.

These newspapers were the ways of all rural correspondent composites, and the grand award was open to any aspiring amateurs, suided only by the abilities of the more proficient amateurs around them.

It should be reasonable to expect that a fervent consideration is forthcoming from the professional world lurking just beyond the college eaves.

Tampa Tribune Slips In Freedom Defense

The Dissenter

By MARTIN DYCKMAN
THE TAMPA TRIBUNE,

which has been noted for its defense of intellectual freedom, slipped a few steps down from its pedestal the other day.

The newspaper editorialized that Princeton University students who had listened to e speech by Alger Hiss should stuck to bonfires and pesty raids.

Hiss was convicted of lying thet he had not given State Department secrets to the Communists.

"Under the circumstances, It is difficult to understand eny non-Communist American organization inviting Hiss as a guest speaker," the Tribune said. "And probably none would except e college campus in the Spring, as we all know, college bove are wont to rad the gerls' dorms, build bonfires in the streets or throw beer cans at the cops just fo. the heek of it.

"We'll take the charitable view that the Hiss invitation was just another way of kicking off the Winter-garment dance season.

"Nonetheless, the eight of a proven traitor being applauded on the campus of a respected university is a little too much for our stomach We'd prefer to see the boys stick to bonfires and panty raids."

I WONDER just where the Tribune get its information about the Spriteltime habits of College men. From its own tadelines? bear cans, bonfires, and panty raids are the exception rather than the rule. Editorial analogy cannot be properly stretched as far as the Tribune stretched it. Unfortunately, Florida has no law relating to group libel—if she did, the Tribune could be aured by any hatefully outraged student.

The Tribune, as aside from the real issue is there anything incompatible with the stature of a Princeton University that the debating club should invite Alger Hiss to speak on "The meaning of Geneva?"

I think not.

If we were to limit our educational pursuits to those viewpoints with wnich we egree: if we were to hear speak only those whom we liked; if we were to share the intellectual accomplishments of only those with high moral character; if we were to learn the bonus of our enemies -as some would have us do, there would be no use in our studying anything at all.

THE TAMPA TRIBUNE to the contrary notwithstanding, it is still debatable whether Hiss is a traitor, or, considering his guilt, that he is unrepentant of past actions. Let even his guilt be debatable. Let us suppose that he is the worst of ell persons—that he ought be eminently qualified to discuss the mtaning of the Geneva conference. I do not profess to know whether he is qualified or not

WHAT HE SAID at Princeton might be more talze. but it is essential in education that we learn to question and to disclose the untrulu. We cannot do this by reading the books end hearing the lectures of only those who speak the "truth."

I once read a book by Louis Budenz, a former high Communist official. Budenz recanted the party's wrongdoings and, Ukisam, one being as bad as the other in my mind. But Budenz' implications of the Communist organization was clear and informative—just as Hiss' was. I have studied, accurate Had I pooualy avoided this book because of his anti-red editorial character; I would lack today some of essential knowledge.

THE TAMPA TRIBUNE deplored McCarthy and his blanket implications of treason in colleges. The same is deplored negatively to suggestions that teaching of "socialism" on the universities be investigated. In view of its past position, one it a loo to exploit the editorial on the Hiss speech.

Capers On The Campai

A GRAVE PROBLEM

PULLMAN, Wash.—(ACP)—This story which took place in Utah popped up in the paper of the Washington State College Daily Evergreen:

"If you found two tombstones on your lawn, you'd probably conclude prankisters had flushed them from a nearby cemetery — right?

That's what a Provo, Utah, resident thought and so did the local police But they were wrong. They checked and the owners of the cemetery said no tombstones were missing.

Painstaking investigation finally disclosed a group of students had needed more weight in their trusty Ford, a trip through deep snow. They borrowed the tombstones from a relative's monument firm and more friends showed up for the last trip that was needed. The result — too much weight. So over-board went the tombstones . . . on the neighbor's lawn."

NO CLOCK NEEDED

TEMPE, Ariz.—(ACP)—The following is an excerpt from this one concerning e Tress professor in its "On Other Campuses" column:

"A chemistry professor at a local college needs no clock by which to time his lectures He merely watches eye balls. At a quarter after, when he is only a few, at a quarter to, there is a solid line of white eyeballs with little dots at the top watching the clock. The professor explains it this way: "The more white eyeballs, the sharper it is to hold their attention.

It seems that some profs should also be able to tell time by the size of the bloodshot eyelids The lower the lids, the closer to the end of the hour. But, of course, the fellow who falls asleep during the first five minutes of the hour would foul up that system.

Wandering With Wiljohn

Stories Associate AAUP With Reds

Of All Things

(Editor's Note: As some students have taken "Of All Things" seriously at times, we should like to point out that columnist Johnson is being satiric when he implies that students should not criticize the Democratic party.

In particular for pointing the finger — other papers publish the harsh indictments of the AAUP. Which brings up the second article.

THIS ONE was printed in the Florida Times-Union under the banner, "Pursuit of Academic Freedom Leads Professors to Strange Directions," and is written by Caleb J. King. It is one of the regular columns for that paper. The article is referred to en AAUP convention which held that "a professor should not be fired for being a member of the Communist party or invoking the fifth amendment in response to questions concerning subversive activities . . . to quote Mr. King:

He goes on to say that the action AAUP means some questions . . . First, if the 39 000 American university professors think they should be allowed to continue teaching in our educational system while holding membership in the Community Party . . . to me must assume that they believe in the aims and purposes of that organization.

He adds later in the article that the AAUP is the radical element of the teaching profession. It was not one of the more loyal citizens in America than the great majority of teachers." It was not Mr. King to edd that little also. At a quarter after, the hour the AAUP is "radical," time to look duty for the students here. Before we know it we will be communiste . . .

About our only comment is to echo e statement made at the Democrat editor after the FSU professor had written a letter criticizing the anti-AAUP article in the Democrat. He ed. The editor said he has a "higher regard" for the professors of America than that the writer of the article That we submit, is e mild way of putting it.

Meet The Man At The Switchboard

By WILJOHN

YOU HAVE never noticed that at one end of Westcott Auditorium there is a tremendous cavern. It is known as a stage. It is a very large stage and there are myriad intricate gadgets and paraphernalia to make this stage function in a civilized manner. Most of this apparatus comes to a focus at the switchboard, a switchboard, where stands a big and sensitive man. He is not the Village Smithy His name is Hall. Mr. Poe and they call him Hal.

Hal has been in the month of September, 1956, as a full time assistant to Chalse Palmer of the Speech Department. He is now the Stage Manager and Technical Director for Westcott Auditorium. While not being the actual performer of the many arrangements for most of the shows seen there, he is still the man who worked the lights for such shows as Les Brown, Anita Bruzell, "Peer Gynt," New Moon and the United States Marine Band.

HAL WAS BORN in Cincinnatti, Ohio, on May 21st 1922. He went to high school in La Porte, Indiana, where his family had moved later in his life. Here he was ective in many of his school's dramatic activities. His dad, all this time, was e CPA and his mother, with five other kids in the house, stayed at home. Hal was the oldest of the children, of which there are only three now living —two sisters and a brother.

He attended Beloit, College in Beloit, Wisconsin, where his B.A. from that institution was active in the Beloit Summer Stock Co., where he had speaking roles in eight out of the nine plays done there one summer He then came to FSU to work on his M.A. Hal's primary duties complete work on by the end of this summer.

Most of the students reading this will remember Hal from the days when he was a big wheel in several of the Speech Department plays. He took parts in "Dear Brutus," "Cradle, Beautiful People, and Cocktail Party. Then he was a bit role, prevented him from taking part in any of the productions

FUTURE PLANS for Hal are rather vague at the moment. He would like to work in educational theatre and combine teaching with directing and stage management.

All this dramatic interest comes as no surprise to anyone who is et all familiar with Hal's family. They have always been very active in Little Theatre productions and dramatic activities of all sorts. In fact, "Time Out For Virginia" recently had written in his home town and, out of the six member cast, five members were relatives of Hal.

Hal' is married, and he and his wife Virginia have a son, Christopher Mike who is a dad seems to be one of the most active dads around. He mors than willina to sit down with you and tell you e, no very long stories about his future president. Hal mentions with pride, who at a tender ty-four. while they were both taking parts in "Life With Father." In fact, Hal played the part of Clarence and she played the lone female. They married just before Hal came here to FSU. At present, Virginia is substituting, and is a teach, is busy staying at home and being a mommy to the boy They haven't decided yet whether to have four or six children. "Just in round numbers," says Hal.

Dohnanyi Featured In Final Concert

In The Wings

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN
THE UNIVERSITY Symphony wrapped things up for the season in the finest and final concert Friday night in Westcott. It was an eventful occasion. Dr. Dohnanyi was the featured soloist.

Dohnanyi played Mozart's C Major Piano Concerto, K 503, and interpreted his own cadenza for the second of the expert job of accompanying, and paved more attention to detail and dynamics than is had done in any of the other concerts. Dohnanyi, who is scarcely be said, still has plenty of power, and he played with youthful vieor and authority The audience inasied on an encore After the concerto and he complied, playing Mozart's Turkish Rondo.

The orchestra continued alone after intermission and opened with Britten's Soures Musicales, based on Rossini melodies. Under Robert Sedore's deft leadership, the orchestra played cleanly and brilliantly. The performances and that of the concerto accompaniment stand out in my memory as high-water marks for the year.

The concluding piece was Rimsky-Korsakoff's Russian Easter Overture, a work thet I find rather pompous and banal. Perhaps the orchestra did too: at any rate there was less precision than there had been in the earlier pieces.

In retrospect, this was a fruitful year. The number of regular concerts was doubled, and student soloists, for the first time, were given an opportunity to appear with the orchestra. For the orchestra players, though, things are scarcely beginning There and four-hour rehearsals are on tap every night this week for Carmen, which opens in ol bany Thursday nieht. After another week's polishing, Bizet's chef d'oeuvre will be presented on campus May'11 and 12.

SOME OF FSU'S better pianists have been picking up hands and orchestre engagements of late Bill Revenaugh won the Tampa Symphony Auditions this year and will play the "Emperor" with them next season.

Jim Stafford is the state winner in the National Federation of Music Clubs competition. Indirectly as a result of this, he has been signed to appear with the Orchestra in Tampe, and Clearwater organizetas plan to have him play the Tschaikovsky B minor Concerto.

Earlier this year Allen Anderson plsyed the Beethoven C minor Concerto with the Fort Lauderdale Symphony, and from all reports did e fine job.

SEVERAL WEEKS ago I was browsing in a Sarasota record shop, listening to Beethoven, Mozart, and some modern jazz recordings when the salesgirl, who was evidently a bit bored, began listening to, accosted me.

"Would you like a free copy of 'Elvis Presley's latest?" she asked blandly

I grinned, said it was still too expensive, and walked out.

KNOW YOUR PROF

BATON ROUGE, LA.—(ACP)—Having trouble with English? Consider the plight of this fellow as reported in the LSU Daily Reveille: "The story comes originally from the Daily Texan:

A student at the University of Texas named Penn Barnett had a rather shaking experience the other day. Barnett answered the phone one morning and the voice on the other end asked: "May I speak to Penn Barnett?"

"I'm me," Bernet mumbled. "It's I," corrected the voice. "Me, he, she what's the difference?" Barnett retorted.

Silence. Then the voice came over the wire again.

"Barnett, this is your English instructor. I phoned to remind you of the makeup quiz this week."

535 FOR FOXX?—

Hall of Famer Jimmy Foxx hit his 535th home run of Saturday, at least as far as Seminole fans are concerned.

Demonstrating that the years haven't taken too much of his power away, Foxx poled the third ball over the field fence at the East Campus Diamond in a special ing contest with Seminole coach Danny Litwhiler.

The former great star of Connie Mack's Athletics and the Boston Red Sox is finishing his first year in college baseball circles as head coach of the University Miami baseballers, but he hasn't left the professional ranks yet.

Foxx says that he'll take over as a full-time coach the Miami Marlins, the Magic City's new entry in the ternational League, when he returns home after the ent Miami road trip.

His Hurricanes have only an 8-8 mark to show for campaign after losing two to FSU over the weekend. The "double X" has good prospects for a fine season the year.

Right now he's taking manpower more than anything else, with only 18 men on the roster, but only two are listed as Seniors, leaving him a strong nucleus.

"We'll have about six men back from the team we're losing right now, but we're a couple of years away from a top-notch ball club," he comments.

How does it feel to be a college coach after so many on the big time?—"Well I haven't seen enough to say this climate sure beats the snow and ice up Philly in the Winter," was the reply.

Foxx thinks that baseball is just beginning to catch on Florida, mainly because of the recent advent of the League baseball.

"You've got to remember that the big sport before about 1950 was softball, particularly in Miami but with Little League ball catching on and the Marlins coming in to Miami baseball may begin to catch on with the fans," he points out.

With the Marlins stay in Miami, a town where baseball has failed twice previously, he was asked.

"Well, they'll have to win and win a lot, because Miami a town where they're used to the tops in any sport, with the Majors being a big attraction there every spring.

"They used to appreciate a team that put up a good 32 game no matter who won before the World War. But now you've got to win or nobody comes to see you," he added.

He asked Foxx, as a former big leaguer, what he ught of the ball player who's seeking the big time, and hears the consensus of his comments.

Wanting to play is the biggest thing, a boy must have a little on the cocky side. The ability must be there, but that can always be improved on.

He's got to know he's got the stuff and he's got to show somebody else that he can. The guy who's indifferent ends up on the bench nine times out of ten.

What about our own Seminoles.

Seven of those pitchers who beat us last night (Fri- and Saturday) had that first boy got himself into a lot trouble with his walks (Avitable). He seems to have better control with the curve than with his fast ball.

They've got a couple of guys who can run like the wind, especially that right fielder, the blond headed fellow (Bob Rosell).

The man who the late Connie Mack rated as "the greatest ball player I ever had . . ." picked up a bat and sauntered out to give his boys some infield practice.

You now could tell as those powerful wrists cracked out sharp liners that the power was still there, and as bloodods quipped after the batting contest:

"I'd hate to give him about a week of batting practice then watch him hit

Garcia, Long Win Over Hurricanes

By JOE GREENE
Flambeau Sports Writer

Friday, Florida State's baseballers journey to Statesboro, Georgia, to open a four-game road trip against the Georgia State Teachers.

Two of the games will be played in Statesboro and two in Athens Georgia against The Georgia Bulldogs

Saturday saw the Tribe hand the University of Miami its second setback in a row against the Seminoles by a 5-0 margin.

Lanky Tommy Garcia faced the Hurricanes and turned in a four hit performance. It was Garcia's third victory of the year and brought the Seminole mark to 20 wins and four losses.

It marked the stath straight win in Florida Intercollegiate Baseball competition for the Seminoles. The Hurricanes stand at a four record in FIBC play.

In the opening game with Miami, Tony Avitable and Max Long teamed up to hand the Hurricanes a 13-5 setback. Avitable was credited with the victory. His 7th without a loss.

The second inning was the Hurricane downfall in Saturdays scrap. Southpaw Bert Robbins slipped momentarily in the second inning and the Seminoles pushed across two runs.

3rd inning and Be Shrinded

Lee Corso started the big second with a single into leftfield Fred Twomey followed with a bunt fly into the same spot which dropped in for another single and moved Corso on to second. Then Robins walked Bob Rosell to load the bases with none out.

Corso scored the first run when catcher John Shepard ut-ed a fly into left field. The final FSU run came when Robins walked Owen McCarren with the the bases loaded to force Twomey in from third.

In eq FSU left 13 an the basepaths, collected eight hits and got five free trips in five. Miami left three stranded. Two singles by McCarron and Garcia paced the Tribe attack.

Frank Piveronis, Hurricane first sacker, picked up two assists for the lowrie as he went two for three at the plate.

Linksters Off To Athens For Intecollegiate Golf Tourney

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Writer

With a perfect season on the record hooks, the Florida State golf team is in Athens, Georgia, to compete in the Southern Intercollegiate Tournament.

Included in this tournament will be some of the strongest teams in the south such as North Texas, South Texas, Duke, Louisiana State, and of course the University of Florida.

According to Dr. Don Veller, golf coester, the Semnoles have a very good chance to emerge the victor. "It just depends on how the boys feel that day, because one can never tell to golf who will play the best game," commented the coach.

Representing FSU in the tournament will be Bob Dunn' Ed Jenkins, and Jack Veghte, These men have consistently made high scores this post season. Bill Bledsoe the little b. d hitting sophomore from Alabama and Bunk Berry of Tennessee will also make the trip for the Seminoles.

Adding strength to the Tribe squade will be Harry Shoemaker, two

Despite a first place win in free exercise by Chick Cicio and second in the horizontal bar by Jack Miles, FSU's gymnastics team finished second to the Los Angeles Turners in the AAU match last week.

Other FSU gymnasts to score besides Cicio and Miles were Jamile Adamson fourth in tumbling, Lard Andrews sixth in rope climb and Joe Taylor, third in still rings.

There were no team scores announced by the judges, and only the winner and runners-up were announced. Third place went to the Armed Forces squad.

Bob Elliott had some very bad luck as did Eddie Chibbaro and finished eighth in trampoline and did not qualify. Elliott did his triple twist on the ninth count, but only eight counts are allowed.

Don Bolles and Rider Lenoura were said in contention after the first day along with Jack Miles to give FSU three men in the top ten. Bolles and Lenoura slipped to 11th and 12th at the completion of the meet as each their performances were termed as "very good by Gibson.

Miles

Saturday was also used for determining the United States Olympic team and Florida State's Jack Miles qualified for the team. Miles will join with the squad, however training location has not been chosen.

Members of the U.S. team in the order they finished are Jack Bruno, Los Angeles Turners; Carl Schwaderlein, Penn St.; Richard Beckstrom, L. A. Turners; Joseph Stack, Cleveland Skin Turners and a member of the team in 1948.

Abe Grossfeld, Illinois; Armando Vega, Penn St.; William Tenh, L. A. Turners; Jack Mile, FSU; and Charles Simms, L. A. Turners.

Gene Wettestone, coach at Penn State was named head olympic coach for gymnastics. Coach Harry Prize of Florida State is the associate coach and according to Mr. Gibbon was considered very capable for head coach.

Having run here as the first win of the olympic team, perhaps buttowered the Judges in naming Wettstone as coach, opined Mr. Gibbon.

"Florida State did very well in the NCAA and the olympic tryouts and about as very proud of their team. This meet was much more than an ordinary competition. It has the olympic tryouts and the best competition in the country, stated Gibbon.

Theta Chi Is Victor In 'Little 500' Race

By BOB MOREN

A derk-horse Theta Chi cycle team pedaled its way to first place in the first running of the "Little 500" Bicycle Race Thursday night.

The Theta Chi squad, ranked tenth in the preliminary tryouts, sped over the finish line of the quarter mile track seconds in front of a hard-riding Zeta Tau Alpha quartet.

A time of 1 hour, 36 minutes, and 38 seconds was recorded for the winners in the 30 mile-120 lap race.

George Mengason, Dave Munger, Bill Neblett, and Mike Tschirret comprised the upset - minded team which made the winning time scarcely noticed by the crowd until the last few laps.

80th Lap

The red-sweater clad Theta Chi squad never figured prominently in the race until, in the 80th lap, they grabbed the lead for a short time. Following a three-way change of the lead with the Zeta Tau Alpha and the Sigma Kappa teams, the Theta Chis took the lead again close to the finish of the race and held it till the end.

Controversial second place honors fell to the Zetas who paced the race most of the way through the first 70 laps. The Zetas, who ranked sixth in the qualifying times set previously, gained the crowd's admiration as they tenaciously held the lead lap after lap.

The second-placers finished the 120 laps in t hour, 36 minutes, and 46 seconds, a mere 8 seconds out of first place. Don Lewis, Bill Bunker, Harvey Hall, and Kink Wier rode the distance for their sorority sponsors.

The pre-race favorites, the Sigma Kappas, held the lead at time announced intervals throughout the "Little 500" and never fell below third place at any time durina the race.

The Sigma Kappas with Bert Bibby, Tom Dunn, Richard Fowler, and Frank Kircher riding turned in the time of t hour, 37 minutes, and 15 seconds.

In descending order, seventh-ranked Pi Beta Phi finished fourth behind the Sigma Kappas in 1 hour, 40 minutes, and 19 seconds.

Penthouse Improves

Probably the greatest improvement, with respect to times, was made by a dormitory entry, the West Hall Penthouse gang. The Penthouse team, who barely qualified in the preliminarses, finished fifth with a time of t hour, 41 minuses, and 21 seconds.

Delta Tau Delta's entry, whose time was not announced in the final results of the race, finished in sixth place, one second behind the Penthouse team.

King Jack Monigomery and Queen Ann Munroe reirned over the three hour event. Over 1700 spectators, most of them supporters of individual teams, turned out to see the first annual "Little 500" make its debut.

Prizes for the best decorated pits went to Zeta Tau Alpha, Alpha Delta Pi, and Kappa Sigma in that order.

The complete order of finish of race is as follows 1. Theta Chi, 2. Zeta Tau Alpha, 3. Sigma Kappa, 4. Pi Beta Phi, 5. Penthouse, 8. Delta Tau Delta, 7. Sigma Chi, 8. Tries Senior Hall and Sigma Nu, 9. Gamma Phi Beta, 10. Alpha Tau Omega, 11. Sigma Phi Epsilon, 12. Pirates, 13. Alpha Omicron Pi, 14. Delta Delta Delta, 15 Phi Delta Theta, 16. Alpha Delta Pi, 17 Delta Zeta, 18 Lamoda Chi Alpha, and 19. Kappa Sigma.

In Grecian Times

If you happened to see a few weird looking creatures wandering around campus last weekend, they weren't crazy—just dressed for fraternity parties.

The SAEs turned their house into an African jungle for a costume party Saturday night. Bamboo lined the walls and animal heads and a grass roofed patio characterized the mood of the party.

Gerry Anderson, Tri-Delt, won a giant sized "Lion" for the "Most Original" African costume. Favors for the weekend were small stuffed lions, the fraternity symbol.

Alpha Tau Omega's "Orchid Formal" was held at the fraternity house Friday night and Mary Ed Williamson, Pi Phi, was named ATO sweetheart.

Kappa Alphas celebrated in the traditional way, but with the new aspect of "American first, Southerner second." Confederate flag raising ceremonies in front of Bryan Hall commenced the weekend.

The SAs Rebellion ball was held Friday night and a Sigma Nu Isle party Saturday night. The SAs and their dates spent Saturday at Mystic Lake.

The Delta Zetas celebrated their annual Rose Ball Weekend. A hayride to Silver Lake inaugurated the weekend activities Friday night.

A luncheon was held Saturday afternoon and that night was the Rose Ball dance. Miss Rush was named DZ Dreamgirl. A coast party was the entertainment for Sunday.

Kappa Alpha and Thetas participated in their sorority "State Line" party weekend.

Twenty Thetas joined the Illini chapter in Gainesville, Fla., to attend luncheons and meetings with alums from all over the state.

Monday's Campus Visit, a school of journalism television, radio workshop production presented by WCTV at 8 p.m. each week, will feature a visit with Dr Hathaway of the Infirmary.

This month program in a series of ten also features a visit to the speech and hearing clinic at the college.

Kent Schroeder is responsible for the Hathaway story, while Charlie Allen is responsible for the hearing clinic report. Tom Hall acts as the student producer for the programs where students do all the work under the supervision of Daniel Worthington.

Next week's show involves a visit to the Florida Industrial School for Boys at Marianna.

Circus Performs For Two Nights To Conclude Run

Two-Hour Shows Begin At 8 P.M.

Tonight and tomorrow night mark the second and concluding performances of Florida State University's circus—"Circus Rah-Rah."

Each night two hours of fast-moving performances will include 23 acts in an infinite variety. They will be displayed before expected capacity crowds at 8 p.m in Campbell Stadium.

Under the direction of Jack Haskins and Jim DeCosmo the sensationally known "Flying High" which was established in 1948 by Haskins is the culmination of the efforts of over 200 FSU students who are to perform — but also make costumes, scenery, props, and advertising.

Ringmaster Kent Schroeder blows the whistle on such features acts as trapeze routines hand balancing, iron jaw, comedy, live animals, bare feet, aerial swing skating bicycles, a rodeo act, bara Stanley wins a "bucking" Ford, high wire routines, and a finale act, which traditionally ends the evening's performance.

Special music for the performances, which includes a repertoire of 75, is under the direction of Manley Whitcomb, while arranging and conducting is done by Charlie Carter.

Chemists Here For Convention

About 200 chemists across in teaching research, government and industry are taking part in the annual meeting of the Florida Section of the American Chemical Society today and tomorrow.

Called "Meeting-in Miniature", the program will consist of afternoon sessions when numerous scientific papers will be presented in organic chemistry, bio-chemistry, physical chemistry and nuclear energy.

Campbell Speaks

A general meeting, open to the public, will be held tomorrow beginning at 10:45 a.m. Professor Sanford Beak S. Campbell will make a brief welcoming address.

Dr. Velma Keen as chairman of the governor's commission on Nuclear Development of Florida will keynote the Symposium on Nuclear Energy.

Fire Damages Darm

Experiments with gasoline led to a small fire in Magnolia Hall Sunday night.

A student accidently dropped a container of gasoline while conducting experiments with it. In the resultant flames the gas became ignited, explained fire department sources, and ignited the room

Damage to the room, the student's room, however, the department reported.

Junior English Exam Scheduled

The Junior English exam will be given next week for all eligible students in the Dirkson Building

Students with the rank of second semester sophomore or above must take the exam.

Students may pick up a reservation card in the Registrar's office. They emphasized that no tests will be given without a reservation card.

Dates that will be given next: Monday, Wednesday and Friday. It is also scheduled for May 14 and 16 from 2 to 5 p.m.

Cast

The cast consists of the entire Choral Union organization, under the direction of Herman Goetzel, assisted by Miss Betty Jane Grimm as the stage director. The University Symphony, consisting of about forty pieces conducted by Hobert Bozeman, will play.

The Tallahassee Junior Chorus is taking part in the opera, under the direction of Miss Lois Laverne Schooley.

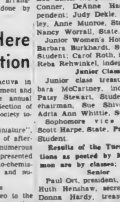
This marks the first year that the opera has been presented with its full student cast, explained Gunter. Previously some of the leads and principles have been taken by the faculty members of the School of Music.

During the past three years, "Cavalleria Rusticana", by Mascagni, "El Trovatore", by Verdi, and "Aida", by Verdi have been presented by the Choral Union.

In Art Gallery

Holschuh Sculpture Shown

A one man exhibition by sculptor, Fred Holschuh is being presented at the University Art Gallery, through May 25.



Holschuh is an assistant professor of art here teaching sculpture and design.

The FSU University Museum and Art Gallery are housed on the second floor West Dining Hall Building. Main Campus and are open daily from 12:30 to 5 p.m.

Holschuh's sculpture is one of definite unusuality. His ability to quite-subtly create structures using numerous varieties of materials is remarkable according to Dr. Adolph Karl of the art department.

The University Museum is features primitive uses of plants. These materials are used daily by peoples with a primitive technology. They illustrate the importance of plants for man's existence.

Our highly developed technology substitutes plastic, glass or metal for many plant uses, he explained.

Top Male Frosh Scholars Honored

Top-ranking men in the freshman class were honored recently in the first program of the sort for men students at Florida State.

Dr. Dosk S. Campbell, president of the university, spoke in praise of the students' scholarship in making an average grade of "B" or more during the fall semester.

"It is difficult for some students to recognize the fact that our principal objective in the University is the development of mental capacity, of scholarly application and scholarly achievement," Dr. Campbell said.

Less Glamorous

"Many of the non-academic activities on the University campus are much more glamorous and attractive than is the daily conscientious effort of a student to his scholarly pursuits.

"There are some students who are not able to see beyond the glamour of the extra-curricular activities. Consequently, they leave the University disillusioned and without a feeling of accomplishment.

"There is no substitute for scholarship and scholarly achievement. There has perhaps never

Scholarship Students Get Near 'B' Mark

The 407 students holding teaching scholarships at Florida State achieved a grade average just short of a 'B' during the last semester, Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby disclosed today.

The 314 girls holding scholarships had a grade average of even higher than a "B" he said. Their average was 3.17, while boys had an average of 3.73. The combined average was 3.95

Grades

The scholarship-holders are students receiving $60 a year in state funds toward getting degrees in the School of Education which will qualify them for teaching.

The grade averages of the scholarship holders were compiled by a committee of the Scholarship Club at the university working under the direction of faculty adviser, Dr. S. T. Lastinger.

The committee was composed of Ray Orde, Jacksonville; Emily Coulson, Jeanette Burnsed and Mary Kinard.

Of the teaching scholarship holders 17 were listed by the committees as having perfect, or "A" averages during the last semester

Perfect Scores

They were James L. Geoghegan, Marlene Hayes, Sylvia Mae Hayman, Patricia Ann Jones, Phyllis A. Kren, Martha E. King, Ruth D. Kuhlke, Jane M. Peeples and Ellen Snow Pratt.

Party Struggle Grows Tighter

By CHARLET POTTEVINT

State and Student Party competition is steadily growing as shown by recent election results.

Student Party members took over the majority of offices as usual, but State members ran close behind winning the most senate seats and class offices.

Five State Party candidates will fill senate positions while 3 will be in run-offs. Two Student Party nominees won senate seats with 3 in run-offs.

Class president honors were a split three ways when Bill Weaver, who was defeated for the State nomination, copped the Junior Class Presidency running Independently State Party won the senior Class president office while Student Party won the Sophomore Class title.

Court positions were mostly dominated by Student Party members with 9 winning judiciary seats (5 in run-offs) and 5 honor court members (3 in run-off.)

State Party elected 3 judiciary members. Four will be in the run-offs for judiciary and 1 for honor court.

The results were 3 to 4 between the parties for senate positions with State in the lead. Positions won by State nominees were 1 president, 2 treasurers, 1 social chairmans In run-offs will be 3 running mates for senate. Student Party nominees did well in class elections placing 1 vice president, 2 in run-off 1 treasurers (1 in run-off) 1 secretary and 1 social chairman in run-offs.

Both Traffic Court positions were won by Student Party.

In addition to the Independent class president, a honor court seat was won by an Independent and 4 more will run independently in run-offs.

ODK To Tap Today At Noon

Omicron Delta Kappa, men's national leadership honorary, will tap at a high noon ceremony today in front of Westcott.

The new initiates will be tapped on a basis of outstanding service, scholarship and leadership, explained Jim Jonne, president of the group.

Active members must be of junior or senior standing, he said.

15 Initiated By Phi Mu Alpha

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia men's professional musical fraternity recently initiated 15 new members.

Those initiated were Jerrald McCollum, Phillip Posey, Raymond Lebeau, William Alton, Ryan Edwards, Jack Meador, Tony Britton and Calvin Goss.

Webster Teague, Vince Tale, Robert Brunson, Dan Jensen, Brad Hecht, Scott Harpe and Mike Hipps.

Candlelight Service

Sophomore Council Takes In 99 Coeds

By CHARLET POTTEVINT

Candlelight initiation services were held Wednesday for the new members of Sophomore Council, 99 freshmen women's honorary.

The new members were clad in white and the lighted white their candles from garnet and gold torches representing "rites, arts and memories" after a talk by Dr Anna Forbes Liddell, professor of philosophy Dr Liddell discussed the torches' meaning in her talk. Taking part in the ceremonies were '55 and '56 presidents, Barbara Brunson and Jean Ford and new and old council members.

History

The story of the birth of Sophomore Council was related by Miss Soper. She told the group how the council began on March 1, 1831 when the freshmen commission of Florida State College for Women tapped 13 women.

Two years later, in 1823, a similar organization, the YWCA, tapped 13 women. These girls became the nucleus of weight in the blue and the white and were chosen for darkness, sincerity and broad, influents and friendliness

Merger

The two organizations decided to merge in 1936 according to the past SC president. After the merger, they chose to continue wearing the blue and white with the garnet and gold baders.

This was the first year the new members were tapped in the freshmen dormitories Forty were chosen, the standards were scholarship service, and loyalty.

Qualities

Scholarship, service and loyalty remain the high qualities for membership and the duties are still similar

Not more than 10 per cent of the freshmen class is picked from a vote of classmates and junior counselors A selection committee narrows down the final choices with the help of sophomore counselors.

Honor & Responsibility

Sophomore Council membership is an honor and a responsibility according to Miss Soper, which is best expressed in the

Challenge to Sophomore Council of 1956

"No girl is worthy of this honor who does not accept with it a responsibility—to represent her class and her college, in all activities and at all times, to the best of her ability To act with honor to work with dignity, to think with clarity, to serve out devotion."

Slave Wages

Another attempt to raise the salaries of students working for the University Food Services will be made soon in Senate. We hope this one meets with success, not only in Senate, but with the officials concerned.

Wages for cafeteria and student center employees at present are a static 66 1/2 cents per hour—paid in $10 meal tickets for 15 hours of work per week. In comparison with other student assistantship positions on this campus, the salary is far under par in light of the standard 75 cents per hour compensation.

Add the low wages to pre-daylight working hours in some cases, and lack of incentive for advancement in all cases and the picture looks pretty bad. But this isn't all. As the senators sponsoring the resolution will point out, all of the students working for the University Food Services are forced to spend what they make there, are charged the same prices as all other students, and cannot exchange their tickets for cash equivalent if not used.

The system as it stands then, is quite excellent from the University Food Services' standpoint—they pay students below par wages and receive a good portion of it back as profit from their monopoly on their employes' wages.

Their Castles?

Comes now the news that, married couples will be housed in West Hall during the summer session. This raises a number of interesting questions.

Among them: What will be the effect of little "family" spats on the studies of the couple next door?

And if bathroom congestion raises tempers in ordinary households, what will happen when numerous families have to share the two bathrooms per floor?

We are confident the housing authorities will surmount these and other little difficulties. But, as current West Hall residents will tell the couples, the old slogan of "A Man's Home Is His Castle" just doesn't seem appropriate to the rather tiny rooms of that dormitory.

Wise Decision

Congratulations to the general conference of the Methodist Church for its wise decision to condemn racial segregation.

For those who missed the accounts of the event, news stories ran like this:

The Methodist Church yesterday condemned racial segregation "by any method or practice"—and laid down new laws to put the principle into action.

In a fervent display of unanimity, the big denomination's policy-making general conference swept through measures opening the door to full integration in the church.

The action brought delegates to their feet in a prolonged roar of applause . . .

Such votes of principle are often dismissed by those anxious for immediate integration in churches on the grounds that they are not binding to member churches and that compliance is voluntary. But even if such statements do not have the effect of immediately integrating all member churches, they do at least provide marks to shoot for.

They pinpoint a goal which representatives of the churches have agreed to be desirable. And they pave the way for concrete steps to be taken in that direction.

We are confident that the new plan will be ratified by the necessary two-thirds of the voting delegates to the churches conferences throughout the world. For it emphasizes the belief that practices of discrimination and hate based on skin color are indeed incompatible with the basic teachings of Christ.

Ye Olde Cinema Presenteth Much Of Knighthood

By BOB SIMMONS

HARK, YE stalwart knights and frilly maidens! Coming to ye Florida Theatre is ye tale of knighthood brave and bolde. The Warriors it be called.

Ye storye concerneth ye Hundred Year's War on ye continent. Verlete thrashe about in grassie meadow, which floweth free with bloode. Violence aboundeth. Ye plote reeketh of ye Hollywoode touche. Thou wilt find thee an ample supplye of action and ye inevitable sexe angle, both worked to ye straining point.

The Warriors doeth run at ye Florida Theatre, beginning Tuesday.

For really top-flight entertainment, don't fail to see Doctor At Sea at the Ritz Art Theatre, showing through Sunday.

The movie Hansel And Gretel, showing tonight and tomorrow night at the HiWa Theatre in Thomasville, Georgia, is a far cry from the fairytale. The only word to describe it is "fantastic". The entire cast is made up of puppets that could, for all of their gestures and movements, be real persons. This fairyland fantasy without doubt represents much thought and work. Probably the most striking thing about Hansel And Gretel is the music which is at moments beautiful, to say the least.

ANDY ROONEY is The Twinkle In God's Eye at the State Theatre on the Sunday-Monday double feature. The pint-size actor comes through with a man-sized performance in this one. In spite of the fact that The Twinkle In God's Eye is linked with a third rate movie on the program, it is probably worth the effort to check the times of the performances and investigate this one.

A pair of the all time classics are coming to the Capital Drive-In for two days starting Tuesday. The Grapes Of Wrath and Tobacco Road have both enjoyed their claim to fame, and will continue to do so. They are indeed two of the most memorable films ever to come out of Hollywood. This is one movie duo worth seeing.

LOOK FOR this one The Man In The Grey Flannel Suit is the super-extraordinary, just-plain tale of nothing particular, but something in general. If the reader finds the meaning of the above sentence quite clear then he will no doubt enjoy the movie—it's kind of jumbled up, too. The "grey flannel suiter" is coming to the Florida Theatre, soon.

The pathetic plight of the Tallahassee theatres is that really outstanding cinemas are few and far between. When a couple of good features do wind their way to the Capital City, they usually show at the same time, and for no less than a week apiece, which gives little variety for the movie goers.

It seems that the spacing of the quality movies could be given more consideration.

Philosophy Behind Music Library More 'Letter' Than 'Spirit'

By DAVE WARD STEINMAN

DON JOHNSON'S article above (or below, or sideways, or wherever it happens to be) on negligence in the handling of records and equipment in the Music Library interests me greatly. He raises some questions that should be studied by everyone concerned.

Since he deals with the technical end, perhaps a few words from the philosophical will not be out of place here. The library staff is a smoothly-functioning one. It is run according to a complex, detailed set of rules, handed down from Higher Up. Unfortunately, it is the letter, rather than the spirit of the law that prevails here.

Conditions in the library remind me of the apocryphal story of the man who was once appointed head librarian at Harvard. At the end of his first year he reported gleefully to the president: "As a result of tightening the rules, increasing fines, and chasing down over-due books, we now know where to locate every volume in our catalog." He was promptly dismissed.

THIS, OF course, was extreme, and I do not mean to suggest that local conditions are in any way similar, but it perhaps suggests that there is such a thing as too much efficiency. Let no one forget that the only purpose this or any library should ever have is to make information and material available to people who wish to use it. This cannot be done if the "purse-strings" are too closely guarded. This way of thinking defeats the true purpose of a library.

One of my pet peeves has long been the way in which record albums and jackets are treated. No matter what sort of package the record arrives in, it is immediately slashed up. After trimming any brand names that might taint the library with commercialism, the painted cover, or what is left of it, is pinned on the bulletin board for a week or so and then discarded. The program notes are similarly pruned, then stuck in the loose-leaf album in the same envelop with the record. The cardboard on which the notes are printed may by this time resemble anything from a trapezoid to a jigsaw puzzle, and the rough edges do untold amounts of damage to the delicate record surfaces.

Besides damaging the records, this practice makes it impossible to check catalog or reference numbers that originally appeared on the record jacket. In addition, the artwork and styling which the manufacturer took such pains with is lost forever. This is very short-sighted, when one considers the number of important artists who have been commissioned to paint the covers. But the library is like the Soda Shop. One gets used to it.

Alligator Pulls A Shrewd Maneuver

By OSCAR JOHNSON

THE FLORIDA Alligator, University of Florida student newspaper, has pulled a Shrewd Maneuver, we must admit.

In reaction to a recent Flambeau editorial headlined, "Gators Go Too Far," the Alligator replied with its own version. Our editorial lashed at UF students who come to this campus on painting raids.

It labelled as "childishness" such actions as dumping chemicals on the grass before Westcott Circle in the shape of a big UF so that when the grass burned off the letters were clearly outlined. The editorial asked if the city and campus police couldn't do more to stop that kind of damage.

Well, the Gainesville paper just reversed things. They reprinted the editorial as it was—with the exception of inserting the letters "FSU" where "UF" was in the original.

Adding a few explanatory comments, the Alligator summed up the situation by asking, "Let's be friends."

ON A SLIGHTLY different track, we are surprised that little notice was given to a recent bit of talk involving the University of Florida and FSU President Doak S. Campbell.

It seems that around April 20, one of the candidates competing for county representative from Alachua (Gainesville) said that one of the reasons he was running was to prevent Doak S. Campbell from getting control over the Uni[versity] of Florida.

The theory behind the deal was that [the] state house of representatives at its last [session] had passed a bill setting up a chancellor sy[stem] in Florida—although [the] bill did not ge[t through] the senate.

As his story went, the system would crea[te a] university chancellor between the UF presi[dent] and the Board of Control. Wire services qu[oted] him as saying, "I understand Doak S Camp[bell,] the FSU president, would have been na[med] chancellor."

Just where he got this idea is uncertain [but] he is quoted as continuing "Wouldn't tha[t be] a fine kettle of fish to have an FSU man [be]tween our president and the Board of Cont[rol."]

Naturally, the Flambeau couldn't print [such] such unfounded statements as these. Bu[t we] do think the situation deserves some commen[t.]

As far as we know, Dr Campbell's only [am]bition is to continue to serve as Florida S[tate] University president. We're inclined to view [the] chancellor business as a new and semi-c[lever] way of getting the Gainesville FSU-fearing [...]

Music Library Needs Improvement

By DONALD W. JOHNSON

IF THIS LETTER is not taken seriously by the parties concerned, they shall be guilty of something approaching criminal negligence.

Listening to music in the Music library—or should I say attempting to listen—is becoming more and more an endeavor to achieve musical satisfaction while continually trying to repress the agony of thoroughly inadequate reproduction. Not that the phonographs themselves are inherently deplorable (though they clearly represent an ill-advised financial outlay), but their lack of upkeep, coupled with pernicious disc-handling by students and staff, contributes immeasurably to a breakdown of the serious music-listener's morale, the evils of which are manifested in anguished cursing and violent demonstrations before already precariously neurotic library staff members.

Soon the Olin Downes Collection will be replaced in the library; I have read that this collection contains a very large number of (undoubtedly) intelligently cared-for long-playing records. Should we allow these discs to fall into that same disreputable condition of all but the very newest library LP acquisitions? To do so could only exhibit the ultimate in incompetence.

SUCH NEGLIGENCE will certainly be avoided if the staff are made aware of the problem—and, of course its solution. The staff, after all, comprises intelligent persons capable of exercising precautions and enforcing rules (particularly the latter) and the solution isn't too difficult. Here are my suggestions (details available on request):

(1) ALBUMS now in use are completely inadequate, having been designed for shellac discs. Most manufacturer-supplied jackets are only slightly more suitable. Acceptable are contoured polyethelene sleeves and the wa[x] paper-like composition sleeves supplied by so[me] record companies. The collection must be st[ored] in these or face ultimate ruin.

(2) RECORDS should be kept fastidio[usly] clean, but with the utmost gentleness. (T[here] are ways.)

(3) HANDLERS must learn to avoid [...] marks and container scratches. (It can defin[itely] be done.)

(4) STAFF members must be trained to [...] discs and have exclusive handling rights. T[he] listener—student or faculty member—is nea[rly] always unskilled. It should only take a m[...] for the staff member to put a disc on and [...]

(5) STYLI in the players should be chec[ked] weekly and cleaned before each playing [...] disc. Present styli are newly acquired, bu[t the] first one this indignant listener tried was [in]stalled incorrectly, causing grave distortion a[nd] record wear.

(6) PRESENT LP phonographs should e[ven]tually be replaced. These Webcor players [rep]resent an investment in a useless changer me[ch]anism and "mahogany" cabinet, in some me[di]ocre audio components and in a "famous br[and] name." If they are dubbed "high fidelity" [they] only represent another demonstration of [the] present meaninglessness that term has acqu[ired.] Good quality reproduction would cost no mo[re.]

(7) THE PRESENT (above) phonogra[phs] could perhaps be retained in the listening roo[m] (not the reading room) for 78 r.p.m. disc rep[ro]duction.

I could go on to ask for comfortable cha[irs,] smoking privileges and various other [...] luxuries, but right now I will cry only for [the] necessities of a competent operational [...]. Please note. I am not alone in recognizing [the] need.

Wandering With Wiljohn

Sees "Appointment With Sculpture"

BY WILJOHN

TUESDAY NIGHT I had a few free moments to myself so I gave me the pleasure of taking my untrained, and artistically nil, eye to the opening of "Appointment With Sculpture," a one-man sculpture exhibit by Prof. Holschuh of the FSU Art Department. Since it is very definitely worth your going to see, I thought I'd arm you with a few of my own impressions to take with you, just so you won't feel lonely in a strange world.

The materials in which the works are wrought are wire, sheet metal, iron, marble, plaster, wood, chain and glass. The objects range from the realistic to the abstract. You're bound to find something you'll like and, if you're like me, you'll like almost everything.

Let me give you a preview of what you will see along with a few of my own ideas on what I saw. Probably my favorite was one of the two sculptures present using Lot's Wife as the subject. Standing about eighteen inches high, this graceful figure carved from pear wood, seems about to take off from the pedestal on which it rests. It has a gentle sweep of line that captivated me completely.

There was a fine "Log Sculpture" substituted for "Peasant Girl." It was a very beautiful piece of work. Also, the piece called "Over the Waves" was a real gem to me. I found it forceful and with a quality about it that makes one feel that it is moving ahead while it sits there.

"TRIBAL CHIEF" seemed to be one of H[ol]schuh's favorites and I overheard him tel[l] someone that it only took him nine hours [to] complete it; and all the work was done wit[h a] chainsaw, nothing else. It is very rough a[nd] blocky to look at first, with perhaps a fee[ling] too staid and set for a savage chieftain. [Al]though the American Indian was stoic and t[his] is American art.

The largest piece is the "Caryatid." It is [a] statue of a woman and there seems to be [as] many opinions of it as there are viewers. T[he] texture captures, reflects and holds light bea[uti]fully. The same is true of its effect on spa[ce.] However, the division of my opinion is [...] whether it is too bulky and strained or not. [It] flows, yet, but so does a tortured river in flo[od.] True, the river is just as beautiful to so[me] people then, as it is at ebb. See what you thi[nk.]

Taking a general look around, I find tha[t I] am infinitely more pleased with the realis[tic] pieces than I am with the abstracts. Ma[ny] they are too abstract for me. I also prefer [...] work that isn't done in wire or metal. His ide[as] here aren't to my taste as much as are t[he] wonderful things done in wood and other ma[terials.]

But, to paraphrase Mr. Holschuh himself, [his] idea is that sculpture and art is like a boo[k.] You can't understand it by leafing over it. [It] must be read and studied with an open mi[nd] and an eagerness for knowledge. Then it can [be] completely enjoyed.

Candidates Thank Students For Support

(The FLORIDA FLAMBEAU welcomes letters to the editor on any topic, and provides this space for student opinion. The letters do not have to coincide with the views of the paper, but must be in good taste. Unsigned letters will not be printed, and names will not be withheld except in cases where the reasons are deemed adequate by the editor. Letters should not exceed 350 words, or 25 typewritten lines.)

OLYMPIC TRAINING HERE?—

Florida State's second in the National AAU gymnastics meet last weekend at State College, Pa., may have taken a few adverse turns for the university, and possibly Coach Hartly Price.

Previous to the meet, Seminole coach Price was nominated by the National Association of American Gymnastic Coaches for the position of Olympic head coach, but immediately afterward, Coach Gene Wettstone of Penn State was named to the post, in what reportedly was a somewhat confusing situation.

In addition, plans were being formed to have the Olympic gymnastics squad train here in November, and though an appeal to this axient was actually made at the meet, it is likely to be turned down.

The training is usually held at the home site of the coach, which makes it highly likely that it will be at State College, Pa., home of Penn State.

During the four-day meet, Dr. Doak S. Campbell, the president of Florida State, FSU athletic director Dr. Edward G. Danford and Florida's Governor Leroy Collins all sent personal telegrams inviting the team to train here.

Coach Price would not comment on the meet, beyond saying that he was "naturally disappointed" and "greatly flattered" that the three personages mentioned above thought it worthy of making a personal appeal.

There've been a lot of stories of various natures which have come out of this meet, none of which this reporter has been able to verify.

Not the least of which is a report that Price actually let the most votes in a poll of gymnastics coaches confirming the olympic coach. then was by-passed by some big official in selecting Wettstone as head coach.

In any case, as a contrast to 1952, when the Semunoles had three Olympic team members (including Rafael Lecuona) who competed for the Olympic team, this year there will have none, unless alternate Jack Miles should be selected.

There's still a minimum chance that the gymnasts will train here in November, and we're glad to see the university behind Coach Price in the venture.

CLINIC LOOKS GREAT

The eyes of the football-minded in the nation may literally be right here in Tallahassee come June 7-9, for Coach Tom Nugent has a great lineup for this third annual football clinic.

Hell have three of the country's top gridiron mentors here inose three days, Bud Wilkinson of Oklahoma, Duffy Daugherty of Michigan State and youthful Terry Brennan of Notre Dame.

Hugh "Bones" Taylor the great end of the Washington Redskins and an assistant coach at FSU last season is back again this year by popular demand.

Another assistant to Nugent this past spring, Pat Summerall, the place kicking specialist of the Chicago Cardinals, will handle "Kickoff Specials" and the "Point after Touchdown."

As an added attraction, FSU will present a trophy to the high school "Coach of the Year" selected by ballot going through the Florida High School Athletic Association

Michigan State's Daugherty will present the trophy to "kick off" tha clinic, and the selected coach will than join Daugharty, Brannan and Wilkinson on a special panel.

And, as a brochure sent through the mail by the clinic publicity office comments (and we quote):

Air conditioned auditoriums, modernistic West Hall where you'll stay, the delicious but inexpensive food featured at the Student Center, the wonderful bass fishing, and the near-by golf courses should afford real pleasant living for a couple of days."

With all that offered, I think I'll become a football coach. It must be the life!

Tracksters Defend AAU Crown

TIME TO PLAY BALL!

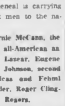
ANYONE FOR BASEBALL? Or softball. She isn't on the baseball team, but I'm sure that the Seminoles would be more than happy to accept the nomination of Miss Beverly Laurent for team mascot. Anyway, it's an idea.



Volleyballers Leave To Defend Crown

By LARRY BLOCK
Flambeau Sports Editor

Tomorrow night Florida State's champinnship volleyball team leaves for Seattle, Washington to defend its national crown.

Coach Bill Odeneal at carrying a team of eight men to the nationals

They are Bernie McCann, the only first team all-American on the team, Lyle Lasear, Eugene Lewis and Roy Johnson, second team all-American and Fehmi Zeko, John Miller, Roger Clingerman and Joe Rogers.

McCann

McCann La sear, Lewis Johnson, Zeko and Miller will start for the Seminoles

This years team finished the season with a 27-4 mark with a triumph in the Pensacola Open and a second in the St. Petersburg Invitational.

Losses

The losses came at the hands of a Houston, Texas team, twice, St. Petersburg Recreation, and the New Orleans YMCA

Coach Odeneal's team will play their first game of the Nationals on Wednesday against the University of Washington Other teams in the tournament are UCLA, USC, Stanford, Oregon, and Rice College.

"UCLA should be our toughest competition, they've been playing a lot, and playing very well," commeated Odeneal.

"They weren't in the tournament last year as they were beaten in their regionals by the Medical Evangelist team, whom we beat in the finals," said Odeneal.

"The sport has grown in leaps and bounds by the leadership of a few schools, of which FSU is one." Odeneal went on to say.

Stress Serves

"Our team stresses hard serves that put the other team off balance, and then driving spikes into their court. This is a team game and if we win the championship again it will be a team victory."

Coach Odeneal explained that volleyball is a very difficult game to play. "It takes a lot of agility, coordination, endurance and above all teamwork. In our games we just go, go, go."

Lyle Lasear and Eugene Lewis are neck and neck in the race for the team's leading spiker, while John Miller leads in ace serves with McCann a close second.

"We're really looking forward to this tournament and naturally we'll be hoping that crown back to FSU for the second straight time" stated the volleyball mentor.

Penthouse Wins Dorm Swim; Fraternity Finals Set Monday

The Penthouse of West Hall won the Dorm swimming meet last Monday night when they scored 35 points, with B. S. U. finishing 2nd with 25, Magnolia Hall 3rd with 18 and the Methodists 4th with 9.

Fraternity Swimming

In the fraternity meet it looked at the end of the qualifying heats last Monday as if PDT would have easy sailing to cop the meet. They put 9 qualifiers in the finals plus two relay teams

SAE qualified 5 and both relay teams, DTD has 4 and 2 relays, LCA 4 and 1 relay, ATO 3 and 1 relay, KA 2 and 2 relays, SC 1 and 1 relay, and SN has one solo entrytor.

The finals begin at 7:15 at the East Campus pool an Monday, with only the final heats is every event. The diving will be run off with all competitors taking their three dives.

Softball

The softball championship series in both dorm and fraternity groups got under way at 4:15 on all 3 diamonds Monday. The high two teams in the dorm division start a best 2 out of 3 series. Penthouse is one of those teams

What should have decided one entry in the frat playoff last Monday turned out to be a draw with PDT and SAE playing a 10 inning overtime to a 4-4 tie LCA beat KS 10-8, and SPE nosed out PKT 5-4

PDT beat KS 11-2 to stay in the running. SN also stayed in the race with a 17-4 win over SPE, and ATO squeaked thru with a 6-5 victory over KA to give KA their first defeat.

In the American League SAE has a 4-0 record tas of May 3) PDT has a 4-2 record, SN is 4-1, TC is 4-2. In the National circuit ATO is 5-0, KA 3-1, SC 4-2, DTD 2-2.

Games Tonight

Monday 4-18 Replay of PDT-SAE 4-4 tie

PDT won the golf championships by defeating PKP in the finale 2-1. J. P. Jones and Harry Kimbro were the boys who nosed out the PKP outfit. This includes oi dirophy by PDT, they having won 3 years.

Seminole Nine Plays 4 Away

This week and next will find Florida State's baseball team in Georgia facing Georgia Teachers and the University of Georgia Bulldogs

The Seminoles open the six day away from home stand against Georgia's Teachers at Statesboro, Georgia tonight in the first of a two game series with the Teachers.

Tony Avitable, the hottest lefty on the Tribe mound staff is coach Danny Litwhiler's choice for the opening game

The pitching rotation after Avitable will depend on his performance and each following pitcher.

"We're not planning on four days for this trip, but we're going to take the games one at a time and see what happens," stated Litwhiler.

According to Litwhiler, each game won is important, and each game lost is important. A bid to the NCAA hanas on the outcome of the next four games and Litwhiler spoke the feelings of the whole squad in saying "We'd like to have one."

Saturday will be the final game of the year with the Teachers.

Netters, Rollins Vie In Season's Finale

Florida State's tennis team goes after the 9th win of the 1956 season this Saturday when they tangle with Rollins here in the last meet of the season

Winning only two matches the Seminole netters were blasted by Florida's Gators, 7-2 Monday, in a match which was closer than the score indicated.

Tiger Coach Keith Pitchford said that the Tribe "played very well" in the match and that the matches were much closer than the final score showed

"I thought they were relaxed completely for the first time, and in particular Hal Schaus rumbler man finally opened up for the first time this year."

In addition to Schaus's victory the only other Seminole win came in the doubles where Schaus and Shelby Creath won their doubles match.

"Rollins has a very tough team," he added, "but I think we can beat them if we play our best."

Gators Favored At Dem Track Tomorrow

By BOB WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Reporter

Probably the most dazzling array of talent ever to be seen in Tallahassee will meet at the Dem School track for the Florida AAU track meet Saturday afternoon.

The University of Florida is the biggest single contributor to the meet with its separate teams entered. Track coach Percy Beard is entering his 24-man varsity squad plus the 19-man Freshman team.

Closely connected with the University of Florida is the appearance of a former University of Florida track great and U.S. Olympic high jumper hopeful, J "Poppa" Hall Hall, who has jumped 8 feet, 10 inches, is entered unattached for exhibition only.

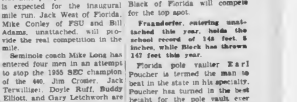
Tickets for the meet may be obtained at the gate. Adult tickets are $1.00, while student tickets are $.25 plus identification card.

The University of Miami and Florida State track teams round out the collegiate teams entered. Miami is carrying 18 to the meet, while the Seminoles have entered 24 in defense of last year's AAU championship

A dual between the three host teams is expected to be the state is expected for the inaugural mile run. Jack West of Florida, Mike Conley of FSU and Bob Adams, unattached, will provide the real competition in the mile.

Seminole coach Mike Long has entered four men in an attempt to stop the 1955 SEC champion of the Jim Gordon-Bill Terwilliger, Doyle Ruff, Buddy Elliott, and Gary Letchworth are entered for the Seminoles.

A possible six way dual looms in the 100 yd dash with Bumper Watson, Jim Smith and Ellis Goodloe of Florida Joe Davis and Pat Verspoitie of FSU. Watson and Buddy Fowlkes were recorded as one-two in last year's AAU meet while both Jim Smith and Ellis Goodloe were timed at 9.8 this year



Litwhiler, Knowles of Florida is installed as the favorite in his specialty, the high hurdles, by the grace of his :14.8 timing. Coach Long has entered his hurdle masters, Wes Minton, Tenney Brown, and Tommy Chivers.

In the javelin, Ron Weaver is expected to top the field. Weaver thus far this year has thrown over 197 feet, for the Seminoles.

A new meet record for the discus throw is probable with two champion discus hurle competing. Chrlse P a u n d o r f e r, Florida State's high point track man last year and holder of the school discus record and Fred Black of Florida will compete for the top spot.

Frazier,the entering unattached this year, holds the school record of 146 feet, 8 inches, while Black has thrown 147 feet this year.

Florida pole vaulter Earl Poucher is termed the man to beat in the state in his specialty. Poucher has turned in the best height for the pole vault ever recorded in the Seminoles competitions with 14 feet, 8¾ inches.

THE TRUE AND TYPICAL CASE OF CHATSWORTH OSCEOLA

The school year draws to an end, and everybody la wondering about the future—everybody, that is, except the engineers. Today there is not a single engineer on a single campus who has not received a dozen fabulous offers from a dozen corporations.

All this, of course, you know. But do you know just how fabulous these offers are? Do you have any idea how wildly the corporations are competing? Let me cite for you the true and typical case of Chatsworth Osceola, a true and typical senior.

Chatsworth, walking across the M.I.T. campus one day last week, was hailed by a man parked at the curb in a yellow convertible studded with precious gemstones. "Hello," said the man. "I am Darien T. Sigafoos of the Sigafoos Bearing and Bushing Company. Do you like this car?"

"Yeh, hey," said Chatsworth.

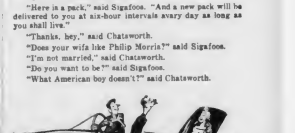
"It's yours," said Sigafoos.

"Thanks, hey," said Chatsworth.

"Do you like Philip Morris?" said Sigafoos.

"Of corris!" said Chatsworth.

"Here is a pack," said Sigafoos. "And a new pack will be delivered to you at six-hour intervals avary day as long as you shall live."



"Thanks, hey," said Chatsworth.

"Does your wife like Philip Morris?" said Sigafoos.

"I'm not married," said Chatsworth.

"Do you want to be?" said Sigafoos.

"What American boy doesn't?" said Chatsworth.

"It's Marvelous Duty"
Earl Chatsworth

Sigafoos pressed a button on the dashboard of the convertible, and the trunk opened up, and out came a nubile maiden with golden hair, flawless features, a perfect disposition, and the appendix already removed. "This is Lauri Geduldig," said Sigafoos. "Would you like to marry her?"

"Is her appendix out?" said Chatsworth.

"Yes," said Sigafoos.

"Okay," said Chatsworth.

"Congratulations," said Sigafoos. "And for the happy bride, a pack of Philip Morris every six hours for the rest of her life."

"Thanks, hey," said Laurel.

"Now then," said Sigafoos to Chatsworth, "let's get down to business. My company will start you at $10,000 a year. You will retire at full salary upon reaching the age of 28. When you start work, we will give you a three-story house made of bullion, complete with a French Provincial swimming pool. We will provide sitter service for all your children until they are safely through puberty. We will guarantee to keep your teeth in good repair; also the teeth of your wife and children unto the third generation. We will send your dentist a pack of Philip Morris every six hours as long as he shall live. Now, think carefully about this offer. Meanwhile, here is one thousand dollars in small, unmarked bills, which please you under no obligation whatever."

"It certainly seems lika a fair offer," said Chatsworth. "But there is something you should know. I am not an engineer. In fact, I don't go to M.I.T. I am a poetry major at Harvard. I just came over here on a bird walk."

"Oh," said Sigafoos.

"I guess I don't get to keep this money and the convertible and Laurel now, do I?" said Chatsworth.

"Of course you do," said Sigafoos. "And if you'd like tha job, my offer still stands."

The makers of Philip Morris, who sponsor this column, are delighted to know that there are no gaps for the engineers. To tackle times even better—for the engineers and everybody else—here's a gentle suggestion: Philip Morris, of corris!

Cheering Tryouts Are Set May 10

Sticks Steinberg, newly-elected head cheerleader, has announced that cheerleading tryouts will be held May 10.

Anyone is eligible for tryouts along with this year's squad, seeking to hold their own positions, he said.

There will be no class specification as has been the custom in the past. Two men and three women will be selected now and a freshman woman and a freshman man taken next fall.

Practices

Practices will be held Monday through Wednesday at Landis Green from 4:30 to 5:45 p.m. Tryouts will be held Thursday in the amphitheatre at 4:30.

Everyone who is interested in cheerleading is urged to tryout, said Steinberg. This year's squad will aid the newcomers trying for positions.

The contestants will be judged on pep, personal appearance, enthusiasm, ability to do the cheers and interest.

Judges

The judges consist of the two graduating cheerleaders, Tommy Weiss and Sarah Hambley, Steinberg, the president of the student body and three representatives from the faculty.

Present cheer leaders are Tommy Weiss, Sarah Hambley, Sticks Steinberg, Margaret Ann Ballinger, Billy Kirkland, Pat Harrison, Dick Ainsworth and Judy Dexle.

"We hope to have a good turnout this year," commented Steinberg. "let's get that good old Seminole spirit."

Hillel Holds Last Meeting

The Hillel Foundation announces the last meeting of the semester of the "prep for marriage" group, Sunday at 8 p.m.

Joe Bern, Hillel coordinator for the program, says that this meeting will be of special interest to those interested in premarital problems.

Thus far this semester, the program has consisted of films, social drama, discussion groups and information from special guests.

Dr. Mildred Morgan of the Home and Family Life department has acted in the past as the faculty advisor for the program.

Today's 'Hour' Topic Is Southern Literature

By ARLIEDA RIES

Concluding a highly successful season the English Coffee Hour presents "The Southern Literary Renaissance."

At 4 p.m. today in the Westminster House Dr. Griffith Pugh of the English department will talk on the literature of the South with emphasis on the last two or three decades.

The talk includes fiction, poetry, criticism, and some other urges of literature. Such authors as Robert Penn Warren, William Faulkner, Thomas Wolfe, Allen Tate, Donald Davidson, and John Crow Ransome are to be represented.

Dr. Pugh explains that some attention will be given to the "Fugitive Poets", and the part that Southerners have played in the "New Criticism" with attention focused on the more important recent novels.

Dr. Pugh, who earned his AB and MA from the University of South Carolina, obtained his PHD from Vanderbilt in English. Before coming here in 1947 the doctor was a professor of English at Winthrop College in South Carolina.

Couples Apply For West Hall Summer Rooms

Several applications have been received from student couples for use of West Hall living quarters during the summer session, director of men's residences James Brewer said yesterday.

Brewer said that the married couples have applied following announcement in the summer bulletin that West Hall space would be available. It will be the first time couples have been housed in the dormitory, he noted.

No Children

No children will be allowed in the West Hall rooms, Brewer said. "Our plans are to reserve the ninth floor of West Hall for couples—no children. He said. Cooking will not be allowed either.

Brewer said no special arrangements have been made for the housing. "We're just renting couples rooms the same as we would rent the mio rensular students," he said. Charge will be $75 for the session.

Not First Time

This will not be the first time married couples have been housed in dormitory space, Brewer continued. He said they were given rooms during West Campus days. The residence director said that it has been the university policy all along to give space to couples after first giving preference to single students.

With the opening of West Hall for the first time during a summer session, he said that adequate housing had become available to offer rooms to married students.

Why Sen. Estes Kefauver reads The Reader's Digest

"A magazine like The Reader's Digest takes up where school leaves off. It touches on an impressive array of significant subjects. It throws a white light on the issues that confront us. It educates as it entertains."

In May Reader's Digest don't miss:

CONDENSATION FROM BEST SELLER: "NOW TO LIVE 365 DAYS A YEAR." Half of those seeking medical aid can blame badly handled emotions, says Dr. John Schindler. Estes: No Usage Of Federal Troops

By BOB SIMMONS

Senator Estes Kefauver, speaking here Friday, told ...e does not believe the answer to the desegre... problem lies in the use of military troops.

...e said he ordered a thunder... when he said: "The ... Court ruling is the law ... He declared the ... problem "cannot be solved by force or coercion, or the use of troops" but rather by people working together.

Arriving on campus some fifteen minutes late to the tune of a wailing siren, Senator Kefauver emerged from a convertible wearing a blue suit and a politician's smile. He started a few moments to shake hands and converse with some bystanders, then he and his committe proceeded to the stage of the Music Building amphitheatre.

After warming up the audience with a few jokes, the senator lost no time in launching his attack on the Eisenhower administration and its foreign policy. He charged that in the last three and one-half years foreign policy has slipped, noting a loss of face on the colonialism issue in the Far East.

The Tennessee declared that the U.S. cannot afford to "blunder again, and that we must support "self-government" and "self determination."

He ended his comments on the subject calling for an "imaginative foreign policy" and non-partisan support of the program.

Speaking crisply, Kefauver went on record as favoring a system of farm supports, protection of small business, and a stepped-up program of education to keep the United States from falling behind Russia in the production of trained specialists.

The senator told students that he agrees with the "basic idea" of Senator Smathers' proposal to take members of the Supreme Court from the judiciary, but said that he is opposed to setting up any "iron-clad" rules for the President to follow in naming members to the high court.

Kefauver suggested that eligible members for the Supreme Court might be found in attorney generals, retired judges, or professors of law.

Smathers proposed that only judges with at least five years court experience be eligible for appointment to the Supreme Court.

During a question and answer session, Kefauver was quizzed on his opinion of national defense budget cuts. He implied that cuts should not be made without taking consideration of the world situation. He said that in defense preparations, "we cannot afford to fall behind."

EPSILON CHI MEET SCHEDULED TONIGHT

Epsilon Chi, English honorary, will meet with the Leon County Council of English Teachers at 8 p.m. tonight in the Demonstration School library.

Starlight Event To Be Tomorrow

The third Starlight Concert at Florida State University tomorrow night will feature the First Movement of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" and the overture to "Orpheus" by Offenbach played by the Concert Band under the direction of Robert Braunagel.

The concert will be held at the music amphitheater at 8:10 p.m. In the event of rain it will be moved to Opperman Music Hall, Braunagel said.

New Officials To Be Installed

Newly elected students government officials will be installed after a banquet next Tuesday, said Betty Willmon, secretary of elections.

The banquet will be held at 6 p.m in the Suwannee Room, followed by installation ceremonies which will be conducted by present Honor Court Chief Justice Barbara Graham.

Miss Willmon cautioned all elected candidates to file final expense reports. Those who do not do so, she said, will not receive certificates of election.

The expense report forms are available at the main desk of Longmire Building.

Garnet Key Taps 13 Coeds

Garnet Key, women's honorary recognizing leadership, service, and spirit, tapped 12 FSU coeds last night.

The new taps were presented at a breakfast in the Seminole Room this morning and they will be initiated Tuesday, May 15.

The new junior members are Charlotte and Phyllis Patteo, Gloria Lantz, Kathleen Pearse, Martha Sue Mizell, Ruth Williams, Bernice Barnett, Ann Bohler, Barbara Jeffries and Pat Smith.

The new senior members are Jan Kamina, Martha Grizzard, and Joyce Weatherup.

Carmen To Show Friday, Saturday

"Carmen," Bizet's popular opera, will be given by the Choral Union and University Symphony Friday and Saturday nights, in Westcott Auditorium beginning at 8:15 p.m.

The opera is being presented in English and there is no charge for admission.

In the Friday night performance Martha Slayden takes the title role of Carmen. Sam Jordan plays Don Jose, Beverly Brown becomes Micaela, and Richard Waff is the toreador, Escamillo.

Saturday night the lead change with Charlaine Weeks in the title role, Wendell Barthold as Don Jose, Barbara Schaller Peck as Micaela, and Peter Peck as the bullfighter, Escamillo.

This marks the first opera production in which all the leads have been taken by students. Previously some of the principals have been played by the faculty members.

The choral director for the performance is Herman Gunter, director of the Choral Union. Robert Sedore is the conductor for the University Symphony, while Miss Betty Jane Grimm is stage director. The Tallahassee Opera Guild is under the guidance and direction of Mrs. Lois Laverne Schoor of the music faculty.

In the cast for both performances will be John Zilles, as Zuniga, captain of the guard; Steve Bevan, Morales, officer in the guard; Carolyn Glenn, Frasquita, a gypsy; Harriet Ramsey, Mercedes, a gypsy; Ralph Nolte, El Dancaire, a smuggler; Bob don Torn, El Remendado, a smuggler; Lonnie Sizer, Lillas Pastia, innkeeper; and Nettie Black, a gypsy dancer.

AWARDS DAY SLATED THURSDAY

The Annual Awards Day and the joint review of the Army and Air Force ROTC cadet corps at Florida State University will be held Thursday.

The ceremony and review will be held on the parade ground north of Doak S. Campbell Stadium at 10:50 p.m.

Royalty Voting Set Tomorrow

Voting for the annual Junior-Senior Prom royalty will be held tomorrow in Westcott and the Student Center.

Students vote for four senior men and four senior women, three junior men and three junior women, to elect a senior king and queen. The rest will serve as their court.

Nominated for the voting are senior women Carol Fulkerson Ashley, Siva Bolton, Sarah Boone, Mary Louise Dee, Betty Gooch, Joan Grantham, Ann Gwin, Deane Jackson and Joan Johansen.

Also Erlyn Perrish, Jeanette Porter, Joeo Tavel, Cynthia Vance, Maxine Vaughn, Anita Wall, Betty Willmon, Lelae Yarborough and June Yates.

Same Tickets Good

Rescheduled Circus Starts Thursday

Circus performances have been rescheduled for Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

According to Mrs. Kathryn Vernon, of the central ticket office, last week's tickets may be used for the particular days indicated. Tickets may be refunded.

Mrs. Vernon cautioned students that tickets can only be used for the appropriate performance. For instance last Thursday's tickets can only be used for Thursday night.

Due to rain last weekend's performances of "Flying High" were cancelled. Special acts were given Saturday night in Westcott for the benefit of out-of-town guests.

On short notice, Village Vamps, police, stage crews, and circus performers appeared ready for action. Lasting an hour each, the two special performances were well received by over three thousand spectators. The circus band was present, with bicycles, skating, clown routines, and balancing among the acts presented.

Made His Grades

Senator Estes Kefauver's speech on campus Friday was received by students with reactions ranging from derogatory criticism to high appreciation.

But at one point during the discussion the students seemed to agree almost unanimously. This was when Sen. Kefauver cleared his throat and stated bravely (for this was a southern audience) that, concerning segregation, "The Supreme Court ruling is the law of the land."

At this statement, the student audience gave the Tennessee Senator his loudest, most unanimous, and most spontaneous round of applause.

Whether such a reflection was to be expected is a matter of conjecture. But at least it was one topic in which the large majority of students agreed with the speaker.

And as such, we felt that, on this campus at least, the presidential aspirant had "made his grades."

We offer our congratulations to the Politics Club for its successful presentation of Sen. Kefauver on campus. The Politics Club, although rarely boasting of what it intends to accomplish, has nonetheless provided students here with much worthy opinion.

We sometimes feel that if other student group would devote similar attention to action rather than talk, much benefit would result.

The Flambeau regrets that it will be unable to devote coverage to Adlai Stevenson's appearance here May 22. The "Soldiers for Stevenson" group, along with the Leon County Stevenson committee, has tentatively scheduled a breakfast honoring the presidency aspirant on that date.

Last issue of the Flambeau, however, will be put out next Tuesday, May 15.

We Agree, Dr. Irish

We heartily agree with sentiments expressed by Dr. Marian Irish of the political science department along the line of governmental control of information.

Speaking recently at a church group meeting on "Freedom To Form an Opinion", she directed criticism at government officials who "classify all kinds of public documents as secret and confidential."

This form of censorship has received considerable adverse comment lately from various sources as having jumped the bounds of necessity—and this view it is used as a means of throttling information that officials would rather not have the public know.

Some quarters view the situation as a new and dangerous "Twentieth Century" kind of censorship and one which the public does not realize presents a large problem to newsmen.

Very recently the American Association of Newspaper Editors at its convention devoted much time to discussing the problem. The group wound up criticizing restrictions on the flow of legitimate information.

But the Irish address went a step further along this bit of reasoning. She spoke of the obligation of the American people to understand that they know enough to make ethical decisions. "The people have the right to know," she said, "but they also have the obligation to find out for themselves."

And who would not agree that this is a sound proposition?

Rain Vs. Circus

Mixed Up

With all the comment made about the unfortunate postponement of "Flying High" due to rain, it might seem ill-advised to say anything in these columns.

But we feel that the rain is too much a nuisance to ignore. While we realize that it had a beneficial effect on the tired-out farm in this area, we believe even they should have had enough by now.

Consequently, the Florida Flambeau has decided to step in. We hereby direct that those in charge of the rain cause its immediate cancellation. We furthermore do not wish to see any more rain on the campus or in the stadium area Wednesday, Thursday, Friday or Saturday.

We realize that certain groups (ROTC members) do not wish to be rain impeded on certain days (Tuesdays). So we will make no further comment concerning such times.

With all the controversy over the circus and rain, we are reminded of a story told about Dr. Sam Neel, FSU's present Dean of Men and past chaplain.

It was rumored that while he was chaplain he would always say an appropriate prayer before FSU's home football games.

We wonder if the new chaplain, Dr. Edwin Harris, has been on the job regarding circus?

Candidates Thank Voters

DEAR JUNIORS,

My appreciation for being almost President of our Senior Class can never be shown in words. But with your help, I will try to live up to the confidence you placed in me by carrying out the duties of the office to the best of my ability, so as to make our class a credit to the University.

During my years as Sophomore President, the Vice President then, Ray Wagner, was a constantly dependable worker; the kind who get things done in a quick sufficient manner. Please consider Ray when you vote in the run-offs Tuesday.

SINCERELY,
PAUL ORT

DEAR SOPHOMORES

I want to take this opportunity to thank each and every person who contributed in any way toward my election to the office of Junior Vice-President. Many of you worked long hard and I want to express my appreciation to you publicly.

I am making an honest endeavor to thank each person individually, but in case I should happen to miss anyone, let me just say thanks a very much. I will work with our officers in view of his past record of service to Florida State.

SINCERELY YOURS,
THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
STUDENT PARTY

DEAR CLASS OF '59

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of you who placed your confidence in me. I will assure you now that I will serve you to the best of my ability in the Senate, next year.

SINCERELY YOURS,
GERRY GORDON

TO THE STUDENT BODY:

The Student Party wishes to endorse Bob Johnson for the position of Junior Men's Senate We feel that Bob has already shown that he is willing and able to serve us in this position in view of his past record of service to Florida State.

Letters To The Editor

Food Service

TO THE EDITOR:

On your editorial page is an article about raising the salaries of students who work for the University Food Services. That ought to be done

Concerning the University Food Services, I have a real gripe. In fact, it has led me to find another place to eat my meals after taking all I could of what is served in the Seminole Cafeteria.

After eating around town, I have discovered that you can often get twice the meal given in the University cafeterias at a much lower price. For example, I had a veal chop a week or so ago on the campus. For forty cents I got a chop out of which I received about four bites. For five cents, I got eight strangly pieces of french fried potatoes, and for a nickel two hard rolls. I couldn't hardly break in two, much less eat because they were stale.

The situation has been true time after time all semester long. The only change I have observed before this is because it is convenient to eat my meals on the campus. And a person ought to be able to do this, and get both quality and a reasonable quantity for a fair price.

The General Catalog states that a person can eat three meals for about $1.65 a day. Whoever wrote that must have had prices of days gone by in mind. For $1.65 you are lucky to eat two meals a day. If a person has meat, two vegetables, a dessert or salad, rolls and margarine, and milk, it will cost approximately $.85 just for one meal. For the same price downtown, you get both a dessert and a salad and the quantity and quality is far superior.

The Senate ought to consider a pay raise for students who work for the University Food Services. They ought also to consider the prices paid for food, as well as the service, plus the quality. An improvement all the way around is very desirable.

SINCERELY,
RALPH W. WIDENER, JR.

I Agree

TO THE EDITOR:

Bob Johnson couldn't have been more accurate in his description of continuous concerning long playing recordings in the music library.

I will not go into differentiality for the most part but the staff seems to know nothing about the technical aspect of these records with the result that few are even listening to now.

WESLEY BANQUET SET THURSDAY

Wesley Foundation's annual banquet will be held Thursday beginning at 6 p.m. Theme of the banquet, which honors seniors, is "Summertime." Guests may wear outfits to correspond with the ways they intend to spend the summer.

Congratulations

DEAR EDITOR

I want you to know how sincerely we appreciate the distinction which has recently come to the Flambeau under your editorship. We are pleased, indeed, to have national distinction for our campus publication.

In this connection, let me say that I believe you have maintained the highest level of publication that we have had in many, many years. Congratulations to you and your entire staff.

P. Depressly

DEAR SIR:

Just what does Mr. "In the Wings" mean by slandering our hero, the singer of such great tunes as Blue Suede Shoes and Heart-Break Hotel?

I repeat, just what does he mean? If I may quote from a high school newspaper writer it seems to have some bearing on the subject

Our school will welcome a new teacher next week, it was announced today by the administration.

Mr. Pelvis Depressly will be the addition to the ranks of the faculty and will teach music appreciation to senior high students. Mr. Depressly's ability in this line had long been impressionist, for he is an able performer as well as a teacher. His personal appearances at arenas throughout the nation have brought him lasting fame.

His classical renditions are highly acclaimed and he has made several best-selling records.

Not only does he excel in this line, but in the literary field also His books, "How to win Friends in three Easy Words" and "Pat Down in Dixie In" were both recent Book-of-the-Month club selections.

We are glad to have you, Mr. Depressly, and we hope that you'll let us in on the secret of your success.

Women's Rules: FSU Beats Emor

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

EVERY SO OFTEN, when an attack is made upon the puritannical social regulations here, someone is sure to say, "But they're worse at other schools."

Well, perhaps. Some girls' schools, maybe. But to cite one notable exception, Emory University's social rules and attitudes make ours look like a stone tablet from the you-know-what age.

I was around Emory last weekend while attending the Metropolitan Opera in Atlanta. It was a pleasant but shocking experience.

Exception number one: Coeds don't have to struggle up the stairs with heavy suitcases. As long as the dormitories are unlocked with a lusty bellow of "Man in the hall!" he can escort the big piece of civilization.

Item number two: Bermuda shorts are permitted, except in the library, the main cafeteria, and the administration buildings. They can be worn on campus, in the dorms, in the hangouts equivalent to Mexico and the Kahler's, the Varsity.

Exception number three: The girls make their own rules, and every self-elected judicial bodies, which define the codes, are far more than convenient rubber stamps.

Exception number four: Freshman are limited to 10:30 week nights but can choose any night a week for a 11:30 deadline and one night a week for a 12:30. Twice a month they can take 1:30 extensions. Sophomores and Juniors have 1:30's regularly, can sign out for overnights without restraint; and seniors are practically without restriction.

THOSE ARE JUST THE RULES with the school remarked that there is relatively little scandal.

If a girl comes in late there is no extension privilege—she just is used up. And she is not penalized for the violation. She gets warnings, and if too

The Student: A Story For Today

By OSCAR JOHNSON

THE STUDENT was getting bored with his classwork. Day after day it was the same old grind—up to class, regularly, on to class.

Today it was no different. The professor stood before the class, belaboring a point and soon the student found himself glancing out the window. He noticed a fly come into the room through the window and buzz onto a desk nearby. He stared at it moodily.

Gradually the classroom around him began to grow dim and soon the student found himself drifting off into sleep.

It was dusk, and he found himself transported to a far-away land. He was standing on the shore of a beautiful body of water, feeling the cool sand brush his face it was the Aegean Sea and through the darkness the student watched the delicate foamy surf as this moonlight illuminated the bronze-green water.

HE FELT under his bare feet the moist sand, and knew the beach had been the same for millenia past, and would be for many millenia more. Then the day faded to a close and all that left was the water and the moonlight and the star-speckled blackness.

The student waited. How long he stood there he could not tell, for time and thought

Ex-Student's Opera Show Promise

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

JOURNEY—Gainesville over the week-end to see the premiere of Jack Jarrett's opera, Cinderella. Jarrett, as some of you will remember, is a composition-and-voice student here year before last. Another former student, Barbara Foster Springer, sang the leading role.

The music was not overly ambitious in scope as I would expect from an "opera"; it was more in the light operetta of the Johann Strauss-Victor Herbert-Rudolph Friml type. I found its saccharine for my taste, but it was expertly done.

Jarrett has juiced up the original plot somewhat and introduced a few torrid love scenes. This fairy godmother is now a fairy godfather (Jarrett calls him the "Miracle Man"), and the glass slipper of Cinderella is now the ring the feet of anyone besides Cinderella who tries them on.

DRAMATICALLY, the work is weak and slow-moving. There are senseless dance sequences which interfere with the plot and serve no useful purpose except as entertainment. The appreciation of the work was greatly hampered by the fact that I couldn't understand anything the leads were singing. The best lines were sung by the cast of three minor characters—the jester and the two sisters.

On the plus side of the sheet, there was

Students Discuss 18-Year-Old Vote

PORT COLLINS, Colorado (ACP)—A bill has been introduced in the Colorado legislature which would grant 18-year-olds the right to vote. Naturally, it's created a bit of controversy and the Rocky Mountain College (Colorado) carried some pro and con statements by professors and students.

Randall Reuchelle of the Colorado A & M English department says "age should be the criteria, but if it is, then 21 is surely a better age. Examining the argument which says that if 18-year-olds are enough to fight, they are old enough to vote, he comments "If this is true, then there is too old to fight be is too old to vote."

Three history professors expressed the belief that the 18-year-old citizen has sufficient stake in the community to warrant lowering the voting age to 18 years. Professor William Irwin, pointed out that an 18-year-old soldier is not a disfranchised. He says the same traits in a voter would prove disastrous.

One Colorado A & M student agreed with the professors. Barbara Scott of Golden said: "Although at 18 interest in elections is great, I feel that personal traits of age are swayed more by personal interests than by actual reasoning concerning the candidates qualifications and interest in the welfare as a whole."

From the other side of the fence came some remarks from student Larry Nash. He thinks 18-year-olds should be given the vote because he feels they know much more in many cases than the older voters. Said Nash: "If-year-olds are mature enough because of political and governmental courses they have taken in high school and in college. Nash also feels that radio and television have a way of informing the youth of today more thoroughly than the youth of a generation ago. For these reasons, he thinks they should be allowed to vote.

ON FREEDOM OF DISSENT

ACP)—The Daily Texan at the University of Texas got itself involved in a maior dispute when it criticized the controversial Brighter-Harris natural gas bill in its editorial columns. The paper immediately blasted the school's board of regents. In defense of their action, the editors printed this editorial reply:

"Ideas can be quite hard to defend.

"We feel that the Daily Texan is on safe grounds to discuss the Fulbright-Harris natural gas bill when 49 per cent of Texas tax money comes from oil and gas," Claude Voyles, president told the Austin American.

"We feel that, because the statement is bearing on a case in point, it should be printed," Mr. Voyles is suggesting, in essence, that freedom of the press depends upon economic advantage. In other words the Texan has existed because it has not committed the unforgiveable crime of going against the economic grain.

The issue is not how the Texan feels on the Fulbright-Harris bill. We believe as it is entitled to. The issue is, should not a newspaper have the right to criticize the majority? Can a newspaper sometimes be the underdog?

"The prerogative of dissent against a political party, an elected official, or a legislative measure must never be dissolved. In colleges and universities, the freedom to learn and to express unhampered by pressures, prejudices and politics is essential, since without it, these institutions would lose their reasons for existence. As Commager said, 'We do not encourage dissent for sentimental reasons, but because we cannot live without it.'"

The Press Table

By ALAN WHITMARSH
Flambeau Sports Editor

ROW ROW ROW—

They held a track meet here Saturday, the annual Florida AAU skirmish, at least we thought it was going to be a track meet.

After a heavy rain, including a downpour Saturday morning, the track was in bad shape, but even in the mud the boys were breaking several existing marks.

Among these were a new mile mark by former Florida athlete Bill Adams, a new broad jump standard by Buddy Fowlkes, a former Georgia Tech speedster, and a 440 mark by Florida's Earl Crozier.

Then, the fun began. Just before the start of the 220-yard dash, the rains came, and did they come.

Athletes, officials, photographers, coaches and most anybody else who could get there made a mad dash for the official desk, covered nicely by a canvas in the center of the field.

Most of the fans left for the shelter of their cars, but those who could crowded into the sheltered boxes in back of the bleechers, ordinarily used for the scoring tables.

But the track meet went on, as hardy athletes struggled and slushed through three more events.

The track had not yet begun to flood at the start of the 220, and Fowlkes amazed scorers and fans alike with a time of 21.5, in the rain and mud, not bad at all. As a matter of fact only .2 off the AAU record.

About this point, you crowd further under the protective canvas, which is beginning to show signs of leakage dangerously close to your head.

By this time, the track is a quagmire, but there are guts or eight "mudders" out there, set for the two-mile run, or swim.

Now the canvas is beginning to leak steadily, and a few more fans seek the dry (comparatively at least) refuge of nearby Florida High, but the runners plod on.

Then you send a photographer out to brave the deluge, in hopes that a picture of the muddy finish of the two-mile would be a good shot.

As the muddy-covered runners struggle in from the long grind, one of the prospective swimmers in the mile race suggests that maybe a rowing shell would be more appropriate than track shoes for the agreed with him.

The rain slackens very slightly, and you decide that's it a good time to make a run for it.

From the safety of West Hall, you watch the mile relay, though yet undecided because the rain's so heavy that sight of the track is near impossible.

You wonder why track teams don't take up the example of the basketballers and call off meets which are obviously obliterated by weather conditions.

So, another AAU track meet is over, and we didn't get a soul in a bathing suit.

ON THE SIDELINES: It looked for a time as if Buddy Fowlkes and Bill Adams (both unattached entries) might even outscore the entire Miami team by themselves, but the Hurricanes "rallied" to outdistance them in the final events . . . Fowlkes set a new mark in the broad jump, finished second in the 100, and won the 220 and Adams won the mile with a new record and sloshed to victory in the two-mile . . .

Speaking of track, weather conditions were a little more favorable to the sport in Durham, North Carolina, and Duke's amazing Dave Sime proceeded to almost better three world marks . . . Sime dashed to a record-breaking time in the 220, and was just .1 off with his times in the 100 and the low hurdles . . . watch him in the Olympics, if he doesn't get there someoody "goofed."

Gators 'Swim' To AAU Victory

Tribe Nine Ends Road Trip Today

The Seminole baseball team winds up a four-game road trip at the University of Georgia today, with a possible bid to the NCAA tournament hanging in the balance.

After a 5-3 win over Georgia Teachers Friday, the Tribe baseballers were rained out in their second game there and met Georgia yesterday with Tommy Garvey expected to hurl.

Since Seminole mentor Danny Litchfield took no Seniors on the trip, Sophomore Fred Kenney or John Bristol is expected to get the starting nod against the Bulldogs today.

The Seniors were left home in order to save them for a possible trip to the NCAA. Those left behind included ace pitcher Max Long, George Hehemann, Jim Alwood and catcher Gary Ashley.

Friday, the Seminoles' ace southpaw Tony Aviable turned in his sixth win of the season by beating Teachers, 5-3, on the strength of homers by Dick Howser and John Sheppard.

Howser hit his third round tripper of the year, a team-leading total, with one on, then catcher Shppard slammed one out some 400 feet with two mates aboard to see up the triumph.

Aviable walked nine and gave up seven hits to keep himself in constant trouble, but turned in 12 strikeouts, to boost his record-breaking total to 109 this year.

Sophomore right-hander Jerry Boxer started Saturday's game, but the contest was rained out with Georgia Teachers leading 7-0, and batting in the last of the second frame.

FOURTH IN SOUTHERN — Bob Shave, the Seminoles' sensational freshman golfer, who finished fourth in the Southern Intercollegiate tourney this past weekend with a 292.

Seminoles Take Second With 45½ Points; Old Marks Fall

By BOB WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Writer

Despite the threatening showers which finally materialized, athletes from throughout the state established seven new meet records in the Florida AAU track meet held here Saturday.

Old marks fell in the 100, 220 yd dashes, the 440 yd dash, the mile run, the 220 yd. low hurdles, the shot put and broad jump field events.

The University of Florida varsity track squad dashed an early Florida State lead with seven first places to emerge the top track team in the state with a total of 67 points.

The Seminoles held a scant 21-16 lead after five events, but lost the lead after that point and never regained it.

The Florida State entry, the defending champions of the state AAU title, lacked the manpower to sustain an adequate defense of the title and had to settle for second place with 45½ points.

The University of Miami with 18½ and the University of Florida freshman team with 4 points rounded out the third and fourth places. Each team had one record-breaking entry apiece.

The Hurricanes' Bill Bennett, running in the 220 low hurdles, established the previous record holder, Jim Smith and hurdle specialist Lincoln Knowles, both of Florida, with a clocking of 23.7.

Goodloe Breaks

A University of Florida freshman, Ellis Goodloe, who is one of the hottest properties in the state, bettered more distinguished competition to establish a new AAU mark in the 100 yd. dash.

Goodloe running well in the cool afternoon, outsprinted the previous record holder, Bumper Watson, and a former Georgia Tech sprinter, Buddy Fowlkes, to clock the 100 in 9.6.

A pair of unattached entries snared the individual high point honors for the meet. Buddy Fowlkes won the individual high point total with two record breaking firsts and one second place.

Distance runner Bill Adams, formerly of Florida, surpassed his own record for the mile besides winning the grueling two mile run.

Fowlkes clipped one-tenth of a second off the 220 yd. dash record of 21.6 set by Bumper Watson in last year's meet.

In the broad jump, Fowlkes was in the unusual position to better his own mark set last year—he leaped 23 feet, 11 inches—nearly two inches better than his old mark set at last year's AAU meet.

Miler Bill Adams was pushed by Seminole Mike Conley to complete the mile nearly three seconds better than the previous mark he made last year.

Adams finished the mile in 4:20.4, while Conley, if he had won, would have been almost 40 seconds under the existing Florida State school record.

One event which attracted considerable interest was the high jump steering J. "Poppa" Hall, plus a cast of collegiate jumpers. Hall, who was merely jumping for exhibition, cleared the high bar at 6 feet, 6 inches.

The official winner of the high jump was George Pendleton, a Gator entry, who was successful at 6 feet, 2 inches. Lloyd Lassen, the Florida State entry, finished second.

The strongest event for the Seminoles, and the only event which produced a Florida State win, was the javelin throw.

Tribe beaten javelin hurler Ron Weaver tossed the javalin 167 feet 8½ inches, while teammate Jerry Henderson and Jimmy Harrell took the place and show positions

Rains Throttle Frat Softball; KA And SC In 4-3 Marathon

Any student who owns a raincoat could have seen for himself some thrillin' softball last week end. For the outcome o f the frat leagues is remaining in doubt right down to the wire, and damp, close games were being played all over the place.

KA and SC played 0-0 right up into the 5th on Thursday' night before the second team got the ball. The same two outfits hooked up on Saturday morning with KA coming from behind in the 6th and 7th to win 4-3 in a well-played, nail-biting game, played partly in a steady rain.

SC passed up two good chances to win, once in the 4th filling the bases with none gone.

Then there was the SN-TC game later in the year, with 1 hafer hurling TC to a 2-1 win in spite of Callahan allowing 2ns hits and also scoring the only run, with a mighty base hit which John made 3 bases on, but scored on a single.

LCA outsid SPE for a 9-4 win. all 18 players coming out more beautiful, with full mud packs.

Baptists led Methodists 6-5 when the water ended it, but ineligible players made them take a 7-0 defeat, by forfeit.

Last night as we went to press 5 games were in progress to find out who plays who beginning tonight in the championships.

In the Dorm league Penthouse is in. They meet the winner of the 2nd place tie between Feds, Senior Hall, and Methodists, in a 3 game series beginning tomorrow evening.

In the Frat National League it is definitely ATO and KA in the American it ma be any two of the following: SAE, TC, SN, PDT.

Three games are on the schedule from 4 p.m. on tonight through Friday, involving both the dorm and frat championships.

The horseshoe tournaments are now on at the courts back of the women's gym. with the finals booked for Friday at 4.

Today's Schedule

Shave Places 4th In Golf Tourney

Bob Shave, Florida State's freshman flash, was the bright spot for the Seminole golf squad last weekend at the Southern Intercollegiate tourney, at Athens, Georgia.

Although Dave Razan of Florida and Shave finished fourth, which according to golf mentor Dr. Don Veller, "is a creditable feat for such a much less a freshman."

Shave's fourth place was the best any FSU player has ever attained in this tournament in the history of the school.

Razan finished with two great rounds of 71 and 73 to bring his total for the tourney to 284. Shave shot a 292 to tie with Dick Parvino of Houston for fourth.

Veller commented that the reason for the team's downfall might be because the "boys were trying to hard." Bob Dunn, who has been the number one man all year, had one bad day which threw him way off par for the rest of the tourney.

Jack Vehgte shot a 294 for the Seminoles, while Dick Huff had a 309. Dr. Veller said that Shave is one of the "best looking prospects" to show up in a long while and he has a "great future" ahead of him.

Reports are that Florida State's basketball coach Bud Kennedy has Leon Hsh's top scorer Dave McCullough all wrapped up for the Tribe's hoop team.

with a ho-ho-bo and a HA-HA-HA, she laughed when I did the CHA-CHA-CHA

The marimbos were marimbaing, the bongos were bongoing and we were gaily dancing a cha-cha-cha. That is, until I noticed Cinderella doubled up with laughter.

Worst of all, the joke was on me. There I was, trying my best to be suave and sophisticated . . . in an old-fashioned hat that seemed to have a built-in heater.

Ah, but I had the last laugh! The next day I bought a new After Six Dinner Jacket. All lost—formal wear that made me look great, yet weighed half as much as my old suit! Why not retire that funny-looking relic and get yourself a cool, comfortable, modern After Six?

Netmen Post 8-7 Mark For Season

The continual rains that have been taking their toll on FSU sports caused the last tennis match of the season to be washed away Saturday, giving the Seminole netters an 8-7 mark for the year.

The Tribe was seeking its ninth win against a strong Rollins contingent, but had to settle for a 5-3 overall winning percentage.

Their right wins came at the expense of Ohio State, Southern Illinois, Georgia Tech, Emory twice, Mercer twice, and Florida Southern.

They were beaten by Georgia twice, Georgia Tech, Miami, Florida twice, and Indiana.

Concerning next year's play coach Keith Pitchford said, "If all my freshmen return to go along with the remaining upperclassmen we should do as well if not better than this year."

Tony Avitable, Florida State's top singles ace has chalked up 105 strikeouts to date. Quite an enviable mark for any college hurler.

Rains On Visit To Florida State

By OSCAR JOHNSON

Toward the latter part of April, and on into May, the rains came.

They caused a starlight serenade to be held in Opperman Music Hall instead of in the amphitheatre; they caused students to hovi over spoiled weekend fun.

They relented briefly to allow U. S. Senator Estes Kefauver to make a presidential campaign speech on campus, but they played havoc with the performance schedule of "Flying High", the student circus.

Last weekend, the rains reached their worst stage. They pounded down savagely in torrents and flooded the roads, walkways and low ground of the campus. Cars stalled. Students got wet.

On Sunday, West Hall officials talked about setting up sandbags to prevent the basement from getting completely flooded. At the Library, the basement did get flooded.

Along fraternity row, students took advantage of the situation by dipping in the swollen, clay-colored waterway behind their fraternity houses.

Others, angered, wondered if the rains would ruin the new performances of the circus, rescheduled for a week later.

At the Weather Bureau, harassed officials explained that it was all "normal" summer weather and predicted scattered showers and thunderbowers "as far as we can see."

And as this was written, the rains kept up their steady, dissolutioning, persistent barrage.

Sorority Visitors Find No Circus

High school seniors were guests of campus sororities for a Circus weekend in which circus was rained out.

The Alpha Chis gave a Bunco Party Friday night and traveled to St. Theresa for a day at the coast Saturday. After a box supper, the guests attended the Circus show in Westcott.

Church services were attended Sunday at the Trinity Methodist, and dinner at the Cherokee Hotel brought an end to the activities.

AD Pi

The Alpha Delta Pis entertained their high school guests with an informal party and a dance at the house. Saturday afternoon a coast party was held at Wakulla Springs followed by a banquet that night. A dinner at the house was served Sunday after church.

Parent's weekend, combined with Circus weekend by the Sigma Chis, failed to be dampened by the weather.

The Sig chapter initiated 23 mothers into the Sigma Chi Mother's Club.

Sig Officers

Newly elected officers for next semester are Bobby Temple, president; Bruce Jacob, vice president; Niles Ray, treasurer; Jim Kauffman, pledge trainer; Bob Morris, associate editor; Allen Scott, secretary; Frank Saitler, corresponding secretary; Rufus Jennings, historian; Lynn Wollschlager, seargeant at arms; Joel Jacobs, house manager; Art Moore, rush chairman.

Delta Zetas entertained 34 girls last weekend . . . Alpha Chis were awarded 2 trophies for scholarship and fraternity education at "State Day." The Sigma Nus entertained the ACOs with a country party last week . . . Phi Phis added 2 trophies to their loot—the Intramural swimming trophy for the third time and the scholarship improvement cup.

What young people are doing at General Electric

Young-ad man handles G-E jet and rocket engine advertising

AFTER RECEIVING A B.A. in English from Brown University, Roy Stratton joined G.E. in 1952 in the Advertising and Public Relations Training Program. He worked as an electronic-book editor and ad-writing copy writer before his current job.

The first jet engine ever to power an American plane was built by General Electric in 1942. Since 1948, G.E. has supplied the Air Force with over 30,000 of its famous J47 jet engines. And General Electric's jet experience soon will be paying additional new dividends to national defense. Its J79—called the most advanced engine of its type in the world—will soon enter production.

The man responsible for reporting G.E.'s jet and rocket engine progress to its customers and the public is Roy O. Stratton, Jr., 27-year-old account supervisor in the Company's Apparatus Advertising and Sales Promotion Department.

Stratton's Work Important, Interesting

Stratton supervises the planning and preparation of direct-mail promotion, brochures, films and presentations, as well as public-information space advertisements for Time, U.S. News & World Report, Business Week, Aviation Week, and other magazines.

Considerable personal contact with the Armed Services makes Stratton's job an interesting one. Last year he traveled over 60,000 miles, visiting many of the country's Air Force bases to gather necessary information and pictures.

25,000 College Graduates at General Electric

When Stratton came to General Electric in 1952, he already knew the kind of work he wanted to do. Like each of our 25,000 college graduates, he is being given the chance to grow and realize his full potential. For General Electric has long believed that when fresh young minds are given the freedom to develop, everybody benefits—the individual, the Company, and the country.

Warren Slaps Back At Women's Senate

Dean Of Women Turns Down Request For Bermuda Wearing

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

The 1956 chapter of Women's Senate's perennial effort's to make legal the wearing of Bermuda shorts ended Wednesday—unsuccessfully.

Dean of Women Katherine Warren announced that a request for permission to wear the controversial Bermudas on Saturdays could not be granted.

Student Senators greeted with sarcastic comments her letter, read in Senate by women's vice-president Jo Jones.

Dean Warren cited the number of tourists traveling through town, many of whom she said "detour through our campus," as one reason why the ban against wearing Bermudas should not be lifted.

Letter Read

Excerpts from her letter follow:

"During the past year, I have made a study of the social standards now in existence in some fifteen large co-educational institutions in the South, including the University of Florida, University of Georgia, the University of Miami, and the University of Alabama. All of these, with no exception, have standards identical with those in effect at Florida State University. In addition, according to statements received from their Deans of Women, they are not anticipating changing these standards. We may assume from this fact that standards of good taste do not alter from campus to campus . . .

"Campus Busy"

"Our University, as you know, is an integral part of Tallahassee, and its campus is a part of the city as much as the main streets of the town. We are adjacent to a much travelled highway which is one of the major entrances into Florida. Tourists from all over the United States enter Florida by way of Tennessee Street and frequently detour through our campus. Their impression of the university is gained primarily by the appearance which we make on the campus. Informal, attractive such as shorts, is not appropriate for a campus which is as public as ours on Saturday, or on any other day in the week."

She also commented that the social standards in effect at Florida State University, and at other large co-educational institutions in the South, recognize that shorts and similar apparel is suitable for most informal occasions, including beach parties, for participation in active sports, and for lounging in recreation rooms and student rooms in residence. They are not appropriate for wear on a job well, on the campus, for class, for town, for eating establishments or on other public occasions. These standards seem in keeping with the mores of the communities in which the students of good taste generally practiced.

"Parish Reputation"

"To deviate from the high standards in dress, and in all other respects, which characterize students of Florida State University have consistently maintained, would in my opinion compromise these standards and inevitably forfeit a reputation for those who were been a source of pride to our students, our alumnae, and our partners throughout the state."

Men's vice-president Hans Tews broke into the reading of the letter after Miss Warren's references to social rules at the other universities.

"We stand for progress," he protested.

Senators Unimpressed

Senators appeared unimpressed with the dean's reasons for not granting the spelling through the city. Some of them laughed.

More laughter was provoked when a member of Senate asked "May the letter be referred to Senate Signals?"

"What can we do about this sort of thing?", Tews asked of Jones.

"Nothing," she answered.

Old Objections

The women's vice-president said that Women's Senate had met with Dean Warren on a previous occasion and had heard the dean voice identical objections.

"Isn't this sort of a ritual . . . an annual try?" continued Tews.

One Senator commented the shorts issue had been "the rage" for years.

"They've been the rage since 1492," snapped Senator Peter Dunn.

No action was taken.

Senate Seeks Increased Food Employee Pay

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Higher wages for student workers in the university cafeterias were called for Wednesday in a Student Senate resolution.

The resolution, introduced a week before, cited increased food prices and a disparity between wage credits and food costs as reasons for the suggested pay boosts.

Senate protested against what it termed a lack of "incentive" to food service employees.

The resolution calls for 70 cents per hour for a student's first year of employment, 75 to 75 cents the second year, 75 to 80 cents the third year, and 80 to 85 cents the fourth year.

Resolution

The text of the resolution follows, somewhat abridged:

WHEREAS, The student food service organizations are non-profit making organizations, and

WHEREAS, the student food service organizations have raised their prices by a two to five cent margin on many food items, and

WHEREAS, the Florida State University Cafeteria states that food costs of students average $1.65 a day or $11.55 per week therefore increases of said prices and

Only $18

WHEREAS, student employees of the student food organizations receive only a $18 meal book for 15 hours of work per week, and

WHEREAS, this amount doesn't cover the old student food costs at various fraternities and to the FSU catalogue and

WHEREAS, in actuality the $18 meal ticket is worth only $7 after the profit of each food item purchased by the student employee is taken off, and

"Guaranteed Return"

WHEREAS, all taxes of the student employees of the student food organizations are guaranteed to return to the student food organizations, and

WHEREAS, there are no stated wage raises for jobs well done, and

WHEREAS, this takes away any incentive for the student employee to do a job well,

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED, that the Senate recommends that the student employees of the student food organizations be given a raise in keeping with the mores of the communities in which the students of good taste generally practiced.

Cites Merit

Senate's resolution stipulated the wage boosts would be granted only to "deserving" employees.

Tews, vice - president Hans Tews, who works as a manager in the Union Coke Club, told the Senate that a few students can win supervisory jobs which do not pay, however, pay higher wages. A student managership pays $18 a week, he said, but admitted that only one such post is filled at the time—by him.

The resolution passed unanimously.

In other deliberation, Senate CONFIRMED appointments of five members of president-elect Dave Barkman's cabinet: Carmine Rasieri, secretary of student events; Jan Kamins, secretary of state; Evelyn Moll, secretary of finance; Barbara Jeffries, secretary of the interior; and Arnold Gerstein, attorney general.

HEARD more appointments from Barkman: Jim McIntyre, secretary of honor; Norma Jean Hamilton, secretary of organizations; Jim Kauffman, undersecretary for interior; and Jerome Bernstein, undersecretary for veterans' affairs.

FAILED, however, to pass a bill making the honor and organizations chief full cabinet offices, as specified in Barkman's letter of appointment. President pro tem Jim E. Moore ruled the bill out on a technicality.

POSTPONED until next week reading of the budget for next year which budget committee member Vernon Edgar said calls for $7,000 in revenue from FSU activity fee, of which $12,600 is tentatively appropriated so far.

Only 950 Vote In Runoff Races For Office Here

Campus Elections Are Overshadowed By State Activity

Somewhat overshadowed by state elections, campus polls drew only 950 students to cast their ballots in class run-offs Tuesday.

Cynthia Lawrence, Student Party, edged Winnie Mae Douglas, State , by one vote for a sophomore senate seat in the closest contest in the race.

Other candidates also won by narrow margins. Ray Wagner, State, copped the senior vice-president's office by three votes, with a total of 150.

Gains Judiciary

Nancy Worral, State, gained a sophomore women's judiciary seat by seven votes (486 total). Ann Munroe, Student, copped the highest number of votes for the judiciary (487) with Judy Dekle, Student, second with 610.

Bob Sallo, independent, John C. Calhoun, State, and Charlie Starr, Student, were elected to sophomore men's judiciary with 527, 504, and 501 votes respectively.

Barbara Burkhardt, Student, received 700 votes to 600 Junior women's Honor Court, the highest number given any candidate. The other two elected went to Carole Roth, State, with 658 votes.

Other Offices

Other offices were won by Bob Porter, Student, for men's senate, 1641 votes; Barbara McCartney, independent, junior treasurer, 198 votes; Sue Shives, State, junior social chairman, 199 votes.

Ronnie Blue and Don Lewis, State, were elected men's seats, 252 and 183 votes respectively. Pat Barnes, Student, sophomore class vice-president.

Students Talk To Floridians

Five representatives of the Student Speakers Bureau left Wednesday to present programs over Florida State University before Florida high schools.

Graham Carothers, Coyle Moore, Lowell Roddeberry, Martha Sue Wilson and Jerry Schulders were to deliver 15 minute talks and discussions at various in Miami, Miami Beach, Fort Lauderdale and West Palm Beach.

It was the first trip the bureau has sponsored, according to Coyle Moore, student body president.

"Carmen" opens tonight in Westcott Auditorium, at 8:15 p.m. for a two night stand, after a rousing initial performance in Albany, Georgia.

The Choral Union's Fourth annual operatic production consists of a cast of about 300, including the entire Choral Union under the direction of Herman Ouzts', the University Symphony, conducted by Robert Sedore, and the Tallahassee Junior Chorus, directed by Miss Lois Laverne Schnoor. Stage director is Miss Betty Jane Grimm.

Martha Slaydeo heads the cast tonight in the title role of Carmen with Sam Jordao, as her soldier lover. Don Joe. Bevett Brown takes the role of Micaela, Don Jose's devoted sweetheart, and Robert Wall, sings the toreador, Escamillo, who becomes another of Carmen's lovers.

Second Cast

Taking the leading role tomorrow night will be Charlaine Weeks as the vivacious Carmen, with Wendell Barnhill as Don Jose. The husband and wife team of Barbara and Peter Peck take the roles of Micaela and Escamillo respectively.

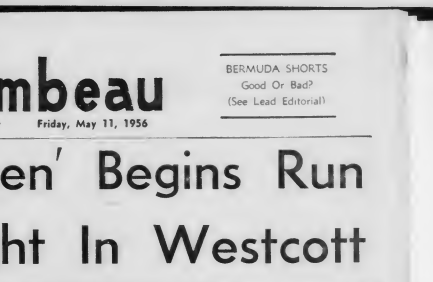
There is no charge for these performances and there are no tickets to buy. Admission is free and it is open to the public.

Taking roles for both performances are John Edles, as Dancaire, captain in the guard; Steve Bevan, Morales, officer in the guard; Carolyn Glenn, Frasquita, a gypsy. Harriet Ramsey, Mercedes, another gypsy; Ralph Nelson, El Dancaire, a smuggler; Sheldon Torn, El Remendado, a smuggler; Carter Revier, Lillas Pastea, innkeeper; and Nettie Black, a gypsy dancer.

All Students

This is the first choral union opera in which all the leads have been taken by students.

The scenery and construction committee is being managed by Gene Rowell Chairman of the committee consumtes is Byron Nichols. Costume and properties committee Chairmen are Carolyn Glenn and Louise McClure Make up committee chairman is Betty Jane Grimm.



During the opera a brass ensemble performs offstage for special effects. The ensemble will consist of Shirley Wallace, Mike Hipps, Les Lisle, Bob Brady and Price Buhrman.

HILLEL MEETS SUNDAY AT P.M.

Hillel Foundation will hold its last meeting of the semester Sunday at 4 p.m. at Temple Israel.

The program will feature the presentation of awards by Rabbi Louis Josephson, Hillel director. Election for the fall semester are also on the agenda.

The party will follow the meeting in honor of the new officers, according to Allan Cordish, Hillel president.

Singers Present Concert Sunday

The University Singers will conclude their concert work for the year in their annual final program in the campus Sunday, beginning at 4 p.m. Opperman Music Hall.

For their last concert, the Singers have chosen two works which have never previously been presented here or elsewhere in the South.

The select choral group, under the direction of Dr. Wiley D. Housewright, will begin the program with "Now Thank We All Our God," by Johann Pachelbel, which is a motet for a double chorus.

Specially Imported

This choral arrangement was published by a German company and imported especially for this occasion, Dr. Housewright said It is actually a Lutheran hymn which was made popular by Johann Sebastian Bach. The double chorus, which is composed of an antiphonal or answering chorus, is quite effective

The second number chosen for the final concert is Beethoven's Mass in C Major, Opus 86, which includes four sections: I. Kyrie, Gloria, III. Credo, and IV Sanctus.

Quartet

One of the features of the work is the use of a solo quartet in opposition to the chorus. In Sunday's performance, the solo parts will be taken by small groups of singers within the chorus itself. There are 16 solo parts which call attention to individual performers, but rather hinder, tend to lessen the overall effect of work.

The soloists who will comprise the quartets are Margaret Yeats, Elaine Clark and Patricia Bridges, soprano; Meredith Dawson, Harriette Morrill and Charlaine Weeks, alto; Robert Hudson, Philip Knight, and Pat Napier, tenors and Paul Mesler, Gene Bryan, and Paul Perry, basses.

Annual Ready By August 1st

The 1956 Tally-Ho will be ready for delivery August 1, according to Jon Frederick, yearbook editor-in-chief.

Students not planning to return in September will have copies mailed to them, provided they had their pictures taken or signed up for the yearbook.

Broderick said seniors will automatically receive their copies undergraduates who don't intend to return will have to have their home addresses with. Dr. Reid Montgomery, director of publications, in 18 Loogmire. There will be no mailing charges.

Student return in September may get their Tally-Hos at that time by presenting their ID cards from this semester. Summer school students will be allowed to pick up their copies August 1.

Broderick said distribution will be made first to those students who had their pictures taken for the yearbook or who reserved copies pursuant to his request. Others, he said, will have to account upon whatever copies remain.

Tickets Still Left For Flying High

There are still plenty of tickets left for the rescheduled performances tonight and tomorrow night of "Flying High."

Both the Westcott ticket office and the athletic ticket office in the Student Center said that recent tickets were on hand yesterday.

They may be obtained for 50 cents and activity coupon number eight, and entitle the student to reserved seats.

Mrs. Kathryn Vernon, of the Westcott ticket office said a number of tickets were refunded after last week's performances were rained out. She said that most of the refunds were for tickets that had been bought for out of town guests.

Grad Activities Are Announced

Graduation activities for candidates for degrees have been announced by Senior Class President Bob Crenshaw.

Senior Class Day, to feature a speech by Crenshaw, readings of the class history, poem, rendition of a class song, and the formal presentation of Hall of Fame members by Florida State University President Doak S. Campbell, marks the beginning of the program next Friday at 5 p.m.

Admission tickets for Baccalaureate service, which takes place Sunday, May 27, in Westcott, beginning at 10 a.m., might be secured at Westcott ticket office Saturday, May 26 from 10:30 a.m to noon and Sunday, from 9 to 9:30 a.m. To provide for non-Florida State graduation in Westcott will be distributed at the same times and places.

Seniors, parents and friends have been invited to the President's reception from 11 a.m. to noon May 28 at the home of President and Mrs. Campbell.

At 5 p.m. that day a buffet supper will be sponsored by the Alumni Association in the Tallahassee Woman Room. It is necessary to purchase tickets for this function before May 24, Crenshaw told Seniors.

Graduation exercises begin at 8 p.m. May 28 in Doak S. Campbell stadium, where Dr. J. Wayne Reitz, president of the University of Florida, will deliver the address.

That night an informal dance will be held beginning at 10 p.m. in the Student Center Refreshments will be served and all are invited, Crenshaw said.

Royalty Revealed This Evening

A Junior-Senior Prom King and a Queen will be announced by Senior Bob R. Quigley at the formal dance tonight in the Tallahassee Country Club.

Commuons music will be provided from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. by two campus bands, the Dominoes and the Devilaires.

A senior King and Queen will be announced from court members Jim Atwood, Graham Carothers, Bob Crenshaw, Jim Greshow, Stew Bolton, Joan Tavel, Nancy Vaughn, and June Yates.

The six who are each members from the Junior class are Dave Barkman, Jim Thompson, Bob Temple, Fay Anthony, Nancy Cubbon, and Betty Lou Whittle.

Stafford Wins 4th Scholarship

James Stafford, Junior piano major, recently won his fourth music scholarship—the Marie Morrisey Keith award of $500.

On a semi-national basis, the Keith contest included performances in music and oratory.

Stafford received his first scholarship last year when he won the Delius Memorial of Federation of Music Clubs' biennial competition. He also won the New Orleans Opera Guild scholarship.

Stafford he is the holder of the Dohnanyi-Gridley scholarship. Entered the Florida Division of Federation of Music Clubs preliminaries two months ago in Daytona where he won the state contest. Recordings of his playing were sent away, with the result that he was presented with a fourth scholarship.

Stafford made his debut in music at the age of fifteen—the first of three years as piano lessons—by playing Schumann's Concerto in A Minor" with the New Orleans Symphony Orchestra. In the five years since then, he has played with the Shreveport and New Orleans Symphony orchestras on several occasions. He also appeared on the New Talent in the USA" television show while in high school.

When asked how he had made such progress, the student of Edward Kilenyi, explained modestly that it was just "hard work." He has been playing by ear all his life, he added.

Official Notice

Under the new regulations for entrance to the Graduate School, candidates for admission must take either the Graduate Record Aptitude Tests or the Miller Analogies Test. Since the Graduate Record Examination is not available for those students wishing to enter the summer school, the Miller Analogies Test is being offered regularly between now and next school. The next administration of the Miller Analogies Test will be on Wednesday, May 16, at 3 p.m. Candidates must contact the Test Service Bureau of Education to obtain the necessary slip before the examination.

Registration for the Graduate Record Examination, to be given April 7, must be made with the Test Service Bureau, 210 Education Building, by April 21. Tests made at this administration may be used in applying for admission to the Graduate School for Fall, 1956.

Student Work Bureau Planned

Plans are now under way to set up a new student employment

Designed to aid Florida State University students in getting summer and summer work, the bureau is under the sponsorship of the University of Labor's committee.

Jan Wilder, Secretary of Labor, announced that he and his committee have been working for the past of Vocational Guidance and Placement on the matter.

The office will coordinate the work under the direction of Ralph Wilder explained Wilder.

"We are now in the process of making a survey of employment opportunities in Florida," he said. "We hope to persuade employers that they should hire students to help their part time work.

Another plan under consideration is establishing a summer laborers' service." At present, there is no coordinate plan for the solution of jobs," commented Wilder. "Each department has applications for labor which is especially We hope to get a system where everyone will work better for the benefit of students."

Specific plans are to go into effect as soon as possible . We feel that the part time service begin in September," commented Wilder. "with the other two being next summer."

Sigma Alpha Eta Now Organizing

Sigma Alpha Eta, honorary speech correction and Hearing fraternity held an organizational meeting and election of officers recently.

Sam Faircloth was elected president, Ralph Widener, vice president, Ralph Widener, corresponding secretary, Martha Grant, recording secretary and Tann Parrcloth, treasurer.

The fraternity is open to all regularly enrolled college students interested in speech correction and the education of acoustically - handicapped persons.

Officials said the purpose of the group is to acquaint students with the opportunities open in the field of speech and hearing therapy.

The Bermuda Issue

Once again, women's Senate's request that Bermuda shorts be a little less forbidden has been denied.

We have no doubt that Dean of Women Katherine Warren, in turning down a plea that Bermudas be allowed on Saturdays, acted in good faith and with a sincere interest in the welfare of our students.

We question, however, whether she is correct in some of her assumptions and justified in her conclusion.

Dean Warren said that many tourists drive through the campus, and that they would be offended to see our coeds attired in Bermuda shorts.

We do not think that the tourists who drive through our campus do so in such overwhelming floods of traffic that the shorts would be a traffic hazard, or even a public relations hazard. Furthermore, tourists are noted for their liberty in matters of dress. We do not criticize Dean Rather, we applaud it. But this is enough to show that the traffic through Tallahassee hardly seems a sufficient objection to the wearing of Bermuda shorts one day a week.

Standards Alter

Perhaps many colleges and universities do forbid the shorts, but we cannot agree with Dean Warren that "standards of good taste do not alter from campus to campus."

At most of the Ivy League schools and the other noted institutions in the rural as well as urban north, Bermuda shorts, slacks, and pedal pushers are accepted wear. These same schools would be aghast at the sight of the un-glamorous raincoats our coeds are now forced to wear if they leave their dormitory rooms on a Saturday for a stroll, a restaurant or a trip to the post office.

We are not particularly concerned with the isolated comments of a handful of administrators from other schools, whom Dean Warren quotes as supporting the present restrictions. It wasn't so long ago that the view of a woman's ankle constituted a sin both for the woman and the watcher. That day has passed, and the day of the absolute prohibition of Bermuda shorts should pass also.

There is nothing immoral or offensive about them. When properly worn they can be extremely chic. We cannot envision any impairment of morals or standards if their usage is allowed, particularly on a non-class day.

Let Students Decide

Dean Warren seems concerned that the granting of permission to wear the Bermudas on Saturdays would lead to other libertine concessions. A number of amendments in the current rules are long overdue, but the good taste of the students themselves should be enough to preclude anything offensive.

Children must learn to blow their own noses, tie their own shoelaces, don their own clothes, comb their own hair, and practice their own personal hygiene. All their lives they are led toward an increasing independence and self-reliance, and then, upon their entrance to college, they are as much as told their self-reliance and independence can only be frivolous and untrustworthy.

And it is the same with morals. A person's judgment as to what is ethically and socially correct is only partially instilled in him by others. The rest must be the product of his own convictions. Morality is a personal way of life which can be reached only if the individual is free to arrive at them.

The individuals at Florida State University are unduly restrained in their drive to develop themselves. And we can therefore party-pooping Dean Warren that it is possible a few may seek to break not only the unreasonable bounds but all codes and customs, this intensity produced by social frustration.

We could go on about the lack of faith the Dean has displayed towards Women's Senate, but such has been said before.

"Never Mind — I Think I Get The Idea"

Growing . . . Or Spoiled?

Southern Universities Student Government Association is an awkward child.

A relative infant, it has struggled along as a tool for exchange of opinion among southern college students for three years.

At its recent convention in Knoxville it displayed some of the characteristics that have caused it to play a secondary role rather than a progressive one in benefiting the member schools. The trouble with SUSGA is that although it doesn't seem to ever be able to get anywhere, it is always planning Great Things.

That's the consensus of the delegates from this university who attended the convention last week. They say that little definite was accomplished, but they sensed a potential for action that makes continued membership worthwhile.

A Responsibility

We believe that FSU has a responsibility to give SUSGA the benefit of the doubt whenever possible. After all, the organization had its beginning among FSU students.

But—and this is a big factor—it is getting to be high time that we got something tangible in return for our $25-a-year membership fee.

That was one consideration that FSU delegates took with them to Tennessee. This was not realized. Instead, our delegates were stymied in each attempt they made to have something constructive passed by the other four schools.

The FSU delegates went with the expectation of seeing initiated a new program of ideas and proposals that would lead to increased return for all schools. They hoped to see a group of officials chosen which would be able to provide positive leadership in obtaining goals decided on at the convention.

Instead they got nothing. Each proposal they advanced was defeated.

The Plus Side

On the plus side, FSU delegates felt they had given the others something worthwhile. For instance, other schools were concerned with the keep of the Honor System. They were intrigued with our use of IBM ballots for student elections, which none of them have used. They thought our system of Junior Counselors was a good idea and might be worth adopting.

These things the other schools took back with them. But FSU has gotten nothing.

The question we would raise is whether it is a high enough purpose that we give and do not receive. Does this justify membership?

We hope that when student government officials are deciding whether to remain in SUSGA (or possibly to join National Student Association) they will ponder this.

At this point, all we can say is that the only justification for continued membership is a hope and faith that someday, somewhere, SUSGA will grow up.

Letters To The Editor

DEAR EDITOR:

I cheered the carbon copy of the letter that appeared in Tuesday's Flambeau, and it shows that my letter should have read, "_____, and for a nickel two hard rolls I would hardly break in two."

Some of my friends have asked me about the meaning of the paragraph where I mentioned eating Sowtown. Perhaps it would have been clearer, I mean to say very explicitly that you can get mess for your money at the restaurants downtown.

It would be appreciated if this correction could be printed.

Yours sincerely,
RALPH W. WIDENER, JR.

DEAR SOPHOMORES:

My sincere thanks and appreciation to those who worked, campaigned, and voted in both the primary and the runoff to place me in office as Senior Class Vice-President.

I realize in our Sophomore Class with Paul Ort as president, I would like to assure you all that we will function as a representative unit to the best interests of our class.

With the help and suggestions of the class members, we can again leave the best record behind—especially as the graduating "Centennial Class."

Sincerely,
RAY WAGNER

Collins' Win Compliment To Voter

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

A BIT OF history was written Tuesday. The voters of Florida overwhelmingly decided that LeRoy Collins would become not only the first man ever to serve six straight years as governor, but also would be the first ever to win the Democratic nomination—which is the election in this state—in the first primary.

But the election is far more significant than in the foregone respect. Collins sweep in over Bunny Lowry, his closest opponent, by 245 thousand votes.

This was important. The state has repudiated the type of politics represented by Lowry's campaign.

Many students, most of whom wear a shell of indifference most of the time, were aroused. has already occurred, converted in awe that Lowry even mustered as come in second, with almost 165 thousand votes.

And they were also surprised that Fuller Warren, the powerful former governor, came in fourth behind Farris Bryant, who was in his first state-wide campaign.

The results are all mixed.

LOWRY'S CANDIDACY made ot the governorship battle more of an emotional outburst than a clash of issues. Offering no platform and no government experience, Lowry, with swagger and screaming authenticated that he alone could preserve segregation "interposition," which other southern governors are decrying as a farce, according to Lowry, something he knew would work.

In short, he was the other three who were in the battle could, as governor, preserve segregation longer than Lowry. They would be to stall longer, protect more privileges, devise more strategems, which if successful, would become not only the first unconstitutional, would purchase time and satisfy the majority of Floridians, who wanted to continue the dubious practice.

Lowry's boast and blunder could have created open lawlessness. But he was a screaming paranoiac; perhaps the backing of interests has meant to accept those views perhaps not. At any rate, Lowry played inflamed emotions of those Floridians for segregation, and the sense of insecurity Americans are a relishing, a way of life.

So the voters had to choose between extremism. There were no other issues elected Collins, some of them objected a man who is much like Collins and who certain to succeed the present governor.

Fuller Warren came in last; it is primarily because the state is beyond politics' stage, and partly because he swallowed by Lowry

OF COURSE, one can be discontented there were like a thousand who would person running the kind of hysteria that Lowry conducted, some of which on the other candidates to the extent the state But there would be this of prejudice-orientated people can

We prefer to conjecture how many who voted for Collins and Bryant would a Democratic nominee; those who believe in segregation; who had to vote who said they do in order that one destroy the state would not have the

Guest Column

Music Library Does Excellent Job

By HAROLD T. LUCE

THE "GUEST COLUMN" by Donald W. Johnson in Friday's Flambeau criticizing the music library's record collection brought a problem to the attention of the FSU student body and faculty. It is the problem of most college libraries throughout the country. As Mr. Johnson stated, he is not alone in recognizing the problem nor is he first by any means. However, he apparently wrote his criticism without examination the entire situation, and I was thus prompted to conduct my own investigation of the matter.

The facts are impressive (perhaps erroneously from Mr. Johnson's aside that the music library's record collection is to provide entertainment for the students' leisure moments. Such is, of course, not the case. As with other types of library materials, the records are provided for study—especially for the preparation of term papers and dissertations. A frequent source of irritation to the student of music in the Hi-Fi fan who uses the music library listening facilities as a waiting background for his study of completely unrelated subjects. I hasten to add that this is not a personal accusation.

The following question has often been asked about libraries in general and record libraries in particular: What is the specific function of the library and its staff to protect records or to encourage the use of records? And the answer is obviously: both. The question then must be resolved into how the library can execute this double function as efficiently and economically as possible. It is in this area that Mr. Johnson made his most specific suggestions. His first suggestion regarding polyethylene sleeves has obvious merit.

HIS SECOND and third suggestions concerning record cleaning and handling gives one the impression that little or no effort is being expended by the library staff in this area. My personal experience has shown that virtually every record I have borrowed before I received it and at least half of the records I use are thoroughly cleaned before I am permitted to use them.

Mr. Johnson's fourth suggestion would require library staff members to play all records.

Booking Service Is A Good Deal

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

PHI MU ALPHA, with the cooperation of the School of Music has just announced that it will establish a booking service that will fill in a benefit clubs and organizations in three states by providing them with a roster of talent to choose from. It will give outstanding students here a chance to gain valuable experience in performing.

The booking service will operate on a non-profit basis, but groups sponsoring recitals will pay expenses of the performers incurred. Students wishing to perform will turn in a detailed questionnaire, glossy photo, and statement of their musical background. The information blank will be kept on file and submitted to interested organizations.

Phi Mu Alpha will canvass most of the service clubs and chambers of commerce in the three states, and will book fall recitals during the summer months.

THIS PROJECT cannot be commended highly enough. It is a step in the right direction. Music permits only one full recital by a music major or senior in order to graduate. This is not sufficient performing experience for the outstanding student, especially if he has aspirations toward a career. Phi Mu Alpha has filled a long-felt want.

Wandering With Willjohn

Message To The Carmen Orchestra

BY WILJOHN

FIRST, we'd like to address ourselves to the orchestra for Carmen. When you enter the pit for the performance this year, you will notice a large ease-like thing behind your head. This is called a stage and the people on it are known as performers. They will be singing while you play so you needn't feel offended because that's the way any kind of music is supposed to go. Rather silly, isn't it? Well, anyway, they also do dancing and it is important that this be heard at the same time you're playing! You remember last year you attempted to get back at them for their rudeness by playing louder till you had a nice little fist in your dress between the voices and the voicing? Well, this year we have been a plan worked out. It's to be done just the way the crown-jute do it.

We've heard that you have been very mannerly and pianissimo in rehearsal and we're very proud. You see, that time in front of you the one who is the boss while you're not to play: knows an awful lot about music and so you really needn't crane your necks around to see if the performers are following you because he has his eye on them at every single one of them steps out of line. He'll give it to them, don't you worry.

ONE MORE thing, that man is called the "conductor." He tells you where to saw and blow. Those funny movements he keeps making are for your beat, not attempts at levitation. Wouldn't it look silly if he were to take off? No, sir! You sure don't have to worry about that. Keep your eye on him all through the show so if he makes any mistakes, you can tell about him to your grandkeren and make them laugh.

And don't worry if you get any loud boilers from the stage. That's the people there singing and it's the important part of the show because you'll notice getting out there in the pit that you don't hear that it's done so well, so you nice and soft and maybe the tenors and sopranos hemmorhaging their throats in the middle of arias. If you've ever seen a ruptured aria, you know a mess that can be on stage crew.

The Press Table

By ALAN WHITMARSH
Flambeau Sports Editor
NCAA OR BUST:

Riding on the crest of an unexpected double victory in Georgia, Florida State's chances of going to the NCAA baseball tournament in Omaha appear stronger every day.

However, the Seminoles have run into an unexpected obstacle—ineligibility for many of their top hurlers and batters.

As we understand it, the NCAA's four-year eligibility rule, long a plague to coaches, have rendered these boys ineligible for further competition.

They include Max Long, the Seminoles' ace pitcher, who has racked up a team-leading standard of 7-0 this year and Max Long, the Seminoles' ace pitcher, who has racked up a team-leading standard of 7-0 this year and the ace team in pitching during almost his entire college career.

Also with Max, Jim Atwood (2-0), George Hehemann (.400) and catcher Gary Ashley are ineligible for tournament competition.

This leaves Coach Danny Litwhiler with two of his usual front-line pitchers, Tommy Garcia (3-0) and ace southpaw Tony Avitable, who has a 6-1 mark and a 0.00 mark for strikeouts.

Also encouraging from Litwhiler's viewpoint was the performance of Sophomore pitcher Fred Kenney in his win over Georgia Tuesday.

Kenney pitched 8 2 3 innings of the 6-2 win with Avitable going the last out, in his first starting performance of the year.

The former West Palm Beach hurler may have to win at least a couple half games if the Seminoles should go on this way to a national crown in June.

The double win over Georgia was particularly surprising in view of the fact that the Bulldogs have not been beaten twice in their home lair in some time.

What actually are the Seminoles' chances of an NCAA bid?

From this corner they look to be very good ones. The NCAA annually selects the top independent in the South and three other southern regionals to be held this year in Georgia, North Carolina with this independent, the Southeastern Conference champion and the Atlantic Coast Conference champion play with the winning to the finals, this year in Omaha in June.

The SEC representative is sure to be Mississippi regardless of the current playoff series between them and Florida to decide the SEC crown.

This was ruled ineligible for post-season play when they received their recent suspension from the NCAA.

Thanks to our information, West Virginia and North Carolina both of whom appeared here in the FSU Invitational are leading the Southern and Atlantic Coast respectively now.

The three top independents currently being considered, from our information, are our own Seminoles, Rollins and Loyola of New Orleans.

However, Florida State's chances probably hinge on the three games with Rollins which opens at Centennial Field.

Rollins is almost certain to face Rollins' great Harold Jennings in the opener. Lawler has 9 wins to his credit thus far and is the top hurler on an FSU platoon.

In turn, Litwhiler will most certainly send Tony Avitable, the record-breaking strikeout king against him. It should be the best pitching duel of the year here.

Tracksters Find Miami No Test

By BOB WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State Seminoles, in their last appearance this year, scored a decisive 92½ to 38½ victory over the University of Miami Hurricanes here under the arc lights Tuesday night.

Coach Mike Long's charges, in notching their seventh conquest, blanketed the Hurricane in almost every event. The badly outmanned Hurricane squad could win but four events.

Sophomore Jack Terwilliger cooped the individual high point honors with firsts in the 100, 220, and 440 yd. running events, and the another leg in winning mile relay.

Bennett Theral

Bennett was the most familiar Hurricane entry in the meet, besides winning the 120 high hurdles, he won another first in the 440 low hurdles a second in the broad jump, and third places in the 100 and 220 dashes.

In the mile run, Seminole Mike Conley ran virtually without competition. Conley took the lead early in the first lap and kept it through out the race to win in 4:35.2 FSU sophomore Ken Segner surged from behind the two Miami milers to capture second place.

Jack Terwilliger maintained a steady, withering pace to outlast Jete Sperekis of Miami with a clocking of 50.8 in the 440. Gary Letchworth copped the show position for the Seminoles.

Teammate Jerry Henderson upset Seminole team captain Ron Weaver in Weaver's particular forte, the javelin throw. Henderson tossed the javelin 181 feet, 1 inch to give Weaver his second loss of the season.

Racing to the wire to give the Seminoles the one-two, positions in the 100 yd. dash, were Jack Terwilliger and Joe Davis. Terwilliger, a step ahead of Davis, sped the 100 yards in 9.8 seconds. Bill Bennett won the third slot for the Hurricanes.

Six feet, three inch Lloyd Larsen smashed the school high jump record that he set this year with his lean of 6". F. Terrery Brown of FSU won second place while Don Hightower of the U of M took third.

AND IT RAINED, AND RAINED, AND RAINED. Former Florida miler Bill Adams "swims" on to a victory in the two-mile at Tallahassee last week's Florida A.A.U. track meet here. Yes, that's water on the track, and lots of it.

Possible NCAA Bid Hinges On Crucial Pair With Rollins

By JOE GREENE
Flambeau Sports Writer

With an NCAA bid hanging in the balance, Florida State and Rollins clash in the first of a crucial two-game series at Centennial Field tonight at 8:00 p.m.

Tony Avitable strikeout ace for the Tribe is the logical choice for mound duty in tonight's game Avitable stands behind a 6-1 record and 106 strikeouts.

Rollins will send Hal Lawler up against the Seminoles in hopes of pulling a last second NCAA bid out of the fire.

To get a bid from the NCAA, the Tars need to sweep the series which will be a most difficult feat No team this year has knocked the Tribe off two in a row.

Rollins has lost games to Florida Southern, Florida and Tampa University during this year's intrastate play.

The Seminoles boast a strong offensive attack at the plate and also a formidable set of opposing pitchers a rue for the enemy.

Dick Howser's .429 leads the team in batting, he also has three home runs to his credit, Phil Hunt and Lee Corso have accounted for 56 of FSU's runs thus far in the season. They have 23 RBI's each.

Bob Rozell poses a constant threat to the opposition, he's batting .382 at present. Batting .314 and a constant jab in the pitcher's side is Owen McCarron.

Final Game

In the final game of the season, Seminole mentor Danny Litwhiler has three probable choices to send up against the Tars

Tommy Garcia with a 3-0 record, Fred Kenney 1-0, and John Bristol with a 1-1 mark.

An eighth inning triple with two outs on base by Lee Corso in the last game with Georgia on Tuesday led to a late game rally and a 6-2 victory over the Bulldogs.

Tim Sheehy's game with the Bulldogs the Tribe pulled a 9-9 victory out of the fire after trailing one run in the top of the ninth to break an 8-8 deadlock and then held the Bulldog scoreless in the bottom of the ninth.

In Tuesday's game the Seminoles found themselves on the short end of a 3-1 score going into the eighth inning However singled and Fred Twomey walked. Then Corso tripled and the game was on ice.

With the Tribe leading 6-3 going into the bottom of the ninth, Georgia filled the bases with two singles, a double play and two walks.

It was all for naught as the Tribe's ace lefty, Tony Avitable came in from the bullpen to strike out Phil Tarleton to end the ball game

Running in Sonder in Monday's game was John Bristol; in Tuesday's fray Fred Kenney picked up his initial win of the season.

Tony Avitable will be gunning for a national collegiate strikeout record in tonight's game.

The present record is 111 set by Jim Mecan of Virginia last season. Avitable now has 106 and will need only six more "K's" to put him into collegiate baseball record books.

The even year jinx still prevails over Florida State's gymnastics team. The Tribe has won all but every odd year since 1951, but has never repeated the following year.

Shortstop Hitting .429

Lack Of Size Fails To Halt Dick Howser's Slugging Bat

By LARRY BLOCK

He may look like the bat boy, but 25 opposing pitchers will tell you that Dick Howser doesn't hit like one.

Howser is leading the team in hitting with a .429 percentage, most hits with 36 and tops in home runs with three.

The native of West Palm Beach is first in runs scored and third in runs batted in.

Not bad for a guy that's only 5-8 and weighs 145 pounds soaking wet.

Where Next?

What position Dick will play next is anybody's guess Currently he is switched down to shortstop post, but has played all over the position as well as third base.

Asked where he preferred to play Howser said, "I feel more at home in the infield. I've always played in the infield, but coach Litwhiler figured he had enough infielders and asked me if I'd ever played in the outfield.

Howser

"I told him I'd played in little and he said to go out to center field. That's where I started the season."

Howser was switched to right field and then over to left, where he finished the year here.

The Tribe took on Wisconsin Litwhiler put Dick at shortstop and he's been there ever since.

When he went to West Palm Beach High, then won the state double-A championship with Howser playing second He was a junior and had never gone out for baseball before as he figured I was too small."

The next year, 1954) Dick was captain of the baseball team and hit over .400, and moved over to shortstop.

Howser gives his high school coach Bob Ruggs credit for any success he has achieved. "He is a wonderful coach especially in teaching me the fundamentals of baseball; to me they are the most important things to learn."

Last year, as a freshman, Dick played junior varsity ball for FSU and was tabbed by Litwhiler as the best first year man he'd ever seen.

Too Small

At the beginning of the season Litwhiler had "thought I was too small."

Dick said that the first game with Georgia on this last road trip was the best of the season. "I got three hits and most of all scored the winning run." The Tribe won 9-9

The future is still a long way off for Howser, but he would like to play pro ball after his college days. Dick's younger brother beat him to it, and is playing professionally in the Kansas City chain.

Dick and everyone else on the team is looking forward to a bid to the NCAA "The team knows these two games with Rollins are important and we're ready for them, especially since we had a good road trip; our morale is tops"

Don Faulk, trainer for the Seminole nine says Dick "is the best ballplayer I've seen all season. He's an all-around player with good baseball sense That's the kind every coach is looking for."

Coach Litwhiler will have good reason to smile for the next two seasons, but the pitchers and coaches of other teams won't. Not with Dick Howser in FSU's starting lineup.

Jim Oler To Head Frosh Cage Team

Former Seminole basethall star Jimmy Oler has been named Freshman basketball coach.

Oler replaced another former Tribe star, two-time Helms all-American Hank Wernke who tutored the Frosh this year.

Oler broke almost every record in the school's cage history this past season, as his 742 points led the Seminoles to a 18-9 record.

There had been reports that he would be drafted by the pros but Oler wrote both teams considering him and told them that he would take over the Freshman coach position instead.

The two pro teams that were interested in Oler are the St. Louis Hawks and the Minneapolis Lakers.

Oler is very optimistic about the schedule his frosh team will face come November

"I'm sure we're going to have a very tough line-up of teams. Many of the teams the varsity will play are going to bring along their frosh teams also."

From what coach Bud Kennedy has told, me about some of the boys that are interested in coming to school here we should have a bunch of very tall boys and I'm sure glad of it.

"Bob Williams' brother will probably be here and he's only 6-7. Most of the boys are 6-4 and over."

Softball Championship Finals On Tap Today And Tomorrow

Some of the best, fastest, sharpest athletic contests of the year have been going on in the softball championship playoffs.

The wind-up of the series will take placa today and tomorrow.

This afternoon at 5 the loser of the ATO-SAE game which was on last night at press time, and the winner of the SN-KA game also going at press time, will meet. The loser will be eliminated. The winner of tonight's game will play the ATO-SAE winner tomorrow morning at 10.

If the losers' bracket team should win at 10, then an extra final will be played at 4 p. m as each team will have lost one game in the double elimination series. This Friday-Saturday schedule has been worked out in order to avoid conflict with the varsity baseball games tonight at 8 and tomorrow at 1.

On Monday ATO nailed down first place in the National League with a 11-6 win over PKP Bruce Hall eliminated the Feds with a 14-3 win. PKA won a Light contest from DTD 7-6, having a big 3rd inning with 3 runs.

SN upset the dope by giving SAE their first loss of the year with a clear-cut 6-1 victory on the strength of Brock's triple and Gerol's home run. In the 2nd game of a double header for SAE they recovered out a 5-4 win over PDT, coming from behind in the closing innings. This marked PDT end of the series.

This left SN and TC tied for 2nd in the American League. Last week TC had beat SN 21-5 and hits to SN 5. The fates reversed the decision Tuesday with SN getting a 3-2 victory.

Senior Hall took second place in the dorm league with a night game victory over Methodists 13-7, on only 6 hits, behind 12 walks.

In the first 4-team double elimination series game, SAE and KA hooked up in an extra-tight pitchers' duel between Nome and Nellums. Nellums allowed 3 hits and Nome 5, with SAE getting a 2-1 win.

ATO won their opening series game 15-3 from SN on 13 hits, 8 walks and an SN infield that rom mitted 4 errors and seemed hungry on key plays. Arbmeier allowed 3 hits to SN but walked only 2 Oler and Bryant had 3 hits.

Senior Hall opened the 3-game series with Penthouse by giving the West Hall team their first setback of the year 6-0. Weber gave up only 3 hits while Green allowed 7. 12 Penthouse won last night's contest the teams play again today at 5. A Senior Hall win gives them the title

Horseshoes

The barnyard golfers have been pitching horseshoes all over the place this last week with TC, ATO, PDT, and PKP surviving the field of 15 starting teams in the first league.

In the first round matches: PKP beat TEP 21-7, 21-6; TC sat by SC 21-6, 21-19. LCA tripped SAE 21-15, 22-20. PDT beat KA 21-2, 21-16; SAE beat SC 21-15, 22-9

Winners bracket semi-finals: TC beat PKP 21-12, 21-3; PDT took 2 games to beat PDT 21-2, 21-19.

SAE eliminated LCA 21-17, 21-8 PKP eliminated KA 21-17, 21-19 and Methodists beat Baptists 15-21, 21-13, 21-9.

In the down divisions Methodists beat in Baptists 21-13, 21-16, in the semi-final after Baptists had beat Penthouse 21-16, 21-18; and Methodists had beat Magnolia 21-6, 21-12.

Penthouse eliminated Magnolia 21-19, 21-15 Methodists knocked out Penthouse 19-21, 21-13, 21-6 Thus left Baptists and Methodists to the finals.

Girls Walked A Mile From J. Paul Sheedy's Till Wildroot Cream-Oil Gave Him Confidence

"Have anything tonight honey?" Sheedy asked his little dream downer. "Get lost," she shrieked, "Your hair's too shaggy, Sheedy. Confidentially it stinks." Well, this was really insulting. So J. Paul got some Wildroot Cream-Oil. Now he's the picture of confidence because it's neat—his hair looks handsome and healthy the way nature intended . . . neat but not greasy. Take Sheedy's advice: If you want to be popular, get a bottle or tube of Wildroot Cream-Oil. Normal-dry if your hair is dry, tight or curly, thick or thin, a few drops of Wildroot Cream-Oil every morning will keep you looking your best. You'll agree Wildroot really keeps Sahara-it place all day long

Mabee Given 1st KA Award

John Mabee, star of "Flying High," has become the first recipient of a trophy commemorating a Florida State University alumnus who died in Korea.

Kappa Alpha fraternity has donated the trophy in memory of Ole Aldridge, whom KA Corie Moore said was one of Flying High's first members.

"He was an outstanding performer in the circus for several years and the circus was his first love. During the Korean War he was an Air Force jet pilot and was shot down and killed in action."

Moore said the annual recipient of the rotating trophy will be elected by members of the circus troupe and will have his name engraved on the award. A smaller trophy will be presented to him for him to keep.

Mabee was given the award at the annual circus banquet last Saturday night, with KA president Bob Porter making the presentation.

this street." How perceptive!

One more thing about Carmen. The prevalent southern audience has a most ungracious habit of rising from its collective seats and leaving the theatre during the curtain calls. This is really so bad. Those performers, vocalist and instrumentalist alike, are going to be doing terrific jobs and they deserve a few moments of your time for some really courteous applause. There is nothing so disheartening as a view of the audiences back as it files out amidst a scattering of polite applause. The first one out doesn't get a prize and the last one doesn't get beaten. If you liked the performance, let the people who gave it know of your approbation in a decent manner.

GYM CLUB SETS ANNUAL PICNIC

The Tallahassee Gymnastics club will sponsor their annual picnic at Levy Park tomorrow from 4 to 8 p.m.

After dinner at 6, the new Iapt for Gymnastics, national gymnastics fraternity, will be presented.

URA Sponsors Last Excursion

Registration for the Wakulla River trip is being held in the Camp Director's office 202 Women's Gym before today.

Cost is 50 cents, the association said.

Persons planning to take the trip should bring a picnic lunch and wear a bathing suit, according to Linda Broderick, URA secretary.

Buddists must first pass a canoeing check which will be given Thursday at 8:30 p.m. in the Women's Gym pool.

MARTIN ANNOUNCES TEACHING PROGRAM

Florida State University announced recently it will institute a new program in September to train the administrators and teachers needed for an expanded junior college program in Florida.

Dr. A. B. Martin, FSU vice president, said Dr. C. C. Colvert, now with the University of Texas and a nationally known authority in the junior college field, has been engaged as visiting professor and consultant.

Board Hears Proposa For Literary Magazine

A proposal to establish a new literary publication at Florida State University was brought before the Board of Publications at its monthly meeting Wednesday.

Students interested in the project appeared before the board to advance the idea. Among them were Bernie Bernard, Dick Parks, Arlieda Rita and Dave Wardheimmo, who said they believed there was an opportunity awaiting the publication of a literary magazine dealing with creative writing, mythology, art work and campus features.

Students must first pass a canoeing check which will be given Thursday at 8:30 p.m. in the Women's Gym pool.

Among specific proposals discussed before the board were (1) use of funds now slated for one issue of Smoke Signals for the literary publication staff, with which a magazine would be put out, (2) combination of funds of regular Smoke Signals staff and the literary backers for the publication of one issue, and (3) publication of one or more literary supplements to the Florida Flambeau.

Editor Favors

The first idea was rejected by Smoke Signals editor-nominee Marcello Truzzi on the grounds that the student body should receive a magazine suited to the needs of all the students. He endorsed the second proposal, stating that next year's Smoke Signals will probably be a joint Florida State University Magazine and will include much material similar to that planned by the literary backers. "If definitely restricted to a literary magazine," he said.

No concrete action was taken by the board. It referred the matter to study by a committee. A meeting of members has been set for today at 4:30 p.m. in the Flambeau office.

The board also considered the subject of obtaining printing equipment for use in printing the Flambeau on the campus. No definite action was taken on either with a committee being appointed to study the possibility of obtaining equipment.

The board went on record as congratulating Editor Jimmie Woods and the staff of the Florida Flambeau for achieving the rank of All-American for the first semester as rated by the Associated Collegiate Press.

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

I always find myself yawning hugely when a comedian, having finished his act, steps out in front of the curtain, takes off his putty nose, assumes a sincere stance, and delivers an oration full of tender and lofty sentiments.

So how come I'm doing precisely the same thing right now?

Two reasons. First, because I couldn't possibly make you laugh at this time of the year; cramming for finals has left you wan, woebegone, and in no mood for innocent merriment.

Second, because this is the last column of the current series, and I'd be a liar if I didn't admit I was just a little bit choked up.

It was two years ago that the makers of Philip Morris asked me to write this column. My first impulse, frankly, was to say no. Though I am a man who likes a dollar as well as the next fellow, my talents just do not seem to lead me in the direction of writing advertising copy. When called upon to rhapsodize about soap or sox or cigarettes, I get to giggling uncontrollably and have to be helped home.

"Buddies," said I to the makers of Philip Morris, "I smoke Philip Morris myself, and I think it's a jim-dandy cigarette. But that's all I think it is—a cigarette. Not a graven image. Not a love object. Just a smoke. I'm afraid I can't get reverent enough to write ad copy for you."

To my astonishment, they seemed delighted. "Reverence is not required," said the people at Philip Morris. They assured me that I would not be required to write fulsome commercials—that I could rib the cigarette and the company all I liked—that my columns would be mine alone, with no editing, no suggestions, and no supervision.

"Hah!" I said by way of reply.

But they kept insisting and finally, my thin breast full of misgivings, I went to work.

For the first few weeks they were scrupulously true to their words. Not one syllable, not one comma, was ever changed; not one quarter-ounce of pressure was ever asserted. But my doubts were not laid to rest. "When will the honeymoon be over?" I kept asking myself.

The answer, gentle readers, is that the honeymoon is still going on. This finishes my second year for Philip Morris. During that time, though I'm sure my copy caused an occasional consumption fit in the boardroom, my entire blanche has remained as blanche as the day it was issued. Whatever I've perpetrated in this column has been, as they guaranteed, mine alone.

They've been living dolls, the makers of Philip Morris, and I think I may be forgiven for getting a trifle misty. And as long as the stops are out, let me say that it's also been a big charge writing for you, the college population of America. Your response has warmed my old heart, and on the occasions when I've visited your campuses, it's been deeply gratifying to see that you're still as pleasantly disorganized as ever. I figure that as long as the likes of you exist, I'm in business.

So, for now, goodbye. Stay well. Stay happy. Stay loose.

© Max Shulman, 1956

Old Max has said it all. We, the makers of Philip Morris, can only add a heartfelt second chorus: Stay well. Stay happy. Stay loose.

Literary 'Signals' Publication Set For Single Issue

Students Agree To Publish 'engarde'

By BOB SIMMONS

Students will receive a literary publication as a part of next year's Smoke Signals series.

Mrs. Arleda Ries, speaking for a group of students who have been working toward the establishment of a creative literary magazine on campus, revealed that an agreement has been made with the 1956-57 editor of Smoke Signals, Marvin Collins, to publish the literary magazine in place of the regular edition of Smoke Signals.

The magazine will be known as "engarde" and will include "fiction, poetry, photo features and articles" Miss Ries explained. The publication of a literary magazine has been a controversial proposal to create a separate literary magazine was brought before the Board of Publications at the last meeting but tired of interested students. Among those appearing before the idea were Bernie Dick Parks, Miss Ries, David Ward-Steinman.

To Use Funds

The use of funds now slated for one issue of Smoke Signals for both a literary magazine and the earlier proposal made at the board meeting. Trustees approved the proposal on condition that the student council receive a magazine subject to the needs of all the students.

Marvin Trusti offered to interview the literary backers of the Smoke Signals staff.

No Decisions

No conclusions were reached at the board meeting. The matter was referred to a committee for study.

Should Smoke Signals editor Bill Hodges was not very optimistic. He declined to comment on a literary talent or funds on campus to produce a magazine. His appraisal of the situation was that the creation of a literary magazine would be a "waste of student money."

When the rumors of the new magazine were circulating around campus Sunday, the factor representing the literary group met with Trusti to work out an agreement.

Dinner Slated For Retirees

Fourteen retiring faculty members will be honored at a formal dinner Saturday.

They are Dr. Raymond Bellamy, Miss Elizabeth Blanding, Miss Rosa Dorman, Dean Ralph Hall, Dr. Paul Finney, Mrs. Phillis Kent, Mrs. Lou Miller, Dr. Annie Pooper, Dr. Harold Smith, Miss Etta Bowden, Miss Hazel Stevenson, Miss Florence Tron, Miss Sallie Williams, and Miss Annie Lee Yates.

Miss Juanita Gibson, assistant director of public administration, will be the dinner, to be held at 6:30 p.m. in the Suwannee Room, will be open to faculty, staff and their families. Tickets for each may be purchased by persons in each school and office she said.

At presentation are Dr. Charles Mental Health campaign which ends May 23. At presentation are Dr. Charles Merial, left, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and Myra Jean Porter, treasurer of the campus chest.

Pretty Posers—Chosan as cheerleaders for next year were Joan Thomas, Judy Dekla and Donna Hardy in competition held Tuesday.

Adlai Campaigns At FSU Tuesday

TO SHAKE HANDS
Adlai Stevenson

Adlai Stevenson brings his campaigning for the state's 28 delegate votes to the democratic national convention to the Florida State University campus next Tuesday.

The Democratic presidential aspirant, who is opposed in Florida by Estes Kefauver, will appear on campus for an hour of informal stumping and handshaking.

Kefauver visited FSU on his way through north Florida about two weeks ago.

Arrives 11 a.m.

Stevenson is slated to arrive at Dale Mabry field 10 A.M., May 22 after donating campaign issues in Miami with Kefauver, on a nation-wide television hookup.

According to Gus Millner, chairman of the Students for Stevenson Club at FSU, plans are being made for a motorcade to meet the Illinois candidate at the airport and escort him to the Cupola Building for a conference with Gov Leroy Collins.

Collins, who has said he will not take sides in the presidential preference race, supported Stevenson in 1952. Many of the governor's friends are said to favor Stevenson.

Chic Club Speech

Stevenson's itinerary includes a speech at 1 p.m. to a joint civic club luncheon in the Suwannee Room. Immediately after the luncheon, he will stump the campus, concentrating his attention on the personal contact method.

The campaign for the 28 delegate votes will come to a head May 29th when Florida's voters go to the polls. However, all indications point to a low turnout for the presidential preference primary.

When the state's voters turned out a record 425,000 vote for the May 8 gubernatorial elections, only one race of statewide interest was thrown into a runoff. That was in the senate race of the sparsely-populated first district.

Little Interest

The reason that since there will be few runoff races of local interest, very few voters will go to the polls.

Moore Satisfied With Executive Progress Of '56

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Whatever the successes of Student Senate may be, Student Body President Clyde Moore feels his branch of Student Government has had a good year with the Administration.

"I think that the administration feels that student government is much more amenable than it has been in the past," the graduating president declared.

"The fact that administrative officials in the university have gone along with practically everything that student government wanted to do this year and have let us assume responsibility in every area requested" led him to conclude greater respect, Moore said.

One Branch

He made it clear he was referring to the executive branch alone. He charged Senate's main action was to pass its reapportionment bill, and credited the legislators only with acting an extra day of vacation that students might attend bowl games, and with providing for the student travel service.

There's been so much petty bickering in Senate this year that the prestige of the Senate has been lowered." Moore maintained.

Major accomplishments of the executive branch, Moore declared, included securing an estimated $30,000 from the activity fee.

Plan Press

"We now get all the money from student activities regardless of the number of students registering at the university," he explained. "This means that we get approximately $20,000 more this year plus approximately $10,000 that was left over from last year's budget. The budget would have been able to expand our programs and complete needed accomplishments as purchasing a press for student publications."

He lamented the Board of Publications, the "buddy system" for foreign students plans for a student union building, the student speakers' bureau, the student-faculty traffic committee, and budgeting of funds for more telephones by the administration as other accomplishments.

Honor Inervaed

Moore said he felt the Honor System is working better than in past years.

"Honor Court has handled many more cases this year than ever before. Students do not have the same reluctance to turn themselves in, or to turn other students in, for violation of the honor code, that they used to have.

"Oddly enough, the cheating scandal during exams at the end of the first semester actually helped the Honor System. The fact that the Honor Court caught up with the major participants in that scandal made other students aware of our honor system and the necessity for its enforcement."

Money Topic Of Last Meet

By CHARLET POITEVINT

Student Senate will consider a proposed 1956-57 budget calling for a $78,600 appropriation for student activity fees in tomorrow's final meeting.

Graham Crothers, secretary of finance, will submit the budget and a surplus of $25,000. "These funds will be spent for a swimming pool, printing press or added to the building fund for a student union, or a combination of the three," he said.

This year's budget of approximately $57,700 was figured on the basis of 4,400 students at the university, while the proposed figures are based on 6,000 students.

Totals

Organizations and the amount proposed for their operations on the budget are: Collegians, $400; Cheerleaders, $325; Forensics, $2,040; Choral Union, $400; Men's Intramurals, $1,200; Orchestra, $300.

Student Government, $4,389.50; Student Travel, $3,000; University Singers, $650; Theater Direct, $600; Women's Glee Club, $500; Graduate Class, $600; Women's Intramurals, $1,100; Tarpon Club, $675.

URA $1,085; Classes, $400 each; Women's P. Club, $625; Sophomore Council, $50; Student Artist Series, $2,000; Junior-Senior Prom, $1,000; Swimming Pool Fund, $500; Florida Flambeau, $16,294; Seminole Signals, $5,225; Tally-Ho, $20,910.

New Items

"Quite a few organizations such as Student Artist Series and the Junior-Senior Prom are new items on the budget," Chairman Crothers said.

Increased the most are funds for Student Government and the Cliaics. This year's total for Student Government was $3,200, while appropriations for classes were $700 each. The Florida Flambeau activity fee appropriation is raised from $13,700. The Warpath Club budget is eliminated.

Tally-Ho Meeting Called Far Tomarrow

There will be a brief meeting of all people interested in working on the Fall 1956 Tally Ho as Wednesday evening at 7 p.m. in the Tally-Ho office on the fourth floor a fide Longmire building.

At Annual Awards Day

Cadets Are Recognized In Ceremony

Twenty-six cadets of the Air Force and Army ROTC detachments received recognition Thursday during an annual Awards Day ceremony.

A joint review of the cadet corps followed the presentation of awards, was given in honor of Colonel Philip E. Church, professor of Military Science and Tactics, for mothers of cadets and for the award winners.

Air Force cadets receiving awards included Paul L. Grimsley, Air Force Association award; Thomas H. Hafner, Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation award; Robert M. Johnson, Reserve Officers' Association Air Science II award; and Bernard L. Kelly, Reserve Officers' Association Rifle Team Proficiency award.

The cadet corps commander, Anthony J. Wheat of Quincy, received the Reserve Officers' Association Air Science IV award.

Others

Other Air Force cadets receiving awards included Robert E. Crenshaw, Chicago Tribune Air Science IV award; Edsar B. Wycoff, 9429th Air Reserve Squadron award; David A. Medford, Reserve Officers' Association Air Science III award; Stuart B. Keith, Reserve Officers' Association Air Science I award; and Richard K. Walker, Sons of the American Revolution Drill Team Proficiency award. Paul A. Ort received both the Reserve Officers' award and the Reserve Officers' Association Band Proficiency award.

Army Cadets

Army cadets receiving awards included Percy L. Steele, Meritorious Leadership Achievement from the commanding general; Third Army; Graham Crouch, the association of the United States Army award for military and academic achievement; Benjamin B. Powell, Jr., Chicago Tribune award for Military Science III leadership; Richard W. White, American Legion platoon drill award; and John R. Tomberlin, American Legion drill team proficiency award.

Other Army ROTC awards were presented to Jerry C. Connell, Chicago Tribune Military Science IV Leadership; James W. Webb, Chicago Tribune Military Science II Leadership; Robert A. Fernandez, Chicago Tribune Military Science I Leadership; and Charles F. Adams, ROA Award for the Honor Company of the Battalion.

Legion Awards

Awards were presented on behalf of the American Legion to William L. Kimber, Individual Drill; William H. Roche Jr., squad drill; Raymond O. Reinhardt, drill team proficiency; and Charles H. Turner, band proficiency.

Awards presentations were made by Dr. A. B. Martin, FSU vice president. Colonel J. K. Lawton, reserve officers' association; Lt. Colonel Charles H. May, 9458th air reserve squadron; and a representative of the Sons of the American Revolution.

The Queen of the 1956 Military Ball, Margaret Miller, honorary cadet Colonel, and her court, Betty Lou Whittle, Shirley Ann Linda Rollins, Anita Wall and Madeline Elmore, all honorary cadet Lt. Colonels, were present to pin the awards on the winners.

Ugliest Man, Aftar—Al Dayes, FSU's ugliest, proves that it isn't so. With him are Sonny Sellers, president of Alpha Phi Omega, which sponsored the Ugly Man Contest, Pat Warner, representing Alpha Omicron Pi, sponsor of Dayes, and Dave Harris, contest chairman.

Al Dayes Named As '56 Ugly Man

Al Dayes, sponsored by Alpha Omicron sorority, has won the 1956 Ugly Man contest.

More people put their pennies in the slot by his picture that of a ghoulish-white, marred face, than for Jack Schlosburg, Gamma Phi Beta-sponsored, and Jim Joanos, backed by Pi Beta Phi, who finished second and third respectively.

Sonny Sellers, president of Alpha Phi Omega service honorary which sponsors the Ugly Man contest, said $300 was collected for all candidates.

A Farewell Editorial

(Author's Note: The last issue of each year's Florida Flambeau traditionally carries a farewell editorial written by the graduating editor. And as the trend of the custom has outlined, I shall attempt to paint the four-year mural which my mind's eyes have recorded from a second-story Longmire window.)

As painting is an inductive process, the FSU mural must first have a background—the overnight change from Florida State College for Women to a coeducational university; the postwar increase in enrollment and leveling-off periods that have been the two brief for compensatory growth of physical equipment.

Two years ago, the outgoing editor, Bruce Galphin, noted that "Florida State University is like a giant in chains. Or rather it is like a powerful child whose body grew faster than its head." The situation hes not changed—too-rapid growth is still the most immediate and obvious feature of FSU, in spite of the new classroom buildings, e modern library, a men's gymnasium, and skyscraper dormitories. Contrary to the mentioned editor's supposition that FSU had encountered e breathing spell, enrollment has grown until the giant's chains are but broken fragments in the background, fragmenta which the 50-year-plan elone cannot weld together.

The now unfettered giant—mass education—has already wrinkled and cracked the canvas of the FSU mural with each movement of the big heel of standardization and conformity. Professors who taught four years ago are now confined involuntarily to research; the individualistic would-be pedant has been cut down to size under the giant's shadow—quenched with the fear of loss of position or stifled in apology.

Courses come in two categories—abridged or condensed. (Since when has Plato been condensable?) and students have lost the sense of magnitude which accompanies knowledge, challenges them to learn. The challenge now lies in ability to be elected to student government offices, to obtain $2,000 athletic scholarships, to do the Like Huxleyan bottle-babies they will soon become pneumatic robots, drilled to respond when the world's Pavlovs ring the bell and push their buttons.

These are the cracks in the canvas, the fragments of the giant's chains, the dull colors of half-inspired artists

Not All Bad

But the mural cannot be es morbid as it has been painted. Three blustering counter-forces clash in the foreground, smatterings of groups—either students, faculty or administrative—perennially separated and unblended.

The student body government has grown in recent years from a small doubt-lecover of the body to a large little-or nothing body, and relatively steadily with the increase in its operational expense. And while we may brag of its expansion and absorb the praise of other colleges because of it, only our regular and consistent, productive government systems, we are yet unsatisfied. Plegued by with the eternal contradiction of good ideas and lack of power to implement them, student government is still not accomplishing all that it could.

The present student administration has a record of progress which we hope will be equalled and expanded in future years. Three service committees which is still active to override student legislation, relaxation of women's rules and regulations, and the securement of student membership on the greater number of faculty committees.

If the major obstacle—fear and distrust of each other —could be eliminated from student-faculty-administration relationships, the strongest link in the giant's shattered chains could be reforged. Unfortunately little progress has been made toward this end.

The faculty senate membership has grown more and more silent. Its membership has been reduced, and the factions within have weakened its voice. We fear that even the feculty senate raise its voice in edamant protest on any issue. That it can be done is evidenced in the University of Florida faculty senate's defeat of a measure which would have limited their expression on matters of state politics.

Main Responsibility

The administration, in its efforts to appease the many legislators and prominent persons of Florida, has sometimes forgotten that its main responsibility lies within the campus gates rather than outside them. But they too, like the faculty and the students, are often misunderstood in their actions.

Just as an attempt at cooperation and understanding of all three has brought this newspaper a little respect from each, perhaps a concerted effort on the part of themselves to theive the caste system and democretize would effect the forging of a first link in new chairs for the giant.

Many are the perels which need be avoided to this four-year mural, but space does not permit it. All in all, Florida State has the ability to reimprison the giant, to remain the best university in the South as far as we're concerned, and to outstrip all others in the spirit of academic freedom.

To peraphrase T. S. Eliot. If FSU ever completely etegnetes or dies, let it be with a bang—never e whimper.

Letters To The Editor

Bermuda Shorts

DEAR EDITOR:

It is hard to believe that our Dean of Women has studied the Bermuda shorts problem carefully, even from the tourist standpoint.

I regret having to assume the role of a crusader at this stage of the school year, yet I believe the facts I have uncovered warrant a reinvestigation of the conditions.

This past Saturday and Sunday I surveyed the tourist situation from those different vantage points, namely, a local hotel, a restaurant near the campus, and a filling station, also near the campus. At the hotel I watched the occupants of Florida state cars enter the hotel. Fourteen of the women entered it wearing shorts. At the restaurant, I noticed the occupants of 25 out-of-state cars. Women in shorts emerged from 10 of the cars, and entered the restaurant so attired. At the filling station, women in shorts emerged from 5 of 9 cars observed.

It is hard to believe that these women, appropriately dressed for the "land of sunshine," would object to seeing our students attired the same way. In fact, I imagine they would approve.

Just because certain other schools don't allow it is not an argument against it. Such reasoning could be applied against almost every change that has taken place. If life depended upon such a reasoning, progress would be stifled before it started.

It is high time that antiquated opinions and rules were removed. Our students are mature enough to dress themselves comfortably and still be in very good taste. Man in transition is a backward step, and shows the ignorance of the facts and lack of faith in the student body.

SINCERELY,
RALPH W. WIDENER, JR.

Music Library

TO THE EDITOR:

Mr. Harold T. Luce's article defending the Music Library in last Friday's Flambeau made me acutely aware of my ignorance, Inderemee, on my part. It was apparent I had written without examining the entire situation" on one—even Mr. Luce—can literally do this from all angles, but that I had expected the library to be a fitting tribute to our library's purpose to be the accepted one, and that I expected my suggestions to be comprehended without detailed explanation. I am sorry. I care not for Mr. Luce's assured and superficial explanations of what is writing. I would not find it necessary to point out the narrowness of his opinion of the purpose, and the lamentable backwardness of the library that would exhibit in its answer to a modern and liberal educational philosophy were it actually to be in that opinion. I would not feel compelled to point out the quaint light on the unfortunate misunderstanding of my article that began in submit it to the Office of the Director of Libraries as a report; there it will be available for perusal by any one concerned, including Mr. Luce.

"When Do We Come Out With A New Model?"

Dear Mama Seminole

DEAR MAMA SEMINOLE:

Georgie discover great excitement. Excitement of learning. Learning to apply knowledge in discovering for selves that learning is wonder-wrought experience. She sometimes worry that students not find studies worthwhile and turn to other things. She have no need to worry, for as long as she, Dr. Venia Shore, is teeches, students will find that learning is a magic and beautiful thing. She provides the inspiration for striving. Georgie forever be better student for having been her pupil.

Of All Things

At Year's End

By OSCAR JOHNSON

As always, when the year ends, the normal thing to do seems to be to look back at the year in review, analyze its successes and sore spots and tell of some of its accomplishments.

That would be exceedingly difficult to do. We do feel qualified to discuss what happened in 1955-56 from the Flambeau's point of view, but not from the view of any of the other student organizations. Consequently, we shall try to point out here the state of the Flambeau during the year and then discuss some points about next year's paper.

Discussion of this year's Flambeau must, of course, eventually set to the fact that the first semester's paper was penned All American. If this seems a matter-of-course, remember it was the first time it had happened in 24 years.

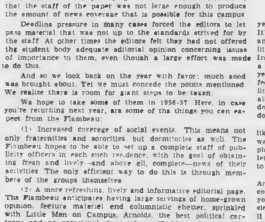
We do not believe such a rating the beginning and ending of all college journalism accomplishment. But it does show that in certain respects at least, the paper did improve somewhat over previous efforts—that is, in the opinion of the judges who met there were serious difficulties this year. As usual, there was the problem of space, or lack of it. Campus organization which had articles left out can attest to this little factor. But there was other sore spots. In general we would like to admit that the staff of the paper was not large enough to produce the amount of news coverage that is possible for this campus

Deadline pressure in many cases forced the editors to let pass material that was not up to the standards strived for by the staff. At other times the editors felt they had not offered the student body adequate editorial opinion concerning issues of importance to them, even though a large effort was made to do this.

And so we look back on the year with favor, much could was brought about. Yet we must consider the mistakes mentioned We realize there is room for giant steps to be taken.

We hope to take some of them in 1956-57. Here in case you're reporting next year, are some of the things you can expect from the Flambeau:

(1) Increased coverage of social events. This means not only fraternities and sororities but clubs as well. (2) The Flambeau hopes to be able to set up a complete staff of publicity officers in each area to-deper with the goal of obtaining fresh and lively—and above all, complete—news of their activities The only efficient way to do this is through members of the organizations.



(3) A more refreshing, lively and informative editorial page. The Flambeau anticipates having large sections of home-grown opinion, feature material and columnistic cheese, including that with Little Men on Campus, Arnolds, the best political cartoons and an occasional three-column Herblock Cartoon. By this way, we're retaining the Herbert Block creations, which we consider to be among the finest done in the country.

(3) A sports staff with a solid year of experience under its belt to bring you a blow-by-blow account of sporting events here

4. More emphasis on entertainment. A newspaper's three functions being information, influence and entertainment, we feel we would be shirking our duty if we did not provide some of the latter category. The staff we have should be able to take care of this handy.

Well, that about sums up our expected improvement for next year. We hope you're around to see how well we make them. . . .

Literary Proposal Is Encouraging

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

It is encouraging to hear suggestions for the publication of a Florida State University literary magazine.

Such publications appear on other campuses, and some of them are very good. A collegiate student body should be capable of creating and appreciating literature.

SUCH A venture here would certainly, however, run into the problem that plagues the current humor magazine and the Florida Flambeau: lack of active participation. Few people want to work.

At present, the most practical idea is the compromise this writer understands has been reached: the literary faction will take over one edition of Accent, under the supervision of editor Marcella Trussi. This should relieve the underfloved Smoke Signals and keep the literary advocates from biting off more than they could chew.

IN THIS partnership, however, Trussi may have difficulty from a self-appointed member of his staff, who declares the students want only a humor magazine and that he intends to prove that's what they want.

But people know what they want, and believe that nobody else can be sure either. A literary publication on a trial basis seems a good idea, and a good magazine might receive enough support to expand into a regular venture.

Paper Finds Sure-Fire Exam Rules

By JIM SOLES

With exams coming up all over the nation the University of Minnesota paper has come with what it claims to be a sure fire method of passing exams. Staffers suggest these four easy rules: 1. Have a few friends around during study periods so that you can chat. 2. Stay up all night before finals. You may spend the first half discussing your determination to cram and the last half discussing how much sleep everyone your tastes prefer. 3. Write your examinations neatly. Don't answer the question and then put down your first impressions. 4. Remember that success in life is your main aim and never let circumstances such as grades interfere with this objective.

Wandering With Wiljohn

Column Characters Are Revealed

By WILJOHN

This is the last Wanderings column of the year. You there in the front row, stop that yawning! It's been great fun writing for you this year and I hope you've enjoyed it. Now comes the most little measure of the enjoyment we've gotten from it. Unfortunately, we've had to step on a few toes and now a few friends during the year—inadvertently, to be sure. To those whose feelings we've hurt we humbly offer our apology, a little sarcastic and rough, we apologize. It was all done in good nature and we regret having done it much more than we regret having it done.

WE'RE ASKED ALL the time if we really like this kind of work and if we don't meet a weird assortment of characters. In case you're planning a career in journalism, we'll answer and let us take this opportunity to introduce you to the people you'll meet.

If you do envy reviewing you're sure to meet Archie Expert. He's the fellow who always discovers your typographical errors. Expert on your work because you didn't take actual physical part in what you're reviewing. For instance, if you review a law concert he'll say "How do you think this singer knew what he's talking about He doesn't play any instrument so how does he know about it?" This is especially true if you write a book review. You'll meet it which Archie blew his horn.

Then there's Fenny Friend. She hasn't anything to do with anything you've written about but you've said something that wasn't an Oscar about a friend of hers and she's mad. In spite of the fact that the injured party hasn't called and invited you to dinner. Fenny will remain vindictive and attempt to avenge the blighted honor on the field of battle.

AND YOU WON'T escape. You'll be able to Charley Child. This little boy is the one who always finds a favorable notice in your column and just won't believe that you've got a kick for him." His mother and aunt once told us that he was a genius and that Walter Winchell Easter said and what do you know about it—the kid's right. He cries, screams and kicks when your unfairness to him and stubbornness in not viewing His buddies form clubs and make life a voodoo night for you. You get a draft notice.

Maurice Mistake-Finder comes in handy everywhere. He finds the one mistake you make every two-column inch you write and because he writes a three page letter to the editor about the importance of the columnists world for the sheet

One of the rarer and more pleasant types is Dick Deceit. You'll find one of these in about twenty people you write about. Dick is the guy who will come up to you, hand, and thank you for mentioning him, when you've given him a rotten review in your column. He's one of the few reasons you'll be glad you wrote the column try again

WE CAN'T leave out Fred Faculty, who disagrees with everything you write because he's a author that's written a book or over and isn't mature enough to voice an opinion.

Letters To The Editor

About Reitz

TO THE EDITOR:

I am glad to note that President J. Wayne Reitz of the Univ. of Fla will be the commencement speaker. This is quite a contrast to the usual speakers brought in for such occasions. I say usual because that is the best way to describe them. In the two and a half years I've been here I've met with the saddenss, the speaker said nothing good nor nothing bad, and in the latter case I agree with the world, as for example happened last May when the Educational Consultant of General Motors spoke et commencement. This professional lecturer was a mere figure in the massive propaganda program of vested interests. With the appearance of Dr. Reitz and all that implies in Industry, however, there are indications for idelit optimism.

It's also noteworthy that FSU has no general lecture series, or speaker's program that could bring competent speakers of progressive outlook here and give students the opportunity to hear one of every four-year-end pluralities. Their great repository for mass entertainment, the FSU Artist Series, doesn't suffice for everything.

Last, I hope I don't hear the stale argument that students would not respond to such lectures, because it won't do Students any good to continually accept the notion that the University "does it's best." I don't think is is.

BOB FOLSOM

On Wiljohn

DEAR EDITOR:

Wiljohn's column in last Friday's Flambeau, in another example of his poor taste and presumptuousness. His faithful readers will recall a similar article which appeared just before the presentation of Hot Mess last fall. However this time he included one surprising edition—the realization of a long-awaited ambition.

Stranee to say, that among those most justified to complain (the soloists, chorus, and directors), not one derogatory statement came to my ears pertaining to the volume of the program.

In anticipation of your customary rebuttal, Wiljohn, we of the cast realize that we don't have to reed your column. We would like you to know, however, that the people associated with the production, who es you know have made untold sacrifices in the interests of e good show, do not appreciate your interference in the matter, whatever your intentions may have been. If it be someone's wish that you review the show, so be it, but the viewing of it and your preview demonstrate one thing, your inability to appreciate beyond the tip of your nose.

VERY TRULY YOURS
CARL HERMAN ROSENBUSH, JR.

Thanks

DEAR SOPHOMORES,

Cancer Detection Movie Scheduled

A free motion picture on cancer detection is to be shown at the Florida Theatre Saturday at 10:30 a.m., announced Dr. Sara Louise Smith, of the Health Education Department.

The film on breast cancer is sponsored by The Tallahassee Business and Professional Women's Club with the cooperation of the Leon County Unit of The American Cancer Society.

Doctors will be present at the showing to answer written questions from the audience about the film and cancer, Dr. Smith said.

According to Dr. Smith, it is important that every woman see this film.

Bachman Pledges Vets Friendship

Student Government friendship with the Veterans' Club was promised Tuesday by Dave Bachman, student body president-elect.

Speaking at the installation of new Veterans Club officers, Bachman declared, "We of Student Government, in striving for a better FSU for all students, will be more than glad to cooperate with the veterans in all ways possible."

Bachman continued by saying that with the veteran organization now functioning well, the veterans have a reliable and effective voice in campus affairs through which they can promote their particular interests.

Newly installed Veterans' Club President Nat Polak, in his inaugural speech, stated that he will do "all in my power to aid the interests of the veterans at FSU and to work toward a close relationship between the Veteran's Club and other campus organizations."

Polak stressed four principles he said his administration will follow:

To arrange social activities that will be of interest to both married and single members.

To be active in all campus activities, such as the raising of funds for the Campus Chest.

To participate in Intramurals and other athletic events.

To participate in student government elections.

Other officers elected were Nat Walker, vice-president; Margo Wells, secretary; Gene Radio, treasurer; and Hugh Simmons, corresponding secretary.

Women's Games Close Tomorrow

A final softball game will mark the closing of women's intramurals tomorrow at 5 p.m.

There will be an "Intramural Rally" bus before this game at 4:15 p.m. on the softball diamonds. The new intramural manager and sports managers for the coming school year, and the dormitory and sorority managers will be introduced.

Trophies will be presented to the winning teams for bowling, basketball, badminton, table tennis, volleyball, swimming, tennis and softball teams for this year.

The teachers, all in the field of humanities and social sciences, will make a two-week study of the automobile industry. The forum program will cover Ford organization, and management policies and procedures and business philosophy.

Phi Delts Cop Championship

Phi Delta Theta has wrapped up the fraternity over-all intramural championship for the fourth consecutive year.

Last week's first place victory in swimmimg piled up the necessary points to put the Phi Delts far enough ahead to clinch the title.

Consistency was the outstanding factor in PDT's victory, with first or second place in eight of twelve intramural sports, including basketball, golf, horseshoes, swimming, table tennis, tennis singles, track, and volleyball. High placing in each of softball, football, bowling and tennis doubles rounded out the championship, which is based on a point system set up by the fraternity intramural committee.

This year's victory retired the second over-all trophy for the Phi Delta, climaxing the arch fraternity championship in 8 years.

Displaying Trophy—Phi Delta Theta members show trophy they won in intramural competition as three-time winners, along with trophy won for three years previous. L to r. are Tom Ehrhardt, vice president, Tom Barros and "Sonny" Casca, athletic chairmen, and Paul Ort, new president of the fraternity.

The secret—they're SYNCHRO-DYNED!

They're called the sweetest playing clubs in the book, and for good reason. Spalding's exclusive SYNCHRO-DYNED® club process, a scientifically exact system of weight coordination, gives each club in the set the identical swing and "contact feel" to help groove your swing.

And this new Bobby Jones set is as handsome as they come. The irons feature an exclusive tough alloy steel with a glistening high-polish finish that lasts season after season.

By ALAN WHITMARSH
ATHLETE OF THE YEART—

Another athletic campaign has come to an end for nda State University, a campaign which will prompt more wins and more prestige for the university than other one when all the records are tabulated.

This year, for the first time the Seminole football team recognized as a major-college squad by the NCAA. the Tribe responded by placing several men among op ten in the final statistics.

The gymnasts took a 2nd and a 3rd in the NAAU and NCAA respectively, the baseballers have a chance a NCAA bid for the first time, and as this was written volleyballers were defending their national title.

Undoubtedly there will be disagreement on all of nominees, and surely others which deserve a lion's of the credit for the year's mark, but here they are.

Beginning with football, there were eight graduat- Seniors on the gridders, all of whom certainly de- a citation, but our selection is co-captain and cen- Bob Crenshaw.

At 175 pounds, Crenshaw was one of the smallest ers in collegiate football, but has held his own for e years against the big boys as one of the finest cen- in Seminole history.

In basketball, the selection has to be Jimmy Oler of ona. Oler, who was recently named the new Frosh ach, broke almost every scoring record for the cage ers this past year.

Jimmy piled up a record of 743 points, and set rec- in every other scoring department while leading the nole basketballers to a 16-9 record and another FIBC

Volleyball is a little publicised sport on the national ngelo scene, but the name of Bernie McCann is well own among those who follow the sport and the na- nal tournaments closely.

The leading spiker on the team, McCann was a first All-American in his sport at the national tourney year as he led the Seminoles to national title

The swimming nomination is a rugged one, but ilstering along with Junior partner Jim Ashmore Gainesville, for a consistently tops performance.

Ashmore a specialties are the free ex and tumbling, reefforth comes his nickname "The Tumbling Texan." ast a Sophomore and Coach Hartley Price can look ard to more good work from him in the future

How you can name one outstanding man on a golf m which produced the first undefeated season in the ool's history? We'll vote for Ed Jenkins. but there's to be disagreement.

Jenkins set a new course record for the Tallahassee ntry Club with a 62 before the season started and was consistent winner for Dr. Don Veller all year long.

In Tennis, the choice will again be almost unani- ous we feel, and that choice is Hal Schaus. the captain of the last three years, and undoubtedly FSU's out- tanding man all year long.

Schaus reached his peak, in the estimation of Coach Pitchford, in his singles match in the final Florida ch, and could become an outstanding amateur player.

In track, again the choice will probably be approved most fans, and we feel it has to be Sophomore Jack Terwilliger from Dade City.

Terwilliger climaxed a great season by winning three ials, the 100, 220 and 440, in the final Miami meet, and surely the team's high point man for the year.

With an outstanding record-breaking 23-4 mark and ssca for an NCAA bid for the first time, we feel that baseballers deserve two nominees. if not more.

The first is Danny Litwhiler's ace southpaw Tony able, who will probably break the school collegiate ecord record, and has already set a new FSU mark.

Tony carried a 8-1 mark and a fabulous 106 strikeouts the Rollins game, and needed only six strikeouts to ish a new national mark for the department.

Our other choice is the Seminole's slugging shortstop. However, the smallest man on the squad, but defi- the man with the biggest bat.

Howser was hitting a lusty .429 before the Rollins e, and leading the team in home runs (3), most runs and most hits (36). Not bad for a small man, or any for that fact.

Avitable Sets Strikeout Mark; Seminoles Seek NCAA Bid

By JOE GREENE
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's baseballers seem well on their way to an NCAA regional bid after closing out their season with a convincing 9-0 whitewash of Rollins here Saturday.

The win was number 24 against five losses for the Seminoles this year. For Rollins it was the ninth loss of the season against 16 wins.

Tony Avitable, FSU's strikeout king came through in the top of the ninth inning to set a new national collegiate strikeout record as he struck out pitcher Boyd Ciffie in the ninth.

The 21 year old Junior erased the record of 111 strikeouts set by West Virginia's Jim Neise last year by one as he fanned 112 for the season.

Rollins by virtue of the 9-0 loss, lost its grip on the Florida Intercollegiate Baseball Conference crown as FSU took the title and finished one full game in front of the Tars. FSU's intrastate record ended at 7-1, Rollins at 7-2.

Howser

Seminole shortstop Dick Howser's .422 went down in FSU's record books as the new season's batting Riley Seever's .415 in 1955 by 7 percentage points.

Big Max Long's 7-6 unblemished batting mark topped the previous records of 5-1 set by Ed Sessions, Ed Lechard and matched by Avitable.

On the wings of the Tribe's victory FSU became a choice selection for the NCAA district tournament June 1-4 at Gainesville, N.C.

On May 21, one independent ball club is scheduled to be chosen to play representatives from the Southeastern, Southern and Atlantic Coast conferences.

John Bristol pitched for the Tribe until the eighth inning when he gave way to Avitable. Until then, he had pitched one hit ball. Long and Jim Alwood came along in the ninth to retire one batter apiece to clinch the title.

A 380 foot three run homer by Fred Twomey in the bottom of the fifth inning broke up a scoreless duel, between Bristol and Rollins' Harry Bennett.

One more run crossed the plate in the fifth. Then in the sixth, two more runs romped home on Howser's three bagger and a wild pitch by Bennett.

Another duo of runs crossed home in the seventh on another triple by Lee Cone and two minutes.

The eighth inning marked the end of Seminole scoring for this record books as the new season's Carron singled, took second by theft, advanced to third on an infield out and came home on Howser's sacrifice fly.

Friday

In Friday game, Seminole bats produced nine hits against the Tars Hal Lawley but it wasn't enough as Rollins overcame a five run deficit to trip the Tribe 9-7.

In Friday game, Avitable struck out four as he fell two short of the collegiate strikeout record.

Senior Hall Victors In Dorm Softball; KA Trips SAE 1-0

Saturday evening, following the FSU-Rollins game, SAE and KA hooked up in what was to have been the final. For the regular dinnings Stone and Bob Nellums, backed up by super fielding of their team, allowed narry a run to score.

The SAE did have several scoring chances, but were nipped at the plate by heads up ballard KA also had a run or two cut off

A break of the game decided the issue after the lights were turned on in the top of the 10th when Clark walked, went to second on a wild pitch

Cain leadoff out. Herring whiffed. Donovan, swinging late, hit one toward first which would have turned foul. but Kimber put a glove on it and it went for a triple, scoring Clark. SAE threatened in the last of the 10th with men on second and third and one out, but fine fielding by KA save them the 1-0 win.

Senior Hall won the Dorm championship by squeezing out a 5-4 victory over West Hall Pennhouse Weber pitched his fifth day in a row and his fifth win in a row.

KA had eliminated SN 3-3 with the summer on coming in the last inning and two out. Kimber walked. D Stone was safe on an error, and Donovan came through with a hit.

SAE beat ATO to give them their first loss of the year 5-3. Nellums allowed 4 hits, struck out 8, walked 4. Chalkey started for ATO and went the first 5 innings and 2 runs scored in the first inning.

KA eliminated ATO, last years champs, 4-1, with the ATO infield going too much jogging with the bunts. Don Stone allowed only 2 hits. W Stone with 3 hits and Donovan with 2, led the winner's offense

Swimming

PDT won be intramural swimming meet, and with it permanent possession of the 3-leg trophy. It was not a walk-away victory as the prelims had led fans to believe as PDT got 38 points, SAE 20 and DTD 26 with LCA 15. In fact the meet result hinged on the last 2 events, the 4 man relay and the diving.

Grimmar Don Preisser won the diving for SAE and team-mate Hearn was 2nd, but McCann of PDT took 3rd and their relay team of H Strandhagen, Altvater, Porter, Harpe beat out DTD for 1st place.

McCann also took a 1st in the 50 back. Howell of KA got 1st in the 50 breast and 4th in the individual medley. Ferguson of LCA was the 50 free and the 150 individual medley. While of DTD took the 100 free and 2nd in the 50.

KA had 7 points, KS 4, SC and ATO 3

This victory virtually wrapped up the grand prize in points for the year for PDT.

Horseshoes

Anyone who was accustomed to bet on the horses would have placed their shekels on Hobo Acherman and Bob Christine of ATO in the intramural horseshoe tournament, for it was apparent they looked sharp. And the ATO duckers were positive they "were in."

But apart a snort, or what is a contest for, and as a couple of softball and basketball specialists from Theta Chi, Graydon Schafer and LaVerne Williams upset the favorites of dopsters by mid-term, by ATO 21-10, 21-23, 21-20 in the semi-finals

This seemingly "shook-up" the would-be champs enough that Hugh Dickens and Frank Bryant of PDT got themselves a 2nd round by winning of ATO 21-19 in the hours breakat final.

The TC pair made short work of PDT in the finals 21-8 21-9

Baptists on the Independent championships by beating the Theta Chi's in the final 21-18, 21-11.

Board Meets

The final Men's Intramural Board meeting of the year will be held this Thursday at 4:30 p.m. in the Trophy Room of the Student Center.

The final points of all sports for the year will be announced, and tentative plans for the intramural program for next year will be outlined.

All organizations who desire to enter any intramural event next year are urged to have a representative at the meeting.

Other baseball team records broken by the Seminoles this season were most hits, 285, most runs, 242, longest winning streak 11, most games won, 24, best percentage .928.

Terwilliger Is Top Trackster

Sophomore dash specialist Jack Terwilliger from Dade City emerged the top scorer for the 1956 Semunole track team with a tally of 71-½ points.

Joe Davis dash and field event man, was the second most productive Seminole in the point totals. Davis, who is one of the most versatile of the Seminole thinclads turned in 56's points

In retrospect over the entire season, Seminole track Coach Mike Long seemed extremely satisfied with the results of the 1956 season. Long commented, "The team has made progress throughout the season. The wins were scored by our balanced team effort and high morale."

Whatever the comment, though, the team's 7-1 record speaks for itself. This spring, the Seminoles triumphed over the offerings of such teams as Mississippi Southern, New Orleans, Emory, Georgia, Loyola, Miami and Georgia Tech. Toe loss to the University of Florida team was the lone blemish on the Seminole record.

The losses the Seminoles will suffer this year are very slight. Only Ron Wesver, Jerry Jacobs, and Mike Smith will be lost by graduation this year.

Frosh

While the Seminoles are losing three teammembers by graduation, they are inheriting seven from the Freshman squad and transfers Freshman Bobby Bryson, Dave Ruff, Maurice Kennedy, Tommy Chivers, and Don Ayers are the most promising first-year men.

Pole vaulter Tommy Elwood and weight hurler Bob Woodruff have been sitting out the track season as ineligible transfers.

Two new school records were set by a duo of Seminole thinclads. A new mark was set in the high jump by Lloyd Lassen. Tyler during the season Lassen cleared the high bar at 6'- 5".

Mike Conley sped the grueling record smashing mile in 4:29.9, although in the AAU meet, Conley finished second behind ex-Florida track captain Bill Adcock with an unofficial time of 4.23.

Golfers Enter NCAA Match

Four Florida State golfers will be competing in the NCAA match which will run the 24-30 of June

Representing FSU will be Ed Jenkins, Bob Dunn, Bill Shelton and Jack Veglio. Dr. Don Veller, golf coach, expects these boys to make a fine showing.

The golf team at that season should be just as good if not better than this years squad which compiled an amazing record of 10-0. The reason for this seemingly rash prediction is based on the fact that the team will not lose any members through graduation.

Nucleus

Probably the nucleus of next season squad will be formed by Dunn, Shelton, Jenkins and Veglio. They will be helped out by Harry Shoemaker, Bunk Berry, Dick Huff and of course, freshmen flash, Bob Shreve.

Dr Veller expects great things of Shave Veller made the statement that "Shave is the best looking prospect we have had in a long while."

Two boys who are thinking seriously of attending FSU next fall could help the team immensely. Albert Yaner, of Leon High, is considering FSU and Booker Moore the state champ may also attend.

There are two boys on the team now that are in a doubtful position for next year. Dunn may have to quit because of scholastic reasons, and Shelton is in line for the draft, but nothing is known for certain yet.

Strikeout king Tony Avitable has the unenviable record of heading out the most free tickets to first base having given up 59 bases on balls.

Four Events Set On 1956' Series

Four outstanding performances will be offered students on next seasons' Artist Series, according to Kathryn Vernon, Artist Series Executive Secretary.

The 1956-57 series will begin with the appearance of Igor Gorin, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Association, on November 8. The second presentation, on November 20, is to be "The Best of Steinbeck", directed by Elliott Silverstein, the Academy Award-holding director of television's Omnibus.

Other productions are to be the Roner Wagner Chorale, on February 13, and the national ballet of Canada, which is to be here February 5 and 6.

"We think that it is a very well rounded series", said Mrs. Vernon.

She said students will be given first choice on tickets and revealed a plan to make season tickets available to wives and husbands of students.

In the past, only a few season tickets were offered for those to the faculty and staff of the university.

SUMMER COUNCIL ELECTIONS SLATED

Elections for Summer Council offices will be held during summer school begins, according to Betty Willmon, secretary, elections.

Miss Willmon and Powell Bolton will serve as elections secretary during the summer session.

FSU's 728 Student Workers Underpaid

75 An Hour Maximum

By PAT MARSTON

Florida State University's 728 student employees have a wage scale of 50 to 75 cents an hour.

In contrast, students at the University of Florida may earn up to $1.35 an hour with a minimum wage of 60 cents.

These figures were released recently by Lynn Wilder, Student Body Secretary of Labor.

A committee under Wilder's direction has been studying the problem of raising wages for students on campus.

Employee Reductions

Although there is a "tremendous difference between the U of F and FSU wage scales," Wilder explained, "raising wages here involves cutting the number of students employed."

His committee has been working with the Scholarship, Loans and Student Employment committee. The latter group, composed of faculty members, is also studying the situation.

The explanation given for low campus wages is the tight budgets under which most departments now work. Wilder explained. "When you only have so much money, you must stretch it as far as possible."

65 Cents Average

The average student pay is about 65 cents an hour. Wilder revealed. A few jobs, particularly technical ones, pay more than this, however. For example the chemistry department employes some technicians at a dollar an hour.

About 80 per cent of student employees are doing clerical work with the rest in food services, maintenance and laboratories, according to a University report.

Food Service employees are especially handicapped. Wilder commented, since they are paid in meal books good only in the Seminole Club or Student Center.

However, he said, any move to pay these students in currency would involve a cut in the number of employees.

GOLFERS Leave For Ohio (See Story, Page 1)

FSU Shifts Into High Gear Duties Of 'Host'

FSU shifted into summertime high gear this week with summer school starting, and with new camps, a conference, a workshop and an institute launched on campus.

Boys State which is on campus until tomorrow, is made up of over 300 boys from all parts of the state.

The fourth annual Arts and Crafts Camp for high school students will wind up its session this weekend. Forty-four counselors from Florida, Alabama, Georgia, and South Carolina are attending.

High school boys enrolled in Junior Camp and other male students are being housed in West Hall in addition to students.

The 520 members of Boys State registered are living in Jane Murphree and Reynolds Hall, available reserved for freshmen women during the regular school year. As soon as the boys are through with the dorms, Girls State will move in.

The fifteenth annual Music Camp and the fourth annual Dance Camp are the two large academic youth organizations to get underway this week. Over 100 qualified high school musicians from eight states have been campus for five full weeks. The well established music camp is limited to 100 outstanding high school students interested in any music field, mostly juniors and seniors and from different parts of Florida. Although some come as far away as Arizona. The youngsters are spending two weeks at FSU.

The FSU Southern School of Music Institute, being held March June 20, has attracted 200 college boys and girls from as far distantly as Illinois. A Dance Camp for high school girls is being held for a first time through June 30, under direction of Dr. Katherine Montgomery head of women's physical education at the university.

There will also be a number of adult health educators from all parts of the state present for a special workshop which ends up July 6. A completed part of the month's new gym addition for a first time for the workshop.

New Enrollment Is Almost 3,000

Summer registration figures, although incomplete, show a definite increase over last summer's enrollment.

Official figures as of 5 p.m. Tuesday 2,838 which is a decrease of almost 200 students over figures released at the same time last year.

All of these are regular students according to Mrs. Simmons of the Registrar's Office. Extension and "Bootstrap" students are not covered by these figures.

Mrs. Simmons explained that completed registration statistics are not available at this time. Completed registration figures will be carried in the next issue of the Summer Flambeau.

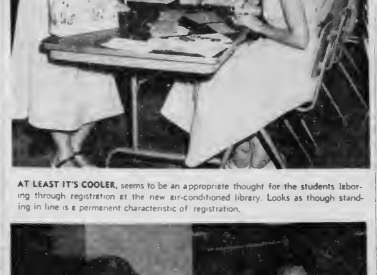
Dr. L. Shanor Heads FSU Science Unit

Dr. Leland Shanor, a botanist at the University of Illinois, will head a new department of biological sciences at Florida State University.

The scientist, whose specialty is mycology, or study of fungi, becomes here Aug. 15 as professor of botany and head of the department. The new department incorporates the old departments of botany, physiology and bacteriology.

The 40-year-old Dr. Shanor is a native of Pennsylvania who earned his bachelor's degree at Marysville College in Tennessee and his Ph. D. degree from the University of North Carolina.

Was a professor in the Department of Botany at Illinois. Has served as president of the Mycological Society of America, and long has been widely known in the field of mycology. While studying on a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1951-52 here at FSU for several months the research on a group of rust which are minute external growths on insects.



His studies have included research in fungi, which causes special deterioration and forest and plant diseases.

Dr. Shanor and their two children will return with him to Tallahassee for the new assignment.

✶✶You Are There✶✶

AT LEAST IT'S COOLER, seems to be an appropriate thought for the students laboring through registration at the new air-conditioned library. Looks as though standing in line is a permanent characteristic of registration.

GEE, THANKS!—Judi, Hargrove claims a hand-full of class cards for music courses this summer. This was a common scene during registration. Student registration reached a new high (See story this page).

WHAT NEXT, PROF?—An unidentified Journalism student gets a handy word of advice from Professor Mabee of the School of Journalism. Students were provided with a well established counseling service in the lecture room of the new library.

Summer Politics Warming Up For Campaigns

The deadline for declaring candidacy for summer student government offices has been set for Wednesday, June 27.

According to Powell Brenton, summer Elections Secretary, ten positions are open to candidates. Students seeking the posts of Council Chairman and Council Secretary must be juniors or seniors and have a 2.3 average for last semester, or a 2.3 overall average.

There are openings for two men and two women of junior or senior standing and two men and two women of sophomore or second semester freshman status as Councilmen. To qualify for this office the aspirant must have a 2.0 average for last semester, or a 2.0 overall grade average.

Forms for declaration of candidacy and expense statements are available in the Director's office, Longmire Building. Declaration of candidacy are to be filed by 5:00 p.m. June 27 at the Director's office and expense statements are to be turned in June 29 by 5:00 p.m.

Candidates for Council Chairman are allowed $25 campaign expenses, Brenton declared. Expenses for the Council Secretary are limited to $15 and those of the Councilmen should not exceed $15.

Active campaigning will begin Friday, June 28 at 5:00 p.m. There will be no run-off election, said the Election Secretary as the constitution states that the council shall be elected by a plurality of those voting in the election.

Dr. K. W. Hunt To Appear At 'Book Review'

Dr. K. W. Hunt, Professor of English at FSU, will review Cat On A Hot Tin Roof at the Book Review and Tea to be held this Wednesday afternoon at 5 in the main lounge of Longmire.

According to Miss Maris Williams, Director of Social Activities, an informal reception with refreshments being served, is to be held at 4:45, preceding the review.

The reception, said Miss Williams, is to give the audience an opportunity to meet the the speaker. An overflow crowd of more than 100 people attended the first book review at which Dr. Griffith Pugh was the featured guest.

Spanish Dancers Open Artist Series

MISS LA TANA heads her Spanish Dance Company which comes to campus this week.

University Golfers Off To Tourney

By PIERCE LEHMBECK

Six Florida State University golfers left their respective homes today for Columbus, Ohio, and the National Collegiate Association's regional golf tournament.

The six comprised the nucleus of FSU's Florida Intercollegiate golf champions who swept unbeaten through 11 dual meets this spring.

The tourney, which is to be played over the lona Ohio State University private course, begins Sunday and will run through next Saturday.

Only Ed Jenkins of Jacksonville, Bob Dunn of Camilla, Ga., Jack Veshie of Gloversville, N. Y., and Billy Shelton of Anniston, Ala. will play as members of the FSU team. Under NCAA rules no school can enter more than four golfers.

Harry Schumaker of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Bob Schuman of Atlanta will make the trip as alternates and enter the tourney as FSU independents.

The six-day tourney opens with an East-West all-star exhibition match. Ed Jenkins will represent FSU on the east squad.

Medal-play qualifying rounds will be played Monday and Tuesday with the low 64 competing the final four days of the meet.

Jenkins and Shelton carry the lowest FSU competitive scoring averages into the tournament, both finished with overall 72.1 averages for the season.

That's one tenth of a stroke over the par 72 of the Tallahassee Country Club course.

Veshie averaged 72.3 for the season while Dunn finished at 73. The befriended Schumaker had a 75.3.

Will Interpret Folklore In Ballet

By ARLIEDA RIES

The first summer Artist Series will be accompanied by the rhythms of clicking castenets, clapping hands, and tapping feet.

Teresita La Tana and Company will present an interpretation of Spanish folklore through dance, ranging from classical ballet to flamenco. Wednesday evening at 8:15 in Western auditorium.

As there are no advanced tickets sold for summer Artist Series, no seats will be reserved. According to Mrs. Kathryn Vernon of the ticket office, students will be admitted upon presentation of identification cards while nonstudents may obtain tickets at the door.

The all-Spanish program opens with Albeniz's "Sevilla" featuring the efforts of the group which consists of Teresita La Tana, Rolando and Moncio, Pepita Marques, Janita Traves, and Roy Kreigan at the piano.

Miss La Tana is featured in such numbers as "La Boda de Luis Alonso" by Jimenez, "Oppolo" by Falla, and "Zapateado" by Sarasate. "Sorongo Gitano" by Pompey, and "La Castellana" by Pompey. The latter two are with Rolando.

Rolando and Moncio will dance Turina's "Sacromonte", while Kreigan's piano solos include "Leyenda" by Albeniz and "Ritual Fire Dance" by De Falla.

Jaico y Palmas "Bulerias" features the entire group, as does Lara "Granada" and the finale, which includes "Carmen" and "Toreador" by Bizet, then concludes with the popular Spanish folk dance "Sevillanas".

Another featured arrangement is "Classical Malaguenas" by Albeniz, danced by Pepita Marquez and Janita Traves.

The members of the Spanish dance group have been recruited from such organizations as Vargas Ballet Company, Escudero Dance group, and Metropolitan Ballet.

The second Artist Series of the summer features Musical Portraits, in July. Making a return engagement, the versatile ensemble of three exact miniature musical productions, such as scenes from operas, operettas, and similar dramas involving music.

Dr. K. W. Hunt To Appear At 'Book Review'

Dr. K. W. Hunt, Professor of English at FSU, will review Cat On A Hot Tin Roof at the Book Review and Tea to be held this Wednesday afternoon at 5 in the main lounge of Longmire.

Married Couples In A Men's Dormitory Novel Innovation On The FSU Campus

By MARGARET MILLER
Flambeau Features Editor

It looks like a family affair at West Hall this summer. Promise of all ages, from pint-sized marble champions to elderly married couples are taking over the rooms of this hotel-like dorm.

It is the first time that such a housing experiment has been tried in the modern 11-story dorm. And Mr. John Cummer, residence counselor at West Hall, says it may be the first time that this type of housing has been tried at any university.

The most unusual innovation is the admission of married couples to the ninth and tenth floors. This means that instead of sharing a considerably larger apartment or house, these couples must live amicably together in a crowded, almost cubicle-like room.

However, the couples there accept the situation with the same cheerful, outlook of people who enjoy camping out. Speaking of the limited shower facilities, one bath for the husbands, one for the wives, Mrs. Sam Blount says, "I just greeted I'm on shipboard, put on my robe and tiptoe as inconspicuously as possible to the bath room at the hall."

"Let's Be Objective"

"After all," she adds, "we are all married couples and can be objective about these things." Mrs. Blount, who is a film attractive blonde, does not, however, find it easy to accept the laundry situation. She likes the fact that the university takes care of most of the laundry but the small, personal laundry that women do themselves and usually hang in the bathroom can't easily be taken care of in West Hall.

"I find I must do only a couple of pieces at the time then hang these garments on clothes hangers in the room," she said. She was also startled to discover that the beds contained not a five inch foam-rubber mattress topping a coil spring mattress as in the dorms.

IT'S HOME—Mrs. Sam Blount gives FLAMBEAU photographer a glimpse of one of the small West Hall rooms to which couples are assigned for the summer. Her husband, a high school English teacher, is studying in the background.

All in all, however, she is satisfied with dorm life and especially likes the convenience of living on campus as well as the comparatively small housing expense. During the day, her husband takes graduate English courses while she does graduate work in Art Education.

"Then as we study at night," she says, "we can enjoy the beautiful view from our ninth floor window." With a view of the sparkling lights of Tallahassee and the campus, it is reminiscent of living in a hotel.

Couples From Cuba

Also living in West Hall are three married couples from Cuba. One pair of these students is Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Morales from San Juliam, Pinar del Rio.

Mr. Morales teaches mechanical drawing there in the Technical Aircraft School, a school jointly financed by both the American and Cuban government. His school expenses here are also financed by these governments.

"For the first time this year," said Mr. Morales, "the government is sending us here for teacher-training courses." Mr. Morales has also studied in America before, once at an older, more famous university but declares he thinks Florida State University is the better school.

Everything here is so much nicer, more modern, larger, and the quality of instruction is also very fine," he said. "The professors are easier to understand than in northern schools," he said, "because they speak more slowly, and, I believe, more distinctly. Most Americans speak English very well," he added in a joking manner.

"Even the first day," he said, "I based to have the classes end." He was also impressed with the fine new library and both he and his wife say they have checked many things on the summer recreation calendar which they enjoy doing. His wife says he is in a program there two months will prevent too much homesickness for the little boy and especially remained in Cuba.

When asked if he did not find the rooms uncomfortably small, Mr. Morales glanced at his beautiful, dark haired wife and exclaimed, "Oh no! If you love enough, you cannot be too close".

Mrs. Morales, who is taking a speech course here says they feel very much at home in Florida because the climate is more like our own and the people are very friendly."

OFFICIAL NOTICE

President and Mrs. Campbell's Annual Tea for summer school students, faculty and staff will be held in the Main Lounge of Longmire Building, Thursday afternoon at 3:00.

Boycott Is "Affective"

Much of the anagrin of FSU students and Tallahassee townspeople, it seems Tallahassee may lose its bus line.

It all began when a rather large segment of the Tallahassee population rebelled against segregation on the city buses. Their rebellion took the form of economic pressure—the boycott.

It is evidently a success. The incoming revenue of the city transit lines has decreased by 60 per cent. The boycott has been declared 90 per cent effective by the president of the bus company.

Even a company operating well in the black would be tempted to halt operations after a financial blow such as this. Tallahassee's Cities Transits, Inc., which has been operating at the break-even point, and sometimes below, has been hard struck by the boycott.

The City Commission offered a liberal compromise, which met with the approvals of the bus company, intended to pacify the irate boycotters. The Negroes rejected the compromise.

Reporters, interviewing leaders of the movement, found that the boycotting Negroes were not in agreement as to the reasons for their boycott. The Secretary of the Negro Inter Civic Council said that courteous treatment of Negroes by bus drivers was the goal. This was one of the things offered to the boycotters in the compromise. The president, who is also president of the local chapter of the NAACP, declared that they were striving for total integration on the buses. This is contrary to the bus franchise and existing segregation laws of the state.

Quite obviously, in this case, the head of the misguided serpent cannot decide exactly where its tail is going. Only one thing is certain to the Negroes: They intend to continue the boycott at all costs.

The cost is to be Tallahassee's bus line. The company cannot be expected to continue operations while enduring such severe losses.

The President of Cities Transits, Inc. has issued the statement that the company intends to discontinue service to the community on July 1, unless something happens to change the situation. Under its refused leadership, the Negro Inter Civic Council intends to continue the boycott. There is no legal solution in sight.

The only out to this dilemma has been grasped by civic-minded Tallahassees who hope to save the bus line, which is not only a convenience, but a necessity to a growing city. They are urging townspeople to ride the buses, whenever possible, so that we, too, shall not be faced with walking up the steep College Avenue hill, simply because there is no other alternative.

How about it?

"They Walked Softly..."

The Board of Regents at the University of Texas have thrown a monkey-wrench in the works of the free press tradition.

In a statement on the 27th, the regents yanked the rug from under the feet of the publications editors at the U of T by removing them as voting members of the Texas Student Publications Board.

After giving the student editors the boot, Texas style, the Regents went on to make the Board of Directors of the publications board, the five elected student representatives, responsible to the Board of Regents and the President of the University, giving the president what amounts to veto power.

It quickly noticed that the actions of the student publications are subject to the approval of the administration and the Board of Regents. If there is any question as to who holds the upper hand, it can be answered easily by the statement on policy in the student handbook, "should a stand taken by the editor conflict with a basic policy established by the Board (TSP) the Board's policy shall prevail."

Such suppression can hardly help but lead to a deterioration of the student publications.

The University of Texas Daily Texan has been a leader in the field of college newspapers. We regret that we must witness its backslide.

Summer Flambeau Policy

The SUMMER FLAMBEAU will take to take this opportunity to make a clear distinction between its two types of editorials.

The staff editorials, which are printed on the left-hand side of the page, will in general reflect the opinion of a majority of the senior staff.

The columns boxes are sounding boards for the writers who sign them. We feel that it is wise to print the works of writers of varying points of view, including those differing from our own, in order that the newspaper not become too one-sided.

The editor retains the right to approve or disapprove a column, but he will change nothing. Only under circumstances where the editor considers a column to have wandered too far from the broad governing principles of restraint will a column be turned down. Point of view will not be a criterion.

Welcome To Students

"Always room for one more," the traditional idea of a southern home, seems typical of FSU this summer. Every available space is filled with 3,000 regular summer school students, high school students and adults attending various training sessions.

The Flambeau extends a welcome to all visitors to our campus—especially the youth. Whether in the political training that Boys State and Girls State offers or in the music, art or science courses that other young people are taking, summer work at a university must supplement high school training or even supersede for a lack of it in some cases. Certainly it fosters an exchange of ideas and the enjoyment of common interests for young men and women from Florida and neighbor states.

The university also benefits by accommodating these youth training sessions. Even the difficulties of housing, provising food and a working program for such a large number would be later repaid. When these students, who are now visiting FSU, choose a university to attend, they will already be familiar with the FSU program and ideas and develop a personal attachment to the school. As a result, our university has a better opportunity to attract students of high caliber and thus improve and grow by virtue of good student material.

No Small Feat

Not all feats of accomplishment are highly applauded. Although media is said of it, the organization of John Bell's State and Girl's State is no small accomplishment.

Any type of political program, real or "make believe", requires careful planning, but planning a program to provide within the confines of a week political experiences for 500 students must have been an oppressive task.

Never-the-less, with speed and efficiency boys and girls are presented with factual information then given actual experiences in campaigning and voting, for all offices —from city garbage collector to state governor.

This type of program is an excellent means of insuring our state with possibly future leaders in both state and city government. And a draw on the outstanding students in all state school's, it can't help but be classical and popular. "Whatever We Be" is the keynote to findins the boy

"Storm Clouds Cubanism" that might be called this "death" tune as it is the cue cue for murder to make a certain appearance

Mac Davy's singing of the former song does not hinder the plot of the picture but adds to the suspense in any.

Two different locales were used One word or rather two words between his country and the Soviet Union was healed. "Nothing of the kind will ever again happen between the two countries."

Whether the United States is going to lose it's Yugoslav gamble might be seen in the six remain notice served in Washington that while the U.S is developing a new tolerance for neutrals, it can be pressed too far.

ONE INTERPRETATION of this notice could be that the United States is approaching the position where a country must show positive action from position US aid, whether it be neutral or otherwise

The new attitude can be seen more clearly in another troubled spot where American aid might need to be reappraised. Egypt.

In a recent statement Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said that the recent recognition of Red Chinese aid to Egypt was "an action we resent." To further emphasize U.S. displeasure he indicated that Egyptian acceptance of Russian aid build the Aswan Dam could result in withdrawal of U.S. funds from the project.

ANOTHER ASPECT of this Foreign Aid Reappraisal is the current analysis of NATO and how it can be expanded to nonmilitary fields. This would mean the conversion of NATO from a military pact into a broader political-economic alliance.

The American Foreign Aid is being taken out of the closet and the thrift shop where the no-sell "small" countries are by nature conservative. They control the Senate, and there you have it.

Even the House is not fairly apportioned in spite of the Constitution against which the pro-free senators stand up. The Constitution provides three representatives for gigantic Dade County, with its close to 500,000 people (by the last census). It gives three to Duval, three to Hillsborough, three to Pinellas

BUT IT ALSO guarantees one each to Dixie, Flagler, Gilchrist, Glades, Lafayette, Liberty, and Okeechobee, counties which each had less than 5,000 people according to the last census. And the ratios today must be even more lopsided, for the last counties are growing much more in proportion than are the tiny ones.

CRITICS OF government, bureaucracy, and everything "official" will be cheered by the latest news from Georgia.

In that fair state, there will be not one but TWO Girls State programs this year.

You'll remember what a Girls State is—sponsored in almost every state by the Women's Auxiliary to the American Legion. Girls State is a counterpart of the Boys State staged by the American Legion. Both programs are little governments set up by the youngsters, still in high school, in which officials are elected, mock laws passed, et cetera. The purpose is to get them to understand how government actually operates in the United States.

WELL, THE Georgia Girls State affair has this story-turvy twist. It began in 1953 when the Auxiliary's Girls State committee decided to incorporate itself and sponsor Girls State from then on. Evidently this worked out all right until 1958 this year in case you haven't looked at a calendar lately. Not long ago the regular members of the Auxiliary—not members of the corporation set up in '53—said they wanted to sponsor Girls State and the heck with the corporation.

This little feud wouldn't seem to amount to much, but in some places you never can tell. Georgia is one of those places. To make a long story before anybody knew what had happened, the regular Auxiliary—not the corporation—had taken the matter to court and asked for an injunction to prevent further use of the Girls State name by the corporation—not the regular Auxiliary. The regulars have the regulars wanted to hold their own Girls State

THE JUDGE, being a kind-hearted sort, said he couldn't see what was wrong with just letting the matter by having two Girls State—evidently didn't think the matter had gone out of hand yet. Two Girls States, he said would "do a lot of good." Results—they're to have two.

From a superficial examination of this incident, some may recall the thunderous day back in 1946 when two people were claiming to be Governor of Georgia. (Actually there were three claiming the office but it evidently settled down to two: M. E. Thompson and the governor himself made. Thompson finally got it, but Herman was elected two years later.) Some cynics may see seem a logical conclusion that Georgia is obtaining a monopoly on these little duo-hoss squabbles.

We cannot agree to this proposition in opinion. Georgia is just ahead of the times. Actually, any progressive state could reasoning excel Georgia's record.

IF YOU WANT TO look at it this way, you can see that the other states are just behind Georgia—they haven't learned how to really mess things up quite adequately. Two States should profit by the fine example Georgia has set and should be capable of setting. And if they keep observing Georgia long enough they, too, will learn.

So when you hear cries about "doing something" about Georgia, pay them no mind. It's merely jealousy. In the final analysis, Georgia State Most Likely To Succeed is merely opening the door for the other states. We must remember this only when the other states follow the example of these pace-setting Georgians will they arrive at their level.

Foreign Aid Program Needs Reappraisal For The Future

By JEROME BERNSTEIN
Guest Columnist

ONCE AGAIN the cry is heard around the nation for a reappraisal of the Foreign Aid Program. It has the profound effect on the type of service we do.

An example where a reassessment might take place is Yugoslavia. In the past, the under-box of Europe Today, the only Communist nation behind the Iron Curtain getting American aid.

After the Communist International denounced Tito in 1948 for defying Stalin, Yugoslavia, finding itself in an economic collage, was forced to turn to the West for help.

The United States responded, with the hope that Yugoslavia could be made an example to show Soviet satellites that they could break away from Moscow and still survive.

FOR THE PAST eight years Yugoslavia has received $1.7 billion dollars' worth of U.S. military and economic aid. Her economy has depended heavily on U.S. loans, credits and grants to keep it from going American Policy makers now must decide if Yugoslav's warrants further aid as an independent communist nation. If in his current visit to Russia, Tito has said that the break is the future.

Doris Day In Hitchcock's Drama Of Mystery, Intrigue

Many movie-goers will be surprised to learn that Doris Day, vivacious singing star, will be in a serious dramatic role as in Hitchcock's The Man who Knew too Much which opens Sunday until Tuesday at the Florida Theatre This movie could perhaps be called Hitchcock's best but not superior. At times the movie drags and at times the audience wonders if some small part could be cut. Despite this small flaw there are many high moments of light suspense.

Doris Day and James Stewart, teamed for the first time, play a married couple, the Mc'Kenna's, who become involved in the kidnaping of their son, and a political assassination while on their vacation.

Both stars do a very convincing job of acting as parents who have to solve their own mystery. It would be nice to see them teamed together in another other movie

In Session Long Enough To Adjourn

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

HISTORY was not made when the Florida Legislature met briefly this summer to "consider" reapportionment and stayed in session just long enough to adjourn.

This same old unhappy story has been written in other states. Because their legislatures, as ours, were established when the population and economy were mostly rural, the legislatures today are oriented against the cities.

Now, when the demand arises that the actual voters in each county be counted in population, a frantic wall is heard from the backwoods cried out by those who fear they are being picked upon, that they are being disenfranchised, that they will be taxed without representation, and so forth.

THIS IS NOT LIKELY to happen nor should it happen, but is it any more justifiable that the minority should control the government? That is no more democratic.

The house so-called argument that having two houses assures balance is false. Neither house can do business without the other, and, traditionally, the rural elements, the so-called "small" counties, are by nature conservative. They control the Senate, and there you have it.

Even the House is not fairly apportioned in spite of the Constitution against which the pro-free senators stand up. The Constitution provides three representatives for gigantic Dade County, with its close to 500,000 people (by the last census). It gives three to Duval, three to Hillsborough, three to Pinellas

BUT IT ALSO guarantees one each to Dixie, Flagler, Gilchrist, Glades, Lafayette, Liberty, and Okeechobee, counties which each had less than 5,000 people according to the last census. And the ratios today must be even more lopsided, for the last counties are growing much more in proportion than are the tiny ones.

So the "people" lose out in the House as in the Senate. Areas on the map are the constituents.

This is all justified, we would be led to believe, by the United States Congress of which one part of which is based on population and the other on states. It is easy to forget the United States, even in its embryonic condition of 13 colonies, was large, and the people were widely separated. Establishing the Senate was a concession to a few states and to a sparsely populated country. It operated today to helped so solidify the erroneous concept of "balance" as an amalgamation of states rather than one nation from 48 states.

In November, Florida's voters will get the opportunity that the Senate would pass. It is up to the people to see that each county is equal.

THIS CLUMSY BIT of deception always little chance to get past the electorate in the fall. Sarasota and Manatee counties may suddenly desire senators of their own—their present senators is false. Neither house can do business without the other, and, traditionally, the rural elements, the so-called "small" counties, are by nature conservative. They control the Senate, and there you have it.

Even the House is not fairly apportioned in spite of the Constitution against which the pro-free senators stand up. The Constitution provides three representatives for gigantic Dade County, with its close to 500,000 people (by the last census). It gives three to Duval, three to Hillsborough, three to Pinellas

And the ratios today must be even more lopsided, for the last counties are growing much more in proportion than are the tiny ones.

Counties sprung up around population centers In pioneer days the county seat was reserved to be a day's travel by team in a day's carriage or horseback ride. Today, 24 hours a week is than enough to travel the state from Pensacola to Key West.

And now, rather than providing incentive the county system becomes a drag. For in matters of law enforcement, public health, education, public works—the tiny counties are unable to provide what the people need Duval is no longer the factor—economy is.

Counties in Florida are merely business units—areas created by law state. Consider how artificial and unwieldly—yet they continue to be the basis of our government.

A Summer Melting-Pot Of Learning

By RYAN EDWARDS

THERE IS a well-known old saying about summer school at FSU which insists that all the students are either under 14 or over 40. Though the truth may be somewhat less than reliable and even the presence of a situation warranting it is highly questionable, the fact remains that during the summer our student body is enriched by the presence of freshman and tried experience.

The notion decrying this as a bothersome irritant to the ordinary "Joe College" and his colleagues, we would like to begin our first column by pointing out some of the factors contributing to the unusual opportunities for pleasure and academic growth during the warm months of the year.

CERTAINLY this influx of graduate students, teachers and professional organizations affords the students of the various arts an audience whose cross-section of opinions is infinitely more valuable at any time to the comparatively nearsighted group of art devotees which roams away during the other three seasons of the year.

And this is especially valuable at FSU, for as a state university we are probably blessed with outstanding schools of music, art, and speech in the South. FSU has a cultural obligation to fulfill.

Not only is it responsible for the technical training of students, but the featuring of a portion of the composers, painters, and performers of this country's future, but also it is responsible for presenting performances and exhibits of contemporary creative activity to its students and the people of the area. Thus a university participates in the larger aim of an educational system: to foster the intellectual and emotional awareness of the civilization of which it is a part.

IT WOULD SEEM that since its beginning FSU has been conscious of its role in this larger scheme of things. Its performances over the past few years have adhered to a relatively high standard. We can look back with pride on the annual performances of the outstanding civic and productive Theatre Dance Group, the perennially exciting concerts of the University Band, many memorable productions of the Speech Department and a host of other events of artistic importance. Of course we can look forward to at least two Artist Series performances, 6 series of dramatic productions and the concerts of the Music Festival Society and the Summer Music Camp.

Such a wide variety of activity that we point for justification of The Threepenny Critic which will be a weekly evaluation of the artistic endeavors of the summer.

Since we are somewhat intense about the above-expounded importance of these goings-on we will endeavor to be constructive in our comments, but at the same time uncompromising in our standards of criticism. We will not be afraid to at least two Artist Series performances 6 series of dramatic productions and the concerts of the Music Festival Society and the Summer Music Camp.

Concurrently realizing our limited qualification to join Atkinson, Taubman, Gow, Jean-Pahlman and company, we have borrowed a limiting adjective from Benoit Brecht and Kurt Weill to precede the fearful appellation in our title.

We hope to be at least worth threepence for our evaluations of a million dollars' worth of summer theatre and concert-going.

Now, when the demand arises that the actual voters in each county be counted in population, a frantic wall is heard from the backwoods cried out by those who fear they are being picked upon, that they are being disenfranchised, that they will be taxed without representation, and so forth.

THIS IS NOT LIKELY to happen nor should it happen, but is it any more justifiable that the minority should control the government? That is no more democratic.

The house so-called argument that having two houses assures balance is false. Neither house can do business without the other, and, traditionally, the rural elements, the so-called "small" counties, are by nature conservative. They control the Senate, and there you have it.

Even the House is not fairly apportioned in spite of the Constitution against which the pro-free senators stand up. The Constitution provides three representatives for gigantic Dade County, with its close to 500,000 people (by the last census). It gives three to Duval, three to Hillsborough, three to Pinellas

BUT IT ALSO guarantees one each to Dixie, Flagler, Gilchrist, Glades, Lafayette, Liberty, and Okeechobee, counties which each had less than 5,000 people according to the last census. And the ratios today must be even more lopsided, for the last counties are growing much more in proportion than are the tiny ones.

So the "people" lose out in the House as in the Senate. Areas on the map are the constituents.

This is all justified, we would be led to believe, by the United States Congress of which one part of which is based on population and the other on states. It is easy to forget the United States, even in its embryonic condition of 13 colonies, was large, and the people were widely separated. Establishing the Senate was a concession to a few states and to a sparsely populated country. It operated today to helped so solidify the erroneous concept of "balance" as an amalgamation of states rather than one nation from 48 states.

In November, Florida's voters will get the opportunity that the Senate would pass. It is up to the people to see that each county is equal.

THIS CLUMSY BIT of deception always little chance to get past the electorate in the fall. Sarasota and Manatee counties may suddenly desire senators of their own—their present senators is false. Neither house can do business without the other, and, traditionally, the rural elements, the so-called "small" counties, are by nature conservative. They control the Senate, and there you have it.

Even the House is not fairly apportioned in spite of the Constitution against which the pro-free senators stand up. The Constitution provides three representatives for gigantic Dade County, with its close to 500,000 people (by the last census). It gives three to Duval, three to Hillsborough, three to Pinellas

BUT IT ALSO guarantees one each to Dixie, Flagler, Gilchrist, Glades, Lafayette, Liberty, and Okeechobee, counties which each had less than 5,000 people according to the last census. And the ratios today must be even more lopsided, for the last counties are growing much more in proportion than are the tiny ones.

Counties sprung up around population centers In pioneer days the county seat was reserved to be a day's travel by team in a day's carriage or horseback ride. Today, 24 hours a week is than enough to travel the state from Pensacola to Key West.

And now, rather than providing incentive the county system becomes a drag. For in matters of law enforcement, public health, education, public works—the tiny counties are unable to provide what the people need Duval is no longer the factor—economy is.

Counties in Florida are merely business units—areas created by law state. Consider how artificial and unwieldly—yet they continue to be the basis of our government.

The Threepenny Critic

A Summer Melting-Pot Of Learning

By RYAN EDWARDS

THERE IS a well-known old saying about summer school at FSU which insists that all the students are either under 14 or over 40. Though the truth may be somewhat less than reliable and even the presence of a situation warranting it is highly questionable, the fact remains that during the summer our student body is enriched by the presence of freshman and tried experience.

The notion decrying this as a bothersome irritant to the ordinary "Joe College" and his colleagues, we would like to begin our first column by pointing out some of the factors contributing to the unusual opportunities for pleasure and academic growth during the warm months of the year.

CERTAINLY this influx of graduate students, teachers and professional organizations affords the students of the various arts an audience whose cross-section of opinions is infinitely more valuable at any time to the comparatively nearsighted group of art devotees which roams away during the other three seasons of the year.

And this is especially valuable at FSU, for as a state university we are probably blessed with outstanding schools of music, art, and speech in the South. FSU has a cultural obligation to fulfill.

Not only is it responsible for the technical training of students, but the featuring of a portion of the composers, painters, and performers of this country's future, but also it is responsible for presenting performances and exhibits of contemporary creative activity to its students and the people of the area. Thus a university participates in the larger aim of an educational system: to foster the intellectual and emotional awareness of the civilization of which it is a part.

IT WOULD SEEM that since its beginning FSU has been conscious of its role in this larger scheme of things. Its performances over the past few years have adhered to a relatively high standard. We can look back with pride on the annual performances of the outstanding civic and productive Theatre Dance Group, the perennially exciting concerts of the University Band, many memorable productions of the Speech Department and a host of other events of artistic importance. Of course we can look forward to at least two Artist Series performances 6 series of dramatic productions and the concerts of the Music Festival Society and the Summer Music Camp.

Such a wide variety of activity that we point for justification of The Threepenny Critic which will be a weekly evaluation of the artistic endeavors of the summer.

Since we are somewhat intense about the above-expounded importance of these goings-on we will endeavor to be constructive in our comments, but at the same time uncompromising in our standards of criticism. We will not be afraid to at one of every real value to the cultural life of Florida State University we must be a real critic. Concurrently realizing our limited qualification to join Atkinson, Taubman, Gow, Jean-Pahlman and company, we have borrowed a limiting adjective from Benoit Brecht and Kurt Weill to precede the fearful appellation in our title.

We hope to be at least worth threepence for our evaluations of a million dollars' worth of summer theatre and concert-going.

INTRODUCING—

Other than the irrepressible indoor variety you'll wherever there's a jukebox on campus, the various of athletics aren't too prevalent during the summonths at Florida State.

And that poses a bit of a problem.

Since we don't intend to keep you posted on the ast methods tieing yourself in knots to the whalls Elvis Presley, the Flambeau editors have decided ead allotting a full page to sports coverage during next six weeks.

But as the summer session drags on we can hut ow talks and tales with and about the nice guys and ls who make Florida State University athletics go, nd think that's the nice thing about this work, anyway.

And for that first offering—

A NATIONAL TITLE? MAYBE SO—

Talking earlier this week with Dr. Don Veller, the ense gentleman who has pushed this FSU golf team successive triumphs, we were somewhat surprised be remarked,

"We, pause just might do pretty good in this tourna-

We might even win it."

ere is support his statement—

"We played the worse golf of the entire season in Southern Intercollegiate and we finished sixth in a eld of 24. Playing the way we did in that one, we hould have never finished in the upper half . . .

But the boys have been out of school for a few ays now and from the correspondence I've been get, they've all been practicing pretty hard. I think we'll be up for it and if they play their best, we might e a champion."

Veller doesn't talk like that too often, either.

OF T-SHIRTS AND A NURSES REGALIA—

Though this might seem a mite odd in this "pon-ative day and age, not all the muscle-bound gentlemen on this campus are slated to don football equipment this fall.

Tau Marvin Harvest, for a like-I said.

The 2-hundred sophomore will probably be donning ligues' robe when the fall semester begins. Fact is ensolled during this summer for his first class in

It's safe bet to boast that this 23-year-old Brooklyn guy has more heft than any football player campus. His chest measures 50 inches—expanded course—and he can hoist 425 pounds of weights on his shoulders.

Who's known to hoist the end of a small car on his legs.

While doing a hitch with the Air Force, he had occasion to enter the Mr. Florida Contest in 1955. He got awards for the best chest and abdominal development.

And though he's a boom to the T-shirt industry now, was after a few more years of work and a few additional pounds of brawn he'll be in condition to re-enter contest and try for the Mr. America title.

ake so many other nice guys who coma and go at Harvest's story is one of success, and what's even e's still being written.

Tima was when his doctors were considering horne injections to build up a body shrunken and ptessed from the effects of rickets as a baby. As a year-old, he weighed about 100 pounds and was ckly pushing five feet tall.

But Harvest had a samaritan.

Jim Laury—Sealtest Dan on television—took him and through daily exercises on parallel bars weights, his body began to grow. He added 100 nds to that once puny body.

ng the process—and he considers this equally imtant—he developed an interest in health and physical ducation.

That's what brought him to enroll in the FSU School of Nursing. And nurses' regalia or no, he's still an impressive sight.

He draws whistles from the guys as well as the girls.

leased Soon

80-page book, "Guidance Elementary Schools" by Dr. Cottingham of the 1967 Florida State University faculty. The book is released this month by Allyn and McKnight Publishing Co.

Cottingham, a member of faculty since 1948, is professor of education and director of teacher training at FSU. He is a nationwide study in the field of guidance practices in elementary schools.

The present book is a result of study in which he has been together the best 180 schools of guidance in elementary school scattered over 45 s.

The book, according to the author, presents the philosophical and psychological framework of guidance functions at elementary level and then discusses the application of these principles with agencies of schools and individual teachers.

Students Begin Excavation Of San Luis

Hope To Find Wall Remains Now Buried

Just 252 years after the Spanish abandoned and burned San Luis mission and fort, a class of Florida State University students this week started an archaeological dig of the ancient site.

Some previous test explorations of the ruins have been made but the one undertaken this week under the direction of Dr. Charles H Fairbanks, assistant professor of archaeology, is the first effort to pinpoint and examine the actual fortification walls.

Using mattocks, spades and smaller tools, the summer school students plan to dig a 10-foot-wide trench into an area where it is presumed lay the south wall of the old fortification. They hope to find some traces of the 10-foot-high pallisade wall, never discovered before.

Old maps and records show the pallisade wall, about 250 feet long on the south side, had bastions at the corners and protected a blockhouse in the center of the enclosure. A moat surrounded the pallisade and just within the pallisade a clay banquette furnished an elevation for firing.

The fort, near which was a village inhabited by several hundred Apalachee Indians, is on the Jonna Meisser place just off the Quincy Highway west of Tallahassee.

The possibility that the pallisade, constructed of vertical wooden stakes, may have been burned along with the mission commande may aid in locating it. Fairbanks said he would have preserved it from the rot of two centuries by fire-hardening it.

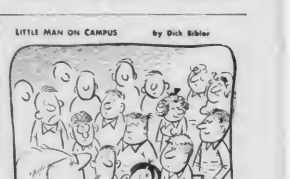
He added that if a well site is found within the enclosure many artifacts may be brought to light. If they are below the water table the water likely will have preserved them, he said.

At any rate, he said, the digging is expected to produce some additional artifacts in the way of axes and tools, Spanish and aboriginal pottery, nails and, perhaps a rosary or crucifix or two to add to what already has been dug at San Luis.

In its heyday San Luis was the principal post of a string of Spanish missions established soon after 1633 by the Spaniards in the area.

The first scientific test explorations on the site were made in 1948 by the Florida Park Service. They turned up numerous relics of the aboriginal village on the old cannon, numerous shreds of pottery, a rosary, and many nails.

These explorations were the precedence of the most but none of the pallisades, the objective of the current undertaking.



Dr. Fairbanks hopes that several weeks of careful excavation and accessing of materials on the site will add little more to the tiny stockpile of information about San Luis and the Spanish mission period in Florida.

FSU Geologist Studies Sands

Once useless deep sands now hold interesting possibilities, believes Dr. B. F. Bass, head of the FSU Geology Department.

Dr. Bass, who is to spend the summer preparing a report on the silica sands of South Carolina counties, sees the increased development of industry in the Southeastern states the deep sand which we used to consider worse than useless now offers possibility of becoming an important commercial resource.

The report to be prepared by the geologist will be published as a bulletin of the South Carolina State Development Board.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Bibler

"I SEE I'VE LECTURED PAST THE BELL AGAIN—"

Seminoles Can Pride Intercollegiate Record

Florida State University has won 64 per cent of its athletic contests since entering intercollegiate athletics in 1947.

In addition, Seminole athletic squads have won six national championships.

Florida State was the Florida State College for Women until 1947 when it became co-educational. Since then, FSU teams have won 194 athletic contests while losing 443.

Five of the national titles have been captured by the swimming team. Under Dr. Hartley Price, the Seminole musclemen won the NCAA and NAAU titles in 1961, the NCAA in 1962; the NAAU in 1963 and 1964.

Altogether the gym squad has won 30 of 37 dual meets for an average of 81 per cent.

Coach Bill Odenkirk's volleyball team won the NCAA title in 1965. His teams have won 61 per cent of their contests—24 triumphs and 15 setbacks.

The Seminole football team, jumped into major college ranks the only last fall and there is un against one of the south's roughest schedules this fall. Though winning but 8 of 10 contests in 1956 they held a 49-20 mark since 1947, for a 61 per cent winning marain.

The lowest winning percentage compiled in any sport at FSU has been in basketball where Coach Bud Kennedy's teams have won 55 per cent of their games. With surges the past two seasons that produced no consecutive Florida Intercollegiate Conference crowns, the Seminole hoopsters have won 112 of 205 contests.

The Seminole swimmers have won 78 per cent of their dual meets. Under Coach Ron Shultz they were unbeaten from early in 1952 until last season when they "dropped meets to Texas A&M and Florida by 4 and 2 points respectively.

The FSU Ala Intercollegiate champion golf team, under Dr. Don Veller moved through 11 dual matches this past spring without a loss. The 1955 unbeaten spring boosted the golfers' all-time record to 85 triumphs and 26 defeats.

The Seminole golfers are slated to compete in the NCAA championships at Columbus, Ohio, this week-end.

After two complete seasons under former mentor Hearnt Danny Litwhiler, Florida State baseball fortunes have soared. The Seminole nine won 25 of 32 games and the Florida Intercollegiate Baseball crown this spring to boost its overall record to 127 wins and 64 losses.

The Seminole tennis team could win but 8 of 15 dual matches the past season. But Coach Keith Pitchford's forces now have an overall mark of 86 wins and 44 losers.

Until two years ago, the FSU track squad was building for the future and Coach Mike Long's squads of 1965 and '66 burst into bloom with a two-year mark of 12 wins and 3 losses. The overall track mark now is 28 victories and 16 defeats

Junior Journalists Attend Institute

By MICHEAL GLASSMAN

(Editor's Note: Michael is one of the young journalists here with the Southern School Press Institute. His home is Mt. Vernon, Illinois.)

Sixty-two journalists, representing six states, arrived in Tallahassee Sunday for the Sixth Annual F.S.U. Press Institute under the direction of Dean Laurence Campbell. Dr. Reid Montgomery and a staff of seven.

A busy two weeks, ending June 29, were scheduled for the students. They attend four classes a day, aimed at improving the publication of high school newspapers and yearbooks.

It won't be all work and no play for the institute's, however. A busy schedule of events, starting tonight has ahead for the teenage pupils. A talent show, directed by students Emily Herrina and Nan Beeland, is on the docket for tonight. The students will travel to Alligator Point on the Gulf tomorrow and will journey to nearby Wakulla Springs for swimming Sunday.

Panel discussions are scheduled on Monday and Tuesday evenings at the home of Dean Lawrence R. Campbell. The newspaper division will hear a discussion on the presidential election, Monday, and the year book group will hear a panel talk about creative writing Tuesday.

As all day trip to the Stephen Foster Memorial at White Springs, Florida, has been planned for Wednesday and a banquet for next Friday evening.

This week, the journalists have been taken on tours of the Tallahassee Democrat, the Rose Printing Company, the Capitol and other government buildings. At a reception Monday, University President Doak Campbell greeted the pupils and delivered a short address. The students met members of the P.S.U. Journalism Department and other university officials R. R. Oglesby, dean of students talked to the teen-age group about going to college, Tuesday evening.

With the improvement of school publications in mind, the 62 students gathered from as far as Illinois to the FSU Press Institute. Besides work on papers and yearbooks the pupils will be treated to a tour of Northern Florida.

WFSU-FM Needs New Staff Group

The University radio station, WFSU-FM, 105 watt stereophonic broadcasting service, is announcing, writing and promotion, according to an announcement by Phil Currie, Director of the Radio and Television

A few of these jobs will carry student-assistant pay." From and Volunteer workers will be to gain experience toward full employment will be welcome.

The station, which is located in the basement of the Music Building broadcasts Monday through Friday from 7 to 10 a.m. and daily from 6 to 10:30 p.m. Major emphasis is on good music and several programs from educational stations and foreign broadcasting services.

Anyone interested in working with WFSU-FM should contact Raymond D. Cheadle, the Music Building, telephone extension 6431.

AWARD WINNER CHOOSES FSU

Miss Shirley Million the young winner of a number of awards in the Canal Zone—the latest, the Canal Zone College Scholarship award—plans to study library science at FSU beginning this September.

Miss Million, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Million of Balboa, indicated her preference to FSU because of the Library School and because of the Florida climate.

Graduating this year from Canal Zone Junior College, Miss Million plans to study library science with home economics as a minor.

LADIES CHOICE

LAKELAND, Fla. ACP)— Every summer Susie's heart lattie-reals to looking for when she gets out to get a husband" Here's what they say in order of rating, published at Florida Southern College.

Surprising or not, almost the last thing today's college girls look for in men they want to marry is money.

The traits preferred for a husband to be are honesty, dependability and of a sympathetic disposition, thoughtfulness and an agreeable personality. Next come good character, humility, conformity to social and ethical standards and some girls also prefer religious-ness and temperance.

But the prize male . . . that the man may be wealthy, thrifty, or a good provider is thought of by most girls almost as an afterthought, possibly because underpresent prosperous conditions fear that their husbands won't earn a living.

Finally he began playing drawing pictures on the sign-out book, a habit he usually indulges in while waiting. The little girl watched him for a while, then asked the dumbest ques-tion: "What are you going to be when you grow up?"

Want Tadpoles For Research

Florida State University still is in need of hundreds of tadpoles for a biochemistry research project.

Dr. Earl Frieden of the Chemistry Department said the tadpoles are needed for a U. S. Public Health Service-supported study of biochemical changes in the metamorphosis of a tadpole to a frog — a study which may have a bearing on other types of cell changes such as in growth, aging and cancer.

He is especially interested in learning about sources of supply of the small black toad tadpoles usually found only between April and July. He said, however, calls will be welcomed from persons knowing of any large supply of tadpoles.

Tadhole owners are asked to contact Dr. Frieden at university extension 4471.

What Next?

It's no secret a fly likes sugar and dislikes salt. There is now a method of measuring the electrified impulses which convey to the fly's central nervous system the sweetness or salinity of his environment.

This method—using a tiny glass tube which fits over the hair cells on a fly's tongue—was demonstrated by Dr. Edward Hodgson, assistant professor of zoology at Columbia University, at a seminar sponsored at Florida State University by the FSU psychobiology Program.

Through the glass tube, which has a tip opening of less than one-thousandth of an inch flows a salt or sugar solution. When the solution is salt large electrical impulses are recorded. When it is sugar smaller impulses from other nerve cells are recorded.

METHODISTS PLAN SUMMER PROGRAM

Students are invited to attend Sunday School Services in the Methodist Student House Chapel, 705 West Jefferson Street, this Sunday at 9:30 a.m.

There will be a devotion, talk, some hymns, and discussion of plans for the summer activities at the Student House, according to Charles McDaniel.

A bus stop is located near the Student House for the convenience of those wishing to attend down-town services.

SWIM SCHEDULE CHANGED

The swimming schedule for students, their families, and non-students, as announced on page 15 of the Summer Recreation Bulletin, has been changed, according to Miss Williams, Director of Social Activities.

The corrected time is to be from 7:30 to 8:30 Monday through Friday nights, instead of 6:30 to 7:30 as listed in the bulletin.

Miss Williams added that students' families and non-students may obtain swimming tickets at the price of two for 25 cents at the student bank.

John H. Blackburn, formerly counselor of men at West Hall, has been named to the post of Assistant Dean of Men at the University of Alabama.

Blackburn had been at FSU for four years, three of which were served as counselor at the 11-story men's dormitory.

Dean of Men Samuel R. Neel said Blackburn's service as counselor while at the big dormitory has drawn widespread praise.

His new position is effective July 1.

New Students Have Good First Impression Of Campu

By MARGARET MILLER

There are a number of reasons why people come to FSU in the summer. Some girls come from as far away as Iowa—because their boy friends are stationed at nearby bases.

Some begin school a little early to find out whether or not they are capable of doing college work. Some think this is a good plan to follow before buying sororities and fraternities in the fall.

Still others, of course, have to make up work while other, more hard working students go irregularly to summer school in order to finish college in a shorter time. Some of these students may be enrolled in other colleges, but wish to attend summer school nearer home. Some simply need a change.

The reason Dorothy Jean Lewis, a Wesleyan art major, came is because she wanted two art courses which were available here. She said she had heard much of the famed FSU art department and has found its reputation to be very much deserved.

Modern Buildings

In spite of the fact that she is accustomed to a much smaller school, she says, "The size of the school doesn't bother me at all. The people are friendly and I love the beautiful, modern and convenient buildings."

She added that since Marianna is her hometown, is reasonably close by, summer school is made additionally pleasant. "Besides," she said, "many other Wesleyan girls are here this summer as well as several of my close friends from home."

Larry Dannelley, freshman from DePunak, had no unusual reasons for coming to FSU. As a matter of fact, he had never even questioned why he was coming here. Almost all of his older friends from DePunak, he mentioned Jem and Art Moore and Tommy Fountain, had been active in high school student government then followed it up with student government activities at FSU. He had always taken it for granted that he would follow the same course.

Jean Amber, transfer from Jacksonville Junior College, is most impressed with having educational counselor Sis Smith the counseling service very helpful.

Southern Scenery

Marilyn Haddock from Miami City, Iowa says she is missing over the Magnolia trees and mockingbirds. "I would also like to take home a little of that Southern drawl," she said. Her troubles have been her business courses. "I'm moved by all that work," she groaned.

Her friend, Chris Cochran, a speech major from New Jersey, was not as impressed with Southern speech as was Marilyn. She says she is constantly startled by Southern pronunciation. She has offered her new Florida friends some free speech lessons.

Sybil Griffin, freshman from Bainbridge, was a little frightened at first by the size of the school, but soon felt more secure by finding the classwork not too different from her high school work.

Faculty Gives Election Year Panel Debate

Press Institute Hears President Discussed

By MICHAEL GLASSMAN
Press Institute

A group of 39 high school journalists got the lowdown on the conventions, campaigns and issues from a panel discussion held by Prof. Daisy Parker, Dr. Ernie Roady, Hendrix Chandler and panel moderator Dr. Bill Autrey.

The discussion was held at the home of Dr. Laurence Campbell, director of the School of Journalism, Friday night. Members of the annual FSU Southern School Press Institute heard the three panelists voice their political views for the coming campaign.

Miss Parker, an assistant professor of political science, confessed that too heavy a burden is laid on the man we call our leader, and he has been accorded too much power.

She said that our chief executive has to be the nation's top diplomat, influences the actions of Congress, is the voice of the American people, the manager of American prosperity and the spokesman for the free world.

There is only one issue, to find a man who can bear the responsibility," Miss Parker declared. She went on to list the qualifications for being president. On the basis of past performance a president will have to be a man "conforming to the Democratic National Nominating Convention. It's the greatest show on earth and God willing I will be there," he declared.

He predicted that President Eisenhower will win the Republican nomination if he wants it. Mr. Stevenson is leading the Democratic pack in Dr. Roady's opinion. He said that the former Illinois governor has already had 300 of the required 687 convention votes.

He said that while many people dislike the big conventions, it is the most practical way of nominating a candidate. The popular choice of the people usually wins the nomination, as proved by Eisenhower's upset over Robert Taft in the 1952 Republican Convention.

The professor felt that primaries were of very little importance because a candidate doesn't necessarily get the State delegate's votes if he wins the primary.

Dr. Roady estimated that less

AWARDED PIN—Mrs. Frances Pemberton, left, chairman of the advisory board of Sigma Alpha Iota, is shown as she makes the presentation of Sigma Alpha's Ruby-sword of Honor pin to Mrs. Ellen Snow Frank.

Receives SAI Award

A graduate assistant in FSU's School of Music has been awarded the Ruby-Sword of Honor pin by Sigma Alpha Iota, national music fraternity for women.

She is Mrs. Ellen Snow Frank, a resident of St. Petersburg, Florida.

The award was made recently by Mrs. Frances Pemberton, executive secretary of the School of Music and chairman of the advisory board of the local chapter.

Mrs. Frank was chosen for leadership and service in the fraternity by the province president, Mrs. Mary Kerley Severance of Ft. Lauderdale. The states of Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi comprise the province.

Nutritionist Suggests Plan Weekly Meals

A Florida State University nutritionist advises homemakers to plan their meals by the week.

Miss Ruth Leverton, a section meeting of the American Home Economics Association, Dr. Helen Carr, head of the Department of Food and Nutrition at FSU, said Wednesday these four things are needed to plan a family's meals:

"Recognition of necessary nutritional needs awareness of cost or money problems, awareness of the need for planning, and appreciation of the social and psychological satisfactions which may be derived from attractive family meal service."

A course developed at FSU to teach meal planning tries to meet these goals. The students are encouraged to think in blocks of time rather than by the day or meal.

After they can visualize the fitting together of the whole week's meals, students work on meals for single days and various meal plans to suit nutritional needs of various members of a family group. To develop awareness of cost, students make up a week's market order and determine its cost; they also prepare three luncheon menus which are essentially alike but which differ primarily in the cost of the food. They analyze which factors caused the difference and see the implications of these findings to family budgetary considerations. New Library Tours Planned

Summer school students desiring to make a tour of the New Library will be able to do so on Monday and Tuesday of next week. Two complete tours of the spacious building will be made at 7 and at 8 p.m., on each of the two mid-July days.

Students interested are asked to assemble promptly in the lecture hall on the basement floor. There Mr. Norman L. Kipatrick Director of Libraries, will speak briefly on the new building and organization. Groups will then be formed to tour the building.

It has also been announced that on July 4 Independence Day, the library will be closed.

Summer Session Students Show No Interest In Self Government

Chief Justice Chosen From Student Body

Mary Elizabeth King, a Miami senior, has been elected Chief Justice of the Judicial System for the present Summer Session.

Her duties will include acting head of Judiciary and Honor Court, which have been combined for the summer months.

The court will consist of two women's dormitory presidents, two elected representatives from women's dormitories, and a possible addition of two males in cases which pertain to men.

Justices of the court are: Crystal McRae, North Carolina; Nina Williams, Florida. Pat Smith, President of Cawthon; Barbara Bowden, Associate of Florida; plus the Chief Justice, Miss King.

Some of the administrations of the court will be to rule on Honor Code offenses, such as lying, cheating, and stealing. It will, in addition, make decisions of judicial violations.

One of its duties already engaged in was to administer the "Knowledge for College" test, which was given on Thursday, May 26, by 19 freshmen and transfer students.

Miss King was elected officer for the Summer Session in Lucy Cox Dorm on the strength of her job of Fire Marshall for the undergraduate dorms.

Such Is Life!

(Editor's note: considering the totals and the limitations of the limited FLAMBEAU staff, we couldn't resist reprinting this story.)

AMES IOWA — (ACP) —There aren't as many people involved working as you may have thought. At least not according to this sort of statistic found in the Iowa State Daily:

The population of the country is 160 million, but there are 62 million over 65 years of age, leaving 98 million for the rest. People under 21 total 54 million which leaves 44 million to do the work.

Then there are 21 million who are employed by the government and that leaves 22 million to do the work. Ten million are in the armed forces and that leaves 200,000 to do all the work. There are 126,000 in mental hospitals and that leaves 74,000 to do the work.

But 62,000 of those are nuns or others who will not work so that leaves 12,000 to do the work. Now it may interest you to know that there are 11,999 people in jail, so that leaves just two people to do all the work. And you're one and your brother, and I'm getting tired of doing everything by myself.

SO LET'S GET WITH IT!

"Penny Wise" Opens High School 1956 Summer Stock Science Camp Numbers 95

"Summer Stock '56" opens its first season with "Penny Wise" by Jean Ferguson Black at the Conradi Theater next Thursday and Friday at 8.15 p.m.

This time set "domestic" comedy is under the direction of Dr. Paul W. Davee.

"Penny Wise" does not have to do with money as title may imply, but rather the situation of wife who knows her husband wonders Gordon's old flames, who planned strategy.

CAST & CREW

Nancy Cubbon portrays the wife Penny who knows that her husband Gordon, played by Bruce Ellis is in love with another woman by the name of Katherine Sue Crawford.

To make the situation worse and more complicated Pris and Martin Maurice Bass and Suzie Saunders Gordon's old flames, who are very friendly with Penny, use their own methods to discourage the romance between Katherine and Gordon.

Another "problem" is Jeff (Ron McCall) Gordon's bachelor brother who refuses to work and who also knows the situation that is confronting the white group.

Jeff's problems come out fairly well with the aid of Commissioner Dunn (Max Estes).

Working behind scenes is Mary Alice Newton, stage manager, who will co-ordinate the technical goings-on during the show.

CLASSTIME TOO

Besides working just for the experience of being in a play and with the object of what Summer Stock is really like, the persons mentioned above are also getting credit.

Music Teachers Camp Offers Varied Kinds Of Courses

Florida State University offers a varied selection of all kinds stimulation in their work and a chance to exchange and share ideas in a workshop, July 23-28.

Called the Southeastern Music Workshop, it was launched 10 years ago as a piano teacher's conference, and it's through the years has been expanded to include teachers of church organ and choir, band and elementary public school music.

Dean Karl Kuerstenier of the University School of Music is coordinator of the summer four-area workshop which is well attended annually by music teachers in Florida and neighboring states. Last year enrollment was over 78.

Cooperative features of the workshop make it unique", according to Dean Kuerstenier. He said the workshop gives college, high school and elementary music teachers in various areas a week of working together so that their students benefit from receiving high standards.

The music teachers may earn two hours of university credit by completing classwork in the workshop, and then continuing with an outlined program of study. The Dean said. Thirty-five FSU music faculty members assist in directing the workshop. Coordinators for the four work-

Record Breaking Attendance For '56 FSU Music Camp

Some 325 boys and girls are now on campus for FSU's 15th annual Music Camp.

According to James Harris director of the camp, the 1956 total is 25 boys and 38 girls over previous records for attendance.

The camp sessions are for a summer music festival with the music campers offering an average of four musical events a week for the next three weeks.

There will be band and orchestra concerts, faculty and student recitals, operettas and finally an all-out talent jamboree. All events are free and open to the public.

There will be concerts regularly each Sunday and Wednesday afternoons through July 18, with the exception of July The Summer Band is given Friday, July 20 at 7:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

No Candidates Declare For Any Position

Nobody wants to be a big wheel — at least, not at FSU this summer.

According to Poul Brewton, summer Elections Secretary, all that is now necessary for a student to obtain a summer office in student government would be to declare candidacy by today.

Not one student had declared candidacy for any position by last Wednesday when this first set as deadline. Because of this lack of interest, or lack of student politicians, the bewildered elections secretary is extending the deadline for declaring candidacy to 5 p.m. today.

"If no one declares candidacy by that time," said Brewton, "I suppose we just won't have elections."

The available positions include the post of Council Chairman and Council Secretary. Candidates for these positions must be juniors or seniors and have a 2.3 average for last semester, or a 2.3 overall average.

There are also positions for two men and two women of junior or senior standing and two men and two women of sophomore or second semester freshman status at Woodward Dorm. To qualify for this office, the applicant must have a 2.0 average for last semester, or a 2.0 overall grade average.

Forms for declaration of candidacy and for expense statements are available in the Director's and Assistant Director's Secretarions of candidacy are to be filed by 5:00 p.m. today at the Director's office, and expense statements are to be turned in at 5 p.m. on Monday.

These declarations are not to be filed in the Secretary of Elections office outside Brewton, who suspects that some students may have confused that office with the Director's office.

Candidates for Council Chairman will be limited to campaign expenses. Brewton declared Expenses for the Council Secretary are limited to $10 and those of the Councilmen should not exceed $5.

Active campaigning, if it is necessary, will begin Monday, July 2 at 5:00 p.m. There will be no run-off election, said the Elections Secretary, as the constitution states that the council shall be elected by a plurality of votes cast in the election.

Any further information may be obtained by phoning Brewton at 3-3898.

GRADUATE PUNCH HOUR HAS INTERNATIONAL FLAVOR

All graduate students and undergraduate students are invited to attend an informal "punch" hour Monday afternoon at 4:30, in the student lounge of Longmire building. Highlighting the affair will be a panel discussion by international students.

He Remembers When—

George Folsom To Retire Tomorrow After 38 Years As FSU's 'Mr. Fixit'

By MARGARET MILLER
Florida Flambeau Feature Editor

"God-honored, country-loved" George Folsom will retire tomorrow after 38 years of service as "Mr. Fixit" at FSU.

Ever since the staff in 1918, Mr. Folsom, who calls himself a "master mechanic," did all the maintenance work for the school "by the help of his assistants and a budget of $100 for materials and $50 annually for maintenance." Today maintenance costs run approximately $1,000 annually is executed by painters at six, large, specialized departments.

When Mr. Folsom first reported for work this summer, he found Florida State College for Women, and there were only 365 women students on campus.

"Back then," Mr. Folsom remembers, "all the paint we had to use to use to paint" came from buying supplies to can the disused meat and vegetables in."

"I've been washed dishes and I've been," he said. "Now, everything is so specialized that they have an outside man to run the elevators."

Mr. Folsom, of course, has done away with the elevator repairing himself although specializing now in that work, by virtue of long experience he finds himself doing a variety of jobs and acting as a consultant for workers in all departments.

As the maintenance department grew in earlier days, Mr. Folsom was called upon to build roads and plant trees. He was in charge of heating, plumbing, painting, repairs, carpentry and electrical work. He put new roofs on buildings and constructed the original sidewalks.

MR. FIXIT OF FSU—who otherwise answers to the name of George Folsom is set to retire tomorrow after 38 years service to Florida State University.

Even though Mr. Folsom has Reasons For Increase

Summer Session Enrollment Continues Upswing At FSU

Summer school enrollment has been on the upswing at Florida State University for the past few years Last year's enrollment in summer school showed better than a 11% increase over 1954, and this year's enrollment looks as if it will exceed that of last year.

Final summer session attendance statistics from the office of Mr. Charles H. Walker, Registrar, will not be available for some weeks. Still to be accounted for are late registrants and those registering for the short courses given the last two and three weeks of the session. But it is already evident that the 2836 registrants announced during the initial registration period will grow to equal or exceed the 2817 figure which was last year's total.

The Cause?

What's causing the upswing in all out the more uncomfortable, considerably cooler Florida is as a result of the summer sessions? Is it a trend?

"Probably not, as such," says FSU President Doak S. Campbell.

Summer school enrollment increases over the past few years can be accounted for in the most part as a general increase in enrollment in most institutions of higher learning," he said, point, as out the fact that such increases are especially evident in Florida's growing population.

Both the State of Florida and FSU are growing youngsters, the opportunity to attain a portion of the educational needs of an expanding population is growing proudly by FSU. Fine new buildings dot the campus, within the confines of a well-filled budget; facilities are expanding. The physical plant is also growing in enrollment, Campbell said.

If students differ in opinion as to why they are attending summer school, but most of the reasons are individual to the student. Below is a few of the quick answers in the poll: to correct a schedule that was getting out of hand.

Art Student Comments

One salient point was brought out by Senior Art student, Red Smith, attending his first summer session.

"Here students seem to be considering summer school as favorable to their interests. The petty disadvantages are being overlooked in favor of what to them is a greater good," obtaining the degree sooner and earning the business or professional field earlier and younger."

How is the gradual increase in summer enrollment going to effect FSU? President Campbell said that no change in the method of conducting the summer sessions is being contemplated at present. The current system in vogue during World War II here and elsewhere, was brought about by public demand for an increase in the tempo of the educational institution. Reverting to the quarter system, which was abolished by FSU several years ago by vote of the faculty, could feasibly come about if there were a definite public demand.

"No such demands are in evidence at the moment." President Campbell said. When such a public demand does show itself the University will take steps to meet it in the best ways done in the past."

Two New Towers

Two brand new factors had a possible bearing on the 1956 summer session.

Advance registration by mail, not limited to the summer just for the first time, may have increased the number of registrants by sheer convenience. Another, the barrage of tests for the psychological, cultural etc. which faced freshmen and transfer students, was said not to have been primarily, may have dissuaded a few from registering. Previous these same tests had been administered but solely for counseling purposes.

Summer sessions themselves are comparatively recent developments in the educational scheme when viewed from the perspective of the history of education but have come about only since the birth of the American educational system.

Apathetic Students

People cannot be commended for attempting to live a life oblivious of their surroundings.

But still some do it.

Witness to this fact is the total lack of participation in the qualification for Summer Student Government here this week.

No one seems to care whether there is a student government system on campus, or if there is not. Evidence to this statement is quite obvious. Ten student government posts were open to students. The procedure for declaring candidacy for these positions was announced last week.

Not a solitary individual bothered to file application.

True, our campus population is comprised mostly of youngsters and oldsters but that is no excuse. Such a total indifference to participation in any sort of representative government is to be decried. If endangers the rights of every other person living under that government.

It is not a matter of great difference to most students of this school as to whether student government lives or dies. When students fail to exercise their privilege to run for office, or vote, they make it possible for their government to become a mere symbol, controlled by a few.

This has happened in other places, on a much larger scale, and we call this situation deplorable.

This has happened in places where people felt quite secure, knowing that someone else would run for office, that some one else would vote. "After all", they said, "why should we bother?"

But now they wish they had.

Of course our situations is not that drastic. The point to be made is that such an indifference to government can be carried over into life outside of this university. Then it could have far-reaching results. Possibly disastrous.

All because the individual thinks it's nothing with which to be bothered.

It is.

Who Won What?

Tallahassee's boycott is almost at an end.

The solution is simple. Remove the cause, and settle the trouble. Anyone familiar with the situation that you can't hold a boycott, not a successful one, anyhow, unless you have something to boycott.

After tomorrow, there will be no bus line.

No bus line, no boycott. Simple as all that.

Congratulations to the victor.

Only at this point, we pause to ponder the question: exactly who is the victor.

Statistics from the bus company proved that the Negro population comprised about 75 percent of the bus traffic. Have they really won, after all?

Some say they had rather walk in glory than walk in disgrace. We can only comment that regardless of how you look at it, walking can soon get tiresome.

Then perhaps Tallahassee, itself, is the victor in this battle of the giants. Hardly.

The fair city of Tallahassee has gotten more unfavorable publicity in the last month, then it has good publicity in years. Certainly then, Tallahassee did not benefit by the boycott.

Perhaps the businessmen of this city. No that is hardely reasonable. Without a bus line to transport customers to town to do their shopping, customers will cut down on their buying. The little things that people buy when it is easy to get to market will no doubt be forgotten. This being true, the businessmen stand to lose, rather than gain, as a result of the boycott.

Having exhausted the list of possible victors, we can only conclude that there is no real victor.

Nothing has really been proved.

But there will have been a loss—Tallahassee's transit line. When it completes its operation, Tallahassee will take a step backwards. Progress has been demolished.

The only victor has been nothing material, but the loser will realize that the battle has been lost.

Congratulations to the victor, indeed.

Audiences Applaud Campus Performances

By RYAN EDWARDS
ROBERT LESLIE is a serious, well-equipped and well-rounded pianist. Last Tuesday evening he presented a serious, well-rounded and well-thought-out Senior Recital. These attributes alone are not enough to make it a campus musical event of major importance.

Beginning with two early English compositions, The King's Hunting Jigge by John Bull and the Pavan and Galliard by William Byrd, the latter of which possessed a sad quaintness that made us wish he had actually played in life for the dancing these with. Mozart's masterly Rondo in a minor, Leslie presented an opening group that was always neat without ever being fastidious. This enabled him to defiant his audience with many interpretive shadings and rythmic inflexions that never seemed out of the style.

The middle portion of the program, including the f minor Ballade of Chopin and the 3rd Sonata of Prokofiev, also contained some exhilarating playing. Still the public owed its greatest debt of thanks to Leslie for his fearless programming of the Brahms f minor Sonata, which closed the recital. This massive romantic work is seldom heard due to its great length and the admitted unevenness of its excellence. But it contains an abundance of wonderful music, as our scope a Scherzo of Boundless energy and the coda of the second movement, one of the most memorable moments of sheer genius in the entire Romantic Period.

THESE RECITURES have of wave been recognized by pianists. What Leslie's performance has pointed out to us was that the work as a whole has an interesting grandeur that never permits it to become tiring, and which is unquestionably worth the awkward transitions and less-hundred themes of the last movement. This formal magnitude Leslie made pelpend. It was one of the more memorable experiences of our whole years at FSU.

Leslie, who is also an organ student, is presenting a recital on that noble instrument in about two weeks on the basis of Tuesday evening's program, we look forward to another occasion of similar excellence in music-making.

"A good time was had by all."

DUNNINGER

WORCESTER, MASS.—(ACP)—The mentalist Dunninger demonstrated his powers during a program at the Worcester auditorium recently. He correctly identified the unpublished headstory headline for a forthcoming issue of the Holy Cross Crusader, apparently by reading the mind of the paper's editor.

The editor said there was absolutely no way the mentalist could have learned of the head line in advance since it hadn't even been set in type.

The editor summed it up this way: "I have no explanation for what happened except that Dunninger is all he claims to be."

DID YOU KNOW A visiting Northern student is in love with our sultry Southern climate? She declares the air is hot and moist as a kiss. Sexy weather, yes!

'Imperial Woman' Is Well-Woven Novel

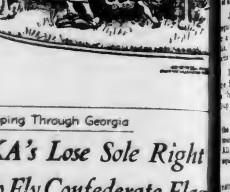
(Editor's note: This is one of the series of book reviews by Jane Gaskin. It is hoped that many reviews and current news items the work of which will be done that you will enjoy it.)

By JAMES D. MATHIS
RETURNING TO CHINA, the scene of her earlier works, Pearl S. Buck has written Imperial Woman, the dramatic story of Tzu Hsi, whom the world came to know as the Empress Dowager, the most powerful woman in China and the world.

Tzu Hsi was the eldest daughter of the banner of a Manchu of low rank and lived in the household of her uncle until she was summoned, according to custom, to join the other Manchu maidens of her age for inspection at the Imperial Palace in the Forbidden City. Those who were selected would be concubines of the Emperor.

Machiavrous, astute Tzu Hsi was chosen to be the third concubine but, by charmus, even intrigue and a fatal combination of intelligence and beauty rose to the exalted Dragon Throne. Once there, she took power as her guide and disregarding force

A lofty, sprawling book, there are many minor themes overshadowed upon the main, which is Tzu Hsi's rise to power, and it often hard to follow them, but never does the author let you lose sight of the central figure, although there are times when you must wonder where she is. Through it all, however, there is a saudy detailed of life in the Forbidden City, you see Tzu Hsi in all of her variegated attitudes.



Such should have given more room to the mystery and intrigues of the Palace, instead of repeating descriptions of the court ritual. The book would have been improved greatly. The publisher should have this published a third of the book. If you want an interesting account of a little known subject, this is your best bet.

JENNY TREE GREY, Audrey Wurdemann She tells that men the Pulitzer Prize last month, is reported to be selling more than 3 500 copies a week. Those of you who have not read this sensational writers book should do so. Incidentally the book and to Columbia Pictures for a reported $225,000.

If you have not read the novel, The Web and the Rock Thomas Wolfe, you can get it in the twenty-Fifteen edition. It is still good reading, even if you have seen the movie.

Jeanne Jones, known for the best seller From Here To Eternity, has completed more than half of a new novel. It is not known what it is about, except that the manuscript is supposed to be longer than Eternity. Could it be more observant? Thirst for laughter and pure enjoyment read Auntie Mame, by Patrick Dennis. A merry book of a hair brained women living in a madcap time.

For those of you who like mysteries I strongly recommend Agatha Christie's Witness for the Prosecution. Also recommend for mysteries the story of a modern day Cinderella.

Floyd To Have 'Susannah' Produced In New Yerk

By ALICE T. NORRIS
HOLLYWOOD, June 23 (Special) — Carlisle Floyd, a native South Carolinian and assistant professor of music at Florida University, Tallahassee, Florida, will have his new opera, 'Susannah,' produced by the New York City Opera Company during the fall season in the Fisher Lyndhurst new general manager.

This composition of Floyd's was premiered at FSU last year with Mary Harrell, metropolitan Opera baritone, and Phyllis Curtin of the New York City Opera Company singing the leading roles, along with a student cast. These stars have been asked to sing the leading parts in the New York performance at the City Center.

The libretto for 'Susannah' was also written by Floyd and is based on the book of the same name in the Apocrypha. The story has been transferred to the hollows in the Tennessee countains and it has been given a contemporary treatment. Leo Kerz, new designer for the City Opera will execute the sets for the opera and Samuel Buckley will conduct the opening performance.

FLOYD HAS ALSO recently been awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship in composition and will now be able to devote a year to creative work with no other responsibilities. The coveted award is granted to only six or seven composers a year. The fact that Floyd is younger than the minimum age mentioned a few more of a tribute to his record.

Carlisle, the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Fred Floyd of Greenville, belongs to the State in more ways than the son of a Methodist minister. He attended high preparatory home in Mullins, South Carolina, Converse North Holly Hill, Estates and Presbyterian College. He received his bachelor of music degree at Converse College winning a free scholarship in piano for graduate study at the Juilliard School of Music at that time.

It was during his early college days that Floyd began to write song composing. First, he began setting short lyrical poems of Robert Browning, Christina Rossetti and William Butler Yeats. After receiving two years at Converse, Carlisle transferred to Peabody University along with Professor Barrow and began composing more seriously.

ERSKINE HOLT was also a student at Peabody where he was president of the student government association, and a singing pitcher brother's compositions. They appeared in many South Carolina towns as guest artists on music club programs and in public concerts.

After graduation from Bryson-Cole Floyd looked for a position teaching music in a college. Because this graduate was only 20 years of age such institutions of higher learning hesitated to hire him for he was a younger man many professors. Karl Kuersteiner, dean of the FSU music school, decided to take a chance on this ambitious young man and so he gave him a job.

He began teaching when he was but four days past 21. When Carlisle appeared on the faculty his early faculty recitals. Erskine again starred in his accompanying Floyd setting the poems of Robert Browning, Christina Rossetti and William Butler Yeats. KA's Lose Sole Right To Fly Confederate Flag

By OSCAR JOHNSON

Every once in a while it becomes a writer's sad duty to report something which his loving will cause misery and suffering among all who hear of it. Yet he realizes he must tell all, for that is his job.

That is somewhat the way we felt not a few days—last week. It still shows the end to something that has been one of the Florida State University's most distinctive characteristics.

There's no getting around it; the proud and honorable group will have a great deal to live down in the future—it will go the way of all flesh, dead, die and unmourned death. Briefly, it is not long for this world.

And why?—It has lost its reason for being its time-honored and renown symbol of individuality.

No longer can it law claim to being the only one's agency distinguished enough to fly the Confederate flag!

AT COLUMBUS, OHIO—

At the time of this writing Florida State University's Bobby Dunn and Edwin Jenkins were the only Seminole stars remaining in the race for the National Collegiate individual golf championship.

But that's not as bad as it reads because only 22 of the field of 264 were still in the running.

Jenkins, the Tribe's most consistent golfer during the current season that saw FSU sweep through 11 opponents in 13 state title, whipped Southern California's Ron Pavin 74 and 6. The dynamic Dunn slipped past Bob Rieken of the University of Kansas, 3 and 1.

Billy Shelton, the third FSU golfer to make it into the final individual race, dropped what was described as a "heartbreaker" to Ken Rodewald of Michigan State, 1 up on the 19th hole.

For the up-dating of those who don't peruse through the dailies' sports sections every day, this NCAA golf nursery got underway last Sunday with an East-West All Star match. Jenkins represented FSU on the east squad.

Monday and Tuesday, the teams battled it out for national honors. And Florida State missed that national title by finishing by a mere five strokes behind Houston, Purdue, and Oklahoma A&M.

Dunn fired a three-under-par 68 the second day of the two team play tourney behind Houstons' Rex Baxter, Jr., for medalist honors. Baxter gained a closing 67 with an evening 73 for a 140 total. Dunn was six strokes behind at 146.

Only the low 64 totals qualified for the final three days of play for individual honors. And FSU set a bit of a precedent by qualifying three of its four entrants, though only Dunn and Jenkins remain now.

The tourney winds up Sautrday. It'll be interesting to watch.

RECRUITING IMPROVEMENT—

It's been no secret for some time now that Florida State University 'bird dogs' have had no little amount of trouble rounding up covies of talent in the 'fields' in and around the state of Florida.

The reasons are many, but for the sake of convenience, let's label them the Universities of Florida, Miami, Georgia and Georgia Tech. Seems they've been around a little longer than the youthful reservation and it's just naturalikes that high school mentors and alumni groups and the young Chiefs' fans 'in their' directions.

It's getting so it's not that way nowadays.

Only recently FSU announced that three talented young men from the Miami area had accepted Seminole grants-in-aid. A little before that a high school all-America signed from Greenville, S. C.

The trio from the Magic City area is probably well known to the prep school followers. Jerry Moore and Jim Carbonell, a pair of 200-pound end-ey guards worked out of Miami Senior High. Slender Jerry Nelson, a six foot, 170 pounder halfback, gained all state mention running from the Miami Edison backfield.

The South Carolina boy—who's already on campus—made his mark as a fullbk. And he's the likes of which FSU could use a few more of.

It would be rather difficult to discuss all the different angles to this sudden change in attitude toward Florida State's when it's recruiting time around the high school circuit. Mostly because it's a combination of many factors.

It's the prestige of head coach Tom Nugent's annual football clinic! It's playing football games in different cities around the south; it's having a great name like Hugh "Bonac" Taylor on your coaching staff, and most of all, it's that irrepressible influence that the University itself tosses out everytime anyone has occasion to visit its campus.

You might say it's growing up.

OF THIS AND THAT—

Speaking of golf, the FSU physical education staff is having a tournament soon. Seems the entire outfit is ranked against Volleyball Coach Bill Odenwal. Odenwal in addition to bringing home state and national titles has a habit of easing around the local links right around par.

Don't know whether it's legal or not, but FSU sports Publicity Director Elgin White has a great part of the season's sports writers enrolled in the Confederate Corps. Everybody from the Associated Press' Will Grimsley in New York on down proudly displays an official commission signed by the old squadron master himself. Boss Man White was a bit perturbed recently, however, when the Florida Times-Union's Bill Kastels publicly asked for equal payday. But not to be denied, White dug up a modest one hundred dollar bill and everyone's happy for the time being.

The only thing we can't understand about this outfit though, is that everybody's a Colonel. But that's the way it was in the old south.

Says Elgin, anyway.

YES INDEED! Dr. Clarr Turner, center, is photographed by a Flambeau Photographer as he talks with two FSU students after Tuesday's Summer Lecture Series program.

OUTSIDE COMMENT

'ACP'—More proof that the so-called "working press" has a high regard for the work of college journalists Sydney J. Harris, "Strictly Personal" columnist for General Features had this to say about some college editorials he looked at in Illinois. He quotes one editorial in particular:

"COLLEGE STUDENTS CAN THINK—AND DO—Last month, following a lecture, I spent the day on the campus of Illinois Wesleyan University. After breakfast, I read the college newspaper, and found its editorials as stimulating that I was asked for back copies.

Amidst all this talk of 'juvenile delinquency,' we tend to forget that young college people today—at least the articulate leaders—are doing more serious thinking, and talking about and examining our basic problems than any other segment of adult society.

These college editorials, which were cool and objective, patriotic, dealt with such subjects as the primary purpose of education, the danger of conformity to mass opinion, the wave of anti-intellectualism in the country, and matters which all too rarely appear in grown-up journals.

I was particularly impressed with one editorial, called "Why Humanities?", which gave a reasoned and moving argument for the extension of Humanities courses in colleges.

It should give heart to those young people who are vaguely worried that they ought to be learning how to make a living while in college. Here are the last three paragraphs:

"The average student believes that the civilization into which he was born and which he makes use of is an accumulation of self-reproducing as nature. He is not interested in the basic cultural values of his age and is not prepared to place himself at their service. He has an inborn impression that life is easy, plentiful and without serious limitations. He is armed at birth with marvelous mechanized devices, healing medicines, watchful governments and comfortable psychiatrists.

"On the other hand, he is ignorant of how difficult it is to invent these instruments and to secure these privileges. The average student is characterized by an extreme insensitivity toward all that has made possible the ease of his existence. He is unintelligent enough to imagine that his role is limited to demanding the benefits of civilization as if they were natural rights.

"The tremendous importance of the Humanities course then, lies in its power to make the student aware that civilization is not 'just here'. It is not self-sustaining. The Humanities course impresses upon the student the fact that if he wants to make use of the advantages of civilization, he had better be prepared to concern himself with the upholding of that civilization."

Hook-Up With Companies Gives WFSU-FM Pick Of New Albums

Record Library Boasts Almost 700 New Discs

Station WFSU-FM, the radio voice of Florida State University, can well afford to boast of its impressive library of fine music.

The campus radio station, which is on the air from 6 to 10:30 p.m. and from 7 to 10 a.m. Monday through Friday, broadcasts basic music and interesting programs of educational value, but is most noted for musical entertainments.

The station library includes approximately 600 albums which are given constant attention and the best of care.

It is no secret that Ron Finna, Director of Radio and TV at the University, is proud of the collection. When asked how the station acquired all of these recordings, Finna revealed that the station has a special contract with recording companies for purchasing records.

"We hate to see strong men weep," Finna said jokingly. "That's why we don't usually tell hi-fi fans or record collectors about our special contracts with record companies."

The bulk of the long-playing discs in the WFSU-FM library were purchased under special arrangements with major record companies.

"On the first of every month, WFSU-FM receives the cream of each company's new releases," Finna said, "and almost every month. These are albums which retail up to seven dollars costing medium, only perfect appearance. We pay an average of three cents per album."

The records are constantly being checked for skips of wear. As a result of surface noise they are removed from the station's record library. Since the University station is an FM operation and FM is the fidelidelity broadcasting medium, FM is the most suitable for the reception of records.

WFSU-FM ON THE AIR—The campus radio station, which broadcasts all through the week, is Florida State University's home of fine music. (See story)

"What do we do with our slightly used records?" Finna said with a wry you could work out this question—hopefully. The same kind of deal with the record companies that WFSU-FM has arranged. All you have to do is change your name to WFSU-FM and you might breed a bit of page advice from Finna. Also thinking a moment, he said: You know, there are a few good records that should be removed. Each of these records is carefully checked for truth is that we turn them over to the School of Music library.

Contest Offers Trip To Paris

Two weeks in Paris, or $1,000, that's what some college senior girl will off with after March 1st this year's Vogue magazine's "Prix de Paris" contest.

It's a true type contest. All you do is complete two quizzes using Vogue magazine as a textbook. No soap coupons. If you answer both questions satisfactory you'll be eligible to write a 1,500-word thesis on an interesting topic in the magazine.

If you are a senior or will be one before the October 15 deadline for enrolling, and if you're interesting in a career in fashion, writing, decorating, advertising, merchandising or publishing, this is your type contest.

In addition to the above named grand prize there is a second prize of $500 and 10 honorable mention prizes of $25. All winners will be considered for jobs on Vogue and other Conde Nast publications. Former contestants will be recommended to stores, advertising agencies and other magazines.

Further details may be obtained by writing: Prix de Paris Director, Vogue, 420 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

Prof Co-Authors Third Edition Of Business Textbook

The head of the Department of Business Education at FSU, Dr. J. Frank Dame, co-author of a new book to be released this month.

The third edition of Elementary Course in Business Training, by Dame, Perry and Packer, is being published by the Gregg Publishing Division of McGraw-Hill Book Company.

Dr. Dame has been working on elementary and advanced materials in business for about twenty years. He started out developing these materials by himself, and later Dr. Arthur S. Patrick, also a University of Maryland, and Mrs. M. Phelan joined him in the project.

The book covers three most common activities in the business world—typing, bookkeeping and shorthand. Each section of the book presents the career opportunities in that particular area, and a preview of the basic skill required.

According to Dr. Dame, about ten thousand students took this business publication last year in public schools, and it is becoming more and more popular.

Off The Cuff

GEORGE GOLDSTEIN
Flambeau Amusements Editor

HI THERE!

Welcome to Off-The-Cuff, the newest of the Flambeau columns. Our aim, for the next few weeks, is to keep you posted on the latest in amusements—radio, TV movies, and records—and occasionally to make comments on entertainers currently in the limelight.

Our format is simple and our style is informal, so just relax and swing along. We'll do our best to provide you with interesting reading.

HYSTERIA IN A BIG WAY . . .

The throbbing baritone beats out a tattoo as the singer does an animated bump and grind routine fit to put any burlesque cutie to shame. It's none other than Elvis (I-lu-hu-v-u-he-w) Presley, the golden boy of rock and roll music.

This wiggling mass of protoplasm, which was all but unknown a year ago, has soared to the highest pinnacle of success. Some folks say it's because of the hysteria of Rhythm and Blues music. Well, if that's so, this writer can only comment one thing, it's hysteria in a big way!

He is one of the first country-and-western singers to make good in three fields—pop, country music, and rhythm and blues.

His long-playing record album is still heading the best selling list. RCA Victor has sold more copies of Elvis' album than any other one album that they have pressed to date.

His recording of "Heartbreak Hotel" is the most played tune on the nation's juke-boxes, according to Billboard.

Even in jolly old England two of Presley's waxings are listed among the 20 best selling pop records in Britain, says New Musical Express, the Britishers' foremost musical publication.

Now, people say of a singer: "Why he sounds just like Elvis Presley." Nine months ago, no one know who Elvis Presley was.

Is he here to stay? That's a debatable matter.

How long does hysteria last?

OF BETTER THINGS

Among the latest classical recording releases is Sibelius: Symphonies No. 5 and 7 (Philharmonia Orchestra, Herbert von Karajan, Conducting, Angel Records). Despite the fact that there are a number of competitive listings of these two symphonies, particularly the Seventh Symphony, the von Karajan recording has little interpretative competition. Sibelius fans will find that the Seventh, by von Karajan is an unusually powerful emotional interpretation.

The exceptionally fine sound reproduction of the record makes this recording a "must" for Sibelius fans.

AND FOR THE MOVIES

One of the most unusual films to come out of Hollywood in a long time is Tha Animal World, currently showing at the State Theatre. Much trunking and mechanical preparation have gone into the production of this movie. We recommend it highly, especially to those of our readers who are taking Biology 102 this summer.

POLITICAL CONVENTIONS CATCH IT

RCA Victor records has come up with a sound-alike of Deacon Andy Griffin ("What It Was Was Football"). His name is Bob Corely.

In Bob's record "Mr. Chairman", he satirizes the confusion of our country's big political conventions, and he does quite well. If you listen to some of the local radio stations, you may hear it on one of the disc-jockey shows. Don't take our word for it. Hear it for yourself: it's hilarious!

Screens Offer Varied Fare For Cool, Safe 'Fourth'

Stars Convert Roles In "Catered Affair" At The Florida

One of the best movies this year, "The Catered Affair" plays at the Florida Theater Wednesday through Saturday.

It has four excellent stars to its credit plus an academy award winning writer. The players are: Bette Davis 3 Oscars; Ernest Borgnine (this year's Oscar winners for Best Actor and Barry Fitzgerald Oscar for "Going My Way."

Debbie Reynolds will be seen in a more dramatic role than the usual type of comedy kind she is noted for. The young actor portrayed by Rod Taylor will make his Hollywood mark in this picture.

The author of the movie Paddy Chayefsky also wrote the academy award winner "Marty" which was an excellent television production as was the "Catered Affair."

Audiences will be amazed at Bette Davis goes under another "transfer" role—in other words she won't look like the glamorous star you know. In fact she'll be wearing a wig and dresses which make her look like a fat and quite hearty.

War and Such

Another war picture will show on Tallahassee "The Bold and The Brave" at the State Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

It is the story of three men and a woman during the war. If you liked "D-day, the Sixth of June" then see "The Bold and The Brave."

The cartoon with the feature is Mister Bras the Heat and those of you who like "Magoo" will probably enjoy this one.

For the "Fourth", also through the seventh, the State Theatre presents "The Littlest Outlaw". Walt Disney's latest venture. It is a heart warming story of a boy and a horse, which shows the trouble the boy will go to get the animal. Tense and colorful as this movie appears.

Extra added feature is "Johnny Appleseed" an animated cartoon of the famous man of the same name.

"The Proud Ones" can boast a fairly proud cast. Jeffrey Hunter, Virginia Mayo, Robert Ryan and Ray Middleton are in the western picture. It is about the average western "hoss-opera" but does not rank as well as the "High Noon" class. It is at the Florida Sunday through Tuesday.

Drama, Too

Another war picture, "Hell and High Water" in color and Cinemascope is playing at the Perry Highway Outdoor Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday. It's a penny

DID YOU KNOW that a clock that ticks only 60 seconds in an hour isn't getting the most out of life. Attributed to local prof., bless 'em.

"Animal World" Not A Movie "Just For Kids"

The three-million feet of film that went into the shooting of The Animal World was well spent.

This is probably one of the most intriguing and enlightening feature length films to come out of Hollywood in many a year.

Although it's true that Marilyn Monroe isn't in the movie, it's still interesting, to young and old alike. The characters range in size from microscopic, one reelled structures to the mammoth Tyrannosaurus Rex, the king of dinosaurs.

The film, in its 82 minutes of running time, covers the evolution of man, with respect to theologians. The color is nothing short of fantastic. The scenes and sights are almost breathtaking at times.

Irwin Allen, who won an Academy Award for his film The Sea Around Us, has done a marvelous job in producing this movie.

The production is by no means a child of fancy. The Animal World was produced with the aid and guidance of some of the world's leading consultants in the fields of paleontology, zoology, anthropology, archeology, and with the help of museum and a long list of institutes of higher learning the world over. The film took over three years to produce.

History of the eras before the appearance of man, and a running biology lesson have never been so interesting as when presented in The Animal World.

This outstanding cinema shows through tomorrow at the State Theatre.—R S

Frankie Machine Returns To Tally At Drive-Ins

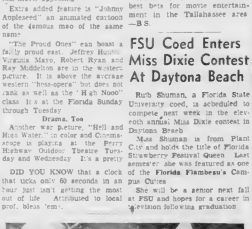
The Otto Preminger production, "The Man With the Golden Arm" is without doubt one of the most dramatic films to come to the Tallahassee screens.

Showing Sunday and Monday at the Perry Highway Outdoor Theatre, this film documents the pathetic life story of a drug addict, Frankie Machine is his name.

It attempts to give the better life a try, but the everwaiting Louie, the dope-peddler finally get him. Machine is only a little man, he cannot take a nagging wife and the cold hand that Lady Luck has dealt him in this weird game of fate. He gives up in Louie.

It looks as though he is doomed to a life of misery. But Hollywood cannot have an unhappy ending for its audience Lovely Kim Novak, playing Frankie's girl-friend Molly, points him out on the road back to respectability. The way isn't easy though. He has to take the cure.

All ends well. It had better, because that's the way the script was written.



All in all, it's one of the week's best bets for movie entertainment in the Tallahassee area —B.S.

IT'S THE THING—Dr. K. W. Hunt discusses Cat On A Hot Tin Roof with Miss Marie Williams, Director of Social Activities at FSU. Others are Miss Kathryn Warren, left, and Mrs. Hunt, standing by her husband.

'Cat On A Hot Tin Roof' Called Powerful Experience

By MARGARET MILLER

"Seeing the play is a powerful experience," says Dr. Kellogg Hunt of Tennessee William's Pulitzer Prize winning "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

The Hunts reviewed the play for an overflow audience Wednesday in the Longmire student lounge, following a tea at 4:45. He was introduced as a "distinguished and popular professor" by Miss Katherine Warren, Dean of Women.

"The play is not a pleasant one" said Dr. Hunt. In fact, he added, with a certain type of acting it could even be agonizing.

"In spite of its meagre plot," said Dr. Hunt, "it received rave reviews and the New York Drama Critics Award as well as the Pulitzer Prize. The subject matter is of the same nature as that of 'A Streetcar Named Desire.'

"The situation on which the play is pegged is not what the play is about," said Dr. Hunt. Actually, the play is about the immediate, living experiences of the characters.

Background of Play

Dr. Hunt sketched briefly the background of the play before reading and commenting on various speeches of the play. The situation is based on the impending death of a wealthy, successful Mississippi lawyer, whose children know of the threatening cancer and are greedily anticipating the will. Each hopes to be the main beneficiary and a certain type of father's favorite son Brick who was once a football hero at Ole Miss.

Presently, Brick is an alcoholic, detests his wife and seems to have no interest in anything that happens to him or anyone around him His wife, Margaret as well as the rest of his family believe his indifference to life now is due to the death of his old rollier buddy, Skipper. They believe that Brick and Skipper had an abnormal relationship instead of merely the "deep friendship" which Brick claims.

The play opens in the bedroom of Margaret and Brick. Dr Hunt [illegible] Brick as being the [illegible]-eamy, sweet air of detachment typical of those who have given up the struggle."

Action

During the opening scene, Margaret alternately bores her husband with trivial talk or antagonizes him with emotional outbursts and accusations In one speech, she reveals that she realizes that she has become and that she loves her husband

(See Story, Page 1)

DARLING!! Bruce Ellis and Nancy Cubbons seem to have reached some kind of lovely agreement in this amorous scene from the stock production "Penny Wise" which is being presented for the last time this evening at Conradi Theatre.

WHAAAAT? Bruce Ellis looks somewhat disturbed as Suzie Saunders, center, and Maureene Bass, right, inform him that someone is about to spill the beans concerning their merry antics in the comedy "Penny Wise."

Student Body
Florida State University
Dear Students,

A definite lack of participation and interest in Summer Government and particularly in the election of a Summer Council makes it mandatory that I suspend the election proceedings.

No candidates filed declarations of candidacy by the publicized deadline. Upon extending the deadline, only two candidates declared. Without a quorum of the nine member Council even declaring, the Council could not perform its powers and duties.

I, herefore, by the power vested in me by the Senate, declare the elections have been conducted as required by the Constitution and no voting will be held. No signs, posters, leaflets, etc. representing active campaigning on the part of any candidate for any office shall be displayed.

Honor Court cases will be handled by the Summer Judicial System, under Mary Liz King, Chief Justice. Such cases had previously fallen under the Summer Court Council.

RESPECTFULLY,

Summer Players Act "Penny Wise"

"In the prop room! . . . In the prop room, everybody! . . . The director wants to see you! That make-up looks fine. Come on now! . . . Don't you know what time it is?"

These calls, or some very like them, were probably resounding through the lower regions of the Auditorium Conradi Theatre last night at about 7:30 p.m. They were occasioned by the opening performance of Penny Wise, the first major production of FSU's "Summer Stock '56." Since there is a repeat performance tonight, they will probably be heard again with little variation.

When they do, several young men and women will begin to appear from behind the white lattice partitions which separate the dressing rooms in the Conradi basement. Their faces will be intense and serious, and any laughter which escapes their lips will be of the excited, nervous variety. Of course, the girls will be touching up their make-up, and one of the boys just may have a strip cracked in his white, clenched fist. He more than likely won't look at it and it will exclusively occupy his mind.

The director, in this case Dr. Paul Davee, will probably say something like "Last night was a fine job. Let's give it to 'em right again!" A little further technical discussion, and the group will quickly disemble.

Dr Davee, after the time-hallowed custom of most directors, will probably head for the lobby where he will smoke endless cigarettes and occasionally hazard a peek through the small door-window into the theatre.

The cast will ascend the narrow, winding staircases which lead to backstage. There will be a little subdued chatter, and everyone on stage at the curtain-rise will proceed quickly to his place. Last minute adjustments of costume and hasty re-lingering of props will occupy those few moments while the house-lights are going down.

The stage manager, sitting by the tiny intercom box, will ask into it hoarsely. "House-lights down?", to which a voice from the light booth will answer: "House-lights down!" A loud whisper will sound across the stage:

"CURTAIN!"

And immediately all those intense, serious young actors' faces will be converted into light-hearted bonhomie, carrying nice, gossiping friends, and alluring femme fatale.

That's a real-spirit magic—a secret again!

"Musical Portraits" To Be Final Offering For Artist Series

MUSICAL PORTRAITS—brings this trio back to Florida State University for another performance. Their program, which emphasizes variety comes to Westcott Auditorium on Wednesday evening.

Novel Staging Readied For July 11 Show

Light opera and musical comedy selections will be presented with modern and novel staging, July 11 at Florida State University as the final Artist Series offering of the summer.

The lighthearted program called "Musical Portraits" will be given at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. Tickets are available to the public at 50 cents each, and to students on presentation of identification cards, from 7 p.m. on the Wednesday night of the performance at the Westcott ticket booth.

This marks a return summer engagement at Florida State for the talented trio making up "Musical Portraits." Featured are the Canadian pianist-arranger Doda Leslie, the soprano, Dolores Baldyga, and the baritone, Jay Wentzell. The three met in the somewhat sacred halls of Boston's famous New England Conservatory and decided to work together in pooling their serious musical and dramatic training into scenes and arias with popular appeal.

Featured on the Tallahassee program will be anniversary tributes to both opera and musical comedy—scenes from "The Marriage of Figaro" in celebration of Mozart, and a special adaptation of the first great technicolor film musical, "The Wizard of Oz." Also included will be selections from Puccini's "La Boheme" Verdi's "Otello" and Rachmaninoff's Variation on a Theme of Paganini.

The trio sometimes pokes gentle fun at the over-scholarly approach to serious music and attains diametrical results by setting extraordinary little situations which everyone can appreciate, perhaps a living room or domestic scene or even a husband and wife dispute over a television set, Amusing dialogue gives audiences a chance to laugh at themselves on stage while appreciating the simplicity of solo selections and deft staging of opera scenes in English.

Campus Spends Quiet Fourth

By MARGARET MILLER

A blaring quiet settled over the campus Wednesday as most students sought greener pastures for their Fourth of July celebration.

The almost deserted campus was claimed only by a few lethargic aram-sprawlers, sidewalk-strollers and high school students, who were kept on campus for various training sessions.

The only vigorous stan of life occurred in the early morning when early-risers formed overflow-line breakfast lines in the cafeteria the only campus eatin place left open.

Shortly afterwards, some of the high school students were seen playing softball, music-making and baton twirling. Even there—with all of their youthful enthusiasm and bounding energy —disappeared during the midday super typical of most holidays on campus.

The girls left in the dorms seized upon the opportunity to catch up on their laundry, room-cleaning and studying, as several professors marked tomorrow as the end of an interval of instruction and, therefore, the only day for test-giving.

Sunshine and cloud-shadows spent the day together and were once joined by an energetic burst of rain. In view of the whimsical weather, a few ambitious sunbathers spread themselves out on the archways and hopefully waited for some ultra-violet action.

Mamas and Papas and other humans automatically classified as The Family dutifully inspected dorm rooms and were introduced to friends, counselors and new buildings before leaving for the picnic grounds and swimming hole.

Somewhere there may have been firecrackers loud jokes,

Organ Recital By Robert Leslie Set For Next Tuesday

Highlight of the organ recital to be given by Robert Leslie is the Sonata on the Ninety-fourth Psalm.

Leslie is from the studio of Lee Rigsby. He will give his recital at Opperman Music Hall Tuesday at 8:15 p.m.

Other works to be heard are: Prelude and Fugue by Heinrich Scheidemann. Sonata IV in E minor (Adagio vivace, Andante, Un poco allegro) by J. S. Bach.

Also included are the Prelude by Frederick Jacobi, Episode by Aaron Copland.

FOREIGN STUDENTS ARE GUESTS AT TEA

Guests of honor at the recent meeting of the Graduate Club were three students from countries which have received the Freedom within the past ten years.

Recreation Directors Catering To Outdoor Lovers This Year

Recreation directors are catering to the interests of outdoor lovers this summer. A canoe trip and swim is now planned for Saturday, July 21.

Sponsored by the Summer Recreation Program and Reservation, the canoers will travel down the St. Marks and Wakulla rivers and will be away from the campus from 1:00 p.m. until approximately 8:00 p.m.

The group will be divided into two sections. One group will begin the canoe journey at Natural Bridge on the St. Marks and the other will begin at Wakulla Bridge.

From there, the group will traverse down the two winding rivers which are canopied by dense and unique Florida vegetation, including cypress and palmetto ferns and other wild life may also be observed.

During the trip, a ball will be called and time will be spent in swimming. Later, the two groups will meet at St. Marks for dinner, which must be purchased by the individual.

Students, faculty and staff who wish to attend the outing must register by Wednesday, July 18 at 5 p.m. Registration will be held in room 202 Women's Gymnasium, and a registration fee of 35c is charged.

There will be room for only 36 people and those who wish to attend must also meet at the swimming pool on Thursday, July 19 at 5:30 p.m. The purpose of this meeting is to check on swimming skill and to give instructions on canoeing. Other instructions concerning the trip will be posted on the bulletin board outside room 202 Women's Gym.

TREATISE BY HEFFLER TO BE PUBLISHED

Speech Campers Learn ABC's Of Their Trade

By MARGARET MILLER

"Ah nevah knew a Southen accint could be so frustratin'." This remark has probably come from several of the students attending the Southeastern High School Speech Institute now being held here.

For, as Dr. Lynn Orr of the Speech Department says, "We've had a great deal of work to do on the dramatic speech of these students. Most of them are afraid we're trying to convert them to rankee talk instead of merely correcting their speech flaws."

"Being conscious of phonetics in their speech and of improving voice quality, articulation, and tone in speaking up a whole new realm to most of these students," said Dr. Orr.

"Most of them take their manner of speaking for granted," said Dr. Orr. "They speak as they hear and usually have never been told of their speech faults, nor do they always want to change their speech. They like to talk as everyone at home does, and being different often provokes criticism."

Improving speech is not, however, the whole aim of the Speech Institute. It is merely a part of the whole speech program which provides training in forensics and drama.

The voice is the medium and not the end while learning to project it to audience, command and persuade in a debate, and in keeping listeners alert and interested during an oration.

These adolescents also learn much about the "off-shoots" of acting, such as lighting, properties, makeuping and other aspects of stage craft.

Show Off

"Many of them can't wait to get home and show off what they've learned," said Orr of these students who learn to paint cardboard to give the appearance of brick or stone or who learn to use varied lighting effects.

All the university said Orr these students have access to equipment and materials which is not often available in public high schools.

"I'm quite amazed at the maturity and poise that some of these highschoolers exhibit," commented Orr. He added that, of course, many of them were selected by their schools and principals and had probably distinguished more than average interest.

While some students attending the theatre benefited from various experience, still others were likely seat by teachers to pick up new techniques, procedures and standards of performance.

Many high school English teachers are called upon to direct forensic and drama activities in spite of lack of training in this area, said Orr. Speech-minded students in such a situation can greatly compensate for lapse in their training by attending the speech institute.

"However," said Orr, "the speech programs in Florida's high schools are greatly improving. Whereas Miami and Jacksonville had the only adequate speech program for a number of years, smaller towns are now aware of a need in this area and are initiating speech classes."

Hard Work

The three-week training session is more work than play for these young people. The concentrated program includes morning classes in each division of forensics and drama, and joint afternoon class in voice and articulation.

More active participation follows with the writing and rehearsal of speeches, play rehearsals, and painting and construction scenery. Even at night the library work and play rehearsals go on. Many of the students work on debate problems which they will use in competition during the following school year.

Although the faculty members, Dr. Charlie Reimer and Catherine Murphy supervise, all the actual work is done by the students. "They like to work," said Orr. "For instance instead of presenting one three-act play, they decided to present three one-act plays."

"This is more difficult," said Orr, "as it means the same student will have a different role, and a different personality for each of three plays, yet must not become confused about who he or she is at what time."

These plays will be presented July 12 at 8:15 in Conradi Theatre. They include a comedy, a folk-play and a farce all are free and open to the public.

Although the students work hard, they do not complain — except in one instance. As they are housed with music majors, one boy complains that they can't go to sleep at night because of the late practices of enthusiastic melody-makers.

TV Station Will Operate On Campus

A closed circuit television station will operate on the Florida State University campus for three weeks during the Educational Television Seminar, July 9 - August 11, according to a statement by Roy Flynn, Director of Radio and Television.

The auditorium of the new Library will serve as studio with two complete camera chains, film projector and slide projector located in the Dade Company manufacturers of industrial and studio television equipment.

Television sets loaned by General Electric will be connected by direct line to the studio control room located in a nearby equipped truck built by the Dage Company. TV sets located at strategic points on campus will

Where Rivers Begin

Tens of millions of people will drive thousands of millions of miles behind billions of developed horsepower this summer without seeing what two feet, two eyes, two ears, and one quiet outlook can discover by the side of a hillside brook.

From up there beyond that screen of sun-dappled maple leaves comes laughing, gurgling sound. It is like the incessant, unwitting praise that children pour out in endless comment on the alive wonder around them. It gurgles about white clouds overhead. It chortles at the light of a jay bluer than the sky.

But it subsides a moment under the silky soothing of a warm breeze. And here where the rounded bank was primordially designed specially to couch the declining human form, with cool niches in the soil for elbows and grassy hammocks for headrests, the quieter moment lets the thought change direction and expand.

Farther downstream a foothill village predicts even greater cities on the prospering valley shores of this stream. But they are 50 miles from here with their hard pavement and noisy traffic, with their politics, conflict and achievement.

Somewhere down there this little stream which now hardly whispers goes roaring over a great dam, swirls powerfully through a rapids. It becomes as different as the busy world is different from this tranquil spot. And that is one reason why someone will climb into the hills thereabout and lie by a brook—he calls it "getting away from things".

But it turns out to be rather a getting back against the whole swing of things. He still finds peace here for all this awareness of what lies farther down the slope. And he reflects that a human career or the course of world development's run somewhat like this rivulet, from a sort of semi-comprehending joyousness over the visible world to a grim awareness of hidden reefs and onward yet to calm depths of confidence. Sometimes in the future, amid a hustle of things, his recollections of where the river began may bring a needed quietuda. (From the Christian Science Monitor)

Angels Feared To Tread

The unfortunate situation in our state capital at Tallahassee shows how racial relations can deteriorate when attempts are made too suddenly to alter the customs of generations.

Because two Negro students demanded the right to sit in the white section of a local bus, as the Supreme Court had indicated they had every right to do, a boycott was instigated when they were put off the bus.

There are many things that are not right in this world and everybody is trying to improve bad conditions wherever they exist. But fools rush in where angels fear to tread. And too many times rabid reformers only succeed in making matters worse.

The boycott of the bus company in Tallahassee was managed so well that Saturday night it went out of business. Now the city's 14,000 Negroes are without transportation facilities.

Even worse, considerable animosity has been aroused among the white people against those who participated in the boycott and Negroes are complaining of police intimidation. There are threats of extending the boycott to other lines of business.

In condemning the action of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Governor Collins said, "If it is interested in advancing the welfare of our Negro citizens, it should concern itself with other conditions of far more importance than where people sit on buses."

There are so many things which need to be done for the benefit of the Negro race before integration becomes possible. The NAACP could be a real contribution to Negro welfare if it devoted its energies to improving his health and sanitation, his sense of moral values, his attitude toward work and responsibility to family and community.

In seeking these goals the Negroes would have the co-operation of their white friends everywhere throughout the South. They could have better schools, better housing, better health facilities and better economic opportunities on a segregated basis.

Once they have achieved equality, there would be less opposition to integration. (From the Orlando Sentinel)

Look Away Dixie . . .

The South has suffered a severe blow. The patriotism of singing "Dixie" has been challenged by a University of Kentucky educator.

It would certainly be bad enough to hear some Yankee express heretic opinions such as this, but to hear it from a Southerner, born in Louisville, Mississippi, it is almost too much.

Dr. Thomas Clark told the Mid-South leadership seminar at Memphis State College there was a tendency to make "Dixie" a sort of regional anthem.

Clark ventured the opinion that Southerners would do well to quit singing "Dixie" so often and devote more attention to the "Star Spangled Banner." He said that many who know the song "Dixie" from beginning to end are unable to sing the national anthem.

However, you know, he just might be right.

Suggests 'Save Our Speech Week'

By JOHN WAGNON
(From the University of Alabama Crimson-White)

DON'T LET the last vestiges of our way of life fall to the unsympathetic invading yankee. He (the Yankee) came and trampled on our lily down, and pushed the white columns down, and burned the smoke house down, but we salvaged two things—(1) our confederate money and (2) our precious southern speech.

Now there has come a great leveling force into The South and It is more destructive than Sherman ever was. It is the yankee radio, TV, and movies, replete with their native tongue.

I have been down in Florida since 1940 come going to the KA Old South Ball say a Yankee—I almost made me cry. There before my very eyes was the reincarnation of Scarlet O'Hara, and on her lips hung a Yankeeism! "Come on you guys" and "Gee kids already pro" When I heard that, I folded my confederate flag and went home.

IT WAS NOT that the girl was from the NAWTH—NO! she was from Boss, but had succumbed to speech perverse (a Yankeism).

Now, I have a plan to cure this situation. I have made a list of rules and set fines for their infraction and I urge that each of you follow them. The money collected for a breach of rule is put in a bank and when the bank is full you have a party (Southern) for children, julep, and Spanish moss to sup.

An ideal method is to make a deal with your roommate that if either catches the other in a Yankeism, the money goes into a bank.

THE RULES ARE as follows:

Any spoken Yankeism is punishable by 5 cents

Any written Yankeism is punishable by 25 cents

A repeated Yankeism is punishable by 25 cents

A repeated written Yankeism is punishable by decapitation.

These phrases are the chief offenders to be on the lookout for:

"You guys"
"You all" (not real Southern)
"Gee whiz" "gee gosh" all cliches are Yankeisms!
"Brown as a berry"
"No one understands the Asian mind"
"High as a kite"
"Hot as fire"
"Cold as ice"
"I like fix"
"Ike is not sick"
"The like is a noble animal"
"An elephant never forgets"
"Supe duper"

These are but a few of the most obvious examples of speech manner. Don't let your conversation become infected as it may spread to others. Remember we must keep our speech pure as it is all that we have. Keep this rule in mind "A phrase once used is never clean."

Mississippi Paper Cites Definition Of Discrimination By Webster

ACCORDING to Mr. Webster and his explanation of the word discrimination—to "discriminate" means to distinguish one from the other, right from wrong, one fact from another. Every human being is a free agent with work, play, social life, eating habits, living habits etc. practices discrimination all day long every day or he lie.

This great country of ours was founded on the very principles of discrimination—the right to live with whom he wanted to, the right to say what we wanted to, the right to believe what we wanted to, the right to fight and argue for these rights when they are jeopardized. The founders of these United States definitely stated in the preamble of the Constitution that, "We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States."

WHAT DOES ALL this mean? The Negroes are continually bearing on their rights under the Constitution. Does not the Constitution work two ways? Read the preamble again—it states something about establishing justice and insuring domestic tranquility, and promoting the general welfare. All three items have been negligently overlooked in the mad scramble by the Negro and pro-Negro constitutional lawyers in their biased interpretation of our Constitution. Can't any of these lawyers see anything where the rights of the majority to live the way they want to, anywhere in the laws of the land? No word has ever been spoken legally as to the rights of the white majority to live as they desire in big matters or in small as the Negroes. But is it to anyone else?

Domestic tranquility — that means peace and contentment at home, in communities, neighborhoods, villages, cities, states, etc. Is this great unfair forced movement of Negro families, Negro traditions, Negro behavior and culture into perfectly peaceful and contented white communities a disturbing peaceful tranquility? Is most certainly is, as countless instances throughout the country, ocean to ocean and from the North to the South ean so ably testify.

PROMOTING the general welfare—every word in this phrase has been violated by these Negro and pro-Negro interests No white woman or man for that matter, would dare to walk through any colored community at night or even in the daytime. Is this the general welfare? Is this promoting the welfare? Is this the general welfare happens to be only the colored race, a class of people who as a race, join certain organizations for convenience only, NOT FOR PRINCIPLE.

The rights under the Constitution should apply to all—white or black. The colored race, through their militant leaders, always bring up the subject of their rights. Is it not time that the majority should call attention concerning their rights? Or don't they have any rights under the Constitution? Words of interpretation? From the Jackson Daily News, Mississippi.

If You Must Take A Stand On Elvis Presley-Be Fearless!

SUCH IS the furor over Elvis Presley that we were drawn irresistably to the television set to watch him as has lost network appearance.

After all, the teenage idol has reached such a point that all right-thinking Americans must take a stand on Presley, fearlessly.

We approach the great confrontations with qualms His reputation was such that we expected a crescendo of lewdness, some that like Medusa the person he would turn a nation of televiewers to stone.

It was not as bad as that. But it was bad enough.

Presley sings with a gurgling vocal gyration reminiscent of the early offensive than the mating call of the snowy egret. His expressions a various, rarely seen outside of snarls like a juvenile delinquent, or his adult counterpart, a mother. He is indeed a weird symbol of mass neurotic desire across the teenage sex.

Vallee and Sinatra idols of earlier generations were never like this Vallee sang through his nose, Sinatra's warm baritone was never sought by the Met. But Rudy and Franky sang without Presley's hysterics and wore looks on their faces not as indicative of a complete void between the ears.

IN PRESLEY'S behalf, however, we must say that competent televiewers in our circle of friends, who have watched Elvis in performances which were less inhibited than Sinatra's or Vallee's, know exactly how he cuts loose with his hip swinging his antics are not merely for erotic as the critics say. They clear him on the count of indecency.

Moreover, we cannot completely ignore an income of six figures and the ownership of a purple Cadillac

These observations are made in full knowledge of the consequences. We are forever excluded from the Presley fan clubs whose loyalty is best demonstrated by a letter we have received entitled Why Pick on Elvis.

Elvis, our correspondent advises dares to be different.

We can't argue with that. We so hard-hearted and unrelenting as Elvis when all he is trying to do is make a living and give fans enjoyment," our correspondent declared, adding:

ELVIS THINKS only of his fans. He gave a performance in his audiences on July 31, 1955. He gave two personal appearances when he should have stayed home in bed."

His fans should have.

In conclusion, however we

Inside Georgia's 'Council' Meeting

By OSCAR JOHNSON

One of the most notable experiences that can be had in the state known as Georgia is personal attendance at one of it's state-rights-citizens-etc council meetings. While not as extravagant, nor bold, as the cross-burning, sheet-wearing Klan organizations used to be, they nonetheless can provide a good deal of morbid, if not sadistic, entertainment.

Such was the case at one we attended recently in a small town where a few frantic promotors tried to scrape up enough citizens together for a segregation meeting under the guise of a "States Rights Council" meeting. None of the speakers, of course, referred to states rights, although one bemoaned that men in federal office "have taken the law into their own hands."

Not they did mention a few other things. To quote a few:

ITEM — "Based on Bible study, not all men are equal, nor are they entitled to be equal."

ITEM—While men made America, and this heritage should be willed to their offspring."

ITEM—"Not all white men are good. They have some weaknesses. The main one is a wishy-washy attitude toward segregation."

ITEM— "Some other country will take us over if present trends are allowed to continue."

ITEM — "The NAACP is a pro-Communist organization; its file makes workers unsatisfied."

ITEM—"Georgia Washington Carver might have had some white blood because of his high intelligence. We know Booker T. Washington had."

ITEM—"Many people call themselves Jews who aren't Jews. The Communist Jews are among them."

ITEM—"Negroes were sentenced by God to forever be servants and servants of servants."

ITEM—"The man who teaches and preaches integration is your enemy."

ITEM—"If we all get on fire about this thing, we can win the battle."

ITEM—"Integration, not unfamiliar with the spoken word, took enough time to appear in textbook on political principles of states rights. The above shows about how close they came to doing so.

Perhaps not many cared about hearing discussion on states rights; council leader, who introduced the speakers, complained the lack of attendance But said, maybe enough people will bring other meetings that are and would be in later. They weren't.

His also complained that the press had devoted slight...ble in getting a ...speaker there

Even in view of this amazing reluctance among citizens to get up and speak their hearts." Briefly mention...ing a few opinions on Negro equality during the course of speaker went on to say

"...what we do now...accordance with God's ...

But, to be said last can't see God as a ...man." And that, of course, is the central thing in on their 'radio'

The Threepenny Critic

Chamber Music Has Two-Fold Fam

CHAMBER music has a sort of two-fold reputation, by most musicians it is considered to embrace the most profound and intimately personal expressions of the world's greatest musical soul; by large segments of the public it is recognized as nothing more than a bore. Perhaps the latter opinion is held principally by people who have heard almost no chamber music, it must be conceded that Tuesday evening's program established some justification for both points of view.

This bill was consisted of two trios for clarinet, cello, and piano by Beethoven and Brahms, and a Trio Fantasie for clarinet and piano by Arthur Wolf, a recent composition played, and no wonder, by Mr. Owen Sellers and Mr. Harry Schmidt are virtuoso performers, and they had the privilege of performing with Ernst von Dohnanyi, a well-known pianist and interpreter of the works of the Viennese masters

Mr. Wolf's work vital and expressive performances could not obscure the fact that moments in the Sonata and the early Beethoven work. We left feeling that the Brahms Trio was the only composition heard which successfully maintained a high level of interest.

HOWEVER, now that we have done our duty by those readers who prefer their chamber music enthusiasts, we feel compelled to insist that each work more than compensated for its occasional dullness with moments of sheer beauty. If the last movement of the clarinet Sonata seemed facile and even shallow, the first movement was nonetheless like darkly brooding, sublimately sad Russian folk his best, and the Adagio was a lamentation greater perhaps than the yearningly lonely soul of mankind.

Mr. Schmidt's playing of the solo part, sensitive and intelligent at all times, was chiefly distinguished by a lovely and romantic control that was frequently breath-taking. Most impressive were the soaring lines of the first movement and the intimate, tender Adagio. In the Owen Sellers and Mr. Harry Schmidt are virtuoso performers, and they had the privilege of performing with Ernst von Dohnanyi, a well-known pianist and interpreter of the works of the Viennese masters

But every phrase vital and expressive performances could not obscure the fact that moments in the Sonata and the early Beethoven work. We left feeling that the Brahms Trio was the only composition heard which successfully maintained a high level of interest.

HOWEVER, now that we have done our duty by those readers who prefer their chamber music

Notes On Clearwater Ordinance

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

CLEARWATER July 4—Today, Independence Day, the people of this city were mortified of their fellow citizens

Their communion was hurriedly adopted an ordinance vesting mysterious power in control of Clearwater Beach and the causeway leading to it to the city manager and the police department. The measure was rationalized as a traffic safety precaution.

But no one—not the newspapers nor the officials, nor the people assembled in the immediate purpose of the emergency ordinance was to keep Negroes off Clearwater Beach.

Red Has Way Of Setting Up World War III

Playing on Arab pride of race, nationalism on Arab Moslem-Christian fanaticism, Premier Shepilov, the New Soviet Foreign Minister is well on the way to setting all the elements that can start World War III in the Islamic peninsula that connects Europe, Asia and Africa, in what is called the Middle East.

In the role of most honored guest at the celebration of Egypt's taking over military control of the Suez Canal, Shepilov set a pattern of open handiwork in the greatest display of Arab greed might since their empire formed a crescent

THEY CALL IT 'BIG TIME'—

Florida State University moves into a 'big time' basketball rating this year, and University officials have arranged for a 'big time' induction.

Though the Tribe met some of the finest basketball players in the nation last season, the NCAA waved its finger and said you'll have to wait another season before we can consider you a "major college" basketballwise.

The thing that made everyone so unhappy last season was that Jimmy Oler was playing a final seal on his collegiate preformances. The bantam gentleman averaged just under 30 points during that final campaign—enough to have made anyone's All-America team had he been eligible.

But eligibility is spelled 'big-time'.

The Tribe will have its rating this year, and it'll have the schedule to go with it. On the road The Seminoles meet such 'names' as Bradley, North Carolina State, Duquesne, and Stubenville of Ohio.

At home they'll host Texas A&M, Miami, Georgia, East Tennessee and Loyola of New Orleans to mention a few. And they meet Florida in Gainesville Dec. 10.

This will be the year, too, that FSU officially opens its million dollar gymnasium. It'll be dedicated Dec 13 when the Tribe opens its home slate against Texas A&M.

OF STROKES AND GRINS—

Don Veller came back into town this week with as broad a grin as you'll see anywhere and, buried underneath it a though that, "well, we almost did it."

Veller's the gentleman with the doctorate who has guided the Seminole golfers through their last 20 successive meets without a whipping. And during that skein they swept the state intercollegiate title.

Screwed in all its suntanned vividness, that grin told the story of the latest of Seminole successes. The golf team didn't sweep any honors to speak of out at Columbus, Ohio, last week, but it did enough to make the home folks feel proud.

Vic Marr's linksmen finished fourth in the nation as a team—just seven strokes off a national title. And dapper Bobby Dunn came about as close to a national individual title as a nice guy can get.

Dunn was whipped in the quarterfinals of the national individual championship race one-up by Ohio State's Rick Jones. Jones went on to win the title in the finals with a resounding 4 and 3 triumph.

Veller's sure Dunn should have been champion.

"Bobby was playing good golf. He was hitting everything well and hitting it straight. Jones was playing erratically until he got on the greens. Then, it was just a mater of the course being his home stamping ground."

The mastery was played on the Ohio State private course. As a local boy, Jones knew every obstacle And he used the advantage to win the national championship There's no shame in losing to a national champion.

Vallar came home proud.

A GATOR LOSS—

On the subject of golf, Florida's Gators had one good offer when the Tribe whipped them twice last year, Dave Ragan, by label.

Earlier this week, the 70-year-old shotmaker announced he'd filled application for professional status. He's giving up college for the tournament lure.

As an amateur at the Gainesville university, Ragan won the state intercollegiate individual title, the southern intercollegiate, the Okefenokee Invitational and the state open and this past month.

He would have been a senior, too. Guess it's a matter of choice.

OF A PRETTY GIRL AND A FOOTBALL—

Florida State University Sports Publicity was probably the first such organization in the country to get out its 1956 football brochure this year.

It's a swell book. On its pages you'll find the raw materials for the story the Seminoles will write this fall, and on its cover, a pretty girl.

It's amazing what a girl's picture can do.

Since the Sports Publicity crew sent the brochures to every part of the nation a couple of weeks ago, requests for further information have come pouring in every day. Not on the guys who'll be wearing the Garnet and Gold, mind you, but on the girl who's wearing the headdress on the cover.

She's Paula Parsons, a Miami miss. And she's all decked out in the four lovely colors which Elgin White, Sports Publicity chief, chose for this year's brochure. It's a masterpiece for the football fan, and it's available to the public.

This isn't a commercial or the likes, but you can pick one up for the price of a movie at the University book store. If that doesn't pan out, try Eddie Cubbon at the Athletic Business office, also in the Student Center.

It's a cute football she's holding.

TWENTY YEAR RECORD

MANHATTAN, KANSAS — (ACP)—The longest consecutive string of All-American yearbooks in the nation remained unbroken this year with the announcement that the 1955 Royal Purple of Kansas State College has been awarded another All-American rating by the Associated Collegiate Press. It's the 20th year in a row that the Royal Purple has been rated among the country's top yearbooks.

DID YOU KNOW that it takes a lot of writing to fill up a newspaper?

DID YOU KNOW an FSU student was indignant to find that there wasn't a course offered in Interpreting Native African Drum Beats? I can't set anything I want, she complained.

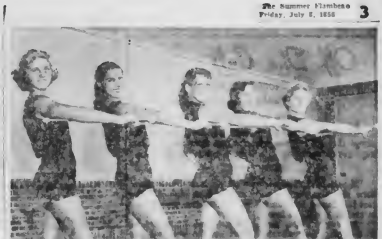
Camper's Concert Is Sunday

Music lovers are in for a wonderful evening of music when they attend Sunday's Music Camp Concert.

The Concert, which is the third in a series, is to be presented in Westcott Auditorium Sunday evening, at 6:15 p.m.

The three-part program ranges from classics to popular march tunes, brass with "Matinees Musicales" by Benjamin Britten with Donald Miebel conducting. The second offering of the evening is to be "Allegro con grazia from Symphony No. 6" by Tschaikowsky, Robert Sedore, conducting.



R. Alexandera marsh "From Tyrone To Tyrone", with Oliver Hobbs conducting, is the next selection.

"Short Classics" arranged by Gillette includes "Trumpet Tune" and "Psalm XVIII", and is followed by "Relax" by Yoder, performed by the Summer Music

GETTING READY for a concert is a busy job for director Robert Sedore who wields the baton during Summer Music Camp Orchestra practice. The finished efforts of the group will be heard at the Sunday evening concert.

PRETTY IS AS PRETTY DOES—These young lassies attending the Florida State University Music Camp represent the top high school twirlers of the state. They could have easily won a title for looks alone.

Large Variety Is Hauled In By Fishermen

Nearly 500 pounds of fish was proof of the success of the recent deep-sea fishing trip The trip on June 29, participated in by 30 people, chartered 3 boats and left from St. Marks

There was a variety of fish caught, though groupers and grunts were predominate according to FSU "fishermen". The most unusual fish caught were frostfish, while one shark provided some excitement for the group.

Squash in the morning reminded the participants of the movie "Lifeboat" shown the night before at the Amphitheater. Clear weather prevailed in the afternoon, however, and made the trip worthwhile, said Miss Marie Williams, Summer Recreation Director.

The next trip is scheduled for July 14 Anyone wishing to go must sign up by Thursday noon, July 12 in room 19 Longmire. The fee will be about six dollars and the Recreation Director said there is a promise for less boat rating and more fishing on this trip.

There is no age limit and college transportation is provided. Several "underworlds" attendants of the last trip, however, suggest that if you plan to go deep sea fishing, eat plenty of breakfast and bring an adequate lunch!

THIS IS THE WAY—pretty Donna Kozla, left, who is one of the twirling instructors at the Music Camp, makes being a majorette seem like real work to her pupils. However after the course is finished, they will agree that it is worth all the effort spent.

Do We Need A New Economic Policy?

FROM ONE point of view the House of Representatives rebellion on the foreign-aid bill hints a touch of the kind of reaction which kept the United States out of the League of Nations after World War I. From another it may be a healthy breaking of bonds for basic rethinking of objectives and methods in the United States' foreign economic policy.

Foreign aid has done a world of good in Europe and recipients in Asia since World War II. By it America has met needs which might have opened country after country to communism. If needs ceased But that phase of operation has partly if not largely passed

A WELL-KNOWN economist, Peter F. Drucker, has discussed this situation in Harper's magazine under the heading "Needed: A New Foreign Economic Policy." The sub-subject of an "American Forum" program televised from Washington.

The original aid programs were geared to relief and reconstruction when those were urgent needs. They assumed, as Mr. Drucker points out, that the rest of the world was extremely dependent on the United States, whereas "the painful truth is that the outside world a daily becoming less dependent upon America, while the United States is becoming more dependent upon the outside world" for raw materials.

He advocates that the United States seek a policy under which it can increase our exports, thereby expanded raw material production throughout the world, harmonize its interests with those of the free world, and strengthen the free world socially and politically. He believes the policy which will best fulfill these requirements is one of promoting rapid economic and especially industrial growth

THE SNAPPY COMEBACK

ABILENE, TEXAS— (ACP)— Columnist Billy D. Moore lists this one in his column in the Hardin-Simmons University Brand:

Note in each pay envelope from a certain firm: Your pay is your personal business and should be disclosed to no one.

Answer from new employee: Don't worry. I am just as ashamed of it as you are.

of raw-material-producing countries.

Such a policy, he points out, will require some changes in attitudes. "Industrial development of the growth countries will have to be regarded as an investment in our own economic future rather than as aid to foreigners" It will require aims frankly to serve intelligent American self-interest at the same time that it benefits other nations will be from their point of view, more believable than one which poses as wholly altruistic and more acceptable than one which hands them as something like vassals.

SUCH A PROGRAM, to be realistic, must contemplate a great deal more American investment in less developed countries and must cultivate in them a much greater awareness of the value of development capital. To be American, the program must contemplate a maximum of ex-pansion by private companies rather than by government in business.

These are some of the considerations that may be thought through more clearly by standing off and taking a longer look at what thus far has been called "foreign aid". Perhaps the policy that will emerge in the next session of Congress will be more appropriately called "self help" for America and for its free-world friends. — From the Christian Science Monitor.

Offer Varied Recreation

Ways to beat the Tallahassee heat can be found easily by glancing at the 1956 Summer Recreation Bulletin every now and then

On the agenda for tonight is the "Classic and Not Classic" an all-time favorite, starring Jacquelin Hull. It starts at 8 o'clock at the Amphitheater, or in Westcott in case of rain.

Square dancing on the tennis courts is being featured Saturday nights, with music by the Q-Bach quintet and calling by Dr. Tait. Everyone is invited. Cold free punch will be served.

On Sunday there will be a Music Camp Orchestra Concert by the Music Camp, starting at 6:15 in Westcott.

Several activities are scheduled for Wednesday, July 11, beginning at 6 o'clock. Dr. W. B. Rogers will give readings from Browning in the Student Lounge in Langmire The Artist Series, "Musical Portraits," in Westcott; and the Summer Music Camp Chorus, in Opperman, both begin at 8:15.

Next Thursday, July 12, there are Table Games from 7 until 9 in the Trophy Room at the Student Center. Any and every kind of table games is offered and a student may bring a partner or come alone. Also on Thursday he movie "Genevieve" at 8 o'clock at the Amphitheater or, in case of rain, in Westcott.

Mass In English To Be Featured At Altar Boy Clinic

A commentary in English read simultaneously with the asertion of the Mass will be a feature of the week-long Altar Boy Clinic being conducted at the Blessed Sacrament Church on Miccosukee Road.

Father Wm. J. Weinheimer, Newman House Chaplain, describes the event as a remarkable opportunity for non-Catholics to gain understanding of the various component parts of the Mass.

The English narration will be read at the 8:00 Mass Monday through Friday. All interested persons are welcome to attend.

Frieden Elected To American Society Of Bio-Chemists

Dr. Earl Frieden, Associate Professor of Chemistry has been elected to membership in the American Society of Biological Chemists.

Election to this society is based upon the publication of significant original research in biochemistry. The election must be confirmed by a majority of several important research papers in biochemistry. Membership is also awarded upon selection by the society as a whole at its annual meeting in April.

Other members of the American Society of Biological Chemists on campus are Dr. Karl Dittmer, head of the Dept. of Chemistry, and Dr. Robert Fox, Director of the Oceanographic Institute There are only three other active members in the entire state of Florida.

ON THE CAMPI

There are a few things that are going 'round the camp that I like to suggest for this folks to see. Just hope you string along with some of my ideas (?).

PENNY WISE

If you haven't seen the first Summer Stock show, then you're missing a good night's entertainment. The cast has done a bang-up job with a situation that no one in reality would get into.

As a whole the cast gives excellent performances. In this play the audience doesn't get the idea that one actor is trying to steal the show from another.

Dr. Paul Davee has brought out the best of the actors and Charles I. Reimer has provided one of the most interesting sets I've seen.

Be wise and see PENNY WISE.

MUSIC, MUSIC, MUSIC

For those who like their orchestra and band music combined, then see and hear the free gigs that are held in Westcott auditorium at 6.15 Sunday evening.

Usually the music ranges from marches and classical pieces to some modern arrangements of songs. The High School Group has done very well under the direction of Robert Sedore, Manly Whitcomb and Robert Braungel.

For the record fans both popular and classical: Leoncavallo, Palsaeci and Mascagni: Cavalleria Rusticana are the classical recordings on 3 twelve inch records.

These two operas have been available in separate format for over 10 years on the London label. It seems "Cav" and "Pag" go together like ham and eggs and those of you who like these, will appreciate the coupling on the record.

A number of record companies have made recordings of this London out-shines all the others. As Turiddu, Mario del Monaco is heard at his best in "Cavalleria Rusticana".

PRESLEY POST-MORTUM

Those of you who get a kick out of take-offs, then Stan Freberg's Hartford-to-Hot'l is a must. Stan does a fairly good recording of "The Body plus the Voice".

The guitar playing is Presleyish, but never-the-less it's some, man. R-E-A-L Gone!

For the more dreamy combination Gogi Grant's recording of "The Wayward Wind" is cool and mellow. It's rated high on the hit parade.

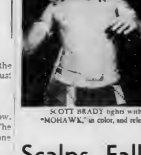
MOVIE. ANYONE.

If you enjoyed the movie, "The Private War of Major Benson," then don't miss "Toy Tiger". It's too much for words.

It's a certain theater saving: "Don't star with children", because they steal the show. Tim Hovey manages to do more than that.

Of course Lorraine Day and Charlton Heston play along and come out looking right silly! But it's all in fun.

And if it's fun you want, don't miss the free movie on campus "Arsenic and Old Lace" with Josephine Hull. It's been a very, very popular play on Broadway.



It seems old ladies and dead bodies just don't mix, but for entertainment it's the screamiest. The movie is just as good as when it came out.

If you like Josephine Hull and James Stewart, then be sure to see "Harvey" next week at Westcott Auditorium. It's another "howling success."

Mystery, intrigue, and the insight to people's lives could very well be the ingredients to "Dangerous Corner" by J. B. Priestley the next Summer Flambeau play.

Those of you who saw "An Inspector Calls" last summer will well remember the twist of fate can play a very unusual call to a group of unsuspecting people.

Scalps Fall At State As Tomahawks Fly

SCOTT BRADY fights with an Indian in this scene from "MOHAWK," in color, and released through 20th Century-Fox.

A new trust to frontier action is provided for the movie-goer in "Mohawk," a drama of the legend of the Iroquois, playing at the State theater Sunday through Tuesday.

Unlike other Indian-White Man 'flicks,' this film portrays valiance on an earlier American frontier, the primitive region of the Mohawk Valley.

Photography, music direction, and scenery combine with exceptional acting to produce a movie which critics have acclaimed to be of top-notch appeal.

Starring in this Iroquois epoch are Scott Brady, who plays an artist-businessman who falls in love with the daughter of the chief of the Iroquois, played by Rita Gam, also Neville Brand, who is a revengeful brave whose hate for the white man threatens not only the settlers but the warriors of the entire Iroquois nation.

An intricate love-quadrangle is a-round between Brady, Miss Gam, Lori Nelson, a Boston debutante's girl, and Allison Hayes, a frontier girl. Romance plays a leading role in the movie, and it ads to an extremely complex situation, as the three girls vie for Brady's affection.

Included in the film are realistic scenes of battles and chases, which should be delightful for the action-lover.

The protography is done in Widescreen with color by Eastman, which lends itself beautifully to the wild Mohawk country.

Prominent in the supporting cast are John Ridgely, Walter Kingsford, John Hudson, Miss Clarke, Ted de Corsia, Tommy Cook and Michael Granger.

Historical accuracy, Indian rituals and music, revengeful redmen, and determined settlers join forces to provide the viewer with unsurpassed savagry of action.

Film Shows Okefenokee Swamp Life

The infinite attraction that man has to learn the most he can about his own beginnings and that of the world in which he lives, provides "The Living Swamp", the new CinemaScope presentation in Deluxe color, with a music curious and satisfying film adventure theme.

The photographic film technique employed to record the fearsome watch phase Saturday morning at the State Theatre, allows its views to wander into the exciting and dangerous labyrinth that is the Okefenokee Swamp which extends for nearly 700 square miles in the Southeastern corner of the State of Georgia.

The film intimately records those vestiges from prehistoric times that struggle for life as old drama of kill or be killed. The film also shows the magical beauty of its tropical pools and forest recesses and the humor and the ritual of the life of its inhabitants. The antics of young bear cubs, the sensible gatherings of otters and the differ-ferings by busy raccoons create lively situations while the panthers and reptiles provide the suspense that has had film critics acclaiming "The Living Swamp" as one of the very best of the popular Deluxe pictures.

High points in drama occur when David DeLie caretaker of the refuge and director of the film featurette, embarks on an extremely hazardous snake hunt and later engages a human alligator in a deadly contest.

Past Theater Experience Varies For FSU Cast Of 'Penny-Wise'

Tonight is the last night of "Penny Wise" at the Augusta Conradi Theater at 8.15 under the direction of Dr. Paul Davee.

All the members of the quadrangle love affair in the cast have done much more than research lines and work on the play in the rehearsal aspect.

Under the supervision of Charles I. Reimer, technical director, the company of "444" did such jobs as build the set, make props and hunt for furniture used in the show.

Besides doing technical work, the group were rehearsing for

Miss Bass hails from Georgia where she attends Wesleyan College during the regular session. In "Father of the Bride," she had the lead role in the play "Stage Door." "Family Portrait," "A Midsummer's Night Dream," and "Widow of the Wisp" are some of the acting events that this 4 year old sophomore has attained.

Stage work and TV jobs have kept Bruce Ellis, a transfer from St. Petersburg Jr. College, quite busy. He has appeared with the Ivorytown Summer Stock group as an apprentice player in such shows as "Mr. Roberts and "Guilty Bystander." At St. Petersburg he was in the drama group "Playmakers" and the "Verse Speaking Choir."

Nancy Cubbon made her Conradi debut with "Charley's Aunt" as Charlie's girl friend. She was with a leading Summer Stock company in North. Miss Cubbon danced [illegible] as "Oklahoma" Princess," had the musical comedy lead in "Ko-Ko-Mo," an original production here and in "New Moon" she danced and sang.

"Steaks and Richard Burton are my favorites" remarked Suzy Saunders. This 21 year old Senior has appeared in "Death Takes a Holiday" and was Beatrice in "Rebecca." She has also appeared in the Speech Department's Children Theater production "Rumplestiltskin." Miss Saunders, who hails from Lake Worth, has done TV work.

This years Summer Stock at FSU is not complete without Radford who watched and worked with the company last years group. Miss Crawford cast her for the High School Drama Workshop and directed the play Head Nurse in "So Wonderful

PAST EXPERIENCE

Of the eight people working on the play only two have never worked on the Conradi Stage before. They are Bruce Ellis and Maurenne Bass, who are Gordon and Tina.

This is the second time Max Estes has worked with the Summer Stock company this year. Earlier this year he was Mr. Beerling in "An Inspector Calls." Paul is "My 3 Angels" and has appeared in "Hamlet" and "Rumplestiltskin" during regular season. Estes is a graduate student and former teacher at Baker County High School.

Another school teacher who is not new to the Conradi stage is Mary Alice Newton, stage manager of "Penny Wise." Miss Newton has taught school in Dalton, Georgia, "Family Portrait," "The Crucible" and being a member of "Les Jongleurs" are the things she's been in. She was in charge of properties for "Poppa Is Alive" the summer before last at FSU.

NEXT SHOW

"Dangerous Cournev. by J. B. Priestley is the next production that the group will do. Those who saw "An Inspector Calls" last summer should be familiar with the Priestly playwriting.

At this time of printing certain seats were still available but next week's paper for who and what.

Scientist Says Sea To Supply Fuel When Fusion Controlled

Fuel cheaply extracted from the sea can satisfy man's energy requirements for the next 100 million years if the problem of controlled fusion can be solved, an atomic scientist said here.

Dr. Amasa Bishop, head of the Controlled Thermonuclear Branch of the Atomic Energy Commission which is working on the problem, spoke at the final session of Science Camp, attended by 80 Florida high school students.

Deuterium, a form of hydrogen, "actually can be gotten out of the ocean at very small expense," he said and this is a likely material which will be used in production of energy by controlled fusion.

Dr. Bishop cautioned, however, that development of controlled fusion may still be a long way off and there are "formidable difficulties" which have to be overcome before it is possible.

He predicted some "successful" energy-producing devices "probably will be developed, however, and said that when it is there are several things which should encourage production of energy in this way.

The cheapness of oceanaful of fuel is one, he said, while in this process there is no waste that must be disposed of.

In addition, he said, there is no explosion hazard present in the production of energy by fusion and there is the possibility also of direct conversion into electricity.

Dr. Alex. E. S. Green, Florida University associate professor of physics, who is Science Camp director, closed the two week Camp session after Dr Bishop's talk Sunday.

C. M. Carroll Receives Top Savannah Post

Charles M Carroll, former manager of the Florida State Symphony here, has been named manager of the Savannah Symphony Orchestra.

Carroll, who received a master of music degree in 1951 from FSU, was also a former assistant manager of the National Symphony Orchestra in Waasington

A native of Indiana, Carroll's past association with musical promotional activity was as an assistant coordinator of music services at Indiana University.

He is a member of the board of directors of the American Symphony Orchestra League and served as vice president last year. Carroll was also been associated with the Florida Music Teachers Association, Florida Composers League, Southeastern Composers League, Ohio Music Teachers Association and others.

Prior to his Savannah appointment, Carrol was manager of the Toledo Ohio Symphony Orchestra.

He is married to the former Mary Rosemhuah of Green Cove Springs who earned bachelor and master degrees in music from FSU in 1950 and 1951 respectively.

Stock Gives 'Whodunit' As Second Play

Thriller Opens In Conradi, 8:15

Why does an unmarried man commit suicide? Why does his death agonize all the people he knew with confessions of guilt? Why does a musical cigarette box act off "jigger" and-one?

These are some of the problems to be answered by the characters in "Dangerous Corner" by J. B. Priestly. This second Summer Stock play is under the direction of Dr. Raul W. Davee.

Theater goers will be able to see the same group of actors who played in "Penny-Wise" under a different situation and entirely different roles. The play will open Thursday and Friday nights at the Conradi Theater.

Playing the middle aged novelist Maud Mockridge is Mary Alice Stevens. Mockridge starts the ball rolling with her questions and remains to be "one of the group."

Brad Mac va. ? ??

Ron McCall and Maureene Bass play Mr. and Mrs. Chatfield, the teacher and sister-in-law of the deceased person. Did the dead brother have any influence in their marriage and if so, why?

Once again Nancy Cubbon and Nora Ellis are "married" to each other. These two portray Gordon and Betty Whithouse. Why does their "ideal marriage" suddenly become not so ideal to the others? Does the dead man really have such a hold on them?

Short-Cut Students Hard On The Campus

Bugs and students who take short cuts across the campus, in that order, are the worst natural enemies of H. C. Martin, horticulturist and grounds superintendent for Florida State University.

To fight the former, Martin and his crew of gardeners have a formidable collection of insecticides together with the knowledge of what plants will be able to withstand those bets.

Sometimes, he admits, it is hard to combat the students and other campus travelers who wear hard brown paths through the grass. As a last resort, he said, we go ahead and build a sidewalk in the path if that will fit in with the campus plan."

Keeping the 350-acre campus green and supplying cutflowers for tables, infirmary and auditoriums is a year round operation for the gardeners.

At present the biggest operations are mowing, grass spraying, weeding and putting in a crop of thousands of chrysanthemums for fall bloom. These will be followed by snapdragons, calendulas, stock and some other plants for late winter or spring bloom. Dahlias and zinnias now are at their height of bloom.

In addition to a couple of acres of field-grown flowers the gardening crew raises blooming plants in the greenhouse. Half of the greenhouse is reserved for this use while the other half is used for winter housing of numerous tender potted plants.

The tropical and sub-tropical plants—such things as tender palms, rubber plants, crotons and cerrus—are the apples in FSU's small population of growing things, several times that of old-timeraine student body.

Constantly on the move—to the Music Hall for a concert, to Westcott Auditorium for another event or to Conradi Hall for a play—they take the worst beating of any plant, according to Martin.

In addition to all of this the gardening crew has to provide plants for permanent plantings, and about 15,000 shrubs and trees now are growing in cans after being rooted outdoors.

The whole operation has outgrown the two acres on the campus assigned to it and several additional acres on the university farm are being developed to providing landscape material.

Craftsmen End Three-Weeks Short Course

The first students complete their summer school work at FSU this week — 123 teachers and supervisors of vocational education programs who have been attending a three-week course.

Dr. Edward Hankin, who is in charge of the course, said the 123 include craftsmen of many trades and each a master of his craft.

All have come here, he said, to acquire additional professional skill in passing on their trades to others. The State Department of Education is jointly sponsoring the course. Another three-week course started July 9 and a six-week course will start July 30.

Among the group of teachers taking the course now ending are 12 Spanish-speaking Cubans of the San Julian Aircraft Technical School who expect to pass on some of their knowledge to non-English-speaking members of the faculty.

There is an expert horticulturist from Daytona Beach schools, two dentists who are teaching dental technology to untrained nurses who are teaching practical nursing, cabinet-makers, carpenters, beauty culturists, auto mechanics, tv-radio specialists, printers, welders, photographers, and diversified cooperative training personnel.

Most of the students are from Florida but some come from Alabama and Georgia and as far away as Wisconsin. Faculty also have been brought in from several states.

Review Of Local Authors Wednesday

Florida authors will find Mrs. Olive Cross of the FSU English department an enthusiastic reporter.

Next Wednesday she will review the works of some of her favorite Florida authors at the 4:30 tea and book review held weekly in Longmire Lounge.

Previously, she has been responsible for bringing to the university for the annual English Coffee Hour series such noted authors as Phillip Wylie and Frank Slaughter.

Next Wednesday Mrs. Cross will discuss authors whom she considers outstanding exciting and currently active. They include Phillip Wylie of Miami, who was granted a Ph.D degree from FSU last year; Frank Slaughter, a Jacksonville surgeon and author and McKinley Kantor of Sarasota, the author of Andersonville, the novel which recently won a Pulitzer Prize.

Intending to speak at first on only three, Mrs. Cross exclaims that there are so many good Florida authors that she hopes to possibly include Pat Frank of Mt. Dora and others.

"Florida is well known for its authors," she says. "It's a sort of paradise for writers."

This review will be the fourth in the summer recreation series, sponsored by the summer recreation program.

Final Round Slated Today For Debaters

The fourth and final round of the Southeastern High School Speech Institute debate tournament will be held today in 123-4 History, at 1 p.m. It will be open to the public.

Resolved: That the Federal Government Should Sustain the Prices of Major Agricultural Products That Are Not Less Than 90% of Parity, will be the topic of the debate.

Eight debaters will be taking part, and each of them will debate both sides of the topic.

This round of the debate tournament will wind up this year's Forensic section of the Speech Institute, now in its third summer session.

Two Operettas To Take Stage Here July 18

109 Voice Background

"Sunday Excursion" and "God's Trombones" will be the two productions that Florida State Music Camp group will put on Wednesday night in Westcott auditorium.

Shows are free and open to the public. Curtain time is at 8:15.

"Sunday Excursion" is a new work by Eric Wilder and will be featured for the first time on the FSU campus. "God's Trombones" will have 110 members singing in the performance.

Two boys and two girls go to New York on a "Sunday Excursion" where love sets in on the train they're riding on. The girls craftily coax the boys to meet some other people.

Of course the boys don't want to. Then trouble starts rolling when all four with they hadn't come at all.

Taking part in this Opera is Tschamer McClain, Margaret McRae, and Charles Kirkland. Phil Howard and Willard Dean

"The setting is a New York train in the early 1800's," remarked Miss Betty Jane Grimes, stage director. Sets will be stylized for the two shows which run approximately 25 minutes.

"God's Trombone" by Roy Harris and its poems by Poet Fred Waring on television last spring. Reading from the book Wright (Prayer Women).

Furnishing the background music for this poem will be 110 voices singing the hymns and music that go with the reading.

Directing the chorus will be Herman Gunter. Assisting him are Eric Byrd and Richard Warren.

Grant Jones, Deanna Lumkin and Carlo Skinner will accompany the group for the two shows.

Education Problem Created By Growth

The changes in Florida which are accompanying a vast influx of people pose a big problem for education, a FSU audience was told early this week.

Dr. Earl L. Koos, professor of social welfare speaking on the summer lecture series to an audience principally of education students, said:

Among the 1200 families coming to Florida every week, eight or nine hundred don't come simply to sit in the sun, however pleasant that may be."

Like other "credit" areas in the world attracting many new settlers, the state's movement of people occurs only as industrialization takes place. This, he said, is a movement of population, increasing emphasis on industry and the accompanying consciousness.

"There is little difference between a Italian settler in Australia, a Belgian going to Venezuela or a New Yorker moving to Florida," he declared. All have a big adjustment to make to their new life."

And the problems for the areas settled are similar, he said, whether it is Venezuela, Australia or Perry, Fla. "Melbourne and Miami have had similar industrialization took over about seven years ago," he said. "Now it is characterized by anonymous and urgent living."

By the tremendous changes when there is a movement of population ,he said, "a tremendous burden is laid on the shoulders of the individual. He somehow has to be helped to understand and to meet his new problems."

Education can step in here, he said, by performing its function of "helping man to adjust to the demands of his society."

Sunday Concert Will Feature 'King And I'

Highlighting the Sunday night Music Camp concert that will be held in the auditorium at 8:15 will be selections and the score from the The King and I. The concert will be at Westcott Auditorium at 8:15.

Such songs as "I Whistle A Happy Tune" Hello Young Lovers and "Shall We Dance" are some of the numbers from "The King and I".

Soloing Sunday night are Grant Jones with Rhapsody in Blue and Marie Espenlie with "Napoli."

Other music on the program will be "Legend" by Paul Creston selected marches and the closing with "Summertime River", the music camp song.

How Would FSU Fare In H-Blast On Tallahassee Area?

Poor Chance Of Survival Says CD Aid

In the event of a sneak atomic attack on the capitol city, chances for survival in the area of the FSU campus would be "pretty slim", said William Jacobs, administrative assistant to the Leon County Civil Defense Director.

Mr. Jacobs in stressing the importance of the National Defense Training Exercise, which is to be held here on July 20, explained that the effects of such an attack could be quite disastrous according to military strategists. Tallahassee has been rated as target material for a 20K bomb in case of enemy attack.

This bomb, which is the smallest of the atomic, or nuclear, bombs and is comparable to the weapon which brought such devistating results when dropped on the city of Hiroshima during World War II, has an explosive power of 20 thousand tons of TNT.

2,000 Alive

Without such protection, such a blow, say strategists, would leave the Leon county area with only 2,000 possible survivors. In addition, they claim that there would not be a hospital left in the Tallahassee area to be put into service.

However, Leon County Civic Defense workers take some exception to this statement due to the fact that they feel the hilly terrain in this region would offer some protection to hospitals and people in the frame areas.

The task of preparing the people of Florida for such an emergency falls to the Civil Defense administration. At this date, Tallahassee is one of two Florida targets which will be subjected to mock nuclear attack during the National Defense Training Exercise on Friday, July 20. Macon Dill Airforce Base in Tampa is the other.

Tally in Target

Colonel Hiram Washington, State Civil Defense Director, said Tallahassee will be hit by an H-bomb which will be a destructive power of 20,000 tons of TNT during the mock attack.

He said a simulated hit by a nuclear bomb equal to five million tons of TNT will be scored on MacDill.

Only the mock evacuation will be carried out during the July 20 drill according to the colonel, as it would be more than thirty minutes would be required to empty Tallahassee proper.

City Divided

According to the local Civil Defense workers, Tallahassee will be divided into sectors sections each having an evacuation route. The Thomasville Road has been assigned to Florida State University.

It is uncertain at this time whether FSU will take part in the mock evacuation of next Friday.

Colonel Tarkinston said the national operation is designed to give Civilian Defense volunteer workers practical experience in handling nuclear attack disaster.

But it "will make the public more aware of the dangers that confront us," he said.

Realistic Alert

In a talk with Mr. Jacobs a Flambeau reporter learned that the Civil Defense department will receive the "enemy alert" at approximately 10:15 a.m. "Red Alert" would come at 2:15 p.m. This would give Civil Defense workers "roughly a four hour notice" which would be "realistic" in cases of actual warfare. The decision to evacuate the city would be made by the County Director of Civil Defense.

In this case he said, the evacuation is planned for 12:00 in order that the State employees may take part during their lunch hour. Everyone should be back to normal from 1:30 to 45 minutes Mr. Jacobs explained.

YOUNG PIANIST Grant Jones will be the featured soloist at the Sunday afternoon concert in Westcott Auditorium presented by the music Campers His performance will be the playing of Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue.

Sunday's Music Features Pianist

By RYAN EDWARDS

Sunday afternoon's band and orchestra concert will feature a solo performance by Grant Jones, an outstanding pianist of the summer music camp. He will play the ever-popular Rhapsody in Blue by George Gershwin.

Grant, who hails from Clearwater, will be 15 in September. He is widely known around campus as a promising artist and as the brother of Candace Jones. "Or," as he says, "the future member-in-law of Bob Lee."

He has performed the remarkable feat of learning the Rhapsody in less than three weeks. For this reason he plans to play from the music on the concert, and will be assisted by an eye-filling page-turner.

Grant is a second-term musicamper, and studies with Professor Carlisle Floyd. A dark haired, bright-eyed chap, his enthusiasm for FSU and Mr. Floyd will not be unbounded. "Of course I like it!" he said when we caught him coming out of a rehearsal the other day. "I came back, didn't I?" Though he thinks query about future plans is a terrible question, he will admit that he plans to come to college as a piano major and "FSU is the most likely place."

An extremely active person, Grant is accompanist of the Teachers Attend Resource Study

Two weeks' intensive study of how vital resources problems are being solved began Monday at Florida State University when the first Conservation Workshop in Resource Use sponsored by the Geography Department got under way.

About 18 persons from over Florida are attending the workshop, according to Dr. John O. Ragsdale, the director. Most of them are teachers who will attend on scholarships provided by the Florida Federation of Garden Clubs and matched by their counties.

During the workshop which runs through July 25, Dr. Ragsdale said, the personnel will make three field trips for on-the-spot studies of conservation problems and their solutions. Before each one authori-

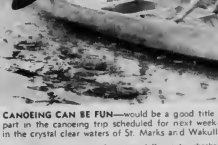
Cruise Down The River In A Canoe

A canoe trip down the St. Marks and Wakulla rivers is on the Summer Recreation Program agenda for Saturday, July 21 With room for only 36 people on the trip, a registration deadline has been set for 5 p.m. Wednesday, July 18.



Students, faculty and staff are invited to sign up in Room 202, Women's Gymnasium. A registration fee of 85 cents will be charged, which will take care of everything but the lunch problem.

Operation Canoe Ride will leave the campus at 1 p.m. and return around 8 p.m. on the 18th. The group will be divided into two sections upon arriving at the destination. One group will beein the canoe journey at Natural Bridge on the St. Marks and the other will begin at Wakulla Bridge.

The leisure trip will furnish ample time for viewing Florida's natural beauty in the form of unusual vegetation and wild life There will also be a swim period of one of the stops on the way down the river.

After the trip the groups will meet at St. Marks for dinner, to be purchased by the individuals.

Those wishing to make the trip are asked to meet at the swimming pool on Thursday, July 19 at 8:30 p.m. so that swimming skill can be checked and concerning the trip will be given instructions given posted on the bulletin board outside room 202, Women's Gym. ... stitute, director of the Oceanographic Institute, now in its third summer session. ... canoeing. Other instructions ...

CANOEING CAN BE FUN—would be a good title for this photo. Students taking part in the canoeing trip scheduled for next week-end will enjoy an occasional dip in the crystal clear waters of St. Marks and Wakulla rivers.

Prof Elected To Chemist Society

Dr. Earl Frieden, Associate Professor of Chemistry at Florida State University has been elected to membership in the American Society of Biological Chemists.

Election to this society is based upon the publication of significant research in biochemistry. The elector must be the senior author of several important research papers in biochemistry. Membership is then awarded upon selection by the society as a whole at its annual meeting in April.

Other members of the American Society of Biological Chemists on the Florida State University campus are Dr. Karl Dittmer, head of the Department of Chemistry and Dr. Sidney Fox.

High School Coaches To Be Guests At Annual Fish Fry

The Second Annual Fish Fry given by the Athletic Department in honor of all high school coaches who are in attendance in summer school will be held Wednesday evening, July 18th. It is requested that all high school coaches who wish to attend this affair pinge call Ex. 2421 to make your reservation. No reservations will be accepted after noon Tuesday, July 17th.

A Father Complex

So like'a the Grand Old Party's choice for the next four years. "Good," yes the Republicans; "Good," whisper the Democrats.

If it turns out to be Eisenhower and Nixon vs. Stevenson and Kennedy, and it looks as if that's the way it will be at post time, the experts believe that the Republicans will have it for four more years.

Both of these able Democrats ripened too early or too late, depending on your perspective; shame to see them rot on the vine.

But Eisenhower has satisfied a need that has long plagued these United States.

Who is it who smiles knowingly at us and elevates our opinion of both the smiler and the one smiled at? Who is it whose word we know to be the absolute truth because his word is his bond? Who is it who plans a course of action and then goes through his reasoning step by step so that we may follow and understand the decision?

Why our father, of course.

Until recently the citizens suffered from a father complex the like of which the world has never seen. Our forefathers took away our king, and our neighbors chisel away at our God day by day. Dad is the most wonderful thing that ever happened, but let's face it: Dads' too proximate. We know his faults; we know that he's older and a bit wiser, but really not much different than we are; and we know that we miss being perfect by the widest of margins.

Hero worship gives sustenence to a psychological need. Mr. Average is not getting his quota of heroes from Hollywood or The World of Sports (although fan clubs of both sort would argue).

After many years on a pablum diet, Mr. Average is witnessing the birth of his own blend. That unusual creature, the world statesman, is coming into being before his eyes. A new hero to fill an old need.

Ike is the prototype. Ike is the father, He is someone to look up to for honesty. He is someone worthy of doing our worrying. He makes us comfortable.

We get to know Ike through the newsreels, TV, radio; culled media. We hold a sanctimonious picture in our minda. Ha is our benevolent monarch.

Does a superficial analysis of the feelings of a people toward a leader tend to cause an introspective mood which would change the feelings? Hardly. Those who give it real thought will salaam before Ike for teaching them to know themselves. The rest will merely feel comfortable without knowing why, except that "I like Ike."

Both will have the benefit of a father for four more years.

But push it a bit further. Is Ike merely a symbol of perfection in the eyes of many? Isn't he real? His principles factual? A father symbol, yes; but also the most unifying factor in many a moon.

Perhaps that's why we are comfortable.

On Aid To Schools

With its target date for adjournment only weeks away, the House Appropriation observers, has burried under a 224-to-194 vote all hopes of enacting federal aid to public schools this session.

It would be hard to find a worse pessimist, we are sure, who does not agree that a crisis confronts American school's and that something must be done. Then "who killed Cock Robin?" you ask.

To seek the answer in the welter of parliamentary snarls in which the House tied itself before the final vote would be futile. It is necessary to back off some distance to descern the forces at work.

Basically there is an honest issue on political principles: it is the function of the federal government to distribute financial aid to the local function of public schooling" Or is the federal function only to coordinate, to help states and districts to help themselves? Or is it something in between?

There are conservative northern Republicans and conservative southern Democrats whose leanings toward a "no" answer to the first question doubtless underlay their decisions on details. But Congress has been unable to stick to this issue.

Then there is a quite fundamental question of ethics. Should convictions and emotions lined up for and against one issue (such as desegregation) be used as a lever to force or block support for something out of another issue (aid to schools)?

Obviously, when this lever was introduced in the form of the Powell amendments some congressmen resisted forcing integration to the point of blocking school aid. Other congresmen were so bent on forcing desegregation that they, too, were willing to scuttle the whole bill.

Then there were more transitory motivations, sharp in an election year: Northern Democrats wooing Negro constituents, southern Democrats who dared not vote for anything remotely prointegration.

All of these pluses and minuses added up to defeat. But it is manifest that the introducion of a racial issue into what otherwise could have been a debate over governmental functions, educational needs, and financial resources provided the catalyst which polarized opposition. In the context of this battle the Powell amendments "killed Cock Robin."

Where do we go from here—if, as we believe, it is the national will to bring aid to the public schools?

Obviously, there must be sufficient resolution to prevent loading the racial question upon a school bill. Then there should be another endeavor to find some common ground on which all can stand who want to rescue the schools but who differ as to method.

Many of those who oppose federal aid are really opposing federal "handouts." It is a pity the McConnell amendment was rejected. For it would have restored the principle that aid should be given in proportion to local need, in inverse proppttion to local resources, and in recognition of local effort. It should be a part of any new bill. (The Kelly bill, which came up for the vote, would have distributed federal funds among the states almost in the relative number of school-age children—something for everyone, politically tempting but ethically questionable and economically unsound.)

A sound bill—one freed from political leverages and cleansed of political sops—could well provide a measure behind which the many could unite who put children first.

Appeal For Warmth

It has been said that one must be an authority to offer constructive criticism. There is some truth to this saying, and for the most part, we have some regard for its wisdom.

However, this is one time that the bonds of restraint must be cast aside: We must speak aloud for all to hear.

The library is too cold.

To some this might seem a let-down after such a serious build-up, but nonetheless this problem confronts us. The library is almost too cool for comfort, even as much as we welcome the temperature difference on most of these warm, humid Tallahassee days.

Students have been retreating to their dormitories until such time as they could gather up warming outer garments and steel themselves for a return trip to the storeplace of knowledge. Others, evidently more knowing, go prepared with sweaters or jackets to ward off the cold.

This writer was not so lucky as those who depart with only frost-bitten fingers and red noses from the chilly building. He entered the library with good trust and departed with a case of laryngitis to preserve the memory of the visit.

Perhaps the examples given in the paragraphs above are somewhat exaggerated, but the condition remains. The temperature at Florida State University Library contrasts too greatly with the temperature outside. In fact, the library has been laughingly labeled by some as "the freezer."

It is not our intention to herald the warm-blooded homo sapiens on the campus, but rather to appeal to the directors of the library to warm things up a bit.

I FORSEE a great political future for Elvis Presley Some one is going to snap that boy up and run him for Vice President. The Republicans are more delesa stuck with "Tricky Dick Nixon, but the Democrats have a vacancy that he could fill!

Can't you see a Stevenson-Presley ticket? It would be unbeatable. Adlai could swing the rag head vote and Elvis could swing his hips. The rag heads and the hoop heads united in one great political party, rocking an drolling in the White House.

Imagine Elvis speaking to a big Democratic meeting. He could say a few words about Charles E. Wilson, get out his guitar and sing "I'm a few beats of You Ain't Nothing But A Hound Dog." The effect would be electrifying.

THE PRESIDENT'S health could be very effectively hinted at if the words to "Heartbreak Hotel" were altered to put more emphasis on the Eisenhower heart.

The possibilities of this are limitless. In the farm belt the chant could be "Don't Step On My 90 Percent Parity."

These simple massages could also be droned from the loud speakers of every drive-in restaurant in the country. Every juke box would contain a musical political platform.

Even Oyster Bay republicans would find themselves tapping a foot to the newest Democratic slogan. Mamie would be called down in the National Press for bumming them to herself at ladies meetings like would have an upset stomach every time a grandchildren turned on the radio.

Republicans would be forced to retaliate in kind. John Foster Dulles would dislocate his backbone in the effort while Sherman Adams played the guitar and Charles Booth Luce would be recalled from Rome to write lyrics. The Chambers-Hiss controversy could be set to music using "Slippin' and slidin', peepin and hidin'" as the basic lyric.

THE HISTORIC precedent for a move such as this is not lacking. Popular entertainers have long considered politics a political office. Paderewski was once the Prime Minister of Poland, as wall as the world's best concert pianist. Jimmy Davis defeated his self to the governor's chair in Louisiana and Will Rogers was nominated for the Presidency, but did not run.

The beauty of the whole scheme is that Elvis could carry the South, capture the imaginations of youth, and appeal to the common man — and women. After all, the differences between Elvis and the usual political campaign is only a matter of technique.

ties on conservation will give illustrated lectures. After each trip the students will discuss and report on their findings.

"In this way," said she director, "we hope to acquain the students with the general problems of resource use—human, natural and cultural — along with specific problems and their solution."

On July 18 the group will visit managed forest areas in the Tallahassee area. Prior to this field trip the group will hear lectures by Ed Moore of the State Forestry Service and Frank Nicodemus, local forester.

The final field trip, July 21, will be at Torreya Park, the North Florida Experiment Station near Quincy and possibly to a fuller's earth mine in Gadsden County.

The orientation meeting before this trip will be conducted by C. H. Crawford of the Florida Park Service. W. C. Rhoades of the Lee County Schools and Charles Hendry of the State Geological Survey and M. I. Rorabaugh of the U. S. Geological Survey.

For the last three years he accompanied the chorus of his former high school in Clearwater and plans to continue that line of work when he enters Clearwater High as a sophomore this fall. This summer he has begun study organ.

He is very excited about playing Sunday, and says it will be his first experience playing a solo part with orchestra. Judging from what we heard coming out of the rehearsal room the other day, it won't be his last.

Letters To The Editor

DEAR EDITOR:

The play, "Penny Wise" which I saw Friday evening kept me enthralled particularly because all the characters appeared and their places in the plot began to take shape. The play was nicely cast as people of stage experience, and the play was nicely done, and cast very well.

The thing our hearts cried out against was the profanity that poured forth from the lips of these lovely girls, as if they were experienced "field-hand cursers." It was repulsive and dragged the play down. I cringed each time one of these girls, blase' tho' limited parts were, permitted this bit of vulgarity to blare forth like a trumpet in the hushed music of a symphony. The play didn't need that. I could have tolerated a curse word from Gordon without much word, as that part called for it, but please—not the girls. The charm of Nancy Gibbon, cast as Penny, did much to ease this impropriety.

Perhaps I should speak to the author.

SINCERELY,
MRS. FANNY ARCHIBALD

TALLY-HO NEEDS CORD TO RIDE PART-TIME

Needed: A woman.

Dick Parks, Tally Ho staff photography, is in dire need of a cord to do telephone work for the summer yearbook.

Other students are needed for several office work and photography assistance, explained Parks.

"If you are interested, please get in touch with me through FSU Box 11357," concluded Parks.

He Seemed Proud Of That

By OSCAR JOHNSON

THE SHERIFF'S deputy was explaining a murder that had taken place near the county seat that day. Evidently proud of the reputation and purity of the small Georgia county, he sometimes was forced to relate all that had happened.

"We were called in at about 5 p.m.," he said. Someone had phoned to report a murder that had taken place on a highway about seven miles out of town. When they got there, the Sheriff and his men pieced together the story.

Clarence W. age 22, had been killed. He had been shot two times with a .22 Caliber pistol. Arrested was Alvin R., 48, who had been riding with his sister and Clarence in a jeep truck out on the highway before the shooting occurred.

A witness said he had seen the shooting from about 35 yards, through the window of his house near the highway.

That's about all there was to it. Alvin and Clarence had pulled a knife out before he shot him, but the matter of self defense would be left to a jury to decide.

NOT SO BAD, we say. Just another country shooting. They happen every so often.

This one had a few different aspects. For one thing, the characters the deputy sheriff described weren't the most desirable ever heard about. Alvin, he said, was out of jail on $1,000 bond on charges of knifing a fellow with a machete he was wanting previously.

And if that wasn't bad enough, he was also facing court action on charges of shooting a mule's eyes out several months before that.

And Clarence, the deputy said, Clarence was even worse than that." What was his record?

"Everything," said the deputy. "Drunk, Assault, Attempted rape, Vagrancy, And he had just been released from prison one or three years ago after serving a murder sentence."

As for Alvin's sister (who had also been arrested on a series of charges, after the murder, perhaps the most important of which were drunkenness and resisting arrest—she was the worst woman I've seen." The deputy said she had been with Alvin every time he had gotten into trouble before

Probably the most pitiful thing about the murder was what happened to the sister's son. The officials could find nowhere to take him so he was put in the other room with his mother and Alvin.

No, these people didn't sound too good. Definitely not the pillar-of-the-community type. The deputy's voice seemed to convey a sense of regret that he had to tell of these things which would in no way injure the pride of the county.

Just one more question. He was told. These people all were white, weren't they?

"ARE YOU KIDDING!" he replied. "Of course they're white. De don't have any Negroes in this county."

He seemed proud of that, too.

A movement has gotten underway recently aimed at using less than having Georgia natural resources in order to help the nation's biggest tourist area. This is what a newly-founded corporation has undertaken on Rock Mountain 'Little Sugarloaf.

This group is busily making plans for studding the mountain with everything from ski-lifts to bridle paths, bridges, tramways and huge mountainside cafeterias to add to the present carving.

They will be a tourist attraction second to none, they say, eyeing huge piles of revenue to accrue from the endeavor. But their dearest aim is not to let the huge granite rock of Stone Mountain 'Little Sugarloaf.

'Portraits' Under-Rated Audience

By RYAN EDWARDS

THE MOST ARTISTIC contribution to Wednesday night's Concert Series concert was made by Franklin Adams, who delivered a beautiful piano script.

If that sounds a little snide, believe us, we hate to be. We went to the concert expecting a light, enjoyable entertainment, at least as interesting as Senor Wences's pratzels a month or two weeks before. What we saw only by the wildest stretch of the imagination could be called music — any kind of music — must be taken seriously, if it is to be music.

It is a philosophical point: art and entertainment are sometimes in opposition requires honesty. The Musical Portraits were diabolical to themselves in the audience, and to the music. They were not content to be entertained, have missed in Miss Cubbon's performance. Her performance, it seems to be always maturing and deepening. After seeing Penny we don't plan to miss anything she's in.

Jerry Saunders and Maureene Bass contributed nice ensemble playing plus the most hilarious moments of the evening. We only have a nice feel for deadpan and this stopped the music every other phrase or so and hurried it turned to watch the scramble.

Dr. Ellis's THERE'S SOMEone was a warm, comic touch and a gorgeous speaking voice. Mr. Ellis's Bill was suave and dexterous, and Mary Ann Bell created a night-perfect character portrayal.

Dr. Paul Davis's direction showed a warm touch and sensitive approach to character. Charles Reimer's set was simulable to both play and audience.

As we said before, it was delightful summer entertainment. We won't push the point.

Perhaps we really shouldn't complain at all about the professional entertainment offered us when our own students can manage to present us with delightful summer entertainment. That is exactly what the Speech Department's production of Penny Wise was—and in spite of a somewhat inadequate script.

Jean Ferguson Black's play is one of those tedious little situation comedies which would have been better compressed into one act. As it was, it had that lack of inventiveness would not have allowed us to become bored with the situation.

BUT GIVEN this disadvantage, the Players did a fine job on admirable job—in many instances an exciting job. Nancy Cubbon, in the role of Penny was in as polished and warm a piece of work as we have seen around here in a long time. The warmth was especially appreciated, for that is a quality we have missed in Miss Cubbon's more brittle performances. She seems to be always maturing and deepening. After seeing Penny we don't plan to miss anything she's in.

NOTICE MUST also be taken of two fine recitals. Richard Strasburg's doctoral recital in organ and Robert Leslie's senior organ recital.

As we predicted, Robert Leslie once again afforded us an evening of serious and intelligent music-making—music made refreshingly different, and was a delightful one-man script.

Baroque works a Prelude and Fugue by Scheidemann and the slow concerto Sonata of Bach were masterfully registered so as to satisfy each, but to never think possible on the Opperman instrument.

Two very contemporary works made an effective transition and the Symphonie No. 4 in the manner of Julius Reubker's Sonata on the 94th Psalm. We were with Mr. John Sprait that this melody of considerable interest is a superior example of "the art of not sticking to the point" but we never heard a better performance than Leslie's. By exercising a superb rhythmic sensitivity and saving all the organ's power for the very end, he gave a reading that was altogether convincing, yet did not miss the frenzied chaos that is the piece's fallout.

Leslie is, if anything, a better organist than he is a pianist. There may well be some of our remarks on his piano recital "pushing it that's a matter of taste.

Richard Strasburg's doctoral program was also a memorable event. Strasburg's control of the beautiful sound he extracted from the instrument, the tonal liquid, bell-like, transparent and multi-throated, his tone never missed a note. He also showed highly volitinistic in the opening Clerambault, a delightful and very ravishing in the Dubussy group. Also in particular the French music that is Strasburg's metier. He possesses just the right sensitivity to detail, just the right feeling for sweeping color to display the miniature mastery of the Dubussy Prelude. With seven pieces of Ravel, and the exalted grandeur of Franck and Rambeau.

We are looking forward to his next recital.

Delmar Novel Is Too Romantic

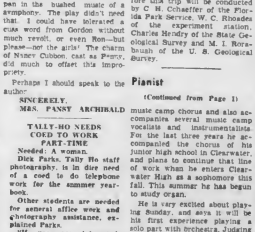
By JAMES D. MATHIS

The most surprising literary event of the season is the publication of Una Delmar's Beloved. The novel reveals the little known and colorful life of Judah P. Benjamin, one of the world's greatest lawyers and statesmen and the most important figure of the Confederacy as well as the scapegoat.

Born on the Isle of St. Thomas as a Jewish child, he spent his childhood in Charlestown and finally settled in New Orleans. After being expelled because of a planned attempt of theft against him, he migrated to New Orleans where, with superhuman determination, he became a spectacular career.

Woven through the story is Benjamin's ill-returned love for the beautiful creole Natalie St. Martin who later became his wife. It was a tragic love do-med to fail almost from the first, but Benjamin, through determination, saved it.

Unfortunately the word picture given of Benjamin is not the same as that given by actual photographs, and the author tends to cast a too-rosy light shade over the relationship between Natalie and Benjamin. She neglects to say that in modern times Natalie would have been known as a prostitute



The characterizations of the supporting characters are excellent, especially that of Jefferson Davis, a man who, it seems, was a vain, irritable man who thought himself above others and disliked glory for anyone except himself. The era, with all the glitter and pageantry, is brought into focus with a deft touch.

An absorbing historical-biography, Beloved is excellent for light summer reading.

JUST THE GIST: My Lord, What a Morning is the title of the forthcoming biography of Marian Anderson, the first Negro ever to sing in the Metropolitan Opera House.

Whether or not the word picture given of Benjamin is not the threat of extinction by atom-ic warfare . . . The leading nonfiction best seller is Churchill's book, Triumph and Tragedy.

Seminole, a "rousing historical story," is Frank Klaassen's first novel. Ask Any Girl is Vera Spoil Marilyn Monroe? by Peter Lawford is a "must" for every beauty, candid biography" of the Blonde Bombshell that with forty-five photographs, it makes prove very interesting . . . The Heart of Jade, a new book by Lloyd C. Dodson is to be reprinted in a paperback edition in July The author's wife is the former Jeff Chandler . . . Band of Angels is the latest film that will soon appear in a fifty cent edition A story of a beautiful southern belle who finds herself sold down the river.

FSU Students Try New Radio Program

By TOM SAWYER
(photos and text)

In this age of TV it seems that little is thought of radio, until someone suddenly comes along and takes it off the shelf with a new idea.

Such an example is that of Charles Cox and Charles Allen, two FSU students in the Journalism Department. These two got together and are now producing a top-notch radio program that is broadcast Monday through Friday nights on radio station WTNT. Perhaps you've heard it—Spotlight.

What's Unique?

What's so unique about it? Well, they've taken an ordinary "disc jockey" show and introduced a new concept. The program is quite new and is now only beginning its third week, but is already one of Tallahassee's most popular radio programs.

Instead of playing all the top tunes on the juke box they go on the assumption that people still like to hear the old favorites as well as more modern music. As the evening progresses, the beat of the music drifts from the fast novelty to the slower quieter favorites. There's no doubt that sometime during the evening they will be playing the type of music you like best.

That means there's quite a bit of variety, but that's what they specialize in—variety.

The program runs somewhat like NBC's Monitor. Every now and then during the program they'll take you on a little "trip". This consists of a telephone talk to a person or group of persons whose occupations you probably take very much for granted. For example, take the fire department. You know it's around to put out fires but what else do you know about it? How it is operated; how are they alerted to trouble, fire or other disasters? These questions are answered on Spotlight.

Informative, Too

It doesn't deal with just occupations either. Sometimes the interviews turn up a great deal of informative information on subjects of interest.

Each of the calls are limited to a certain time, as a rule they range from three to seven minutes at the most.

A good deal of preparation goes into these calls. Because of the time factor all of the calls are "taped"—that's studio slang for tape recorded—as they can cut interviews down to the proper time limit. Then they are played back through the broadcasting system when the time comes for their appearance on the program.

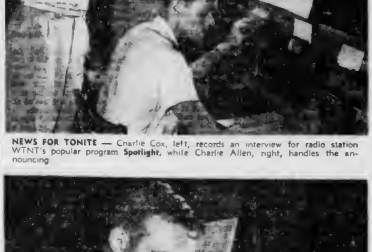
More Planned

At present they are making only four or five stops a night. This is due to the fact that the recording is done during free hours after classes and their broadcast hours are few. However, they both agree that as soon as time permits we're going to try to get as many as seven or eight stops a night."

When evening radio time rolls around at the WTNT studio, downstairs in the Doral Hotel, is a beehive of activity. These two Charlies really move.

In a radio station, deadlines between records, announcements and newscasts are only seconds apart, and there can be no such thing as a foul-up or mistake.

And "Cue"



The boys each take turns broadcasting and "cueing" music, usually alternating each night. Music "cueing"—well that's getting the record or tape set for the right place so that it will start properly when it's needed. The whole affair looks like a maze of confusion, but it's really precision work. Charlie Allen may be talking, with both hands busy turning two different controls while Charlie Cox keeps busy watching the knobs of one or two of the broadcast tape recorders in the studio. As soon as one finishes, the other takes over operations of another set of controls. And it all takes place in the short seconds between "cues."

Both of the boys have had quite a bit of experience in radio work. They have handled the announcing for Florida State University's WFSU-FM and sports spotting at the football games. Charlie Allen might be considered to have pioneered in radio at FSU. He is credited with having worked directly with Assistant Professor Daniel Wozniak in establishing the Journalism TV-Radio Workshop which is housed in the School of Journalism.

If, by any chance, you're one of the few people left who hasn't been completely converted to television, why not set your dial for WTNT and experience something new in listening enjoyment from nine until eleven, weeknights. It's Spotlight.

NEWS FOR TONITE — Charlie Cox, left, records an interview for radio station WTNT's popular program Spotlight, while Charlie Allen, right, handles the announcing.

"CUEING" MADE EASY—Charlie Allen uses one of the short breaks between activities to "cue" a record in order to make sure that it comes in properly.

REMOTE CONTROL CHECK of the whole transmitter system takes place every half hour at the station. Logging the check is required procedure.

HMMM, WHAT NEXT? Charlie Cox has quite a problem in selecting the music for presentation on Spotlight. The recorded music shown in the background is indexed alphabetically for quick reference.

Trip To Europe Will Be Grand Prize For One Brainy Beauty

Entries in the fourth annual National College Queen contest are open to summer school college girls and free entry blank forms and contest information may be obtained by writing to College Queen Contest Director, Convention Hall, Asbury Park, N. J.

The national grand finals will be held there at Convention Hall over September 8-10, 1956. The contest, sponsored by the City of Asbury Park and conducted by the Knitted Outerwear Foundation, seeks to select on a national basis the "most beautiful and brainy" college girl in the nation.

Judgings are based on 50% for beauty and 50% for brains. Entrants must be between the ages of 17 and 24 and is required to submit an original essay on the subject, "What College Education Means To Me" (250 words or less) and fill out a questionnaire form pertaining to current events, home economics, sports, fashion and literary topics.

Entry blank forms deal with contestants' scholastic work, extra-curricular achievements, campus activities, after-college aims and personal backgrounds.

Contestants will also be judged on personal appearance, form, figure, charm and ability to appear in public. Recent snapshots or photographs must accompany entry blank forms. Deadline date for receiving requests for entry blank forms from summer school students is midnight, July 25, 1956.

Summer school entrants need not be residents of the particular state in which they are currently attending school sessions. They must be undergraduate students at accredited colleges or universities.

ARE YOU SUPERSTITIOUS?

Or are you? Have you been avoiding such things as: ladders, black cats or open umbrellas in rooms. Hmm!.

Most people are fairly superstitious including those around show-business. For example: There's the rule that you never, never use live flowers around or on stage during rehearsals or performance.

Could be some actor might be allergic to some flower and "blow" his lines.

Then again one never whistles in the dressing room Has whistling ever broken any mirrors? Hm?

Open umbrellas, shoes on the table and always wishing the actor to "Break a leg!" instead of good luck, are some of the things one does and does not do?

Some of the actors at the Conradi Theater, if they work on crews, wear certain shoes which have brought them luck or some wear their favorite pin tucked away where the audience can't see it.

Broadway stars or even the Hollywood set have been seen wearing shoes they wore when they first got that all important break or trench coats on first days of shooting a movie for good luck.

Others have had live people as their "charms". One famous actress always insisted on the same director for every picture she made. Insisted he brought her good luck.

Am I that way? "I'll Whistle a Happy Tune" (but not in the dressing room). The Conradi Ghost won't like that!

HI-HO SILVER FOR THE ADULTS

Taking a cue from its success with "Cheyenne" and "Wyatt Earp", ABC-TV has decided to give the Lone Ranger more adult appeal.

It sounds silly doesn't it? Or does it. The show which ranks up for kids has been pulling in a good size adult audience.

Fifty per-cent to be exact!. Adults that is!

By doing this the networks hope to gain more of an adult sponsorship (commercials) from us "ole ones".

The change will take place with a greater emphasis on a new approach to scripts. More conflict of ideas, actions greater motivated and better characterization will keynote the "new" program.

To increase its all family appeal the stories will be more believable and the dialogue will be more adult.

Gee, dad, you mean the "Lone Ranger" will kiss the girl. "Aw shucks" what's T.V. coming to these days?

AROUND THE CAMPI

Artist Series . . . As Ryan Edwards (The Threepenny Critic) mentioned it was a delightful game of third grade musical chairs. I agree! It's a shame the woman who sang Mimi did so. . . ' La Boheme is a beautiful opera and is not MORBID! I suggest the young piano player either get the score or hear the recording! The other male was rather comic as Mr. Scarecrow.

Theater . . . . A must on your list for next Thursday and Friday is "Dangerous Corner" Too bad Summer Stock show. It's a terrific play with some terrific stars (all of 'em) in it.

TV Wise . . . . Get your antenna's up for FSU is going to have a TV show put on by the students featuring a preview of the last summer stock play, and some musical stars in the ring.

Oscarettes to: Harvey Hall, Dave Bachman, Nancy Cubbon, and the members of the Speech Department for getting the ball rolling!

Music, Music . . . . "Allegheny Moon" and 'Que Sera Sera' song from 'Man Who Knew Too Much' are coming in real strong for popular collectors. "The Secret of The Bells" by Gale Storm is real good. She does an unusual version of this. Surprized it's not popular.

Stravinsky's Les Noces "The Wedding" by Peter Mester and Ave Maria on Epic's 3231 record. An interesting cross-section of Stravinsky's shorter choral compositions. The Dutch choir and soloists give a vigorous, well prepared reading of "Les Noces" that stands well in competition.

The Mass makes a greater impression. This is a "natural" for Stravinsky fans and choral music devotees.

For a delightful evening see the Music Camp Operetta next Wednesday in Westcott auditorium.

Kid Steals Show In Film

By JANE SALLEY

Here's a new twist — Jeff Chandler as the fatherly type! However the result combined with Tim Hovey's winsome charm and Laraine Day's interpretation of his mother creates an amusing and heart-warming story.

Remember Tim's portrayal in "The Private War of Major Benson"? This has that beaten out the future angle while has added to pieces! Maybe the boy's popularity can be accredited to the perfectly natural way he plays the "lovable brat" role.

He reminds one more and more of the typical little brother-the kind you hate like heck at times, but while you're at home and die. You'll like it!

Of course, Laraine Day is the picture's steadying influence and with a room, Mr. of the person to the right. In a space as small as the University Museum this could present a problem at times when many people enter at the same time. This control will help with direction by color and movement.

to see while you're at college.

The sequence of "mishaps and perfectly cold business women with a career in mind and a warm-hearted mother who's worried about the future of her son she has no time for. In the end, it's the son who figures mother into a form for laughs — mistaken identities" keep a mood of complete chaos. The same writer who inspired "Mr. Benson" creates the same kind of situations in "Toy Tiger."

'That Certain Feeling' Plays At Florida Today, Tomorrow

By JANE SALLEY

There's always "Hope!" In this case, there are two. Kelly Hope, Bob Hope's son (age nine) plays the child star lead in "That Certain Feeling." With a wonderful supporting cast, Bette Kelly steals the show. A bette; markee could hardly be imagined.

Bob Hope, Eva Marie Saint and George Sanders form the eternal triangle which finally caves in. Pearl Bailey's songs, the antics of Kelly and the Happy Pair, two pairs of Chinese pajamas from the upper floor Apache, and the plot becomes too confusing to be true.

Bob's humor has taken a turn for the "laughter." His dead pan jokes hardly seem out of place in George Sanders's lush New York cartoonist's studio. It's evident that Bob's forte is in light comedy offers a different and refreshing setting from most of the movies these days.

The role of an aspiring, though established, cartoonist seems to be George Sanders's perfect "cup of tea." He not only plays the part well, but with an unlimited, ageless enthusiasm.

For the saint who really isn't one, Eva Marie Saint fills the bill perfectly. Her performance has just the right amount of feeling, although not quite comparable to the "Waterfront" role.

Edith Head does a superb job on the costumes, especially Miss Saint's wardrobe. However, it's hard to believe that a little boy eight years old would consent to the sharp crease in his pants' leg or the immaculate look of his shirts after a hard day of playing with the "small" dog Bonzo.

If you want "Hope" miles and miles of it don't miss "That Certain Feeling!"

SEARS, ROEBUCK AWARDS SCHOLARSHIPS FOR FALL

Sears, Roebuck Foundation scholarships have been awarded to two Florida rural homes who as well enroll as freshmen in home economics course at Florida State University next fall.

Dr. Margaret R. Sandels, dean of the School of Home Economics said the $200 scholarships have been awarded to Dorothy Jean Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert H. Clark of Route 1, Chattahoochee, and Florrie Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Van Roberts of Route 7, Myakka City.

The scholarships are for the 1956 57 scholastic year. The girls were selected on the basis of scholarship, leadership, character and extra-curricular achievements.

New Effects Achieved By Imagination

Economy was the key word of Dr. Hilo G. Smith's talk to the Frontiers in Science group on Monday, July 9. His topic was "Simple Techniques for Science Affairs."

Smith stressed that by using less money and more imagination unusual effects could be achieved. The three basic problems of an exhibition—light, color, and design—can be easily solved by using different materials.

An excellent example of his techniques can be found in the Universe Museum, where the exhibit, "Ceramics" is now on display. Smith said that our museum is the only one of its type in the country, in that here new, imaginative techniques are used.

"The city dump is a good place to find unusual materials," Smith said, illustrating his point, are the materials used in the present museum display. Articles used in displaying the exhibit range from shower curtains to movie strips and dried halibut bee sand.

"Ceramics," prepared by students taking Museum Techniques, has very few glass display windows. Dr. Smith says that some other means of protection preserves intimacy with the object. In the darkened, while glass tends to present a psychological barrier. Some of the pieces of pottery on used are pieces valuable articles on pedestals or writing them to the display case herringbone-gualy. Variety is achieved by making the pedestals in shapes.

Another feature of the pottery and statue display is controlling the "traffic pattern." According to Smith, tests indicate that when entering a room, 90% of the people go to the right. In a space as small as the University Museum this could present a problem at times when many people enter at the same time. This control will help with direction by color and movement

Weekend Trips Will Combine Study, Play

This weekend's trips will be educational as well as recreational says Miss Marie Williams, Director of Social Activities.

There will be three trips this weekend and all interested in going should register in room 19, Longmire Bldg. Transportation is free and the buses leave from the back of Westcott.

Today at 1:30 the bus leaves for the Marianna Caverns. 73 miles west of here, and returns at 6:30 The admission in the Caverns is 52 cents

The Caverns began formins thousands of years ago and though the said nature has formed many formations which resemble things in everyday life such as people, birds, animals, flowers, and fruits. Making rock formations look like draperies, hams and bacon. In the Cathedral Room the columns look like a pipe organ and an Altar The Elfin Pool reflects one a image back to him. A "Moorish Castle" with domes and minarets appears in another room. These and many more sights can be seen at the Marianna Caverns.

Tomorrow is the Deep Sea Fishing Trip Be sure and register in room 19, Longmire bldg. before 5:30 this afternoon. The buses will leave Westcott at 6 a.m. and go to Panacea, where a boat will be taken. This time 6 p.m. the boat ride to the fishing grounds will be much shorter than the last trip. Fishers are advised to eat a good breakfast, and bring extra a lunch. The trip last weekend was a success even though some became slightly sea sick The buses will return to Westcott at 1:30 p.m. There are accommodations for only thirty people So the first to register are the ones to go. Cost of the trip is six dollars.

Sunday at 8 a.m. the buses will leave Westcott for Stephen Foster Memorial Park at White Springs, Florida on the banks of the Suwannee River. The park has a museum which contains Foster's songs and additional musical scores and historical documents. A Wagon train rides are furnished at a cost of $1.00 and back. Those desiring can make reservations in room 19 Longmire so eat lunch in the hotel at the Park. Make your reservations by 5:30 today. Transportation is free. The busses return from the Suwannee River trip to Westcott at 6 p.m.

Dr. Hudson Rogers Finds That Browning Can Compete With Tennessee Williams

By MARGARET MILLER

Can Browning compete with Tennessee Williams? This question was in the mind of Dr. William Hudson Rogers, retiring head of the English department, when he spoke at the weekly book review held Wednesday in Longmire.

Glancing over the ample crowd attending the Browning review, he remarked, "Remembering last week's crowded attendance, I was curious to know if as many people would be as attracted to Browning's poetry as they are to "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

Dr. Rogers, who was introduced as "God's gift to the ladies," came here in 1922, when this university was Florida State College for Women. "I started my first Job here," he said, and I also became his last—in teaching, that is.

For his work extended further than the classroom, and he has found time to write two books: The Best of Browning and History of the Book Review, and becoming Head of the English Department, he also served as the Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Now listed in Who's Who in America, Dr. Rogers has long been an advocate of liberal education and has had strong influence on the liberal arts program at Florida State University.

After being relieved of all duties as English Head Dr. Rogers will continue to teach his Browning and Shakespeare classes, and in his spare time to pursue his hobbies of fishing and refurnishing furniture

First Sonnet

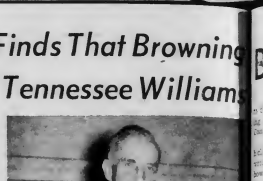
Dr. Rogers selected various poems for reading and comment. Brainning with the sonnet, believed to be Browning's first, he set writes a young lady who herself later wrote "Nearer My God to Thee". Dr. Rogers gave the poet's idea as "Anyone who praise your beauty louder aren't worthy those who love you most."

The picture received of Browning was that of a male, pale-faced lover watching others lavish his gifts upon his love and thinking to himself, "Lady, couldn't thou know?"

Another poem, "Confessional," which had a more dramatic and horrible effect was read by Dr. Rogers. In the poem, a young girl, jailed in a dungeon during days of the Spanish Inquisition, tells her story.

At Confessional, she had dutifully confessed her fiery lovemaking to the father, who had only half-way listened until she happened to mention the name of her lover. This lover was a leader in a rebellious movement against the church.

The cunning priest urged her to help him "save her lover's soul" by securing his secret plans. Thinking she was doing good, the poor, deluded girl delivered the information to the priest and the next time she saw her passionate lover, he was limply dangling on the end of a rope



"Browning," commented Dr. Rogers, "had the capacity to put into four or five words the tragedy of a lifetime." He added that although Browning was most proficient at writing dramatic poetry, he was still a successful in writing drama

In "My Last Duchess," Rogers remarked that Browning gave a clear cut picture of both the speaker and the listener. They were a Duke and a Count. With listening of a marrying the Count's daughter the Duke aired his grievances against his former wife, because and in so doing, gave a true account of his own heinous character.

One of the concluding poems read by Dr. Rogers was "The Statue and the Bust." This was set during the Renaissance period when people were sensuality and recklessly followed the fad of possessing a none considered their personal property.

"The poem pictures a young lady waiting at the chemist's for a vial of poison which she intends to use on her rivals. As she waits, she gazes wistfully at all the bottles on the shelves when finally the chemist his "treasures." If I had all that, she says, Pauline would have been dead long before.

"Then receiving her purchase, she demands with typically feminine petulance, "Why didn't you give me a prettier color?"

THE WORKS OF BROWNING was the topic of the Wednesday afternoon Book Review and Tea. Speaker at well attended affair was Dr. W H. Rogers, shown here.

Board Of Control Passes Plan To Ban Frosh Cars

Proposals to forbid freshmen with some exceptions, to bring cars to Tallahassee and to school ban has passed the regulations have been approved by the Board of Control as presented by FSU, yesterday.

The ban on freshman cars forbids bringing the vehicles to Tallahassee or to the campus. Freshmen with written approval of the dean of students, might use cars however, if they fell within these exceptions.

Married students, students 21 or older, students coming to the university, students living in Tallahassee with their parents, and students rooming in Tallahassee and living more than four blocks from the campus.

Under a separate traffic program which, like the freshman car ban will become effective Sept. 1, the university proposes extending its "blue sticker" parking area and limiting parking there to two hours. In addition new restricted parking areas will be established.

A two-hour parking restriction will be placed on the street from a gate on West Call Street near the old demonstration school south to the old library and encircling the street, along with the parking lot at the old demonstration school. The restriction would be in effect from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Also cars with a sticker identifying the owner as living outside an area adjacent to the campus may park in that area. The area adjacent to the campus will be defined area as presently defined, bounded by Virginia street to the north, Boulevard Street to the East, St. Augustine street to the south and Murpnree Street on the West.

In addition, the following lots are to be restricted in parking by faculty and staff members listed in the General Catalog and living outside the area adjacent to the campus: the music lot, infirmary and journalism lot, lot north of the new library building, lot north of the Conradi Building, School of Business lot and Campussides Hills lot.

The inner circle by the Westcott gate will continue as "visitors only" parking and 10 parking meters, each face set for 40 minutes, are to be installed in the vicinity of Westcott Building.

A regulation to clear the campus area for peak parking forbids parking on the campus street between 1.30 a.m. and 6 a.m. Sundays through Thursdays.

Reserved parking for individuals will be designated in these cases:

1. Administrative personnel who by the nature of their duties, have to use their cars continuously throughout the day.

2. Individuals who have living quarters on the campus

3. In the case of state offices located on the campus where a minimum space is required for personnel.

4. Where for reasons of health or physical disability reserved parking seems advisable.

All cars operated on the campus by members of the faculty, staff and student body will have to show a car registration sticker issued by the university business office.

Faculty and staff listed in the general catalog and living outside the area adjacent to the campus are to receive Garnet and Gold stickers. This sticker will permit the holder to park in the newly designated restricted parking areas.

Students and staff not listed in the general catalog and living outside the area adjacent to the campus will get blue and white stickers. This sticker will permit the holder to park in the two-hour zone but not in the six other restricted areas.

Faculty staff and students living with the area adjacent it to the campus will get a Black and White sticker. They are not to park in the restricted areas.

The new regulations provide for two part-time student officers, to be paid out of the Fine Fund.

A change in the schedule of fines provides a penalty of $3 instead of the present $1.50, for traffic violations which are not paid after 48 hours.

Panelists Agree

Battle Predicted For Florida Vote

Three panelists—two political scientists and a newsman—came up with some cautious predictions about this year's presidential campaign in a panel discussion at the Graduate Club Coffee Hour earlier this week.

Speakers were Miss Daisy Parker and Dr. Elston Roady of the Florida State University political science faculty and Hendrik Chandler, correspondent in charge of the Tallahassee bureau of the Associated Press.

On a program moderated by Dr. Sidney Kobre of the School of Journalism Chandler and Dr. Roady said they thought Adlai Stevenson has a good chance to receive the Democratic nomination on the second or third ballot.

All panelists agreed President Eisenhower would be renominated by Republicans and Miss Parker said the president "will get the man he wants," whether Nixon or someone else, as his running mate.

She also predicted both parties would adopt a "moderate statement" on civil rights and that the garden would not be far apart on this question.

Whoever is nominated in the Democratic convention, Dr. Roady said, will be the choice of delegates free to chance their votes after a ballot or two. Only Nebraska and Oregon he stated require delegates to stick with a candidate through all ballots.

"In both parties the history shows that party delegates have been party workers and the moral of this is that if you want to have some influence in nominating a candidate you should volunteer yourself with and work in a party," he declared.

Both the panelists would predict the final outcome of the November election. Chandler said Florida "will be the number one battleground in the South, and is one of the really doubtful states."

President Eisenhower will be hard to defeat, he exclaimed, but the president "has not to make a vicarous campaign to show he is in as good health as his aides say."

Whoever is elected president, Miss Parker said, will hold a job which will make him a sort of "elected king of the United States."

More and more," she explained, "whether we like it or not, the President of the United States has come to stand in a position of tremendous power and he holds a frightful responsibility."

To hold the highest office in the land, she declared, American voters have decided through the years that a candidate must be white non-southern; from an urban state; between the ages of 35 and 67; "have health and bounce," be in the upper financial brackets and "have a straight-laced performance in home and family life."

Although the contest between Democrats and Republicans represents real issues, Dr. Roady predicted. Republicans would not solicit party stands on taxes, conservation and foreign policy and emphasize the candidate Eisenhower However, he pointed out that Democrats did the same from Franklin Roosevelt was their candidate.

City Gets Set For Mock Atomic Attack

Tallahassee is to be the scene of a mock atomic attack today at 12:30 p.m.

The mock attack which is part of the annual Civil Defense drill wheich will simulate actual conditions of an atomic bombing on the Capital City.

Military strategists have rated Tallahassee as being one of 76 target cities destined to receive an enemy bomb in case of enemy attack. The estimated explosive power of the bomb dropped on the city would be that of twenty thousand tons of TNT.

The city has been sectioned like a giant pie Each section has been given a route out of the city to expedite evacuation. Although Florida State University will not participate in the evacuation of the city, the Lake Bradford road, leading to the FSU camp has been assigned to the University in case of an actual emergency.

Traffic is being stopped at points thirty minutes distant from Tallahassee while the drill is being executed. Pretty FSU coeds will be at the roadblocks distributing information prepared by the local Civil Defense unit. The literature will explain the importance of the civil defense drill, apologize for the delay, and invite tourists to enjoy the air-conditioned comfort of restaurants in Tallahassee. An invitation is also being extended for visitors to take advantage of the various scenic attractions of the city.

Later in the afternoon, at 3:10 p.m. every radio and TV station in the United States will go off the air for fifteen minutes.

During that time, broadcasting will be done on the emergency channel "Conelrad."

Civil Defense workers in Tallahassee have estimated that the entire mock evacuation will be completed and everything returned to normal in approximately 45 minutes

Florida State University will not be affected by the civil defense drill, according to the Office of the Registrar. Classes will continue as scheduled.

Students who have afternoon classes at the University are advised to be on campus at 12:30 to avoid being caught-up in the evacuation rush.

From Jazz To Classics On Music Camp Concert Program

If it's music you like, it's music you'll get—anything from blues to classics. And if you don't particularly like music three are going to be some mighty cute baton twirlers performing tonight at the Final Gala Concert of the Summer Music Camp.

Beginning at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium the concert will climax five weeks of study for the high school music campers.

First on the program will be the Music Camp Dance Band II, directed by Thomas Greenhaw. Pops and blues selections include Moonlight in Vermont, Mobile, and Blues from "An American in Paris."

The Music Camp Band I, directed by Sonny Hawkins will present Blue Moon, Sorrento, and Take the "A" Train.

Next the Bison Twirlies Class will do a routine. Instructors for this class were Donna Kolb and Alice Ann Ross.

A varied selection of songs will be next on the program These will be sung by the Summer Music Camp Chorus directed by Herman Gunter, Jr.

The Music Camp Gold Band will then present several classical pieces marches. Robert Beaumont and Oliver Hobbs will be the nation's headlines?

Rock 'N Roll Sidestepped For Classics

Hide all those rock 'n roll and rhythm 'n blues records! "Classical music is coming to town"

Florida State University is to be the setting for the third annual Southeastern Music Workshop bringing 80 music teachers from all parts of Florida, Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina, July 22-27.

The Music Festival begins with a pre-Workshop concert at 8 p.m. July 22. "The Choral Union will present Haydn's "The Creation" directed by Walter James of the music faculty.

Other concerts honoring the visiting music teachers will be given July 23 24 and 27 at 8:15 p.m. All of the concerts will be staged in Opperman Music Hall, and will be free and open to the public.

The agenda for the all-Mozart program July 27, will include selections from "The Magic Flute and "The Marriage of Figaro." Those by Mrs Edith Kaup with Dr Howard Wilson as piano accompanist. Sonata for violin and piano by Tom Stone, violinist and Mrs Sophia Melvin, pianist, and other selections featuring Claude Rhea, tenor; a male quartet and a mixed chorus, directed by Dr Wiley Housewright with Robert Leigh, pianist.

The all-piano concert, July 24, will feature Sonata in B Minor by Carlisle Floyd, Scarlatti's Pastorale and and Haydn's Theme and Variations in F Minor by Francikek Zachara. Mozart's Concerto in D Minor by Thomas Wright and Emily Weber at the two pianos.

At the climaxing concert, July 27, Trust von Blumenthal, pianist; Robert Sedore and Don Michel, Violinist; Tom Stone, violin; and Owen Sellers, cellist, will play Dohnanyi's Piano Quintet, Robert Sedore, violinist, Owen Sellers, cellist, and Miss Mary Melvin, will present the Ravel Trio.

Choral Union Presents 'The Creation'

SOLOISTS FOR "THE CREATION"—Left to right are Claude Rhea, tenor, minister of music at the First Baptist Church of New Orleans, Frances Brown, soprano, teacher of voice at the New Orleans Seminary, Norman Turner, baritone, of the Baptist Theological Seminary, New Orleans, and Anne Hoffman of Due West, S. C., piano accompanist, who will be soloists for the Florida State University Choral Union presentation of the Haydn sacred work July 22, directed by FSU Professor Walter James. The choir will be made up of 40 FSU students.

Joseph Haydn's "The Creation" will be presented by Summer Choral Union in Opperman Hall this Sunday at 8 p.m. This work is under the direction of Walter James, assistant professor of music.

Only two parts will be presented to the audience, encompassing the creation of the world, but not the creation of man.

Soloists for the group are: Claude Rhea (Uriel) Frances Brown (Gabriel) and Norman Turner (Raphael).

Rhea is noted for his role two seasons back in regular season, in "Porgy." He will do the tenor a part in "The Creation" He is Minister of Music at the St. Charles Avenue Baptist Church in New Orleans and professor of the First Baptist Church here

Miss Brown is a teacher of voice at the New Orleans Seminary and Turner is a student of Walter James. He has attended the Baptist Theological Seminary at New Orleans

Perhaps the most "popular" piece of music from "The Creation" is "The Heavens Are Telling" A trio emaluating of Jana Peeples (soprano) Robert Blanton (tenor) and Lee Lamb (Baritone) will sung this selection, chorus in the background.

Summer Choru has 40 members in its group. It is an orchestrated group of the FSU School of Music and is open to any who like to sing including the townspeople of Tallahassee.

Refreshments will be served after the performance. There is no admission.

An Era Ended

A marvelous era has come to an end. The last of the big traveling circuses, Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey, has rolled up its huge big-top for the last time.

The Ringling's circus had struggled over a period of nearly a century to build up the title which it so proudly brandished. It long ago absorbed the Barnum and Bailey Circus which was the brain child of the world's greatest and most colorful promoters, P. T. Barnum. Other smaller traveling circus troups in this country came and went, but Ringling's seemed to weather the hardships of show business.

But this week, due to adverse weather conditions, labor problems, and lagging interest, the "Greatest Show On Earth" folded, leaving its youthful owner, John Ringling North, a showman without a show.

The big-top canvas flapping in the breeze, the saw-dust filled three ring arena, the wild animal acts—all of it, gone.

The era was colorful. Many romantic tales have been told of the circus and its people, but now they will give way to stories of the new circus. A modern one performing in air-conditioned arenas. Streamlined, featuring girls rather than the hoopla that made the big-top so enjoyable to the older folks and children alike.

But we of Florida State University still have our circus. Though the big-top is missing, the spirit and showmanship is there. All of the colorful trappings and regalia of the old-time circus is embodied in our "Flying High."

John Ringling North declares Ringling's will go out again next season with its new circus. A circus in name only. We'll take FSU's "Flying High". It's real circus.

A Midsummer Feeling

A midsummer feeling has been quite evident for some time now. It's a little hard to define, and it shows itself in little ways.

It has nothing to do with the increased pace of politics in Florida, complete with cries of 'like's not sick," nor the Governor calling the Legislature into summer session.

The fact that the summer term has passed the half-way mark has nothing to do with it either.

In Tallahassee it's that especial stillness of July midnights with a still, clear beauty quite alien to the cloudy, sultry summer days. It may be found in the quiet streets or in the shade shadow of a graceful oak tree at sundown.

And in Boston The Christian Science Monitor, with its usual understanding of the spirit of man as well as the news he makes, was aware of it too:

"Every mid-summer one moment comes with a special quality of nowness in it. It doesn't always light at the same time or the same place, or arrive as other moments do at many places at once.

"Like one of those big-winged butterflies that weave zigzag ribbons of color and motion through the pale air of a July day, this special moment settles now here, now there, to be observed by some lone individual who was just doing nothing in particular and expecting nothing unusual.

"Then as if the chirp of crickets, the laughter of children, the barking of the loquacious dog down the road, and all the multitude of summer sounds and heavens had stopped all at once and all together, a tiny eternity of silence glows amid or above or beneath the gentle tumult.

"Nobody else feels the lightness of its hand—that turns a page of the open book as the hammock swings to and fro, that catches at a whisp of hair as a golden streaks along a beach; that pushes a curtain aside to let a hollyhock look in at the dining-room window.

"Of course, something like this happens to everyone, but always in some hidden place of inner solitude to which no one's head and hair or can quite decently and where one almost trips over the fact as it words itself: 'This is it.'"

But Not Elected

For the second time in five month it is front page news that President Eisenhower's health is good enough to permit him to run for reelection.

The President's recovery from, first, a heart attack and, second, an intestinal operation is gratifying to the nation. Few men in public life have enjoyed such personal popularity as Mr. Eisenhower.

And, if the polls are even approximately correct, he seems assured of winning in November against any candidate the Democrats can offer.

But it is foolish to pretend that nothing has been changed by the two illnesses: that Mr. Eisenhower is as good as elected for his second term and might even be drafted for a third.

This much has changed.

Before September, Mr. Eisenhower's good health was taken for granted. It no longer can be. The question of his physical, in the minds of most Americans, whether a man of 65 can suffer a coronary thrombosis and an intestinal obstructinn within the space of nine months without permanent impairment of his physical condition.

Therefore, any illness which befalls the President between now and November will assume crucial importance. Even an ordinary case of the sniffles could play upon the fears of the people to such an extent that it might conceivably change the result of the election.

Then there is the related question whether Mr. Eisenhower will be a full-time or part-time President: during the next four years. He himself said last January, before his decision to run, that

Not Unimportant

Today is the day that Tallahassee is to be "bombed" in a mock attack planned in connection with the three annual nation wide civil defense exercise.

The Capital City is to be one of 76 target cities in the United States to be attacked in the drill.

Of course there will be no actual bombing today, but there could be.

No one is forced to participate in the mock evacuation of the city, but its importance is not to be overlooked. It simulates conditions of an actual atomic attack. It teaches both the Civil Defense unit and the people of Tallahassee what would be expected of them in case of a real attack.

The evacuation plan was explained in Wednesday's Tallahassee Democrat. It would be a good idea to seek out a copy and commit this information to memory. One can never tell when it might come in handy.

Although the University is not participating in the civil defense drill, we cannot agree that it should be taken lightly. No one can afford not to be informed on a matter such as this.

COLLEGIATE CORRAL
(From The Summer Texan)

The American college summer school is an institution of its very own—quietly, almost pharisaically, pursuing education and recreation to the abandon of the usual array of well-organized campus institutions.

However, a few forward-looking summer spots of learning were pushing "all the pews that's fit" or "all the pews that fits" in many cases as usual.

Politics just couldn't keep out of the journalistic picture in an election year Quips Joe Harris of the Bama Larist, "Republicans have been advocating an increase in the number of seats in one basket. Wonder if they have forgotten they only have one egg?"

Down in the land of Autherine Lucy, a new look of moderation toward the integration issue is reported. A Human Relations Forum was held on the Alabama campus, writes the Crimson-White, "to study and discuss problems in human relations in the University community and their possible solutions in the spirit of American democracy in order to ease tensions that have been brought about by the political and social changes in our communist life." Application for entrance to Negroes is expected soon this fall, the Crimson-White says.

Hearts are sad in Baton Rouge While the Tiger, LSU mascot who would have been leaal voting age this October 10, died recently of an acute kidney infection.

Eulogized the Reville of LSU, "His passing is a thing to be noted but not mourned, for it was the end of an era. It was an era of hist accomplishment, a period in which LSU grew from a third-rate institution that richly deserved its nickname of 'Bluebirds of the South' into our present position of academic respect."

Evidently the universal problems of a day of a college summer schools is "how to be cool, man, cool." With not a few air-conditioners in certain LSU buildings, the Reville reports that among those fully enjoying air conditioning comfort are the President, some of the deans and "albino rats in the laboratory basement."

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor

In response to your "Appeal for Workers" in the July 13 issue of the Flambeau, may I remind you that there are usually no more than thirty to forty students in the library at any one time. Each of their bodies houses a certain amount of heat which is efficiently absorbed by the air conditioner In the fall, however, the place will practically have to sell tickets for seats.

All these extra people will certainly lower the temperature.

If you object so strenuously to the cold, there are carrels on the third floor with air conditioning vents which may be closed and sealed windows which may be opened.

All o. this goes to say: So it's cold—I like it—and I'm certain other people will agree with me.

Sincerely,
Calm, COOL and Collected.

Dixie Demos: They're Playing Along

By OSCAR JOHNSON

IN MOST STATES of this nation the Democratic party is a "bolt" refers to a charge of betraying from the ship. In the South, it is meant: Democratic party, look out for us, or you'll lose our support.

So when a group of strangers gathered in Atlanta last week to talk about whether the Dixie Democrats should quit their Democratic banner to take part in the national convention, there was understandably some concern in other Democratic quarters.

Not that it mattered too much. It had been abundantly demonstrated in 1948 that "Dixiecrats" could be sotten along without, as far as electing a president went. Yet in the county election of things were a little different. Although the incumbent had two strikes against him, the side was definitely not relaxed.

IT WAS possible the southern Democrat leaders might hold the "balance of power" number of votes that could swing the election. And in Atlanta, they might decide to deal the cards As far as other Democrats are concerned, it would not be a New deal, but a Raw deal.

It was all a big lie, though, the Dixie leaders said. After only about five hours of bickering the party issued a declaration: Democrats pledging they would stay in the party.

This was a quite important statement, coming as it did from state Democratic chairmen of South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Virginia, North Carolina, Alabama and Tennessee.

But the talk-plagued little band inserted a loophole whereby they could squeeze through the convention with what they wanted if things got tight. It added that what amounted to every top southern Democratic official should hold a preconvention caucus to conserve the rights of the states. . . .

AS EVERYBODY GOOD Southerner knows, that means preserving specifically the rights to maintain segregation. Nobody's worried about the right of the seven deepsouth states to accept nearly a billion dollars in federal aid during the first three years of the giant new highway program recently passed.

What probably underwent deepest consideration was the probable kind of civil rights plank. Will a Raw deal.

Jones Is Promising Young Pianist

By RYAN EDWARDS

THE ANNUAL Summer Music Camp which comes to an end this evening with a gala concert at 8 in Westcott auditorium has provided us with some pleasant listening experiences during the past few weeks. This point out was forcibly made by the two concerts already heard earlier in the week.

The Sunday evening band and orchestra concert featured some of the outstanding high school musicians, Grant Jones, pianist, and Merle Spetnale, trumpeter, as soloists.

Grant's playing of George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" was forth-right and forceful. He has a great deal to learn before feel for the broad nuances and firm rhythmic delivery demanded for exploring his full, rich tone shows promise of many beauties to come, and we shall anticipate hearing him at FSU many times in the future.

Miss Spetnale, playing a series of brilliant variations on the lamiliar Italian ditty, Funiculi, Funicula, displayed an amazing virtuosity. Possessed of a bright, clear tone something of a rarity nowadays, with progressive jazz-men trying to make the instrument sound like sax-things but brilliant she obtained a self-effacing enthusiasm besides.

THEN AGAIN on Wednesday night the same campers afforded us another entertaining evening with their traditional operetta night. They presented a remarkably commendable performances of Alec Wilder's Rumpelstiltskin and Ron Klingwall's musicalization of of James Weldon Johnson's God's Trombones. Both operas were new to us and "two occasioned a good deal of thought.

The first production was a highly skilled curtain-raiser which, according to the authors, aimed at something called "pop permissick sophistication." If it didn't quite achieve it, the fault did not Le with the youthful performers, who endowed it with pleasant vocalism and pert comic flair. The libretto was amusing in saying everything twice, an impossibility in most of the more modern opera composers, allowed things up needlessly, and the music seemed to say the least monochromatic

THE RINGWALD opus which followed was a far more ambitious for there is absolutely no action, in fact such a thing is viewed as the more modern term "dramatic sequence." We would question this term, for the drama in any of Giles plays, of movement, and one must have events in order to have a sequence. Never the less, the music of this midsummer work lies in the direct and beautiful language employed by the poet.

Can music be anything but sublime? Rinwald set an opening line "that gaest God, like a mummy over a child, kneeling in the dust," and "the sun goeth up and down and the stars falther like cinders"? Some poet is simply too much for mere mortals to match, and "God's Trombones is some of that poetry.

Some of the passages in the choruss sang well, and the incidental soloists and ensembles performed well. Special praise is due Bill Poe's perennially fine lighting effects and Dot Rannon's attractive program devices. Mr. Herman Gunter and Miss Betty Wilder's musical direction called for an interesting evening

WE MUST BEGIN any remarks we make about Frederic Kirchberger's doctoral piano recital last Tuesday night with a public apology for arriving late Indeed we were very sorry to do so at first group, for Mr. Kirchberger possesses an interesting musicality which he would like to see a few more applied it to these smaller works.

The first group was the Brahms's massive f minor Sonata Op. 5 the ultimate equity among "Ferial" Variations of Beethoven. Mr. Kirchberger played the Beethoven excellently, and he must be severed to stre a little toward the Brahms. Unsympathetic as an admiral structural precision is, it has a commanding air of "eghaead'n" evening, due chiefly to the verbose and impropositional nature of Brahms. Every man has called Beethoven a "crank composer," throughout what intelligence he has, and it was necessary to his creative magic the germinal works the 3rd and 9th symphonies the last piano sonatas, and the late quartets Brahms's output is small. Unfortunately, the "Erotic" Variations are no more than the grandest sense of the word, overlooked but unable intellect.

Mr. Kirchberger's work also suffered from being crammed against the passionate utterance of Brahms's composition he finally managed to grips with life intellectually, and whose complex structures always underlying craftsmanship is always imbued with vitality. When Brahms' intellect is not continually in evidence as in the early sonatas and the waltzes is luminous and sometimes magical. When Beethoven's stormy agnric is not continually in evidence, as in the "Erotica" Variations, he becomes merely crabbed.

Between The Lines

'Victory' Is Thought-Provoking

By JAMES D. MATHIS

ONE OF THE most provocative, thought-provoking books of the year is Taylor Caldwell's Tender Victory.

The novel relates the trials and tribulations of Dr. Luke Fleicher. Returning from the wars Johnny is assigned to Barbados. Here shortly he is associated somewhere near Pittsburgh. To this point the novel brings his "family" of five children whom he rescued from the rubble of Europe.

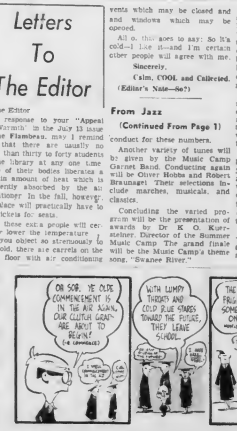
Barryfield, a town seemingly riddled with Communists and subversionist, holds over all Johnny and his kids, and thereby hangs the tale. The author tells how the Johnny Johns grow over the years.

After assuming that human beings are really good but have been misled, Johnny sets out to save a frightening and very badly written book. Ideas on everything from the ministry to psychiatrics to education are expounded and applied to the reader without warning.

Tyranny in general, and Communism in particular, in the target for special attack because, as the author states over and a over again, it is the cause of all the world's troubles, and dissolution.

SOME OF THE IDEAS are good, but they are presented in such a directionless fashion that the reader is bombarded with them in sentence after sentence. The style is choppy. The writing is jerky. The book is a cry for a return to the good old days. The author neglects to say that the "good old days" were not so very good.

Characterization and good writing are almost nil. The hero is not human: the author rarely lets him act like a person. He calls a spade a spade. The children are small, but there is little believable Thrown over all this is a thick, sugary, cloying blanket of pure sentimental prose.



Taylor Caldwell would have produced a better book had she been verbage and far less preaching. She should have stayed with the family dynasty novel that made her famous. This reviewer cannot recommend Tender Victory to the general reader.

JUST THE GIST: Twenty years ago last month a little woman in Atlanta, Ga. published and a novel called Gone With the Wind and created publishing history. It has been translated, and sold over 13,000,000 copies in all languages . . . Charlotte Armstrong's newest venture into the field of fiction is A Dram of Poison which concerns an olive oil bottle full of poison.

Captain Rebel is Frank Yerby's new book . . . John Dickinson Sloane's latest Patient Murderer for the Defense is not up to Carr. . . . Frogman, the story of Lt. Sandlower's daring-do prepared under the Soviet censorship last April, is coming to Tallahassee's bookstores soon.

Betty MacDonald's hilariously funny Onions In The Stew is coming out as a reprint this month . . . Gertrude Lawrence As Mrs. A., Richard Aldrich's story of his famous actress wife, is a non-professional report.

. . . A lady walked into a bookstore in Nashville and asked for a copy of "The Search For Double Murphy". . . . Not as bad as the fellow last Christmas who asked for the "St. James Version of the Bible."

OF FATE AND A RULEBOOK—

Fate casts a strange shadow at times.

But for Florida State University's Jack Miles, her election might be said to be one of justice.

Jack's story began many years ago, but for purposes convenience, suppose we list the beginning of this cular phase as a day in April.

The 28th, to be precise.

It was on that day the Seminole gymnast was taking his bid for a second national AAU all-around tle and, more important, for a berth on the United States Olympic team for the coming world Olympics.

He had tied for the title in 1935 and had been a key mber of the U. S. team which swept honors at the n American Olympics in Mexico City. He was a favorite to win individual honors at this Penn meet.

Since competition began, Jack disappointed no one. Jacks through smooth performance of his dynamme ould be moved into the lead.

His finishes were especially good.

He approached the apparatus for a third event and ged through his routine with usual ease. The scorers ard registered nine points—10 was all the judges could ard, and that, for a perfect performance.

But the scoreboard flashed off, then on again. 7.5. The judges had changed their minds.

Jack was visibly disturbed but been a good performance: ause 7.5 points dropped him from first place. He appointed the apparatus again, this time more deter- ed. He placed special emphasis on his finish—the laces are tough on those.

Again the scoreboard flashed 9 points; and again Jack watched with unbelieving eyes as it switched to 7.5. That dropped him into sixth place.

Why? What was he doing wrong? He knew his performances were better than that—but a guy can't go dis- ering with the judges during a contest. Half of them, they're looking for is self-control and discipline.

Jack waited. This time there would be no question. His quality of performance would be world olympic- ing, growing further and further away.

And as he swung off in his finish the crowd's response told him his had been a good performance. There was no question this time . . .

But the scoreboard immediately registered 7.5. Jack sank to the bench, dumb to the consoling re- ions around him. At the far end of the judges table, man rose and nodded his head. He was smiling.

"Don't you know what you're doing?" he asked.

"Only the best I can . . ."

"You're using the same finish.. It's illegal . . ."

It was that simple.

A letter mailed from Penn State two weeks before claiming the rules of the meet, had not arrived at FSU. Jack waited when the letter returned home.

And because of his lack of complete understanding of the rules, Miles dropped from among the leaders He did a comeback, but it hoisted him no higher than eighth ce.

The top six were to form the Olympic team.

There was a bit of noise raised after the meet. No the least. Not from Miles, or from the FSU team. But unanimity was among the members of the Olympic committee. Their method of selecting olympic teams had been criticized many times.

England—even the Soviet Union—had expressed amazement that the U. S. gymnastic team should be chosen on the weight of a single showing. The committee immediately began conferences.

And this week, the Olympic members in that Penn State meet were advised of its decision. There would be a 10-week training session in Los Angeles beginning October 21. During that session, five separate competitions would be held with the top six—and perhaps the seventh—performers forming the team that would represent the United States in Melbourne.

Jack was getting a second chance.

And this time there would be no misunderstanding. Miles and, he hoped, no 7.5s. Florida State might well be represented when the world celebrates the Olympiad in Melbourne, Australia, November 5th through December 6th.

With Jack the chances are excellent.

Education Prof To Be Honored

Dr. Harold Cottingham, professor of education at Florida State University, will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Pedagogy from his Alma Mater Aug. 3.

A graduate in 1935 of Eastern Florida State College in Charleston, Dr. Cottingham has been sought out along with 15 other leaders to receive the degree at the commencement next month.

All have attained prominence in the field of higher education and all possess academic doctor's degrees.

The FSU educator, director of guidance training at the suthor of a recent book, "Guidance in Elementary Schools."

Davy Crockett Turns Spy For 'The Great Locomotive Chase'

By JANE SALLEY

Davy Crockett a spy! Army too! Gadfly, Walt Disney has not only given Jess Parker a new role of the same type as Davie, but he has revised one of the most famous characters in history. Fess plays the Union spy who with his men steals a locomotive to cripple the main railroad line between the Confederate capital at Chattanooga and the fighting front at Chickamauga. This little venture almost ended the Civil War two years prematurely. His plot would have succeeded, had it not been for a persistant Confederate train examiner named Fuller, impersonated by Jeff Hunter.

Fuller wastes no time in pursuit of the band. "The Great Locomotive Chase" is all through his efforts are thwarted, they are awarded the Confessional Medal of Honor for their bravery and daring—the first to receive the newly awarded decoration.

Who could forget Fess Parker as the immortal Davy Crockett? No matter how beloved Davy was, the character of Jim Andrews will always be the "good guy" who w's ineligible for the servicemen's highest award because he was a civilian.

With his inevitable tamai fur authenticity, Walt Disney has picked a spot to film the scenes as close to the original chase as possible. The place is the familiar Blue Ridge Mountains near Clayton, Georgia.

The supporting cast, especially John Lupton and Jeff York, who are more of unusual courage in Andrews' hand, have been chosen well, to say the least. They add to the drama ate note carried out so smoothly throughout the whole movie.

Perhaps we have another hit on our hands in the form of the musical theme "Railroads Man." Stan Jones, who also appears in the show, has successfully written forty other hit songs, among them "Ghost Riders in the Sky." Find yourself whistling it?

FSU Fraternity Runner-Up For Highest Award

Florida State University received recognition on several counts last weekend at the 24th national convention of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia Fraternity held in Cincinnati.

The FSU chapter of the professional music fraternity was runner-up for the national top award, Eastman School of Music at the University of Rochester in New York placed first.

FSU's Epsilon Iota chapter was recipient of the annual award as the most outstanding chapter in Province 13, representing chapters in Florida, Alabama and Georgia.

Dr. Robert Briggs, associate professor of music education at FSU, was elected to the national executive committee of the fraternity for a period of six years. He has served as faculty advisor of the FSU chapter the last three years, and is immediate past province governor.

Don Michel, associate professor of music theory at FSU was named to succeed Dr. Briggs as governor of Province 13.

John Boda, assistant professor of music at FSU, completing work of his doctorate this summer at the Eastman School of Music won the national award given by Sinfonia annually in the field of graduate composition. He appeared on the convention program as pianist in presenting the work with his brother, Dan Boda, FSU violin student.

Singer Bleats Movie Theme

One of the most disturbing things about the Republic Production "The Maverick Queen," coming to the State Theatre is the pathetic bleating of child-voiced Joni James who warbles the title song of the picture.

At the moments where silence would be appreciated, Miss James cuts out with a chorus of "I'm-a-a-a-verick queen, the ma-a-verick queen" which is totally disrupting to the sequence.

The picture, outside of the sound track, is a better-than-average western starring Barbara Stanwyck and Scott Brady. The plot shows a streak of horried insamination on the part of its writers.

The whole thing is really simple. A pretty female by the grand old Southern name of Miss Lou Lee has troubles with her bosses. Someone keeps trying to rustle them. This is pathos.

Along comes Barry Sullivan in the guise of Jeff Younger, one of the wider characters of the old west, to rescue her from said friends. It turns out that the notorious Wild Gang, which really looks wild in this movie, is a soft line stealing critters, with Miss Kit Bannon (like bunion- only spelled different) as the Maverick Queen, as a partner.

The rootin-tootin imitation Younger finally turns out to be a Pinkerton detective who takes all the wooly Wild 'Uns to task. But just before realizing victory and possession of the pestilential Maverick Queen, the script falls a part. Quentin getting shot in the gimsard during the last moments of the film, just in time to avoid Joni James bawling another stanza or two of "I'm-a-a-verick queen", and leaving the fake Younger with a shapely consolation prize, Lucy. Simple, eh?

Although it is a little trite, if you feel you can't get a dose of Joni James, it makes mighty excitin' watchin'.—BS.

Love Wins Out, Ladd Loses Loot

Gun runners take to the screen as "Bantags" shoes Wednesday through Saturday at the Florida Theatre.

Little Stone Face Alan Ladd is cast as "Cash" Adams who seemingly has no loyalty except for that which he willingly shows for money. He throws a pretty powerful punch for a fellow who barely seems to have enough muscle to move his face.

At any rate, Stoney is trying to make a fast buck running guns to the Cuban rebellionists who are trying to overthrow Spanish rule. As the cinema grinds on, curvey Rossana Podesta becomes the pouut, or curve, of alien int.

The plot is somewhat obscure, but after some observation, it may be determined that the entire movie was evidently written to that a rusty old character called Sidewind Adams can blow into a decadent river-boat and a bash of Spanish to Kingdom-come. This is the high point of the movie.

After a series of bush-whackings, a leisurely crawl through roomy infested swamps and a few more scenic excursions the flicker comes to end. But not until "Cash" discovers that he can have a lot more fun with Rosanna Podesta, as Donna Isabella, as a cold night than he could counting his loot.—BS

Tells Author About Authors

Visiting Authoress Attends Review

Mrs. Olive Cross found that one of the most attentive listening to her discussion of Florida authors was . . . a Florida author!

Actually, Marianne Hauser, the young authoress who attended the Wednesday Book Review is now in Florida. Her husband, Mr. Fred Kirchberger, has recently become a member of the faculty of the music school at FSU.

Mrs Kirchberger recently completed a novel, The Living Shall Praise Thee, soon to be published by Houghton-Mifflin Chapters from the book have already been printed in 6 nationally known magazine.

Mrs Kirchberger and others in her audience heard Mrs. Cross enumerate an impressive list of Florida authors some of whom write part-time in Florida and others who live and work here year around.

The illustrious list included Robert Frost, Dean of American Poets and another resident of Miami; Carl Sandburg, Miami, Fla., poet; Hemingway, Key West, Sarasota's MacKinlay Kantor, who wrote the Pulitzer Prize-winning Andersonville, the recently deceased Marjorie Kennan Rawlings of the Gainesville area and Hervey Allen, Miami author of Anthony Adverse.

Author at FSU

Also mentioned was Dr Kathryne Abbey Hanna, formerly the head of the History Department at FSU. Dr. Hanna has written Florida, Land of Change, claimed to be the state's most outstanding history.

The FSU alumna, Rubylea Ray Hall wrote The Great Tide, a best seller and the story of old Port Tampa. Non-residents were Theodore Pratt, author of Barefoot Mailman, and Stuart Cloete who wrote Flamingo Road and others.

Not Hair Cloth

Last year a number of Florida authors, including Frank Slaughter of Jacksonville were invited to speak at FSU. "A bright and alert young man, the Rev. Mr. Frank Cross," replied Mrs. Cross, "trailed down the English Department for inviting Faulkner."

He didn't like honoring someone he didn't consider "high class"—like Chaucer, for instance. "As he gets older," said Mrs. Cross, "he'll realize that there's a place in American literature for a good story-teller just as there is for a classicist."

"Slaughter is essentially a story-teller and tells a good, clean and interesting story. Nor does he pretend to classify himself as a classic artist, like Faulkner, a contemporary classicist."

"Once Walt Disney was presented an artist's award, not because he was a Satael, but because there is a place for cartoons in art just as there is for a good story in literature." Mrs. Cross concluded.

For good, summer reading Mrs. Cross recommended Philip Wylie's The Best of Crunch and Des. Crunch and Des stories have appeared for a number of years in the Saturday Evening Post.

These are fishing stories, which, claims Mrs. Cross, "You won't be able to leave no matter how loudly the telephone rings." Crunch and Des about for Desperate are two easy-going chaps who make a job of guiding fishermen to catch fish on the Gulf Stream.

Hunting Cows

Mrs. Cross read an excerpt from the book which explained that "Fishing for shark in the Gulf Stream is not considered much sport to Gulf Stream fisherman. It is likened to hunting cows in a New England pasture."

A Pest a elf member odze commented that Philip Wylie had brought more money to the magazine than any other writer from Ben Franklin on down the line. His Crunch series has been its most popular single feature.

Another Cross recommended book for summer reading is Marjory Stoneman Douglas's novel, Hard is the Sun. This is a story based on the era of Miami's rapid growth from a lazy, fishing village to the boom town of the 1920's.

BOOK REVIEW SPEAKER, Mrs. Olive Cross who spoke at Wednesday's review discusses one of the Florida writers novels with authoress Marianne Hauser, left, who is here with her husband, who is a graduate student at FSU.

Marjorie Douglas is a long time resident of Miami, her father was formerly an editor of the Miami Herald. Some of her stories have been published in the O Henry collections and featured in the Saturday Evening Post.

Her book River of Grass, is the true story of the Everglades and has been called for finest interpretation of the South Florida region that has yet been written. "It is beautifully written," says Mrs. Cross, who illustrated by her point by reading the opening paragraphs of the book. The first sentence began. There are no other Everglades in the world . . ."

Off The Cuff

GEORGE GOLDSTEIN
Flambeau Amusements Editor

It seems the entertainment off and on the campus could be called extreme. Either it's highly recommended or don't bother to see it.

Theater . . . Dangerous Corner, the latest Summer Stock offering, throws its hat in the ring as a "must" for theater-goers. Even if you're not a dyed-in-the-wool play viewer it's a good bet.

The author, J. B. Priestly has that certain knack of mixing some exciting personalities into an absorbing plot that gets quite involved.

Members of the "444 acting company" will take over different roles than the previous play they were in. They've done very well with this one.

Movies . . A big name cast such as "While The City Sleeps" doesn't prove a movie has to be good. It's below average or average entertainment.

Mother love, girl-crazy killer, love and liquor plus journalism just don't mix.

But if "who dunnit and you know it but how we gonna catch 'em" is your specialty in movie viewing then see it!

For the western fans pro and con: Don't miss "Johnny Concho". Frank Sinatra manages to pull off a pretty good performance. It has a good story and guts—it's Frankie Boy.

Music . . . For an interesting afternoon for those who like beautiful music see and hear "The Creation". The group sounds quite good and Walter James has done a superb job of directing Choral Union.

Records . . . On the opposite side Jay Bloch turns the baton in a disking job and the result is an instrumental of listenable quality. String and woodwinds are featured. The record: "Au Revoir" and the flip side is "Candlelight."

"No Rock 'n Roll Tonight" by Dorothy Collins is all reet. The "Hit-Parade" thrush is in fine form with this slow waltz-tempo theme with an appealing rock and roll concept.

She sells it with sincerity and expressive phrasing. Flip side is a bouncy rhythm item "Rock 'n Roll Train."

"TO LIKE IT SEE . . .

There must be some movies that you've heard of that you've always wanted to see. Well that's the case with me.

Wish the local movie houses would try and get "FANTASIA" by Walt Disney. I think that movie has been mentioned a number of times by certain people who wished to see it.

From what I hear the illustrations are beautiful and the music is delightful. Walt Disney created a classic classic (If there is such a thing.)

So how about it someone! Can't we bring back a movie numbers of folks have been talking about.

While we're mentioning about bringing back movies, there's one show that some have already seen and that some will see again.

Of course this isn't a movie. It's a Broadway Show. What is it?

Well I can give you some hints. First of all there is a girl named Nellie Forbush and there's a guy named Emile. There is a romance angle involved.

Seems Emile is a guy with a past. And the past catches up with him. Old "Iron Belly" manages to bring up this little bit of info.

Then there are young lovers. Namely a cute gal by the name of Liat and young handsome marine named Joe Cable. Their love story is sad and a tear-jerker from the star.

To add the list of completely sane people there are two characters by the name of "Bloody Mary" and "Luther Billis." Their antics give the comedy relief that's just the right ingredient to this musical.

Hmm. Music so it is. "Honey Bun", "This Nearly Was Mine", "Younger Than Springtime" are just a few that have put this show on the map.

It's going to be presented December 7 and 8 in Westcott Auditorium by the Light Opera Guild. One Dr. Robert L. Briggs and Miss Betty Jane Grimm will audition young hopefuls for the roles in this show.

Why am I going "rah-rah" for this? It seems everybody but his blind brother are hunting up records, scripts, libretto's, and SCORES!" for this show.

Speaking of scores why doesn't the music library get one in.

What the show? You mean you don't know by now. It's "SOUTH PACIFIC".

In case you're interested tryouts are the second week in September for those who know what they want.

Perhaps the greatest challenge for an actor or actress is to be in a play that is well known and respected.

This challenge is being presented to the Summer Stock group with "The Silver Chord".

By no means do I underestimate the challenge that "Dangerous Corner" has presented to the director and the summer stock group.

It seems that the summer stock has picked two excellent plays for your viewing. It is not often enough that we get to see now actors and actresses in the making.

I have great respect for the group that has and will give you theater entertainment at College Theater and Professional training at it's highest peak.

Music Festival Features...

ALL MOZART CONCERT—Left to right are Owen Sellers, cellist; Thomas Stone, violinist; Mrs. Edith Kaup, vocalist, Robert Sedore, violinist; seated at the piano, Dr. Howard Wilson, and Mrs. Sophia Melvin, pianists, who will present an opening concert July 23 at Florida State University for the Southeastern Music Workshop. All except Mrs. Melvin, a graduate student and faculty wife at FSU, are members of the University's School of Music faculty.

PRESENTING "THE CREATION"—Left to right, Lee Liming, baritone; Robert Blanton and Jane Peeples, soprano, will be the trio featured when the Summer Choral Union at Florida State University presents the great sacred work by Joseph Haydn at 5 p.m. July 22 in Opperman Music Hall. Anne Hoffman will be piano accompanyist, and there will be 40 FSU students in the choir. Walter James, FSU associate professor of voice, will be the conductor.

Dohnanyi To Celebrate 79th Birthday, July 27

While a renowned Hungarian-born musician celebrates his 79th birthday July 27 at Florida State University, he will be thinking of his impending return to Great Britain.

Ernst von Dohnanyi anticipates his return because it will be like old times. He will play his own compositions, Aug. 17 in London over BBC, and Aug. 21, 23 and 26 at the Edinburgh Tenth International Festival before an audience of many European and American friends, and then take contracted record-ings in London. Also, he has not been back to Europe since he fled with his family from the Russian invasion of his home in Budapest after World War II ended.

"Maestro," as he is called by former pupils who have made names for themselves all over the world, would not have considered his return to Europe this time last year. But last fall in Tallahassee he became an American citizen, and that makes all the difference. On the occasion he said, "This is one of the happiest days of my life."

It was in 1947 that Dohnanyi was last in England accompanied by his wife and children. He found temporary refuge from grim experiences. One of his grown sons was killed by the Nazis and the other by Russians. England was not far enough away. He did not rest until he had transplanted his family across the ocean in the New world.

The family came to the United States via an extended two-year sojourn in Argentina. That is why Dohnanyi compositions are played annually July 4th on radio programs in Buenos Aires as well as in New York and London. The maestro himself will observe his birthday by joining faculty friends at FSU in playing his First Quintet at a concert for music teachers at his university Southeastern Music Workshop.

Dohnanyi will not visit the Continent on this coming trip to Great Britain with his wife though is enough. he decided even though he was invited to open the Berlin Festival in September. As said "Perhaps next year I will go to Berlin."

Determined to return on time for the fall term at Florida State because his teaching comes first with him, Dohnanyi will be back in Tallahassee the middle of September. As professor of piano and composition he has taught advanced piano pupils there since 1949. During the summer session, which still end his birthday week, he has worked with ten outstanding pianists who have come to him from great distances.

An alert, spry little man, Dohnanyi has never needed glasses, and his blue eyes usually appear full of laughter. He spends all possible time composing after his teaching and heavy concert schedule. Among his comparatively recent major compositions are "The American Rhapsody" which he premiered at Ohio University's semi-centennial celebration in 1954 and Violin Concerto performed at Carnegie Hall in 1953 by his Budapest Master. premiered in Wichita Falls, Texas last summer.

Since the British seem appreciative of the humor of his widely known early songs "Variations on a Nursery Rhyme" Dohnanyi will make his half-century old interpretation of "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star" at the Edinburgh Festival. He made his first concert tour of Britain in 1898 and has been in the United States on 10 tours.

The New York Times Station WQXR will present two Dohnanyi programs July 27 from 4 to 4 p.m. and from 11:07 to midnight.

Included on the programs will be a personal interview with Dohnanyi. He will discuss music available on long playing records, his coming trip to Britain and the Edinburgh festival, and his present home and activities in Florida.

Splendid Stars Add To 'Thriller'

Do you like murder? Murder mysteries, that is! If you do, you'll certainly get your fill of suspense and drama in the coming feature "While the City Sleeps." Hollywood has suddenly decided to put every good actor and actress they know in one picture! That must be it! How else can you explain the super-duper cast in this one: Dana Andrews, Rhonda Fleming, George Sanders, Howard Duff, Vincent Price, Ida Lupino, and a surprise face John Barrymore Jr. combine to form one of the most interesting "thrillers" yet!

This time all the tables seem to be turned. Ida Lupino plays a "non sister" reporter. George Sanders the outspoken, hard-boiled journalist. Howard Duff (from the inside looking out this time) represents the police as a Homicide Bureau psychologist, and John Barrymore, Jr. is the inhuman physcopathic murderer.

TWO CHAMPIONS OF THE ROAD... both Chevrolets!

To the eye, the new Corvette and the new Chevrolet are far different. But these two champions have one superb quality in common—both were born to cling to the road as though they were part of it!

Chevrolet's astonishing roadability is a big reason why it's America's short track stock car racing champion. It can and does out-run and out-handle cars with 100 more horsepower. When you wed rock-solid stability to superb engines such as the 225-h.p. V-8 that flashed the Corvette to a new American sports car record—then you get a real championship combination. Stop by for a sample!

Speech Students Begin Reheasals On 'Silver Cord'

"Some must win, some must lose," but to see who sings the blues, see "The Silver Cord."

The last play of the season, "Silver Cord," is now in rehearsal and will be presented next week, August 2-3 in Conradi Theatre. Curtains will rise at 8:15.

The drama is based around the situation of an over-zealous mother, who attempts to dominate the lives of her two sons, possibly unwilling to allow them a normal life apart from her, nor does not wish them to marry.

The elder son, Dave, an archaeologist, marries anyhow while he is studying abroad. His wife, Christina, is a scientist—cool, calm and calculating.

Robert, the younger son, is a weak strong willed as his brother, but nevertheless manages to get himself engaged to a delightful young thing called Hester.

With such competition for mother's devotion, Mrs. Phelps, the mother, has quite a task to work for her own ends. Playing Mother Sidney Howard presents many theories, examples, and schemes as well as opposition. Who wins who is what in this verbal and emotional battle should offer you a good evening's worth of entertainment to play-goers.

General admission is 75c, but students with ID cards only pay 40c. Dr. Lynn Orr directs the play. Charles Reimer did the designs and lighting, and Catherine Murphy made the costumes.

The cast is Nancy Cubbon, Dr. Phelps; Ron McCall, Dave; Duke Ellis, Robert; Sue Crawford, Christina; Maureen Bass, Hester; and Mary Alice Newton, the maid.

Mary Alice Newton also acts as stage manager, and is assisted with properties and lighting by Suzie Saunders.

There is no advanced sale of tickets nor will seats be reserved.

HE GOT CLIPPED

STORRS, Conn. (ACP) — The next time you get bored in the barber chair because the job of giving a haircut seems to be taking too long, consider the story of the Connecticut State College student.

A man walked into the Blue and White Barbershop near the University of Connecticut campus a few minutes before closing time recently. Instead of refusing to let him a haircut, three barbers set to work on him at once.

They came on the fastest haircut since Indian times. And in time that it was administered in the cause of science, no charge was made.

The haircut was a good one. But what will the union say?

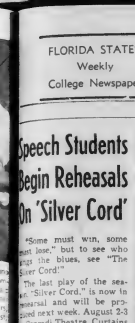
TV 'Studio On Wheels' Visits FSU Campus

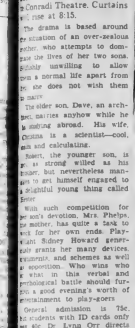
FSU students will be given a glimpse of a complete television studio on wheels this week.

The mobile unit, called the ETV-Mobile—Educational Television Mobile—is being presented on campus during the meeting of the Southern Regional Education Compact.

The traveling TV station, constructed by Dage Television Division, Thompson Products Inc. at a cost of some $50,000 is equipped with complete TV studio facilities, including TV broadcast cameras and film cameras, projectors, lights and sound equipment. With the addition of microwave equipment remote programs can be sent to regular TV stations for broadcast over the air.



Mr. Wynne Stewart, special representative of Dage Television, will accompany the ETV-Mobile on its visit to Tallahassee.



This unusual exhibit and demonstration will be on the Florida State University campus through next Thursday.

HARPSICHORD CONCERT GIVEN ON CAMPUS

A harpsichord concert was given here Wednesday afternoon by Miss Andre Noco Tallahassee pianist, in connection with the Third Annual Southeastern Music Workshop.

Miss Noco's program included "The Harmonious Blacksmith" and "Sonata in C" by Handel; three sonatas by Scarlatti; "Le Carillon de Cythere" and "Les Baricades Misterieuses" by Couperin, and two numbers by Bach, "The Italian Concerto" and "English Suite No. 3."

Name Professorship Given To Rumsey

First At FSU

Florida State University announced today the establishment by the baking industry of a distinguished service professorship, the first name professorship to be set up at FSU.

Dr. L. A. Rumsey will hold the professorship as director of the FSU Baking Industry Program, according to Dean Charles A. Rovetta of the School of Business.

The professorship was provided with funds contributed by the Southern Bakers Association through action of its University Fund, headed by Sanford F. Epps of Augusta, Ga.

Dean Rovetta said that in setting up the professorship the industry and the university utilize "a tradition which has learned to scholars and area educational institutions extending back through nearly five centuries of educational history."

Harvard, Chicago, Columbia, Yale and Princeton are among universities which have name professorships in various fields.

Dr. Rumsey for nearly six years has headed the baking science and management department here. A native of Ohio, he is a graduate of Denison University and started out as a teacher of chemistry at Iowa State College and Denison.

Later he conducted research in cereal technology under a fellowship from the American Institute of Baking at the University of Minnesota and obtained his Ph. D degree there in 1922.

During a long career he served as director of campaigns for the Wheat Council of the United States and secretary of the American Bakers Association and for several years he and with W. E. Lotz Company of Chicago, a baking industry service organization.

Prior to setting up the professorship the Southern Bakers Association had contributed more than $100,000 to the Baking Industry Program at FSU in scholarships, service and research. The program trains students for managerial positions in the industry.

CENTER CLOSES

Eight-week students will find their choices of eating places limited after July 30.

At that date The Student Center dispenses with cafeteria and fountain services, according to Mrs. Bateman, Student Center hostess.

The center will be open through August 11 for study, relaxation and dancing from 7 p.m. until regular closing time.

FSU 'Diggers' Locate 17th Century Mission

FSU archaeologists have discovered the site of the fortification walls of San Luis Mission, once the 17th Century headquarters of a string of Spanish missions among the Apalachee Indians.

Shovels of a class of students at Florida State University during this week into a thickened strip of earth in the red clay subsoil on the site where the wooden fort was abandoned and burned in July, 1704.

Dr. Charles H. Fairbanks, assistant professor of archaeology who has been directing a 4-year exploration of the site, said there is no doubt in his mind that this strip, nine inches wide, marks the excavation for a footing of the fort's south palisade wall.

The wall itself, according to old maps and records, was of tall wooden timbers. They presumably has long since disappeared, unless some of the charred fragments still remain.

For a long time it has been known the site of the fort was somewhere on this hilltop, part of the James Messer estate, on the western edge of Tallahassee, but the exact location has been unknown. The black soil strip was found a foot and a half below the surface as the students made excavations in a path toward where the palisade wall presumably lay.

With this discovery the students now can fairly well outline from the early day maps and reports about where the entire bastions were located on the 250-foot-long wall, and perhaps will be able to locate other fort structures.

Nails, bits of Spanish majolica and Indian pottery, an arrow head, a piece of a copper kettle, a lock from an old gun and other artifacts meanwhile have been screened out of the diggings.

Students in the class, which is devoting four hours a day to the digging, are James Cobbs, a junior from Ft. Lauderdale, George Mazzotti, a senior from Hollywood and Pete MacIntire, a junior from High Springs.

During the remainder of the eight-week summer session it is hoped that further and possibly important fragments of the mission's early occupancy may come to light, and even charred fragments of the wooden fort itself.

In its heyday the mission and fort together with a neighboring Apalachee village had a population of 1,400. It was headquartered here for a string of 14 missions

Housing Scene Said Already Critical Here For Fall Semester

COMPOSER - MUSICIAN CELEBRATES — Ernest von Dohnanyi, of the FSU Music School faculty celebrates his 79th birthday here today. Dohnanyi concert is to climax "The Maestro's birthday week. (See Story)

Dohnanyi Celebrates Birthday With Music

Today is the birthday of Ernst von Dohnanyi, famous pianist, composer, and conductor, who is now 79 years old.

Besides programs in Buenos Aires, New York and England will broadcast a special salute to him, but the Hungarian-born musician will highlight his birthday himself by playing his own composition, "First Quintet" in Opperman Music Hall tonight at 8:15.

Actually, Dohnanyi prefers a quiet birthday celebration. He enjoys relaxing at home with his family and friends and listening to good music.

That is what his birthdays were like when he was a boy growing up in Pressburg, an ancient Hungarian coronation town but now a part of Czechoslavakia.

Even after Dohnanyi became famous throughout Europe, he still hoped for quiet, private birthday celebrations. He attempted to avoid any sort of public celebration, but found this often impossible.

He recalls his sixtieth birthday as "the worst of the lot. At that time he had slipped away to a rustic inn in the Austrian mountains, where he hoped to enjoy a quiet birthday dinner.

Suddenly a radio program began to resound with a commemorative program, praising Dohnanyi and his works. He was then, in 1937, at the height of his career after serving as conductor of the Budapest Philharmonic orchestra for a quarter of a century.

Dohnanyi found it necessary to leave his half-eaten meal in order to reach Budapest in time for a surprise banquet, arranged in his honor and attended by over 1,000 people.

Few Spaces Left For Men On Campus

"There was an old woman who lived in a shoe, she had so many children, she didn't know what to do."

FSU may find itself in a similar predicament this fall, due to the critical shortage of student housing. An unprecedented 1453 applications for housing, men and for married students were filed by July 20.

That's a 47 per cent increase over the 985 filed by a comparable time last year," said Dr. R. R. Oglesby, Dean of Students. He went on to say that the university will be able to provide about the same amount of housing space as last year, the Tallahassee area is being canvassed for available housing to accommodate all of the remainder of the applicants.

To accomodate the 1307 applicants for single students, the university has only 876 dormitory spaces, according to Miles Dean, acting director of men's housing. There is, in addition, 396 spaces in fraternity houses, he said.

Only a few of the applications on file by married students can be filled, he said, since most of the 253 university-provided units will have to vacate. Married students usually have to wait 10 to 20 months for university housing. There are 96 family units in Mabry Heights, 105 units and 49 trailer spaces on the West Campus.

The number of places available for women is only slightly higher than last year. There are 1925 dormitory places and 538 in sorority houses. Miss Edith McCollum, director of residences for women, said there also is a shortage of available space for graduate women.

University officials are doing everything possible to alleviate the housing shortage Tallahassee with available housing space for both married and single students are being asked to make this space available. Staff is being compiled by personnel in the men's housing office in Bryan Hall.

The off-campus housing list thus far includes 200 rooms and from 60 to 100 apartments for single men, and from 100 to 140 apartments for married students, according to Dean. These listings, he added, are not nearly enough to meet the total need for such housing.

While university officials express the hope that a solution to the shortage will be found by the fall registration, Dean Oglesby advised prospective students who are to be housed off-campus to wait until September to get a place, but to come to Tallahassee and arrange for housing beforehand.

Moon, Stars, Backdrop Tonight's Dance

PLAN DANCE—Barbara aHrliss, left, of Cawthon and Janet Weissman, right of Florida Hall discuss plans for tonight's dance to be held at Cawthon.

Daneing under the stars is the order of the evening at Cawthon Hall tonight.

The informal dance, to be held on the Cawthon patio from 9 until 12 p.m., is sponsored for undergraduate students by Cawthon and Florida halls.

With Tallahassee's waning but still late moon providing a backdrop, students will dance on the patio, lighted by strings of colored bulbs to the music of Jerry Dye and his band.

Refreshments will be served and tables lighted by Hurricane lamps are being placed on the lawn surrounding the patio for the enjoyment of the guests, according to the dance planning committee.

All students are invited to the dance. Those without dates are encouraged to come, since the dance is to be a "stag or drag" affair.

Those in charge of the planning are Barbara Harlies and Janet Richardson, of Cawthon Hall. They are assisted by Gwen Adair, Mary Gail Bass, Harriet Brinkley, Dolores Eby, Sandy Golden.

Others are Mary Hamby, Edie Hempton, Poll Hirks, Gwen Howard, Linda McClure, Nellie Mandis, Louise McClure, Margaret Miller, Joan Prichard, and Lucille Turnage.

"On This Order For A New Typewriter Ribbon— Did You Know You Forgot To Stamp It 'Secret'?"

The Bedsheet Terrors

The bedsheet terrors are at it again. This past week the Ku Klux Klan donned their sheets and pillowcases for a romp in a pasture lighted by a burning cross.

Their actions are not new. The has been going on in the South for quite a while.

The klansmen, who took care to preserve their identities, made fiery speeches vowing to uphold segregation. And as usual established their stand against anything "Un-American". This, incidentally, includes anything not in line with klan belief.

The sheeted wonders pranced around the huge field made eerie by the large crossing burning in the chilly Florida night.

And at the same time, instead of cringing in terror, Negroes gathered in church to pray for the misguided klansmen. It seems ironic.

The meeting served no purpose, except to give insecure people a feeling of might —while hiding under sheets. It reminds one of a child at Halloween. He too delights in frightening people. And similarly, the child would not be such a brave figure if his robes were torn away revealing him to the world for what he is—a small, scared, bewildered child.

Though the klan did no harm, they are not to be commended for attempting to stir the glowing embers of racial unrest and distrust into a consuming flame of hate. It is not good.

Dis 'N Dat

It Has Merit

The problem of reducing highway fatalities has long been a problem of the state and all of its sister states as well.

Many theories have been evolved in years past concerning how the problem should be solved. Cries rise from lawmakers that the speed limit should be lowered. In the state of Massachusetts the legal speed limit was set at 40 miles per hour. Yet they still have traffic fatalities. This law has done little other than slow down the pace of an entire state in order to keep a few auto daredevils from committing suicide.

Gov. LeRoy Collins has a very valid reason for insisting that a legal speed limit of 60 miles per hour be established for the state of Florida. However, we believe that the job of cutting traffic fatalities could be done equally as well by another method. Such an idea has been proposed by Rep. Harry Straten.

His suggestion is that Highway patrolmen greet people entering the state and familiarize them with the traffic conditions and laws of the state and explain that the laws will be strictly enforced. At the same time the patrolmen will have an opportunity to check drivers' licenses to prevent unqualified drivers from making the Florida roads even more hazardous.

It would seem that people who receive a personal warning would be much more likely to heed the traffic laws of this state. Certainly it would impress the seriousness of the drive to limit highway fatalities.

Highway deaths to date have claimed the lives of 666 persons in the state. This is an increase of more than 100 cases as when compared with the same time last year.

Some measure must be taken to stop this needless slaughter.

We think Rep. Stratton's idea has merit.

Superstitions Are Rich Heritage

By FLORENCE SILLERS OGDEN

Southerners are by nature superstitious. It is an old Southern custom, a tradition And while William Faulkner, Erskine Caldwell, and Lillian Smith have stripped us to our foolish hide for all of our romance, moonlights and magnolias, they have been content to leave us our superstitions. God bless 'em! No doubt they like to show us a benighted people who still live in the dark ages of superstition. Well, let 'em.

Superstition is a legacy we inherited from our colored friends along with a lot of troubles — troubles which bother us today almost as much as they did in days of old. Superstition is much from the dull pattern of routine, system and scientific fact.

As for me, I like to think that potatoes grow better when planted on the dark of the moon; that if you hang a dirty dishrag up in a graveyard, you will keep the evil spirits away (maybe like Ketturer, Harriman and Stevenson that a bevy of Black Hoof Tea will keep off chills and fevers and keep the doctor away); that

You do not have to be an atheist or a non-Christian to believe in simple things. Indeed, scientists are proving every day that many of the early superstitions are turning out to be facts, even though they were not arrived at by the Ph.D. letter after a Geiger counter.

Grandma Saved Early

Grandma was a good Christian woman, president of the Ladies Aid Society. Yet, when she moved from our house to the house she had bought from old Mr. John Gill, which was down the lane a piece, she made her first trek down the long plank walk and around the corner of the pasture on Thursday night with her arms loaded with household goods, because she did not want to begin to move on Friday. I know, because I trotted at her heels, fluttering in my own hands her black drawstring bag of medicine bottles for my Grandma believed in her heart that camphor as well as in Friday being a day of bad luck to start anything.

Many of our superstitions have passed on with our old folks and some have become scientific facts.

Take lightning rods, for instance. Years ago when no house was considered safe or respectable without those ornamental safety devices, Old Mrs. Kirk, our neighbor and the richest lady in town, had a most splendid array of lightning rods on the turrets and towers of her fine, big house. There were seven or nine-like rods with silver balls on the end of them. These silver balls would catch the sunlight and dazzle our young eyes when we looked at them. And they must have been effective for not a flash of lightning struck Mrs. Kirk's house with a lightning rod in it was a the store and sent shivers down our spines.

Then the time came when people who believed in lightning rods were called ignorant country bumpkins. Why, it act so nobody would have been caught dead in a house with a lightning rod. It was sure sign of ignorance and superstition. But today lightning rods are back in the sunlight of scientific approval. There is something to a lightning rod after all.

The Dishrag Trick

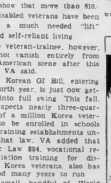
Some day maybe they'll find that a dirty dishrag hung in a graveyard will keep the ha'nts away. Anyway, on November 1 I plan to give it a try. I'm going to hang up a dirty dishrag in my one and only peach tree. Maybe then I'll start something way in August when the Democrats meet in Chicago

Another so-called superstition is that of the peachtree switch, that the one used on your bottom or your bare legs, but the strongest switch you could find. Lottie tells a story about an experience with a peachtree switch that was given her by her cousin Lee lived on Fallback Plantation down southeast of Benoit, and they wanted to send a spot to drive a well, or water pump. While her husband Bide was trying to decide, the Negroes who had brought the rig grabbed a peachtree switch and began to walk back and forth over the ground, holding their peachtree switches out in front of them.

Lottie says that the peachtree switches didn't do a thing and the negroes warned her husband, Mister Bide, you got to dig deep if you gointer drive a well here. There ain't any water under dis place 'cept in springs.

Bide laughed. His thought it was funny. But sure enough, just like they said, he had to dig deep. Then before he struck water, and then it was a slow, muddy stream, not fit to drink. Lottie says:

A few years later after they had moved to Manatee they had occasion to drive another well. So Rife, remembering, said, around Fallback plantation. "I'm going to try that thing myself." Lottie says he looked over one too, and away they went, holding their peachtree switches out before them. Then, she says, the peachtree switch, and Rife's too, began to bend toward the earth until finally they hit a spot where she could hardly hold hers off the ground. It was something like holding a fishing pole with a big fish pulling on the peachtree end of the line They both stopped in their tracks, and like Descartes discovering the Mississippi declared, "This is it."



And they started to pump right there, and sure enough, at the feet they struck a strong clear stream of water. But it never drank save Lottie.

Now you can believe that or not, but my cousin Lottie is a truthful woman, though, of course, according to Southern custom, she is not one to speak the good word. Not only that, the peachtree switch theory is backed by tradition and by the corner. Folks find oil with those things, and now I read in the Farmers Digest that they are using a Geiger counter to farm by. So we just how much fertiliser a plant is getting and what kind I know an old-time multo-millionaire a-l-m-a-n who sets great store by his divining stick. Down in the past some have laughed at him but not after he got rich with it.

So I'm all for knocking on wood

In Defense

There is little doubt that the new restrictions on care and parking on campus passed by the Board of Control will bring cries of anguish from both the faculty and student body.

Everyone feels that he has a right to a car, and to a parking place for the vehicle on campus.

We have all become accustomed to the notion that the university is being run for our convenience. Perhaps we have overlooked the fact that the institution will be here long after we are gone.

The institution is a permanent affair, growing to meet the needs of a body of Floridians, ever-increasing in size. Provisions must be made for the accommodation of this body of people who will be demanding a college education in the future.

This hardship imposed on the present occupants of this university is a necessity. It is made in the best interests of the university.

We think that the step was well justified.

Epitaph To Sarcasm

George Bernard Shaw was born 100 years ago today. He died in 1950. He will be honored in Chicago, the city he described as "America with the lid off." And that's about all.

Shaw was a literary gadfly. Though admired, the type is neither widely loved nor long remembered. Shaw, for instance, left his house at Ayot St. Lawrence, in a last Shavian gesture, to the National Trust of Britain, caretaker of Britain's historical mansions.

The Trust recently rented the place in a private citizen. Not enough visitors come to make it pay to operate. It is remote, yet crowds travel to more remote areas to visit the former homes of other writers.

Shaw was a vegetarian who lived a long time. He was a Fabian Socialist who believed in change by peaceful means. But more than either of these he was the stinger of entrenched complacency. His witticisms stirred people from pleasant apathy by making them ridiculous to themselves.

But there is danger in satire. Its barb is limited to the lifetime of the man who wields it. People, made ridiculous in their own eyes, may laugh and correct the fault, but they seldom maintain a fondness for the one who pointed it out. Issues pass into history; the satire is lost on new generations. Even with the great authors, it is not the witticism which endures. Dante, for instance, is full of political sarcasm. Its only purpose today is to provide professors with the material for lengthy explanation. Shakespeare's political satire is a study for schoolmen.

There is another danger for satirists who live as long as Shaw did. They tend to become professional "Peck's Bad Boys." They become as conscious of their power as the itinerant poets of early Ireland who could blight entire families with a verse if the hospitality offered was not to their liking.

Shaw's leads satirists to begin to take themselves seriously, while debunking others. There is a tendency toward a mannered lack of manners—a compulsion to shock for effect, to show off. In American letters, the later writings of H. L. Mencken, the "Sage of Baltimore," show this tendency. It is a conscious effort to be clever at the expense of others.

Sarcasm turns back upon itself. The gadfly serves his purpose during his lifetime. But Shaw, like other prickly writers, must depend for literary longevity upon the humanity in his writing. A smile at human foibles is always more enduring, and endearing, than a snicker.

The veteran-trainee, however, will not vanish entirely from the American scene after this week, VA said.

The Korean GI Bill, entering its fourth year, is just now getting into full swing. This fall, VA expects nearly 300,000 veterans of a million Korea veterans to be enrolled in schools and training establishments under that law. VA added that Public Law 894, vocational rehabilitation training for disabled Korea veterans, also has a good many years to run

A small handful of World War II veterans will be allowed to continue their studies in the months ahead, VA said.

Housing: Dig It Yourself Fad?

By ROB SIMMONS

PROBABLY ONE OF the most rewarding feelings ever to be experienced is the one that comes with a backward look over the shoulder at the end of a long trek. It is quite gratifying to see how much progress has been made

In a sense that is what the staff of the Flambeau is doing now.

The last issue of this year's Summer Flambeaus has been put to bed, marking not only the climax of another week's hard work, but the end of what is supposed to be a job well done.

The staff has worked diligently trying to wrap up the campus news each week. The job wasn't always easy.

But now it's finished.

WE WOULD LIKE to voice a hearty thanks to all of the folks that made the Summer Flambeau such a success. First of all, the staff: Margaret Miller, George Goldstein, Midge Strain, Larry Callen, Marlene O'Brien, Billy Pellham, Tam Hafner, and Mary C. Kist, not to mention others that drifted through, making some contribution to the paper.

Next, we would like to recognize the people who came through when things were hard-pressed— Cliff Paulley and Mrs. Anderson of Public Relations.

The group with infinite patience must not be ignored in this bestowing of laurels: Capital Printers and Bookbinders. A swell bunch of guys if ever we have worked with any.

Then to point out the fellows in the Audio Visual laboratory who made sure that we had plugs for the lasous; Jim Martin and Tom Sawyer. They really came through every time we needed them most.

BUT THE GUY behind the scene who rarely receives credit for his invaluable assistance is Dr. Reid Montgomery. He always seems to be around and willing to help when you need him most. Many thanks to you, Mr.

Of course there are many others who are unlisted, but not forgotten. Our most sincere thanks to all of them.

Now that all the posers have been passed out, we can turn an eye to our surroundings and campus happenings.

One of the biggest blows of the summer came when the Board of Control officially lowered the boom on the freshmen. Poor freshmen. Come September I no freshman can bava a car on campus — even in town so the new edict says.

Even the profs got it. Everyone is affected by this deal. But no one should gripe. The University isn't run for any individual or group of individuals. Everything is made in the best interests of the university. Below we complain of petty interference, but we remember that the University was here long after all of us are gone.

Tallahassee's bus line sees but little limited service now from 7 a.m. Negroes are still boycotting but there is no substantial protest. Transportation-wise. Their cause is about to be ruled illegal. Everything is being done to avoid overflowing students. Housing simply can't meet the demand of this growing institution and it takes money to erect more dormitories. We once heard of a fellow who dug a complete home under a 40 acre field. Perhaps freshmen could be provided with a shovel and a "dig it yourself" manual. This would be one solution to the housing problem.

The Threepenny Critic

Priestly Makes Poor Philosophies

By RYAN EDWARDS

J. B. PRIESTLY is a first-rate playwright who has fancied himself to be something of a philosopher. His philosophical confessions are always interesting and provocative, but one thing they are not is valid. Priestly based or very productive of any valuable conclusions. Luckily his dramatic facility is extraordinary enough to allow us to overlook his failure as an intelligent entertainment, and at the same time to encumber the stage with some of the best of the philosophy as we may care

DANGEBOI'S CORNER, the second major production of the Florida Players company, was a good illustration of this fact.

Fast-moving and laden with a wealth of sure-fire suspense gimmicks, the entire play is much to quarrel with the author's assertion that illusion is necessary to happiness—or with his strange notion that everyone is inevitably led in love with the wrong person.

The excellent cast also seemed aware that their vehicle could be ludicrous if played too seriously. But they overdid it with nerve-straining tension and frenzied gesticulation. Timing was always aware of ensemble and tempo and there was no scene-stealing. They functioned together as a company, for which they deserve the highest praise

IF FORCED TO single out individual performances, we would probably turn first to Susy Saunders, who gave the finest bit of character-drawing character. She maintained Priestly's sophisticated dress of inroom style throughout, yet managed to convey considerable emotional impact, too. She is very definitely a young lady to watch, and we expect to see her develop into a regular-season leading lady of power and warmth.

Of the others, who were uniformly good, it must also be mentioned that Mr. Bond accomplished the difficult task of making an unlikable character seem sympathetic, and Ron McCall and Maureene Bass were effective mates. Mary Alice Weston played a deft sense of portraiture Though the two-week interim has evidently not been long enough to let Nancy Cubbon and Betty Boles develop characterization of Penny Wise, her technical skill and apt sense of timing were no less apt to the show

All technical aspects of the show, setting, costumes, and lighting were beautifully conceived and executed. Dr. Davis is to be especially commended for his dramatic interpretation of the swift denouement, and for a fine job of direction and well-paced show as a whole.

THERE HAS BEEN so much musical excitement on campus during the past week that we will be forced to discuss it only in general terms. More's the pity, for we have assembled together so much eminently discussable literature being played on these premises However, if all we can do is hit the high spots, then we will do so in chronological order.

RALPH TAYLOR'S Saturday evening Master's Recital was full of nice things—nice tone, nice phrasing, nice interpretation His competence made a program of seldom-heard music always interesting and frequently beautiful . . . Though we are in no position to comment on the Chanel Suite's performance of Haydn's "Creation," we must observe that we heard not trumpet or voice we know back to Talahassee Claude Rhea will always be remembered for The Mozart concert presented several years later as a recital works s fact that was particularly appreciated in view of Taylor's poor composition as sungby get on a program of that kind. Accompanied by Mrs. Dr. Howard Wilson provided a beautifully shaded and artistically perfect background. Edith Kaup's perennially superb musicianship and Sophia Mellin's extraordinary phrasing complemented by Tom Sasser's adroit violin-playing made the Violin Sonata unforgettable The program had a virtual revival of benefitted greatly from Dr. Wiley Housewright's dramatic drive.

ON TUESDAY EVENING Mary Floyd proved that a two-year's sojourn from the practice bench need not rob an intelligent pianist of expressive power or tonal dexterity. Her Bach-Busoni Chaconne was like an eternity lived in moment, rather than an eternity lived. Thereafter Rachmaninoff Zachara provided class-I Clamcal relief and Thomas Wright played dramatically and powerfully. The d minor Concerto of MacDovel was indeed a happy choice for him and we remember it as his best Talahassee performance to date. Emily Weber handled the orchestral parts admirably and intelligently.

'Guestward Ho!' Is Wacky Novel

By JAMES D. MATHIS

ONCE, WAY BACK in 1853, Bernice Bobbs was a beautiful, frivolous, carefree and relatively wealthy Indiana girl. Then she and Hootons moved to New Mexico and plunged head long into the hilarious adventures related in Guestward Ho!" by Barbara Hooton as indirectly confided to Patrick Dennis.

After spending the early part of their married lives in New York and civilization, the Hootons decided to go West to the beauties of New Mexico and the armies of owning a dude ranch called Rancho del Monte.

What is it like to have twenty-five guests and no employees? What is it like to have twenty-five guests and no employees to Barbara Hooton answers all these questions and many more with "twenty-lovely years of hindsight" to wrap up a package of wacky humor.

THE BOOK IS FACTUAL and is constructed around a succession of incidents and characterization because the characterizations are so real and the incidents are so funny that they were only the names have been changed to protect the Hootons and Mr. Dennis

There are many rollicking incidents here to see one concerning the beautiful blonde who came to ranch looking for a husband and ended up married to a little cigarette smoking an alcoholic and a long low Jaguar convertible and there is the parade of cooks who came, prayed, and stayed and those who didn't stay. There is not a page in the entire book that does not have a laugh.

Guestward Ho! is the best humor book today to be published so far. It is just right for getting over those last blues for there is not a serious moment in it. This reviewer advises the readers to beg, borrow or buy a copy of this book, pack your troubles away and go Guestward Ho!

JUST THE GIST: Hollywood is bidding high for the hit musical "My Fair Lady" based on Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion. The price has soared to $1,500,000 . . . The Saucy Sweetish Sex kitten J. L. B. Smith is the story of an intrepid girl reporter treasure hunt for a "missing link" supposedly extinct for 50 million years. . . .

Pocket Full of Wry is a first intellectual mystery by Lucy Allen . . . James Kubeck's The Lavender Lady organized to be a sex story in the caliber of the Caine Mutiny and Cruel Sea. . . . Mentioned previously The Rebe is a mixture of nine-tenths romance and one-tenth mystery . . . The Age of Fighting Sail, by C. S. Forester, is the epic story of the War of 1812 at sea . . .

Earle Stanley Gardner has written over 82 "mysteries" and none of them are very good. What a Year! is the story of the year, 1956, that ended with a fizz. Makes good reading . . . Sons and the Kin of Slam, from which the movie The Kins of Kahoola was made, and The Hasty They Fall are new reprints now on the news stands.

SPORTS WRAPUP—

Pierce Lehmbeck

Flambeau Sports Editor

FSU AND THE SEC—AGAIN

Earlier this week, Miami Herald Sports Editor Jimmy Burns used a full eight columns of his opening sports page to tell the people of the 'Magic City' the University of Miami's chances of ". . . cracking the SEC are 'excellent'".

And in a slightly smaller overline, ". . . FSU also mentioned."

Burns used some 500 words to relate information he'd picked up on a recent trip through Southeastern Conference territory which he said pointed up the chances of Miami, Florida State, Mississippi Southern and Houston gaining entrance into the conference.

To the average football followers, it's been no secret these four schools have been scrambling for the nod which would welcome one of them into this brood.

Maybe all of them.

Here's the way Burns saw it:

"SEC leaders are talking about increasing their membership from 12 to 16 with provisions for each team playing eight games within the conference annually. This would amount to a round-robin schedule every year."

And, according to his report, FSU's chances for SEC membership are enhanced by:

1. Reluctance of SEC members in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee to schedule intersectional games in which they might go against opponents using Negro players. This has been outlawed by special legislation in Louisiana.

2. Realization that FSU, Miami, Mississippi Southern and Houston have advanced tremendously as powers in the past few years, and

3. Belief that acceptance of Miami would inspire the Orange Bowl Committee to reduce its New Year's game tie-up with the Big Seven and Atlantic Coast conferences to a pact with only one of the organizations, preferably the ACC. This would provide the SEC a chance to furnish one team.

Burns seems to think, and at this time, quite rightfully so, that Miami would be the No. 1 potential member. Houston, FSU and Southern might be ranked on an even par.

Presently, the SEC is made up of Georgia Tech, Florida, Georgia, Vanderbilt, Tennessee, Tulane, LSU, Ole Miss,. Mississippi State, Auburn, Alabama, Florida and Kentucky.

It takes quite a bit of wrangling to ease into the SEC under any conditions, and one of the most important things is to have a sponsor. It's been generally accepted Florida would back Miami; but we can't remember anyone going for sure ever being said about who would sponsor FSU.

Supposedly, it would be either Auburn or Georgia.

To background the situation which Burns has cited, you'd have to flip back through your sports pages to this past December when Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia objected to Rose Bowl playing Pittsburgh in the Sugar Bowl because the Panthers had a Negro fullback.

There was something of a rhubarb following Griffin's yelp of indignation, but the game was played anyway. Seems the Tech student body cared more about playing Pittsburgh than the color of a fellow's skin, so they expressed themselves.

They burned the governor in effigy.

And though we hate to have the Tribe's chances of becoming a member of the SEC elite enhanced through such circumstances, it's nice to know there is, again, a chance.

Canoe Trip

Canoe Trip Proves More Fun Than A Barrel Of Hornets

By MADGE STRAIN

"Now what do you suppose happened to those canoes?" It was approaching 4 p.m. Saturday, July 21. Thirty-six would-be canoeists were waiting eagerly to get under way down the Wakulla River to St. Marks, on a University-sponsored trip.

Finally the truck with the canoes on it rumbled over the bridge and pulled alongside the parked and empty F.S.U. school bus. The group, which had been remaining in various activities—swimming, taking pictures, or just plain a'setting and a'resting' in the shade — crowded around the truck for an explanation.

What had happened was: One of the canoes bounced out of the truck and hit a Cadillac. "You think it sounds funny here? The poor driver had to go home and tell his wife!"

After waiting for almost three hours, to get started it felt pretty good to actually get the canoes to the water. Away we went! Boats and water lively! It was a race so several of the canoes with men in them decided to see who could reach St. Marks first.

Everyone paddled blisters on their hands for awhile but soon decided it would be more fun to slow down and enjoy the trip. All but one canoe. That is! They were going to get there first!

The group settled down to a peaceful trip. Many returned to their previous activities—swimming, picture-taking, and loafing.

At one point, all but one of the canoes stopped at a riverside country store, if you can imagine such a thing. The other canoe filled with "Beat-you-to-St. Marksists." kept going right on down the river.

The rest of the trip to St. Marks provided more excitement. Porpoises played around the canoes, and fishing boats made the going risky. An occasional shark popped up now and then to remind the paddlers to stay right side up.

The trip was over at last. Fifteen canoes were already loaded on the truck to go back to the campus. Fifteen? There were sixteen to begin with! Perhaps it would show up soon.

Everyone was hungry so we crowded into Shield's, a well-known seafood house in St. Marks. We were just getting served when the three missing canoeists straggled in.

They explained. In their eagerness to beat the rest of the group to St. Marks, they had missed the bend in the river, and headed toward the Gulf. Then they had come to close to a fishing boat, were swamped, and had to be towed back to docks.

Such a trip is not complete without a harmonious songfest on the bus ride home. Well, this one was complete There was a fairly good attempt at harmony, anyway!

As the trip came to a close, no one had cause to complain. No one except the bus driver. He acquired a few reminders of the trip when the bus and a car bumped fenders. When he set out to investigate, he landed in a hornets' nest!

And so another day passed at FSU!

QUITE AN EXPERIENCE is this only way to describe last week-end's canoe trip sponsored by the "Reservation" and the Summer Recreation program. For a humorous account of the aquatic venture, see story

'The Leather Saint' The Rawhide Years

An Episcopal minister to boxing scouts? John Derek as Father Gil Allee proves in "The Leather Saint" that God truly does help those who help themselves.

In order to buy needed equipment for the polio victims in his community, John takes up the sport—complete his new career— he needs a fight manager and a fight promoter. That's where Paul Douglas as Gus McAniffe and Cesar Romero portraying Tony Loreoo, come in. They fill the bill perfectly. Of course, every movie has a girl, and this one is no exception. Jody Lawrence as Pearl Gorman plays an attractive part. Pearl, who is Cesar Romero's girl, it is she who persuades Father Gil to take up the game while she discovers John's true identity.

The show gains "drama" from the line cast, "humor" from the "ring-side" situations caused by John's determination to keep his true identity a secret from his supporting contemporaries, and "heart" from the plot itself, produced by Dore Schary — Norman Retchin and Alvin Gaer.

Ernest Truex as Father Ritchie, Richard Shannon as Tom Kelly, twelve-year-old Ricky Vera as Pepito, and former heavyweight contender Lou Nova, as Tiger, paint the final touches on the marquee. The heart-warming story is comparable to "Going My Way" and will long be remembered.—J. S.

Sleazbeasts, guns, and gambling? What a combination! Tony Curtis fits right to the middle of it like the key piece in a puzzle.

In "The Rawhide Years" Tony Curtis-Marshall is a suave gambler who unwittingly becomes involved in a murder he is accused of committing. The woman Colleen Miller — "Zoe" — plays Tony's girlfriend who can't make up her mind. She finally does, of course, and guess who she chooses?

William Demarest and William Gargan fill in the missing pieces to create a rousing, if mainly true but interesting plot. If it is possible to love a "saddle tramp," you'll love Rick Harper - Arthur Kennedy — more to hold up Tony and then become his fast friend when the venture fails. Well, almost friend, anyway.

All the way through the movie Tony skips in and out of trouble, but he eventually ends up on the side of the angels since with Colleen's help. There's plenty of shootin' and lots of color—some of it, blood—in this one!—J. S

"Serenade"

Iron-throated Mario Lanza returns to the Tallahassee screens (today and Saturday) one day on a double feature at the Capital Drive-In.

The slightly-oversatisfied Lanza who haunts us belting out all of his numbers in "Serenade" with the finesse of a trumpeting bull elephant, plays the role of the small town boy who makes good—with the aid of a wealthy lady friend.

But nice things don't always last. Mario's fiery Rickie Hernandez dies of him and gives pursuit to a fiesty employer in which Mario blows his wavy wig.

After getting something akin to swamp fever, while bicycling skittfully in Mexico, the terrible tenor finds true love and home in the arms of a Spanish beauty who shares his intensive feelings.

All in all, in spite of his terrific volume, Mr. Lanza delivers a sterling performance in "Serenade" with smooth sincerity as rattle a tea cup at twenty paces.—B.S.

They Set Up Summer Fun

SUMMER RECREATION COMMITTEE is congratulated by Miss Marie Williams, extreme left, for a job well done. Miss Williams is the Director of Social Activities at FSU.

Many hours of hard work have gone into the planning of recreation events for the Summer entertainment of the students here at FSU.

All recreational events were planned by the Summer School Recreation Committee, under the supervision of Miss Marie Williams, director. Members of the committee include Brad Chisson and Virginia Simrall, graduate assistants; Dana Greene, Sandra Saunders, Faye Eagins Barbara Rouse, Marion Harper, Tommy Ammack, Mike Billins, Frank Farabee Rhodes, Mary Bass Nasworthy, Cubbie Louise McCabe Barbara Kendale, Jean Wiseman, and Marvin Rumbolz, vice-president of the Graduate Club.

These people have had individual assignments but have worked together in many activities. They arranged and coordinated dances, fishing trips, movies, lectures, art classes, picnic trips and other events that provided the enjoyment for the Summer school students.

Summer sports schedule, under guidance of Brad Chisson, provides for many sports such as golf, basketball, softball, tennis, swimming, bowling and sailfishboard.

ALIVE AND KICKING—Although the "Big Top" folded last week, FSU's "Flying High" is still alive and kicking. Summer workouts are being held during the summer months in preparation for the circus activities of the year to come

Flambeau Amusements Editor

Well it's been fun trying to be a "columnist" believe me. Thanks for your reactions (those nice or bad).

DOHNANYI CONCERT

In the past I've recommended many different things for you to see. This is one thing that no one should miss. Ernst Dohnanyi and members of the FSU music faculty playing "First Quintet."

It's not everyday that one gets to hear a composer of such renown as Dohnanyi play his own music.

Performing with Dohnanyi is Robert Sedore and Don Michel, violinists; Tom Stone, violist; and Owen Sellars, cellist.

FROM TIE CLASSICS TO FREUD AND MUSIC

Freud and Music? Think that's a weird combination. Evidently isn't because one Dr. Ben Walston, noted psychologist did some interesting Freudian light on the current rock 'n' roll controversy.

It seems that adults who profess anxiety over the new music craze on morals have their own psychological problems.

His comment on Presley is: "Don't think this particularly evil. . . . Just don't see why kids today have decided that this is the kind of music that expresses their frustration."

On Little Richard's version of "Long Tall Sally" he says, "Difficult to make out the words. . . . His use of falsetto presents the kind of problem all adolescents have . . . Bop sparnon to male baritones for instance."

Presley's recording of "I'm Left, You're Right." Well, I am labeled this "a return to naturalism—something all adolescents go for. To get away from the phonies that the adults are immersed in."

He also noted Presley's country and western music. The remark on this "A general tendency of going back to folk music in the last 10 or 15 years."

It seems the trend has a lot to do with an attempt of adolescents to strike some kind of roots in this world.

Walston thinks a study of the "Unconscious" motivations of rock 'n' roll detractors might make an interesting study.

OFF AND ON THE CAMPI . . .

THEATER: Perhaps the greatest challenge to the acting group this summer is "The Silver Cord." The emotions in the play are one to really set the audiences nerves tingling with sheer excitement.

Nancy Colburn, Ron McCall, Sue Crawford, Bruce Ellis and Maureene Bass will give their most outstanding performances this summer.

Not to be omitted are Suzy Saunders the gal who looks "prettier than Kim Novak and can act twice as good and Mary Alice Newton, a good actress who is a whiz with the make-up brush.

Dr. Paul Davee and Dr. Lynn Orr here provided the campus with one of the most interesting summer play seasons here in a long time. Charles I. Reimer has done wonders with the Conradi Stage in transforming the stage area for different scenes.

The dresses that Nancy Cubbon and Maureene Bass wore in "Dangerous Corner" were designed and made by Miss Catherine Murphy.

All in all it's been a very pleasant summer season for theater.

MOVIES: I wish I can say the same for the movies here this summer. There have been some scurvy movies around these parts and there have been some good ones.

Why don't the theaters get some first run movies like "Guys and Dolls" or "The King and I."

If all the movies are like "Congo Crossing," "The Maverick Queen" the theaters might just try something else.

RECORDS: Either its a catchy melody or some people have seen "The Man Who Knew Too Much" or "Que Sera Sera" is getting around. In fact I've heard that a number of times, haven't you."

One number from "My Fair Lady" seems to have got lost in the rush. It's "Wastin' For Henry Higgins." I think its kind of cute. One thing the show might prove. You don't need to sing to put over a good song.

At least Rex Harrison has got plenty of rave reviews for his performance as "Henry Higgins."

On the Classical Side . . . RCA Victor's recording of Ravel's Bolero, Valse, and Debussy's Afternoon of a Faun is a most interesting recording. If you're a fan of either composer then it's worth your while.

Richard Strauss: Sonata for violin and Debussy: Sonata for the violin with Joseph Fuchs and Artur Balsam at piano. Both men face heavy competition on both works but the best movement here is with the Strauss.

The piece is richly romantically melodious, and quite accessible, and Fuchs, while less suave then Heifetz, has modern sound in favor.

In the Debussy he faces both Heifetz and Francescatti in fairly recent versions. This is not an item for the average disk shop.

Home Ec Profs Try New Fabrics In 'Wash' Test

Can you depend on those new fabric slogans "wash and dry" "drip dry" and "dip and don't"?

From fabric tests made at Florida State University Dr. Hazel T. Stevens, head of the Department of Clothing and Textiles has this to say:

"There are three main procedures which are used on fabrics to give them stability during laundering so as to require little or no ironing.

"The most stable types of fabric of this sort seem to be some of those which are made from thermoplastic fibers as nylon, acrylic or polyester fibers. Trade names of some of these fibers are Dupont's "Orlon", Chemstrand's "Acrilan", Dupont's "Dacron", Canadian Tervlene. The first two are acrylic fibers, the latter two are polyester fibers.

Under controlled conditions such as time, temperature and moisture content, these fibers can be given a more or less permanently ironed appearance. When other fibers such as cotton are blended with these fibers the amount of the synthetic should be nearly half the total fiber content to give a reasonable satisfaction as a fabric requiring little or no ironing.

"The other major procedure to give a fabric such as cotton the same qualities of little or no ironing is to add a considerable amount of resin to the fabric as a finish.

In the first type where fiber content is all synthetic and has been given a permanent press finish washing without ironing is apt to be quite successful for the length of the life of the garment, Dr. Stevens said.

"Test applications, however, call for the garment to be "drip dried" time and time is followed.

"If the homemakey wishes to spend this type fabric she may sometimes find it necessary to dip fabric of the garment which she may prefer to be able to remove," Dr. Stevens said, adding

"This may be more trouble to the homemaker than ironing if she has no adequate space for clothes to drip while drying.

In the case of blended fabrics and those given resin finishes to minimize ironing, she said, the garment often needs a light pressing in order to accomplish

"Usually the fabric is considered successful by the manufacturer if it can be washed five times and needs little ironing. As the garment goes through successive washings the ironing usually comes more necessary. However, the garment is much easier to iron and certainly look better during wear than some fabric without these special finishes or blending of fibers."

School Lunch Group Meets

About 900 school lunch personnel gather at Florida State University Monday, July 30, for a four-day training program.

Sponsored by the State Department of Education the program will bring together representatives from 60 counties in the state among approximately 5,000 workers in Florida school lunch programs.

The staff will include representatives from the departments FSU county school lunch program and the State Board of Health and social assists scheduled for spots on the program School Supt. Thomas D. Bailey, Vice-President A. B. Martin of FSU and Miss Evelyn Terrell of Baton Rouge, president-elect of the American School Food Service Association.

On Tuesday evening there will be a meetins of the school lunch people's professional organization, the Florida School Food Service Association.

GEOLOGIST CRUISES—John McMurry, associate professor of Geography at FSU checks the 30 foot mast of the sloop Elway which was damaged during a sudden squall. (Cse Story)

Prof Classifies Coast; Cruises Form Study

Months of cruising by a college professor in a 26-foot sailboat have added a volume of detailed information about the Gulf Coast shoreline between Panama City and Cedar Keys.

Dr. John H. McMurry, associate professor of geography at Florida State University, has now submitted a report to the Office of Naval Research on his two years research project classifying the Northern Gulf coastal area.

Not with additional aid from the ONR which has sponsored the research, he is ready to start a southern extension of the project—from Cedar Keys down to the Florida Keys.

The professor in his sailing sloop, sometimes with a student assistant or two, has been a familiar sight—and occasionally a matter of curiosity—along the coast. He has put out on an average of three or four days a week, winter and summer, to pursue the project.

Sometimes as he landed the craft and started a surveying operation inland he would encounter such questions from curious spectators as "Looking for oil?" or "Exploring for uranium?"

Actually Dr McMurry's project is concerned with such formations as beaches, marshes, the drainage, the gradient, the lakes and rivers.

Offshore—and he goes out to about 18 miles from land—he takes bottom samplings to determine the character of the sea floor. Every sample is carefully analyzed in a laboratory

Dr. McMurry is even able to cruise up some of the rivers in his sail boat—which has an auxiliary 22 HP motor. His field of study includes the shore zone of the Gulf a strip which extends inland anywhere from one to sometimes as or seven miles.

To examine inland terrain the geographer puts into use a jeep which has traveled 30,000 miles on the project. It sows a small boat, used on shallow inland waters.

Although the project is concerned only with the physical layout of the shore and offshore, the economic potential of areas is kept in mind

Dr. McMurry says he thinks most of the area so far surveyed is one which typically has not been put into profitable use—has a vast future recreationally and for commercial fishing.

"I've been sole to test some of the fishing myself, since on our trips we're sometimes out two or three days at a time," he said "Our catches have helped quite a bit with the grocery bill."

But it is not always a picnic aboard the sloop Elway. A few days ago a sudden summer squall came up and snapped her 30 foot mast which has been in port at Newport while Dr. McMurry built a new one of cypress.

The boat was built by an 82-year-old friend of McMurry's, a retired Great Lakes boat captain named Ed Lutway. That's where it got its name. Elway was Built on the short of upper Lake Michigan, the boat was brought 1400 miles to Tallahassee aboard an old Pierce-Arrow chassis.

"Can't Change A Man No-Ways" Says Marjorie Rawlings Story

Dr. Reaver Reads Florida Short Story At English 'Hour'

"You can't change a man noways . . ." was the lesson taught in Marjorie Keenan Rawling's short story. "Benny and the Bird-dogs," which was reviewed Wednesday by Dr. Russell Reaver.

The audience settled down comfortably in their chairs for an entertaining hour of listening to the amusing story, which is based on a backwoods Florida background. The story was told as if narrated by a woman. She began by enumerating some of the endless eccentricities of the male species, but philosophized with the understanding and cynicism of experience that there wasn't a "woman born who could change a man anowe."

She tried to point out this truth in a friend of hers who was impulsively married to the town character, Uncle Benny. He called his wife "Old Hen," because she quarreled for thirty years before discovering the truth for herself.

Then, said the narrator "she was as bewildered as a cow who tried to turn over a high fence and see what's on the other side. She was bornwassaided."

UNCLE BENNY

Uncle Benny was constable at Oak Bluff, Florida, and the surrounding countryside. He was little and quick—didn't move he declared "like a man who had iron," except for little white tufts of hair behind his ears and his twinkling blue eyes, he had a marvelous resemblance to a billy-goat.

Driving like a bat out of hell, Uncle Benny was used to scoot around the country in his Model-T Ford. Sometimes in his absence, penned by his best friend. Doc, who sold patent medicines, but who he was accompanied by his seven bird dogs, who with sober dignity occupied the back seat.

Although Ben's wanderlust was Old Hen's main battle-cry he constantly obliged by furnishing her new grievances.

Her instance as Old Hen claimed, "Every beast or varmint we've brought home he's ast us aught to cut the fool as bad as you do!"

Ben rarely scared me half witted when I found that possum hanging upside down in my pantry. He warned the coon not to peer the cage on my syrup cans, and now we've bought those infernal bird-dogs to rock in my best front porch rockers! A man can't keep at night for the hass!"

Ben's eyes twinkled, then with the mattered tones of the persecuted he replied, "You see! You know I would me and my dogs is not starving home then when we do, you ain't willing to leave us Comrade!"

THE CRISIS

One of Uncle Benny's tricks backfired on him and caused a sort of crisis in his life He had trained Doc into believing his claim that his Model-T could drive itself, then embarrassed him by proving it wasn't so.

Later, Doc tried to get revenge by convincing the people that while Ben was away on a trip he had gone "cold-out Christ," was taken to Chattahoochee, then broke out.

Unfortunately, Doc dropped a hint that since Benny was wildly beating toward town, mayhap he was in literal the community and they ought to erect a barricade.

It would take more than a chicken wire barricade to slow Benny's coming, instead of stopping he drove right into it, then he and the car tumbled up and over the barricade and landed in the celebrated bird dogs over three counties.

The accident didn't kill Benny but it did scare a confession and an end to his new loyalty from Doc As well as bruising out all the sweetness in Old Ben's nature and generally soured him on existence. Doc's friend who always expected bad luck happened and Benny had gotten out of it alive.

AUTHOR AND REVIEWER

This story is one of many which Marjorie Keenan Rawlings wrote of Florida people and backwoods Florida life. Her most famous story is the novel, The Yearling which received the Pulitzer Prize in 1938.

Dr. Reaver, who read the selection, is an Associate Professor of English here at FSU. A specialist in American and American folklore, he has published several articles, wrote Emerson as Mythmaker and a new growing for publication a test, Fundamentals of Folk Literature.

Currently, he is completing a collection of Florida folk tales and legends and continuing research started with his first book on Emerson.

BENNY AND THE BIRD DOGS furnished Dr. Reaver, right, with whimsical material for a reading at this week's Book Review and Tea. Dr R R Oglesby is shown discussing the book with Dr. Reaver.

Frosh To Frolic Tonight In Annual Talent Exhibition

Freshman Talent Nite Slated In Westcott Hall At 7:15, 8:45

Two presentations of the annual Freshman Talent Night will be given this evening in Westcott Auditorium, the first at 7:15 and the second at 8:45.

Chairman Jim Soles said enthusiastic freshmen cooperation "has enabled us to put together a show that we think will be the best yet."

He said almost three dozen acts out, a number he said was more than twice as many as last year."

Soles requested spectatorsmanship and the second performance so that the freshmen, at least get to see the show. It's their show and its sponsored primarily for them."

Master of Ceremonies for the show will be Marshall Lawhon. Lloyd Duhoff will emcee the second. Both were among 18 freshmen who tried out for MC roles. Soles said.

The chairman promised a "ripping show—something that has actually even Elvis Presley moved."

Also on the program for the performance are acts ranging from operatic solos to popular song and dance numbers and accordion

Performers who will take part on the first show are Carrie Lee Hunter, Miami; Diana Harris-Miami; Sandi Bestind, Miami; Ruth McLester, Ft. Lauderdale; Joe Fast, St. Petersburg; Anna Leto and Pedora Lewis, Hamden, Ned Willis, Milton; Becker, Richard Wavro, Jacksonville; and Dennis Smith, Jacksonville.

Miss Leto and Miss Lewis, billed as the "Red Wing Group," a comedy song act, will appear in both shows.

Also on the second performance will be Willie Becker, Wavro, Fast and Miss Bestind. Additional performers slated for the second show are Nancy Gross, Bradenton, Kay Hufford, Tampa, Betty Lovan, Jacksonville, Ailey Mathews, Miami; and Carolyn Elridge, Daytona Beach.

'SLUDGE' GETS SERVED BY FROSH

(L-R) Evelyn Poulos, Bud Williams, Virginia Kirkland, George Carpenter.

Rat And Sludge: Classes Pitted In Mortal Struggle

By NANCY GENE BROWN

"Rats" by the hundreds are crawling around campus in deathly fear of some unknown, formless mass known as the Sludge Squad.

The Sludge Squad is a crew of 150 sophomore and junior men organized to round up Frosh offenders. They roam the campus with black identification cards bearing the letter S, and are the dread of every newcomer to campus (veterans, transfers, and mature students excluded).

These are the drastic crimes for which freshmen can be pounced upon and sent to Rat Court: not wearing rat caps, not knowing songs and cheers, not speaking to all upperclassmen, and not knowing correct definitions of a rat and of an upperclassman.

The Court

The austere panel of Justices which faces the frightened frosh is composed of Chief Justice Bea Kanady, Chuck Schwenk, Giner; Ritchie, Cecil Dunn and Victor Harke. Court is to be held in the Music Amphitheater (Lonnure Auditorium if it rains) beginning at 7:30 on Friday, and again the following Wednesday night.

Upon conviction, the punishment may be an extemporaneous speech, a silly stunt, or the wearing of a bulky sandwich sign, Kansky said.

Capping off Rat activities will be the Soph-Frosh Field Day, to be held beginning at 1 p.m. October 6 on the band practice field by West Hall, with Wiley Pond in charge of organizing the fray.

At the Frosh loss, the penalty is wearing rat caps an additional week.

Concentrated Meanness

There was a gleam in the eye of Chief Justice Kansky as he called the rat period an effort to "concentrate our meanness into a small space.

"From what I've seen of the class in general," said Kansky, "there's a tremendous amount of enthusiasm among the sophomores because the rat period last year was such a dud we can't help but expect that situation on last year's sophomores. "We believe that all the girls will come" he continued. "They'll seem to be good sports about it. However, should they fail to attend, we will request the help of Sophomore Council."

The Sludge Squad is for boys. No force will be allowed however, as the Council's conventions had feelings, Kansky said.

In uraing all upperclassmen to participate, he added, "The drive is for school spirit. We're not going to drag this thing out."

Manager Sees No Big Price Hikes; Has Student Jobs

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

The Florida State University Food Service has been leased for an undisclosed sum to a commercial cafeteria chain.

Morrison's Food Services, Inc., part of the Morrison Cafeteria enterprise, assumed operation of the Seminole Club, Student Center, Sods Shop, and West Hall snack bar September 1.

Richard Preston, director, said no major price hikes have been or will be put into effect except where food portions are made larger.

The Seminole dining hall will still be run on the cafeteria plan, he explained, with the Student Center, because of a lack of space, will remain on the plate dinner system. An expansion of the West Hall snack bar menu is contemplated.

The food service, while operated directly by the university, was long the object of Student Senate criticism. Senators contended the cafeterias were operated only for profit.

According to Preston, however, the firm will run at a loss. Objects of the FSU-Morrison's contract, he said, is to provide student food at cost to make money for the university and the community.

Other Schools

He said there are about eight colleges where his services are run by his firm, including Stetson University, DeLand.

Dr Doak S. Campbell, FSU president, said the Florida Foundation no stipulation was demanded by the university as to what prices could be charged, Campbell. He added, however, that to make any profit Morrison's will have to earn and keep good will among the student body.

Dr Campbell said turning the operation of the cafeterias over to a commercial organization had been under consideration and study for "several years."

Preston said that about 25 or 30 students have been hired so far, but that he would like to hire "many more."

Returning student employees of the FSU cafeteria food service came in large numbers last week to fill jobs made to assure them, the director said, added that interviews will be given all applicants.

Preston said some jobs formerly held by students have been eliminated, particularly those which involved adding up the checks for the cashiers. This operation has been consolidated with Sun boys will still be full-time employees.

Pay rate for student employees, Preston said, will be 75 cents an hour, paid in the form of meals except in student supervisors, who receive cash.

An effort was made to keep all full-time personnel who wanted to stay, he said. The company's traveling supervisors and a chef are among those on the dining hall staff, Preston commented.

The top officials of the university's food system left for other jobs, however, Miss Anna Belle Clyde, former food service director is now at Columbia University in a similar capacity. Ben Adams, dining hall manager, is business manager of the U. S. Veterans tuberculosis hospital in Tallahassee

NEW STUDENTS ATTEND DINNER

Approximately 500 new students from freshmen through graduate students, attended a turkey supper at the Tally-Ho Hall, Episcopal Parish-on-the-Campus, Sunday evening. Seated at tables set throughout the center, the students were served by the Parish Vestry and upperclass committee members.

Food Services Leased To Commercial Firm

Varied Menus, Gourmet Reports, Please Students

By BOB SIMMONS

Things aren't like they used to be with the university hungry students, pasting their contented stomachs, mutter in happy agreement.

What's it all about? Everyone's talking about the kinds that have been taking place since Morrison's Food Service took over management of the campus eating places.

Upperclassmen are quick to notice the difference. One senior who claims he usually tries to stay away from the campus cafeteria has yielded to the temptation of the new foods. He now frequents the food lines and smilingly admits that there's a definite improvement.

Some students commented on the increased patronage of the different food facilities. A university photographer who is always in a hurry fretted because the lines seemed longer, evidently due to the fact that more people are eating on campus.

"The lines just don't move fast enough for a hungry freshman" wailed Raye Rhodes, a Miami frosh.

Praise Variety

In spite of the length of the lines, this writer found the food to be well worth waiting for. As one views the food from the cafeteria line he can hardly help but notice the improvements. Jack Taylor, an outspoken West Hall resident, quickly pointed out the food display and adds that he thinks that the variety has improved

One of the novelties of the food line is the array of salads. They be of great, eyes, confusing university students who seemingly haven't seen the likes of varied feeds on the campus before. The salads are fresher than before. Commented and editmer at FSU.

Likes Service

Upon hearing rumors of the changes brought about by new management, Bill Kind, who maintains he gave up eating food at the campus cafeteria long ago, exclaimed "I don't believe it."

The quality of the food isn't the only thing that has been improved. Silver and silverware have been added much to the delight of meticulous assistants in the new setup. The metal spork, though admittedly clean before, "look clean" according to upperclassman Leo Tiernan.

Fueled Diner

Students generally agree with their victuals chatter happily about the food they've got somewhat worked up over. A piece of pie which he emphatically announced was a "super duper piece of pie for the money" was before.

All in all, eating on campus is now an exciting experience. Students are looking forward menus for weeks in advance. Even they may speculate on the goodies to be offered. It doesn't look as if the campus residents will complain about that. The change is a pleasure.

'South Pacific' Tryouts Called For Next Week

Tryouts for the Light Opera Guild's December production of South Pacific will be held next Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Dr. Robert L. Bristol, director, said 39 roles are available in the Rodgers and Hammerstein Broadway hit show, which will be given December 7 and 8 in Westcott Auditorium.

"Although there are limited numbers in the roles which are sung by members of the ensemble much of the music is performed in small and large groups. Therefore, there is no actual threat to the usual operetta fashion. Instead, each member of the cast will have an individual identity." Dr. Briggs explained.

Tryouts will be held in Opperman Music Hall, beginning at 7:30 each night.

Principal roles include those of Nellie Forbush, first sung by Mary Martin, and that of Emile de Becque played by Enio Pinza in the Broadway show.

Other principal roles are those of Luther Billis, a seabee premier; Ngana, native lieutenant; Cable, Navy captain; Bloody Mary, native woman; Liat, a native girl; sailors, seabees, and others.

The age of the cast, Bristol said, should be taken by someone who has dance experience. A majority of the show's parts are for men, he said, requesting a large male turnout at the tryouts.

Well-known tunes include "Cockeyed Optimist," "Some Enchanted Evening. There is No

First Band Show

'Meet The Band' Set Saturday Night

The Marching Chiefs, under the direction of Manley R. Whitcomb will present their first show of the year during halftime at the FSU University game Saturday night.

The 1:30 show will be a type of introduction to the band and the story of how the band was formed, Whitcomb said. It will begin with "Meet The Band," followed by the FSU Fight Song. An Indian tempo number will be presented and the band will march to the tune of "Down The Field," "Huff and Puff" and "You Gotta Be A Football Hero." All these medley will be under the direction of the show, the Marching Chiefs will leave the field to the music of the Fight Song.

The Marching Chiefs 1956 version consists of 148 members who were selected from a group of 180 students who tried out. The number of members chosen is based on the traveling party and out-of-town trips, Whitcomb said. There will be 112 in the Marching band this year, with the majorettes, managers, and flag-bearers making the other 36 salary members.

Out-of-town trips on tap for the coming year are the trip to Philadelphia on October 27 with the Rice football game, followed by a trip to Miami the following weekend for the Miami game.

According to Whitcomb, this year will be a good one for the Marching Chiefs, as there are over 100 upperclassmen back, together with a "very select" group of freshmen, as well as the new student leaders of the Marching Chiefs this year are Tony Swain, drum major; Jackie Hasley, drum majorette Pat Stewart, president of Kappa Kappa Psi, national band fraternity; Charlotte Abney, president of Tau Beta Sigma, national band sorority; Phil Posey, band manager; Carol Tripening, band secretary; and Miss Abney, sectionals making the other 36 salary members.

Campus Radio Station Calls For Auditions

Auditions will be held tomorrow evening at campus radio station WFSU-FM for freshmen and upperclassmen who would be interested in announcers' positions, according to Roy Flynn, director.

Broadcasts are to begin Monday morning. A tentative program builder includes music from 7 to 8:30 a.m Monday through Friday, and a varied program from 2 to 10 p.m seven days a week.

In the latter period, Flynn said are tapes from the National Association of Educational Broadcasters, French Broadcasting Program, and British Broadcasting Corporation, as well as locally-produced programs of classical and semi-classical music.

Announcers, Flynn said, will mostly be students.

Tomorrow's auditions will be held from 8 a.m. to noon in the Music Buildings basement studios. Those who cannot come between these times may make an appointment, Flynn added.

Announcers selected from auditions will be given training in the use of the station's equipment and helped in setting their thing class operators' permits from the Federal Communications Commission, Flynn said.

Wesley Slates Seven Courses

Seven courses on religion will be taught at the Wesley Foundation, 703 W-est Jefferson Street, this year, officers of the Methodist student group announced yesterday.

They will be taught by university professors using textbooks but will not carry academic credit, Jim Whitcomb said. Each is to begin at 9:30 Sunday mornings, starting this coming Sunday.

Courses and professors are as follows: "Old Testament: Content and Values" Dr. Thomas R Lewis. "New Testament: Life and Teachings of Jesus," Dr. Reid Montgomery. "New Testament, Paul, The Man and His Work" Dr. A B. Martin, FSU vice-president; "Christian Beliefs" Dr. David Stubbs; "The Meaning of Methodism," Dr. Ralph V. Pfiffer, and "Comparative Religions," Mrs. Gregg Pfiffer.

Fraternity Rushing Starts Friday

Organized fraternity rush week begins with open houses Friday from 7 to 11 p.m.

According to Paul Orr, secretary of IFC, all rushees must register for rushing by 5 p.m. tomorrow either in fraternity advisor's office at Commons or in the office of the dean of the women's gyms.

Also in order to be eligible for pledging during the regular period on Oct. 4, all rushees must visit each house.

Films In Seven Languages Set By FSU Club

Movies from seven foreign countries have been scheduled for campus presentation this year by the Florida State University Film Club, Dr. Gonzalo Lemon, vice-president, announced yesterday.

Admissions are by season tickets only, which cost $2.50, and may be bought in the Westcott Ticket Office Films will be shown in the Demonstration School auditorium alternate Thursdays beginning September 11, at 6:30 and 8:40 p.m. each time

Foreign language films all have English subtitles, Dr. Lemon said.

Opening the season will be "The Adventures of Marshal Bruno" with Aldo Guineas as a young rogue promoting himself to election as Marshal. On October 25, Pierre Preasey appears in the French film, "Monsieur Vincent," the story of the life of a priest who devoted his life to the poor.

November 8 is Dixie Child of Mau, Italian, will be shown, followed on January 10 by House of Pleasure, a French picture based upon three of Guy de Maupassant's short stories. "The Maid," "The Model" and "The House of Madame Tellier."

February 14 is the date for Brief Interlude, a Swedish work about a ballet dancer's secret summer romance, containing scenes from Tchaikovsky's "Swan Lake."

A screenplay from a work by the well-known Italian writer, Curzio Malaparte, Strange Deception, will be shown February 28.

On succeeding showings will be Carrie, French, March 14; Hotel General, Russian, April 11; The Strange One, French, April 25, and The Bells of St. Trinian's, English comedy about girls at a boarding school, May 9.

Dr. Lemon advised all students to purchase season tickets additional them to the 8:30 p.m. showings as that type would not have to leave before the end of a long picture. The either kind may be ordered by campus mail from Box 8085.

'TALLY-HO' NOT OUT ON TIME

Copies of the 1956 Tally-Ho, expected last week have not yet arrived, dut to an "unavoidable delay," current editor Barbara Avala announced yesterday.

She said the books will be distributed as soon as they arrive. Copies are to be mailed to seniors who graduated in May and to undergraduates who said they would not return this fall.

Distribution of Tally-Ho's to returning students will be done in the men's lounge of Lonnure Building. Miss Ayala said. First call on the annuals will be students who had their portraits made or who registered to receive a copy. Surplus books will then be given out on a first-come, first-served basis to students who were neither photographed nor registered, the editor explained

Because the student activity fee does not provide funds enough to print a book for each student, Miss Ayala said, this year one must either have his picture taken for a copy or pay a one dollar registration fee in advance to get a copy.

She said portraits will be taken by a New York firm specializing in yearbook photography and that work will begin mid-October.

Miss Ayala called a meeting for new students interested in working on the Tally-Ho Thursday at 5 p.m. in the student lounge, Longnure Basement. A meeting of the returning staff is set for 7 p.m. tonight.

OFFICIAL NOTICE

Students scheduled to intern second semester should get application forms from the Internship Office, 204 Education, immediately. Full out according to instructions so they can be filed in the office by 5 p.m., Monday, October 1. Students whose names are on the second semester internship list will be removed from the list of active applicants for that or a subsequent semester unless deferment is approved by the Director of Internship.

Locker Foreign Student Group Board Member

Marie Locker, sophomore from Canada representing Florida State University, was elected to the executive board of the Conference on Foreign Student Affairs, which met in Chicago last month.

Dave Bachman, student body president, attended the National Student Body Presidents' Conference's short session. The Mass. Both sessions took place on the University of Chicago campus

Miss Locker said 70 foreign students from schools all over the country discussed common problems during the second annual three-day meet. Among speakers heard were Harry Lund, former president, United Nations Technical Assistance Association; Moses Hirschtritt chief, Cultural Exchange, Department Exchange Service State Department; Ivan J. Putnam Jr., former student body president, the University of Florida and James J. Harris director of the 1956 Foreign Student Leadership Project.

Putnam discussed "Standards for Foreign Student Programming."

Bachman, who said attendance at his meeting showed FSU's student government is well-organized and relatively free of control in comparison to others, commented that Miss Locker's election to the executive board of the conference placed FSU "high up" in the international student program.

Freshmen Forbidden Cars; Parking Rules Tightened

University officials this summer put into effect a sweeping ban on freshman cars and a revised campus parking situation.

In an effort to halt a surging traffic problem due to an overflow of cars at Florida State University, the incoming Freshmen were prohibited from bringing their cars, with certain exceptions. Harry Agnew, director of Service Units, said Freshmen who were allowed to bring cars were married students, those 21 years of age, commuters, Tallahassee students living with parents, and those rooming in Tallahassee living more than four blocks from the campus.

This year is the first time a Freshman car ban has been in effect. Last year the Student Senate, after a study recommended that cars be banned for some students, but said that the prohibition should be based on grades instead of class.

Following up the limitation of parking zones and stickers last year, officials put into effect this year a revised set-up which imposed stricter limitations on student parking on the campus.

Day and night parking zones and the gold car registration stickers this year, will be allowed exclusive usage of the Music Building parking lot, the lot in the Infirmary, School of Journalism area, a lot behind the new Library, the School of Business lot and the road behind the General Classroom Building. Faculty and staff student garnet and gold stickers will be limited to those living outside a designated area encircling the campus.

Blue and white stickers will be given to students and staff not listed in the General

Frosh Could Be Proud

This year's Freshman Class might well be proud of itself.

It will go down into history as the first one in recent years to pass Entrance Requirements other than high school degree. Those who are here on campus, therefore, might well congratulate themselves for making the grade.

Admittedly, the grade wasn't too steep. It was established by the Board of Control (the state agency which handles that sort of thing) back in March when at a special meeting it decided to standardize entrance requirements for Florida's three state universities—FSU, University of Florida and Florida Agricultural and Mechanical:

The new rules stipulated that the scores made on state high school Senior tests in Florida in 1954 would become the standard for the 1956 class at those state universities. Those who applied for admission would have to have made grades equal to or higher than those made by the lowest eight percent of the 1954 classes.

So the Freshman can say they safely passed this barrier.

The new requirement did cause minor consternation at the University of Florida a short time ago when a couple of young men who were interested in playing football were denied admittance because they failed to make grade. Their loss was bemoaned by football officials. The new rule, set up to help bar Negroes from white universities, had annoyingly boomeranged and struck instead at a subject viewed with something akin to reverance—football.

Upperclassmen can afford to look on these newfangled standards without worry. They know the real test lies with the coming examinations—the ones which will be administered the Freshmen off and on for the next four years.

Which is why the Freshman might do better if he didn't congratulate himself. He could save that chore for four years hence, and if he could say then he had "passed the test," why that, sir, would be a real reason for plaudits.

Solution To Violence

It has been educational to watch the shameful violence that has occurred recently in Clinton and Oliver Springs, Tennessee, in Sturgis, Kentucky and in Texarkana, Texas.

These integration-inspired uprisings were educational not because they show what happens when change is initiated, but because they demonstrate quite clearly the kind of person who participates in mob action.

Were these civilized persons who savagely beat nawsmen and reporters because of the fact they were telling the nation of the happenings at the trouble spots? Were these thinking humans who were willing to sacrifice personal honor and integrity for the dubious privilege of running in packs?

It is difficult to believe that seven Negro children can symbolize a nameless, shapeless force of evil, a terror so great that women will join frothing mobs, the law will be regarded with loathing and one's own children will turn against him from a school whose benefit they must have to become socially prepared.

Yet the dislike of publicity shown by members of the mobs prove they belong to a breed of man which delights in joining such facistic groups as the Ku Klux Klan, where their hate-filled faces can be hidden behind masks or other disguises. There are many of these people now and their role is written into the pages of history: they gloated as Christians were fed to wild beasts; they cursed senile women who were burned as witches in Salem; they stood by as children were hanged in 18th Century England for petty crimes; they murdered six million European Jews within our own generation.

We cannot legislate understanding into people, he who has not respect for law cannot be ordered to respect it.

But we need let no one light the fuses. Once cannot shout fire in a crowded theatre; similarly, the professional agitators, the Asa Carters, Leonard Wilsons of Tuscaloosa, Alabama and John Kasper need not be allowed to pray on the troubled sentiments existing in these difficult times.

If it means the National Guard, then that must be accepted. It was proven in Tennessee that segregation is not so effective that Essenhower could refuse to assist the mobs. Their uniforms did not make the difference. What counted was that thinking people valued law and order above hysterical mobs.

By maintaining the rule of law, the future may be looked at with optimism rather than with fear.

Party Of The Future?

When Republicans from across the nation gathered in San Francisco in August, the unrepressible James Reston of the New York Times Co. wrote—

"There are now three major questions before the delegates at the Republican National Convention.

"1. Will they have a dinner at Omar Khayyam's on O'Farrell street or at Trader Vic's on Cosmo place?

"2. Will they be solvent and in good health next Friday after all the food?

"3. Will Harold Stassen get out town alive?"

History does not record the answer to the first of these queries, but it is likely that the Republicans' dilemma was solved by the simple expedient of dining at both places. Nor is there a definite answer to the second query, though the proceedings were livened by at least one mammoth champagne party—which might indicate a negative reply for some of the delegates.

But the third question—that one is more than humorous. For Stassen, who was almost the Republican Party's conscience, played a bitter and humiliating role in the San Francisco gabfest.

In his struggle to de-horse the Negative Nixon, Stassen was met with roadblocks and frustration at every turn. As did many Republicans, he declared that Nixon's manner of action—described as taking the low road—would hurt the party's chances in the 1956 Presidential election.

They know the American people will remember it was Nixon who charged the Democrats with 20 years of treason and accuses the Democratic Party of treacherous conduct. Political smears are not unknown, but few have the audacity in make such outrageous statements about a national party whose membership includes over half the voters of the United States and whose membership only a few years ago carried us safely through the rigors of a terrible world war.

Stassen cannot be considered merely a political hack. He has been jousting at images of a mistaken imagination. It is a cold, harsh fact that Nixon's strictly negative and destructive campaigning, his record of association with McCarthy and other undesirables, and his failure to show a positive attitude spell out unpopularity with the American voter.

Consequently, it is a telling indictment against the Republican Party, the ramrodded the renomination of this man—a man who by virtue of his prominent position will emerge as the leader of the party whether Eisenhower is elected or not. As the heir apparent to the first lame duck president, Nixon will be a shoo-in for the 1960 nomination if Eisenhower wins, if he loses, Nixon automatically gains control.

It is a long count against Eisenhower that he accepted complacently the nomination of this man. Perhaps, as the breakfast of eggs, milk, toast, grits and several

The next six days passed in rapid succession. Attended the different schools and demonstrations, plus taking a few field trips, the mid-point of the training arrived. The middle weekend.

Elvis Rocks, Rolls To Summer Fame

By MARTIN DUCKMAN

Despite the Bon Carai, the Chicago and San Francisco conventions, and Clinton, Tenn., this will still be remembered as the Summer of Elvis Presley.

Presley himself is not unusual—the average juke box contains at least fifteen performers as bad as he. But his effect . . . oh boy!

WHEN THIS character, complete with several Lincoln Continentals, appeared in St. Petersburg this summer it took forty policemen to restrain his admirers.

Teenage girls were writhing in hysteria. So were a few women who should have been knitting clothes for their grandchildren.

The best comment on their conduct was voiced by a policeman who had just consoled a girl of about 14. She ran away shrieking. "I can't stand it. I can't stand it."

"I can't stand it either," snapped the officer of the law, but I'm not crying about it."

THEY SAY that in Tampa and Miami it was worse, and Life Magazine declared that Presley was threatened with a jail sentence in Jacksonville if he didn't watch his step.

Among the many adults chortling that he should be shot or jailed or sent to drive the Russians crazy are a few who bewitch back to Hollywood Valley, and after him, Frank Sinatra.

It was the same, these veterans of a life's turbulence remind us. Chris Columbo and Sinatra stalked the microphone, once tried to tear his clothes. He had the same effect as Presley's in a different age.

But Presley — his manner is undisputed. He bumps. He grinds. He devised a clever strip tease with his jacket. His approach to the mike is like the beach scene in From Here to Eternity. And more.

Anyone who doubts the relation of Presley's suggestive gestures to his popularity should watch one of his younger audiences. Compared to the wriggle, the louder the shrieking.

BUT PRESLEY does not, I think, have a permanently damning effect on any youngster nor does Rock n Roll itself, innumerable police officers' opinions to the contrary notwithstanding. Of casual significance is that if much in Presley and Rock'n'Roll, but no more than at the corner malted, no more than the undraped actresses on TV, no more than in the average newspaper's lurid and overplayed accounts of rape.

They like Presley because he's different. They cheer his crude, undignified and unjustly thrashings not because such are worth cheering but because they're willing to do something considered outrageous.

Rock'n'Roll, with all its essential sex, is after all effect not a cause of anything.

WE'VE GIVEN the teenagers a world for can't-wisely cope with. Go to college To heck with the cost. Drive a car. Be a big man. Spillane Television Bigness War. The atom bomb. Cost of living so high one can't easily marry young without living in poverty. A world that forces, through frustration, young people into doing things the old fuss reiects them for. Prominent among the frustrations is delaying marrying and divorcing frequently. But let two kids get intimate?

And we blame them for Presley and Rock'n'Roll?

Student Describes Summer Training

JEROME BERNSTEIN

The buck sounded. Slowly the purple haze of dawn appeared to life. A voice gently called "ALL RIGHT YOU GUYS, FALL OUT".

Thus the men, many of them students at FSU, of the 4452nd Engr. Bn., arose to their first day of duty. The first day of an extensive two week tour of training and drill at Ft. Benning, Georgia.

Chow Breakfast was served at 0600 hours. Between mouthfuls of jubilation over the hour, standing in line (the only thing Army can't do) the men ate a breakfast of eggs, milk, toast, grits and cereal.

in the battalion, it meant a quick trip home to Tallahassee. For students it meant free time to spend in Columbus or the service club on post. But to the select few it meant weekend duty.

Second Week

Slowly the minds of the barracks sprang to life. A voice said, "ALL RIGHT YOU GUYS, FALL OUT!" The time was 0600 hours. The place, the 4892nd Engr. Bn., Fort Benning, Georgia.

Alert and full of the pep and go that only a good week of Army training can give a man, the battalion roused itself for Operation Bridge Building.

The orders for the second week called for a two day bivouac under tactical conditions. They further called for the building of a footbridge 200 feet long over a body of water six feet in depth.

The pulmps had been installed and the capping begun when the battalion quit work on the bridge for the day. Ahead was a night in the field, for most men their experience. For others old stuff.

Enemy forces has been reported and all was quiet. The 2000 hours scouting parties were ordered out on the recess. Guards which had been posted during the day were relieved.

At 0700 hours the next morning the bridge was completed. In the afternoon enemy helicopters bombed the bridge, but it was finished. Slowly the bridge took shape. At 1600 hours Thursday, mission was accomplished.

Friday came with a climax. With an inspection of the bridge to be held in the morning, the men were ordered to promise of a parade the men were almost ready to go home. All this would mean hours of turning in of field equipment and getting set for

Last Day

"ALL RIGHT YOU GUYS, FALL OUT!" Men were up early in a happy mood, even with the early hour and the waiting in line. As the men returned to the barracks, word spread that a battalion party was to be held that morning. The Army had come through. Yep! A G.I. Party.

Picnic Notes

New students may have mistaken for irreverence the loud guffaws of upperclassmen during the showing of "Clarke and Gold Sketches" at the picnic Saturday night.

This is not so. It was just that the upperclassmen recognized the picture as of another vintage.

Even the freshmen caught some clues, however. It was amusing to see on the screen a lake full of happily swimming students, a hike 100 yards away stood a dark another 100 yards from water.

Then Florida Hall was referred to as "a new men's dormitory" which it was, four years ago. And the band has had new uniforms for three years.

A Year's Beginning Review Of FSU

By OSCAR JOHNSON

THERE ARE many ways to start off a year, but perhaps the most unusual is with a review of what happened during the year. Here, then, is the history of the year 1956-57 at Florida State University as viewed through the jaundiced eye of prediction:

It started calmly enough. A record number of students enrolled. Since this was the usual thing, President Doak S. Campbell pulled the same statement he had used last year out of the files: the usual "encouraging enrollment" with prediction of Dire Distress.

A CREW was set to work revising the report to the Legislature, asking for increased millions in light of the enrollment increase.

University officials refused to comment on the fact no Negroes had applied for admission.

The football team won its first game of the season. Five students and a peanut salesman were injured in riots in the stands as townspeople began calling for better supervision.

Price of crew cuts went up to $1.35 "Ivy League" style was expanded to include bushy hair, but three barbers still had to drop out of school due to the high cost of living.

A car clobbered historic Westcott Gate, putting an end to the ten-minute traffic jams there and paving each period change.

A freshman was found sleeping in his Biology 101 class.

The Music Building began to sink underground.

Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce revealed plans to convert College Avenue into a ski slope during the winter.

THE FOOTBALL team won its second game, Hot dog concessionaires had record sales. Attendance began falling off as "socialism".

University officials refused to comment on the fact no Negroes had applied for admission.

The students expelled from school following first Rat Cap Riot.

Dean of Women reported no of students had been seen wearing Bermuda shorts since fire, week of classes.

"Pantyraid" rumors had a new label when 1500 girls disrupted Tuesday drills in an ROTC raid.

An all-freshman was elected Freshman Class President.

Officials refused to comment on rumors all students' cars will be banned.

Buster Lowry photographed north of Mason-Dixon line.

FSU skindivers club formed to explore Andrew Dora.

Twenty students deny they are on Dean's List.

Fred Kent began to talk about "communists."

Football team won its third game. School officials began drafting report for Legislature asking more money and land.

STUDENT MOVEMENT got underway to get Bill Haley and the band on campus for concert.

Football team won fourth, fifth and sixth games Officials hinted Notre Dame would be on schedule next year.

Exams began. University Dining Hall was used to house overflow of patients from University Infirmary.

Football team accepted bowl bid. Plans made to take circus, pep team, band, University Chaplain, and, if possible, West Hall.

Board of Control announces Law School for FSU would be "desirable".

Male off-campus housing facilities termed "deplorable".

Dean of Women reveals plans to make Bermudas ban constitutional amendment.

Second semester begins. University officials refuse to comment on rumor Claude Pepper would speak on English Colloquium.

Campus awakes one morning to find a foot of snow on building, streets and sidewalks.

Basketball team finishes season with "keep the nose clean" FSU's biggest. From Debate team goes over Kenton or Haley should play?

Dean of Women calls Bermudas "deplorable."

University officials refuse to comment on rumors FSU is going to dorm.

Flambeau told "enough is enough."

Senate disbands, says whole thing is a mess.

Rumor ends University officials don't have to worry about enrolling any more.

Little Election Interest

By JIMMY SOLES

Only two out of five college students eligible to vote for the first time in the coming presidential election plan to do so according to a survey recently conducted by the Gilbert Youth Research organization. Other portions of the survey disclosed that 24 percent of the students queried didn't make up their minds concerning a party preference, and 24 per cent indicated zero interest in the whole affair. The Kent University Times, Ohio, has recently been engaged in the business of selecting a new university president. According to their university constitution the faculty of the university selects the three candidates for the position and the Board of Regents then selects the president from this group. Such a method of selection would be most interesting to watch on Florida campuses.

The University of Wyoming has established, in co-operation with the Intercollegiate Knights, a training program for piloting the sagging all-fraternity grade average. Mustache was an item that hasn't been popular since Teddy Roosevelt left the White House, but now is the style of the college class. One Mustache-wax manufacturer has traced the upward boom to the sale of his products, of all places, college campuses. The demand came out from all sections of the country, but was heaviest in the south and west.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—(I P)—A new course, geared to meet the demands of the atomic age, has been inaugurated at Chatham College for women, it was announced today by President Algo D. Henderson. It deals with an old subject, science, but the approach is entirely new and different.

The course is entitled 'History and Philosophy of Science," and is required of all freshmen women except those majoring in science. It is primarily designed, therefore to provide basic general knowledge of not only historical development of the natural sciences but of the social and economic aspects of science with special emphasis on its philosophy.

The stated objectives of the course are, 1- to teach the students the heritage of scientific knowledge relating to the main advances in man's concept of astronomy, biology, chemistry and physics; 2- to aid the students to understand the main philosophies of various scientific particularly as applied to the attitudes towards science and to understand the eventual evolution of the scientific method. 3- to give students an intimate knowledge of the relationships between the historical events, socio-economic conditions, and the status of science during various periods of history, and 4- to aid students in acquiring some concept of current attitudes and trends in science.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Bibler

The Press Table

By ALAN WHITMARSH
Flambeau Sports Editor

Several college football coaches have made the headlines in the past two years with their so-called "big switches."

In most cases the purposes of these switches has been to find or develop a top-flight quarterback. Florida State coach Tom Nugent is currently testing the effects of such a switch, though it really isn't a drastic one.

The most famous switch of all of course was made by Army's Red Blaik. In 1955, Blaik moved his all-American End Don Holleder to quarterback to satisfy a pressing problem for a signal-caller.

The switch served its purpose for Holleder won grudging praises from some of his critics as a left-handed passer and led the Cadets to their big win over Navy.

The other major switch which attracted attention was at Notre Dame, long famous for its innovations on the gridiron. Irish coach Terry Brennan last year made a signal-caller of Paul Hornung, up to then one of the top fullbacks on the squad.

Perhaps Nugent's change won't attract the national attention that the other two did, but to most Seminole students and fans it will seem like a "big switch."

To most of the Seminole fans, Lee Corso is a halfback. He has been one of the Tribe's top runners for two years now, and it will seem strange to see him calling the signals from quarterback.

That's because most people don't remember that when Lee came to FSU he was a quarterback, and a pretty good one at that. He started many games at that position during his Freshman year here.

During his high school days, he was a quarterback—a quarterback good enough to win all-city, all-state and all-southern honors. Then in his Sophomore year, Nugent decided that Lee was quite a runner and a valuable asset at halfback.

So now, after two most successful years at halfback, why the sudden change back to quarterback?

Nugent puts it thusly: "Corso and Bobby Renn are the two strongest defensive backs on the squad, and I want them both in the same starting backfield."

It should be pointed out, though, that besides being a strong defensive move, Renn and Corso are certainly two of the most outstanding runners on the team.

LEE CORSO

It won't hurt offensively to have them in the same backfield.

That's for sure.

A SAD NOTE

This reporter and most everybody we know were sadly disappointed to hear that Pat Versprille will play no more football this season. The nerva injury which struck him two weeks ago will almost certainly keep him from any more football this year.

We don't know Pat personally, but everybody we talked to tells us that he is one of the finest young men in this university, and one of the hardest working football players.

He had been counted on for a lot of duty at that left halfback slot this year, and tore up the spring drills and the early fall practices with his drive and enthusiasm.

We can't pay him a higher tribute than to say that our interest and everybody else's is that he recover as quickly as possible from this injury, with no after effects.

We'd like to see him back on that football field with that familiar number 25, but above all we want to see him strong and healthy again.

So get 'em Pat, the university and the whole city of Tallahassee is behind you.

Seminoles, Bobcats Open Grid Season

Florida State University's Seminoles march squarely into one of the toughest schedules in the school's history this weekend when they open the 1956 gridiron campaign here Saturday with Ohio University.

The curtain raiser is set for 8 p.m. at Doak S. Campbell Stadium, and it kicks off the second year of major-college competition for the Tribe.

The Bobcats are as yet an unknown quantity, but any team coached by Carvall Widdees is bound to be a threat of considerable stature.

Widdees has never lost an opening game in his nine years as a head football coach, and is a former national "Coach of the Year."

Widdees produced a 18-2 mark in two years of coaching at Ohio State (1944 and 1945) and his teams have a 38-25-4 record for his seven years at Ohio.

Each team will be into the contest minus one of their top halfbacks. Vern Smith of Ohio and Pat Versprille of FSU.

Smith underwent an appendectomy shortly after fall practice started, and will be lost to the Bobcats for at least two weeks. Versprille received a damaging nerve injury which will probably keep him out for the season.

The loss of Versprille is particularly damaging because the 180-pound Norfolk, Va. halfback was the Seminoles' outstanding runner in spring practice in most people's opinions.

In an effort to find a topnotch signal-caller, Nugent has moved halfback Lee Corso to the starting quarterback slot. Corso was a quarterback in high school days and during his Freshman year here.

The Tribe will open with almost a completely new line, but most of the starters saw a good deal of action last season and during the spring.

Top Ends

The ends are Ronnie Schomburger and Bob Nellums. Schomburger has played considerably at the position in the last two split-T seasons, and Nellums is a junior college all-stater from Mississippi.

Both boys have won considerable praise during practice from Nugent. These two could devotion into two of the finest ends in the South," he recently said.

All the letterme are good at tackles, and 220-pound George Boyer has been moved to that spot from center to fill the gap. Bill Musselman will open at the other tackle.

The guards are solid with Leo Baggett and veterin Al Pacifico, who has been a regular since his first trip to the university. Baggett played considerably as a Sophomore last season.

Troy Barnes, a 200-pounder from Chickasaw, Ala., is established as a regular at center. He spent most of last year, sharing the starting role with the now departed Bob Crenshaw.

With Corso in the backfield are Bobby Renn and Buck Metts at halfbacks and Joe Holt at fullback. All are Seminole vets except Renn, who sat out a year of ineligibility last season.

Behind the starters, Nugent admits to a lack of depth in the line, but the backs are plentiful in both number and talent.

Eddie Johnson, a 200-pounder from Charleston, W. Va., could break into the lineup at fullback and backs Billy Weaver, Billy Odom, Stan Dobosz, Len Swantic, Vic Prinzi, and Jerry Henderson are all sure to see action.

In the Ohio camp, there's a senior veteran at every position save right halfback where Smith's replacement is right new starter.

Bobcats quarterback Don McBride is considered one of the best passers in the midwest, but lacks running power off the Tony Aviable, Florida State University all-district kick last season, signed a pro contract with Kansas City Athletics. He spent the summer playing ball for the Pocatello, Idaho ball club.

FSU's football brochure, produced by sports publicity director Elain White, is rated one of the finest in the country. Some say second only to the one produced by Navy.

NOTICE

Ron Melton of the athletic department requests that all persons interested in working at the football game meet with him Thursday, September 20, at the stadium at 3:30. This meeting also includes all persons who worked last year and are interested in doing so again this season.

Cagers, Baseballers Set For Physicals

Basketball and baseball players have been urged by the respective coaches to take physical examinations prior to practice.

Examinations will be held in the main gym, varsity locker room Friday, September 21, between the hours of 3:30 and 4:30 p.m.

Baseball practice for all freshmen and new students starts Monday September 24. Tryouts will be held every Monday, Wednesday and Friday for four weeks from 3 to 6 p.m. announced Seminole coach Danny Litchfield.

Whereas varsity baseball members need not take physicals, varsity basketball players must report for their examinations says boop mentor "Bud" Kennedy.

Ohio U. Game Tickets Ready

Tickets for the Ohio University game Saturday night are on sale at the athletic ticket office, Student Center athletics business manager Eddie Cubbon announced. Students use coupon number one from the activity book, guests tickets cost $1.50 plus coupon two.

Faculty and staff season tickets may be bought for $15.

Special tickets for the Georgia Game in Athens the following week are also on sale, Cubbon said.

Faculty Trio Opens Series Friday Night

The Florida State University Faculty Trio will open a new series of free faculty recitals Friday night in Opperman Music Hall on campus, beginning at 8:15.

Composed of Miss Mary Esther Winslow, pianist, Robert Sedore, violinist, and Owen Sellers, cellist, the trio has been organized about 10 years.

Friday's program will present Mozart's Trio No. 5 in G Major, K. 496 in three movements; Brahms' Trio No. 3 in C Major, Op. 87, in four movements; an intermission; Ravel's Trio in A Minor, four movements.

The Trio gave the same program last spring in Albany, Ga. at the opening of the Fine Arts Festival, held in connection with the opening of the Albany Campaign Library.

Texas' Colvert Visits Campus

Dr. C. C. Colvert, of the University of Texas, will be on campus this semester as a visiting professor assigned to help prepare Florida for an expansion of its state-supported Junior college program.

He is to teach one class on campus and travel weekly to Pensacola Junior College, Palm Beach Junior College and St. Petersburg Junior College.

Dr. Colvert said recently he thinks public junior colleges have four functions: pre-professional courses for future engineers, medical, law and other advanced students, two year "terminal" trade and business courses for high school graduates, vocational training, and adult education.

Many Features New Library 'Elegant' Addition To Campus

By ARLIEDA RIES

Returning Florida State University students will find an entirely new library at their disposal.

In the recently opened building can be found such features as three hundred sons of air conditioning two public elevators, and a lecture hall which seats up to two hundred and is equipped with a kitchen. The library, which covers 19,000 square feet, is also the ultimate in modern design and comfort.

Located on the south side of Call Street facing Landis Green this newest initiated building on campus is the result of planning by Director of Library Norman Kilpatrick and art professor Howard Jones, who helped with design, color, arrangement and furniture.

Spacious Rooms

Spacious, cool rooms equipped with large curtained windows and modern furnishings produce an atmosphere inductive to study. And of special note to students every floor possesses a smoking room and a coke machine.

The new library, which has a total seating capacity of 1200, has been newly arranged according to subject matter. All books, periodicals, and magazines have been divided into topic areas, such as social sciences, humanities, documents and maps, and science-technology.

Another Feature

Located on the first floor is another outstanding feature of the library — the general education area. Designed specifically to aid first and second year students this section covers all subjects. Miss Florence Bethea, librarian, describes the area as a kind of library within a library.

All books, with the exception of reserve books are to be checked in or out at the circulation desk located directly in front of the entrance. Upon presentation of ID card and signature of full name and address on the book card any volume may be checked out for two weeks.

Regular library hours are to be resumed Thursday which means that the library will remain open 82 hours a week for student convenience. Library hours are as follows, Monday through Friday from 8 am to 10 pm, Saturday from 8 am to 5 pm; and Sunday from 2 pm to 5 pm.

Flambeau Meeting

All returning staff members and new students interested in working on the Florida Flambeau should attend a meeting Saturday afternoon at 1 in the newsroom, 213 Lonnmire, editor-in-chief Oscar Johnson has announced.

Women Sought For OB Queen

Unmarried women interested in entering the contest for Orange Bowl Queen have been invited to enter immediately.

Duke Jordan, news bureau director for the Bowl Committee, said three pictures should be sent to him at 615 Southwest Second Avenue, Miami. 36. They should be 8 by 10 inches, one a portrait, one shorts or bathingsuit, and the third street or evening wear.

Also requested are personal resumes, including schools attended, hobbies, ambitions, color of hair and eyes, age, weight height and measurements.

Special Edition

Today's edition of the Florida Flambeau is a special edition. The next edition will be published Tuesday, September 25, a week from today. At that time the Flambeau will begin normal twice-a-week publication, coming out each Tuesday and Friday.

Students Spend Over $6 Million In City, 1955-56

Students didn't realize it and neither did Tallahassee merchants —but the relationship between them amounted to $6,686,282 last year.

These figures were announced to the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce last month by Dr. J. Richard Stevens, professor of marketing and advertising.

Biggest item was meals, $1,023,286, auto operation and maintenance second at $576,334; and clothing third at $578,829.

Dr. Stevens said the figures were based on work of 136 members of marketing and advertising classes, who kept daily records of their expenditures each week.

They came up to an average of $5 per person per day, he said.

Gay Argo, a graduate student, received an award from the Master Research Council of New York for his role in the study.

13 Spanish Lessons Set Over Television

Conversational Spanish will be taught without cost on a series of 13 half-hour programs to begin next month over local television station WCTV, it has been disclosed.

Conducting the course will be Dr. Margaret Campbell, associate professor of modern languages with the station staff and the Florida State University office of Communications and Radio, Rod Flynn, director co-operating.

The professor said she is preparing a supplementary workbook that will be available free to viewers.

ARTIST SERIES TICKETS HERE

Season tickets for the Artist Series will be sold to wives and husbands of students as well as to faculty and staff members this year.

Mrs. Kathryn Vernon, administrative assistant in the Westcott special events office, said the sale of these tickets is now under way and will close October 4.

She said a "limited number" will be available. They cost five dollars, three dollars less than all four scheduled performances would cost at two dollars each.

Regularly enrolled students receive free admission to Artist Series events by presenting specified tickets from the student activities book.

Open Series

Opening the Series on November 8 in Westcott Auditorium will be baritone Igor Gorin. November 20, actors Constance Bennett, Frank McHugh, Todd Andrews and Robert Strauss, directed by Elliott Silverstein, will present "The Best of Steinbeck," excerpts from "Pastures of Heaven," "Grapes of Wrath," "Of Mice and Men," and a compact version of "Burning Bright."

The Roger Wagner Chorale is scheduled for February 13. Closing the regular season on March 5 and 6 will be two performances of the 62-member National Ballet of Canada.

Extra Program

An extra program set for October 26 is the Yugoslavian chamber music ensemble, Solisti Di Zagreb. It will be the first appearance of a chamber ensemble in five years. Student admission will be one dollar each, as the cost will not be borne by the activity fee budget.

Mrs. Vernon said tickets for each event will be made available to students about two weeks beforehand. Three days before the added, unsold individual tickets will be placed on sale to the faculty, staff, and townspeople.

3 Professors Return After Foreign Jobs

Three professors return this year from foreign assignments on leaves of absence in Cuba, Greece and the Philippines.

Dr. Paul Stoakes, professor of English, has completed two years at the Universidad de Oriente, Santiago, Cuba, directing training of Cuban teachers wishing to teach English.

Dr. William Randel, also a professor of English, has returned from a year in Greece, where he held the chair of Fulbright Professor of American Life and Civilization at the University of Athens. Dr. Randel is chairman of the Florida State University American Studies program.

Dr. Malcolm Parsons, associate professor of public administration, has returned from a year in Manila where he was visiting professor in the Institute of Public Administration at the University of the Philippines.

Senior Class Notice

All Seniors should order their caps and gowns at the University Book store between now and the first of October. According to Paul Ort, Senior Class President all orders must be in by that time so that they will be back in time for Senior Investiture, Tuesday, October 23.

Enrollment At 7,000; Housing Top Problem

450 More Men Than Women; Car Problem Worse Than Ever

At least 7,000 students are packing the halls of Florida State University, but officials say major housing and parking problems are being solved.

Registration figures as of Saturday totaled 3,632 men and 3,182 women making a total of 6,814; approximately 400 more than last fall's complete number enrolled.

In addition to the number of on-campus students, Charles H. Walker, registrar, and 2,000 students are enrolled in FSU faculty-conducted extension courses, and 1,800 men in the armed forces joined the FSU Bootstrap Program, bringing the entire off and on campus enrollment figure to 12,958. This also includes 844 sub-collegiate students at the University Demonstration School.

The women's housing situation is still crowded, according to Miss Edith McCollum, director of residence for women.

She said, however, that the addition of space in five new co-ed houses has provided more room for incoming freshmen and new students in the dormitories.

Alpha Chi Omega, Delta Gamma, and Chi Omega, sororities that took up space in Landis and Cawthon Halls last year have moved into houses of their own, Miss McCollum said.

MORE ROOM

"This has made additional room for undergraduates in Landis and Cawthon," she added. Also rooms provided for graduate women is now being taken by undergraduates.

Under the supervision of Mrs. Frances Kevin, the old Delta Zeta house has been opened to accommodate 20 graduates and now run by the wife of "Graham House," said she residence director.

Miss McCollum estimated that 150 more women are housed on campus than last year.

Freshman dormitories have been filled and some women are temporarily living in basement and sewing rooms, but the situation is being alleviated as additional beds go up elsewhere and some go home.

200 IN TOWN

R. G. Bitter, director of residence for men, said some 200 more than desire university housing are now in town.

"As soon as fraternity rush ends, we expect to accommodate quite a few men who still desire rooms," he said. He pointed out that all men who signed that last year were offered an opportunity to move into campus dormitories by November 15.

The car situation has reached an all time high in spite of new regulations to cut down the number of student drivers, according to Dale D. Day, director of service units.

NEW STICKER

Day said that approximately 4,500 new stickers were issued to freshmen eligible to drive cars on campus and to other students.

New and old stickers total 7,200 for staff members and 524 for faculty members. He estimated there are 2,000 parking spaces available on campus.

"Our biggest headache at the moment is getting students to learn the new parking regulations," he said.

Four Freshmen Will Not Appear

The Four Freshmen, popular recording artists, will not appear here next month, Charles Ranieri, secretary of Student Events, disclosed yesterday afternoon.

She said preliminary negotiations to bring them to Florida State University as the first program of the Student Artist Series were abandoned after the Freshmen signed for a television appearance in New York.

Today 1st Day Candidates Can File For Office

Candidates Meet Here Tomorrow

Students interested in running for freshmen class offices and Student Senate seats file candidacy today; office in the Longmire Director's office.

A meeting will be held for candidates tomorrow beginning 4 p.m. in Longmire auditorium according to Mitzi McCullough, secretary of elections. Another meeting will be held at 7 p.m. for students unable to attend the afternoon session, she said.

October 2 is the deadline to file candidacy for the first student election to take place under the newly established requirement bill.

PRIMARY OCTOBER 16

The primary election is slated for October 16, while the final races will be held October 22, Miss McCullough said. Qualifications for candidates will be listed tomorrow's meeting.

Fourteen offices to be filled are class president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, sergeant-at-arms, and two class historians.

The reapportionment bill, unanimously passed by Student Senate last March after a two-year controversy, provides for representatives to be elected from living area precincts in Hall and Day Students will elect two senators each, and the 13 remaining precincts elect one senator each.

These include Jennie Murphree, Reynolds, Dean Hall Board combined, Gilchrist, Keen and west, Cawthon and south, Florida, Sen Hall and Magnolia

Gov. Caldwell Addresses New Voters Tuesday

Freshmen voters, estimated at 1,000 hundred on campus, will be addressed Tuesday by Pi Sigma Alpha national political science honorary fraternity.

Dr. Hortense Wells, president of Florida State University, and retired former governor Millard Caldwell will address the meeting at 8 p.m. in Longmire auditorium.

Caldwell's topic will be "The Importance of Citizenship and the Right of Franchise."

Officials from several levels of government and leaders of local party groups will also be present. Mrs. Wells said.

Also will include Secretary of State R. A. Gray, Superintendent of Public Instruction Thomas D. Bailey, Attorney General Richard Ervin, John Haddock, Tallahassee mayor, W. W. Kelly, chairman of the Leon County Commission, Charlton Pierce and Mrs. P. Love, chairman and vice-chairman of the Leon County Democratic Committee, and W. Randolph Jr., Leon County Republican Executive Committee chairman.

Members of the Young Democrats and Young Republicans clubs and representatives of the Florida and Democratic women's clubs and students in political science classes. Faculty members and officials of the FSU Politics Club and those who are invited, Wells said.

Mrs. Wells noted that the meeting will be held four days before the deadline for registering to vote in Florida. She added that the session, older than 21 have not achieved to cast their first vote, and said the invitation to the meeting includes them.

Sigma Alpha will distribute a short questionaire residence and political affiliation to students before refreshments following a business and answer session after Mrs. Wells's address.

Flambeau Sports Stylish Face-Lift

Today's Flambeau has a "new look" in keeping with its policy of progressive change.

Its most outstanding feature is the new logotype, appearing at the top of the page, which replaces the three-year-old one used for the last time in this year's first issue. Also appearing on this page and page two are caricature drawings. These will be used more frequently as time goes on.

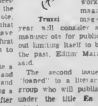
Other changes you will begin to notice this year will be more progressive makeup increased space of artwork, more comprehensive news coverage, and more attractive advertisements.

Senate Meeting Set Tomorrow

The first Florida State University Senate Senate meeting of 1956-57 will be opened tomorrow by student body vice-president Bill Cullom

To be held at 4:30 in 210 Longmire, the meeting will be the first official assembly of the 1956-57 senators due to failure to make a quorum at the end of the last academic year.

Tomorrow's agenda includes a resolution to provide for Senate rules of order and the possible appointment of temporary committees while future legislation may include the approval of this year's budget.



When asked to comment on the future of this year's Senate Cullom said, "This year's Senate should produce more good results for the student than any up to this time. The Senators already elected are, for the most part, experienced and are certainly a good nucleus for the body."

Cullom continued: Under the new living unit plan of Senate representation there will be more senators than in the past and even a more scaled back session this should result in an active responsible group. I'm looking forward to working with the senators to accomplish as much as possible for the student."

Smoke Signals Staff Meets Wednesday

There will be a meeting of the Smoke Signals staff Wednesday night at 7:30 in the Smoke Signal office in the Longmire Building. This meeting is also open to students interested in contributing or working on the magazine. The magazine this year will consider any and all manuscripts for publication without limiting itself to humor as in the past, Editor Malcolm Truett said.

Truett

The second issue will be named in a literary workshop group who will publish the issue under the title En Garde, he added.

First Session

Rats Get Works; Sludges Triumph

By DAVE FLETCHER

Lo, than fifteen defendants were tried before the first session of Rat Court Friday, Chief Justice Bob Kalsky presiding.

Because of the social activities of Rush Week, Justices Gunnar Ricci and Ceal Dunn were unable to meet with the session, Assistant Charles Bulwer, Victor Hanke, Robbie Austin, and Bailiff "Bucky" Cann, however, marched to the bench with all the pomposity of their being associated dignity promptly at 7:30 p.m.

Fearing this austere group was only twelve cases of insubordination impenitentiation of upperclassmen and name tagger, and disrespect, Rat Training seems to be difficult this year.

MORE GIRL RATS

Females of that species decked out in inkling of intelligence comicitely dominated the plaintiff's dock. They outnumbered their counterparts 10 to 7. One such creature completely captured the heart of her pack when she delivered a speech on "where she goes when it rots out." "It goes where you should go!" she informed the court.

Jo Ann Opalinski judged "too forward," was ordered to walk backward until the next session of Rat Court.

Jennie Murphree still will be required by a Rule offender, Ell Church, order to wear skirt and blouse. The other male rat Lewis Verdier, also in skirts, will be wearing a string of coins with a "Just Married" sign on his back.

Married to the freshman cause" he proclaimed to the court.

Justices residing in West Hall ordered that Sheila Busby should receive, as sentence, the task of removing the stain from between the eyes in the sidewalk leading to West Hall. They furnished the toothpicks.

Senior Hall's front steps will be cleaned with an eyebrow brush by Mary Beth Calhoun who ironically, suggested this as sentence for a classmate.

Male members of both the spectator body and the court trembled when Ina Jeanine Jordan, known only as Prudence Prunejuice and Olivia Applesauce, were returned at their request, to kiss all men present.

Several attempts to escape the clutches of the court enlivened a rather slow evening, but were promptly thwarted by members of the sludge squad.

Persons with a flare for flair in across sawdust or deep-rooted ambitions to be clowns may exhibit such next month, when "Flying High," student circus, holds tryouts.

Coach Jack Haskin said competitive trials for prospective troupers are set for Thursday and Friday, October 9 and 10, at the circus lot on West Call Street near West Hall. Judging will be from 3 to 5 p.m. each day.

Haskin said any student is eligible to try out. He suggested a need for women five feet tall or shorter or who weigh 100 pounds or less.

Haskin said practice sessions will be held for interested students each afternoon from 3 to 5 before tryouts begin.

He cited a scheduled trip to Philadelphia for performance at the Villanova game next month, with 24 veteran performers taking part, as an example of the many exciting events circus members can look forward to throughout the year.

Board To Hold College Hearing

By PIERCE LEHMBECK

Delegations from five Florida counties are expected to appear before the Board of Control at Orlando Thursday afternoon to vie for one of the two new four-year colleges recommended for Florida.

According to Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, executive secretary to the board, delegations from Sarasota, Palm Beach and Broward County have already asked for time before the board.

And he said he also expects delegations from Tampa and from Pinellas county to appear.

The Council for the Study of Higher Education has recommended that two new four-year schools be located in the Tampa Bay sector and on the lower east coast.

At its July meeting in Tallahassee, the Board asked the State Budget Commission to conduct test borings and engineering studies of suggested sites for one of the new schools in Pinellas and Hillsborough county.

The Board also named a committee, headed by Culpepper, to develop criteria for selection of a permanent site that should be looked for in determining suitability of a suggested site for establishment of a university.

The land department has already completed its work and is now compiling the results into a formal report, Culpepper said. The committee has had several meetings and will be ready to report to the Board Thursday.

Public hearings are planned to relieve the overcrowded conditions of the University of Florida and FSU.

Invisible Partner — Kay Hufford goes through modern dance routine at Talent Night.

WCTV To Air Student Show

A weekly program produced by students will begin over television station WCTV next month, Student Body President Dave Bachman has revealed.

Harvey Hall, senior whom Bachman said originated the plan, will direct the series of 13 minute shows on a day of time to be announced.

Hall said the first show will be a variety program, possibly featuring acts from the Freshman talent night. Assisting Hall on the first program is Nancy Gibbon.

The director said he hopes to build the program into a longer and more frequent presentation, and said it will spend some time publicizing musical, artistic, and literary groups of every kind that are to take place on the campus.

Time is presently available without cost by WCTV.

HOUSING NOTICE

Men who applied for university housing on or before June 30 are requested to check with the director of residence halls at the earliest possible time, according to R. G. Bruner, residence director.

University Hires 2 Student Cops

Two students have been added to the campus police force, to enforce main campus parking rules, Student Body President Dave Bachman disclosed yesterday.

The appointments of Dave Fletcher and Art Fenton, both 23 year-old veterans, mark the first time students have been hired as campus police.

Harry Day, director of service units, said the addition of the students will relieve five city police officers of duties.

Fletcher and Fenton will not wear uniforms or carry weapons but will be identified by armbands, Bachman said.

The president commented that, with the 44 students on duty about forty hours a week between them, parking rules should be enforced fairly and uniformly.

The student officers will use a method employed by municipal police departments to enforce the two-hour parking limit on the street running past the Administration Building and in the old Demonstration School parking lot. Cars' tires will be marked with chalk and checked again in two hours.

Bachman said they will work between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. while attending classes are exempt of the two hour limit. Violators are to be paid $1.00 for each conviction, Bachman said. Students apprehended by the using for Archaeus.

Alpha Phi Omega Opens Its Store

Alpha Phi Omega has opened its student book exchange, located in the basement of Longmire building on irregular hours to be posted.

Prices are set by the owner who registers his volumes to be sold. Alpha Phi Omega gets a small service charge. The order is supplied of the book's condition when it was sold.

Grad Class Picnics Friday At Reservation

A Graduate Class Picnic sponsored by the graduate Club, will be held Friday from 4 to 7 p.m. at Lake Reservation.

Graduate ethics representative Ann Spence said this will be the only graduate class event of the year. Graduate students are invited to bring fried chicken dinner if they desire.

Spence said tickets are on sale 75 cents each and may be purchased at the Westcott Building ticket office. Sales end at noon today, Spence added.

Other Graduate Club activities scheduled later this year include coffee hours, a Christmas Dance a trip to Kanapaha Gardens, an Easter Party and a Spring Dance.

Spence requested all persons interested in participating in Graduate Club functions to contact him or Dr. Ralph L. Witherspoon, faculty advisor.

OUR POLICY

IT IS EASY for a university newspaper to succumb to the role of the listless house organ. Many have avoided the trial of independence; many have accepted mediocrity.

Yet there are many ways in which a university newspaper can and should assume an active, progressive attitude. Just as some commercial newspapers have achieved records of quality and dependability, so a school publication may strive for excellence.

Through the years, certain standards have come to be accepted by newspaper men and women as symbols of quality; as standards to be coveted. Adolph Ochs, the reporter of the New York Times, put them into words in 1896 when he published a statement of principle for that newspaper:

It will be my earnest aim that the New York Times, give the news, all the news, in concise and attractive form, in language that is parliamentary in good society, and give it as early, if not earlier, than it can be learned through any other reliable medium; to give the news impartially, without fear or favor, regardless of any party, sect or interest involved; to make the columns of the New York Times a forum for the consideration of all questions of public importance, and to that end to invite intelligent discussion from all shades of opinion.

We would not presume to be imitators of the Times, but we do hold to these principles outlined in the statement—readability, impartiality and timeliness of news—as things that any responsible paper should constantly seek to live by.

Editorial Page

Further, an editorial page of vigor and determination is to be desired. We intend to consider "all questions of public importance." And if our discussion is to be widely read as those of commercial newspapers, still it will have its audience. We hope the "audience" will be more than just that and, as Ochs has it, respond to our invitation for comment.

If the editorials and columns to appear in the Florida Flambeau this school year stimulate comment from "all shades of opinion," and cause the students at Florida State University to become more acquainted with the issues of today, we shall feel we have fulfilled our responsibility as editors.

Our mention of today's issues does not mean we shall not discuss campus affairs. Far from it—those will be our principal interest. We hope to offer constructive discussion of all aspects of campus life for the consideration of those who are interested.

We pledge avoidance of attacks on individuals, though we shall not be reluctant to take up the actions of our public officials.

We pledge to indeed open our pages to discussion from all range of thought, through letters to the editor and through signed columns which may be submitted by all students. In the choice of columns, quality shall be the standard, not agreement with our own opinions.

We pledge to uphold the principles past Flambeaus have stood for, and which, to devoutly wish, those of the future will also maintain. And we believe that this can be accomplished, for those with authority over the Flambeau have allowed successive editors to develop the standards of which we have spoken.

We have reason to believe that this attitude of cooperation will be shattered. Through the years, the only connection of importance here that the Flambeau has had with the University has been in the matter of official policy toward the student publications.

School Policy

The first "official" statement of policy for the publications was drawn up in 1932 by a faculty committee.

A liberal declaration, it presumed that the students who operated the publications had enough ability, integrity and responsibility to set their own course without supervision. It held that the editors could publish that material which they desire to print, including editorial expressions of student opinion" with certain exceptions.

The four exceptions in this rule were given as matter which was obscene, untrue, a personal attack, or "matter which reflects unfairly on the reputation of the college, or which might cause unnecessarily disturbing rumors concerning the college to be spread among the people of Florida, and, in general, any material which might unnecessarily injure the college in the eyes of the public."

Presumably, the administration of the college, as it was then, would judge whether the material met these standards —and should stop suppression of the publication if the bounds were overstepped.

But through the year 1945, when the standards were altered, Flambeau published regularly.

Thus the Flambeau, allowed editorial independence, became noted for its liberal views and vigorous, affirmative editorial policy. Only a few editors allowed its high standards to lapse.

Policy Expanded

In 1946 Dr. Earl L. Vance of the School of Journalism, chairman of the Flambeau subcommittee of the faculty committee of student publications, notified Flambeau that the old policy had been expanded.

To quote the Publications Committee, "We have reviewed specifically the perplexing problem of the editorial discussion of controversial questions, including questions of college policies or practices, and we have concluded that such discussion, if held within the general limits set by the 1932 statement of Policy respecting student publications, is permissable. However, in the interest of fairness and as a safeguard against a biased and one-sided journalism, we propose that it be stated as a permanent policy of the Flambeau that whenever opinions on controversial questions are voiced in its columns it will grant equal space and prominence in the issue to present a contrary opinion. This policy should be overtly stated in the Flambeau as regular and frequent intervals."

"We deem inadvisable and shall not undertake pre-publication reading of copy or censorship of any kind, unless requested by the editor.

"The above procedure places the responsibility upon the editors themselves and they should deem responsible for material published."

We believe that the reasonableness of our student editors can be appealed to and depended on, except in rare instances, not knowingly to injure or work against the best interest of the college.

The statement went on that discussions which might possibly harm the campus in the eyes of the public should be written "with the greatest care and discretion" and that it should be made clear the viewpoint express was not that of the institution.

A Revision

Under this policy, the Flambeau continued its liberal ways. Then last year the new Board of Student Publications issued a "statement of principles" declaring that "Rightfully or wrongfully, Florida State University is held accountable by the general public for everything that appears in campus publications." Thus the statement maintained, the publications must "reflect the high aims and good character of the institution."

It was added, "The Board of Student Publications, however, does not feel the widest degree of possible latitude should be provided to student editors for the free discussion of current issues and problems subject to the above standards."

It appears, then, that the way is open for continued freedom of the press on this campus. Although wording in the latest "statement" is somewhat obscure, we have reason to feel that the board or any other authority will have to be very long and carefully before attempting to place restrictions upon the Flambeau's editorial freedom.

It is obvious that any such action would constitute an abortion of many years of traditional and constructive independence. The best thinking of the people closest to the situation has borne out that freedom of the press on this campus is not only right and proper, but necessary, for the publications are to reap the fullest benefit for the institution.

This year's Flambeau shall assume that the truth of this is recognized, and will follow its policy with that in mind.

The Dissenter

On Fabisinski Legislation

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

This past summer the Florida Legislature convened to pass a set of bills designed at evasion of the Supreme Court's segregation rulings.

At face value, the so-called Fabisinski legislation is futile. Whatever assignments may think of the Supreme Court, the more enlightened of them surely cannot expect the Court to be deceived with a semantics. A set of bills intended to prevent segregation—indeed, termed the answer to the problem by Governor LeRoy Collins as he called the Legislature into extraordinary session—will not escape nullification because they do not mention Negroes specifically.

Indeed the Fabisinski legislation is, if anything, more unconstitutional than the old, undisguised provisions for segregation. Before, the schools were authorized to use mysterious, undefined, and probably unconstitutional criteria of social status, tradition, and aptitude in the assignment of students.

Even a high official who servedon the committee that drafted the bills commented publicly that some Negro children who would be assigned to white schools if the Fabisinal proposals are followed as written, if, he asked, can you blame a dull white child to a school and schedule a bright Negro of the same age?

PREJUDICE BY any design or not, the Fabisinski County school boards now however, have the power—although without certain safeguards provided by United States district courts —to assign pupils in any manner they choose. Assignment of a poor white child, or the son of a rebellious white journalist, to someone of a local religious persuasion might very well be treated badly under this setup. Because no cases of this fashion have been raised does not make such impossible.

The Pinellas County Board of Public Instruction, undoubtedly grieved the Fabisinski action with unfavorable comment. About the most favorable was a trustee's complaint that he couldn't understand it. Others were less complimentary, referring to Section Nine Of Many the Constitution of the United States and other political factions which were largely ignored when the Legislature hastily passed the laws.

And their insidious character may well prove to be their undoing. Even the author of the attitude the Court may take An FSU professor, who for obvious reasons cannot be identified, called them a blessing. Although the small communities of white pupils throughout Florida are "in limbo" until the school boards decide whether they say or while enough in the absence of proper guidance, the Governor-Legislature's grossest supporters are the poor whites. They might decide it isn't worth the trouble.

One member of the Legislature has suggested his political future to rote against the Fabisinski bills. The State of Florida will undoubtedly honor Representative John B. Orr of Dade County as a very great man.

THEN THERE was this: a staunchful appropriation of $50,000 to Florida's National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which has been cited successfully, from some viewpoints, abided by the ethical principals, the principles of things to be investigated before this the Ku Klux Klan, which does not merely charge to be published order be legal means, but would go back to a vicious system by illegal means. A New Formula For Identification

By OSCAR JOHNSON

THROUGH the years, Rat Cape have become accustomed to an easy way of distinguishing Freshmen on this and other campuses.

But that is lesser known is that an unofficial method of identification has been developed. Those who are wise to this system can easily tell almost at a glance the class level of any given student.

Although the method works only at certain times of the year. Two times per year, to be exact.

We have just finished the first brief time during the year when all students can be nearly arranged into classes by this method. It may be recalled that last week students were occupied in the process of buying books.

Although part of the system of identification is through viewing the level of the book, sometimes it is for a 100 or 300-level course, for example; a more fundamental factor lies in the number and cost of the books.

Through cunning observation the talented student can learn to tell Seniors because he never buys type books. They can be seen during buying week wandering around, loaded down with the pounds of books, manuals and pamphlets required for graduate courses.

A Junior or Senior, conversely, buys a few books in quantity. Some, of course, have to purchase a good number of them to keep up with their course requirements. But the discerning upperclassman learns to avoid such as much as much regular books. He finds out the cost of the book before signing up for the course.

He also finds out if a term paper is required in addition to the course serious consideration.

The ultimate development in this field is reached by the master of maneuvering, but only through years of managed taking courses which require no books.

FRESH. AN acrnlood of books as sure a giveaway as a Rat Cap. As a student progresses in the University, he learns the futility of going broke on books, learns to buy fewer and fewer books.

Some merrily try to choose books they intend to keep," but these, too, dislike spending cash. The formula holds. And at the present time these radical upperclassmen are pondering a future development of the gallopy—finding courses which require only no books, but study.

Ravel 'Trio' Tops Faculty Recital

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

The Faculty Trio, composed of Robert Seibert, violin, Owen Sellers, cello, and Mary Esther Wallace, piano, began the first in a new series of faculty recitals Friday night in Opperman. Though they have been playing together some ten years, this was our first opportunity to hear them in full recital, since most of their recent campus performances have been shared with other faculty members or chamber groups.

The well-chosen program consisted of three representative piano trios by Mozart, Brahms and Ravel—the latter being that composer's sole contribution to the form. The Ravel Trio, though, is not nearly as unique as the program notes would have us believe, the date given for its composition makes it the work of a five-year-old Ravel—a feat that even the prodigy Mozart would have been impressed to equal.

The opening Mozart TRIO NO. 5 IN G MAJOR, K. 496 was played very cleanly and with finesse, but we found the outer movements somewhat lacking in warmth and BRAVURA. Actually, the piece is not one of the Master's more inspired works except for a few moments of genuinely haunting beauty and depth. The performers seemed to have arrived at this conclusion too, for they lavished their most careful attention on the inner movement.

The Brahms TRIO NO. 3 IN C MAJOR, OP. 87 was played with a great deal of warmth, and the long noble phrases in the strings sang out wonderfully. If anything was missing, it was perhaps a real PORTIS-SIMO, which would have made some of the climaxes more dramatic; but this is not necessarily a criticism, since such things are really a matter of personal taste and preference.

The Ravel TRIO, a veritable YOUTH DE FORCE, was as exciting a performance as one could hope for. The rapport among the musicians was excellent, and their ensemble-playing was nothing short of amazing. From every standpoint this was by far the best performance of the evening.

Stravinsky, in his POETICS OF MUSIC, censured all criticism concerned with the "why" of music — the subject-matter, forms used devices employed—superfluous. He felt that critics should concern themselves only with "how" of music, and disregard the "why." But we have long felt that many failures and certainly many weaknesses in certain composers' works, from the standpoint of composition inside the work itself, are due to the fact that it suffers in comparison with the life-giving stimulus The piano is essentially a "dead," mechanical instrument, and this becomes especially noticeable when it is mated with and made to perform with warm, vibrantly alive strings. In spite of the excellent of Miss Winslow's playing in the Brahms F-flat major, there were many moments when we wished Brahms had permitted the master to sing unfettered, or even that we might hear some of the music translated into string and wind and other all-string medium. Even in the Ravel, for every standpoint this was by far the best performance of the evening.

Fortunately much great music HAS been written for this combination, but it is also surprising that most 20th Century composers have eschewed the form because of the many radical problems it creates. Let us hope that the piano-trio has a musical death, as more interesting and original combinations are discovered and explored by the composers.

JORDAN NAMED TO JOURNAL BOARD

Dr. Weymouth T. Jordan head of the Fla. St. University History Department of History, has been appointed a member of the editorial advisory board of Agricultural History, a journal published at Urbana Ill.

The faculty member also has been reappointed to a three-year term on the board of editors of East Tennessee Historical Society's Publications at Knoxville, Tenn.

Thinking Needed In Racial Crisis

By ARNOLD GREENFIELD

Last June at the University of Alabama the commencement address was delivered by Sen. William Fulbright of Arkansas. Senator Fulbright is, of course, the initiator of the program for foreign study under the group of scholarships which bear his name—and as such is the foreign most concerned education as a friend of education. But even if the scholarships were nonexistant, his remarks at Tuscaloosa to the graduates would rate a top place among those who place a high value on thinking and his unfettered development in our society.

THE SENATOR said signs of danger to the freedom of thought are easily detectable in American society. He particularly cited the tendency among his colleagues in Congress to demand an investigation of the slightest variation from the commonplace or any unusual idea that might upset the status quo. He or her opinion is pressed in terms of original thinking and subservience to the gods of conformity." Now of course everyone realizes that similar things have been said in the past and will unfortunately have to be said many times in the future. Nonetheless, two very important facts about this speech are to me at least worth reflecting upon. First, this was not the usual forthright instance of selfcriticism, as Mr. Fulbright is himself a member of Congress. Related to the first point but indefinitely more important is the fact that Sen. Fulbright is a southerner and was speaking at the University of Alabama.

Other Americans who live in the South might do well to look below the surface of the Senator's remarks and relate them to the Autherine Lucy incident, which strikingly though took place at the site of this speech defending freedom of the mind. Is stonethrowing the most rational way to solve our society's problems? I assume that even the most fanatic segregationist would answer in the negative. Why then do tragedies of this kind take place? Would-be dictator, who so skillfully can manipulate the fears of the people. Intellectual torpor and the constant pressure of our day to day tasks prevent us from thinking through our problems. It would seem that the dependent upon our own human resources, and we finally fall prey to those who would do our thinking for us.

Perhaps we go through life without utilizing our potentiality to take thought to our woes and alleviate at least those of our troubles which we might. It would seem that we are obliged to do the best we can, but do we? This complex tragedy of inter-racial relations in which we southerners find ourselves immersed seemingly illustrates the statement of the late Bishop Warren Candler that "most people do not think —they merely rearrange their prejudices."

Reds Seen In Burma

By JEROME BERNSTEIN

Last month Burma's leading daily, Nation, broke the news that Chinese Communist troops had invaded Burma with 800 mile front. It reported that in some places Chinese outposts were 60 miles within the border.

Burmese officials alarmed, compared previous incursions into Burma with this latest, concluded that this invasion with a difference, that it was not going to be stopped.

A PROTEST to the United Nations is now pending, if world opinion, from Burma's point of view, does not turn the Red back Burma's Army of 40,000 men is also being prepared for the worst.

The frontier between Burma and Red China runs through some of the world's wildest country, stretching across a 1,000-mile distance. Much of this territory is poorly mapped.

Ever since 1885, when Britain seized Upper Burma, the border between the two countries has been in active dispute. China's claim to Kengtung, Mr. Fu says, is based on the grounds that in the ninth century a Burmese kingdom once ruled the area.

The Burmese army estimates that the Communists now have several thousand men holding about 1,000 square miles of their territory.

Peiping, while admitting the disputed territory, says that they are there in a spirit of friendship and, therefore, there can be no question of crossing into Burmese territory.

Seminoles Rock 'n' Roll To A 47-7 Tune

The Press Table

By ALAN WHITMARSH
Flambeau Sports Editor

TS OF SURPRISES

No opening game in FSU history has probably pro- ided more surprises than the Seminoles' 47-7 rout of Ohio ay night, but fortunately the surprises were favor- e.

Even Seminole head mentor Tom Nugent and most o n's coaches, who had seen the Tribe in practice for ee weeks, admitted that most phases of the FSU ame came as a pleasant shock to them.

Certainly vary few of the 18,312 fans present came o see such a runaway, though undoubtdaly all of them went home with a very satisfied feeling. Satisfied that the Seminoles have come a long way from this time in 195

Looking the other way, the performance of Ohio niversity was certainly as surprising. The Bobcats were a one-touchdown underdog at game time, but ssingly lost their initiative shortly after the start of e second half.

The Bobcats admittedly were performing without e services of their first string left half, Vern Smith, but oods is rash enough to think he could have done much gainst the onrushing Seminole tide.

"It was simply a matter of desire," Nugent told re- porters afterwards. "It seems corny to keep saying that this was a team effort but there's just no other way to describe it."

This was our first chance at real live tackling and ocking since September 1, outside of 15 or 20-minute crimmages," the Seminole mentor added.

The genial Tribe coach named pass defense as the ne thing more improved over last year, and indeed ormer All-American signal-caller Don McBride had come to Florida with a reputation as one of the better passers in the country.

McBride completed a paltry two of 11 passes he threw at the Tribe secondary. Two of these were intercepted.

It could hardly be considered anything but a successful start to FSU's second major-college grind, but the Seminoles still face nine of the toughest opponents in school history from now until November 24, when they ring down the curtain against the Auburn Tigers at Auburn, Ala.

Nobody is ready to jump out on the proverbial limb and say the Seminoles are going to knock off the Georgia Bulldogs next Saturday, just like that. The Bulldogs are nobody to take lightly, in a good year or a bad one.

However, we doubt that very many Seminole rooters are going to admit that they expect a repetition of last year's 47-14 Georgia rout.

In coach Wally Butts' own words Georgia has its best team in four years. But we kind of think the same about FSU.

It could be a better game than many people expect.

A MOST SUCCESSFUL MOVE

This is undoubtedly a story of self-sacrifice. In the words of Seminole coach Tom Nugent it is just that.

It's the story of a guy who for two years showed signs of becoming one of the best halfbacks in the south, maybe even in the nation.

Then, so he returned to school August 31, 1956, ready to begin his fourth year of football, he was suddenly informed that he had become a quarterback.

You can imagine that this might be quite a jolt to a guy who loves to run like Lee Corso does. Quarterbacks invariably don't run the ball as much as halfbacks.

From every aspect it was a gamble from coach Tom Nugent's point of view. The question hung heavily as to whether Corso would "take" to the position.

Then again, he hadn't played any quarterback since his Freshman year here. Could he be developed into a top-notch signal-caller in the short time of three weeks before the Ohio game?

The gamble paid off, of that there is no doubt. It paid off so handsomely that almost every newspaper report on the 47-7 rout of Ohio named Corso as the key to the Seminole triumph.

True the Miami speedster did not pass much as nobody had expected him to. However he lived up to Nugent's prediction in this department perfectly.

This is not to say that Corso will not do some throwing, but to say that when he did throw, he made them count. Completing 3 of 5 attempts, he made two count for touchdowns.

Nugent had said before game time that Corso's most valuable asset in the passing department was that he knew when to pass. Two touchdowns in three completions is pretty fair timing, we'd say.

Moreover, Corso still got his share of his beloved running game, rolling up 104 yards during the night.

And so, another job "well done" to Lee Corso, but then it's an old story to him.

OFF THE PRESSES

Nugent has assembled some of the biggest and finest high school players in the nation. The frosh open a five-game slate (all on the road) with Mississippi Southern's juniors in Panama City Sept. 29 . . . Coach Tom Nugent's 40-man (or less) squad is the smallest in numbers since the genial Seminole mentor arrived here . . . 'Beautiful Ohio' Just An Old Song To Tribesmen

By JOE GREENE
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's 1956 football season opened with Lee Corso and Bobby Renn leading the Seminoles to a 47-7 victory over Ohio University at Doak S. Campbell Stadium, Saturday night.

The Seminoles shoved over two quick touchdowns in the first quarter, a blow from which the Ohioans never recovered.

Florida State's first touchdown covered 71 yards in 10 plays and was climaxed by a 23 yard pass from Lee Corso to end Bob Nellums.

Then before Ohio could recover the Tribe was knocking on the door again. Jim Hilles took the ensuing kickoff on his own five and brought it out to the 25 where he fumbled and Florida State recovered.

Len Swantic, who had replaced Corso at quarterback, faded back on the first play from scrimmage and flipped a 25 yard scoring pass to Sam Bisbee and the Seminoles were out in front to stay 13-0.

From then on out Corso proved, before 18,312 fans, that coach Tom Nugent made the right move when he switched the former halfback from Miami to quarterback.

According to Ohio's coach Carroll Widdoes "Corso's fine blocked kick on the midfield stripe and legged it 6 yards to the Ohio 14 where the was brought down from behind.

Then Renn shot around the right side of the Ohio line for 14 yards and the touchdown. John Sheppard, the extra point specialist, added the point after and FSU led 78-0.

Ohio took the following kickoff and from its own 41 covered 59 yards in nine plays where Hiles punched over from the two for Ohio's only score. The point after was good and the first half ended FSU 20, Ohio 7.

Second Half

The second half was hardly underway when the Tribe struck again. After an Ohio punt rolled dead on the Tribe 33, Renn went up the middle 23 yards to the Ohio 43 and a first down. Corso dropped back and fired an 11 yard pass to Joe Holt and another first down on the Ohio 32.

Then one of the many penalties that plagued FSU during and for the touchdown and e the opening set the Tribe back 45-7 victory for FSU.

to the Ohio 38 after Renn had ripped through tackle to the 26 yard line.

Two more plays moved the ball to the Ohio 17, where Corso hit Bob Nellums with another touchdown pass. The extra point was good and the Tribe led 27-7.

Corso's switching from the T to the I formation seemed to keep the Ohio defense baffled a good bit of the time. The Tribe's next touchdown came on a five yard pitchout from Corso to Buck Mentz. Corso skirted left end for the extra point, Florida State's 34th.

The next to last TD came when Renn intercepted an Ohio pass on the Ohio 33 and scampered the distance for the touchdown. Sheppard's extra point was good and it was 41 to 7.

Another intercepted pass set up the final score. Bill Weaver added his name to the record column when he skirted right end for the touchdown and e 47-7 victory for FSU.

HARD TO GET A GOOD MAN DOWN. Quarterback Lee Corso ran for 10 yards before three Ohio players could bring him down. Doing the honors for the Bobcats were Bill Stevens, Larry Buckles, and Hoyt Hathaway.

A MISS IS AS GOOD AS A MILE for Seminole end Ron Schoenburger in his attempt to score his first touchdown of the year. Expert photography caught Schoenburger's knee on white line. Referee ruled it an incomplete pass.

HOW'S IT FIT?

ONE MAN SEES ALUMNI

NEW WILMINGTON Pa. (ACP) — The Holcad published at Westminster College has a columnist named Dean English and recently he ran this bit about alumni:

A great deal of alumni enthusiasm for their college is "juvenile, vain and possessive," say Sydney J. Harris, Chicago News sports columnist in the new volume of the Going-to-College handbook. Harris indicates that such alumni are "not really loyal to their alma mater" but simply want a winning team to bolster their egos. All this "pressure" he says, is a bleak reflection of the kind of education they received there, since the highest function of education is to instill a sense of values into students, not to keep them frozen in a state of retarded adolescence."

SEVEN SEMINOLE FOES OPEN SEASON

A look at the work of Florida State's 1956 opponents on the first football weekend indicates that the Seminoles may have a rough road ahead of them in 1956.

Georgia (Sept. 29), Virginia Tech (Oct. 6), and Villanova (Oct. 27) all lost to highly regarded foes, the Bulldogs to Vanderbilt, 14-0, VPI to Tulane, 21-14 and Villanova to Texas A&M, 18-0.

However, North Carolina State (Oct. 13) provided a major upset by dumping the University of North Carolina rather harshly, 26-6. Wake Forest (Oct. 20 —Homecoming also steamrolled their way to an easy win, Louisiana Tech, while Miami (Nov. 2), Furman (Nov. 10) and (Nov. 17) Auburn (Nov. 24) will not open opened with a 14-0 win over until next Saturday.

Phi Mu Alpha Concert

Edwards Opera Scheduled Dec. 13

Ryan Edwards, senior in the School of Music, has written a short opera, the plot "laid in a small north Florida town," which will be staged on campus December 13.

The composer said his chamber opera, "See the Wind," will be given as part of the second annual Campus Composers' Concert, sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha, men's music honorary. Also on the program, Edwards said, will be a performance of professor John Boda's violin sonatina by his brother, Daniel Boda, a graduate student. The sonatina was awarded first place in a national Phi Mu Alpha contest this summer.

"See the Wind," according to Edwards, is largely a "character study in music" exhibiting conflicts within a lower middle-class family. Characters are a mother (mezzo-soprano), her daughter (soprano), a high school senior; a son, Bill (baritone); Bill's friend, Eddie (tenor) and a policeman, who has a speaking role.

A LAW BREAKER

The son, Edwards explained, has run away from the town because of trouble with the law but has returned with his friend.

"The principal conflict is between Sue (the daughter), bent on going to college to escape her brother's stigma, and the brother, who alone can give her the money to go," Edwards said.

He said the music, orchestrated by himself, is at times lyrical and melodious but at chosen points highly dramatic.

The composer said he wrote both the libretto and music between May and the middle of August.

IN OPPERMAN

The concert December 13 will begin at 8 15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

Edwards said tryouts for the singing and speaking roles will be held Thursday, October 4, in Opperman. A schedule is available on the Music Building bulletin board for making appointments that afternoon from 3 to 5, he added.

Edwards himself will conduct an orchestra of about 30 instruments.

Music Minors Now Eligible For Seminar

A decision to grant membership in the Music Educators' National Conference to all music majors and minors was made recently, according to officers of the FSU chapter.

The MENC, formerly open only to music majors, said it will now also admit elementary education majors because of growing demands made upon the elementary school teacher in the field of music.

The role of music in the classroom, the community, the church, and among the physically handicapped will be discussed in open meetings throughout the year, president Louise McClure said. Meetings will be held at 6 45 p.m. the first and third Tuesdays of each month in room 218, Music Building. Registration of new members will end Friday.

1535 Fashion Show

Old Armor Shown In School Museum

Part of a Spanish coat of armor—said to be the oldest [pie]ce of Spanish material so far discovered in Florida—[is] [...] on display in the Florida State University mu[seum] along with a model showing how its wearer once [loo]ked.

Discovered in a sand dune [...] at Grayton Beach, 20 [miles] west of Panama City a [...] ago, the piece of armor is [par]t of practically an entire suit [of] Spanish armor dug out of [the] sand by a former FSU stu[dent] Van Ness Butler.

[I]ts wearer, who tramped the [co]ast perhaps as long as 400 [years] ago, may have met a sud[den] end experts believe.

[D]r. Hale G Smith and Dr. [Cha]rles H Fairbanks of the [FSU] Department of Archaeology [an]d two experts on Spanish ar[mor] have identified the six by [...] inch piece of armor pos[sess]ed by FSU as being made [so]me time before 1535, probably [in] Italy.

The experts, Harold L. Peter[son] of the National Park Serv[ice] at Washington and Leonard [Heinr]ich, armorer for the [Me]tropolitan Museum of Art in [New] York, said the fragment is [part] of a brigandine or breast[pl]ate. Made of iron plates [orig]inally covered with tin, cop[per] rivets originally secured [clot]h to the plates on the out[side]. Fabric marks still are visible.

The remainder of the suit of armor is possessed by its finder. Dr. Fairbanks said the armor is the oldest piece of Spanish material he knows of which has been found in Florida.

Although the experts agreed the armor was made before 1535, Dr. Fairbanks said this does not indicate it was worn soon after that time.

"The Spanish had a habit of equipping their armies with 'surplus war goods' manufactured as much as 100 years before." Much of Spanish armor was made, he added, in Germany or Italy.

If he were guessing what led Spaniards ashore here, Dr. Fairbanks said, 'I would say a coastal vessel had stopped for water. There is a fresh water pond not far away which may have been a stream which attracted the Spanish vessel's crew."

Here's How to Play TANGLE SCHOOLS

OLD GOLD'S GREAT NEW GAME

A total of 24 puzzles will appear before the Christmas holiday. Get started now in Old Gold's exciting new game for college students only.

Here are the Official Tangle Schools Rules! SAVE THEM!

1. PRIZES (a) P. Lorillard Company, the makers of OLD GOLD CIGARETTES, will award a total of 86 prizes valued at more than $1[illegible] to college students in the United States in accordance with the following Official Rules (see complete list of prizes). (b) This game will consist of twenty-four (24) monogrammed puzzle drawings to be published in this and other college newspapers, three puzzles each week for eight weeks, and a series of tie-breaking puzzles, if needed, as outlined in Rule 2. (c) Contestants must arrange the scrambled letters from each of the 24 monogrammed drawings so that they correctly spell the name of a certain American college or university. In the scrambled drawings there are no superfluous letters, no distortion of letters, and no letters are left out to confuse or mislead entrants. A clue will be furnished with each drawing to help identify the correct answer to the puzzle.

2. (a) The person complying with all the rules of the game and solving the highest number of puzzles correctly will be declared the winner of the first prize, a [illegible]-day tour of the world for two persons—the winner and another person of his choosing or, at the option of the winner, the first prize shall consist of $5,000 to be paid to the winner. The person complying with all the rules of the game and solving the second highest number of puzzles correctly will be declared the winner of the second prize. In like manner, the winners of the remaining 84 prizes will be determined. (b) In case more than one person solves correctly the same number of puzzles, the prize tied for, and as many subsequent prizes as there are persons tied, will be reserved and those so tying will be required to solve a set of tie-breaking puzzles, to determine the order in which the reserved prizes will be awarded. Each of the tie-breaking puzzles will be composed of scrambled letters forming the names of either one, two or three American colleges or universities. Clues with each puzzle drawing will indicate whether the puzzle contains one, two or three schools to be identified. If, after solutions have been submitted to this second set of puzzles, a tie or ties still remain, those tied will be required to solve another tie-breaking puzzle. Accompanying this tie-breaker will be an official list of American colleges and universities. From these, contestants will make up a list of schools and colleges in accordance with instructions to be given at that time. The contestant earning the highest score in so doing will be awarded the highest of the prizes tied for. The next highest prize will be awarded the contestant earning the second highest score and so on down through the reserved prizes that have been tied for. These tie-breaking puzzles, if necessary, will be mailed to each contestant. P. Lorillard Company reserves the right to ask, in the event of further ties, [illegible] to solve as many tie-breaking puzzles under supervision, and without assistance, as are necessary to determine a single winner for each prize.

3. NOTE (a) When entrants have completed solutions to the complete set of 24 initial puzzles, which are to be published three per week [illegible] are to be printed or typewritten by the entrant in the answer space provided on the puzzle or a [illegible] facsimile. The complete set of 24 puzzles must be answered, neatly trimmed and enclosed in an envelope, flat and not rolled and addressed to: Tangle Schools, P. O. Box 26A, Mount Vernon 1[illegible], N. Y., and mailed bearing a postmark not later than December [illegible]. Decorated, pasted or embellished puzzles are not permitted. Each set of 24 puzzles must be accompanied by a wrapper from any type OLD GOLD CIGARETTE package (REGULAR, KING SIZE OR FILTER KINGS) or a reasonable facsimile thereof. (b) More detailed instructions [illegible] of complete sets of puzzles will be published later. No Solutions are to be sent in separately. Save the puzzles and your solutions so that they may be submitted as a complete set at the end of the game. Entrants are not limited as to the number of complete sets of Solutions [illegible] be submitted [illegible], and only one prize will be awarded to any one entrant. (c) After the deadline for mailing solutions, the correct answers to all 24 puzzles will be published in a single issue of this paper. Each contestant must keep an accurate record of all solutions and check his answers with the published correct answers.

4. WHO MAY ENTER (a) This game is open to all bona fide college students in the United States [illegible], persons who, at the time of entering, are duly registered in an accredited college or university within the continental boundaries of the United States, except that the game is not open to students whose immediate families are employed by P. Lorillard Company or its advertising agencies. Contest is subject to all State and Federal regulations. (b) Contestants may, if they prefer, make copies of the puzzles by hand. Copies of the puzzles and of OLD GOLD package wrappers reproduced by a multiple process such as carbon paper or mimeograph are not acceptable. Entrants [illegible] want back puzzles and copy of Official Rules [illegible] by addressing their request to Tangle Schools Back Puzzles, P. O. Box 9, Grand Central Annex, New York 17, N. Y., enclosing 5c in payment for each [illegible] desired and/or rules, together with a STAMPED SELF-ADDRESSED envelope. (c) [illegible] affidavit [illegible] complete in [illegible] thought, solution [illegible] and is not acting for either his proxy or in collaboration with, any person who [illegible] qualified to participate under the rules.

5 METHOD OF JUDGING: Decision of the judges is final and contestants so agree upon entering the game. Solutions to the puzzles will be judged on correctness, including the spelling of the names. All entries become the property of P. Lorillard Company. None will be returned. P. Lorillard Company cannot be responsible for any solutions unduly delayed or lost in the mails. This also applies [illegible] P. Lorillard Company to any [illegible]. On entering the game, each contestant accepts the foregoing rules as binding. P. Lorillard Company [illegible] to disqualify any entry [illegible] conforming. Evidence indicating collusion [illegible] will automatically disqualify such contestants. P. Lorillard Company [illegible] typographical errors or other errors which may appear in any published matter in connection with the game. P. Lorillard [illegible], insofar as publication of [illegible] is concerned, is responsible [illegible] material for publication to newspapers involved.

Frosh Bounce To Cheerleader Spots

By NANCY GENE BROWN

A cloudy but warm day in the Music Building Amphitheatre set the stage Saturday for hot competition and high enthusiasm as two Freshman cheerleaders were chosen.

Sp[illegible] Charles Johnson, a 1956 graduate of Leon High School in Tallahassee, and vivacious Betty Lovan, a Freshman dance major from Landon High in Jacksonville, emerged as new additions to the cheering squad.

Enthusiastic after his victory, Johnson [illegible] and smiling said he'd had no professional cheering experience in high school, but "I sure did a lot of it on the sidelines."

Chosen over four other finalists, Betty said she too hadn't been a high school cheerleader but was a [illegible].

Maurice S[illegible] Steinberg, head cheerleader, who was in charge of choosing new members of the squad, held everyone in suspense as he thanked those who had tried out for cheerleading as well as the spectators for their cooperation, before announcing the winner in the women's finals. As her number, 51, was called, Miss Lovan screamed with delight and surprise, and ran to embrace the judges as the crowd applauded.

The other woman finalists were Jac[illegible] LaVergne, Esther Brown, Jo Margaret Pa[illegible]son, and Judy Turner.

WEEK'S PRACTICE

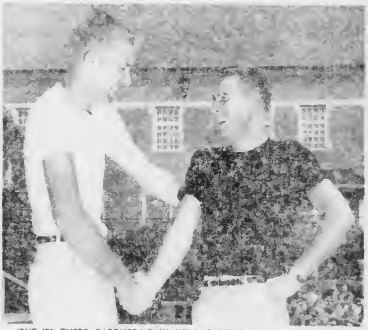
Following a week of practice on Landis Green a field of eight men and 30 women were present for the first try-outs in the Amphitheatre. Many of the 175 students observing seemed glad they didn't have to trade places with the judges, so close was the competition.

The other four judges who served with Steinberg were Dave Bachman, Student Body President, Margaret Ann Ballinger, last year's Homecoming Queen and [illegible] member of the cheering squad, Tommy W[illegible], alumn, who also had three years experience in cheering for the Seminoles, and Bob Bannerman of the athletic business manager's office.

Assisting with the scoring were four cheerleaders, Judy De[illegible], Nancy Fowler, Donna Hugg[illegible] and D[illegible] Ain[illegible]worth.

Commenting on the judges, Steinberg said "I feel they are highly qualified. However, we use to have more faculty representation."

POINT SYSTEM



Using a system with five points maximum in scoring, both men and women were judged on four categories: the ability to cheer, the performance of the mechanics of the cheer, personal appearance and grooming, poise, that "at home" look while cheering, and pep, energy and enthusiasm.

Summarizing the try-outs Steinberg said, "I like the sportsmanship displayed out here. The entire procedure was carried out with a high degree of efficiency and cooperation, he said.

The two new cheerleaders were introduced to the Freshman class [illegible] Ohio game Saturday night and [illegible] out by Steinberg as [illegible] of Freshman in [illegible] make [illegible] face [illegible] appearance at the next home game.

Derby Slated For October 13 Say Sigma Chis

The Sigma Chi derby, comical inter-sorority "track meet," will be held the afternoon of Saturday, October 13, instead of during the second semester as in past years, chairman Jim Kauffmann has disclosed.

He said all sororities will be invited to participate in the games, to be held on Landis Green. Sigma Chi coaches will begin "training" the entrants a week before.

Last year's events, from which Sigma Kappa amassed first place points, included broom hockey, a change clothes race, an obstacle course, tricycle run, key hunt, egg smash, and a secret event—catching a greased pig. Delta Delta Delta and Alpha Chi Omega came in third.

In addition to the regular Derby proceedings, Kauffman said, a large motorcade will lead off the afternoon; a beauty contest and semi-formal dance will follow that night. Events will vary only slightly from last year, he said.

Assisting Kauffman in preparations are Bill Phillips, Karl Edwards, and Bob Murray.

'57 Magazine College Board Positions Open

Mademoiselle Magazine has announced it is now accepting applications from undergraduate women for membership in its 1956-57 College Board.

Last summer, Margaret McLean, junior major in art, represented Florida State University on the board. Officials of the magazine in announcing the new contest, said the contest offers a chance for the Freshman as well as the Senior to win one of the 20 guest editorships—a month on the staff of Mademoiselle.

The top twenty Guest Editors will be brought to New York next June to help write, edit and illustrate the August College issue. They will be paid a regular salary for their month's work, plus round-trip transportation to New York City.

While in New York each Guest Editor will interview a celebrity in her chosen field, visit newspaper offices, fashion workrooms, stores and advertising agencies, besides working daily with the Mademoiselle Editor to whom she is assigned. The twenty Guest Editors get help in finding positions in their special fields and each year several join Mademoiselle's own staff.

November 30 is the deadline for applying for College Board Membership. To apply, write a 1500 word critique of the editorial section in Mademoiselle's August 1956 College issue (or a later issue if you can't get August). Give first over-all likes and dislikes, suggested changes and additions, then concentrate on what interests you most—fashion, illustration or fiction, for example. In case you feel the critique isn't enough to indicate your particular ability, send in addition something you think will.

Successful candidates will be notified of acceptance on the College Board before Christmas; the first College Board assignment will appear in Mademoiselle's January issue.

For further information see your Dean of Women or the August, September, October or November issue of Mademoiselle.

October 16 Is Date Of Scholarship Exam

A $400 General Teaching Scholarship examination will be held beginning at 8:00 a. m. Tuesday, October 16, in the Suwannee Room, the School of Education announced yesterday.

All students enrolled in the school, preparing to teach in Florida public schools, are eligible to take the examination. Application blanks may be obtained at Room 215, Education Building.

Students will be admitted to Suwannee Room for the test upon submitting a completed application blank at the door, it was added.

Veterans' Education Vet Club Topic Tonight In Westcott

Questions dealing with veterans' education are to be answered tonight at a Veteran's Club meeting beginning at 8 in Westcott Auditorium, president Nat Polak announced.

Speakers will be Bob Barry, of the Tallahassee Veteran's Administration office, Miss Carolyn Howard, of the FSU veteran's office; and Dr. R. R. Oglesby, Dean of Students.

Requisition forms for September checks will be issued. Polk explained that although last year's veteran students received their September and October checks in one payment in November, it is hoped this year to have the September allowance paid in October.

Polak said he hoped all veterans will come to the meeting whether they are members of the club or not. He said it will benefit all.

The club, which was formed last semester, has grown from a membership of 90 to over 500 active members.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB

Plans for the coming year will be discussed by the International Club at its first social meeting in Longmire Lounge tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. Students and faculty are eligible to join.

"It means he didn't take Mrs. Smith."

Campus Groups Told To Register

The multitude of campus organizations has at last swamped the Student Government Organizations Committee.

A harassed official, pleading not to be named, asked that all presidents, chiefs, leaders, chairmen and others responsible for the activities of groups meeting or merely established on campus to check in the Pow-Wow if their group is listed.

If not, the official added, they should send the name of the group, the names of its president, advisor, and most nearly available telephone number to the organizations committee, 17 Longmire.

TRAFFIC RULES STIFFLY ENFORCED

Day Says Congestion Being Fought; Student Cops Help

...versity traffic regulations are being rigidly enforced to combat congestion and alleviate parking problems, Dr. Harry Day, director of service units, declared yesterday.

With the addition of two student policemen to the university police staff, "full attention" will be given to the "blue and white sticker area" where parking is limited to two hours between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. he said. The enforcement of this limitation will allow more sticker vehicles a fair chance at parking spaces, Dr. Day indicated.

Students disregarding parking regulations are cautioned that their vehicles may receive a second violation ticket after the first has been issued. The accumulation of five violations in any one semester may result in the student's privilege to drive on campus being suspended, Dr. Day advised.

NIGHT RULES

Night parking regulations will also be enforced, he reminded. Motor parking on campus streets is prohibited between 1:30 and 7 a.m. Dr. Day pointed out, these are the three areas where night parking is allowed for the benefit of students living on the campus: The Florida Hall on the North Cawthon lot, and the street areas in back of Florida Hall and the Women's Dorm are available for their use. The director added that the lot of the Infirmary parking for night parking is provided.

He stressed the necessity to have cars registered because of the number on campus. This may be done in 104 Westcott. Shifter cards are being considered for those failing to register their motor vehicles he cautioned.

Motor scooters and motorcycles are considered motor vehicles.

TOWING CHARGES

Dr. Day also pointed out that a few students have had their cars towed to the maintenance lot because the vehicles were blocking driveways. Established rules state that "a towing charge of $5.00 is levied in those cases where a vehicle is impounded because of repeated violations or obstruction of traffic."

According to rules established by the Student Senate, the penalty for each violation is $50 is paid within 24 hours after issue; $1.00 if paid within 48 hours, and a minimum of $3.00 after 48 hours. Failure of students to pay fines within 20 days will result in disciplinary action through the Office of the Dean of Students.

Parking and traffic tickets handed out through today are "complimentary warnings," Student Traffic Court announced, with the exception of tickets issued to cars without stickers.

Patty Pascale, chief justice, said students who have already paid fines may get refunds by presenting receipts to Ruth Johnson, court secretary, 208 Longmire, on Monday or Tuesday.

Beginning tomorrow morning, she warned, tickets handed out will be in earnest.

An act of the 1955 Florida Legislature provides that University property is under the ultimate jurisdiction of the Tallahassee City Police, thus all violators are subject to City Court action.

COURT MEETS

The Student Traffic Court will meet at 1:30 p.m. on Tuesdays in 208 Longmire to hear appeals of students who were issued traffic tickets during the preceding week.

Faculty, staff and visitors may appeal through room 104 Westcott.

A list of the Traffic regulations appears below:

1. No parking will be permitted near fire hydrants or street entrances to sidewalks and buildings, or along painted yellow curbs.

2. Parking zones must be observed between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. except on Saturdays or university - designated holidays.

3. Vehicles parked on University streets are to be parked parallel to the curb, within ten inches of it and within the white lines, unless angle parking is provided and outlined in white.

SPEED LIMIT

4. The maximum speed limit on all campus streets is 20 miles per hour unless otherwise posted.

5. All "Stop" and "Slow" signs are to be observed.

6. Reckless and careless driving is forbidden on the campus.

7. Movement of traffic signs on the campus streets is not to be obstructed by stopping in the streets for any other purpose than parking.

8. Parking on the lawn or driving on campus where University streets are not provided is forbidden.

PEDESTRIANS

9. Pedestrians may be held responsible for failure to observe traffic safety regulations on the campus.

10. Only authorized individuals

Senate Meets, Finds Chamber Haunted By Disrecting Ghost

Detail Snafus Works; Body Declared Illegally Installed

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Student Senate's reapportionment bill, passed last spring after two years of debate, came back to haunt the Senate Wednesday, as the year's first meeting was called off due to a technicality in the bill.

Moreover, Senate apparently cannot hold an official session until its membership is completed in the freshman class living unit elections October 16 and 23.

As women's vice-president Carolyn Class concluded the opening prayer senior senator Jim Moore leaped to his feet, calling a point of order, and declared that the senators had not been legally installed in office last spring and can not be an inherited with power until after the freshmen-living unit elections.

Moore said the bill which altered Senate from a strictly class representation basis to a class-living unit system set the installation date within a term after the fall election. This, he said, did away with the spring installation for the twelve Senators elected from the sophomore, junior, and senior classes, which was however, held the last week of class.

"It was an erroneous installment," he charged.

At this point men's vice-president Jim Boles jumped up, said loudly, "In that case I'm not going to stay here," and walked out while Moore was speaking. Senator Ronnie Blose and spectator Bill Roche followed Boles.

Moore then proposed the remaining persons consider themselves a "group of senators-to-be" and meet informally. He nominated his brother, Senator Art Moore, as chairman of the temporary group. The motion was approved with only Miss Class voting no.

CALLED ERROR

Vice-president Bill Cullom, relinquishing the chair to, Art Moore, cited the technicality was caused by a "probable typographical error." He said the bill should have provided for installation of class senators in the spring and installation of living-unit representatives in the fall."

"I am very sorry that the people who were aware of this technicality did not inform me before the Senate meeting started," added Cullom, who had placed the adoption of rules of procedure and appointment of temporary committee chairmen on the agenda that never was reached.

Moore seemed the only person who had noticed the catch clause. He said he called it to attention to insure that Senate would not pass any legislation that could later be declared illegal.

COMMITTEE NAMED

With the few senators present-to-elect assenting, the chairman appointed Polly Atwater, Pat Fallas, and himself to a committee to watch over the reapportionment bill in case any further loopholes or conflicts come to light.

Moore said he had no idea his brother, who lost a close race for the student body presidency last year, would be elected as all of the legality of Senate.

Four freshmen senators and 17 representatives from living areas are to be elected by the final balloting October 16. The fourteen members of Senate elected last spring contest new difficulty until then, according to the standing interpretation of the bill.

UNFINISHED DUTIES

Attorney General Arnold Greenfield, who told the senators they might as well go home when it they can't meet officially said he disagreed with their action. He told Cullom it was possible someone may take it to Honor Court.

"It could be a time consuming case," Greenfield said.

The controversial reapportionment bill was debated more than any other bill in last year. During the two months when it was under intensive study Senators made several suggestions for electing living unit representatives and at the same time making it possible for those living immediately in the fall, but in the final rush to pass the bill all members of community was apparently forgotten.

Senate Is Out But Government Still Functions

Bashman

Student Government can function despite the technical inability of Student Senate to meet until [illegible] next month, Attorney General Arnold Greenfield asserted yesterday.

In an official opinion, Greenfield declared, "It will be temporarily necessary for all pressing matters of Student Government to be handled through other channels. All members of the Cabinet, the three vice-presidents, and of course the president himself are unquestionably legally in office—these people are at the present time able to take effective legal actions regardless of the inability of Senate to do so."

Greenfield, president Dave Bashman, and vice-presidents Bill Cullom, Jim Boles, and Carolyn Close signed a statement calling for a revision of the reapportionment act in relation to terms of office.

"Due to a regrettable oversight in its formulation the new election law provides that, although the old Senate ceases to function at the end of the spring semester, the new Senate cannot be legally installed until after the fall elections," they wrote.

"It is unfortunate that the Senate has been denied the power to take any action on behalf of the students for an entire month by a legal technicality. Because of this unfortunate section of the law, much valuable time which might have been used to promote the student interest has been wasted. We mutually hope that everyone connected with Student Government—both in the Cabinet and in the Senate—will cooperate to eliminate the slowness of effective service as that similar misfortunes will not occur in the future."

Bashman had a separate comment.

"It is unfortunate that this situation has arisen. However, if this student government problem should arise in the interim, I will be more than glad to work with them and help in any way possible."

Six Counties Vie For Sites Of Institutions

A six county scrap for the two new state colleges recommended for Florida cropped up before the Board of Control at Orlando yesterday.

Bidding for the sites of the proposed new institutions were delegations from Sarasota, Palm Beach, Broward, Escambia, Hillsborough and Pinellas counties.

There was no immediate decision.

To help in its decision, the Board will set facts and figures from a committee to develop criteria for selection of sites and a report from the State Road Department on test borings and contour analysis of the suggested sites.

The Council for the Study of High Education earlier had recommended location of the two new four-year schools in the Tampa Bay area and on the lower east coast.

The Council said the new institutions should be established as colleges and develop into universities later.

If funds are appropriated by the 1957 legislature, classes could be started in the fall of 1958.

Sign For Annual Starting Monday

Students may begin making picture appointments for the class section of the 1956-57 Tally-Ho Monday, Editor Barbara Ayala announced yesterday.

She said appointments may be made in Westcott Building opposite the ticket office between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. until October 12. The editor said that any student who does not have his picture made must register for the annual and pay a subscription fee of $1 if he wishes to receive the 1956-57 edition.

SEVERAL MORE WEEKS

The 1955-56 Tally-Ho will not be distributed "for several more weeks," current editor Barbara Ayala said yesterday after consultant with the printers.

We will make announcement as soon as the students can pick them up," she said. "We ask your cooperation in not coming to the office or the Lonmire Lounge to get last year's edition until such announcement is made."

Miss Ayala said that when students make appointments for portrait pictures, a $2 fee must be paid. She said pictures will be made beginning October 15 in Room 403, Longmire, by Colonna Studios of New York.

Last years were taken by student assistants on campus under a photographic set-up established by the University last year and abandoned this year.

The editor said proofs of the photos to be taken starting October 15 will be mailed to students, who may mark their selections according to instructions and return them to the studio by mail.

Special student price listings for re-orders will be enclosed along with the order blanks, she said.

Miss Ayala said those students who do not want pictures but do want annuals may pay their $1 at the same time and place reserved for picture appointments.

Final Deadline For Politicians Set Tuesday

Prospective candidates for elective offices still have until Tuesday to file application for candidacy, according to Miss McCullough, secretary of elections.

"A few freshmen have filed applications to run for class offices, but there is a great number of vacancies for qualified students to fill," she said.

Candidates may file for office in the Graduate dining office to be fore 5 p. m. October 9 is the date set to hand in expense estimates, said Miss McCullough.

Persons running for freshmen class presidency are allowed to spend $30 for campaign expenses. Senators are allowed $25 while other candidates may spend $20.

Posters must not be larger than 11 by 14 inches and must be confined to the bulletin boards prescribed by the election committee, asserted the official.

The primary election in which freshman class officers, senators and living are senators will be held Tuesday, October 16. The final vote will be taken October 23.

Living Area senators will be chosen under the new reapportionment bill, passed unanimously by Student Senate last March. A two year dispute was ended by the bill which provides for representatives to be elected from 17 precincts.

Two meetings were held this week to acquaint new and old students with qualifications for candidacy.

Travel Film OK For Students

The university has now approved the showing of travel films distributed by a commercial company to interested students, according to Dean of Women Katherine Warren.

Groups in dormitories, fraternities or sororities wishing to see the movies, which are produced by various governments and picture travel opportunities in their countries, may contact Miss Marie Williams 19 Longmire, who will arrange for the presentation of the films, a projector and projector operator.

Campus Chest Drive Slated For November

Goal of the '56-'57 Campus Chest drive is again set at $5,000, according to Nancy Lee Young, general chairman.

Last year's contributions were a little under the set goal, but we think we will reach the goal and even go beyond it this year," she asserted.

An informative half time show will kick off the annual charity drive sometime in November said Ruth Shuman, publicity chairman.

Alpha Tau Omega was the large contributor to the Campus Chest last year with $425 earned by his successful Woody Herman Stock. The fraternity will be awarded a trophy at the kick-off which will be awarded again this year for the organization raising the most money for the drive.

During the designated weeks, fraternities, sororities, dorms, and other organizations sponsor fund raising projects which must first be submitted and approved by the committee.

Through the combined efforts of all groups, the Campus Chest donates its funds to several charities such as the American Cancer Society, American Leprosy Foundation, Heart Fund, Cerebral Palsy, Infantile Paralysis, and the World University Service.

The following members have been appointed to the Campus Chest committee: Nancy Lee Young, general chairman, Ruth Shuman, publicity, Mabel Hinson, assistant publicity, Mary Ann Coleman, sororities; Dick Rhodes, fraternities; Gloria Lantz, women's dorms, Robert Pope, men's dorms; Mary Ann Turpin, treasurer; Linda Jones, secretary.

Ideas for projects may be submitted to the respective chairman.

Flood Of Balls Engulfs Longmire

The Lonesome Directors' office has "laundered" all unused ping pong balls which it will sell to students or campus organizations.

Miss Joni Adams, director, said the balls are part of surplus supplies left over when ping pong tables in Longmire Building were removed several years ago. No tables or other equipment is on hand, she said.

GOLD KEY PICKS 10

Gold Key, Florida State undergraduate honorary for men last night tapped 10 outstanding students for membership. Those honored were chosen for outstanding scholarship, service, and leadership in many fields of campus life. President Bob Kilday announced that formal initiation will be held Sunday. Those chosen were Jim Rathen, Bob Cullom, Bob Truluck, Ryan Edwards, Paul Ortt, Arnold Greenfield, Jim McIntosh, Lee Carse, Oscar Johnson, and Martin Dyckman.

FSU's Little People

Registrar Charles H. Walker's announcement that Florida State University's enrollme..' this Fall semester exceeded by a good margin the 1955-56 total was good news to those people who were worried that the enrollment would drop this year.

His announcement that FSU is still skipping along in fine style stopped speculation over the effects of the slight strengthening of entrance standards put into operation this summer.

No Doze. The curve is still rising. As a matter of fact, it must be admitted that this semester's near-7,000 enrollment stacks up well beside, for example, 1945's enrollment of 2,447.

The enrollment picture is not all a campus of roses, however, with President Doak S. Campbell repeating many times that the number of students here should never exceed 10,000. This will prevent FSU from ever capturing any attendance records, in case anyone has wondered if that is its goal.

It is extremely doubtful that FSU should, or will, ever match such behemoth institutions as the University of Texas (with upwards of 12,000 students this semester.)

And we feel that it is as it should be.

Peeling The Peel

The Orange Peel has been peeled.

In its role as University of Florida humor magazine, it long stirred up controversy and storm practically with each issue By comparison, the publication put out by its brethren at FSU seemed the work of the rankest of novices as far as naughtiness was concerned.

This time the Peel went too far. Prexy J. W. Reitz declared, in effect, "That's all boys," when he set eye on the current issue prepared in the summer. He halted distribution.

Failure to comply with obscenity regulations in effect for all publications caused the Citrus Skin's undoing. It was doubtful that it would be accepted by the U.S. mails.

So at UF, the staff of the publication was at latest word appealing a peel of a peel!

Just Two Idealists

We have had Lincoln, Jefferson, Jackson, the two Roosevelts, and Wilson, all of whom possessed devotion to some cause beyond the sphere of ordinary politics

And now we have Adlai Stevenson, who in his acceptance three and a half years, has defined the thing down the stage to such high wire he cannot help but fall. Those of his party who had his idealism, and stabbed him with vacillation and evil tights; who in the back whenever it could, and failed for the abolition of poverty. And they cheered him still.

And there is Eisenhower, who President over and over in his time, not so much because of speech making as a parts of his health but because they sensed that he shared with upset the delicate balance we can—that we must—find a torment which will set on without why in the peace in this 10 minutes after his inaugural- world, who firmly announced ation.

sized institutions of higher learning. Like a small boy with "eyes bigger than his tummy," a university can bite off more than it can chew.

When there are too many students, efficient study is impaired. The dormitories are overcrowded, causing many students to be cast into temporary, inadequate quarters. Classrooms and instructors get scarce, leading to such sad conditions as crowded lectures, impersonal education by graduate teachers and students, abandonment of worth-while upper range courses to free instructors for general education classes, and shifting teachers from their usual courses to ones they are not familiar with.

It is not sufficient to counter these facts with the statement that the only cause of such conditions is reluctance of the state Legislature to appropriate enough money to finance the needed expansion. There is only so much money to go around and higher education is just one of the monetary obligations of the state.

An expansion program can only take place within the limitations imposed by available capital and cooperation of those with authority over the university. Let us hope that in its haste to become "bigtime", FSU does not forget the little people—its student scholars.

For he is a lame duck president. Even when sincerely desirous to keep the Democrats from coming up with another four-term Roose-vit limits him to two terms The Republicans need not have very much what he thinks. He cannot leave them. They cannot use him in 1960.

If he and a Republican majority are elected this time the Democrats have the unfortunate fate or amendment is almost certain now well, we wonder, will Senator Knowland, the GOP Senate leader, and Bricker, Jenner and Company like an executive who calls for a world-wide effort at understanding, a bridge across the chasm which does separate the east and west? Eisenhower He took pull it best when he showed Eisenhower gloomily staring down from the White Ship of State, as Bricker, in a submarine labeled "Bricker Amendment," chants, "Hail to the Chief! Fire away!"

By contrast, Adlai Stevenson has shown himself enough of a practical politician to win election despite the protests of those who did not like his views on certain burning issues. Truman did not like him because he was an independent leader. Truman was a soundly beaten.

Stevenson is a man who commands the support of the majority of his party; they are certainly not supporting him only because they think he has not the odds are to the contrary. They support him because they believes as they believe.

We think a political party should pick candidates who express the views of the party. We have with the situation pointed out the foul example of political Republicans who, while Senator Robert Taft, "Mr. Republican," was denied the nomination of the party whose principles he exemplified because a war hero offered it the chance to win.

It is indeed a lamentable situation Should Eisenhower win he has not really been elected. Should he lose it will be a historic role for a man who deserved better.

The Republican Party is no place for Eisenhower's idealism.

Writer Hit The Senate, Gives' Ideas'

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

To say the situation was one of tension, anticipation and importance would be an exaggeration of Student Senate's first meeting. About 10 of the 12 absent and the duly elected drifted casually into the dimly lit chamb even more than usual to disperse to sleep- meeting chamber, the p to organizer finished with business-like Bill Clifton, and the gavel banged down for another year's business.

We should have learned, after three years, that anything can happen in Student Senate. It did. Senate found it had fixed things so that it couldn't even hold an official meeting.

This was blamed on the bill creating living areas for representation by area and reducing the number of senators elected from the classes. This was not a fair accusation. After all, who wrote the bill?

BUT WE have faith in Senate. It will meet sooner or later, and it will have but a slightly longer agenda because of the delay. Major action will be assumed by the administration, unimportant things the Hill will magnanimously leave to Student Government. Finally, as we are told that there is a vicious student government, it is to suggest that Student Court rulings could be done away with. Action is cried for.

If it is obvious that drinking at football games cannot be eliminated, in spite of Senate's rigorous denunciation of such last year. Very well, then! Just as the State of Florida screens gambling at race tracks in return for a fat cut of the proceeds, let Senate establish a Bar at the gridiron, and who wish to drink could set pleasantered in quiet compact. rules would be broken, and student government would prosper. Happy that the Homecoming dance is to be held there, a shadow of concern for the very expensive decorations that preceded the general enthusiasm. Let Senate purchase two thousand pints of Florida booze which could be served at the dance much as a bonfire and Coca-cola bowling shoes. Again, much profit.

4. The wiring on the scoreboard is faulty. Senate proposes to appoint someone to suggest that all the lights on campus be disconnected to repair the scoreboard. Be bold Senate.

5 Senate you have expressed many times your pride in the Marching Chiefs and have the appropriate $100 to buy them the music for a new fanfare!

6 Senate you've talked much of buying the Florida Flambeau a printing press (of we would like to have it But Tally Ho needs it more.

7. Some social scientists view history as a series of cause-and-effect relationships. Last year campus cafeteria food fell far, below description that nobody ate it. Senate, so great changes were to appoint to improve the food, but now it's nice and low long.

Now everyone knows how little pep and energy seniors have. The classes are powerless to act for them, and they don't eat. They will starve. Then, I ask you, who will be the Senior Association? For whom will Homecoming be held? No students! Resolve that a seniority system shall be in effect at the cafeteria, underclass senators, of course, exempted.

He Sees Strange Fate Befalling College Mags

The University of Alabama Rammer-Jammer has hit the dust. The best humor magazine left in the south. It met a fate similar to that of its sister publications at other schools, predicated by a "combination" magazine. The Florida Orange Peel is, as usual, fighting for its life, and the FSU Smoke Signals is preparing to "level" itself out for the second time. Now someone will be suggesting that campus humor magazines have been better days.

Just read an item about a graduate student seeking a scholarship at a large Mid-western university. To the question in the application blank, "What is your reason for needing financial help?" The Student replied, "My wife and I are separated, leaving me as my sole means of support."

George Washington University students returned to a commercially run food service for the first time in the same approval, accorded. FSU's new gravy is Now the new paper of George Washington is called "The Hatchet" . . . tle yearbook, "The Cherry Tree", is the subject of yearbooks, we don't have to feel lonesome while waiting for ours. Students at the University of Texas are waiting too.

Men students cheering in t Sayers Hall at Southwest Texas State College last week found regulation eight in their dormitory handbook pretty interesting. It read, "Report your overnight guest and have her sign guest book." Evidently somebody forgot to rewrite the regulations of the farmer girls' dorm before turned it over to men students this fall.

While other college newspapers were welcoming, saluting or lecturing the freshman recently, Phil Kraemer of the Syracuse Daily Orange tried to define the "true" college student. Here's how he sees them. "What are freshmen? They are the First Pilgrim on academic life. How may one recognize a Freshman? Another more common a Freshman by his bright, shiny face, upturned on the threshold of education, or his soft, new, but slightly carried head and clear, mind. These signs will all have vanished by the sophomore year." And in answer to the question "What subjects will the Freshman take? He gave the universal answer. "The Freshman will take all required subjects and like. It."

Students at a southern university, sweltering in the near 100 degree heat of a registration line cast envious eyes at one of their fellows. The attractive and resourceful girl didn't seem to be bothered by the heat at all —and small wonder. In the palm of her hand she held a

Tells About Experiences In Long Cafeteria Line

By OSCAR JOHNSON

Reflection While Standing In Cafeteria Line . . . It was a self-perpetuating-type line. That means the students who came up late took one look and then joined their friends near the head of the line.

The ones in the rear never moved — except backwards a little, maybe. They stood there rooted to one h n g ry spot, looking the line-breakers in the face and fixing by on their way to tables trays loaded with food, all kinds of food, even that stuff looked good

And they had steaks—country-fried steaks, Salisbury steaks, T-bone steaks, Swiss dry steaks, gooey steaks. Some of them smiled a little as they bounced by. "Suckers" they seemed to say. You stained in resignation to the front of the line . . . to see a couple more take their places there. Entering the line back about a foot.

All this gave rise to a new form of campus amusement. You began a game of chess with the student behind you. You noted a crisp at the head of the line gather in chairs around an empty table, and one began dealing cards

SOME MUSIC majors left bristle and returned with various instruments: soon a rip-snorting jam session was going in full swing

The party began to get rowdy. A "Shingle" fell to the floor, a Freshman sang the school song to the tune of a Jerry Mulligan arrangement. A was the end of the line

Give Students A Better Artist Series

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

With the advent of the Student Artist Series this year, the regular Artist Series, which in the past has been a deplorable catch-all, should now presumably be able to devote itself to the best (or exclusive). The ridiculously inadequate budget allowed it, on which the Committee has had to work usually allows only about four concerts a year, and when half of these are sops, such as Yma Sumac, Polgar, Anna Russell, the Don Cossacks, Marine Band, and the Columbus Boychoir, there remains very little that could genuinely be called "Art" or that should even be on an "Artist Series."

WHILE the Artist Series Committee booked the Minneapolis Symphony—the first orchestra to appear in at least four years—for a group of concerts last year, the budget was so depleted that only two other concerts were scheduled that season—the Marine Band and Anna Russell! Despite the affection and sincere admiration we have for Miss Russell, we do not think that she is a concert pianist, no matter how literate, belongs on an Artists Series. And when the Marine Band plants the type of professional program that is the artistic drain of most bands, then we are forced to ask some serious questions. In other words in a major University of 6000 enrollment, there was only one important artistic event during the course of an entire year!

The Artist Series program for the coming year is a step in the right direction. It includes an excellent Yugoslavian chamber group, a lecture (Igor Gorin) and a series of Rembrandt which will probably be a hodge-podge (Canadian National Ballet, Jose Greco, Robert Chorale, which has made some fine recordings But this is not enough. A University has size and should therefore be able to afford not to have a good artist series as it is to not have a Marching Chiefs or a football team. It is a good football team. There should be at least five or six concerts a year, and there should as many if we are to compete on an equal footing with the Eastern and Northern colleges and universities. Northern neighbors like the University of Michigan's May Festival of Music.

The Fine Arts Committee has been trying to raise the artistic level of the current series. This can be done if the Student Artist Series will book only the artists Anna Russell and Polgara, and leave the Four Freshmen on campus organizations which brought in such "popular" artists and bands, and leave the series for which it was originally intended, and dismissed by trying to please every group on campus, so that it may truly become an "Artist Series" in practice as well as in name.

Open Letter To Legislature Gives State's Lawmakers The' What For

(Ed. Note: McIntyre's column is in the form of an open letter to the State Legislature this issue. It is written for reading will be with tenane in ebrek.)

By JIM McINTYRE

Florida Legislature
Capitol Building
City

Dear Sirs:

This is just a short note to express my appreciation for your progressive outlook in regard to our institutions of higher learning in this state. The philosophy you have developed toward these schools is truly indicative of the marvelous trend toward greatness that we are taking in our state. I am indeed proud to be a citizen of the State of the Future."

I HAVE OBSERVED WITH increasing pride, sirs, the strides toward a larger concept of education going on all around me. Our football team is keeping up with the times by going "bite-time" in a very big way. I understand our stadium is to be made bigger in order to accomodate big crowds so that we may schedule big teams and become a "big-time" football power. We have a fine, new, big gymnasium. It will accommodate big crowds for big basketball games. We have a big band. We must certainly have a great University, for we are big.

The master of which I am perhaps the proudest, however, is that of expanding our size is at our gym. It is the concept of education that provides for large groups to gather from to the same wealth of knowledge at the same time. This is a truly wonderful system and should be utilized at every possible opportunity. I feel a sense of exhilaration every time I proudly expand my chest and declare to a student from some - I hesitate to say it- small school such as Oberlin or Princeton that I had a class with over 150 students in it. This gives me a tremendous advantage in conversation with persons of that particular ilk. I feel lordly the rest of the day.

AND YOUR POLICY on the number of people needed in order to offer a course. This is an economical venture in keeping the professor's nose to the grind-stone, since he has to have at least ten people enrolled in order to offer a course. This is to keep them from loafing on the job by being informal with the group in their class. This, gentlemen, is a bit of a spaced loaf on your part, for very few faculty members have the ability to be informal professor for not teaching a particular course at all than it would be to put him for teaching it to four or five people

If we save money at this point, we will have more to spend on our athletic plant. Because they teach small classes at Harvard and every body knows that Harvard is a hot-bed for college athletics. Thank you, gentlemen, for protecting us

I have had to change two courses this semester, sirs, because of insufficient enrollment. I did it willingly, though, knowing that I only subjugate my individual quest for knowledge to provide for the mass enlightenment of the monolithic group of which I am a part. I appreciate your every effort to make my education a BIG thing.

I only hope some graduate school will accept me.

Study The Arts

ATHENS, Ga. (I.P.)— A new project designed to discover and make available materials for the study of the arts of the United States is being undertaken on the campus of the University of Georgia. Under a $110,000 grant from the Carnegie Corporation, Lamar Dodd, head of the University's art department is president of the College Arts Association, will direct a comprehensive study to identify outstanding examples of American arts including painting, sculpture, architecture and the crafts.

The selected materials will then be reproduced and assembled in a form suitable for use in courses of instruction. The new project is an attempt to remedy a serious dearth of teaching materials available in American art, is a reflection of the Corporation's continuing interest in strengthening American studies in the nation's colleges and universities.

The Carnegie Corporation believes that the collection will be useful not only in courses in art departments, but will also enhance instruction in other fields of American studies through its illumination of the nation's social, economic and historical background.

The Press Table

By ALAN WHITMARSH
Flambeau Sports Editor

THE BIG ONE

Every game is a big one on any coach's schedule, but certainly more so to a school like Florida State, vying for recognition in the realm of major-college football.

However, tomorrow's battle with the University of Georgia at Athens, Ga., certainly is one of the three "big ones" on the Seminoles' 1956 slate.

It is these three games, Georgia, Auburn and Miami which the experts say the Seminoles have no chance whatsoever of winning, and in most cases no chance of staying even close.

I'm just don't tell a team that is fresh from a 47-7 winning game victory that they have no chance to win more.

Tom Nugent's charges put on a dazzling demonstration of power in all phases of the offensive game for the 10,000 fans present last Saturday night, and a good deal of them went home with the feeling that this might be the year for that long-awaited big upset.

Besides, we're still smarting from that 47-14 racking the Bulldogs (and in particular one Bobby Garrard) gave us last year. We're ready to get a little sweet revenge.

Nobody, least of all this reporter, is forgetting that Steve Butts claims to have the best team he's had in his years at Georgia.

Bobby teams are always tough, and they're even tough when they gain the opening lead on their opponents as they so brutally demonstrated here that Saturday night last year.

Butts is the type of coach who bears no mercy and once the sive in the dike is opened, wastes no time in driving his charges through.

He family believe that the Seminoles can stick with anyone in the South for 30 minutes, and if they gain a serious lead, who knows?

Taking everything into consideration, we're going out on a limb, prayerful limb and hope that nobody is standing around us with a saw.

FLORIDA STATE 20, Georgia 14

FAT ON THE BACK DEPARTMENT

It's customary and certainly proper in these columns to give the outstanding athletes a well-deserved "pat on the back," but this time we're sort of reversing things.

This "job well done" goes to the one person who often forgets. The person who is most responsible outside the coaches for the action on the field. The footballers.

In particular, we want to compliment the students at Florida State—and we in particular the Freshman class—for a wonderful job of supporting the team at least Saturday's opener.

The long line of Freshmen which greeted the footballers when they came out on the field at the start of the game did more for this school than any amount of public relations copy could ever do.

It probably also did more for the morale of the football team than any amount of cheering would—particularly since in this case they didn't expect it.

A cheering crowd with a lot of friendly faces in it can do an awful lot for a football team when they take the field with a rough opponent.

Let's get more students out in the future, and make cheering louder than ever before. It's a good way to have a winning football season.

ONE FOR THE BOOK

We never played a minute of football in high school, but Jay Alderman of Boston, Ga., is considered a pretty good prospect at the tackle slot for the FSU frosh this year, and only that's not confusing enough for you, Alderman came to FSU on a basketball scholarship, but decided he'd like to play football instead.

You see, Boston, Ga. doesn't even have a football team, possibly never has had one. With this in mind, the sports writer became markedly curious when he noticed Alderman's name on the FSU freshman roster. Chatting with boys who have shone in high school football fame all over the country.

An inquiry to the FSU sports publicity office sent one of the sports publicity reporters in search of Frosh coach Paul Odom to see what gives.

Alderman was originally brought to the Seminole campus on a basketball scholarship. He decided he'd like to play some football, went out to see Odom and made the team.

Odom admits frankly that Alderman has what it takes to become an outstanding football player one day. He surely has the size. 6-2, 210 pounds.

Odom's old saying and a corny one but "where there's a will there's a way."

OFF THE PRESSES

Yes, end Tom Feamster was recently traded by Los Angeles to the Baltimore Colts. The Colts are developing into an offensive tackle. FSU's football guide produced by sports publicity director Elgin Hayes rated one of the finest in the country. Some of it only to the one produced by Navy.

Freshman Gridders Kick Off 1956 Season At Panama City

By FRANK RAMOS
Flambeau Sports Writer

A nightly praised Florida State University freshman football squad opens its season tomorrow night against the Mississippi Southern "B" team at Panama City.

Coach Paul Odom has declared, "This year's freshman team is one of the best ever assembled at Florida State."

The Baby Seminoles this year are one of the largest Frosh squads in ever play at FSU. The starting line averages a healthy 195 pounds.

Coach Odom expects the defense to be much sharper than the offense due to the limited time spent on offensive plays.

Our defense looked good against the varsity in practice and coupled with a not so sharp offense will make tomorrow's contest a low scoring affair," said Odom.

Odom plans to alternate two teams against the Southerners. Expected to start for the Baby Seminoles at ends are high school all-American Tony Romeo of Tampa and John Spivey, a 195 pounder from Panama City. Spivey captained the North team in the annual North-South all-star football game last year.

Opening at the tackles will be Tony Tobaye of Jacksonville and Don Rohrer, a 232-pounder from Clarksville, Pa. Al Elmore of Clearwater and Abner Bisbee of West Palm Beach will open from the guard slots.

Paul Slaton, a brawny 207-pounder from Miami will hold down the pivot post. At quarterback will be Paul Pasquali of Binghamton, N.Y. Ronnie Parker and Gene McCormick, two other fine quarterbacks have been insured and will probably see limited action.

Tom Hill of Leland another high school all-American, will start at halfback along with Allen Smith of Masontown, Pa. Wesley Sivars of Auburndale who was most valuable player in the North-South game, holds down the fullback post.

"This freshman team has the spirit in play big time football," says Odom, "a vital factor in winning ball games."

If the offense can be sharpened the Baby Seminoles will be a rough team for such opponents as: Edwin Air Force, South Georgia Junior College Univerally of Miami Frosh, and Georgia Military College

Intramural News

Next Monday at 4 p.m. the first official meeting of the Men's Intramural Board will be held in Room 214 at the Men's Physical Education building.

Every organization wishing to participate in any phase of the program for the coming year is urged to have a representative present.

At this time entry blanks for the October sports will be ready, as well as permanent registration sheets. The new system is set up to allow registration at eligible participants for the total school year.

Every resularly enrolled male student is eligible to participate in intramurals except professional athletes, those who have letters in a sport, or those who are on varsity, freshman, or "B" squads.

A player is only barred in that sport in which he comes under the above three headings.

Many squad athletes keep in condition between seasons by taking part in intramurals.

Lee Corso played intramural basketball, track and volleyball. Olen Vesquille, Merle Gureia, Leonard Nellums, and many others participated in volleyball, tennis, touch football, basketball and golf.

Seminoles, Georgia Meet Tomorrow In Athens, Ga.

Tribe Looking For 2nd Win

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Writer

A fired up Florida State University football team, with the taste of victory still in its mouth ,will journey to Athens, Ga., tomorrow afternoon to meet the once-beaten Georgia Bulldogs.

FSU coach Tom Nugent will start essentially the same boys he used last weekend when the Seminoles trounced Ohio U. 47-7.

Going into the Ohio setup the Seminoles were rated a one-touchdown favorite, but FSU showed plenty of spirit and surprised everyone.

Coach Wally Butts of Georgia, who still is disappointed over his team a 14-0 loss to Vanderbilt last weekend, says his team is in top shape for the Seminoles

The Garnets and Gold will be led again by quarterback Lee Corso, Corso, who is a shifty runner and fine passer, has proved capable of handling the signal-calling duties. He is backed up by veterans Len Svamic and Ve Primm.

At left half for the Tribe will be "Rambling" Bob Renn who ran through and around the Ohio defense last weekend. Bork Metts, another speed merchant is the probable starter at right half.

Senior fullback Joe Holt will round out the Tribe backfield.

IN THE LINE

Bob Nelluma and Ron Schomburger will handle the end duties. Nelluma caught two touchdown passes last week against Ohio.

Bill Musselman and George Bover are probable starters at tackle, while Leo Baggett and Al Pacifico hold down the guard positions

Center Trey Barnes will handle the snapback duties once again.

Georgia, who runs its plays from the "T" or split "T" will most likely start junior Joe Comfort at quarterback. Jeffacson and Dave Davis and Jimmy Orr are known as breakaway threats at the halfback slots

Captain and fullback Knox Culpepper is a tough inside runner capable of gaining needed yardage in the clinch.

Roy Wilkins and Lanear Robertson are the ends while John Lack and Pud Masteller will open at tackle

The Bulldogs have two of the best linemen in the Southeastern Conference in Wayne Eye and Tony Clabenber at guards. Both these men were named on the all-SEC checklist after their fine performance last week

Although a few injuries were picked up by some of the Seminoles against Ohio, Nugent feels the boys will be in shape for Georgia

The Bulldogs carry the favorite title going into tomorrow's contest but Nugent feels that FSU is ready for any lee

Biggest' Homecoming Indicated By Preparations

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Les Brown To Play At Annual Dance

Les Brown and his band have been contracted to play at the 1956 Homecoming Dance, chairman Bob Elting announced Wednesday.

Elting predicted "the biggest dance in FSU history" can be expected at the October 20 affair.

Brown's "Band of Renown" will feature vocalist Jo Ann Greer. His band played on campus last year in a one-night concert program as an FSU Special Event.

The Band of Renown, which records for Capitol and has just completed its tenth year with Bob Hope, also brings comedian and vocalist Butch Stone and trombonist Stumpy Brown, who have helped the band earn Number One ratings in polls conducted by Down Beat and Metronome.

The Homecoming dance, said Elting, will be "a sort of commemoration of FSU's tenth year as a co-educational school."

Elting, president of Gold Key, said it is customary for that group to be in charge of the Homecoming dance as its annual project.

Last year the Flambeau ran a ballot requesting that students indicate their choice of bands for this year's Homecoming. Winner of the poll was Guy Lombardo. However, Lombardo's band is engaged at the Taft Grill in New York City and therefore is unable to come. Through the efforts of Mrs. Kathryn Vernon of the special events office, and Dr. Otis McBride, general chairman of all Homecoming activities, FSU was able to obtain a contract with Brown, Elting said.

The dance will begin at 9 p.m. October 20, in the Men's Gymnasium.

Tickets will be on sale at the Student Center and Westcott on October 17, 18, and 19 from 9 a.m. till 4 p.m. and October 20 from 9 a.m. till noon. Cost is $3.00 per couple.

Gymkana Contest Set October 19

The 1956 Miss Gymkana contest will be held on October 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the Man's Gymnasium.

Approximately twenty-two coeds will be chosen for the Miss Gymkana Court of Honor, according to Dr. Hartley Price, gymnastic coach.

The queen will be crowned during the Gymkana Production, "Aloha," running from November 11 to 17.

Contestants will be judged on poise, personality, and beauty. Girls should wear shorts, T-shirts, and tennis shoes, Dr. Price said.

Deadline for entries is Saturday, October 13 at 5 p.m. Dr. Price said all entries should be turned in to Alice Sullivan, Miss Gymkana of 1955, phone 2-0137, or to Gerry Lehner, phone 2-4739.

Each sorority, fraternity, and dorm may sponsor as many entries as desired, according to Jan Clark, production manager. The dorms may sponsor only non-sorority girls.

Any girl can enter the contest, Miss Clark added. A candidate without a sponsor should call Miss Sullivan or Miss Lehner, either of whom will be able to arrange for a sponsor.

The judges for the contest will be Kaye White, athletic publicity director, Edward Whitehurst, director of public relations, Robert Leitch, director of publications; Miss Mildred Parrish, alumni association executive secretary; Frank Bean, adviser to foreign students; and Dr. Price.

Production committee chairmen are Gerry Lehner and Judy McCoy, senior women's managers; Jamille Ashmore, general men's manager and general men's chairman; and Lynn Pirell and Doris Tryouts for committee members are held every Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Men's gymnasium. People interested in working should contact the committee heads, Miss Clark noted.

Gregory, general women's co-chairmen.

Society Page Planned Soon By Flambeau

In the belief that the social life of a university is an important part of that university, the Florida Flambeau will include in its coming issues a Society Page. It will include fraternity, sorority, dorm, class and club activities as well as marriages, engagements, births, fashions, and a social calendar.

To adequately cover these will require the full cooperation of all students.

Engagement and marriage announcements and pictures are to be submitted in person Tuesday before 6 p.m. They should include the names of the couple, parents' names, date of wedding, and campus activities.

Groups wishing coverage should contact The Flambeau well in advance, preferably through a publicity chairman.

Homecoming Dance Moved To Roomy New Men's Gymnasium

By BOB SIMMONS

In three weeks Florida State University will experience "the biggest Homecoming, in every way, that we have ever had."

Dr. Otis McBride, general chairman of Homecoming activities, went on to elaborate on preparations which he said have already been set in motion for October 19 and 20.

One of the innovations of this year's festivities is the relocation of the traditional homecoming dance. Previously housed in the small Suwannee room, where, according to McBride, the hall was so crowded that dancers "couldn't walk", the affair has been moved to the new men's gymnasium.

This should be "one of the focal points of homecoming," said the chairman.

"GOT IT"

The university has been looking forward to the time when it could offer a "name band" at homecoming and offer ample room for dancing. "Now we've got it," he explained. Les Brown and his "Band of Renown" are slated to provide the music, and the gymnasium floor commended Dr McBride, should accommodate "up to four or five thousand people with ease."

But the Homecoming dance is not the only change in store for visitors to the university on the festive week-end. The Pow-Wow, too, will undergo a face-lifting.

Due to the fact that Homecoming is coming earlier this year and that the Orrels plan to devote more time to their house dinners and floats, the traditional skits will not be evident this year. This year's Pow-Wow will be "primarily a variety show," disclosed Dr McBride.

NO REFLECTION

This is no reflection on last season's Pow-Wow, he said, but was suggested by the groups involved in producing the show in order that more time can be devoted to other time-consuming phases of Homecoming.

A number of fraternities and sororities are planning small dances after the Friday night program so that alumni will have an opportunity to become more familiar with the modern day Greeks.

The 22 committees in charge of planning for Homecoming have a number of other chariots and surprises in store. During the first day Chorael) classroom building, which is the home of the biological science department, will be dedicated.

BREAKFAST CHANGED

Due to the ever-increasing number of alumni returning to the campus each year for Homecoming, the President's Breakfast, or reception, at which returning graduates of the university are guests, will be held in the Suwannee room. The breakfast party was formerly held at President Campbell's residence.

A hospitality committee will be on hand again this year to welcome the visitors to the campus and offer assistance to those who find changes of scenery bewildering.

Dr. McBride commented that although some alumni explore the campus on their own, a committee may arrange for bus tours of the university and these tours would be set up as needed."

Tallahassean's are cooperating with the university committees with the aim of making this the biggest homecoming in the history of this university, said the chairman, adding "everybody is working toward that end."

Light Hearted Debate To Lampoon Males

A tongue-in-cheek debate on the topic "Resolved, the males are the vainer sex" will highlight the Fall Forensics Mixer Tuesday beginning at 7 p.m. in room [illegible] of the History building.

The event, which takes place annually, will open forensic activities for the year, according to Dr. Joseph Prufer, university debate coach. Invited to attend are students with past public speaking experience or with an interest to organize for speech work.

Taking the floor for the feminine opposition in the discussion of the season's less serious subject will be Eleanor Bleschner, with Arnold Kimbrell on the opposition.

Dr. Prufer urged all wishing to participate in intercollegiate forensics to contact him at his office in the library. Beginning Thursday at 3 p.m. in room 222 History will be practice discussions on the current topic of the year: "That the United States should cease all direct economic aid to foreign nations."

A discussion conference at the University of Alabama the first week of November and the regional Kappa Alpha tournament two weeks later are the first of the season's forensic events, announced Prufer.

Record 700 Attend Fall Rush Activities

More than 700 women took the first view of sorority life last night when they attended formal receptions of the Panhellenic Fall Rush, according to Marian Benson, Panhellinic president.

During the first time in many years all 16 chapters have their open house for rush activities. It has also a record number of women participating said Miss Benson.

Receptions will also be held this evening and parties begin Saturday afternoon continuing through Sunday afternoon with Monday evening. Rushees will then preferential cards Tuesday. Bids will be picked up Wednesday with pledging ceremonies the final evening.

Radio 'Repeat Performance' Airs Concerts

Concerts by students and faculty of Florida State University will again be carried to a widespread radio audience on "Repeat Performance", a half-hour tape recorded program which begins next week.

Boy Flynn, director of radio and television, said 17 stations are already committed to carry the series, with negotiations currently under way so that the network will include 50 radio outlets. Last year, Flynn said, "Repeat Performance" had a potential audience of 7,300,000 through 25 stations.

Tallahassee station WTAL will broadcast the first tape at 12:30 p.m. Sunday, September 30. Other stations who will receive the program at present are WTRK, West Palm Beach; KWHW, Altus, Okla.; KICD, Spencer, Iowa; WGGG, Gainesville; WPCF, Panama City; WSIR, Winter Haven; WDSR, Lake City; WMBR, Jacksonville; WTRR, Sanford; WMOP, Ocala; WIRA, Ft. Pierce; WSCR, Glen Falls, N.Y.; WSB radio, Atlanta; WQBC, Miami; KNEB, Scottsbluff, Nebraska; and WLEU, Erie, Pa.

The first "Repeat Performance" is from an outdoor concert given last spring by the Symphonic Band by Dean S. Campbell, president, is guest conductor. Phill Warren is student writer-producer for the year-long series.

Stevenson Sister To Visit Mansion

Mrs. Ernest Ives, sister of Democratic presidential nominee Adlai Stevenson, will be given a reception this morning at the governor's mansion, Thay Miller, acting president of the Young Democrats Club, said yesterday.

Miller said the Leon County Democratic Women's Club has invited all women students and faculty members to the reception, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Governor and Mrs. LeRoy Collins are hosts.

'56 Red Feather Drive Sets Goal

President Dean S. Campbell of Florida State University Friday urged the FSU staff to participate in the Leon County Red Feather Drive.

Dr. Campbell, honorary chairman for a drive to obtain $8.00 from the faculty and staff, was principal speaker at a meeting of FSU Red Feather Campaign workers, who will solicit contributions from more than 1200 staff and faculty members and make a report Oct 2.

The university president said the concern of campus workers should be that "everyone of our association has an opportunity to participate in this community."

The university's goal is part of the county-wide total of $121,725.

Appearing with Dr. Campbell on the program were M. Julian Proctor, president of the Leon County Community Council, and Richard N. Brock, campaign chairman.

Dr. Edwin R. Hertz, University chaplain and FSU Division chairman, outlined procedures to be followed by workers.

FORMULA FOR FAILURE ACCORDING TO STATESMAN

All are designed to help the student attain failing grades.

Do not bother with a textbook.

Remind yourself frequently how dull the course is.

If you must study, try to lump it together and get it over with. The most suitable time is the last week of school.

Have a few friends handy during study periods so that you can chat when bored.

Stay up all night before finals. You can spend the first half of the evening discussing your determination to cram and the letter half drinking coffee or whatever your tastes prefer.

Write your examinations rapidly. Glance at the questions and then put down your first impression.

Remember that success in life is your main aim and never let extraneous matters such as grades interfere with this objective.

Element Co-Discoverer On Faculty

A co-discoverer of the most unique found element, mendelevium is now a member of the Florida State University faculty.

Dr. Karl Dittmer, head of the Chemistry Department, announced today that Dr. Gregory R. Choppin, who has been on the staff of the Radiation Laboratory at the University of California, will be an assistant professor of chemistry here.

The young scientist, along with four others in the Radiation Laboratory, discovered 17 atoms of the new element, Number 101, in February, 1955. The discovery was made by detecting the atoms of the short-lived element into Element 100, fermium.

During his work in the research Dr. Choppin was named by the Junior Chamber of Commerce as Outstanding Man of the Year of his city, El Cerrito, a town of 30,000 in California.

The new faculty member received total that summer of his element for a 19th century Russian Mendeleev named in his honor, a surprise from Russian scientists coming as it did just prior to the Geneva Conference in the August of 1955.

A native of New Orleans, Choppin commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Army Medical Service Corps in 1949 he took position at the University of California where he was awarded the Ph. D degree. From there he went to the California Radiation Laboratory where he has been for three years.

He, Mrs. Choppin and their two daughters live at 815 Buena Vista.

Beethoven To Run For Popular Vote

Edward Kilenyi, professor of music, will let the audience choose the program for his faculty recital next Monday night, October 3.

Kilenyi, well-known colleague Ernst von Dohnanyi, also at FSU, will offer for selection Beethoven's 32 piano sonatas from which he expects the audience to choose four.

A blackboard will be set up at the entrance to Opperman Music Hall. Persons entering will be asked to choose one sonata from each of four groups early, middle, and late periods, and from the so-called "popular" sonatas.

Kilenyi said choices will be marked on the blackboard, votes tallied immediately, and the sonata in each category with the most votes at 8:15 p.m. played.

AUDIENCE IMPORTANT

Kilenyi said he decided at last the audience is no the selection because he realizes how actively

HAPPY-JOE-LUCKY presents STICKLERS!

STUCK FOR MONEY? DO A

Stickler!

SEND IT IN AND MAKE $25

STICKLERS ARE TICKLERS and a mighty soft way to make money! Just write down a simple riddle and a two-word rhyming answer. For example: What's a ball player who gets a raise? Answer: Happy pitcher. Note: both words must have the same number of syllables —bleak freak, jolly dolly, vinery finery. Send your Sticklers, with your name, address, college, and class, to Happy-Joe-Lucky, Box 67A, Mt. Vernon, N. Y. Don't do drawings! We'll pay $25 for every Stickler we use in our advertising—and for hundreds that never see print. And remember—you're bound to Stickle better when you're enjoying a Lucky, because Luckies taste better. Luckies' mild, good-tasting tobacco is TOASTED to taste even better. Food Served In Suwannee

The Suwannee Room will be opened to serve noon and evening meals five days a week beginning Monday, Richard Preston, manager of Morrison's Food Service, announced yesterday.

He estimated that three to four thousand meals have been served daily in the Seminole Club, with lines forming sometimes over the doors.

Hours of the Suwannee Room line, Preston said, will be 11:45 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. and 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

When it is necessary to close the room for a banquet or other function notice will be given a day in advance, he added.

2,700 At A&M

More than 2,300 students have enrolled at Florida Agricultural and Mechanical College, president George W. Gore said yesterday.

Florida A&M, a Negro institution located in Tallahassee, has some 253 professors and instructors.

President Gore Wednesday told 2 000 of the students and faculty that the college is engaged in a tremendous expansion program. He said the first wing of the new student union is completed and a new classroom building is now being used.

California Riots Inspire Ruling

A published rule against mass demonstrations was established by the Dean of Men "just in case" after a serie. of riots erupted on the University of California campus at Berkely last spring.

Several thousand students at Berkely, according to wire service reports, staged several raids on women's dormitories and sorority houses, completely outnumbering local police.

The rule, as stated in the Few Wow, student handbook warns that "Any student who participate in an unauthorized mass demonstration will be subject to disciplinary action."

Dean Neel said the policy was set by his staff in consultation with the Dean of Women and dean of students.

Bachman, Manning Urge Honor For New Students

A rigid and early application of the Honor System should be made for freshmen and other new students, according to Student Body President Dave Bachman and Bill Manning, Chief Justice of Honor Court.

"We feel that the manner in which a student's first test is administered will leave a powerful impression upon him and may determine our success or failure for the coming year," Bachman wrote to Dr. Coyle E. Moore, Sr. Dr. Moore, Dean of the School of Social Welfare, is chairman of the Faculty Committe on General Education, under which most freshmen courses are conducted.

The recommendations to the faculty stress the mechanics of the Honor System and urge the professors to take a strong interest in preventing dishonesty.

DEMAND PLEDGES

Bachman and Manning said all examinations should be pledged, with the student writing out the Honor Pledge in full.

"By doing this, students will have to memorize the pledge before their exam will be graded."

Speech Play Begun

Production has begun on the Speech Department's first major production, Dr. Lynn Orr announced yesterday.

Casting has started for the "The Skin of Our Teeth," a play by Thornton Wilder, also the author of "Our Town" and many other hit plays. No definite cast has been selected because of the conflicting tryouts for "South Pacific," Dr. Orr added.

Technical crews are hard at work on the many staging difficulties presented by the play, Dr. Orr said.

The first performance is scheduled for Friday, October 26, in the Augusta Conrad Theater.

Parallel reading and work should also be encouraged. student government officials maintained, unless a student can "found it necessary to seek help on his homework." In this case, they said, he should write "not pledged" on the paper.

Seats in mass exams should be numbered, students spaced out or moved to other rooms when such is impossible, Bachman and Manning continued.

"Whenever possible mass examinations should be avoided. Smaller sections are recommended at all times," they added.

NEW TESTS

"Whenever possible, examinations only new tests should be made up each year. Repetition of questions should be avoided. Where the subject material is stable i.e., the same questions are bound to arise each year, exams, care should be taken that no examination or any of its copies be carried out of the room."

They also suggested the faculty be encouraged to promote the Honor System to students and advised to proctor examinations if they desire.

BULLETIN

ORLANDO — The Board of Control yesterday approved construction of two new dormitories at Florida State University, to cost an estimated $2,300,000, which will be financed by a federal loan, it was learned.

One would be an 11 story Men's dormitory, to be built near West Hall, the other will be an eight story women's residence hall near Florida Hall.

Business Manager Rod Shaw estimated construction will begin in several months.

Dr. A. B. Martin, vice-president, told the Board plans to buy the 61 unit El Rancho Villa apartment project for married students' homes may be blocked by prevalent executive interest rates.

Board Given Year To Find New President

FLORIDA FLAMBEAU
Vol. XLII, No. 4 — Published By The Students Of Florida State University — Tuesday, Oct. 2, 1956

Who'll Be Next Prexy?

When President Doak S. Campbell announced that he plans to retire at the end of the current fiscal year, speculation immediately began to arise as to who would be his successor.

POWER TO NAME a new man for the post resides with the Board of Control, the state higher education regulatory agency but its actions are subject to review by the Florida Board of Education.

Although Dr. Campbell has advanced the expectation that the board will "look all over world" for another man, a number of men who hold high office in higher education in the state will presumably be considered by the board by virtue of their positions.

Among these is Dr. A. S. Martin, the current FSU vice-president. Dr. Martin has been at this institution since 1851, following a period as director of extension services at the University of Mississippi. He was worked closely with Dr. Campbell in developing the administrative procedures of the university.

ANOTHER PROSPECTIVE candidate for the FSU presidency is Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, executive secretary of the Board of Control and former FSU Dean of Students. Dr. Culpepper has been associated with FSU while Dean of Students here, and has close contact with higher education in the state due to his position on the Board of Control.

Two high FSU faculty members have been mentioned for the championship. They are Dean Charles A. Davis of the College of Arts and Sciences and Dean Mode Stone of the School of Education. Specialists have mentioned that when the University of Florida received a new president last year, Dr. J. Wayne Reitz, the Provost of Agriculture there, got the job.

DR. RALPH R. OGLESBY, Dean of Students may be chosen for the position.

Further, All Dr. Bill Watkins

CAMPBELL TO QUIT IN JUNE

Dr. Doak S. Campbell Friday told the Florida Board of Control he plans to retire on June 30, 1957, as President of Florida State University.

He said he was making the announcement at this time in order to give the board ample time to select and appoint a successor. Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, executive secretary of the board, said Sunday he believes there will be enough time to choose another president before Dr. Campbell steps down.

"There is a good period of time, but it will require careful thought and careful review of those individuals who qualify for the post," Dr. Culpepper said. He added that "There has been no discussion so far" of another man. He said he doubts that the subject of a successor to Dr. Campbell will be on the agenda at the board's next scheduled meeting, October 11 and 12 in Gainesville.

SHORT STATEMENT

Dr. Campbell's announcement before the board was short and to the point. He said:

"I take this means of informing you of my intention to retire from active service as president of the Florida State University at the close of the present fiscal year. I make this announcement at this time in order that the Board may have ample time to select and appoint a successor to this important administrative position.

"Although I shall retire from this position, I shall continue actively in the field of higher education. Through various organizations, I shall render consultant services to institutions that may wish to profit by my experience in the field of higher education.

TO DISCUSS CHANGE

"At the proper time, I shall discuss with the Board any details that may be related to my retirement and steps to be taken in effecting a change in administration."

Dr. Campbell later told the Florida Flambeau that he could not elaborate on his possible course of action after his retirement from FSU's helm. But he said that with a "fundamental change rapidly approaching in the field of higher education in Florida, there will be additional need of men who are experienced in higher education.

As for his remainder months at FSU, Dr. Campbell said he does not foresee any great change in the policies of the institution. "I see nothing that would greatly alter our present course during the current year," he said.

"Of course we will make any changes that become necessary during the year."

Convocation Set Thursday

A convocation in Westcott Auditorium from 7 to 8 p.m. Thursday will be held to acquaint upperclass women with student government and their role in it, women's vice president Carolyn Close said.

She said all are "on their honor" to come except for classes.

Dean of Women Katherine Warren will speak on women in student government. A fashion show on a Homecoming theme will be presented by women students, honor court, judiciary, and cabinet members. Miss Close said.

Supper And Show For Senior Class

The Senior Class will hold a spaghetti supper and variety show next Friday, with tickets going on sale tomorrow, treasurer Donna Hardy announced.

She said the dinner will be served on the patio of the Music Building beginning at 5 p.m. with the show held in Opperman Music Hall afterward.

Tickets will be 85 cents each.

Tarpon Club Tryouts Slated For October 9

Tarpon, women's water ballet team, will hold tryouts beginning October 9, according to Tarpon president Tony Moore.

Interested students whose last names begin with the letters A through N may report to the university pool at 3 p.m. on Tuesday, while those whose names are in the M through Z category try out the following day at the same time.

Final tryouts are scheduled for October 16.

Preceding the tryouts will be classes starting tomorrow and ending Friday, Miss Moore announces, in which present members will instruct aspirants in strokes and stunt techniques needed for trying out.

"The promotion of greater interest in swimming through programs and demonstrations and the development of members' swimming skills are two of the primary purposes of our club," said Miss Moore. "We wish to encourage and to develop creative ability in the field of synchronized swimming."

An appearance on Steve Allen's nationally televised "Tonight" show highlighted Tarpon's activities last year. The program presented on campus was "Show of Business," a collection of numbers based on those in Broadway's hit plays.

Eligible to attend are all interested students who have two or more semesters in the School of Business and in Economics and a C or higher overall average.

Two Years Shy Of Mandatory Retirement

Dr. Campbell 'In Wonderful Health—Decision Months Old'

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Dr. Doak S. Campbell's resignation as president of Florida State University was decided upon by him "many months ago," he told the Florida Flambeau, and not for reasons of health.

"I'm in wonderful health. I feel good. I'm unusually fortunate," he declared.

Dr. Campbell is 68, two years shy of the age of mandatory retirement set by Florida law. As to why he chose this time to withdraw from the presidency he explained:

"My decision to be relieved was arrived at, independently, of course, by me and many months ago. It is in line with a long time concept I have had: that an administrator should not necessarily remain until the age of compulsory retirement arrives."

He said he will remain active as a consultant in higher educational circles—his capacity for 10 years as Director of Surveys and Field Studies at George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.—and will "not be under administrative pressure."

Dr. and Mrs. Campbell will maintain a residence here but have no definite plans as to where they will go or what they will do when the effective day of his resignation, June 30.

Dr. Campbell said he will be "greatly interested" in the affairs of FSU but will be "extremely cautious lest the interest of a previous president be misunderstood." He would not wish or state it be thought, he added, that he should attempt to influence the policies of a successor.

Dr. Campbell declared he will remain aloof from the procedure of selecting someone to succeed him.

"The choice of a successor is the absolute responsibility of the Board of Control," he said. "It isn't assumed that any president would endeavor to name his successor."

Reflecting on the development of the institution since he assumed its presidency in 1941, years when it was the Florida State College for Women, enrollment 1,857, Dr. Campbell admitted he will be resigning with a feeling of reluctance.

"No one could have put his lifeblood into anything for 15 years and not leave it without any reluctance," he observed.

He said he views the recent history of FSU as one of "two distinct epochs." The first five years, 1941 to 1946, were "devoted to FSCW under difficulties produced by World War II.

"It grew very rapidly, and under constant stress to provide facilities to accommodate students."

The second epoch, he continued, began in September, 1946, when a branch of the University of Florida—then an all-male institution, was established here, as a result of pressure by the enrollment of GI's in higher education.

"The Legislature did not enact the law creating a coeducational university until May, 1947, but the University in fact became a co-educational university in September, 1946, when 1,000 men students were admitted."

Now, he said, a third epoch apparently approaches.

"With the likelihood that the state will establish additional institutions of higher education, it becomes apparent that we are entering upon a new era for higher education in Florida."

Many more students, he said, will be enrolled in state colleges and universities.

Next year, he agreed, would be a convenient time for a new administration to assume the management of Florida State University. But this view was an "afterthought," he concluded.

Retirement Big Change

President Doak S. Campbell's forthcoming retirement will effect one of the most drastic changes that this institution has seen in many years.

Ever since he assumed leadership of Florida State University—or Florida State College for Women as it was called 15 years ago—Dr. Campbell has been part and parcel of this institution of higher learning.

Dr. J Broward Culpepper of the Board of Control put it well when he said that "When you think of FSU, you think of Dr. Doak S. Campbell."

Dr. Campbell has put his entire energies into building and improving this university, ever since he undertook the task of leading it. He has seen it grow multifold from a relative tot to a thriving and bustling coeducational university. Under his guidance a long-range master building program was conceived, and has been put into effect so rapidly and consistently that construction has become a natural and expected aspect of life on this campus.

But more than that, Dr. Campbell has espoused the viewpoint that, though FSU is a large and still expanding university in terms of student population and physical facilities, it is first of all an institution of higher learning. Large numbers of students may come; they may be housed in splendid quarters; furnished the best of classrooms; provided with all necessary books and classroom equipment; given an expert guidance and advice as they pursue their scholastic careers—but if they have learned nothing when the process is completed, then the university has failed in its primary function.

It is reconguizance of this fact that has placed Dr. Campbell in the high position of regard he occupies among educational circles. This same high regard will assure him of opportunity to provide consultation and guidance for those who will be leaders in the development of higher education in Florida in the years ahead.

We hope that after his retirement from the position of President of Florida State University he will enjoy the same success and good fortune that he has found here.

Come On, Collins

By the time the people of the United States have heard that Jefferson County, Florida, fired its capable health officer because she committed the overwhelming crime of having lunch with a Negro.

Governor Collins is not the only person who is "sick about it," but he is one of the few who can DO something about it. We hope that he does put his political influence and power to effective use by taking an open stand against the communities of the three counties which are involved in the case. Only with such help, Deborah Coggins can remain active in health work in Florida, despite his avowals that there is nothing to the "Negro Collins' action in the Walter Lee Irvin case during the last gubernatorial election shows that the intelligent Florida voters will not react adversely to a governor who uses his power to further the cause of human rights. Although his political opponents tried to use the Irvin case against him, Collins won by an outstanding majority.

Now he again has a chance to diligently oppose a situation that is universally recognized among thinking persons to be entirely off base.

We cannot agree with those who try to shield the perpetrators of this great injustice with the bland assertion that it weren't for the "racial tension" of these times, Dr. Coggins would not be facing dismissal.

The point could just as easily be made that if there were no Negroes, there would be no incidents. The fact that the South must face the Negro problem at all (though admittedly not by their own choice) and deserve to expect full privileges of citizenship and human rights.

In exploring these things, the Negroes are not to be condemned. Neither are the whites who treat them with the respect and consideration they deserve.

If there is "racial tension" in these times, it is in large measure traceable to those governmental officials who condone about and oppose needed reforms. They should be leaders in bridging about better race relations, not exhibit intolerance and prejudices that have wholly acceptable happenings as business lunches with associates.

Kilenyi To Set Precedent Friday

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

The thirty-two pianoforte sonatas of Beethoven as a group are universally acknowledged to be the keystone of the pianist literature and as such, the well-educated, cultured musician is expected to know them all by key and opus number, whether or not he plays them.

While many great pianists have performed all or most of the sonatas at one time or another in their careers only the greatest of the virtuosi have attempted to play them all at one time, on consecutive recitals. The few artists that come to mind are those of Artur Schnabel, Walter Gieseking, Wilhelm Kempff, and Rudolf Backhaus. Claudio Arrau, Rudolph Serkin, Rosl Robert Casadesus, Artur Rubinstein and Wilhelm Dohnanyi and Edward Kilenyi. In addition, four of the other pianists of varying abilities have been contracted to complete the entire cycle on various labels, but we have not been able to discover whether or not they have actually performed the entire group at one time.

Friday night in Opperman Music Hall Edward Kilenyi will go his illustrious colleagues one better, since he allows the audience to watch his program from among the thirty-two sonatas. Psychologically, it is infinitely more difficult to be prepared to play any of the sonatas at a moment's notice than it is to spread them out over six or seven days, which is usually the case when Beethoven cycles are performed in public.

Kilenyi's feat, as far as we have been able to determine after extensive investigation, is without precedent, and will be the most remarkable final sonata of the above-mentioned pianists COULD have done the same thing, the fact remains that Kilenyi seems to have been the first to think of it.

In addition to the usual divisions of Beethoven's music into early, middle and late periods, Kilenyi, for programmatic reasons, has added a fourth group which contains the most popular sonatas — those sub-titled the "Pathetique", "Moonlight," "Tempest," "Waldstein," and "Appassionata." Persons entering Friday night will be asked to select one sonata from each of the groups, and votes will be recorded on a large stage blackboard. The sonatas with the most votes by 8:15 in each category will constitute the program for the remainder.

Of the early-period sonatas, when Beethoven was still under the influence of Haydn and Mozart, the Opus 2 No. 2 in A Major, Opus 10, Nos 2 and 3 in F and D respectively, the two Opus 14 sonatas, and the much wholly-neglected Major, Opus 28 are perhaps the most popular.

The middle period, when Beethoven had reached his full maturity, boasts seven of the some analysts with the last-named "Pastorale" Sonata being somewhat neglected, but by no even himself does not announce the change in his style until the three Opus 31 Sonatas appear. Of these the rather "arrogant" is considered a "popular" sonata, but the third in D Major is one of the most beautiful.

Two of the best sonatas from this period are in the Eb key — the "Eroica" Symphony and the "Waldstein." Opus 53 in C Major and the "Appassionata" Opus 57 in F Minor. But the Opus 54 in F, Opus 78 in F# Major, Opus 81a in Eb, "Lebewohl," and Opus 90 in E Minor are all performed quite often because of their brevity, the "Eroica" Symphony Fifth Symphony, "Pastorale" Symphony and the Rasoumovsky quartets.

Beethoven's last period is distinctly marked by greatly expanded forms, frequent and unconventional use of contrapuntal and an unmistakable loftiness and profundity of expression. The last three of the Ninth Symphony, the last quartets, and the last five piano sonatas. Of the five the "Hammerklavier" Opus 106, is by far the most difficult of the entire cycle as well as the longest. The other four, Opuses 101 109 110, and 111 are equally admired and respected by musicians, with Opus 111 being perhaps more favored.

The pianist will probably cast its vote for either the Opus 10, No. 3 in D Major or the Opus 14 No 1 in E Major in the early period; from the middle period it will be a toss-up between the Opus 31, No 3 in Eb and the Opus 78 in F#. The "popular" vote will be for the "Waldstein", and the late period vote will be for the Opus 109 since we have heard the 111 performed several times in the last few months.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

Doesn't Like Flambeau 'Diet'

TO THE EDITOR:

Not being a real Honest John Journalist, nor a great philosopher, nor a profound theorist, nor even an earnest man of letters, as some of your columnist evidently regard themselves, I meekly offer this humble letter of criticism.

The Diseases is aptly named. His diseases is almost everything. Indeed, I wonder if Mr. Dyckman agrees to nothing but integration?

As has been noted, I'm not a Journalist, having had only course 161 in that field several years ago, but then I don't claim to be. Therefore not being familiar with the functions and duties of a columnist, I am unable to say whether opinion is an expected and integral part of his work. I can positively say, however, that some of the material written by Mr. Dyckman as columnist is very misleading and creates an impression not consistent with the facts. Among other things, the articles are slanted to the point of ridiculousness. To me this indicates a lack of responsibility to your audience.

This is not only true of some of the columns, who apparently are the despert of political thinkers, as well as authorities on Sociology, human relations, and whatever else seems in mind, but also of the editor. For instance in your SOLUTION TO VIOLENCE editorial of Tuesday September 16, you mention such lurey yellow journalists" "those filled faces" and the like. You further mentioned prior "sensational news parker" which we apparently meant to cause the reader to associate seriously associate what I will call "Rumpus Room Journalism" and whatever animals that run in packs "Running in parks" "and other allusions to wolves doesn't it?

What you write is for college consumption by the general and not junior high school, so why not be a little less obvious? Profound mobs? It is suspected the freshers and priests were there in equal numbers.

After reading some the editorials and columns in The Flambeau, one wonders whether it is a house organ of the N.A.A.C.P. or a cross-country travel's of the London Daily Herald.

Now maybe editing a newspaper is not a before breakfast task, but then about a little more balanced diet when you expound on segregation, integration and Supreme Court decisions.

In conclusion I would like to ask how Mr. Dyckman presume "that segrestion's strongest supporters are the poor whites." Does he have statistics or is it one of those things EVERYBODY KNOWS? Or is he relying on his missles' powers of deep political thinking Sociology or whatever else comes to mind?

Avoidance Is Coward's Way

TO THE EDITOR

Mr. Talmadge Democrat, in a Sept 30 editorial on the firing of Dr. Deborah Coggins at Jefferson and Taylor counties, said the act is a "regrettable product of intolerance, assistance with which the extremist intolerance to unreasonable action, and her own bad judgment."

Dr. Cousins was dismissed for having lunch with a Negro nurse, and the editorial concluded: "It would have been better if she'd just sent out for a couple of sandwiches and a jug of coffee."

The observations should also be reported:

1) Robert Oppenheimer, an architect of the H-bomb, now with the Institute of Advanced Study at Princeton, was fired by the government after they labled him a "security risk" commented thoughfullly today that the whole matter might have been prevented if instead, I had sent out for a couple of sandwiches and a jug of coffee."

2) Owen Lattimore, a scholar on the Far East, who after a five year fight against the ravages of McCarthyism, finally cleared his name and reputation, received the long struggle lately and recommented that "It wouldn't have happened if, instead, I had sent out for a couple of sandwiches and a jug of coffee."

3) John Paton Davies Jr., career State Department diplomat, fired by Secretary Dulles for "bad judgment" in supporting Far East policies said today that "maybe if, instead, I had gent out for a couple of sandwiches and a jug of coffee this wouldn't have happened."

4) Harry P. Cain, who failed in get reappointed to the Subversive Activities Control Board by President Eisenhower because of his outspoken support of Dr. Oppenheimer, said today that he thought "It wouldn't have happened if, instead, I had sent out for a couple of sandwiches and a jug of coffee."

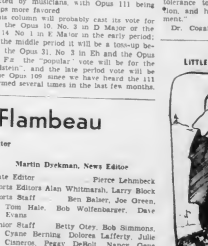
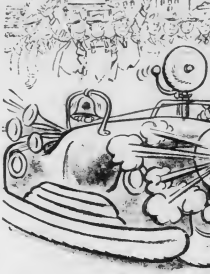
Calling The Card

Complains Of 'Grotesque' Politicians

By ARNOLD GREENFIELD



Inspired by the last Flambeau's "What We Worry" cartoon, I have determined to write a column about politics. I believe it was Anatole France or perhaps Montesquieu who remarked that the people of France would have nothing to laugh about if it weren't for the government. Unfortunately for the same situation doesn't exist in the United States of today.



Of course I realize that we do have a great deal to be happy about—despite the ulcers, the divorce rate and the wave of faith healing which seem to characterize modern American society. Nevertheless, politic in the U.S. is at the present time not a laughing matter—except in a certain ghastly sense.

WE ARE extremely fortunate to have as Presidential candidates two men who are possessed of unquestioned integrity and prestige insofar as this is possible. The tragedy as I see it is that certain elements in the political arena are not quite so high minded as their ostensible "leaders". The painful part of the situation is that one must come to this conclusion regardless of partisan considerations.

Before I go any farther I want to make clear that I am unashamedly a Democrat of what most would probably consider liberal leanings and I shall not obscure this fact with a pseudo-disinterested masquerade. My opinion of Richard Milhous Nixon is that he is a potential danger to this nation's welfare and that of McCarthy with a clean shave. Despite this, I suggest that Mr. Truman is at least as culpable as Mr. Hall in the current dispute over the implications of an address delivered by Mr. Nixon

The Florida Flambeau will print all signed letters, but students except those which are libelous or insidious attacks upon individuals. Letters over 150 words may be cut at the discretion of the editor if space is limited. In some cases, where a valid reason is given, the name may be withheld.

at Texarkana, Texas, during the Congressional campaign of 1934.

MR. HALL, the billowing GOP national chairman, started the mature high level debate by offering to contribute $1000 to charity if anyone could prove that "Trickie Dick" had accused the Democrats of treason as had been alleged by the former President. Truman replied by citing the Texarkana episode, wherein Nixon was quoted as doing just that.

The Vice President said in the speech in question that Truman, Acheson and Stevenson were "traitors to the high principles" espoused by other members of their party. The next step in the social business was the challenge by Truman to Hall demanding payment of the money on the basis of the speech in question. HIST added the Republican effort to send a check to the Korean Red Cross. Naturally all of this bitterness was conducted with the greatest taste and discretion with only a few million readers of the nation's newspapers looking in.

THE LAST VOICE I heard was Mr. Hall had just got through indignantly denying that sweet Richard had ever said any such thing—just a poor misunderstood boy trying to make good with only the National Association of Manufacturers to help him.

The point of this "controversy" as I see it is not whether the Republicans or Democrats are a guilty party, they are both guilty of the same crime. Men participating in this sort of political skullduggery are traitors to the ideals in each party who strive for constructivity and rational consideration of the issues, prostitute themselves for forgetting that everyone suffers and nobody gains when the supposed leaders of America act in a manner too grotesque to be humorous.

Will West Lose Burma?

By JEROME BERNSTEIN

In my last column I asked the question, if perhaps there is not a deeper meaning to the invasion of Burma by Red China than what appears on the surface.

A possible answer to this question can be found in Buddhism, the main religion of central and eastern Asia. Today Buddhism is ailing through a renaissance which can and is politically important to the free world in its fight with Communism.

BUDDHIST PILGRIMS in unusually large numbers are today visiting cities sacred to Buddhism — India, Nepal, and Ceylon. Efforts to heal all breaks between different groups of the faiths are being spurred on. Of great importance have been the Buddhist meetings during the past two years in Burma along with the Great Council meeting which met for the sixth time in 2500 years.

In Rangoon, the capital of Burma and the Rome of Buddhism, a re-editing of Buddhist texts, commissioned by priests from Burma, Thailand, Ceylon Cambodia, and Laos From Communist China word comes that Buddhists are now able to move holy relics around the country, a right not permitted before by the Reds.

To westerners the significance of all this activity is to be found in the belief that Buddhism will soon be an important unifying force among Asian countries. And whoever controls this force, controls Asia.

Last year's election in Ceylon is a good example. Prime Minister Sir John Kotelawala, a good friend of the West, was expected to win re-election easily. Instead he was overwhelmingly defeated. The important factor, however was the part played by Ceylon's Buddhist priests. They had sold the people that his re-election would be harmful to Buddhism.

One result has been the announcement that the new government has requested British evacuation of their Ceylonese military bases. Thus, if Burma was lost to Communism, the loss would be more than a small Southeast Asian country.

FORMER PREMIER U Nu of Burma once said, and he quoted Thomas Jefferson, "The republic is the only form of government which is not eternally at open war with the rights of mankind." He also said that "the Cause of the American Revolution "have a tremendous importance to all men who struggle for liberty."

This writer would like to know if Burma is slated for the Communist block through default?

Car Rules Called Not Important

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Most of this more idealistic professors on this campus dream of a utopian university in which students would subscribe to the New York Times, take all assigned courses in ancient, medieval and modern philosophy, and forget about having a good time.

To state the converse as much bewailed, students appear to take only the barest interest in the world about them.

That the student lives in a vacuum of emotion became fully obvious when, last week, parking lots that had always been open to the enterprise were reserved for people bringing in certain distance away cars in West Hall — not long lonely hike away — couldn't get any interest in a petition expressing such outrage, and a subsequent

Then, this year, the civic lot was reserved for the faculty. Whether justified or not, this action worked contrary to the immediate interests of students. There was no outcry. No signatures on petitions. No "liable for" clause has appeared.

AND THESE are trivial matters! The world's future does not depend on whether we will have parking, whether quality are allowed to forget their manners, or even if there is no passion for music of immediate, tangible importance. Why should there be concern for anything else?

A professor of ours once remarked that he could tell after commenting that wasn't going to be on the final examination. A brother of his, he said, teaches at a university over in Georgia. "Two of his students were recently while trying to overthrow the government. It seems that he had the gate to the campus. The students were over the wall. They were fired upon the students. The dents fired back.

Now, continued our professor, American students should show an concerned with the affairs of government this way try to throw it. But would not a little interest beyond matabolism profitable?

AND THERE we had him by the ear. Why should we expect overthrow the Florida Legislature if one does not have the time to cut or drive downtown to the Capitol?

Although approval has been granted for the construction of new residence halls, one for West Hall and one for the Florida Hall, final plans have not been drawn. Perhaps there is hope it is not too late to make suggestions.

The counterpart of West Hall should be saved. Indeed, the parking lot should be moved to the north and a building for the benefit of the students in the near future. Or to refute early. The halls should be partitioned, primarily to provide for study halls and also to provide for study halls and also to provide bottles in the halls.

AS A SENIOR looking back three years in West Hall, I can say it has been an enjoyable, profitable and dreadfully dull experience. A little attention deserves reminding that the policy of West Hall is more than a training for Queen candidate from small towns unimpressed by the results.

Now, in the name of sanity! One man had jolly good luck last two years.

Tribe Gains Big Victory

Florida State lost a hard-fought football game Saturday on the scoreboard. In every other respect, the Seminoles gained a victory—a victory in prestige that may have been struggling for for two years.

The fact that FSU held a Southeastern Conference team scoreless for 58 and a half minutes and actually did lose the game's only touchdown gained the Tribe immeasurable prestige.

A year from now or two years, that called-back touchdown will be forgotten, and the score will remain Georgia 3 Florida State 0. At this moment, however, nobody who saw the game can forget that touchdown.

You can they forget the tremendous goal-line stand that the Seminoles made when it appeared evident that Georgia would march to a score at the end of the first half.

Writers from all over Florida and Georgia and from some of the biggest newspapers in the South saw the game, and they went home with poignant memories of a rising FSU squad, a team which is due to make big headlines in the future—and mighty soon.

Georgia's Wally Butts himself was quick to admit that it was the best Florida State football team he's played in three years, a team that's going places.

Tribe coach Tom Nugent finds himself with a rather pressing problem. A win would have boosted the Seminole to an all-time high, possibly sending them to their best season in history.

The effects of such a heart-breaking loss as this may be disastrous in a schedule which includes some of the best football teams in the South.

For instance, next week the Seminoles meet Virginia Tech, a squad which pulled one of the biggest upsets in the Saturday by swamping favored North Carolina State, 35-6.

N. C State was fresh from a stunning 26-6 triumph over Maryland's North Carolina crew, and favored to go on to the most successful campaign.

But this Virginia Tech team made a rout of a supposedly close contest. A warning flag that looms bright and red in Florida State's gridiron future.

If we should get past Virginia Tech, North Carolina State arrives on the scene next. The Wolfpack is still a definite threat anybody, and more so as they prepare to bounce back from that VPI defeat.

Above that, Wake Forest and Villanova, then the game with Miami—probably the best independent team from the South.

Wake Forest held Maryland, possibly one of the best teams in the country, to a struggling 6-0 win last week, a good indication of what's to come.

It's going to be a long season.

Here We Go Again

There are a few new faces here and there, maybe a few Yankee fans watching it, but it's an old, familiar story as the Yankees tomorrow at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn.

The Yankees and Dodgers have met six previous times in the World Series. It's becoming such a habit that the New York city fans to just take the subway to get to the series field, that many forget that the first Yankee-Dodger series was as late as 1941.

The Yanks have of course won all but one, and it wasn't until last year that the Dodgers ended years of heartbreak and disappointmet in the big game by beating New York, 4-3.

It seems a little prophetic that this year's pennant race is nearly the opposite of last year. While the Yanks were running away with the National League pennant, the Yanks didn't clinch it until the final week of the season.

This year, the Bronx Bombers of crafty Casey Stengel have had games in front in mid August, and after that, coasted in easily. Brooklyn, on the other hand was in first place much of the final half of the season, before finishing it as Milwaukee folded at the season's end.

The Brooks could gain a definite advantage because the series opens in their back yard. This will likely make Stengel refrain from using his ace, southpaw Whitey Ford, until the battle switches to Yankee Stadium for the third game.

In any case, Yanks 4 Dodgers 2.

Last Minute Field Goal Gives Georgia 3-0 Victory Over FSU

By ALAN WHITMARSH
Flambeau Sports Editor

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 29 (Special)—A young, struggling football hopeful and a battle-scarred gridiron giant battled scorelessly for 58 minutes and 30 seconds here this afternoon, then in the final minutes the giant, the University of Georgia, prevailed, 3-0.

Florida State's rating Seminoles entered the contest anyway, seven to one 21-point underdogs, and battled the Bulldogs of Wally Butts to a stalemate, only to lose in the final minute and a half of play.

Ken Cooper, a second string Sophomore end from Tifton, Ga., booted a 32-yard field goal through the uprights with 1:30 remaining to break the hearts of 33 gallant FSU gridders, piss the smattering of Seminole fans who made the trip.

Until Cooper put his magic toe to work, the Seminoles had scored the only touchdown of the game. A 7-yard gallop by Fullback Bobby Renn to Bob Mellums on the next to the last play of the first period.

Then, as the FSU side of the stadium roared its ire, referee Forrest Latal sed handkerchief nullified the score, setting FSU back 15 yards on the play, and costing them the ball game.

It was shortly after that, midway in the second quarter, that Renn left the game with two broken ribs, an injury which was to cost the Seminoles dearly.

So effective were the Florida State defense during the first half, that the forces of Wally Butts invaded Seminole territory only twice, then almost feeut ad the way.

GEORGIA MOVES

A 47-yard punt return by Georgia fullback and captain Jimm Culpepper carried to the FSU 43 late in the second quarter, from whence the Bulldogs made their only scoring threat of the half.

Georgia's ground attack moved to the Florida State 6 in just seven plays, then the Seminoles made their outstanding goal line stand of the afternoon

Three plays gained a scant half yard against the Seminole front defenses, then FSU quarterback Lee Corso drove Bulldog halfback Ken Scafide back to the two inch L. Seminoles taking over.

The Tribe came out for the second half as if they were going to run Georgia off the field. After Billy Odom returned the kickoff to the FSU 22, 10 plays moved the Seminoles to a first down on the Georgia 30.

These the attack bogged down, though, and Georgia took over at their own 32, four plays late Then the Bulldogs made their second scoring attempt of the game

With Culpepper and halfback Carl Manning carrying the ball on all but two plays, they moved in nine plays to a third down and one situation at the FSU 26.

For the second time, the Seminole forward wall rose up to stop the onrushing Bulldogs and save a touchdown. Two cracked into the line by Manning gained relatively nothins and Georgia was inches short.

The two teams then exchanged punts and FSU took over on its own 6-yard line, midway in the fourth quarter.

The Tribe marched to three quick first downs, then on a second and two situation, Corso lofted an aerial intended for Ronnie Schombuerger at the Georgia 38

Intramural News

Next Monday on the varsity tennis courts the Men's Intramural program will begin.

As in the past, there will be two divisions, one for fraternity competitors and the other for dormitory and independent teams.

Both singles and doubles will be included and both tournaments will be on a double elimination basis.

Matches will begin at 3.30 p.m. to avoid darkness. In the best two out of three set matches balls are furnished to the players, but they must furnish their own rackets

Entries close at 10 a.m. next Friday, at the Intramural office, Room 124, Men's Gym. The drawings will be made at that time.

Players are eligible to compete in singles or doubles, but not both. Each organization is limited to one entry in each division. Varsity tennis players or those having won collegiate letters are ineligible in the sport

Frosh Footballers Triumph, 20-16

By FRANK RAMOS
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State freshman football squad came from behind Saturday night to defeat the Mississippi Southern "B" team, 20-16, at Panama City.

John Nevelle, FSU quarterback, climaxed a 48-yard drive by streaking over for the score from the one yard line with only 1:28 remaining in the contest to give the Baby Seminoles the win.

Nevyle's conversion was good and the final score stood 20-16.

The final drive was sparked by Nevelle's 33-yard pass to end Tony Romeo.

Bob Carnes, right halfback from Tallahassee, started the FSU Freshman scoring when he belted off right tackle for six yards and the touchdown.

The Baby Seminoles had their attack momentarily stalled when they fumbled on the three, but the Southerners fumbled on their first play from scrimmage and three plays later Carnes scored

In the third quarter, on a fourth and one situation, Nevelle set Romeo combined for a 71 yard aerial score. Tony was in the clear past the secondaries when he gobbled in the pass on the 45 and went untouched for the score. The snap from center on the extra point try was fumbled.

Tom Myers, Mississippi Southern right halfback, scored the Southerners' first touchdown with 8 23 remaining in the first quarter by going off right tackle for eight yards. Pullback Hugh McInnis added the extra point for the Southerners

Following a blocked FSU punt the Southerners drove to the Baby Seminoles' two-yard line where Charles McArthur executed the same play that brought Mississippi Southern their first score. McInnis made the conversion good this time.

Adlai's Sister Says:

Women Vote Independently; Husbands Follow The Lead

By ROYE RHODES

"Women are very independent. I think that husbands will vote as their wives do."

This surprising answer to the question whether women are independent political thinkers or merely vote as their husbands do, came from someone who should know.

The speaker was Mrs. Ernest Ives, who, as the prominent sister of presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson, has a good enough acquaintance with the nation's number one Democrat in the White House. She was interviewed at a reception held Friday in her home by the Leon County Democratic Women's Club at the Grove, home of Governor and Mrs. LeRoy Collins.

Most of her time now is spent touring the nation on behalf of her brother, of whom she wrote and published a book, "My Brother Adlai."

Mrs. Ives said she strongly believes that women play a very important part in politics today, and added she is impressed by the many Democratic clubs being formed currently in colleges and universities.

As a resident of Bloomington, Ill., and a member of the McLean County Democratic Woman's Club, she spends all her spare time seeking dinner aprons and various other articles for money making projects. Several of the women in the group are receiving her wire fell down keys.

A tall, striking woman with light brown hair highlighted by silver strands and worn in a bun at the nape of her neck; possessor of large, expressive blue eyes that reminded this reporter of Adlai Stevenson's, she exuded warmth and sincerity in arresting people even after having grasped several hundred hands.

She admitted that candidates are expected to do many foolish things having nothing whatsoever to do with politics in terms of LOOKS that photographers have insisted on having Stevenson posed in picturing onlookers.

Several hundred women came to the reception; among them, a few employees during their lunch hour.

A number of Florida State University women were also on hand to meet Mrs. Ives, who said her visit to Tallahassee was "almost like homecoming" to her as most of her relatives had come from the South.

Old Library Doesn't Just Fade Away

By JULIE CISNEROS

The faded gilt lettering over the doorway still reads "The hall of knowledge is knowing where to find knowledge," but actually the old library is no more.

A keynote to a new spirit pervading the building is the brand new Coca-Cola dispenser at the entrance to the former periodicals room, now a lecture hall. The old structure has been transformed into a functional classroom and office building.

Although the modified Tudor exterior looks substantially the same as when the building was dedicated in 1930, many physical changes are evident within. For one thing, one can hardly recognize the place although the books everywhere. The entire interior has been repainted in off-white—and the ceiling no longer sheds plaster on the heads of unsuspecting students. The circulation desk has been replaced by a wall and part of the old reserve reading room has also been walled off for a lecture hall.

The School of Public Administration has air-conditioned offices on the ground floor; a far cry from the old frame house on West Jefferson where it occupied in years past. The Graduate School also has its offices in the building, and the Bureau of Government Research and Service is in the basement, along with Geography.

The renovating process has brought to light interesting things which haven't interested before in the basement a large old-fashioned safe. And they make that much over-the-head ... speakers, a murky, mysterious spiral staircase leading up into a small tower, also upstairs, a small room with a wee slit of a window for the chamber or broom closet. The door leading to the stacks was locked.

Campbell Biography

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Before coming to Florida State University to succeed as president the late Dr. Edward Conradi, Dr. Doak S. Campbell, was Dean of the Graduate School and Senior College at George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.

He was associated with Peabody for 14 years before accepting the FSU presidency in 1941. At Peabody, he was for 10 years in the Division of Surveys and Field Studies.

Dr. Campbell graduated from Ouachita College, Arkadelphia, Ark., in 1911, and served as superintendent of the Columbus, Ark., State High School. His next position was as state secretary for the Baptist Young People's Union and Religious Education Association in 1916 before he became president of Central College, Conway, Ark., and became president in 1920.

DR. CAMPBELL

He converted Central College to an accredited junior college and was elected secretary of the American Association of Junior Colleges ... 1921, a position he held for 11 years.

With Dr. H. L. Caswell, Dr. Campbell wrote a widely used book, Curriculum Development. His other studies and surveys of higher education in the southern states led to his appointment in 1937 as consultant to President Roosevelt's Advisory Committee on Education. He is a past president of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Sigs Plan Derby For December. 10

The Sigma Chi derby, originally planned for October 13, has been postponed until the afternoon of December 10, announced chairman Jim Kauffman.

Kauffman explained the delay was taken by the Derby committee when many sororities complained of conflicting events scheduled to take place on October 13.

The Derby will be held on Landis Green as previously planned.

Singing commercials on radio are surprisingly good indicators of music trends. Ballads and folk songs are becoming more and more prevalent.

One cigarette's commercial is a dozen variations of words and tunes of the War Between the Pipes and Cigarettes. Pipe and filter-tipper Bust Lips Rudin and Jack Teagarden are advertising a flashlight battery.

The excitement Harry Belafonte adds to calypso songs is making him a favorite on the FSU campus. Belafonte's latest RCA Victor album features the Jamaican singer's newest album.

Two non-recording albums are also creating favorable reaction. The King and I and Mitch Miller's Sing Along with Mitch.

Life (certainly not a picture) insists on the most persistent agency making time to broadway's hottest—the line to Ada.

Great hit musical My Fair Lady. Lady's writers had Rex Harrison in mind as they created the character of Prof. Higgins. Words and music were written with Rex Harrison could either talk or sing the songs. He does both in the album.

Very Erich and his Orchestra have an instrumental album of Broadway Show Tunes who knows just the music.

Rosen's Music Center has the most complete jazz and classical record selection in town. New owner is Lewis Seagle. Upperclassmen will remember Lewis' record store last year on W'Lal, and be glad to know he's back again if maybe a mock.

Free Salk Shots Available Here

Salk vaccine shots for polio immunization are now available for Florida State University students, Dr. H. G. Hathaway, FSU infirmary chief physician, announced yesterday.

The State Health Department is offering vaccine free of charge to all FSU students 19 years old or younger. Students over 19 can receive vaccinations for the co... of the serum—approximately $1.50 per shot, Dr. Hathaway said.

A student interested in getting vaccine shots must have a note of permission from his parents or guardian, he added.

Dr. Hathaway said that if there is sufficient demand a special clinic will be set up for the vaccinations. This clinic would be similar to the clinics which are being set up in other colleges and universities, he noted.

Dr. Hathaway explained the Salk shots like this.

Three vaccinations are necessary for protection against paralytic polio. The first shot begins to take effect seven to ten days after it is given. A waiting period of one month between the first and the second shot is required. The second shot brings a sharper rise in immunization. With two shots a person should have protection against paralytic polio for at least one polio season. To give better and longer-lasting protection a third shot should be obtained one year after the second shot.

Dr Hathaway called attention to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis announcement that 1300 cases of paralytic polio were prevented in 1955 by the Salk vaccine.

Caldwell Denounces Young Voter Apathy

Former Governor Addresses Students At Voter Party

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Eligible citizens who do not vote were denounced as "free-loaders of the worst sort" in a campus speech by former governor Millard Caldwell Tuesday night.

His address at the first annual Pi Sigma Alpha "First Voters' Party" was, by his own admission, a "non-partisan speech made non-partisan under pressure."

He closed the speech with ... demand for a responsible two-party system, which led into a sharp exchange between Democratic Party leader Caldwell and a Republican party representative.

Caldwell used a clipping from the Gallup Poll to begin his speech, citing poor voting interest among persons 20 to 30 years old.

'AWFULLY SMART'

"There must be a lot of youngsters who think it's awfully smart to be politically dumb," he cracked.

"It's not fair for you to sit and garner in all the benefits of your government," he admonished his targets through the audience of about 100.

Caldwell suggested a lack of intelligent voter interest caused World War II and the Korean War.

'CHEAP POLITICS'

"Sorry, cheap politics," he charged, during the so-called "disarmament era" of the 1920's, led to the rise of the Axis powers, and it was only "By the grace of good luck we woke up in time," he said.

Again, thundered Caldwell, it was the idea of "bringing the boys back home" after World War II, that "decimated ... services" and made it possible for the Korean strife to begin.

"You're in politics up to your ears whether you vote or not," he declared.

TWO PARTIES

He concluded that he believes in two parties, "the other party stepping right on my heels" and stressed party loyalty as the only way to responsibility. In an obvious attack on avowedly non-partisan groups such as the Democrats for Eisenhower, Caldwell referred to "free-love politics."

Questions from the audience then flew thick and fast, with Caldwell blasting both his own party's and the Republican Party farm platforms as having "promised the farmer everything" and meant for nothing except votes.

While praising Adlai Stevenson, he voiced complete opposition to the candidate's recent suggestions for abolition of a-bomb tests and the draft.

HITS GOP

Caldwell accused the GOP of awarding a preponderance of defence contracts to big business "to the detriment of small business." Leon County Republican chairman Will Oven Jr., an invited guest, snapped back, "I don't think the figures will bear you out."

It was from that point on more or less a Democratic evening. State School superintendent Thomas D Bailey, in response to a question from the floor, declared the country could "never" expect school construction assistance from the GOP. He said 97 Republican congressmen voted to tack a complete-integration stipulation to last session's school aid bill in the hope that Southern Democrats would join them in killing the whole bill. That, said Bailey, was why no school aid money was appropriated last session.

NAACP ISSUE

Student Richard Ervin Jr., son of Florida's attorney general, asked Oven what effect he thought vice president Richard Nixon's membership in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People would have in the South.

Oven replied that only "narrow minded people" would fail to realize the NAACP had offered Nixon an honorary membership which he had "no choice" but to accept.

Secretary of State R. A Gray also spoke. Other political party representatives were present at the speech, in Longmire Auditorium, followed by refreshments in the Lounge. Pi Sigma Alpha is a national political science honorary.

Infirmary Hours Extended

In order to give the student body better service the Florida State University infirmary clinic hours are being extended, Dr. H G Hathaway chief physician, announced.

Hours will be:

Undistributed '56 Yearbook Called Bigger And Better

The 1956 Tally-Ho, still awaiting distribution, "is one of the best books we've gotten out here," Barbara Ayala, editor of the 1957 yearbook, said this week.

"It's bigger, covers more territory, and is a credit to Jim Brodrick (graduated editor) and his staff," Miss Ayala declared.

She said the blame for last year's book being late lies in no one place or agency but is mainly the result of insufficient photographic facilities afforded last year's staff. Tally-Ho's photo work was done in the same darkroom as pictures for the Florida Flambeau, Smoke Signals, and Public Relations office, putting the entire operation approximately a month behind before the engravers got the pictures, she explained.

Ayala

Miss Ayala said the situation has been remedied this year with Tally-Ho photography being the only work done in the darkroom on the fourth floor of Longmire.

Individual pictures will be done by Colonna Studios of New York City, a group that specializes in college annual work. Each student who has his picture taken will receive four proofs from the company and will choose the picture he wishes to have run in the book, the editor said.

Dick Parks and Bob Ashton will do all the photographing of organizations, clubs and student government. L'Avant studios of Tallahassee will do Greek pictures.

Appointments are now being made to have pictures taken at the booth across from the ticket office in Westcott Building. The yearbook fee of two dollars will be payed then in order to secure an appointment. Those not wishing to have their picture included in the annual but wanting a copy of the book, may reserve a copy by paying the $1.00 fee at the appointment booth.

The appointment booth will close Friday, October 12, and photographs begin being taken at 8 a.m. Monday October 15, in the Tally-Ho studio on the Longmire Building's fourth floor. Studio hours will be 8-12 and 1-5 Monday through Friday.

Soph Hop Is Planned

Members of the Sophomore class will be guests November 3 at the annual Sophomore Hop, it was announced by Bill Clendinen, class president.

Plans are now under way for the affair, to be held in the women's gymnasium, he said. Providing the music will be the Devaires. Claire Green and Victor Ifarke, co-chairmen of the dance, have appointed Pat Starnes to head the decoration committee. The theme has not yet been chosen, but it will probably be modernistic, Clendinen said.

He emphasized that the dance will be free to all sophomores.

A Shaggy Dog Story

FSU Pup Audits Master's Classes

By ARLIEDA RIES

It seems that Florida State University at present is sporting a canine student—an 11 month old German shepherd puppy.

Registered with the American Kennel Club as "Walngrove's Hi-Gal", the thoroughbred pup occasionally attends classes with her owner Charlie Chester, who is a second semester senior here majoring in public administration.

Chester, who nicknamed the dog "Hi-Gal" for obvious reasons, brought her ... this semester ... to show her ... November at shows ... Alabama, Pensacola, Tampa, St. Petersburg, Miami, Orlando ... ville and Tallahassee ... at the Greater Miami Dog Show in July.

Graduate Class Has Senate Seat

By STAFF WRITER

The Graduate Class, formerly unconsidered in the social and extracurricular life of the university, seem to be undergoing a renaissance.

Most obvious change will be the election of a representataive to Student Senate, in accordance with a bill passed last year at the suggestion of several graduate students. One man, Alden S Gilmore, a doctoral candidate from St Petersburg, has filed candidacy for the new seat.

Graduate students have been given a lounge in the old library, which has become headquarters for the Graduate School and houses seminar rooms. The lounge will be used Wednesdays for campus movies.

"We hope to encourage all graduate groups to take advantage of that facility (the lounge)," declared Don Spille, newly elected Graduate Club president.

"The Club, he said, represents the graduate students for whom no formal class government is established."

Spille said there is a "need and demand" for social activities for graduate students, which he and other officers will attempt to provide.

Other Graduate Club officers are Ron G. Laffitte Jr., vice-president, and Mary Ellen Durrett, secretary.

The class will have social meeting, Spille said, from 4:30 to 5:30 Thursday afternoons throughout October, a Christmas dance Dec 14, a reception February 14, a trip to Killearn Gardens March 14 and an Easter party April 13 for faculty and student children at the home of Dr and Mrs Doak S. Campbell.

The old library, as a headquarters for curricular and extra-curricular graduate activities, will enable the advanced students to "feel an actively organized part of the university," said Dr Ralph Witherspoon, faculty advisor.

According to Dr Milton W Carothers, dean of the Graduate School, it has had the fastest growth in the Southern Conference of Graduate Schools.

This represents an increase in enrollment from 19 graduate students in 1946 to 819 last year.

Band Day Invasion On Saturday

Bandsmen from 23 high schools are expected on the Florida State University campus tomorrow for the university's ...th Annual Band Day. In the past the visitors have numbered about 2,000.

Presentation Set February

Club Initiates Award For Athlete Of Year

The President of the International Club revealed yesterday the organization is formulating plans to give an annual award to Florida State University's outstanding athlete.

Juan Lopez of Cuba, who heads the group of 128 foreign students and 50 native Americans, said the first award will probably be presented in February. He said it will be retroactive, going to the outstanding athlete of the school year, 1955-56.

Lopez said his organization picked up the idea from a sports editorial written last year by Pierce Lehmbeck, then sports editor of the Florida Flambeau.

"We waited for some time for someone else to do something about his suggestion," Lopez explained. "Then we decided to sponsor the award ourselves."

Lehmbeck Chairman

Lopez said Lehmbeck had been asked to head the committee which will pick the recipient of the award and that he had accepted.

The Club president said other members of the committee would, as tentatively planned, include Dr R. R Oglesby, Dean of Student Welfare, D. James Carr, Associate Dean of Men, and Miss Elizabeth Lynn, the Assistant Dean of Women.

"We haven't been able to talk to Dr Howard Danford, Athletic Director, yet, but we'd like him to be a member of the committee also," Lopez said.

He said tentative plans have been made to pick the most outstanding athlete from each sport and from that group, the most outstanding all-around athlete.

Trophy Award

A trophy will be presented to the No. 1 athlete with the others receiving certificates, he explained.

"We feel our athletes are making many contributions to the University which are not being realized," Lopez remarked. "Our award will not be as material as we'd like it to be, but we hope it will suffice."

Float Positions First Serve Basis

Position of floats in the Homecoming Parade will be on a "first-come, first-serve" basis, the committee in charge announced yesterday.

Those organizations who submit sketches at the Longmire director's office first will be placed ahead in the line of march, a spokesman said.

All sketches must be approved by the float decorations committee before construction can begin, he said.

Entry blanks can be obtained at the director's office. Deadline for submitting entries and sketches is 5 p.m. Wednesday, the spokesman warned.

NOTICE

All news reporters of the Florida Flambeau will meet tomorrow morning at 11 in the newsroom, 213 Longmire, to discuss plans for a 10 page Homecoming edition, editor-in-chief Oscar Johnson announced.

Floyd's Triumph

The success of professor Carlisle Floyd's opera, "Susannah", as acclaimed by New York audiences and critics, is a triumph for Florida State University.

Because Professor Floyd is a member of the faculty it is easy to realize personal satisfaction. Yet more important, "Susannah" was first given here in the spring of 1955, by an all-FSU cast with the exception of the two leads.

Professor Floyd did most of the work on "Susannah" here. Although based on an Apocryphal theme and set in the hills of Tennessee, it is very much a part of FSU.

Perhaps it would be appropriate to have the opera performed on campus again sometime in the near future.

Here is a work of art that, with a minimum of expenditure for publicity, has been acclaimed in America's capital of music. The critics forecast a brilliant future for the composer.

Football, Gymnastics, and the circus all are valuable in their own right. But the success of "Susannah" indicates that FSU could do much, more much to create works of art that will remain to the benefit of mankind long after the accomplishments in more temporal fields are forgotten.

Fly In The Ointment

"I pledge myself to uphold the highesta standards of honesty in every phase of my university life, and I refuse to tolerate dishonesty on the part of another."

So reads the Florida State University honor code. While such college and university honor codes have sometimes been attacked as idealistic, they have been successfully established at many institutions. And even their critics will admit that ther codes possess many advantages once they are initiated.

With these thoughts in mind, we were happy to see two high student government officials recently urge rigid and early application of the system to FSU Freshmen and other new students.

Student Body President Dave Bachman, along with Bill Manning, Chief Justice of Honor Court, sent a list of recommendations to the faculty committee which handles General Education, under which most Freshman courses are conducted.

In their letter, Bachman and Manning urged revision of some of the mechanics of the Honor System and asked that professors take a strong interest in supporting the system.

The spirit of these requests was to the effect that those in authority should conduct their examinations given to Freshmen and new students in such a way as to make the students sure the professors were relying on the students' honesty. This is the one essential component of a working honor system.

Without such a realization, a student is prone to regard the system as only so much verbal hogwash — not an actual, working reality as it is supposed to be.

For this reason it was disappointing to note that the student government officials also suggested that the faculty be advised to proctor examinations if they desire. We hold that proctoring of any kind is incompatible with the principle of honor upon which the Honor System rests.

It's as simple as this: if you respect the student's honor, he knows it and, according to the system, will not cheat on examinations. But if he knows he is being watched, he knows his honor is not being respected—implying that he is expected to cheat.

Let's have one or the other—the Honor Code or proctoring.

The Ultimate 'Day'

Tomorrow should be a good day for the dnwntown restaurants.

It's Band Day, which means (if past happenings hold true) that all eating places within the confines of the campus will be swamped with eager visitors looking for a genuine college meal. And fnr some strange reason, the influx always seems to surprise regular students here. They act shocked to see a couple of thousand high school students storm into the somewhat narrow confines of the campus eating spots.

The high school students here for the half-time show during the Virginia Polytechnic Institute football game, generally cause what amounts to a mass migration of FSU students who have to leave campus to get a meal.

And after its over the FSU students can still look forward to other such "days" during the year — Know Your Government Day(s), Women's Club Day, etc.—until, perhaps, some of the more brash ones will yearn for another "day": Students Day.

Calling The Card

Rule Prevents Bohemian 'Riot Act'

By JIM McINTYRE

There are many puzzling things involved in collegiate living. Among them are such things as eight o'clock classes, Greek rushing, bohemian dress, Chemistry lectures, and student politics. All these things are conducive to the chronic state of confusion that engulfs the University student.

In a community such as this, where the natural run of things is a little abnormal, someone has seen fit to add to the confusion the past few days by involving one of the few things we have left in common with the outside world in the muddle. That thing is the time of day.

Certainly time has been one of the most perplexing problems of history to man. Philosophers speak of its relationship to eternity. Existentialists speak of it in terms of the "Crisis Moment," and students cry for more of it.

WHO IS TO blame for the alteration of time, I don't know, but the fact remains that as I was counting the number of gongs given out by the olde Westcotte sounde systeme a few mornings past, I heard it peal distinctly nine times.

Knowing that this meant I was late for my nine o'clock, I jumped into my clothes, ran a comb through my hair, and dashed off to 222 History Building without stopping to take stock of the situation. Arriving there shortly thereafter, expecting to find a room full of eager scholars, I was taken aback by the absolute vacancy of the classroom. Stopping then to digest the situation in its entirety, I glanced down at my watch and found that it was merely ten minutes past eight. I had been hoodwinked!

FEELING BY now that my senses had taken leave of me, I proceeded to Kahler's to end it all with a cup of coffee. It was there that I found a few hundred kindred souls who had been defrauded much as I. The place was, as any good establishment in a college community should be, teeming with unrest. Insurrection was the keynote! Revolt was being whispered from table to table. The army was being organized to march on Westcott in a manner not unlike the Poznan uprising when someone pulled out an old copy of the Flambeau and read Uncle Sammy's riot act. Fearing reprisal the legion of stalwarts disbursed. The thought of academic probation was sufficient incentive to rid the group of their new found life-in-protest.

AND SO, another gathering that promised exhilaration went the way of all F S U. riots. Kahler's opened its doors to the coffee-drinking crew, and all was forgotten.

We now have no strong force with which to issue an official decree to the administration. We have no lobbying power that might pressure a change in the Westcott Building. We can simply state our case and ask pleadingly, "Please have the ---- bell fixed so that it rings only eight times at eight a.m."

The Dissenter

News Editor Has Power Of Dictator

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

He who occupies a certain consistently cluttered desk in the Florida Flambeau office is in a position of dictatorial power. The news editor — us, journalistic jargon for me — is handed dozens of items each day. Each person who hands in a news item is convinced that it is what the paper has been waiting for to achieve a permanent All-American rating. Such, unfortunately, is not the case.

BUT LET the editor's judicious filing be a bit too businesslike and soon a shadow will appear over the desk. A voice will come from the shadow.

"Why wasn't this printed?"

The above is invariably said in a voice of mingled reproach, criticism, warning, and condemnation.

Right now my basket holds the following items:

Fifth story from the Orange Bowl Committee about how now is the time for eager women to enter.

Army release on FSU graduate who has been promoted.

A "press release" from a Magazine about its new issue.

PRESS RELEASE from a fund raising drive.

Information on a student composers' contest.

"The Maid of Cotton will be Bermuda bound in 1957!"

Promotional material from Stevenson-Kefauver campaign headquarters.

More material on the composers' contest.

Letter from a campus service group, with "This HAS to be printed" scrawled menacingly across the top.

Two notes from the Tally-Ho.

Phone call message from infirmary.

Scattered memos from the elections committee.

MEETING NOTICES from Phi Eta Sigma, and the Scullions.

Note from an administrative office asking a reporter be sent by.

A dozen other "stop-press" items.

And of all things nine stories that were assigned to staff members.

The point is, while most of the above is genuinely news, sometimes the paper is too crowded with more important, longer items or they come in too late, or there is no one on hand to rewrite them in proper newspaper form. But we try.

Fraternities and sororities are inseparably linked in many people's thoughts with American universities. They mean treasured memories for alumni, and enrich the lives of their undergraduates.

BUT WE WISH it were not so much a part of the tradition that, on every day when bids are opened, there are two heartbroken students for every one who has, in the words of Life Magazine found his niche.

The independent upperclassman all too easily shrugs off as unimportant the frenzy that grips each rushee.

But standing in line with quickened pulse and then being sympathetically told one has no bid is a tragic experience to many freshmen. It comes at a time when homesickness still hurts, when one is still insecure in the college environment.

One week is no length of time sufficient to judge a person's social qualities. It is characterized by high-pressure salesmanship. All too often the rushee has been "sold" the summer before. Who you are isn't what counts. It's who you know.

For rushees and the Greeks themselves it would be a more sensible arrangement if pledging were delayed until second semester. By that time rushees and chapters alike could know a bit more about each other.

'Susannah's' Success Will Bring Music Fans To 'Grass Roots' FSU

By RYAN EDWARDS

Now that Time Magazine has given its official stamp of approval to Carlisle Floyd's Susannah (and who doesn't know that this is the sine qua non of any artistic success in America?), perhaps a final word on the subject would be fitting. Of course the place for this final word is the Florida Flambeau, for after all, where was Susannah born, nurtured, and sent out on its first essay into the big wide world?

This, now that the last hurrah has been shouted, is an essential point. Though Time, the cultural arbiter of all of the country's population that it deems worthwhile, didn't see fit to mention that Mr. Floyd has any connection with a state university anywhere, much less in the South, all the other New York critics did.

To quote Howard Taubman of the New York Times:

It is particularly encouraging that Susannah got its first hearing in Tallahassee. That is the way our own opera will develop—from the grass roots, if Tallahassee will pardon the expression.

We think he's right. We think the fact that a major American opera originated right here among us is important for the effects it will have on three groups of people.

FIRST OF ALL, on aspiring young composers (if readers will pardon a slight tinge of self-consciousness). No longer must these bewildered hopefuls flounder in the inability to get a work heard where it counts. Susannah proves that the grass roots can count. It proves that Julliard, Eastman, and Curtis aren't the only jumping-off places. And FSU's part in getting it heard proves that our universities are coming of age right along with our composers.

Also it has meaning for our university. In fact, it gives FSU a certain measure of responsibility. Susannah will undoubtedly bring a host of composers, singers, and instrumentalists to study here who would otherwise never have known there was a university in Tallahassee. We must be ready to follow Mr. Floyd's success with more of the same: more opportunities for production, more cooperation in gambling on things new, more encouragement to students.

And lastly, Susannah should have an effect on all the students here right now. Have you given a serious look to what FSU can offer you in the way of cultural experience? We paid $3.60 to see Susannah in New York, and here it cost us a buck. And besides, we have it from the composer's mouth that he preferred certain things about the Tallahassee production.

YES, FSU offers myriad opportunities for emotional growth and enlightenment. Anybody who heard Larry Simmons play the Brahms Handel Variations last Tuesday afternoon will tell you that even the music school's regular student recitals can be marvelously exciting. And there are also plays, art exhibits, dance programs, the English coffee hour . . .

So, now that the last hurrah for Susannah has been shouted, we think it occasions one more yell — hurrah for the grass roots! Hurrah for FSU!

The Coffee Mixup

By JIM SOLES

George Washington University students have reached a decision concerning the rise in cost for a cup of coffee. It was essential they say, and offer this explanation:

It costs the food services something over five cents to make each cup of coffee—five and three-quarter cents to be exact. Coffee is $1.09 a pound and one pound of coffee plus three gallons of water to make 54 cups. In other words, it costs two cents a cup for coffee alone. The second biggest item is labor which, broken down, amounts to one and a half cents a cup (this is where the progress comes in). In addition, sugar is ten cents a pound and cream for those who use it, which we do, is 40 cents a quart with a quart only enough for 36 cups.

To these basic expenses it is necessary to add breakage of cups (very high), lifting of spoons (this should go down when everyone has fully supplied all friends and relatives) and the price of such items as enough soap to wash (yes, they are washed!!!) all the cups and spoons used in a day. Coffee was a nickel. Now it has gone up and the university cafeteria has lost the distinction of being the only unsubsidized cafeteria in town with a five-cent cup of coffee.

The editorial staff of the Old Gold and Black (Wake Forest University) has decided to take a positive stand in the current political campaign. Its support will go to Pogo Possum of Okeefenokee Swamp. The suave little comic strip character, whose adventures are recorded daily in many newspapers, will conduct a whirlwind campaign before the November election. Despite Pogo's failure to win a party nomination, his supporters are looking forward to a strong write-in vote for their favorite. Tomorrow, by the way, is the last day to register for the November elections. Don't forget.

The University of Texas has came up with an idea to make its ROTC Program more popular with the male students. Beginning this year it has established a new military training program for women, and the leader of the new group told a reporter, "We hope that in time the girls will take their places right with the men in the squadron in drill practices." I imagine there are several hundred ROTC students that will be on her side in that argument. But can you just see yourself seated in the Student Center with some cute young coed and then have her suddenly leap up and say, "I have to hurry, it's time for drill and I've got to put on my uniform."

The University of Alabama offers a solution to those students who are burdened with debts. It suggests selling your beard. A good beard three months old or more will bring $5,000 an ounce these days. An electric razor corporation is offering this super price for the privilige of shaving the beards of men selected for an electric shaver commercial on a network TV Program. However, the program begins right away, so unless you already present a Smith Brothers Cough Drop appearance, this information may not help you.

It just isn't so when people say college students are not taking an interest in politics. For instance, the other day the student employment bureau in a western university posted this notice: Job: Farm Work—milk cows. Hours: 3-4 a day. Pay: room and board plus transportation. Prefers a senior law student. Beneath the listing, a University student, obviously an observer of the world, inscribed this message: "Takes politics for pull."

LETTERS to the EDITOR

The 'Big Move'

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

I write this letter with a co[py] of last Friday's Flambeau st[ar]ing me in the face; it is ope[n] to the front page story conce[rn]ing our Student Senate. though it is probably unn[eces]sary for me to address this you, with each reading of story I become more determ[ined] —determined because I hope same questions which continue arise in my mind have plagued you over the past days. These are the main questions — many more sp[ring] from them:

1. Why was nothing said anyone (concerning this slip in the new election law) befo[re] the senate convened? Su[rely] Jim Moore was aware of problem before 5:00 Wednesd[ay] afternoon Senate meeting. It seems that if he were go[ing] to bring up the point at all most constructive time wou[ld] before Senate met so tha[t] the members might have to think out the problem not be caught off guard. M[ost] certainly, Bill Cullom, presi[ding] officer over the Senate, sh[ould] have been informed that point was going to arise to meeting.

(I hesitate in singling out M[r.] Moore's name, however seems that he was the only aware of it, and thus the bl[ame] falls to him alone on this po[int].)

2. If Senate members "erroneously installed", right did they have to appoi[nt a] committee among themselves act in representation of the dent body? It seems that the announcement of the ing being illegal, the only al[ter]native would be to dissolve mediately—and leave this all other problems up to functioning portion of Stud[ent] Government — the cabinet President, and the three vi[ce] presidents.

One other question rema[ins] in my mind. I hesitate in a[sking] it because of the implica[tions] which arise. Nevertheless to me the most important one I'm asking it:

"What was the motive b[e]hind this 'big' move?"

I hope that the conclus[ion] which I have reached are wron[g]. I hope that you will try to out for yourselves though only to prove that I am w[rong]. For, if I am right, then we finding on our campus the sa[me] sad situation which exists often in our State and Nation[al] Politics—little people trying to get away with no big thin[gs], and this neither should be co[m]placently accepted, nor should be innocently overlooked. hope you will try to prove wrong.

My compliments to De[an] Bachman and members of cabinet in their mature handl[ing] of this incident; my sin[cere] apologies if I have stepped [on] anyone's toes—I hope that particularly, will, in the futu[re] prove me wrong.

SINCERELY,
JOYCE WEATHER[LY]

Lets Have Jazz

TO THE EDITOR:

I have just put down my lat[est] issue of Downbeat but I pu[t it] down gently for in it I fo[und] that a good number of our c[ol]leges have really gone in for jazz idiom. After being on c[am]pus for a year, I find the sta[te] quality of music is becom[ing] progressively worse. I mean say that good jazz just isn't campus. This is exemplified the fact that blues & Rhyth[m] predominate in the local boxes. I am a Californian happen to have been educate[d] the finer aspects of good mu[sic]. We leave the blues & Ry[thm] kick for the Jr. High level endulge in music that is wor[thy] of our social position. For school that is suppose to be a good music college, I hea[r] very little jazz eminating f[rom] such. I quote from Downbe[at]: "Virtually ignored by school[s] music in higher education is largest area of professional e[n]deavor, the jazz idiom." Pe[r]haps if the school of music wo[uld] take an active interest in feild of jazz its standing campus, as a whole could elevated. Also "maybe good jazz concerts could this too—I think the Duke in this area very recently no one gave him a bus... shame!

Tribe Set To Ambush Gobblers

VPI Favored Over Seminoles In Tomorrow Night's Contest

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Writer

A rugged and fast VPI football squad will tread on enemy territory tomorrow when it meets the once beaten Florida State Seminoles at 8 p.m. in Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

The FSU team with the spirits slightly bruised by a 2-0 loss to Georgia last weekend will be trying to get back in the win column.

On the other hand, the Gobblers from Virginia, who trounced N. C. State 35-7 last weekend, will enter the contest with an "on top of the world attitude."

The FSU backfield will be weakened by the loss of injured halfback Bobby Renn. Renn was hurt in the Georgia game and is not expected to see action in tomorrow's battle.

Billy Odom will probably start in Renn's halfback position Lee Corso, who coach Wally Butts of Georgia praised last week, will open the game at the quarterback slot.

Bu's Metts, will be at the other halfback post for the Tribe and Joe Hutt will handle the fullback duties once more.

Reserve backs Bill Wesner and Jerry Henderson are in doubtful playing shape. Wesner has a charley horse while Henderson is still recovering from a leg injury.

The Gobblers enter the scrap with a two and one record. They were defeated by Tulane 21-14 but proved that they could move the ball against N. C. State.

ROUGH GAME

Coach Frank Moseiy of VPI expects it to be a rough game but stated that his boys are in good condition.

Moseiy's charges run from a fast and deceptive split T and have shown in the past to be a ball control team.

The "Techmen" have a large, solid line. The bright light in their forward wall is right end Grover Jones, a 200 pound senior from Richmond, Virginia.

According to Moseiy he is a smart defensive man and an excellent pass catcher.

Bill Craciunoff who was the preseason pick at quarterback has an operation just before the opening game and has not played since. He may be sidelined the whole season.

Starting in his place will be Junior Jim Lucas. Lucas is a fine runner, but what is more important, he has a slight of hand technique which is a big factor in the split T offense.

At the halfback spots will be Elmo Knott and Rudy Frasier. Both boys are speed merchants and should keep the Seminole defense on its toes. Frasier also handles the point after duties.

Ray England and Bob Wolfender two other highly regarded halfbacks should also see action since VPI likes the type of two platoon offense the Tribe does.

Bobby Conner, a power runner with better than average speed will open at fullback. He is also a capable punter and had a better than 4.0 average per carry in '55."

HALFBACK BILL ODOM of Mt Dora has been named captain for FSU in tomorrow's game.

Alan Whitmarsh Scouting Report

The next four games of Florida State's 1956 football schedule can make or break the Seminoles' chances for a winning season. The first comes up tomorrow night.

It's a dandy.

Hosts of stories and radio broadcasts out of Virginia claim that the 1956 edition of the Virginia Tech football team is absolutely the best in that area of the country, including the University of Maryland.

That's a pretty fancy claim for anybody to make, in book, because that section of the country has produced some pretty fair football teams recently—such as Maryland, West Virginia, and George Washington to mention a few.

Still, the Gobblers of Frank Mosely have a power house, of that there can be no doubt. Rated slight underdogs to North Carolina State, they smothered the Wolfpack last Saturday, 35-7.

We're told that they're a running team, a ball-control outfit, and that Moseily uses a two-platoon system similar to our own Tom Nugent.

By virtue of the fact that they alternate two units, you can't really say Virginia Tech has a first or second team in the usual connotation. The unit that opens the game might be called the "first team", but they probably won't stay in there for more than a half quarter at a time.

"They switch their units no matter where they are or what the situation is at regular intervals," observes Seminole Coach Tom Nugent. "They might be on their own 10 or your 10, but they switch anyway."

To take one for instance, Senior halfback Bi Wolfenden has proved undoubtedly to be the outstanding back on the team in the first three games.

He went on the starting team

Wolfenden has reeled off 212 yards in 22 tries for a 5.8 average in the first three contests, scored three touchdowns, and leads the team in punting, kickoff returns and scoring.

Now anybody gets the idea that the Gobblers don't have a star, look at the record of starting quarterback Tommy Lugar. Lugar has completed 12 of 29 aerials for 161 yards and two touchdowns thus far.

The Techmen appear well-stocked in backs, though the line won't measure up to the standards.

Tackle Ed Hall, Senior halfback and three fullbacks Clem gaining the 431 yards run up against North Carolina State.

The Seminoles of course, are with us at Bobby Renn. Though the speedy Sr., N. C., halfback will probably be ready to go against North Carolina State a week from tomorrow at Raleigh.

Bill Odom of Mt. Dora will replace Renn in the starting lineup, and also has been named game captain for the contest.

Odom went out on a limb and picked the Seminoles over Georgia last week, and even managed to cut the limb out from under us in the last minute.

This week we're playing it safe. It's going to be a great football game, no matter who wins.

Seminole Slants

Veller's golfers are currently "men without a home." It seems a new regime of board of directors has taken over at the Tallahassee Country Club, and they won't take offer and officially give the golfers permission to practice the linksters are without a course. . . .

Tech has been named a two touchdown favorite over the Seminoles tomorrow night. So was Georgia a week earlier in the form of the injury jinx strikes at the football footballers, it seems to be directed towards the Seminole punters. First Verspriille then Renn has been hit by the jinx. . . . An oddity of the Tribe's 3-0 victory over Georgia, both teams ran exactly the same number of plays (53) and both teams gained the same amount of yardage (214). Can it get closer? . . . It's all tentative, but he has been approached by Wisconsin for a football game in 1960.

Renn On Sidelines Tomorrow; Injured During Georgia Game

Florida State's top flight backfield combinations broke with Bobby Renn's loss last Saturday afternoon as the Georgia Bulldogs edged the Seminoles 3-0.

The speedy 170 pound halfback from Henderson North Carolina has only appeared in one game for the Seminoles although he has been here for two years. He was forced to sit out last season because of an ineligibility rulins.

Renn's injury occured in the second quarter of the Georgia game when a big Georgia lineman stepped him with a hard but clean tackle.

According to trainer Don Pauls. X-rays fail to show any broken ribs although the cartilage that encases the ribs is supposed

Just when Renn will return to the Seminole lineup is not yet certain, but it appears that he will be ready for the North Carolina State game one week hence.

The loss of Renn in the Georgia game no doubt hurt the Tribe. The fact that Renn could throw the ball was unveiled when he pitched a touchdown pass to end Bob Nellums in the first quarter only to have it nullified by a penalty.

According to Tom Nugent, Renn is one of the best halfbacks he's coached and FSU will miss his services Saturday night against VPI.

Billy Odom, who replaced Renn at halfback during the Georgia game, will be the probable starter at the versatile halfback slot for the VPI game. Odom was FSU's second highest ground gainer during the 1955 season with 294 yards.

It was against this same VPI team last year that Odom returned a kickoff 89 yards for a touchdown in a losing cause.

Intramural News

The Intramural Board delayed the opening of the campus tennis singles and doubles championships until Monday Oct. 15, at their meeting held earlier this week.

This means that entries will now be received up to 3 p.m. next Thursday Oct. 11. At that time the drawing will be made. Both tournaments will be on the double elimination basis.

The Intramural Board will meet again Monday Oct. 8 at 4 p.m in Room 212 of the Men's Physical Education Building. A report of a committee on eligibility will be acted on, and permanent meeting days will be set at this time. There will also be an election of officers.

Stickler!

STICKLERS ARE TICKLERS and a mighty soft way to make money! Just write down a simple riddle and a two-word rhyming answer. For example: What's a ball player who gets a raise? Answer: richer pitcher. Note: both words must have the same number of syllables —blank freak, jolly dolly, vinery finery. Send your Sticklers, with your name, address, college, and class, to Happy-Joe-Lucky, Box 67A, Mt. Vernon, N. Y. Don't do drawings! We'll pay $25 for every Stickler we use in our advertising—and for hundreds that never see print. And remember—you're bound to Stickle better when you're enjoying a Lucky, because Luckies taste better. Luckies' mild, good-tasting cigarette is TOASTED to taste even better. 'Fashion' Defies Definition; Person Must 'Suit' Himself, Writer Says

With this issue the Florida Flambeau initiates a new feature— a fashion column written by Margaret McLean, a Junior majoring in art. It will appear each Friday on the society page, and will discuss the world of fashion from the Florida State University student's viewpoint. The column will feature Miss McLean's light and sarcastic writing style, and will be printed in the belief that FSU students, as young people everywhere, are interested in what they wear, how to wear it, and why.

By MARGARET McLEAN
FASHION? Heyea a nice word. Accidentally, you elect to define it. By choice rather than accident? It's more mystical than positive. It's a rare word. Essentially, fashion is a mode of dress acceptable to some nonconformists within the limits of good taste, and it presupposes a total artist's awareness and knowledge. The artist is generally not very conscious of the world and its fashions—this is fortunate, as it would ruin him. Some of us, however, possess a fashion sense—usually subtle, defies explanation or definition.

Anyway, for now, since no one is going to tell us what to wear—fashion and FSU's campus" accordingly. In the columns may be wisely applauded upon feminine publications but you, children, are not. Fashion is not "fashionable." WHY? Fashion has to be a relative term, adapted to your needs, your taste, your budget, of course, but fashion is a creative rather than a possible situation.

It is more exciting that way. What is definitely unacceptable fashion than what is unsuitable. Now, there are thousands of clothing possible combinations of clothing acceptable on some persons, but not on others. To simplify, for example, Bermuda shorts are acceptable on some people, but a the KA's Old Spice Ball. You need problem for one reason, and only one, that precious mental hoist (euphemistically called "A SENSE OF WELL BEING"). If you still feel this way exclusive of how you look to yourself and those who see you, then it's all sincerity. I think you're wonderful. Some of the dearest individuals I've ever known were really dolts.

You may feel at this stage in the game that my approach is somewhat amorphous. My answer is that I am merely a student of the fashion world, not an expert, and I could hardly solve a problem of such proportions in such a confined space. I am attempting so far a groundwork for more conclusive information to follow in future columns. Next week I hope to discuss the basic rudiments or foundation of fashion, good grooming.

Society Editor Asks Publicity From Groups

Florida Flambeau Society Editor Mickey Cole yesterday requested that all organizations wishing publicity on the society page each Friday get in contact with her.

She said that items to appear on the society page will include such social events as picnics, banters, parties, meetings and similar functions. Organizations which announce such activities should appoint one of their members to regularly call or bring in publicity material, Miss Cole said.

Regular features to appear on the page will be a column listing the social affairs of FSU, a calendar of events, and ordinary society news much as engagements or marriages of students. Miss Cole also asked that students who wish to announce engagements or marriages please contact her.

Deadline for publication in any Friday issue will be Tuesday at 5 p.m. the Society Editor said. Material should be brought by the Flambeau offices at 213 Longmire Building.

Miss Cole asked that organizations be prompt in turning in advance publicity. "We're relying on the initiative of these groups in giving us news of social activities," she said.

She added that students wishing to assist in the preparation of the society page will be welcomed.

Congregational Students Meet

All students interested in the formation of a Congregational Student Group have been invited to a box supper Sunday night.

A supper and "Pilgrim Fellowship" meeting will be held at Bess Building from 5 until 7 p.m. President Betty Henderson asked that room 109 in the Social Welfare Building who plan to attend the supper sign up at the Librarian's office in the new Library. The price will be 75 cents.

That will be the first time there has been an organization for Congregational students in Tallahassee. Officers elected at the first meeting include Betty Henderson, President, Lilias Lasvid, Vice President, and Nancy Fambie, Secretary-treasurer. Advisors for the group are Dr. Norman Kilpatrick, Director of Libraries, and Dr. Mildred Morgan, Professor of Home and Family Life. Meetings will be held twice monthly, the first and third Sundays.

PARTY SCENE

By Mickey Cole

THE CAMPUS is literally jumping with activity this week as clubs take advantage of the warm weather for picnic plans and sororities and fraternities complete their pledging activities.

An annual round-up party in honor of the Freshmen is being held tonight at Lake Bradford by the Westminster Fellowship. The sponsors have promised to transport everyone interested to the party—by piggy back if nessesary. An evening of fun and fellowship is scheduled to begin at 7:30, including games, square dancing, entertainment and refreshments.

The picnic ideas seem to be "the thing". Catching on the bandwagon before the weather changes, the modern languages department has planned its picnic for tomorrow afternoon. Faculty and students will board buses at the Diamond House at 2 p.m. and ride to Lake Bradford to share the food and opportunity to get acquainted.

The picnic will give members of Sigma Delta Pi, Spanish honorary, a chance to complete their plans for the annual Columbus Day celebration coming up on the 11th of October.

It's been a big week for a lot of girls on campus, as the aching muscles and tired feet will testify. Whoever originated the name for "rush" was certainly right.

"Rush" week was devoted to dashing madly from one house to another—making many a rushee wonder why, why, the houses must be so far apart.

Banquets were in order at most houses to honor the new pledges. At the Delta Zeta house the old pledges were hostess to the new pledges. Along with the banquet they presented original songs and skits. Toasting the new pledges at the Silver Slipper was a treat for the actives as well as the pledges of Alpha Xi Delta. After dinner, each pledge was formally introduced to her "mother."

This weekend will be particularly memorable for certain pledges. Here is anticipation weekend. Sigma Kappa, Kappa Alpha Theta, and Delta Delta Delta pledges from last semester are receiving their active pins.

An "Eleusian Weekend" is included in Chi Omega's plans. The sorority will honor the new pledges and Chi O mothers and alumni tomorrow and Sunday.

The fraternity scene is filled with parties, from "coke" affairs to formals.

Entertaining at the house after the game tomorrow night with informal get-togethers will be Theta Chi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Pi Kappa Phi, Phi Kappa Tau, Alpha Tau Omega, Kappa Alpha, Lambda Chi Alpha, Kappa Sigma, and Phi Delta Theta.

A formal dance in honor of the new pledges will find the Delta Tau Delta and Kappa Sigma houses tonight with lovely gals and handsome escorts.

Fashion Institute Slates Tea Tuesday; To Explain Contest

Students interested in the Student Fashion Institute will be entertained at a tea Tuesday October 9 in Longmire Lounge at 5 p.m.

A program consisting of a skit and an introduction to the Mademoiselle College Board Contest will be presented. Margaret McLean, one of last year's contest winners and guest editor for Mademoiselle this summer, will speak on procedures of the contest and some of her interesting experiences during the summer.

The Fashion Institute is not limited to fashion majors, but is open to everyone with an interest in the field of fashion, according to its officials. It was started on this campus in 1954, as a branch of the faculty institute. The Fashion Institute sponsors an annual "Fashion Day" in the spring and presents a fashion show during the year. Local merchants, beauticians, and clothes buyers are consulted at the bi-monthly program meetings.

The officers for the first semester are Nancy Buchan, president, Barbara Emmett, vice-president, Liz Blaine, secretary, Sara Dell Gibson, treasurer, Gerry Lober, program chairman, Mickey Cole, social chairman. The plans for this year include organizing a modeling group under the supervision of Sue Atkins and a charm course. Tryouts for the modeling group will be held soon for interested women according to Miss Atkins.

The women will serve an important role for various events on campus during the year.

New Dorms Huge Benefit: Campbell

By CHARLET POITEVINT

The two new Florida State University dormitories approved recently by the Board of Control will be of "tremendous benefit," President Doak S. Campbell said this week.

The duplicates of Florida Hall and West Hall "with modern improvements," are planned for Florida State by 1959 according to Rod Shaw, business manager.

The buildings will cost an estimated $2,500,000 and will be partly financed by a 40-year federal loan, to be repaid through student rentals.

An additional $400,000 will be allocated by the university, Shaw said

PLANS UNDERWAY

Plans for the buildings are now being drafted by Guy C. Fulton, architect to the Board of Control

"It will take four or six months to clear up legal matters alone. Then it will take a year and a half to build the men's dorm and a year to construct the women's" Shaw said.

Construction might be completed on the men's dorm by February, 1959, and on the women's dorm by September, 1956," he added "However, this is a very optimistic estimate"

NEAR WEST HALL

The new 11-story dorm, to house 776, will be between West Hall and Tennessee St. in a location that will bring "about the least disturbance of present housing near the present dorm," according to Dr Campbell.

The duplicate to Florida Hall, housing 240, will be constructed adjacent to its prototype and West Jefferson Street.

The FSU business manager said the new dormitories will be almost identical to Florida and West Halls.

"One feature certain to be included in the final plans is adequate parking space," said Shaw.

'Air-conditioning, a rumored addition, will probably not prove feasible because of the high cost," he added.

The University at present has room for 1,600 men others living off-campus. There were approximately 3,632 men registered at FSU at the start of the semester.

'One Of Best' Campus Movie Schedules Told

"One of the best" free campus movie schedules is going to be offered this year to Florida State University faculty and students, announced Miss Marie Williams, chairman of the campus movie committee

The films to be shown were selected by a group of students in a poll taken this past summer, she said

Approximately half of the movies will be in color, Miss Williams added.

For the first time films are going to be shown in the Graduate Student Lounge in the old Library.

Students, faculty, and their families are welcome, Miss Williams said, to view the movies at any of the following places: Florida Hall, 7:30 p.m. Monday; Landis Hall, 7:30 p.m Tuesday, Graduate Club, 7.30 p.m Wednesday, Senior Hall, 8 p.m. Thursday, and West Hall, 8 p.m. Friday

Leading off this year's program will be The Glenn Miller Story showing from October 8-12. Other films to be shown are: My Little Chickadee, October 22-26, All My Sons, October-November 29-2;

The Man in the White Suit, November 5-9; All's Quiet on the Western Front, November 12-16, Tight Little Island, November 26-30: Sitting Pretty, December 3-7;

All About Eve, January 7-11: and Broken Arrow; January 14-18.

The spring semester movie program will begin with Desert Sons which will run from February 11-15: followed by The Man Who Came to Dinner, February 18-22, Laura, March 4-8, East of Eden, March 11-15: Dial M for Murder, March 18-22, Mr. Roberts, March 25-29; and Battle Cry, April 8-12.

Dean Davis To Inspect 'Bootstrap'

Dean Charles S. Davis of the College of Arts and Sciences at Florida State University has left for a two-week inspection of the Operation Bootstrap program in Germany.

Dr Davis, who is in charge of the Bootstrap program at FSU, left Washington Wednesday afternoon with a representative of the University of Maryland in a Military Air Transport Service plane for the inspection tour.

The FSU dean said he will look into the administration of the program, conducted by the University of Maryland, and visit classes to observe the standard of instruction.

Besides making an evaluation of the program for the Air Force, which is sponsoring the trip, he will get material to help in evaluating FSU's own oversea Bootstrap program

Dr. Davis will return to Tallahassee Oct. 18

Frosh-Soph Struggle Set Tomorrow; Caps At Stake

By NANCY GENE BROWN

It will be a struggle to Westcott Fountain when the sophomores challenge the freshmen in the annual Soph-Frosh Field Day, to begin tomorrow at 2 p.m. on the field by the Geology Building.

According to Sophomore Class president Bill Clendinen, there will be dashes for both men and women, an orange relay, ping-pong throw, football throw, three-legged race dress relay, and a contest to see who can sing the Fight Song loudest, as well as a tug-of-war. Anchoring the sophomore tug team will be a 260-pound football player, Paul Smith—something of a challenge to the frosh. Clendinen emphasized that the procedure will be carried out on a definite point system, and there will be no foul play.

SOPHS DETERMINED

Although a sophomore team has never won the field day, this year's sophomores are out to prove that the law of averages can change things. Clendinen said Added incentive for the freshmen will be the privilege of throwing the sophomore officers and Sludge Squad leaders in Westcott Pool If the frosh lose they would supposedly be required to wear their rat caps until Christmas

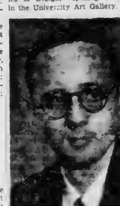
Two sludges, Rob Austin and Walter Snickler, "champions" of the sophomore class, have boasted that no ten frosh can succeed in dunking them in the pool.

In explanation for the recent disappearance of rat caps, Clendinen stated that some members of the administration suggested that the upperclassmen ease up on the freshmen.

"There were several incidents were non-Sludge upperclassmen overstepped their bounds", he continued, "resulting in complaints that the Sludge was being 'childish'

'PURPOSE ACCOMPLISHED'

"Nevertheless, the rat period accomplished its purpose — to give the freshman class unity and school spirit." he added



Clendinen praised the work of the sophomore officers, Pat Starnes, vice-president; Lia Armes, secretary; Mary Ann Benedict, treasurer; and Clair Green, social chairman, who he said helped make the rat activities successful, as well as John Howard and Wylie Poag, organizers of the field day.

"And the Rats deserve a pat on the back for their co-operation," Clendinen said

"We want all organizations and individuals of the sophomore and freshman class to be present and participate to make this a day to be remembered," Clendinan concluded

Irwin Rubin Gallery Shows 'Pure Design'

Irwin Rubin, a new faculty member in the department of art, will have a One-Man show, "Studies in Design," opening Sunday in the University Art Gallery.

Rubin

Dr. James McDonough, head of the department of art, said the show will be "unique, in that nothing like it has been seen before in the FSU gallery." He said each work is completely devoid of subject matter and illustrates a problem in pure design which the artist set for himself.

Included in the exhibition will be about 25 small studies, done in various combinations of drawing, painting, etching, collage and low relief wood construction.

The gallery is open to students and public seven days a week: Sundays, 1 to 4 p m., Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p m: Saturdays, 9 to 12 noon. There is no admission charge.

ANOTHER YEAR, ANOTHER DOLLAR

Today I begin the third year of writing this column for Philip Morris Cigarettes, and I am merry in my heart.

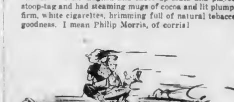
I am merry for several reasons. First, because I am being paid.

Not, let me hasten to state, that an emolument was necessary. "Sirs," I said a few days ago to the makers of Philip Morris, who underneath their dickeys are as friendly as pups and twice as cute, "Sirs," I said to this winsome assemblage, "there is no need to pay me for writing this column. If I can introduce America's college men and women to Philip Morris's natural tobacco goodness, if I can inaugurate them into the vast sodality of Philip Morris smokers and thus enhance their happiness, heighten their zest, upgrade their gusto, magnify their cheer, broaden their bliss, augment their glee, and increase their PQ—"

"PQ?" said the makers, looking at me askance.

"Pleasure Quotient," I explained.

"Ah!" said the makers, nodding their sweet, shaggy heads.



"If," I continued, "I can do these splendid things for the college population of America, there is no need for money, because I am more than amply repaid."

We wept then. I am not ashamed to say it. WE WEPT! I wish the wiseacres who say big business is cold and heartless could have been there that day. I wish they could have witnessed the deep, croaking sobs that racked the gathering, the great, shimmering tears that splashed on the boardroom table. We wept, every man-jack of us. The makers wept. The secretaries wept. I wept. My agent, Clyde Greedy, wept. We wept all.

"No, no!" cried one of the makers, whose name is Good Sam. "We insist on paying you."

"Oh, all right," I said.

Then we laughed The gloom passed like a summer shower. We all laughed and chose up sides and played stoop-tag and had steaming mugs of cocoa and lit plump, firm, white cigarettes, brimming full of natural tobacco goodness. I mean Philip Morris, of course!

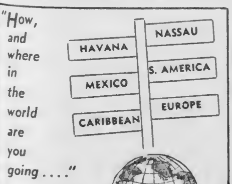
—how to Double-Date in an MG

Refreshed and exalted, we returned to the business at hand. "Now then," said one of the makers, whose name is Merry Andrew, "what will you write about in your column this year?"

"About students and teachers," I said. "About classes and cutting. About eds and coeds. About Greeks and independents. About the important issues that occupy the supple young minds of college America"

"Like what?" asked one of the makers, whose name is Tol'able David.

"Like how to finance a full social life without a revolver," I replied. "Like how to wear Bermuda shorts though your knees look like brain-coral. Like how to double-date in an MG."



"And will you," asked one of the makers, whose name is Peter-Sit-by-the-Fire, "from time to time say a pleasant word about Philip Morris Cigarettes, which are now available in two sizes—Regular in the familiar Snap-Open Pack, and Long Size in the new Crushproof Box?"

"Crazy kid!" I chuckled, pushing my fist gently against his jaw. "You know I will."

And we all shook hands—silently, firmly, manlily—and I left, dabbing at my eyes with my agent, and hurried to the nearest typewriter.

The makers of Philip Morris take pleasure in bringing you this uncensored, free-wheeling column each week during the school year—and also in bringing you today's new Philip Morris, packed with natural tobacco goodness, tip end to tip end.

Pull up a bongo drum and grab a cup of mud while yours truly ventures forth on a new experience. A point in passing—all of the records discussed, reviewed, or lampooned are available at Baker's Music Center 107 E Jefferson

When our hypothetical record consumer the cats them, Irving Feldman, walked into Baker's the other day his beady little eyes picked out a new album by his favorite group. The group is the Four Freshmen, the album is "Freshman Favorites"

This writer is particularly overjoyed to find that this type of music is becoming more popular in this section of the country, despite the undeniable general acceptance of the style popularized by a certain lad with a guitar whose name escapes me at the moment ...

The album is aptly named for all who go for the Freshman's style It contains what Feldman believes to be some of the greatest renditions put forth by the group Some of the songs included are "Day by Day", "Poinciana" and "It Never Occured to Me" Irving feels that this album shows a significant trend for the group since the orchestras of Pete Rugolo and Stan Kenton are conspicuous by their absence

If you like vocal groups, Irving suggests you drop into Baker's Music Center to listen to this album And if you find you enjoy the Freshmen style, Baker's has earlier albums by the boys—"Voices in Modern" and "Four Freshmen and Five Trombones"

AT LAST A CAST

'Skin Of Our Teeth' Drills

By DAVE FLETCHER

The cast has been chosen for the Speech Department's first major production, "The Skin of Our Teeth," Dr. Lynn Orr, director, announced today.

Dr. Orr is directing a cast of 40 in the Thorton Wilder play. Susie Sanders, who will play the part of Sabina; Bian De-Hart, playing Mr. Antrobus, Margie Tindell, portraying Mrs. Antrobus; Ruth Harvard and Eli Ash enacting the parts of the two children, and Caroline Williamson, who is featured in the role of the fortune teller, head the cast.

On Broadway, the play was originally cast with Tallulah Bankhead, Montgomery Clift, Frederick March, Florence Eldridge, and Florence Heed in the title roles. A three act comedy about George Antrobus, his wife and two children, and their general maid, Sabina; the play deals with the indestructability of mankind.

Thornton Wilder leads his characters through a hectic pace of fire, flood, pestilence, the seven year locusts, the ice age the black pox and double features, a dozen wars and as many depressions. They survive a thousand calamities by the skin of their teeth.

Casting of the play has been hampered by the conflicting tryout for "South Pacific", said Dr. Orr.

Technical Director Charles Reimer has been ironing out the multitudinous technical difficulties of the production.

Performances will be held the Augusta Conradi Theatre 8:15 p.m. on Oct 26, 27, 29 30. All seats will be reser said Dr. Orr. Tickets may obtained at the central t office in the Westcott build starting Oct. 24 the direc said. Students must present activity book for tickets, he minded.

IT'S FOR REAL! by Chester Field

IF I HAD A MILLION!

"Life," he cried, "is so unfair
I should have been a millionaire!
I'd drive a car, a white Jaguar with leopard trim and built-in bar,
Complete with blondes and red heads too,
A movie queen or two would do . . .
I'm lazy, crazy, debonnaire
I'd make a perfect millionaire!"

"Instead," he sobbed, "at twenty-five
I'll have to work to stay alive!"

You Can Win a Cash Award— and Scholarship Money for Your College in Reader's Digest

$41,000 CONTEST

Open to All College Students (Faculty, too!)

Nothing to buy...nothing to write

...and you may find you know more about people than you think!

How well do you know human nature? Can you tell what subjects interest people most? Here is a chance to test your judgment—show how good an editor you are—and you may win $5,000 for yourself, plus $5,000 in scholarship funds for your college.

It's fun to try. Maybe you can top other students in colleges across the country . . . and you can match wits with the editors of Reader's Digest

Why do far more college graduates read Reader's Digest than any other magazine? What is it that makes the Digest the most widely read magazine in the world — with 11 million copies bought each month in the United States, plus 9 million abroad? Why is it read each month by at least 60 million people, in 12 languages—Arabic, Danish, English, Finnish, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Norwegian, Portuguese, Spanish and Swedish?

Can you spot in a typical issue of Reader's Digest the universal human values that link scholars, statesmen, scientists, writers, businessmen, housewives? Can you pick out the articles that will be most popular with the average Digest reader?

You may find . . . you know more about people than you think!

Here's all you do. Study the descriptions (at right) of the articles in the October Reader's Digest—or, better still, read the complete articles in the issue itself. (But you are not required to buy The Reader's Digest to enter the contest.) Then simply list the six articles—in order of preference—that you think readers of the magazine will like best. This will be compared with a nationwide survey conducted among a cross section of Digest subscribers.

Follow the directions given below. Fill in the entry blank, paste it on a post card, and get it into the mail before the deadline. Additional blanks are obtainable at your college bookstore.

All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, October 25, 1956. Don't delay. In case of ties, the entry with the earliest postmark will win.

Just pick in order the six articles you think most readers of October Reader's Digest will like the best.

READER'S DIGEST CONTEST, Box 4, Great Neck, L. I., New York

In the space opposite the word "FIRST" write the number of the article you think will be the most popular of all. Opposite the word "SECOND" write the number of the article you think will rank second in popularity. List in this way the numbers of the six top articles in the order of their popularity. (Note: Use only the numbers of articles you choose. Do not write the title of any article.) Clip and paste this coupon on a Government post card.

*Name*______ *Address*______
*City*______ *State*______
*Name of college*______

YOU CAN WIN:

$5000 cash 1st prize
plus $5000 for the scholarship fund of your college or . . .

$1000 cash 2nd prize
plus $1000 for the scholarship fund of your college or . . .

Any of TEN $500 cash prizes
plus $500 for the scholarship fund of your college or . . .

Any of 100 $10 prizes
in book credit from your local college bookstore

And if your entry is the best from your college you will receive an extra award —an additional $10 in book credit at your college bookstore

FOLLOW THESE EASY RULES

1. Read the descriptions in this advertisement of the articles that appear in October Reader's Digest. Or better, read the complete articles. Then select the 6 that you think most readers will like best

2. On the entry blank at left, write the number of each article you select. List them in what you think will be the order of popularity, from first to sixth place. Your selections will be judged by comparison with a national survey which ranks in order of popularity the 6 articles that readers like best. Fill in and mail the coupon. All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, October 25, 1956

3. This contest is open only to college students and faculty members in the U. S., excluding employees of The Reader's Digest, its advertising agencies, and their families. It is subject to all federal, state and local laws and regulations

4. Only one entry per person.

5. In case of ties, entries postmarked earliest will win. Entries will be judged by O. E. McIntyre, Inc., whose decision will be final. All entries become property of The Reader's Digest, none returned.

6. All winners notified by mail. List of cash-prize winners mailed if you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

English Coffee Hour

'English Department Idea' Talk Subject

Dr. Francis G. Townsend will Appear On First Program Friday

The Coffee Hour is beginning its third year, under the direction of Dr. W. H. Rogers of the English department. Last year, under the direction of Mrs. Olive Cross, Slaughter and Philip Wylie, faculty member, wrote one of the works on the program, "Sonatina for Trombone and Piano," in two movements.

A former student of Cramer, W. H. Rivard, wrote another of the selections, "Sonata for Trombone and Piano," in three movements. Rivard earned his master's degree here and is now teaching and working for a doctor's degree at the University of Iowa. He dedicated the sonata to Cramer.

The third selection was written for Glotzbach and Cramer by Klaus George Roy, music librarian at Boston University. Sonata for Trombone and Piano, Opus 13, in three movements. It was premiered four years ago by the team here.

Also on the program will be Paul Hindemith's Sonata for Trombone and Piano in two movements, including the "Swas" "Swashbuckler's Song."

Glotzbach and Cramer will repeat part of this program later this year at a meeting of the Florida Music Teachers Association to be held at Rollins College, Winter Park.

Young Democrats Meet Thursday

Guy Milner said yesterday that all Democrats are invited to attend a meeting of the Young Democrats Club Thursday in the Music Amphitheater. The meeting will begin promptly at 7:30, he said. Bill Daniels, Vice President of the University of Florida Student Body will be guest speaker.

Housing Notice

Men who applied for university housing on or before July 11 are requested to check with the director of men's residence at the earliest possible time, attended an O. D. R. W. residence director. The office is located in Bryan Hall, phone 7-6231.

Queen Voting Starts Friday; 29 Lovelies Run

Coeds Covet Queen Crown

Election of five court members from a field of twenty-nine candidates in the annual Homecoming Queen contest will be Friday, with the final vote next Wednesday.

Polling place, manned by Seabomber Council members, will be the traditional spot in front of the Westcott ticket office, said Miss McCullough, secretary of elections. The polls will be open from 9 a m to 5 p.m. Numbered pictures of the entrants will be displayed. Ballots will be marked by number rather than name, and must contain votes for five candidates to be valid, Miss McCullough said.

Winners of the top honor will be announced at the Pow-Wow to be held Friday night, October 19. She will be crowned by Maraeen Ann Ballinger, last year's queen.

Miss Marie Williams, chairman of the Queen's committee, said Fraternities, sororities, residence halls and other student organizations have nominated these women:

Anne Monroe, 18, sophomore, Gamma Phi Beta; Sarna Pi, 20, Prick, 19, sophomore, Senior Hall; Nancy Cubson, 20, senior, Alpha Xi Delta; Anne Verran, 20, junior, North Cawthon;

Jan Kinnaird, 19, junior, Broward Hall; Pat Starnes, sophomore, 19, Theta Chi; Linda Rollins, sophomore, 18, Alpha Chi and Anita Anderson, senior, Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Cast Chosen For Opera By Edwards

Ryan Edwards, senior in the School of Music, has announced the cast for his opera, to be called "See the Wind" which will be staged on campus December 13

Selected for the cast were Mary Jane Marriott, soprano; Sam Jordan, tenor; Phyllis Dye, Keith, a former FSU student who is not connected with the university now.

The plot is "laid in a small north Florida town." According to Edwards, "See the Wind" is largely a character study in music" exhibiting conflicts within a boarding house family.

The son, Edwards explained, has run away from the town because of trouble with the law but has returned with his friend.

"The principal conflict is between Sue, bent on going to college to escape her brother's charms, and the brother, who alone can give her the money to go," Edwards said.

"See the Wind" will be presented in Edwards' home town, Quincy, before it is shown here in Opperman Music Hall. The program in Quincy will be sponsored by the Music Club. Edwards added.

RIFLE, PISTOL CLUB TO MEET TOMORROW

The Florida State University Rifle and Pistol Club will meet tomorrow at 7 p. m. in the Trophy Room of the Student Center, announced Bill Lee.

All interested men and women students are invited to attend, he added.

Negotiations Being Made For Oct. 29

By CHARLET POITEVINT

A combination of talent from Manley Whitcomb's Marching Chiefs and Coach Jack Haskins "Flying High" troupe will probably appear on the Dave Garroway Television show, "Today," October 29.

Negotiations are still being made by Edward Whittlesey, Florida State University director of public relations, for the groups to appear on various other New York television shows.

The television appearances will be scheduled the Monday after the Florida State University-Villanova game in Philadelphia October 27, at which time the circus and entire band will perform during halftime before an anticipated crowd of 90,000.

Being considered for the nationally broadcast Garroway show over NBC are the Circus rolling stairs act, a clown routine, and an adagio team, yet to be named. Representing the band probably will be Dick Puckett and Ed Franklin—the "Flying Brothers"—the majorettes, and the Circus Band.

CONCERTS PLANS

Whittlesey is flying to New York today to complete plans for the groups' appearances.

Although only a small portion of the band will appear on TV, the entire organization will travel in New York, said Robert Braunagle, assistant director.

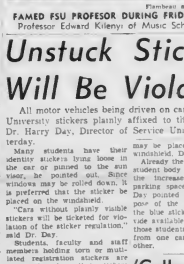
16 circus acts will perform in an hour long preame show at the Villanova game, according to Coach Haskin.

Included in the troupe's schedule will be attendance at the Scaltest Show, "The Big Top," Philadelphia on which members of "Flying High" appeared this summer.

The Marching Chiefs will perform at intervals halves of the Villanova game.

PEP DANCE

To earn money for the New York band trip, members of Tau Beta Sigma and Kappa Kappa Psi, band sorority and fraternity, respectively, are sponsoring a dance next Friday night.



The semi-formal affair will be held in the Women's Gym from 9 p.m. to midnight. Tickets may be purchased for $1.50 per couple and will be sold from band members, dorm representatives and at the Westcott ticket booth.

Continuous music by seven campus groups will be featured. Included are the Lab Band, Commodores, Overtones, Little Boy and his Chimes, Sir Veritones, the G-Bach, and the Dee-Tones.

A floorshow will also be included in the entertainment, said Treasurer Abby Tau Beta Sigma officer

Unstuck Stickers Will Be Violation

All motor vehicles being driven on campus must have University stickers plainly affixed to tiler windshields, Dr. Harry Day, Director of Service Units, warned yesterday.

Many students have their identity stickers lying loose in the car or pinned to the sun visor, he pointed out. Since windows may be rolled down, it is preferred that the sticker be placed on the windshield.

"Cars without plainly visible stickers will be ticketed for violation of the sticker regulation," said Dr. Day.

Students, faculty and staff members holding torn or mutilated registration stickers are requested to have their stickers renewed in 104 Westcott, Dr. Day said.

FSU guest stickers will be issued to business and professional men who have regular business on the campus, but whose presence is not required often enough to warrant a student or faculty sticker. These stickers

Dance Lessons Start Tonight

Catalee and Cotillion will begin a six week series of free dance lessons tonight at 7:30 in the Student Center, Cavalier President Jim Julian announced.

Advanced dancing will be taught to those who wish it while the main course of instruction will be in basic slow, Jitterbug, Jive, and Latin American music, he said.

The sessions will be held every Tuesday and Thursday night. Tyouts for membership in the men's and women's dance honoraries will be held at the conclusion of the course, Julian added.

'College Knowledge'

A test required for all freshmen and transfer women students, "Knowledge for College," will be given today at 5 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. The examination is sponsored by Women's Judiciary, and rooters have been posted on official bulletin boards in each residence Hall.

According to Miss Elizabeth Lynn, Assistant Dean of Women, the material for the test will be obtained from the "Knowledge for College Book-let," pages 6 to 23 the "Pow Wow" pages 59-61, and the honor booklet which was published last spring by the Honor Court.

All students who fail this test will be restricted to the campus until they retake and pass the test at a later date, Miss Lynn said. The second test has not been scheduled but Miss Lynn added it would probably be given Thursday or Friday.

'Flying High' Has Places For 50 Coeds

Fifty women will be chosen to join "Flying High", Florida State University's student circus, in tryouts being held today and Thursday beginning at 3 p.m. at the circus lot.

The tryouts will be complete and separate each day so that everyone will have an opportunity according to Coach Jack Haskin Shorts for sports activity are the proper attire to wear during tryouts, he said.

Forty men have already been chosen and have been practicing for two weeks, the coach said.

He also announced that organizations desiring information pertainin to building floats for Homecoming should contact him at the circus lot.

The coach said he has catalogs and other material from a concern in Tampa that "would be of benefit to persons in charge of float construction".

Those chosen for circus were: George Baughman, Samuel Bearer, Arthur Burke, William Bivins, Jr., Charles Cappleman, William Church, Warren Hall, James Hazell, Raymond Hitchcock and Charles Johnston.

Also Edward Keen, Joe Kellett, Galen Kilburn, Harry Larrabee, Robert Lineback, Richard McLeish, Henry Meador, Albert Shrisley, James Underwood and Joe Verdenber.

Also Leslie Westbrook, Robert Wilder, John Wisel, Aex Woodhall, James Looney, Gordon Davis, James Kent, Cade Ritchie, Jim Clarke and Toby Terrell.

Also John Avaert, Ed Weatherby, Charles Mynard, Ronnie Belisch and Pete Hesserly.

'Promoter' Begins Film Club Series

The Florida State University Film Club will open its season Thursday night with two showings of "The Promoter," a British film starring Alec Guiness.

Dr. George Lensen, president, said season tickets at $2.50 are still on sale. Guest passes will not be honored Thursday because the film is booked on a per capita basis he added.

Showings will be at 6:30 and 8:40 p.m. in the Demonstration School Auditorium. Dr. Lensen said season memberships will be sold at the auditorium box office this evening.

Dr. Lensen said Guiness, as Sir Lindsay Lumm in the movie, devises a shady financial scheme and sets himself elected mayor, achieving success on "sheer brass."

Students Should Have Cars

As the campus has become increasingly crowded with cars year after year, we have noted that more and more instructors have reached the conclusion that cars interfere with student study.

This same attitude has prevailed, evidently, among those in authority over the parking situation. The recent trend has been to eliminate much space formerly open to students and reserve it exclusively for university employees.

According to some professors, the net effect of this new policy is to discourage student ownership of automobiles. This is supposed to improve scholastic standards.

Just what effect it will have on student grades we cannot say, but it is at least fairly evident that one of the policy's "by-products" is to increase the amount of parking space available to the more permanent members of the university community.

It would be presumptuous to say that the university employes are using their power of permanence to further their own comfort and convenience at the expense of the students', but we point out that their position in the matter is not strictly impartial. Any decisions they have reached are open—indeed, wide open—to question by the student body.

It is true that instructors inherently deserve cars while students, as students, do not. Are we to assume that the university employes have some kind of "natural right" to own automobiles which students do not have?

If the authorities are really concerned with raising grades, why did they not implement a car ban based on grades? Under such a system, recommended last year by Student Senate, students whose scholastic averages had not suffered because they owned cars would be allowed to have them, while students with low averages would not be permitted to drive automobiles.

It is a tradition at some schools to refuse cars to students, but we do not believe in living in a dream world of 17th century monasticism where the student's study religiously behind cloistered walls and eventually emerge, chrysalis-like, as full-fledged members of the workaday world. This is the twentieth century and customs and modes of bygone days should be re-evaluated to see if they have kept up with the pace of modern living.

Should students be considered members of the community of life? Life doesn't begin at 40 any more—it begins in the teens, and when a person has reached the age of the college student he expects to lead a full rather than half-way existence. In the Automoelle Age, this means participation in one of the most widespread activities of our culture — transportation by car.

Those who say students do not deserve to have cars might as well either come to grips with reality or admit their real motivations.

A Rosy Situation?

We cannot agree with 1957 Tally-Ho Editor Barbara Ayala that the 1956 Florida State University yearbook is "one of the best books we've gotten out here."

Many of the books have been delivered in the university and some members of the publications' staffs have had a chance to examine the completed edition. There is definitely no overwhelming concurrence with Miss Ayala's opinion.

Although the students will have a chance to judge for themselves when the annuals are distributed (some of which are delivered), we believe it is appropriate to ask: Why does the present editor find herself in such a situation that she must say the book is bigger and better when she knows it is not?

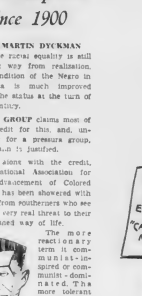
We believe this question deserves an answer. For technical, the 1956 Tally-Ho is a poor representative of a large, modern university such as FSU.

Where does the fault lie? Probably the most obvious flaw grew from the photographic set-up in effect last year. The Tally-Ho was burdened with an inadequate, unfired system in that record, leading to the virtual abandonment of photographic and engraving schedules. The result can be seen in the new edition: many of the pictures are of poor quality, inconsistent, and often wasted out to the point of obscurity. The Senior and class sections have the appearance of hodge-podge checker boards. It is to the credit of last year's editor Jim Brodeur, now graduated, that he kept his sanity under the circumstances.

It should not be assumed, however, that photography is the sole ill of the 1956 Tally-Ho. Much of the problem is not child's play—it is a professional job and should measure up to professional standards, in the printing as well. The editors have the right to ask for a yearbook worthy of the price they are paying.

We believe the situation is serious enough to warrant the calling of a meeting the Board of Student Publications. Perhaps it can discover the cause of the delinquent, mixed-up 1956 Tally-Ho.

Negro Status Has Improved Since 1900



By MARTIN DYCKMAN

While racial equality is still a long way from realization, the condition of the Negro in America is much improved from the status at the turn of the century.

ONE GROUP claims most of the credit for this, and, unusually for a pressure group, the claim is justified.

But along with the credit, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has been showered with abuse from southerners who see it as a very real threat to their established way of life.

The more reactionary term it communists-inspired or communist-dominated. This more tolerant group of southerners say that its aims and methods are red-rare relations.

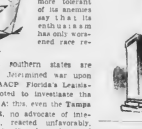
Most southern states are waging determined war upon the NAACP. Florida's legislature voted to investigate the group. At this, even the Tampa Tribune, no advocate of integration, reacted unfavorably, accusing the lawmakers of trying to "destroy a law abiding group."

And that has been the characteristic of the NAACP. It has obeyed the law. It has profited by the law.

• • • •



In the early years of the 20th Century, Negroes were beginning a new northward exodus which was greatly accelerated by World War I. The race riots of 1914, as they moved north, precipitated others. Riots also rocked northern cities as Negroes moved in. Race riots in the Land of Lincoln, Illinois, were almost an everyday occurrence, and not only in Chicago. Such Victims were as often burned as hung.

In 1905 and 1906 a small group of Negro leaders began what was called "The Niagara Movement," named for the first meeting place. Rejecting the wisdom of Booker T. Washington, they demanded that the Negro co equality. But their movement could not gather strength.

Soon after, however, a group of white educators, social workers, and concerned scholars, shocked by worsening conditions, responded to a stirring pamphlet by Oswald Garrison Villard, "The Call." Issued on Lincoln's Birthday, 1909, it led to the organization in 1910, of the NAACP, under the laws of New York.

Four of the five charter members were white. The exception to one of them "felt keenly responsible for conditions." The first executive secretary was Dr. W. E. Burghhardt DuBois, of Atlanta University. Early he recruited a strong and successful NAACP propaganda campaign against lynching. But for many years the members and officers were confined within the first executive secretary, John R. Shillady, lived in 1918 was severely beaten while in the Austin-skinned Negro whose father's home in Atlanta had been attacked because it was too successfully Shillady after the beating secretary was attacked and beaten while investigating racial trouble in Texas.

THE NAACP'S first official action came when a Negro was arrested for murder in Abbeville Parish, N. J. The NAACP, according to one of the founders, Mary White Ovington, felt the man was not guilty, that he had been accused only because he was a Negro; and helped to

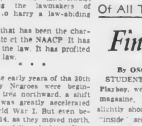
Finds 'The Truth' About Playboy

By OSCAR JOHNSON

STUDENT ADMIRERS of Playboy, well-known male skin magazine, will be more than slightly shocked to hear of the "inside" scoop concerning the lads who publish the publication We are informed that the creator of the mag not only believes the sophisticated-lowbrow finds tone of Playboy, but lives a life almost in direct conflict with the startling exercise she would suppose he leads.

A FAITHFUL perusal of Playboy's colorful and well-illustrated pages would lead to the conclusion that here, indeed is the ultimate form of existence —a continuous whirl of sex, fine liquour, lavish amusement and other forms of more-or-less sweet commonsense. The reader conjures an image of ultra-sophisticated, yet mildly bohemian, lads condescending to contrive the monthly appearance of a journal reflecting their way of living. In short—playboys.



But it is too much. We are told that the publisher is a nonsmoker, doesn't drink coffee, and drinks—of all things—two dozen bottles of Pepsi-Cola a day.

collect evidence proving the man's innocence.

Some time later, in investigating a similar situation in Lakewood, N. J., they found the NAACP was "rather expected" to do something.

THE NAMP painstakingly compiled records and statistics on lynching, and found that in 1917, a defeat in court a favorable climate for defeating boundary lines for racial settlement. And a constant battle was being waged through the courts against pseudo-legal devices for disenfranchising the Negro—for example, the "grandfather clause"—no one could vote whose grandfather wasn't eligible.

Her Answer

TO THE EDITOR:

In Florida's Flambeau, Dagmar Dyckman sees up the wall more than seven inches lament-ing the lack of space for news. If he is sincerely concerned there seems to be one obvious solution.

PATTI WISENER

Ed. Note: Columnist Dyckman is not complaining of the lack of space so much as he was of the low news value of some of the material.

His Answer

TO THE EDITOR:

A past issue of this paper carried a letter apparently directed toward me in my capacity as a student Senator. I hold it one of the highest duties of any elective officer to be fully informed while for his actions both public as well as private. I therefore use this means to convey to any interested party that I will be fully too glad to discuss in a public or private forum any questions that might currently be put to me at any time that might be favorably to both parties and will gladly be ready to publish in the paper the results of such discussions. Every man is entitled to his opinion and I do not sanction a debate in the "Letters to the Editors" for expression has shown that this is one of the most unsuccessful means of negotiating a controversy with both usually failing to accomplish their purpose.

Thank you for accommodating me in this matter and sincere wishes to you and your staff in the forthcoming year.

'Homeless' Students

DEAR ED.

Did you know that there are some "homeless" people on our campus? These people are the more day students. Last year we had a lounge that was provided with chairs, sofas tables, chairs, etc. The was a place to keep our books, meet pals and swap stories and things. This year the lounge was taken over for a faculty meeting place. We do not consider that an injustice but we would like a place to meet and eat. I hope the administration will realize that we are "homeless" when they read this and see if anything can be done about it. Thanks very much.

Moderation Record Seen Poor

By ARNOLD GREENFIELD

Without question the pre note in the political arena today is what is more accurately known as moderation.

Both of the massive presidential candidates are known as exponents of this "position," actually it might be more accurate to ascribe moderation as a label they do not need to adopt as a stigma position. Because of the obsession of the politicians with this idea of being in the middle of the road until one is run over, it is quite natural to expect authorities in other fields to express their views of the matter.

AN EXCELLENT example of such "non-political" comment on this political question is an article in the current issue of Atlantic by Sumner Schlichter of Harvard. Dr Slichter's opinion is entitled "The Great Moderation." Appearing in plain why the old brand of moderation is no longer popular in the United States. The article is that things are not what they used to be. Now this people no longer have the need in vote for reform, are rather growing closer economically so as to find common political interest, maintenance of the status quo.

This all sounds pretty good to a large extent it is. But a little work, however, I must admit that Dr. Schlichter believed this before reading the article afterwards. The fact is, Dr. Slichter is apparent of moderation seem to exist doubtful basic point.

FOR INSTANCE, the principal argument for this analysis moderation is that the social between justice and injustice between the forces of labor and forces of darkness. And if there is a victory, it will be a victory for freedom, freedom and democracy.

There is a native of India or Thailand speaks of the colonial policy of the white man, he is not speaking of Russia. He's speaking of British, France, and to a less degree the United States.

WE CAN ANSWER him by showing him the Philippine lands and pointing out the fact that the United States let them their freedom and independence as promised. We point to India and Pakistan and their independence Britain

What however, can we point to when the question of U S Negro is brought up? Can we say he is still enjoying the same rights as other Americans? How far we explain battle of integration?

Kilenyi Recital 'Unique, Rewarding'

In The Wings

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

Edward Kilenyi's unique recital Friday night, in which the audience selected the program from among the thirty-two Beethoven piano sonatas, was a most rewarding event. The three sonatas chosen were the Opus 31, No. 3 in E Flat, Opus 57, F Minor "Appassionata", and the Opus 106 in B Flat "Hammerklavier." A fourth sonata was scheduled—the Opus 7 in E Flat—but the length of the "Hammerklavier" precluded its performance.

The opening sonata, Opus 31, No. 3 was rather long, but—left set forth, the Menuetto fell into perfect balance full. All movements were well-paced being neither too fast for clarity nor too slow for coherence. Kilenyi's tone at times was ravishing and in the Menuetto we have never heard its equal.

Kilenyi Apassiona a" was robust and spirited, the character-ing sudden fortes and pianos boldly limned. The first and last movement was brilliant and probably very little to be improved before the coda was concluded, but the themes were very cleanly and clearly set forth, as they were throughout the whole of the sonata.

The formidable "Hammerklavier," the most difficult of the Beethoven Sonatas and possibly the most difficult piece in the entire piano literature, received an overwhelming majority of votes among the last pelion sonatas, and accordingly became the concluding number. The forty-five minute length can make it as tiring as an audience can stand it to be in the piano but it was a tribute to Kilenyi's artistry and the musical culture of the audience that almost everyone in the packed Music Hall seemed to be listening attentively and eagerly throughout.

For us, the most exciting moments were further in the dynamic Allegro nor in the Scherzo, but in the contrasting simple and beautiful slow movement, the Adagio sostenuto. This is Beethoven at his most introspective—worlds removed from the exuberant "Appassionata." Kilenyi's subtlety and sensitivity were nowhere more in evidence than here. He attained this point and the result was a rare artistic experience of the deepest elevation. Rarely can I recall greater moments in music.

The audience's response to Kilenyi's invitation to select the program was most gratifying. Approximately one-in-six voted, and a large percentage of them were not music students. The fact that the "Appassionata" was the more frequent "possible" group is regarded as the overdone "Moonlight" or "Pathetique" speaks well for the musical level of the audience, and the University as well.

We have already sounded out the singularity of Kilenyi's feat in a previous column, and additional comment would be superfluous But the record did establish that there can be an artistic justification for this sort of thing and that it is not at all a gimmicked "trick" but a unique and highly laudable achievement.

Lugar Doesn't Shoot Blanks, VPI, 20-7

Alan Whitmarsh

VPI Praisers Not Fooling

They weren't kidding—the Virginia writers and radio set that is. Virginia Tech's football team was everything they said it was, namely a gridiron powerhouse.

They scored both ways, on the ground (Wolfenden's 65-yard punt return and Conner's yard plunge) and in the air (56 and touchdown pass from Lugar to Mihalas).

They played hall control to such an extent that the Seminoles only touched the ball 21 times during the entire second half, only el ght of them in the third quarter when the Gobblers scored the two touchdowns that won the ball game.

Despite their victory, the Techmen couldn't take the least surprise of the evening away from Tom Nugent's ex-teammates. That surprise was fourth string quarterback Joe Rodrique, of Lynn, Mass.

"Rocky" came in late in the second period in the following situation: FSU in possession, second down and goal, never own 45, trailing VPI 7-0.

He proceeded to complete five of eight passes in the next 11 plays to give the Seminoles their first and last score of the evening. The touchdown pass was a 13-yard shot to end Bob Nellums, who took it at the goal line and stepped over for the touchdown.

Nice and all, it was a disappointing evening for Seminole supporters, particularly after they heard that North Carolina State led Clemson 7-0 after the 3rd period (though they eventually lost, 13-7).

The Tribe's genial coach, Tom Nugent, again praised Jack Metts for his all-round efforts, but admitted that they beat us defensively, we just didn't get the ball enough to win."

The season's getting longer.

NOW WE'RE GOING TO HAWAII?

The latest and possibly most fruitful idea to put Florida State on the nation's football map is a tentatively slated game with the University of Hawaii in 1959.

In fact, we're told that they're even speculating on a home-and-home series with the Pineapple Kings, who want to make the trip to Tallahassee in 1960.

And when you say "trip" in this case, you really mean it. It's roughly a 6,000 mile jaunt from here to the sands of Waikiki Beach.

In the past, most of the stateside schools who tackled the cousins from out in the Pacific were California teams also weren't inaccessible to the island.

However, the University of Nebraska played a game with Hawaii not too long ago, and it's reported that Georgia Tech coach Bobby Dodd is favorable to the idea of such a trip.

This game has great possibilities. Moreso in the publicity angle than any other, perhaps. Just think of the slogan: "play football for FSU, and go to Hawaii in 1959."

Imagine the sands of sunny Florida (sun in Tallahassee) to the sands of Waikiki."; or: "Seminoles chasing coconuts in 1959 clash with Hawaii"; (note to football players: think of those native Hawaiian girls!

But then, it's all still uncertain. Sounds like a good idea though—the press goes too!).

SEMINOLE SLANTS

It was good to see Pat Versprille out of the hospital, active and watching the game from the sidelines Saturday.

Bobby Renn was the only Seminole who didn't see action the game Saturday, but end Bill Kimber was an unfortunate casualty. Kimber originally dressed for the contest, but found out during practice that his injured knee wouldn't take the strain, and that was all for the night.

Abilene Christian returns to the FSU slate next year with a game in Tallahassee. The Wildcats beat the Tribe twice two years ago, 13-0. . . . Ballantine Books publishers was just put out a new book on the history of football, entitled "Olympic Cavalcade of Sports" by John V. Grombach, it stortifies the tale of sports from its inception in Greece.

Release of the 1956-57 gymnastics schedule by Bill Hartley Price reveals five meets tentatively set for this year, more than in either of the past two years. . . . Tech Quarterback Outstanding Despite Passing Of Rodrique

By BOB WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's bid to harness a power-equipped Virginia Tech attack failed here Saturday night by a score of 20-7.

A 65-yard punt return late in the first quarter through the heart of the FSU defenses broke the back of the spirited Seminole defenders.

FSU was able to put together only one scoring punch, late in the second quarter. The VPI Gobblers struck for two crushing touchdowns in the opening minutes of the third quarter, to wrap it up.

Two evenly matched elevens sparred cautiously in the first quarter, each feeling out the other's defenses. Finally, with less than two minutes to play in the first period, FSU found itself bogged down deep on its 27 yard line and was forced to kick.

Halfback Buck Metts punted to the VPI 34 where halfback Bobby Wolfenden grabbed it and began his ramble.

Wolfenden, a 185 pound senior, ripped through a horde of Seminole defenders, and, by picking up several key blocks, galloped 66 yards for the first score of the game.

Barry Frazee's extra point kick split the uprights to give the Gobblers an early lead.

Coach Tom Nugent's charges, finding themselves in hot water, stepped for the try to the Tech defenses in desperation they reached down to a fourth string quarterback for the possible answer.

Quarterback Ted Rodrique, who had hardly appeared on the field thus far in the season, entered the game with the clock running out in the first half and FSU 83 yards away from the goal line.

In the next minutes and a half, Rodrique took to the air lanes eight times completing five passes. With a fourth down and 15 yards away from his goal line, Rodrique took aim and fired a pass to end Bob Nellums in the end zone.

Kicking specialist John Sheppard used the game with his extra point kick with 1:37 left in the half.

From the opening kickoff of the second half, the Virginia Techmen destroyed any illusions that they might hold up. Bobby Wolfenden caught the FSU kickoff on his own 10 and carried it 25 yards to set up the second VPI touchdown drive.

The Tech trio of Wolfenden Jimmy Lugar, and Bobby Conner led the Gobblers a march to the FSU two yard line. Quarterback Lugar attempted to sneak across but was piled up a yard short of the goal.

From the one 206-pound Conner crunched through the left side of the line to score the second VPI tally. Conner's charge through the center of the line for the extra point failed.

The FSU attack, which apparently was rattled by VPI's quick touchdown, bogged down in Rodrique for Ted Rodrique was forced to punt.

Halfback Ray Ehert took the punt on his own 33 and raced alone the south sidelines headed for the goal territory before being upended on a great tackle by Buck Maria on the 40.

On the very next play, FSU was penalized for offside and the ball was moved to their 38. VPI halfback Ray Eastland added four more yards through center.

Intramural News

Three o'clock Thursday afternoon is the deadline for entries for the campus tennis singles and doubles championships. Drawings will be made at that time, and furnished all organizations.

Draw sheets and score of the tournament will be posted at the varsity courts and at the Student Center. Ping pong begins.

Play begins next Monday at 3:30 P. M., on the varsity courts. No matches will be scheduled on Oct. 17 or in the day of the swimming meets.

Dates of the swimming championships are set for Wednesday at 3 P.M. on Oct. 12 and 24.

Entries will close next Friday (Oct. 12 at 3 P. M. The events will be 50-yard free style, 50-yard breast stroke, 50-yard back stroke, diving, 100-yard free style, 150-yard individual medley, 3-man 150-yard medley relay, 4-man 200-yard free style relay.

A student may enter only 3 events, including diving and the relays. Varsity squad and lettermen are ineligible.

Last year, Delta Theta won the swimming, with SAE second and DTD 3rd. In the dorm-inconsolent division Rochelle finished on top with Sapnaia 2nd and Magnolia Hall 3rd.

Time for basketball seems to practice in the men's gym is still in unknown due to installation of bleachers and the non-arrival of backboards to date.

Price Praises '56 FSU Gymnasts

By RONNIE COLD
Flambeau Sports Writer

Bright prospects are in store once again for Florida State's gymnastic team, according to Dr. Hartley Price, gymnastics coach.

"FSU should rank among the first six in both the NCAA and National AAU meets this year," stated Dr. Price.

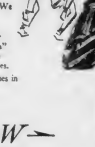
The gym squad, which has garnered five national team championships (two NCAA and three AAU) since Dr. Price came to FSU in 1941, has been practicing for about a month.

This year's schedule will include some attractive meets, according to Dr. Price, but at this date the schedule is not ready to be released for publication.

The highlight of the gymnastic season is the annual Gymkana show, November 11-16 this year. The squad will also compete in the National Gymnastic Clinic November 26-30 at Sarasota, in addition to dual meets.

The students will be afforded their best look at the squad at the Gymkana show, however, as most of the meets are on the road.

Returning varsity men on the squad are Ronnie Anuster, Jamila Ashmore (1956 NCAA free exercise champion; Rafael Lecuona (member of the 1956 Cuban Olympic team; Jack Miles, member of the 1956 U. S. Olympic squad and Don Holder (member of the 1952 U. S. Olympic team.



Also returning are Joe Guste, Tom MacDonald, Bob Murray, Chiek Cleo National AAU free exercise champion; Laird Anderson, Don Preisser, Roger Webb, Don Rosasky and Jack Cooper.

Two freshman expected to bolster the team are highly touted and experienced gymnasts Fernando Lecuona, member of the 1946 Cuban Olympic team, and Larry Malmlla, member of the 1952 Swedish Olmypic squad.

Other newcomers expected to help the squad are Dalton Dalilee, Leslie Malin, Jim Parker and Don Powell.

Last year's squad was runner-up in the National AAU meet and third in the NCAA. The team was undefeated in dual meets.

FSU Fashion Major Helps Edit Women's Magazine

By JULIE CISNEROS

This June, while most coeds went home, Junior Margaret McLean traveled to New York, expenses paid, visited fashion openings, met celebrities, dined and danced at places like the St Regis Roof and helped put out an issue of one of the nation's top fashion magazines.

Miss McLean was one of twenty girls selected in national competition to be guest editors for Mademoiselle's August college issue. The contest is run annually in order to acquaint the staff of the magazine with the needs and interests of college women, to obtain fresh ideas, and of course, for publicity.

OPPORTUNITY

It's also a wonderful opportunity for the lucky girls selected to make contacts in the fields of journalism, commercial art, and merchandising, and to get first-hand experience in their particular fields of interest.

Miss McLean has always been interested in fashion illustration, and art is her major at FSU.

The first step toward her guest editorship came in her sophomore year when she qualified for Mademoiselle's College Board. For her qualification assignment, she planned a college girl's wardrobe for a weekend on the FSU campus, complete with illustrations.

WILL FREE-LANCE

Slim dark-haired Margaret eventually plans to do free-lance art work with a fashion specialty for magazines and newspapers. When she speaks of her experiences at Mademoiselle this summer her eyes sparkle enthusiastically.

"It's a wonderful opportunity," she comments. "Any girl with a talent or an interest of any sort in the fashion field ought not to pass it up."

JOB HIGHLIGHTS

Recruiters from the following organizations will be on campus to interview seniors for employment:

October 10 Wednesday . . . SEARS ROEBUCK & COMPANY, Work: General Business Majors

October 11, Thursday . . . ARMY BALLISTICS MISSILE AGENCY Needs: Chemists, Mathematicians, Physicists, Metallurgists, etc.

October 12 Friday . . . WHITE PLAINS PUBLIC SCHOOLS need senior education students.

Campus Chest Lists Gifts

The World University Service got the lion's share of the $4,055.56 collected for Campus Chest last year, the Campus Chest committee announced recently.

The committee said $346.56 was put into an emergency fund. $300 went to Campus Chest scholarship fund and $1,160 was spent on promoting the drive.

Organizations receiving $277.24 each were the American Cancer Society, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, American Heart Association, Leon County Mental Health Association, the Coordination Council for Cerebral Palsy, and the Leon County Tuberculosis and Health Association.

The Japan International Christian University Foundation and the American Leprosy Foundation were each given $100 of the 1955-56 Campus Chest.

Turntable 1

By PATTI WISENER

The FSU Department of Marketing could do a fascinating research study on the way record jackets affect sales.

Ballet albums are using some beautiful color photographs. And the abundance of well-dressed girl wearers dressed at all festivals on albums of classical music prompted one freshman boy to tell us he wanted to be an accompanist at a local radio station because they have such sexy record jackets.

One reason why so many FSU students go to Baker's is the Record Club. Buy 10 records and subsequently all at once and you get your Record Club membership card, which is stamped each time you buy another record.

RCA Victor has a new album of Puccini's La Boheme—the opera that's one of everybody's favorites—with Victoria de los Angeles, Jussi Bjoerling and Robert Merrill. If you're building a classical collection, this is a record. $5.98 album at Baker's is a must. An extra" included is the illustrated Italian-English libretto. Dr. Thomas Beecham conducts.

Board Of Control To Pick New 4-Year College Site

GAINESVILLE (Special)—The Board of control was expected to come down this morning with the answer to the question that has Florida's entire west coast in a tizzy—the exact location of the new four-year college in the Tampa Bay area.

The proposed institution has two rivals: delegations from Hillsborough, Pinellas and Manatee counties.

Each county offered three sites for location of the soon-to-be school of higher learning. One is in Tampa, Tarpon Springs and the other on old airfield, and the third on a site on Tampa Bay.

Florida offered approximately 140 acres of bayfront property. The Manatee-Manatee group gave a flat midway between Bradenton and Sarasota.

During recently months representatives from each of these areas expounded the value of their offerings as sites for the proposed college. They believed control students have been made in the State Road Department offices in Pinellas and Hillsborough counties.

MILLIONS NEEDED

After securing the site for the proposed institution, the Board has agreed to take up the question of how much money would be needed from the 1957 Legislature to establish the school.

Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, executive secretary, told the Board at its Orlando meeting here approximately $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 would be required for essential facilities.

The Tampa Bay institution would be the two new four-year schools passed by the Council of the State of Higher Education to handle increasing enrollments in Florida.

100,000 STUDENTS

The Council predicted some 20,000 students would be clamoring at the doors of the state's public and universities by 1970.

The other college would be located in South Florida and serve residents of interested cities have already been received by the Board from Palm Beach and Broward counties.

The Board indicated there would be no action on the south Florida institution for some time. The Board also scheduled public subject requests from the present three state universities today.

Freshman Car Owners Need Written Request

Freshmen eligible to have cars on campus must make a written request to Dr. R. R. Oglesby, dean of students, in order to do so.

Polls To Open 9:00 Tuesday

Polls will be open Tuesday for precinct senate and Freshman class elections at Western, the Student Center, the Seminole Club, and the bus stop across the street from Bryan from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The following people did not turn in expense estimates on time and are disqualified from the official ballot, reports Mitzi McCullough, secretary of elections.

Gamble Pays Off For State; Census Count Saves Million

By STAFF WRITER

A $1,200 gamble on a group of college professors has saved Florida $1 million, the Florida Development Commission said yesterday.

The $1 million is money which will be elected the state in federal aid under a newly-accepted population figure. The development Commission said it hired a group of college professors to make an evaluation of Florida's population when the future of the U. S. Census Bureau was deemed too low.

PROFESSOR'S FIGURE

A spokesman said the Census Bureau in 1954 had estimated Florida's population at 3,874,000 but had reduced that to 3,432,000 in 1955. The professors' figure, more than 100,000 above the Census Bureau 1955 figure, has been accepted as the more reliable one.

The spokesman continued that federal grants to states for hospital construction are based on Census Bureau population estimates. The increase in the new figure will mean Florida will get $150,000 additional this year.

If the lower figure had been used until the next official census in 1960, Florida would have received $1 million less than it will now receive.

Donald R. Livingstone, administrative assistant in the Industrial Services Division of the Commission, said the work of the college professors "will be of direct benefit to every Florida citizen." The professors are on the staffs of Florida State University, the University of Florida and the University of Miami.

DIETRICH WORK

He noted in particular the work of Dr. T. Lynn Dietrich, associate professor of sociology.

"Instead of attempting to close in on the most recent past, Dr. Dietrich commenced projections will be highly conservative," he said. "Thereby he gave the chairman commented, a double safety factor in the Census Bureau estimate."

The work will not have much significance effect on other federal grant programs, since the Hill-Burton program is the only major one based on yearly figures. Others use the census held each ten years.

Livingstone said that the cost of the study was only $1,200.

The official said that, using the new figure population experts believe Florida will be the tenth-leading state in population by 1965. He said that in 1930 it was 31st, in 1940 it was 27th; in 1950 it was 20th, and in 1955 it was 13th.

AT REYNOLDS TEA—Students took part in the first of a series of dormitory teas Wednesday afternoon. Residents are, l-r., Jackie Colley, Mary Lou Willoxon, Sandy Burns.

Tally-Ho Ready For Distribution Starting Monday

'Must Have ID's' Ayala Announces

Distribution of the long-awaited Tally-Ho will begin Monday morning, according to Barbara Ayala, curent yearbook editor.

Miss Ayala said that distribution will begin at 9 Monday morning at the Student Lounge of Longmire and continue until 5 p.m.

Yearbooks may be claimed between these hours each day until further notice.

In order to claim their Tally-Ho, she said, students must appear in person and present their ID cards.

Either ID cards for the past spring and summer will be acceptable, Miss Ayala added.

The yearbook editor also announced that pictures for the 1956-57 Tally-Ho will be taken Wednesday, November 7 in the Gwinnna Monday.

"Please be on time for your appointment," she reminds those who have registered for appointments with the photographer. Pictures are scheduled at five minute intervals.

Seniors will be in hooded caps and gowns as the studio license at 401 Longmire Building. Seniors or men are required to wear dress shirts and dark ties for the occasion.

Undergraduate men are advised to wear coats and ties while undergraduate women are given their own choice in dress. Dress colors are more desirable, Miss Ayala commented.

Proofs on pictures will be sent to the students directly by mail. Order blanks and prices for re-orders will be included in the envelopes with the proofs.

Homecoming Decor Theme Is 'Big Time'

Homecoming dance decorations this year will carry out the general theme of "Big Time" FSU? Pat Pate, chairman of the committee in charge of the Homecoming Dance decorations, explained that decor will reflect the "new universe of opportunities" which the university offers.

"Instead of attempting to close in on the most recent past, Dr. Dietrich commenced projections will be highly conservative," he said. "Thereby he gave the Census Bureau estimate a double safety factor in the Census Bureau estimate."

Four areas of social interest will be explored in the dance floor. Leo Brown and his aggregation take the spotlight on the bandstand. The Queen's Court will be the Homecoming Queen and her Court will be presented during the intermission is another.

The Pendragon Box and the Seminole Club complete the tenth-leading state in population by 1965. He said that in 1930 it was 31st, in 1940 it was 27th; in 1950 it was 20th, and in 1955 it was 13th.

Naming Of 5 Queen Finalists Also Slated

A "gigantic" Band Dance will be held tonight in the Women's Gym from 9 until midnight to raise money for the Marching Chiefs and "Flying High" trip to New York.

Sponsors Tau Beta Sigma and Kappa Kappa Psi, band sorority and fraternity respectively, said continuous music by seven campus groups will be played.

BIGGEST DANCE'

"There has never been a dance so campus where so many bands played," said Tau Beta Sigma president Charlotte Abney. Appeals are will be on Lab Band, Commodores, Overtones, Lil's Rov and his Chosen Six, Velvetones, the G-Bach and the Devilaires.

Floor show entertainment will feature the Florida State University Marching Flying Seminoles" and band vocalists, Miss Abney said. Decorations will be built around the theme, "A Night in New York, and will feature a skyline backdrop.

The event will help defray expense of attendance of a combination of chorus and band talent over nationally-telecast shows in New York October 20.

Last Saturday's Freshman-Sophomore Day, canceled because of inclement weather conditions, is tentatively scheduled to be held on the practice field opposite Doak S. Campbell stadium, today at 3 p.m. Wiley Pope, committee chairman, announced.

"That species devoid of intelligence," has been devoid of "rat caps" lately, due to the fact that Sludge members have been too engrossed in their classes, said Pope.

Rumor has it that, should the freshman fail to top the sophomore class in the scheduled events, they will be required to continue wearing "rat caps" until Christmas.

At that time, in the true spirit of Christmas they will be granted permission to discard them. Freshmen will be allowed if they wish, the pleasure of decorating Sludge Squad members in Westcott Pool.

$5.000 Goal Set By Campus Chest

By RUTH FRITCHIE

Plans are underway for the biggest Campus Chest drive in Florida State University history, according to chairman Nancy Lee Young.

A goal of $5,000 has been set for the 1956-57 drive which officially opens November 5, Miss Young said. A total of $4,677 was collected last year.

AWARD TROPHY

A trophy will be awarded at the Big Campus Chest Dance on December 8 to the organization that raises the most money. Last year the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity won the trophy which they have on display.

Miss Young urged all organizations to submit the plans for their projects to her at the Zeta Tau Alpha house or to Linda Jones at Lloyds Hall. The plans must be in by Monday, October 15.

The chairman has announced that the money collected in the big drive lasting from November 5-9 will be distributed in much the same way it was last year. Of special interest is students in the Campus Chest scholarship fund of $300 and an emergency fund of approximately $850 for FSU student aid.

Approximately $1400 will be sent to the World University Service which is connected with the United Nations.

FUND DISTRIBUTION

The balance of the money will be distributed to The American Cancer Society, National Infantile Paralysis Foundation, American Heart Association, Leon County Mental Health Association, Leon County Tuberculosis and Health Association, Coordinating Council for Cerebral Palsy, Camp International Christian University Foundation, and the American Leprosy Foundation.

BAND SALUTE

The half-time show of the Furman-FSU game on November 10 will feature the Marching Chiefs in a salute to the Campus Chest drive, Miss Young said.

"The students have been cooperating wonderfully in the committees which have been set up. The experience the students gain in organizing the various fund-raising projects will be of great help to them when they plan a major projects in their own community life," she concluded.

ID Numbers Used In 'Treasure Hunt'

Student numbers will be used for a week-long "treasure hunt" beginning tomorrow and intended to familiarize students with Tallahassee merchants, the Chamber of Commerce said yesterday.

A spokesman said approximately 60 participating stores will post in their windows student numbers chosen at random for a weekly drawing.

Prizes will be worth at least three dollars each and may be claimed immediately by presenting one's ID card inside he added.

BANK CLOSES EARLY HOMECOMING WEEKEND

The Student Bank will remain open next Friday through noon, but will close at 2 p.m. for the remainder of the Homecoming weekend, according to George E. Fortin, comptroller.

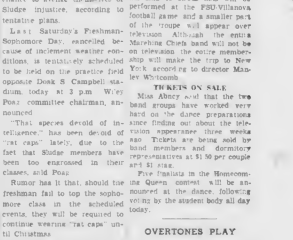
Mars Has Water: Hess



An FSU Mars expert said Wednesday night that observations of the red planet this summer seem to prove the existence of water in its atmosphere.

Dr. Seymour Hess, professor of meteorology, told a Sigma Xi audience that observations made by himself and other members of the international Mars Committee at Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Arizona, indicated the presence of water vapor on Mars.

Dr. Hess, who was on the Lowell staff for two years before coming to Florida State University in 1946, was one of a worldwide group of scientists and laymen who watched Mars during its close passage. He told his audience that observation of the "blue haze" of Mars seemed to substantiate that it is composed of minute water particles.

But he said that conclusive results from the summer observances will not be available for more than six months.

He declined to comment on the popularly-called "canals" of Mars but did say that some surface feature evidently assists in securing such formations in some spots. He mentioned the "W" shaped cloud seen in 1954 as an example.

Here's To Them All

Florida State University, which has the Number One college band in the country and the most outstanding student circus, has reaped much public fy from these two sources.

If negotiations now underway for a combination of talent from the Marching Chiefs and "Flying High" to appear on the Dave Garroway television show, "Today", are successful, it will not be the first time the two groups have provided national publicity. Many students will remember last year's appearance of "Flying High" over another nationally broadcast show.

In addition, the circus has been featured time and again in many publications with wide circulations. The Marching Chiefs are now recognized throughout the country.

The question of how many students such publicity has drawn to the university is a matter of conjecture. How many choose a university on the basis of its school band, or because it offers a student circus?

We don't know. But one thing can be pointed out is that the Marching Chiefs and "Flying High" are just two of the many organizations open to students on campus. Although they have caused many persons to hear of Florida State University who would not otherwise have known of it, their main value is the same as that of the other student organizations.

They provide means of recreation and activity for students. Some may not be as widely-known; they may not get as much money, may not attract as many participants. But they each give students particular outlets for their talents.

Many of the students most active in student organizations have grades much above average—in fact, some of the most outstanding scholars are also active students. Thus, if extra-curricular activities are pursued with the correct attitude, they can and do lead to a more rounded existence for many students during their four-year stay.

Congratulations to the circus and band —but more power to the others.

Don't Neglect Chance

At least a few students on this campus have shown they are interested in government and politics. They are the ones traveling to St. Petersburg today for the two-day meeting of the Florida Citizenship Clearing House.

Students who do not have this same liking for the workings of government sometimes ask why anyone should take interest in it. They seem to look at all the processes of politics as beneath their dignity, or, more astutely, so messed-up at present that no amount of effort directed toward rectifying the situation will have an effect.

We can't quite see eye-to-eye with people who don't care especially about what their leaders do to try and understand what they are doing. If anybody should want to study the actions of people, the student is traditionally the one for the job.

Historically and currently, there are great issues to be decided. Sometimes they are so profound that some people will dismiss them. But students should not be afraid to grapple—in a way, at least ostensibly, a place of intellectual enlightenment.

What are the issues? Probably the greatest involves the core of a person's outlook on life —conservatism or liberalism. Call it the Whig outlook or the Tory outlook. Describe it as being either right-wing or left-wing. Whatever the nomenclature, the meaning is the same: do you favor the principles of the French Rights of Man, the American Bill of Rights? Do you believe in the equality of all men, the abandonment of outdated ideas and clinging prejudices in favor of initiation of the new?

Or do you want to keep things as they are, strive for personal or group gratification and ignore the problems cropping up around you.

These things have direct ramifications. For instance: what shall the new FSU President be like? Will he have a liberal outlook on, say, women's rules, and undertake changes along that line? Or will he stamp down other obligations, and only attempt to raise the academic standards of the institution, or merely seek more physical outlay?

The student body has a very definite interest at stake.

In national politics, which leaders should be allowed to speak — those who preach of super-patriotism, the Americanism-ists, those who put the advantage of a few ahead of the interest of the many, or on the other hand, those who have supported liberal doctrines, who have sought to improve the lot of the working man and who look to the future rather than the past.

Such topics are demanding of notice. Perhaps some people may excuse themselves from them by claiming ignorance, but university students have the opportunity to think about them and develop a philosophy of their own.

When a person becomes a student, he should cast aside prejudices and seek the truth. He should examine the world around him, see what is wrong, what is right and what can be done for improvement.

Someone who enrolls at a university and then disclaims the acquired art of study is not really a student for failure to take advantage of the available means of study is a denial of both opportunity and obligation.

A Renaissance

We have been happy to observe the apt-ly-described "renaissance" in the activities of the Graduate Club this year.

Although, according to Dr. Milton W. Carothers, Dean of the Graduate School, the FSU School has grown from 19 students in 1946 to 819 last year, it has always had the entrance to campus life afforded other classes. It is called a club because there is no formally organized graduate class government.

One of the most obvious changes this year will be the election of a graduate representative to Student Senate. This is in accordance with a bill passed last year by the senate, possibly aimed at introducing a new level of maturity but more probably because of the democratic convictions of last year's members.

At any rate, officers have promised a variety of social events, including regular swimming parties, picnics, and coffee hours. Though these things have been held in the past, increased vigor on the part of officers may make the graduates feel more akin to the less lofty scholars.

The Initiative?

The's statement of 1954 that, in foreign policy, "the initiative is becoming ours" would seem to be somewhat shady reasoning if a recent statement by the U. S. Information Agency is found true.

The agency said Sunday that Soviet Russia has enslaved 138 million people since 1939—excluding those in Russia and China. "Current emphasis of Communist propaganda on 'anti-colonialism' has obscured the fact that the most extensive colonial empire in all history is that of the U. S. S. R. today, supplemented by Communist China," it said. This, we ask, is initiative?

"How D'Ya Stand On The Dodgers And The Yanks?"

The Dissenter

On NAACP's Record

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

One result of the Civil War was that Negroes were freed from legal slavery. For a brief period it seemed as if a social muscle were to be wrought but then carpetbaggers turned to personal advantage the cause of Black Reconstruction. Then, when the Negro's vote was fought during the sectarian unrest of the 1880's the dominant political powers forced him back into virtual bondage.

He could not vote, due to a double-edged system of literacy ancestry, and financial requirements. Jim Crow was implemented. Negro schools were wrecked when the southern states bothered to build them at all. Powerless to defend himself against discrimination, the Negro was even less able to ward off the open hatred which was a product of the social unrest of World War I and the Roaring Twenties.

This was the situation facing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which had been formed in 1910

AFTER DEFEATING Louisville's ghetto ordinance, opening legal fire upon the white primaries and prosecuting scattered lynching, the NAACP turned to deeper and harder-to-fight issues.

Birth of a Nation D. W. Griffith's contribution to intolerance, was fought by the NAACP from city to city. Oswald Garrison Villard, a charter member, refused to accept ads for the picture in his New York Post. In Boston a few of the more violent scenes were clipped.

In the early 1920's the NAACP worked for a closer liaison with organized labor. By 1924 the central organization of the American Federation of Labor had recognized Negroes as entitled to membership. The NAACP prodded with Negroes not to accept jobs as strike-breakers the only instances in which many industrialists would hire them.

IN 1928 an anti-lynching bill was put through the House of Representatives, the first of annual efforts that have since fatally passed in the Senate but died of stranulation from the southern filibusters in the Senate.

The NAACP successfully defended Arkansas Negroes who had been involved in a gun battle while moving to organize in order to shake off a condition of virtual peonage

Eighty per cent of Indianapolis Negroes voted the Democratic ticket in a 1925 city election after it was charged the Republican organization had Ku Klux Klan connections

THE NAACP's most successful political venture was the Senate reflection of Herbert Hoover's nomination of John J. Parker to the Supreme Court in 1928 The NAACP learned Parker had supported the "white primary" plan of disenfranchising the Negro in 1920 did he still believe in it? Parker declined to answer the key question, and war between them began. The Senate rejected Parker.

A few years before a stirring victory had been won in Detroit, where a mob battle which moved into a white neighborhood. As mobs swarmed in front of his house shots were fired a man in the mob fell dead the dentist's brother was said to have fired the fatal shot, and the entire family was charged with murder.

Clarence Darrow perhaps America's greatest trial attorney to this date, was served to defend the accused family. He charged no fee During the course of the emotional trial Darrow shredded the obviously perjured testimony of the prosecution witnesses. Then, in a dramatic eight-hour summation, he pleaded for the recognition of a man's basic right to defend his home.

The jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Students Arise

TO THE EDITOR

I feel that the attention of the students of Florida State University should be called to a very serious situation which exists in Tallahassee. With an influx of negroes into the community should be made aware of the gravity of this matter.

The U. S. Supreme Court in the completely indiscriminate seating of educated people next to uneducated people in Tallahassee. The natural difference will exist as in the past. Negroes are in the majority as to scarcely need discussion. If the good deed had intended for brown-eyed people to mix with blue-eyed people. He would have made no eyes the same color to begin with. This will also apply to race. There is nothing wrong in mixing people of different eye color are plainly contradicting the decrees of God Himself.

However this mixing does not end with bus seating alone It is a well-known fact that adjacent seating on buses leads quickly and inevitably to intermarriage. This is certainly not good for the human race in this country, but only a mixture of grey-eyed and green-eyed monsters.

The writer has been "sounded-ed" It is up to the students of FSU to resist this tide of colonizing with all their power!

YOURS TRULY,
JOHN BOARDMAN

Students Vote

TO THE, EDITOR:

In running for the Student Senate, I fulfill the responsibilities of such an important position. This is why I am making body and in here in the university to pass or amended laws which are of benefit(s) to you. Therefore, the choice is yours to place those students who are willing to work in your behalf. In Tuesday's primary, please choose your candidate intelligently, remembering to select someone who is interested in working for you. I feel it a great privilege to be able to please the locality to each of you, and I will sincerely appreciate your support.

JUDY RAMSEY

The Florida Flambeau will print all signed letters from students except those which are libelous or invidious attacks upon individuals. Letters over 250 words may be cut at the discretion of the editor if space is limited. In some case, where a valid reason is given, the name may be withheld.

GUNMEN TO DISCUSS BARBECUE THURSDAY

Plans concerning a barbecue and party slated will be discussed at a meeting of Florida State University and club members next Thursday at 7 p. m. in the Student Center Trophy Room.

Calling The Card

He's Demo After All

DEAR ARNOLD,

As you probably know, I've been having a rough time recently in attaining my political sympathies with either party. I've been trying to weigh the issues at stake very carefully in order to make a proper decision. I must say that I have not been able to be completely objective about my approach, however.

My chief prejudice along these lines, the think that would be most likely to determine my sympathies, is the reaction against the Democratic Party on the local level. I admit without hesitancy my aversion to certain political approaches such as have been exemplified in county politics

I WELL REMEMBER the free-fish-fry-and-Democratic rally that was held in the city park before each election. It had none of the attributes of Kim Novak type picnic, but was simply an experience with greasy fish and politicians.

There was invariably one man among the speakers who announced that he needed no microphones to be heard. He did.

There were always one or two others running for some office who made a semblance of a speech before sitting down. They were applauded with much gusto since they numbered a good percentage of those present.

And there was always one representative on the county Board of Education, a man who was obviously sincere, but who had trouble writing even his own name.

The rub in the political cotton was that, until recently, Democratic Party was the only party represented at all politicals locally. You'll have to admit that this kind of activity is harm you as a party politics party to disgust.

It turned me so far away that had I been able to vote in the 1952 election, I would have voted for Eisenhower on the expression of revulsion toward the county political system. I was in a state of my mind in 1952.

SINCE THEN, however, I've been trying to evaluate my political leanings in the light of reason. As I said before, I've had a much time in doing it.

Certain things have come to light recently, however, that me definitely back toward the party of my surroundings. have served to alarm me feelings with the Democratic Party.

The Republican attitude toward public power, farm problems and foreign policy has been an example of the type thinking builds insecurity in society as well as individual.

I have observed the administration of former state governor, Mr. Stevenson and the hit-or-miss appeasement of Mr. Eisenhower's stand on nuclear testing seems to be one of the sanest proposals in the campaign and would not only be an overture toward disarmament, but would serve to win back some our prestige in Japan and the Pacific areas. His stand on civil rights has been at least consistent and fair-and-square, and that I now realize that the party that incurred my distaste in my earlier days is pretty person-ated by the Democrats.

I believe I'll take Adlai's intelligence and steadiness to Mamie and Dicky's attacks.

IN HOPE FOR GOVERNMENT,
JIM

The Threepenny Critic

Lauds Artistic Freedom

By RYAN EDWARDS

Since some dissatisfaction has been raised to our "Music for FSU!" last week we would like to take this opportunity to clarify and enlarge slightly on what we were talking about. First of all, we hasten to say that we love FSU too.

We just think there's room for improvement

In many areas, of course we agree. There is still a lot of room for improvement of the cultural life at Florida State. As far as concert series, visiting artists, campus publications as a literary magazine—FULL TIME—and overall availability of artistic experiences of a cultural and informative nature we can't begin to rank with some schools

BUT WE have one thing to balance all our lacks: and it is one thing that no other schools possess. It provides the reason that some students from all over the country and schools have chosen to transfer here It is the reason that some who have had opportunities to go to other schools with more cultural opportunities have chosen to remain here. It is actually the quality that brings most students here from distant states and even countries.

That quality is an atmosphere of freedom. It is born of our youth and is nurtured by our enthusiasm and our spirit. It is the reason that Savannah was written and performed here. It is the reason that so many student's experimental verse drama was performed here last year; it is the reason that we have such a lamentable and incomprehensible "Music for FSU!"

But of course, an atmosphere is an intangible thing. An university is an intangible thing. It can produce thunderclouds, and FSU is no exception A slight misplacement radiates the subtle transformation of guidance into censorship.

AND WHEN all is said and done, it is not the administration nor the faculty who could let this happen. It is we, the students. Our free expression is the only thing that can let it be lost. If we can be hard-headed, we can push for what we feel and think. If we can be lamentable and lamebrained, we can have the dynamic experience of learning

With our wine-watching colleague, we can complain about our Artist Series and lamebrained entertainment, we can argue that our literary magazine will only have one issue this year. We can be intolerance and dissent

BUT AS WE do, let us remember that we still have a university where we will be listened to. And let us always be exercising our freedom of expression. It is the only real safeguard of some fictitious divine right we may think we have. But opportunities to examine our thinking, our aims, and our goals.

These are the ways in which we can keep FSU the place it is now—a young exuberant, and productive force in American life.

Of All Things

West: They Love It

By OSCAR JOHNSON

HOMECOMING is a time of gaiety, time of entertainment and festivities, but one of the things the female population on campus seem to appreciate is the West Hall open house. For one reason the women just can't seem to resist making a bee-line for its briefly open doors. Their interest is not in the fact that, despite much attractions as the parade, pow-wow, dance football game and other events, the allure of a modern, tall, luxurious dormitory is hard to resist. They want to see what West Hall looks like.

THE OPEN HOUSE is their chance—they can not only satisfy their curiosity through the snack bar line, dwell shortly in the sanding or TV set and exhibit the splendor of the main lounge and flip pokes on the shaded outside walkway, but slide the elevators to the top, take a quick glance at the campus and then limpers one of the comfortable (though cubicle-like) rooms.

And their reaction is almost unanimous: "This is living!" West Hall residents are unanimous in that the coeds are definitely absorbed about their ten-story dwelling. But when they ask what is wrong with Florida Hall, the answer is apt to be nil communal

WHAT HAS West Hall got? It has bulk, good looks, conveniences, compact rooms—beds and study desks set into the walls; a big parking lot, a counselor system of considerable notoriety, pingy pongy pictures, clean heat, "ham" radio and washing machines, a telephone system, social events and a dance room. With all this, a little thing like isolation can be overlooked.

It all adds up to this: maybe, if they apply enough pressure the women can cause the features they like in West Hall to be built into the new women's dormitory to be constructed. After all, they're going to pay for it.

EVEN THOUGH there has been some criticism of West Hall noise, drafty windows, slow heating, thin mattresses; it is likely that the new men's dormitory will be pretty much a replica of the present structure. It's doubtful if such conveniences as soundproofing, individual telephones and waiter service will be thrown in.

A Little Comparison

The age-old story of comparing scores with mutual opponents will get a solid test tomorrow night at Raleigh, N. C.

Both the Seminoles and North Carolina State have gone to Virginia Tech in the past two weeks, with the game perhaps getting the better part of the bargain—if there is a better part of a loss.

The Wolfpack was thoroughly trounced by the VPI Gobblers, 35-7, and then the Virginians came here one Saturday later and inflicted similar damage on Florida State, 20-7.

This would seem to make the Seminoles a 15-point favorite, but we've learned long since that comparitive scores generally mean nothing.

One must remember, and I'm sure that Tom Nugent does, that this is the same N. C. State team which overcame a favored North Carolina team, 26-6 in their season opener—ruining Jim Tatum's "homecoming" at Chapel Hill.

Nugent also is unlikely to forget the N. C. State-Clemson contest last weekend. The Wolfpack actually led Clemson, 7-0, until midway in the final period, when the Tigers rallied to win, 13-7.

Of course, the Seminoles have the added advantage of playing Bobby Renn tomorrow night, though he will probably not be at full speed. Besides that, he will have the added incentive of playing before a home state team, being a native of Henderson, N. C.

A healthy Renn is definitely an asset to this ball club. He picked up 90 yards and two touchdowns against Miami University, and was well on the way to another 90 when an injury interrupted in the Georgia contest.

Still and all, the Wolfpack of Earl Edwards present a real test to the Seminoles, a test which could make or break their chances of a winning season.

It's hard to come back with a winning season if you lose three of your first four games.

We hope not, but N. C. State 13, Florida State 7.

IT'S NO PICNIC

I vividly remember the days when I used to dream of sitting in the press box at all the football games, with carpeted seat in the house and a by-lined story in the morning paper.

Now my dreams have been more or less answered, for I had taken up flagpole-sitting.

You see, I am one of the unfortunates who comprise a university's sports publicity department. For those of you who don't know the term, a sports publicity department is a collection of individuals who do their utmost to make sure that everybody else interested in the athletic department of the university is pleased.

There are quite a few newspaper sports editors in this state to keep happy. But the real fun doesn't begin until you reach the press box.

The first place, you arrive about an hour or an hour and a half before the fans. You have to make sure that the writers have programs and rosters at their immediate disposal, and that the food box is well supplied. By halftime, the food box is usually empty.

Once the game starts, I have the beast seat in the house. Unfortunately I never see the game.

The reporters seem to think that a mimeographed play-by-play of the ensueing proceeding would aid them tremendously in their writing of the story, providing somebody else besides them does the play-by-play.

Since there are innumerable details which said person should include, by the time the game is 10 minutes old I'm usually two plays behind in my work.

At least the rest of the game is my typewriter, while the typewriter keeps me up to date on what's happening on the field.

Bless those time outs and long halftime shows. As I said previously, by halftime the food is gone, so I go without eating while the rest of the reporters eat and rest for the end of the game.

Then after the game, I go charging down onto the field, work my way past the ring of student "police" surrounding the field, and try unsuccessfully to get some quotes from Nugent.

It's not really all work, though. It just seems that way.

SLIPPERY ROCK ONE TIME!

No college of its size in the country has probably got as much publicity as Slippery Rock (Pa.) Teachers' College's football team has in the past years.

Many fans in the area have more or less "adopted" the Rockets", and listen avidly to hear how they came out on a given Saturday. So, we dug up a little information about this Notre Dame of the teacher's colleges.

Logically enough, they are located at Slippery Rock, Pa. It is as we mentioned a teacher's college—with 854 students. 394 men and 460 women, enrolled there last year.

Their colors are green and white, they play at Thompson Field, which has a capacity of (hold your breath) 5,000. Last year, they drew overflow crowds, drawing 5,500 fans in three games for an average of 1,700 per game.

They are a member athletically of the Pennsylvania Teachers College Conference. Last year, they had a rather impressive record of 3-4-0, finished 10th in the conference by splitting four conference contests.

This year, as most of you Slippery Rock fans undoubtedly have sadly hearkd, they opened by losing to Indiana, 13-0. Tomorrow they meet Indiana (Pa.) St. Teachers

Onward, Slippery Rock.

Tribe On Wolf (Pack) Hunt Tomorrow

Seminoles At Raleigh, N. C. For Arclighter; Renn Returns

The Tribe of Seminoles from Florida State will journey to Raleigh tomorrow hoping to hunt down and humble the Wolfpack of North Carolina State.

The hunt will take place at Riddick Stadium at 9 p.m. The Seminoles have been picked as a slight favorite

The FSU squad had a spark injected into it with the return of ace ballyback Bobby Renn who has been out with an injury. Reno, according to Seminole Coach Tom Nugent, is the team's best all around back.

Lee Corso will be the starter at quarterback and Nugent hopes he may be able to move the ball through the giant Wolfpack defense

Buck Metts who has been doing a consistently fine job at right half will start at that position again

Joe Hoth, 188 pound senior, will open at the fullback slot.

Nugent will use essentially the same starters in the line that he started against VPI last week with the exception of second team center Bud Leonard who may miss the game because of a shoulder injury.

The North Carolina State team has lived up to its nickname "The Wolfpack" so far this season. With a set of fine backs, plus a trickey multiple offense the Pack has ripped through opponents defenses for much yardage but do not seem to have the punch needed to score

Dick Christy and Dick Hunter are the leading runners on the squad. State coach Earle Edwards said Christy is the leading all-American candidate from his team.

Hunter, who is small for a college back—weighing only 184 and standing five foot seven, was the teams leading scorer last season

Christy has proven to be a huge threat back Besides being an excellent runner he is an accurate passer. He also rates high on defense

The Wolfpack will start either Tom Katich or Bill Franklin at quarterback They have split the duties so far this season. Wally Prince is the probable choice at fullback.

Ends Bob Pepe and John Colar are rated by Edwards as a good pair of flankmen.

Dick DeNardo, John Saorban, Jim Odda and Francis Tokay have been other hitch tights in State's forward wall.

Both teams enter this game with identical won lost records, one and two Tie only mutual opponent has been VPI.

Earlier in the season VPI trounced the Pack 35-7 while the Seminoles bowed to VPI last weekend to the tune of 20-7.

Last year the Tribe edged North Carolina 7-0 in the season's opener

Freshman Gridders Meet Eglin Tomorrow

Florida State's freshman football squad journeys to Ft. Walton Beach Saturday to meet Eglin Air Force Base.

The Baby Seminoles carry a 1-0 contest record into the game, having knocked off the Marianne South-ern "B" team 20-16 in their first game.

The lineup will be the same as the opener except that John Nervelle and Louis Williace will start at halfback instead of Bill Hall and Bill Hunter.

Nervelle will open at quarterback, where he started last game. His completed one touchdown pass, setting up this score, and scored the winning touchdown. Wallace was also outstanding.

Eglin is loaded with ex-collegiate stars such as Zeke Bratkowski, all-American and pro star, at Eglin's starting quarterback. Jim Dooley another pro star will open at end. The middle of the line has two little all-Americans in the starting lineup, Coach Paul Odom figures. Ex-Baby Seminoles could upset the Brattkowski led AFB if the fresh-men Eglin in the first half.

He figures the freshman to be in shape than the Eglin squad.

What young people are doing at General Electric

Young mathematician helps pace engineering advances

Recently General Electric developed a compact, new motor for industrial use. But before the motor could be put into automatic production, one difficulty remained: to design a protective end shield that would confine any possible explosion to the motor itself.

The man who solved the tough mathematical problems involved is R. A. "Pete" Powell — a mathematical analyst whose job is to assist other engineers in math problems which arise in any number of different projects.

Powell's Work Is Varied and Important

Because he is not tied down to any one project, Powell seldom has two similar assignments. Taking established engineering and mathematical principles, some of them extremely complicated, Powell applies them to advanced engineering problems. In doing this, Pete is able to make such calculations as the distortion of a small part of a jet engine caused by vibrations, the deflection occurring in a turbine part when it runs at operational speeds, or the forces exerted upon a rotating shaft by lubricants.

27,000 College Graduates at General Electric

When "Pete" Powell came to General Electric in 1953, he already knew the kind of work he wanted to do. Like each of our 27,000 college-graduate employees, he is being given the chance to grow and realize his full potential. For General Electric has long believed this: Whenever fresh young minds are given freedom to make progress, everybody benefits — the individual, the Company, and the country.

Educational Relations, General Electric Company, Schenectady 5, New York

R. A. "PETE" POWELL joined General Electric in 1953 after receiving his B.S. in Physics in '52 and his M.Sc. in Mathematics in '53, both from Purdue. From 1953-5 he completed further study in Physics again at Purdue.

Progress Is Our Most Important Product.

Intramural tennis begins next Monday at 3:30 p.m. on the varsity courts. Draw sheets are posted at the Student Center Flag, and at the intramural board and at the courts.

The drawings are being made at 3 p.m. today, when entries officially close. Play continues daily Monday through Thursday.

The campus swimming championships are on next Wednesday Oct. 17th at 8 p.m. in the women's pool. The finals will be at the same time on the 24th.

At the intramural board meeting last Monday only one change was made in the events.

The 150-yard ind vidual medley was lowered to a 75 yard event. The other events are the 50 free, 50 back, 50 breast, diving, 4 man 200 yd. relay and 3 man 150 yd. medley relay.

"Please take a cup of tea." "Would you care for a cookie?" Sound familiar? The cup of tea phrase is well known in the upperclassmen on campus and is soon going to become very familiar to the Freshmen. For the dorm teas have started. Credit for the first tea of the season goes to Student Fashion Institute, which started the ball rolling Tuesday afternoon, with the dorm teas following on Wednesday afternoon.

"Let's Dance" days are here and the Marching Chiefs and then West Hall. The FSU bands are staging one of the biggest dances on campus, tonight, with continuous music. Dress for the evening is semi-formal as is the dance at West Hall tomorrow night.

Like spaghetti? The Senior Class hopes that a good portion of the campus does it, in planning a spaghetti supper to be held on the patio of the Music building tonight. After the supper the guests will relax in the best in campus entertainment.

It has started again, the search for pledge pointa. New fraternity pledges are on the lookout for things to do to attract the eye of the actives. The biggest eye-catcher on campus is the change in the appearance of Western Fountain. The Theta Chi pledges get full credit for it this time, but they would like to see it become a campus pledge class project, with a different fraternity each month doing the honors.

The Sigma Alpha Epsilon's were taken back into the past about 10 years Tuesday night when the Alpha Xi Delta's turned the house into a 1920's "Speak-easy." The SAE's entered through a wooden chute into a club-room filled with Alpha Xi's in flapper costumes.

Other parties of note this week include the Alpha Kappa Psi rush party at which the Phi Mu's and Kappa Alpha Theta's acted as hostess. Gamma Phi Pi Beta Beta spent the night at the Reservation. Alpha Omicron Pi repeat the Kappa Sigmas for their hell during runs by giving them a social Sunday, and the Lambda Chi Alphas were treated to a "ooh" story of the mountains by Alpha Chi Omega.

Grooming Is Secret To Beauty Success

By MARGARET McLEAN

Before the problem of "how to be fashion wise" can be considered I would like to dwell on the foundation of an attractive appearance, good grooming.

It is the sum total of a woman's appearance that makes her beautiful. The details are also important, but the whole is infinitely greater than individual parts.

Consider the fashion model from the standpoint of beauty. Very few fashion models are really beautiful. The secret of their beauty is nothing more than flawless grooming and fastidious attention to every little thing about themselves, their health, their habits, their state of mind, and then their beauty secrets.

A person that is well groomed appears to be healthy. That person knows that her attractive appearance is no accident. She has a well oriented program for clear skin, bright eyes, lustrous hair, and the smile of health.

SIMPLY HEALTHY

Sensible health habits start the ball rolling. The person who skimps on breakfast has a milk shake for lunch, ninety cigarettes and twenty cups of coffee in the afternoon, a hamburger for dinner, and too little sleep predisa to say looks, feels, and is miserable—not healthy.

Weight is important, so then diet is important. The ideal weight for the individual is based on the person's height, bone structure, according to medical consultation. Over and under weight people have a serious and vexing problem, but it can be dealt with effectively and wisely, no fad diets or starvation. The idea is to solve the problem, not to start new ones. A doctor is the one to guide a dieting program.

ON COMPLEXION

Next on the list is complexion. Good diet reduces the risks, but beauty experts agree that soap, water, and total elimination from abusive habits help to assure a lovely complexion. If it is necessary to wear more than the usual amounts of cosmetics, then wear a really good quality, selected to match skin type and tone.

Just remember to save the "doe-eyes" for costume parties. The only part of a woman's make-up that is supposed to look frankly artificial is lipstick. Apply cosmetics with skill, moderation, and subtlety. The natural look is always best. No one has perfect features make-up can, however, minimize or emphasize if worn skillfully.

ATTEND HAIR

Hair should be carefully attended. A hair stylist can best select a coiffure to suit face, person, and hair. Hair really should be "squeaky-clean" and brushed, brushed, brushed. Creme rinses are wonderful because they make hair behave reasonably. Try to use curlers other than bobbie pins; they tend to split the hair ends.

The girl who is really on her toes will have a good assortment of beauty aids that she uses faithfully. Here are some very basic ones: stiff brush and fine-toothed comb, razor, reliable tweezers, emery boards, hair curlers, good cosmetics, a non-oily, over-liability lotion, cuticle scissors, thorough deodorant, toothbrush, an acceptable perfume and a clean bill of health.

NOTICE

All varsity and freshman tennis players will engage in an intra-squad match tomorrow morning at 9:30 at the varsity courts according to tennis coach Keith Pitchford.

This is a must for all netmen, said Pitchford.

It will be a little difficult this week to get Irving Feldman to comment on the latest June Christy offering. It left him speechless. This makes it unhandy to carry on a conversation, as Irving is a slow writer.

The album that has affected Irving in such a manner is aptly titled, The Misty Miss Christy. These selections were especially chosen to carry out the theme of the title.

Irving says that he doesn't think they missed a trick. June gets our vote for the girl most able to do most with her voice.

This particular type of music at we have on the menu to the blues. It has that feeling, like the blues, that things are bad right now but everything will clear up eventually.

If you want something unusual and, in Irving's words, music for a nice club with two patrons ask Lewis at Baker's to let you hear the album of the duet between Stan Kenton and June Christy.

Also at Baker's try June's Something Cool album—we bet you'll like it.

Jennie Murphree, Landis Teas Enjoyable

By SYLVIA WARD

Wednesday was a party day indeed for the residents of Jennie Murphree and Landis Hall, and their dates and guests.

The first of a series of weekly dormitory teas was presented. They will be a feature of Wednesday afternoon for the remainder of the school year. A sparkling program of entertainment was presented in each hall and will be a weekly highlight.

As far as fashion goes, we noticed that dark cottons and flats were predominant for the girls, with most of the boys wearing slacks and crew collars. The casual dress seemed to add to the informal atmosphere of chit-chatting and getting acquainted.

A soft, continuous background of music made a perfect setting for the serving of tea and cookies in the parlors of each dorm.

The hostesses were a group of residents, working with the Junior counsellors. Each week the duty of serving and receiving the guests will rotate in order that each girl may have the experience of being a hostess for one afternoon.

Back in each dormitory on Wednesday night, there was one continuous buzz about how successful the first tea had been and how much both the girls and hostesses had enjoyed themselves. We're sure that the girls in Jennie Murphree and Landis will be looking forward to the teas next Wednesday afternoon from 4:30 to 5:30.

★ Big Paper Friday ★

Friday's ten-page Homecoming Edition of the Florida Flambeau will be bulging with extra feature articles, pictures and information about FSU.

Among stories to look for:

HOMECOMING ACTIVITIES—Flambeau reporters tell about the Homecoming Dance Friday night, the Pow Wow Parade and Barbecue; Society Editor Mickey Cole gives a roundup of fraternity, sorority and dormitory decorations; a preview of the Garnet and Gold Key Banquet at which President Doak S Campbell will speak.

CAMPUS POLICE—Everybody notices them, but what do they do? Staffer Dave Fletcher tells some of the interesting facts about FSU's police force.

ACTIVITY FEE—Each student pays $150 a semester in Activity Fees. Where does it go? Flambeau Editor Oscar Johnson tells how the money is apportioned.

CULTURAL AWAKENING—Flambeau columnist Dave Ward-Steinman tells about America's rejuvenation in the arts.

BAND DRILL—Flambeau Associate Editor Charles Poitevint describes the process by which the Marching Chiefs plan and execute their Homecoming halftime drill.

These and other features will be in the big Homecoming Edition.

Band Dance Earns $400 For TV Trip

Between $400 and $500 was earned by the Marching Chiefs' Band Dance Friday night, director Manley Whitcomb estimated.

But the badminton tournaments will have to make up the difference between that and the $1,500 it will cost to get the Chiefs to New York for television appearances after the Villanova game in Philadelphia next weekend, he added.

About 300 couples attended the dance in the women's gymnasium, said Whitcomb, who expressed satisfaction with the turnout.

Still contingent on an appearance of the Chiefs on Ed Sullivan's CBS Toast of the Town" program Sunday night, October 28, according to E. D. Whitlesey, director of public relations.

Whitlesey said he has suggested to Sullivan's production staff an appearance of the entire band in a marching sequence and a "Hi Ed" formation in a "Stars and Sullivan March" written by Whitcomb.

Ar's from Flying Herb, student circus, will appear as planned on Sullivan's Sunday morning show over NBC the following day, Whitlesey said approval of the musicians' union has not yet been obtained, however, for members of the Marching Chiefs to play for the circus acts.

Club Teaches Chess Monday Evenings

A series of nine weekly lessons have been set up for the Tallahassee Chess Club to teach interested persons the fundamentals of the game, says Finley E. Belcher, club secretary.

The first lesson will cover the rules of the game, moves of the pieces, chess notation and mating the lone king. Time and place of the first meeting will be announced later, said Belcher.

The club meets every Monday at 8 p m in 302 History and any person, young or old, is welcome to join the group, he said.

Gymkana Court Judged Tomorrow

A court of 22 in the Miss Gymkana contest will be chosen tomorrow night from among 100 entries, reigning Miss Gymkana Alice Sullivan said.

Judges Elsin White, director of sports publicity; Frank Bean, fortian student adviser; Bob Leigh, director of publications; Miss Mildred Parrish, alumni secretary, and Dr. Hartley Price, Gymkana coach, will review contestants in the men's gymnasium beginning at 7 p.m.

Miss Sullivan said the new Miss Gymkana will be picked from the 22 finalists during the Gymkana show, November 17-17.

Treasure Hunters Start Scavenging

Treasure hunters may have been disappointed during the weekend, since an error forestalled the promotion event's beginning a Chamber of Commerce spokesman said.

Student I D numbers holding key to the Chamber of Commerce sponsored "treasure hunt" were erroneously printed, causing delay in the start of the publicity program. Originally slated to begin Saturday, the search for merchandise prizes did not get under way until yesterday.

Merchants participating in the program will display in their windows cards bearing student I.D. numbers. Prizes valued at a minimum of three dollars may be claimed by students presenting corresponding identification cards.

Dance Tickets On Sale Tomorrow

Tickets for the Saturday night Homecoming Dance will go on sale tomorrow, according to publicity chairman Fred Roberts.

They will be sold Wednesday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Westcott Building Ticket Office and at the Student Center. Roberts said that tickets, at $1.50 per person will also be sold Saturday at both places 9 a.m. through noon.

The dance will be held 8 p.m to 1 a.m. at the new men's Gymnasium. Les Brown and his "Band of Renown" have been contracted to play.

STUDENT DIES AFTER FRACAS

Receives Brain Injury Friday In Squabble At Eating Place

G. Marlene O'Brien, 20-year-old sophomore, died yesterday morning as a result of head injuries received Friday night in a fight.

Dr. Sam Neel, Dean of Men, said O'Brien died about 4 a.m. in Tallahassee Memorial Hospital after he had shown some improvement following emergency surgery Saturday afternoon.

The student was injured during a disturbance in front of a Tennessee Street restaurant. Dr. Neel said he evidently was struck by another student and fell to the pavement, receiving injuries at the base of the skull.

Facts disciplinary action, Dr. Neel said, are Billy Kelly, 23, and Ted Williams, 22, both sophomores from Tallahassee.

He pieced together accounts of the incident as follows:

O'Brien and two friends were in the same room with Kelly and Williams, who were by themselves. All had been drinking beer. Dr. Neel said. But as to what happened next, almost nothing is known except that Kelly and O'Brien suddenly were struck with each other, Dr. Neel said.

AGREED TO FIGHT

They agreed, Dr. Neel surmised, to fight it out in front, while Williams watched. The fight had already ended with both Kelly and O'Brien bruised and bleeding, when several of O'Brien's friends came out the front door.

Probably fearing they were going to be attacked, Dr. Neel continued, Kelly and Williams started running. When O'Brien, according to eyewitness accounts, fell to the pavement

The dean said Kelly and Williams, not thinking O'Brien was seriously hurt, fled the scene.

O'BRIEN

NEEL

REFUSED AMBULANCE

O'Brien refused to ride in an ambulance to Tallahassee Memorial Hospital, Dr. Neel said, and objected to entering the University Infirmary, where he was taken by fraternity brothers. According to Dr. H G Hathaway, chief physician, there were no visible injuries except for a cut lip and O'Brien was admitted for observation. A night nurse called Dr. Hathaway shortly before 7 a.m. Saturday to tell him the patient's condition was getting worse.

Dr. Hathaway said a Tallahassee surgeon called in for consultation agreed "conservative treatment" instead of surgery should be administered. O'Brien's con-

Flambeau Editorials

Politics Is Vital

Too many Americans would sneer at the suggestion that a group of their fellow citizens could meet to discuss politics in a mutual spirit of idealistic dedication and devotion.

We wish that all of these cynics could have met in St. Petersburg Thursday and Friday with the delegates to the fall conference of the Florida Citizenship Clearing House.

This relatively unknown organization with the unassuming name is not particularly concerned whether Republicans or Democrats win elections; it is passionately obsessed with the idea that all persons, particularly young, college-educated persons, should exercise their right of citizenship in voting and political action.

Delegates from seven of nine member colleges and universities in Florida were at the meeting, attended also by Justice Stephen O'Connell, who, despite his duties in the Florida Supreme Court has taken the interest to accept the FCCH chairmanship, professors and deans from those colleges, and county political leaders. Two United States senators, Republican Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Democrat Spessard Holland of Florida were among speakers whom the delegates heard.

The FCCH met with the disquieting knowledge that the Gallup Poll only recently had revealed that college educated persons between 20 and 30 have the worst voting percentage. And in a country where 60 per cent of the registered voters —itself a miserable percentage of the eligible citizenry, is considered a good election day turnout, such a showing by educated persons is appalling.

The reasons for this were what the FCCH delved into. Justice O'Connell made the pertinent observations that Americans have obstinately intimated to politics and politicians an evil nature; that officeholders have been worse than poorly paid; that apathy has permitted evil which in turn has created more apathy.

"Politics," he declared, is the business of self-government."

Other speakers discussed the necessity of one's taking part in intra-party politics, in the choosing of the candidates who will be offered to the people, in the forging of the issues on which they should cast their ballots.

Both parties, as we have noted, were ably represented. They provided the partisan moments, of which this campus should have more.

Florida State University will be host to the FCCH in April. About 90 delegates are expected. It is an honor that we welcome and must try to deserve.

School Problem Critical

The critical shortage of school buildings and teachers is a matter that we have been desperately putting off each year for some time. But within ten years—when today's college students have become parents—30 million elementary school children will perhaps become 40 or 50 million. Seven million high school pupils will become 10 million. And in twelve years, our colleges, already overburdened with 2.5 million students, will have to accommodate at least 5 million.

Already there is a need for the spending of billions of dollars on school facilities alone. But physical facilities are the least of our worries. The human factor—teachers—cannot be bought upon a sudden awakening to a crying need. It must be developed now.

An excellent article in a recent issue of the Atlantic, by Oscar Handlin, points out that part of "The Crisis in Teaching," is such that half of our college graduates from now until 1959 could enter the field without satisfying the demand. By then we will need at least 1.6 million teachers, he writes. We now have a million. Two hundred thousand university instructors must become 450,000.

"It will be a tragic delusion to imagine that the problem can be 'solved'," the article states. "If we fail, the consequences will be disastrous. The size of classes will no doubt grow, and many schools will fall back upon double sessions. The standards of certification may be undermined and the quality of instruction will decline. Already 100,000 'emergency' teachers are in service, and almost half the elementary school children receive instruction from unsupervised green hands. Less than 70 per cent of elementary school teachers are college graduates, and only 60 percent of the college faculties have earned the Ph. D. (In the next few years, those percentages will certainly fall). For some subjects, a total collapse is imminent. 46 per cent of American public high schools offer no foreign language at all, 23 per cent no physics or chemistry; 24 per cent no geometry.

"Nor can we blink the fact that the quality of those teaching has steadily been falling. College graduates of the highest caliber are ever less likely to select teaching as their career. The honor students in physics or mathematics or philosophy is still likely to go on to teach those subjects. But the man or woman who earns a magna or summa cum laude in history or the social sciences or literature, with increasing frequency chooses some other calling than teaching."

There are reasons, he declares. One is salary. "In our society an inescapable measure of the desirability of a job." Teachers are the only group, Handlin notes, whose real earnings — measured against taxes and the value of the dollar—have fallen since 1940.

Worse, according to the article, we regard the teacher in most of our popular entertainment media as a buffoon. "Mr. Peepers" and "Our Miss Brooks" portray people who, while they might not be imbeciles or felons, are certainly not intellectual paragons.

There are some answers to the problem, but they require sincerity and effort on our part. As Handlin suggests, they are:

The use of television as a supplement to the classroom.

The use of student aides for jobs that do not require a trained teacher, such as watching the lunchroom and presiding over study halls.

Permitting—in fact, making it easier—for married women to continue in teaching jobs.

Hiring of well-educated women in their forties or fifties who could be brought abreast with educational developments by refresher courses, and the release by big corporations for several hours a week of scientists and technicians who could teach courses in their fields.

"Arbitrary and outmoded restrictions on the choice of teachers ought quickly to be discarded. General state requirements were once essential devices to take the power of appointment out of local politics and to raise standards of competence. Having served their purpose, they have too often become encrusted with tradition and vested interest and now act as a deterrent to qualified men and women who might otherwise enter the profession. The bright young graduate of the liberal arts college balks at the formal demand that he invest another year or two on courses only vaguely related to his job but required by the rules. A well-designed period of summer preparation could get him into the classroom the September after his commencement."

This last, we believe, is applicable to Florida. The $400 teaching scholarships should not be confined to Education students. Does one learn what to teach or how to teach what he does not have time to learn?

In The Wings

Recital Was Stimulating

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

The all-contemporary program presented in Opperman Friday night by faculty recitalists William Cramer (trombone) and Robert Glotzbach (piano) left little to be desired in the way of ensemble or interpretation. Although the music was not all of the same uniformly high level [illegible] it still provided a very stimulating evening since most of it was unfamiliar to us.

The program consisted of sonatas by Klaus George Roy, W. H. Rivard, Paul Hindemith and a sonatina by John Boda. With the exception of Hindemith, a [illegible] all the others are [illegible] unknown to the general concert-going public.

Klaus George Roy's Sonata for Trombone and Piano Opus 13, opened the program. The idiom, except for a very Hindemithian second movement, belonged [illegible] nondescript lingua franca that [illegible] musical language before [illegible] had to build the main climax almost by itself detached from [illegible].

THE SECOND movement [illegible] obvious eclecticism was really quite [illegible]. The third movement was passacaglia [illegible] but [illegible] did not sustain the interest. It built [illegible] the end but the final bars were unconvincing and [illegible].

The Rivard sonata was [illegible] with a great deal more [illegible] the opening Allegro moderato had some rather obvious [illegible] certain devices, notably the [illegible] being dull, and its dry [illegible] at times became almost exciting. The second movement [illegible] was more [illegible] than profound and seemed to [illegible]. The concluding Presto agitato, however more than made up for any weaknesses in the preceding movements. [illegible] are almost without parallel in recent American music with the possible exception of Peter Mennin's, indicating a very promising future for Mr. Rivard.

THE HINDEMITH sonata has long since [illegible] its durability, and is now almost a [illegible]. It is well-paced, formally clear-cut and evidences [illegible] the guiding hand of an experienced craftsman and [illegible] technician. The concluding movement which [illegible] demands upon the pianist ends brilliantly in a [illegible] cascade of sound. The performance which was one of the most stunning examples of ensemble playing we are [illegible] a year left absolutely nothing to be desired [illegible] both Cramer and Glotzbach in complete mastery of their material.

John Boda's two-movement Sonatina was a welcome addition to the repertory and only the Hindemith surpassed it in technical control and variety. The writing is [illegible] and extremely consistent and the idiom is handled in an individual manner.

THE ONLY point of criticism is the occasional lack of variety in the metric patterns as in the somewhat [illegible] six-eight rhythm in the first movement. But both movements are well-paced and contain good contrasting sections. Cramer's projection of the long phrases made the whole piece sing and the technical and musical competence of both composer and performers was very much in evidence.

Cramer as a trombonist is a living refutation of the charge that the trombone is of necessity a clumsy, brassy instrument incapable of musical expression. His tone was warm, rich, and restrained, and at no time was it ever unmusical or stodgy. Glotzbach's accompaniments were the perfect complement to Cramer's artistry, and demonstrated a high degree of sensitivity as well as imagination. The ensemble throughout was excellent.

NAACP First Sought Equal Negro Schools

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

[illegible] Negro pupils on the [illegible] Plessy V. Ferguson, [illegible] the Supreme Court [illegible] 1896.

That decision involving segregation in [illegible] facilities, held [illegible] equal and constitutional, [illegible].

Negro [illegible] received pitifully [illegible] Consequently the most promising Negro youths rarely chose to teach. School [illegible] Textbooks were a luxury. When the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People [illegible] lynching [illegible] more hopeful [illegible] sought not school integration as such but physical equality.

Under chief counsel Thurgood Marshall [illegible] Howard University Law School under [illegible] NAACP counsel Charles Houston the NAACP fought until 1945 a battle to equalize facilities, salaries and [illegible].

THERE WAS, however an ad[illegible] in that front. The NAACP [illegible] hoped that the [illegible] segregation would [illegible] afford equalizing the Negro schools and would accept [illegible] as the [illegible].

In 1945 however this process was abandoned because it was thought too slow.

Several decisions on the college level had been won regarding the "border" states of Missouri and Maryland in the 1930's. After 1945 came several leading cases, again involving universities.

The Supreme Court held in 1950 that Texas could not achieve equality with a separate law school for Negroes because after admittance to the bar they would be at a handicap for not having associated with white colleagues-to-be, for not having had as good a library and for other reasons.

THEN THE Court told Oklahoma it could not merely admit a Negro student to class but segregated her from other students in extra-curricular activities and for meals.

These successes inspired the NAACP to attack segregation on the high school and grammar school level. It took several years for the cases to reach the Supreme Court, where they were first argued in 1952. In 1954 was rendered the significant decision in Brown V. Board of Education of Topeka, Kansas, and in four other cases.

Attorney Marshall had gotten together a task force of 75 social historians, psychologists, social workers, and educators—white and Negro—who proved to the Court's satisfaction that segregation itself—despite the value of textbooks or buildings—created an atmosphere of dejection in which a student's chance to be educated was lessened.

Calling The Card

G O Ps Gave Us All?

In his last column my partner in perpetration expressed [illegible] thoughts in the form of a letter to me. I would now like [illegible] return the compliment, as follows:

DEAR JAMES—

I'm glad, as you must realize, that you have decided [illegible] swing your allegiance to the Democratic Party. However [illegible] think you are a little too harsh on our Republican brethren [illegible] actually there is a lot to be said for the merits of rule by the GOP. If I may be so bold allow me to call your attention to a little booklet recently published by the Republican Centennial Committee entitled appropriately enough Republican Party . . . It's History In Brief.

This is really an edifying little document, and its title page reveals what must be the cleverest slogan since "Brink of War". Just get this phrase, it may shape the destinies of men and nations. The centennial slogan is: "100 Years Freedom's Fight From Abe To Ike." When I first read it I began to wonder what the Ma[illegible] Avenue boys were fighting to free us from, but the text of [illegible] booklet soon answered my question.

IT SEEMS that the GOP was organized "in spontaneo[illegible] volt against the spread of slavery." Admirable enough [illegible] this was just the beginning. Today "it remains the pa[illegible] human freedom and equal justice." It is also "the pol[illegible] expression of American enterprise and self-reliance." J[illegible] I hope that these self confessed virtues are starting to co[illegible] you that what is good for General Nixon is good for eve[illegible] but, the best is yet to come.

The unbiased little historical masterpiece explains how [illegible] Republican Party founded the national banking system fo[illegible] against Civil War greenbacks and William Jennings Bryan a[illegible] fended off the "Democrats' assault on sound money." Be[illegible] all in 1900 the GOP "[illegible]ed the country firmly on a gold [illegible] which remained unshaken until the Democrat Party succ[illegible] in cheapening the dollar more than thirty years later."

NOW JAMES you will have to admit that it was drea[illegible] of the Democrats to spoil the good sound economic situati[illegible] the 1930's. Can you imagine a little illusory thing like [illegible] slight recession of that period necessitating the upset of [illegible] Republican sound money policy?

Strangely enough the booklet eulogizes the Republican[illegible] instituting such paternalistic agencies of the welfare sta[illegible] the Department of Agriculture Labor and Commerce. No[illegible] know at first glance that these sound socialistic, but remem[illegible] and be comforted by the fact that Republican Presidents are [illegible] "American interests" and "independence"—this separates [illegible] men from the boys.

NOW THOSE mean old bureaucrats are always blaming [illegible] depression on the GOP, so in closing I would like to ex[illegible] how the booklet sets the record straight on that slander[illegible] blasphemy. "It was a Republican President, Herbert Ho[illegible] who first recognized, at the onset of the depression, that [illegible] government had an obligation to come to the defense of [illegible] citizen when he was helpless against economic forces he [illegible] no control. Too often the credit for Hoover policies has [illegible] given to Franklin D. Roosevelt, his successor in the W[illegible] House."

See how simple it is to understand when you have all [illegible] facts? How could you ever doubt that everything we have [illegible] result of the benevolence of General Bullmose, the patron [illegible] of the Grand Old Party?

YOURS FOR FREEDOM,

Charter Show Goes On

By OSCAR JOHNSON

THESE CATS were in the room arguing about some [illegible] One of [illegible] was mopping his forehead with a wet handkerchief and list[illegible]ing to the others talk. The others all had suits on and we[illegible] swapping comments with the boys who drifted in.

"We got to git this thing out of the way," said the fo[illegible] head-wiper suddenly. "I don't think we should allow the gov'[illegible] to git a second turn. Look what might happen. There's the machine angle—he could keep [illegible] himself in office until nobody had a chance. Besides that," he continued, looking [illegible] around the room, "We've always had the law against him succeeding himself, we got to go all the way or nothing."

It happened that there weren't many cats around when he came out with this, so one of the other members spoke for the other viewpoint. As he began talking, though some more came in to see what was going on.

"YOU JUST seem to forget that the people have a right to elect who they want [illegible]," he said. "That wo[illegible] be like saying they didn't have enough sense to elect a dec[illegible] governor."

I went out to get some water and met a college pro[illegible] knew. He was shaking his head sadly and muttering to [illegible]self. "They don't listen to fools like me," he said. "I've [illegible] spent my life studying this."

BACK IN the room, temperatures were rising a little [illegible] thought they might eventually reach the temperature of [illegible] room, but that was speculation. A short, white-suited charac[illegible] was doing a sort of hop-scotch dance in front of the pan[illegible] and crying out like he was in pain.

"You people better not try any of that newfangled [illegible] apportionment stuff," he said. "The people of Florida wo[illegible] stand for it. We know what we have is right. I've heard [illegible] might try to set up an outside body to handle reapportionmen[illegible]"

The leader of the committee glanced uneasily to the me[illegible]bers to his right. He smiled. "Don't worry, Mr. Smith," he sa[illegible] "the committee realizes that constitutional government m[illegible] be maintained. We'll do our best to recommend changes w[illegible] that in mind."

SMITH SHOT a hot glance at him. "We like things [illegible] way they are. You get these cities [illegible] things and no [illegible]ing what will happen. The small counties shouldn't be expec[illegible] to trust the cities."

I got tired of it all. Somebody said, "Maybe we shou[illegible] forget about revising the constitution after all," that's the wa[illegible] it looked as if it would turn out.

Cagers Face Long Year

Providing the backboards have arrived, (at last word we didn't know whether or not they had) Coach Bud Kennedy's basketball team opened practice for the 1956-57 season yesterday.

Like their football predecessors the Seminole cagers face probably the ruggedest schedule in the history of the sport at Florida State.

Gone from a team which produced a 16-9 mark last year are Jimmy Oler, Dick Artmeier, Gary Wold, Wayne Patton and Ed Wurabach.

However, Kennedy returns seven lettermen with which to tackle the 1956-57 slate Bob Williams, Bob Kerr, Bob Waites, Tom Garcia, Stu Gregory, Fred Mooney and Darrell Mahoney.

The schedule is raw proof that the Tribe has "arrived" in the world of basketball. Incidentally, this is the first year that Florida State will officially become "major-college" in the cage sport.

It starts out with a bang, with the Seminoles meeting Dubuquesne, Steubenville, West Virginia, Bradley and Florida in a row on the road at the start of the season.

Hardly anyone could foresee more than one win in that bunch, and the first home game is perhaps an even bigger one for Kennedy.

The Seminoles haven't been beaten on the home court since January 7, 1954 when Loyola beat them in the old Old Campus gym.

That win streak looms strong and rather uncertain December 13 when Ken Loeffler brings his Texas A&M team here to dedicate the new man's gym.

Loeffler you remember is the coach who tutored Tom Gola (as if he needed tutoring) at LaSalle and led the Explorers to two national championships (one each in the NIC and NCAA).

Then again, FSU seems to be the only team in the Florida Intercollegiate Basketball Conference that lost more than one letterman.

Miami appears to be the best choice to succeed the Seminoles as FIBC champs, losing only Dick Miani from the team that beat FSU once last year.

We're still a long time to December 1, though, and Kennedy has time at least in which to mold a winning basketball unit. There are several transfers to help, and the promising Sophs.

Wait and see.

WE WERE WRONG

We were wrong and we admit it.

We didn't honestly think that Tom Nugent's gridders could whip North Carolina State Saturday, but we're glad they did.

This could make a big difference in the Tribe's football fortunes this year—as we said previously the difference between a winning or losing season.

If the Seminoles can beat North Carolina State with Dave Reed at half-speed, we firmly believe that they can take such teams as Wake Forest, Villanova and Mississippi Southern if Renn is fully healthy.

Prospects are improving.

You're missing a good trick if you haven't tried the . . . .

Corso Sparkplug In Tribe's Attack

By BOB WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Writer

A prancing, dancing Miami speedster, Lee Corso, dulled the fangs of a surprised North Carolina State Wolfpack 14-0 in Raleigh, Saturday.

After a frustrating first half in which FSU threatened numerable times to score, Corso penetrated the stalwart Wolfpark defenses twice, scoring once and setting up a second.

The FSU playmakers saw five of their drives stopped on the NC state 30, 28, 4, 12, and 25 during the first half.

Meanwhile, a stiff Seminole defense headed by end Ron Schomburger, guard Al Pacifico, and fullback Joe Holt, kept the Wolfpack in their own lair most of the evening.

Rumania out of the deceptive I formation, Corso started an 86-yard drive from the Seminole 14, carrying 22 yards to the 36.

Bill Weaver rammed through for two and Corso then flipped a pass to end Bob Nellums on the NC state 43.

Corso picked up 8 to the Wolfpack 35, three plays later. With a fourth down and three yards to go situation Corso raced around left end, cut into midfield on the 20 and romped across without being touched.

John Sheppard split the uprights to give the Seminoles a 7-0 margin.

CORSO AGAIN

In the fourth quarter the Wolfpack scoring punch boozed down and Dick Christy punted to the Seminole 30.

Corso again took the ball and raced down the sideline, giving up good blocking as he cut back to midfield and headed toward TD territory. Christy overtook Corso on the 10, however, and snared him from behind.

Halfback Buck Metts picked up two yards two plays later before Vic Prinzi onlimbered a pass to end Bob Nellums on the two.

Nellums stepped over the goal to score Seminole touchdown No. 2. Sheppard completed his seventh straight conversion while 8 minutes left in the game.

NC State's most lethal punch came in the waning minutes of the game as the Wolfpack displayed their aerial arm.

Franklin flipped a pass to Christy on the Seminole 13. Two plays later Franklin passed to Collar in the end zone but the Wolfpack was caught holding. The Raleigh combine was penalized back to the 20 and never mustered another scoring drive.

The win was FSU's fourth straight conquest of the North Carolina school.

Two-Page Sports Section On Friday

Friday's Homecoming edition of the Flambeau will include a special two-page sports section, covering overall prospects for Seminole athletic teams this year.

There will be special stories on every sport including a football feature presenting the arid schedule for 1957 and 1958, as complete as they are.

Basketball and gymnastics will be included in sports story football and they will take the limelight. Don't miss the biz Homecoming sports section. Friday, October 20.

Bratkowski Led Eglin Fliers Defeat Seminole Frosh, 25-13

Eglin Air Force Base, led by Zeke Bratkowski, overpowered Florida State's freshman football squad, 25-13 last Saturday night at Fort Walton Beach.

Bratkowski, former all-American and pro star, threw four touchdown passes. His favorite target during the night was another pro star, Jim Dooley.

The Brat and company got off to a two touchdown lead and were never headed. FSU came back in the second period with John Neville running the touchdown drive by smashing over from the two.

The conversion was though the uprights and the score stood at 13-7.

Bratkowski then wound up and uncorked another touchdown pass putting Eglin in the lead at half time, 19-7.

The third period saw both Florida State and Eglin scoring. Paul Pasquale, frosh quarterback, smarked over from the two yard stripe for six points for the Tribe. Bratkowski then completed another pass good for a touchdown.

The Baby Seminoles put a halt to Mr. Bratkowski in the final quarter but it was too late. The final score read Bratkowski U, 25-FSU 0.

Coach Paul Odom was pleased with the play of the frosh. "I was couldn't expect freshman halfbacks to stay with pro ends," he said, "but I stopped completely on the middle," he continued, "our boys made a few mistake but they were playing against pros."

The frosh encounter Georgia Military College in their next game, October 27.

Cole Requests Activities News

Florida Flambeau Society Editor Mickey Cole yesterday requested that all sororities, fraternities, dormitories and other groups planning to sponsor Homecoming activities turn in a list of their projects for publication in Friday's Homecoming Issue. Deadline will be tonight at 6 p.m., she said.

Wrestling Offered In PE Curriculum

For the first time in the history of Florida State University the men's Physical Education Department offers a course in wrestling as a part of its program this year.

This new course, PE 131, has twenty students enrolled in it, ranging from freshmen to seniors. Several others have developed an interest in the sport and turn out daily for workouts.

A fully equipped wrestling room is available to all students in the new men's gymnasium at all times.

Additional information about wrestling may be obtained from Mr. John Chevrette, wrestling instructor, room 118 in the new men's gymnasium.

The intramural board is currently considering adding wrestling to its agenda of sports this year.

Chevrette said that a meeting of all those interested in the sport is planned in about two weeks, at which time the formation of a Grappler's Club will be considered.

Intramural News

A record entry list faced the desk yesterday afternoon in the opening rounds of the intramural tennis championships.

Fourteen out of the fifteen fraternities had both singles and doubles players. A new high of thirteen campus organizations entered the do-it-undependent division.

Play continues daily on the varsity courts at 3:30 p.m. Scores and draw sheets are posted at the courts and at the Student Center Flagpole bulletin board.

Tomorrow night at 8 the intramural swimming meet is scheduled at the women's pool. There are no favorites as most of last year's winners have graduated.

Campus basketball teams have been using the outdoor courts for practice since the backboards have not yet been installed.

The next meeting of the intramural board is set for Oct. 22nd.

Lycette Darsonval star of the Paris Opera, will be in Thomasville with her Ballet Company as part of their first American tour. Tickets for the performance Wednesday night October 31, are at Baker's Music Center — Orchestra $3 00, Balcony $2.50

At Baker's you'll find a complete selection of ballet music albums, everything from Swan Lake to Music for Barefoot Ballerinas.

The newest Swan Lake record by Victor is packaged in a hard-cover book album, with photographs and copy to give new interest to the Tchaikovsky ballet inspired by an Old German fairy tale

The complete music of Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe is on a London album, a name that's becoming a leader in hi fidelity classical music

For a lighter touch, you'll find at Baker's many versions of Offenbach's Gaiete Parisienne. Columbia's album backs it up with Chopin's Les Sylphides.

But most intriguing of all is Decca's Music for Barefoot Ballerinas, described on the jacket as "a series of original, orchestral impressions designed to please high fidelity enthusiasts lovers of exotic musical moods parlor balletomanes dancers and choreographers and seekers after the unusual"

If you fall into any of those categories stop in and see what Baker's has for you.

Campbell Views 'State Of FSU' Tonight

To Address 700 At Key Banquet

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Dr. Doak S. Campbell, serving his last year as Florida State University President, will deliver his "State of the University" address this evening at the annual Garnet and Gold Key Banquet.

Some 700 persons are expected to fill to capacity the Suwannee Room. Among guests will be Governor and Mrs. LeRoy Collins, members of the Cabinet and Supreme Court justices, 90 members of the Legislature and other dignitaries.

Governor Collins was the speaker at last year's banquet.

Dr. Campbell told the Board of Control last month he will step down on June 30 from the presidency he has held since 1941. Although his decision had not been made public before then, he had already been asked to deliver the Homecoming banquet address, Dr. Campbell said recently.

Dr. Doak S. Campbell

SERVICE NOTED

During the course of the program, which begins at 5:15 p.m. Garnet Key, women's leadership and service honorary, and Gold Key, sophomore men's group, will present honorary memberships to three persons.

Garnet Key president Greta Sims will extend membership to some woman faculty member chosen by vote of the organization in recognition of service to the university. Gold Key president Bob Elting is slated to honor two persons, one a faculty or staff members and the other a Floridian noted for public service.

Identities of Garnet and Gold Key honorary members are traditionally kept secret prior to the banquet.

ROBERTS TOASTMASTER

Fred Roberts, Gold Key secretary, will be toastmaster. Dr. Edwin Hayes, university chaplain, will deliver the invocation, followed by a speech of welcome by Dave Barbman, student body president. The FSU Symphony, conducted by Robert Sedore, will play the "American Salute," by Morton Gould. Dr. Campbell will introduce guests, after which Garnet and Gold Key honorary members will be named and regular members introduced.

Mrs. H. Hugo Dichtenmueller, president of the Alumni Association, will introduce alumni from the classes of 1906, 1911, 1912, 1923, 1924, 1935, 1931, 1932, 1933, 1949, 1950, 1951, 1952 and 1956, which are reuniting classes this year.

ADDRESS NEXT

Dr. Campbell's address will follow.

University officials released yesterday a tentative list of special guests, including Governor and Mrs. Collins.

Others are United States Representative Bob Sikes, Senator George Smathers, Dr. Ralph L. Miller, chairman of the Board of Control, and Mrs. Miller; Treasurer and Mrs. J. Edwin Larson; Secretary of State and Mrs. R. A. Gray; Superintendent of Public Instruction and Mrs. Thomas D. Bailey.

SUPREME COURT

Mrs. J. M. Lee widow of a former state comptroller, Mrs. Cary Landis, widow of a former attorney general, State Supreme Court Justice Glenn Terrell and Mrs. Terrell; Justice and Mrs. Elwyn Thomas, and Justice and Mrs. Campbell Thornall.

Ex-governor and Mrs. Millard Caldwell, Gayle McCord, clerk of the Supreme Court, and Mrs. McCord, Michael M. Bennett, St. Petersburg Junior College president, Franklin Johnson, Jacksonville University president, Pensacola Junior College President Henry Ashmore and Mrs. Ashmore, Circuit Judge and Mrs. Hugh Taylor, State attorney and Mrs. W. D. Hopkins.

Federal District Judge and Mrs. Dozier DeVane, Col. and Mrs. H. N. Kirkman, Tom Brandes, Chamber of Commerce Secretary and Mrs. Brantley, C. C. Crispin and Ray Blome and Mrs. Stone; J. Broward Culpepper, Board of Control executive secretary, and Mrs. Culpepper, Mr. and Mrs. Colin English, Board of Control member Glenn Miller and Mrs. Miller, Apalachee Correctional Institute Superintendent Paul Eubanks and Mrs. Eubanks.

Big Parade Today Opens Weekend

Forty-two floats and four bands will take part in Florida State University's annual Homecoming Parade which officially inaugurates Homecoming at 3 p.m. this afternoon.

FSU's Marching Chiefs, the Wake Forest Band, and the Florida High and Leon High School bands will be in the line of march.

The parade will form at West Call and proceed east on College Avenue, turn right on to Adams Street and left onto Pensacola, come back on Monroe Street in front of the reviewing stands at the Florida Hotel, cross Tennessee Street and disband at Virginia Street.

James McDonough, Art Department head and chairman of the float judging committee, said trophies will be awarded for the most original and most beautiful entries. They will be announced tonight at the Pow-Wow, he added.

Dr. Doak S. Campbell and distinguished guests will lead the parade as far as the reviewing stand, followed by ROTC color guards, the Marching Chiefs, and the cheerleaders.

Then, in order, will come the following floats and bands:

Queen's float, Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Delta, Phi Mu, Kappa Sigma, Pent House Gang of West Hall, Pi Beta Phi, Wake Forest Band, Chi Omega, Delta Zeta, Alpha Gamma Delta, and Tarpon Club.

Sigma Kappa, Delta Tau Delta, Kappa Alpha, Zeta Tau Alpha, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Mu Alpha, Florida High Band, Phi Kappa Tau, Feds, Delta Gamma, Alpha Omicron Pi.

Tau Epsilon Phi, Delta Delta Delta, Theta Chi, Industrial Arts Club Gamma Phi Beta, Kappa Alpha Theta, Leon High Band, Kappa Delta Sigma Chi.

Kahler's To Fold On November 1

Kahler's, student eating establishment on Cleveland St., is closing on November 1, according to Fred H Kabler, owner.

Kahler, who has operated the restaurant for the past two years, said that it has been financially unsuccessful.

"Personally, I hate to leave the place, but I have other business matters that must be attended to, and I can't do both," he said.

He added that he has enjoyed working around the college crowd" and is now in the process of trying to locate a buyer, so the establishment will not have to be closed permanently.

14 Senate Candidates Triumph In Light Turnou

Hair Elected Decisively Over Six Opponents

Mattux Hair won the Freshman Class presidency Tuesday in a decisive primary election sweep over six other candidates for the office.

Hair received 560 of the 991 ballots cast for the office, 442 more than Larry Pool, his nearest rival.

Flusher behind them were Tom Adams, 99; Ken Prescott, 91; Ronnie Chris, 58; Tony Jackson, 54; and Stan Lesga, 32.

Every other freshman office will be decided in runoff balloting next Tuesday.

THOUSAND BALLOTS

Mitzi McCullough, secretary of elections, said 1,105 freshmen voted.

In the runoff for vice-president are Gene McCormick and Dave Dale, who got 260 and 164 votes respectively. Behind them in a much tighter race than that for the presidency were Ann Williams, 129; John Dukarich, 126; Bob Montgomery, 110; Jo Yde, 91; Reign Mosher, 81; and Marilyn Teare, 77.

Linda Hanshaw and Kay Hufford will enter the runoffs for secretary. Miss Hanshaw polled 167, Miss Hufford, 254; Barbara Bahren Mosher, 81; and Marilyn Teare, 77.

TREASURER

Sandy Burns, 214, and Kay Hudson, 175, headed the field for treasurer, which includes Sally Kay, 117; Twyla Kent, 151; Carol Lambrecht, 138; and Patty Preston, 141.

Charlotte Ott, 252, and Donna Smith, 383, will continue to campaign for social chairman. They were followed by Gail N'Gash, 172, and Marsha Douglass, 157.

SENATORS

Ramon Arnold, 226; Reagie Ivory, 262; Ward Matthews, 240, and Charles Van, 320, will settle the two men's senate seats Tuesday. Other candidates were Sheldon Fretwell, 136; Ed Johnson, 149; Scott Treadway, 87; Ray Williams, 83; and Alec Woodhull.

Left in the women's Senate race are Cappy Archibald, who polled 358 in the primary, Judy Ramsey, 328; Kay Bendy, 298, and Carol Turner, 282. Eliminated candidates were Sara Clardy with 232 votes, and Sylvia Miller, with 172.

5 Seats Await Tuesday Runoffs

By STAFF WRITER

Less than two thousand students cast ballots Tuesday in the first election held to choose student senators from living areas.

Mitzi McCullough, secretary of elections, said 1,912 went to the polls. This undoubtedly included most of 1,105 freshmen whose class elections were held simultaneously.

Fourteen senate races were settled and five more were thrown into run-offs, to be held Tuesday.

Best turnout was from West Hall, 86% of whose residents voted. Fred Roberts, with 148 votes, and Bucky Canon, with 142, were elected to the 10 story dorm's two seats, defeating Bob Kinsley with 60 and Jack Taylor, a write-in candidate, who had 40 votes.

TIGHT RACE

Harold Williams, with 68 votes, edged out by one vote by Charlotte Curry, to represent the Kappa Sams, Alpha Omicron Pi, Alpha Kappa Psi, Phi Mu, Delta Zeta, Chi Omega, Pi Kappa Alpha, Sigma Nu, and Sigma Chi precinct.

Betty Faye Horner got a majority of votes cast despite four opponents to represent Gilchrist Hall. She polled 84, losers were Jeanne Breseman 17, Peggy Edwards, 9, Kay Moon, 23, and Charlie Prescott, 12.

Frank Pain defeated Tom Hale 68 to 8 from Senior Hall; Pat Mickler, with 135, defeated Rose Castro, with 81, from Bryan Brovard hall. Pete Moses, 36, defeated Vickie Kirchman, 45, from Cawthon, and seven senators were elected without opposition

REYNOLDS

They were Diane Godin, Reynolds; James Baird and Bob Murray, day students; Dick Crawford, Delta Sigma Pi; Delta Tau Delta, Lambda Chi Alpha, Theta Chi, Phi Delta Theta and Phi Kappa Tau precinct; Bennie Jo Ousart, Kappa Delta Alpha Delta Pi, co-op house; Pi Kappa Phi, Pi Beta Phi Zeta Tau Alpha, Gamma Phi Beta and Tau Epsilon Phi precinct.

Runoffs will be held in the Jane Murphree, Landa, Florida, Mariella, and Reynolds hall senatorial districts.

Dixie Hatton, with 52, and Ev Lemmatro, 47 votes, led the field of eight in Jennie Murphree. Eliminated candidates were Joyce Chadwick, 11; Valerie Chase, 8, Joyce Colarelle, 12, Suzanne Edwards, 16 Gloria King, 9, and Charlotte Stoker, 19

LANDA

Lois Charlesworth and Barbara Watson were evenly matched, 36 to 36, in Landa, and the third candidate, Liz Schmidt, was eliminated by one vote. Her 35 may decide the final election for one or the other surviving candidate.

Pat Manning with 38 and Starr Culpepper, with 36, enter the runoffs from Florida Hall. Eliminated were Suzanne Knight, with 25 votes, Leanne Reetz, with 20, and Burrelle Strickland, with 25.

Jack Lesa polled 76 and Tommy Marks 25 in Magnolia Hall. Eliminated from the runoffs was John Combs

32 TO 31

Mary Ann Leaster, with 32, and Mary Anne Coleman, with 31, will try for the seat representing Sigma Kappa, Kappa Alpha Theta, Alpha Xi Delta, Alpha Chi Omega, Delta Zeta, Delta Gamma, Alpha Gamma Delta, and Sigma Phi Epsilon. Eliminated were Mary McMillin, with 25, and Julie Ann Milam, 27

Student Senate established a combined precinct-class representation last spring after nearly two years of controversy. An unnoticed clause in the reapportionment bill that kept Senate from meeting this fall until the living area senators are formally installed, which will probably be sometime next week. Two men and two women senators were elected from the sophomore, junior, and senior classes last spring.

Frosh Face Stiff Scholastic Test

Florida State University Students this year are required to meet strictly scholastic requirements that ever before, according to Charles H. Walker, University Registrar.

Gone are the days when a freshman could flunk all his first-year courses and still manage eventually to graduate.

Several regulations are now in affect to ensure that student nonsense into at least academic contact with the proverbial grindstone.

The first regulation is regarding admission to the university. Freshmen admitted this fall were required to have been graduated in the upper 60 percent of their class or to have made a satisfactory score (20 points) on the Florida state-wide 12th grade examination. Next fall, only those meeting the second requirement will be admitted.

A freshman student is now required to maintain at least a 1.8 average during his first three semesters in school. If his average falls below this minimum he receives warning notice from the registrar's office

The third new regulation stipulates a 2.0 over-all average for graduation. Hours attempted are counting in figuring this average.

NO FINE FOR KNOWLEDGE

ACP—The UCLA library has decided not to fine Caryl and Susan Volman for overdue books. The library cancelled the fines when it learned that the twin girls used the books to prepare for appearances on "The $64,000 Question" television show. The books proved valuable too; the Volmans thus bowed out of the show after winning $16,000.

America On Threshold Of First Major Cultural Awakening

Editor's Note: The role of the fine arts in American culture is of particular significance at Florida State University, where art and music have for years received great emphasis. The author of this article is an outstanding senior in the School of Music and regular music artist for the FLORIDA FLAMBEAU.

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

If some of the widespread signs we've been noticing lately are any indication of a trend, this country could be on the threshold of a major cultural awakening for the first time in its history.

One of the most significant of these signs in the fact that an ever-increasing number of the nation's commercial enterprises—the ones that indirectly influence the tastes of a large percentage of the population—are beaming to realize the value and importance of art, not only for its undeniable public relations and advertising value, but for its own very real, intrinsic worth.

NUMEROUS EXAMPLES

In architecture the examples are numerous. Notable is the glass-sheathed Lever House in New York, which more sonp products; the Frank Lloyd Wright-built Johnson Wax complex in Racine, which makes wax products; the Bonsheft-designed Manhattan Manufacturers Trust Co. which makes money; and the Saarinen-supervised General Motors Technical Center in Detroit, which seems to make everything.

In music, while importer Paul Fromm has decided to devote most of his fortune toward helping the "un-arrived" composer through his Fromm Foundation. The foundation is prepared to "renommit" itself to promising but untouted young composers over a period of years, until they achieve reputations that will enable them to get bigger stipends from bigger foundations or to stand alone.

THOUSAND SYMPHONIES

According to the American Symphony Orchestra League there are approximately 1,000 symphony orchestras in the United States today, compared with less than 100 in 1920. And we have it from the Wall Street Journal that record sales of "classical" music now account for about 40 per cent of the industry's total business, compared with 15 per cent in 1946.

Figures recently released by Broadcast Music, Inc. are even more encouraging. n 1954, 46 per cent of all money spent on printed music went for serious, concert music. And in 1955 Americans spent more money at the box office for concert music than they spent for baseball!

The invention of the long playing microgroove record in 1948 was, of course, instrumental in sparking off the current interest in music and its end-child, High Fidelity. But one of the most important, if unheralded, developments in recording with the record business was the creation and evolution of what promises to become an important new art medium, the design and painting of the album jackets.

SURREALISM ENTERS

At first, decoration of the record jackets was a matter of design, not "art." The most important thing was to advertise the contents of the record. Capitol took the first hesitant step in hiring surrealist painters to design covers for Stan Kenton recordings (ef. the Eacores album)

A parallel move was the realization by several companies that art in itself—good art—could and would sell records. Hence the luxurious editions put out by Angel and the Victor RNV series, featuring full-color reproductions of art masterpieces, omnistered or coupoiled by encroaching lettering and trademark foldered. Dufy's "Red Violin" was paired with Berg's VIOLIN CONCERTO; Bennard's sheleh of Daphnis and Chloe became the illustration for Ravel's ballet of the same name.

But this idea was temporarily abandoned as such obvious bed-fellows became more scarce. Now we find Angel mounting a sumptuous reproduction of Picasso's "Still Life with Antique Head" on the cover of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra, and Victor RAIV adorning some of its Bach recordings with random Rembrandts, and so on, ad infinitum.

COMMISSIONS

The result of these initial experiments was what prompted this essay in the first place: the fact that several major record companies have taken the next logical step and begun commissioning good native artists and men of international reputation to paint pictures exclusively for record covers. Columbia has signed such men as Ben Shahn, Leo Lionni, Antonio Frasconi, and Gabor Peterdi, in addition to utilizing existing works by such masters as Paul Klee.

But, believe it or not, a jazz-record company beat them to the punch. Pacific Jazz for some time has been mounting full-cover, color reproductions or representative work of the best west-coast artists, and what's more, they advertise it and devote a portion of the liner notes to the artist and his work—something which Columbia does not do.

This, of course, is the ideal situation; everyone benefits. The record-buyer is at least exposed to contemporary modern art; the artists themselves receive a certain amount of publicity and attention and the musicians and recording companies are bound to sell more records because of the added visual appeal.

AMUSING CONTRASTS

One interesting sidelight is the number of amusing juxtapositions of jacket and contents that have turned up. Mercury's recording of the Bartok and Ravel violin sonatas is illustrated with a painting of a jazz combo diligently at work. Columbia, perhaps longest-in-the-cheek, illustrated so ill-advised collection of incompetent contemporary American music with Paul Klee's "Parade of Fools" but at least the title was in German.

One additional example of art-in-industry comes to mind. The Container Corporation of America has commissioned a large number of artists (including Shahn and Lionni) to illustrate a series called "The Great Ideas of Western Man." Each artist chooses a famous quotation and interprets it as he wishes. CCA then purchases full-color, whole-page "ads" in mass-circulated periodicals to reproduce the paintings and quotations. But there is no "copy." Just a tag-line: the Container Corporation of America.

We are beginning to feel that the future of American art might be in safe hands after all.

FACULTY SHOULD HELP CHOOSE PREXY: LAWLER

By STAFF WRITER

An FSU professor this week expressed the hope that faculty will be allowed a voice in the selection of a ew president.

ace of education, told the Florida Eugene B. Lawler, profes- Flambeau in an interview that "the members of the staff are the people who are most concerned so far as their personal lives are concerned.

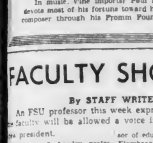
President of the Florida State University branch of the American Association of University Professors, Dr. Lawler said, "I, personally, would be very hopeful that the members of the staff should have some influence on the selection of the president."

Dr. Lawler said they "are in the best position to know the sorts of competence needed by a president."

CONTROL BOARD CHOOSES

Choice of a new FSU president to succeed Dr. Doak S. Campbell is in the hands of the Board of Control. Dr. Campbell told the board last month that he intends to resign at the end of the current fiscal year, June 30, 1957.

Queried as to how the board could anscrupulously allow the staff a voice in the selection, Dr. Lawler replied that singling out a specific method would be a bit of a problem." But he added, "I think they considered the staff" in the selection last year of P.ovost of Agriculture J. Wayne Reitz to succeed President W. Hillis Miller as the University of Florida.



Dr. Lawler said specific means would "depend on what the Board of Control cares to allow the faculty to do. If it cares to do so, it can go off into a corner and choose whom it pleases without reference to anyone else."

He continued, "As I understand it, their choice has to be approved only by the State Board of Education. It does not seem that the being intelligent men, would choose someone with whom the staff of the institution would not cooperate."

Explaining his views on the qu..... of a good university president he said "So far as I am concerned, the characterization of a good president as an appreciation of the function of research and research in our modern society, a human touch in working with people, a knowledge of the techniques of administration, and an ability to interpret the needs of the institution to the Legislature and to the people of the state."

Dr. Lawler said that the selection of a new FSU president "is a matter of great importance, because of our being in a period when great growth is going around the corner and when educational needs of many different kinds are clamoring to be met."

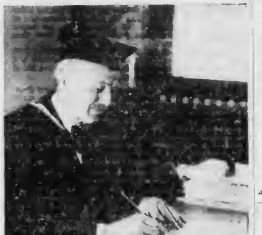
Of Conradi Building

Dedication Set Tomorrow

The new biological sciences building valued at $750,000 will be dedicated tomorrow morning in the late Dr. Edward Conradi, who was president of Florida State College for Women, FSU's predecessor, from 1909 to 1941.



The ceremonies will begin at 10 a.m. in the new structure on West Call Street, first used last semester.

Edward Ehrenmyer, of Tallahassee, a grandson of the late president, will unveil a plaster bas relief portrait made by Rudolph Jegart, associate professor of art. A bronze finished plaque will eventually replace the plaster model.

Miss Agnes Granberry Chalker, an alumna of Orange Park, will give an Appreciation of Dr. Edward Conradi by an Alumna"; Dr. William G. Dodd, dean emeritus of the College of Arts and Sciences, will speak on an appreciation of Dr. Conrad. as a colleague, and Dr. Edna M. Devine, will speak from the viewpoint of a faculty member.

James J. Love of Quincy, a member of the Board of Control, will accept Jezard's portrait for the state. Dr. Edwin Hetrick, chemistry, will give a dedicatory prayer.

Dr. Conradi, born in New Bremen, Ohio, in 1869 was a school principal in St. Petersburg before he accepted the FSCW presidency in 1909.

Tampa Realizes Value Of Four-Year University

Pinellas County's bitter and unsuccessful struggle to have the proposed four-year state university located there demonstrates the value of a university to an area.

The people of Pinellas realized that having a university within their county would produce many intangible benefits, more benefits than simply having such an institution nearby. The Board of Control's $100,000 survey to find future education needs in Florida showed that a four-year university should be built in the Tampa-St. Petersburg area, but that only started a prolonged squabble: who should get the institution?

Debate over the matter was finally ended by the board last week when it declared that Hillsborough County (Tampa) should be the recipient of the university. But it was an acrid pill for Pinellas to swallow. The county had good reason to want a four-year institution of higher learning.

A town, or a county's, whole complexion can be changed by a university. Physically, the presence of a university adds the beauty of a carefully landscaped campus, the impressive beauty of statuesque buildings, the vibrance and youth of a university population. It adds a measure of culture, a dash of entertainment, and, perhaps, a bit of enlightenment.

Taking Florida State University as a case in point, the entertainment and vibrancy could not be more clearly demonstrated than with this 1956 Homecoming. For at least a weekend, Tallahassee is going to enjoy itself.

Some of the intangible benefits of a university are a little more difficult to evaluate. Tallahassee, a county seat, state capital and location of many federal agencies, is more than amply blessed with institutional benefits—but few would deny, for instance, that FSU's cultural offerings are appreciated.

It is true that the football stadium is the house of many wonders to quite a few Tallahassseens. But there are numerous citizens who attend such events as speech department plays, student musical events, faculty musical recitals, addresses and organizational extravaganzas. Many appreciate the unique advantage of the university frequency-modulated radio station.

When Tampa's new university is built, the people of that city will reap the same advantages Tallahassseans have. It is to their credit that they have realized this.

Faculty Deserve Consideration In Choice Of New President

We agree with the thought expressed recently by Board of Control Chairman Dr. Ralph L. Miller that "promotional publicity" aimed at boosting an individual for the Florida State University presidency is unwise.

In making his statement, Dr. Miller apparently referred to public demonstrations and news leaks such as characterized the board's quest for a new president for the University of Florida last year. He said such promotion "will not be helpful and may be harmful to the candidate."

The truth is, however, that certain groups have direct interest in the selection of the new FSU president. The faculty are notable in this respect.

We feel in agreement with Dr. Eugene Lawler, president of the campus chapter of the American Association of University Professors, that the faculty should be given a voice in the presidency assignment.

While the Board of Control is justified in seeking to work out its problems unmolested, it still should consider the thoughts of those who have something constructive to say.

The faculty is composed of men who know first-hand the problems of education and how to deal with them. They know the qualities that go into the making of a fine institution.

Granted that the new president must have the ability to get along amicably, indeed, successfully with the political forces that bear on higher education, Bill, his major requirement should be sufficient knowledge and ability in the actual process of instilling knowledge in students so that he can direct an organization designed for this function.

We feel that the faculty is entirely justified in seeking to express its viewpoint in this important undertaking. It would seem unreasonable that the Board of Control would think otherwise.

The Threepenny Critic

Hoffman To Present Recital

By RYAN EDWARDS

Believe it or not when we make our next appearance in the Flambeau, we will finally have something to review. In order to insure at least threepence worth of readership, and also in order to support the news we have loudly proclaimed for the last two Fridays, we would like to give this concert event a little advance publicity—and after our usual fashion it will probably occasion a few debatable generalities.

This event is the senior recital of Miss Anne Hoffman, piano major in the School of Music. A student of Mary Bolser Winslow her program will include a Bach Prelude and Fugue, the beethoven Sonata, Opus 31 No 2 (one of the popular choices on Mr. Kleinzy's recent plethon- a array of Brahms' small pieces, and the Fantasie, the Rhapsodie, and the Albercdo del gracioso of Ravel.

ALTHOUGH such an inviting program should certainly be enough to assure Miss Hoffman an ample attendance in view of the usual attendance at such events, we feel prompted to comment upon her past performances. She has always seemed to us a thoroughly individual and rewarding pianist. Every action from the time she first spears on the edge of the stage until she flashes her instantaneous smile in appreciation of the audience's applause bespeaks her deeply personal involvement with music. Always a thorough and intense musician, when she has the happy fortune to find a piece which seems especially allied to her temperamenty, such as the Bach B flat Partita or the Schubert A major Sonata, the result is a rare experience.

And of course all of her performances are artists presented by the Music School have similar experiences to offer. So how ridiculous it is that the student body hasn't discovered this. How ridiculous it is that, in a large and comparatively awake university, these things must be pointed out!

HOWEVER we are off our soap-box for a moment. Mr. Manley Whitcomb informed us the other day of a fact that belies at least a little of our complaint concerning cultural inhanse apparent around here. It seems that the Marching Chiefs are planning to be invited to play in New York City during their forthcoming trip northward. That should provide time enough for one visit to the Museum of the Empire State Building or some such valuable experience.

But where are most of the Marching Chiefs going to spend two or three hours of their day in the city? At Carnegie Hall, hearing the New York Philharmonic.

This shouldn't be unusual of course but let's face it. that 90 members of a marching band visit the New York Philharmonic Symphony the big city' most valuable attraction was not to be expected, by members!

AND NOW to get back on that perennial soap-box, we might point out that we have never seen 90 members of the Marching Chiefs at an FSU recital. If they're really as interested in music as they say, New York isn't any more so indeed she'll show up in areat numbers at Anne Hoffman's recital Monday night, October 20 at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

Along with great numbers of other smart students!

"What Ever Came Of All That Talk of Atomic Power?"

The Dissenter

Bigness Is Bewildering

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Three years have gone by somewhat as rapidly as a vivid sunset fades before you can quite appreciate it.

It has not been many months since that crisp and cool September morning when my class awoke to the first day of orientation week.

But it has also been forever, in another respect. It just isn't the same university.

The enrollment then was less than 6000; West Hall wasn't full, and seven buildings in the Main group today were somehow done without.

It might just have been freshman naivete, but there seemed to be a spirit of unity at Florida State University that is lacking today.

THAT WAS the last year freshmen paid attention to Rat Caps and the last season intercollegiate football stemmed from their hearts.

would have been just that athletics were divorced from school pride, because athletics were becoming a business here as they had on other campuses, but school spirit proved not to be a Phoenix: it has never arisen from the ashes

FSU HAS branched out into a thousand too many directions and placed emphasis on far too many things for one to feel personally attached to the school as a whole The bandman does not feel akin to the publications staffer, the baking scorner student mails well wonder what the Department of Secretarial Science is, the mighty artistic works of man and the results of centuries of social study are put into pre-digested courses the student can take to satisfy in a hurry the general requirement for Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science

FSU's own version of the cult of conformity is the cult of specialisation. Of course, many other schools are similarly afflicted And the universities may rightly maintain standards of scientific research and artistic achievement. One cannot, in a world as complex as ours, criticize the university for grasping the scientific technology, family relations, travel management, and a touch of Hollywood within its lived walls.

BUT HERE practicality and emotion clash; things must be big but we wish they were not. The student who is so inclined can still obtain a fine education, but he feels bewildered amidst the bigness. The Alma Mater is no longer his; he wonders if it knows he exists.

With the inevitability of the coming of the seasons, the women's residence hall staffs hold fire drills, and they can be quite inconvenient. we are told.

* * *

It seems that West and Senior halls cannot burn; Masnolia Hall has real fires too frequently to hold fire drills; and God watches over the fraternities.

* * *

The closing of Kahler's will mean longer lines and larger crowds at the Meece and Sweet Shop, and of course in the university cafeterias at breakfast and lunch. But there are some whose fate is of genuine concern.

* * *

Those whose lives are just immobile, hour after hour, in the booths and at the tables They almost never have food or drink before them; seldom are they seen to speak, their feet don't beat time to the juke box, and the crowds surge around them as if they were stone breakwaters.

Who shall volunteer to carry them next door?

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Bibler

Calling The Card

Better Spirit Needed

DEAR ARNOLD,

There is a feature that is conspicuously absent from the pages of the Flambeau this year, as I imagine you have noticed. I surely miss the antics of the colleaate comic strip character, "Arnold." I don't suppose he's any relation to you, since actually the brainchild of Bill Johnson of the Associated College Press

Arnold consistently finds himself in a situation not of own making, and after becoming thoroughly embroiled in three small blocks, wanders off muttering to himself some verse but apropos, comment about the situation

In arrnold's honor I'd like to bring his name broadly to mind today, this first day of the homecoming festivities.

In the strip I have in mind, Arnold is full of the old school spirit. As he waves his flag for "dear old Clutchmoor," he shouts "Yipee" It's pepfest time at Clutchmoor! And am I peppy! Cr ... Cevall!" and runs off to cheer and scream the boys of old Clutchmoor on to victory.

AS ARNOLD runs off waving his pennant, a conversation the background between Betty Coed and Joe College goes on. "Are you going to the pepfest?"

"No. I have tired blood."

As Arnold disappears on the scene, ready to wave his pennant "with the how-ling mob." he finds the pepfest deamerased into card game between the cheerleaders, who are the only ones present. He wanders off in the last block, saying to himself, "Jin, I'm embarrassed. I'd forotten the current fad is 'Cynical apathy' toward everything school spirit." Sick."

THIS IS brought to mind, as I said before, by the sala occasion that is upon us. Floats, house decorations, banquets, bonfires, Pow-wow, and the football game are all a part of what is to be the grandest weekend in the year. Les Brown and the new gym add to the color. School spirit will be at its highest as the alums revisit and find thnas still a little more different than the last time they were here. But school spirit doesn't end at a football game. That is just its beginning.

I HOPE YOU' don't think I'm being naive or blindly arrogant on this matter, but I think it a matter of importance to both of us and to the student body as a whole. School spirit is not just a matter of noisy outlet for emotional tensions. It is an expression of pride in the institution you support and

It's not confined to the hollering at football games. It includes the ability to control your conduct in such a way as to merit it. It includes being conscientious about assignments for particular class. Probably most important, it includes conducting yourself in an honest and intercurous manner in all your dealings on the campus, living by the Honor System in all contacts

Unless a person sincerely tries to live up to the virtues placed in him by the people of the State of Florida in providing this institution, he has no school spirit. He has no place here

I hope you don't think I'm preaching, but I feel that what we need is not more school spirit, but a better one. Let's not be overdegenerate to the point where we in the case of our sister institution, the newspapers make specific reference to our apathy.

HOPEFULLY,
JIM

We heartily feel that the editor's statement, "low newa value of some of the material," is an inadequate description of Columnist Dyckman's articles. If anything, it is unfounded flattery

Poetic Baubles

Ed. Note: The following was handed to us, evidently with the theory that it is somewhat appropriate for Homecoming Weekend. We trust it brought additional gems of intellect from those who think it effemaire, truthful or aberure.

"AWAKENING"

Soothing darkness clings, but fliers,
An amber blade alears the mantle night.
Its edge carves silhouettes above the mist
And moves the fields of yellow grain.
Warily it knifes beneath the shades
And brilliantly stabs the pitiful form of man.
An independent eye, scarlet streaked, acknowledges it.
A lid of burning ash grates it out of view.
A heavy lump of saue scrapes mucous teeth;
A wumpirine and stnz strays about its blooted chamber;
Limbs twitch in timid revulsion.
And an acrobatic stomach proves its gymnastic caliber.
A fetid breath belies its human origin.
The golden stiletto pierces into memory.
Reluctant and ashamed, it bares the night's revel.
That bred this soul's sore journey into living Hell.

New Hobby Discovered

By OSCAR JOHNSON

FROM A CASUAL observation it would appear that the hobbies of bird-watching, clock-watching and other such activities may be going out the window

That is if the clocks will go out the window rathahead some students believe in this upon waking up for their 8 o'clock classes they will, apparently, bring their birds right out the window. But both may soon be replaced by an even more interesting recreation: satellite watching

The fact is satellite watching is closer, both in time and space, than you might think For example, the Florida State University satellite watchers have already held their first meeting

THE SPONSOR of this now-organized group, Dr. Alex R. B. Green, said that although launching of the first earth satellite is not scheduled until next year, practice sessions will begin this fall. He wants all students with binoculars or telescopes to help now. Just how satellites look as an attraction is easy, Jennie Murphree or Cawthon halls or (scan it be?) West Hall is in doubt, but the watching of satellites is shaping up as an important activity.

IT WAS only in September that the United States and the Soviet Union agreed to cooperate in their plans to send artificial satellites soaring around the earth. Previously, their nonmilitary plans had sometimes led to the fallacy that there might be something to the implied threats in the "first-to-the-Moon" stories of pulp science fiction.

Now it appears that when "Vanguard" is launched from its home at Cocoa Florida, people the world over will receive equal benefit.

SCIENTISTS WHO'RE working on the first "basketball" would like to see more and bigger satellites, which should make for increased interest in the new hobby It is not inconceivable that persons should begin vieing for the right to have their names memorialized on the sources of all the records, for the world to see.

It would seem that the youna man out to make a million miaht learn a lesson from the current activity. By hitching his wagon to a satellite thrush investment in telescope and binoculars stocks, he could get in on the ground floor of the big new space hobby.

HOW TO DO IT—Cotillion president Janice Grossler and Wallace Yeager, left couple and Cavalier president Jim Julian and Paula Parsons, right couple, demonstrate a step at dancing lesson in the Student Center. The women's and men's dancing seminaries sponsor the lessons at 7:30 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday.

Chief Declares
Cops Guard Students

By DAVE FLETCHER

Despite the popular opinion that campus police only enforce University traffic regulations, one of their main functions is to protect students.

Campus Police Chief Lee Cassaus, in an interview, said his officers sometimes do have to "keep the more boisterous students from harming themselves and the community."

In addition to this task, other duties are performed by the men, he pointed out. Security patrols, involving the tedious routine of checking all University property and buildings during the night, require a major part of the officers' time. The regulation and control of traffic is another sizable problem. The handling of large crowds, such as are found at football games and at social events, both on and off campus, falls under their jurisdiction.

INFIRMARY TRIPS

Police cars are available for emergency infirmary calls, Chief Cassaus also reminded, and officers are required to be present at fires occurring on university property.

When asked why policemen on campus wear guns, Assistant Police Chief Morris Lawton stated "It would be foolish to assign men to enforce regulations without providing them with a means of protection." The weapons, however, are rarely used.

Enforcement agencies are not unique on college and university campuses.

According to Cassaus,us, the FSU force once consisted of one man, whose duties were chiefly those of a night watchman when he came to the University in 1930.

In 1932 the school, then the Florida State College for Women, appointed Cassaus,us its first day officer and he was sworn in as a deputy sheriff.

S IN 1938

By 1938 the force had grown to include one more day and two night officers. Uniforms were issued to the men in the latter part of '38. In 1945 came the appointment of Cassaus,us to the position of Chief of a force of 16 men, and the school became Florida State University the following year.

The influx of veterans in 1946-47 caused quite a bit of work for the newly reorganized force, but the students slowly settled into normal college routine. Police cars were first used on the campus in 1947, and the police radio was added a year later. The present police force includes 17 regular officers and two student police assistants.

NEW LIFE FOR OLD INDUSTRY

The Conecticut Daily Campus reports this one: It seems there's been a boom in the sale of mustache wax lately. Since that item hasn't been overly popular since the days of Teddy Roosevelt, manufacturers started checking back and traced the increased sales to the least expected place, the college campus. America's clean-shaved college youth are now buying the product, but not for the purpose for which it was originally intended. Undergraduates, after adopting the crew cut, couldn't make their hair bristle. Then, some wise fellow remembered great grandpa, and found that nothing will stiffen a crescent better than good, old-fashioned mustache wax. Result: New life for the makers of mustache wax.

Cavalier-Cotillion Teach
Dancing Lessons Get Record Turnout

Three times as many students as in past years are taking free dance classes given by Cotillion and Cavalier, Jim Julian, Cavalier president, announced.

Cavalier and Cotillion, the corresponding women's social fraternities honorary, are teaching about 85 in Tuesday and Thursday night classes at the Student Center. Last year a member, explained, 28 was the average turnout.

Men, usually stubbornly set against taking the first phase, are now coming to beginners' classes in greater numbers, Julian added.

Each of the two clubs has 30 members and picks more after the six-week course given each semester. The selections are based on ability, appearance, and character.

"Although we expect to take in about 15 members each, there is no set number and we will use as many as measure up to the qualifications," Julian commented.

Cavalier and Cotillion have scheduled several dances and contests for the year.

Job Surplus Seen For Students Here

There are more available jobs than students seeking to fill them, the Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement said yesterday.

Ralph Bolzer, counselor, said typists, particularly those who can take dictation are needed.

He added that it is hoped to establish a list of students who would be interested in sporadic part-time employment, as for instance, waiting upon banquet tables.

THIS IS LIVING?

"ACP—The University of Texas was faced with quite a problem this fall. It seems that it will put more dormitory space contracts than there were available rooms. As a result, 16 students showed up with contracts, only to find that they didn't have a room. Since that time, they've been living in the dormitory hallways. University officials indicated the extra contracts were mailed because some room cancellations were expected. As of September 22, those cancellations had not materialized and the students were still in the halls.

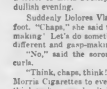
FAYE ANTHONY, ON '55 COURT, NOW ATTENDING AUBURN



Where is Faye Anthony who, as a junior, was in the Homecoming court last year?

The blonde, blue-eyed winner of campus beauty titles such as "Miss FSU" and "Miss Gym-Kana" is attending Auburn on a full scholarship granted her by the national Grand Council of Pi Beta Phi.

Faye was selected by the Grand Council this summer to organize a new province chapter at the Alabama university and serve as its president.

Last year she served as local Pi Phi vice-president. During her three years here she copped honors as Military Ball Homecoming, and Junior-Senior Prom court member.

She was also Maid of Cotton runner-up, Miss Kansas City Athletics, and Orange Bowl princess.

THE SEARCH FOR BRIDEY SIGAFOOS

It was a delilah evening at the Theta house. Mary Ellen Kimball was sticking an effigy of the house mother; Evelyn Zinsmaster was welding a manhole cover to her charm bracelet; Algelica McKeesport was writing a letter to Elvis Presley in blood. Like I say, it was a dullish evening.

Suddenly Dolores Vladnay stood up and stamped her foot. "Chaps," she said to her sorors, "this is too yawn-making! Let's do something gay and mad and wild and different and gasp-making. Anybody got an idea?"

"No," said the sorors, shaking their little sausage curls.

"Think, chaps, think!" said Dolores and passed Philip Morris Cigarettes to everybody, and if there ever was a think-making smoke, it is today's fresh and zestful and yummy Philip Morris. Things come clear when you puff a good, clean, natural Philip Morris — knots untie, dilemmas dissolve, problems evaporate, cobwebs vanish, fog disperses, and the benevolent sun pours radiance on a new and dewy world. Oh, happy world! Oh, Philip Morris! Oh, regular! Oh, long-size! Oh, get some already!

"One, two, three,"

Now Geraldine Quidnunc, her drooping brain-cells revivified by a good Philip Morris, leapt up and cried, "Oh, I have a perfect passel of an idea! Let's hypnotize somebody!"

"Oh, capital!" cried the sorors. "Oh, tingle-making!"

"Yes," said Dolores Vladnay, "it is a splendid idea, but hypnosis requires a pliant and malleable mind, and we are all so strong and well-adjusted."

At this point, in walked a young gledge named Alice Bluegown. "Excuse me, mistresses," said she, "I have finished making your beds, doing your homework, and ironing your pleats. Will there be anything else?"

"Yes," snapped Dolores Vladnay. "When I count to three, you will be hypnotized."

"Yes, excellency," said Alice, bobbing a curtsey.

"One, two, three," said Dolores.

Alice prompty went into a trance.

"Go back," said Dolores. "Go back to your fifth birthday, back to your birth, to before your birth, to your last incarnation. . . . Now, who are you?"

"My name is Bridey Sigafoos," said Alice. "The year is 1418, and I am in County Cork."

"Coo!" said the sorors.

"How old are you?" asked Dolores.

"I am seven," said Alice.

"Where is your mother?" asked Dolores.

"She got sold at the fair last year."

"Coo!" said the sorors.

"Tell us about yourself," said Dolores.

"I am five feet tall," said Alice. "I have brown eyes, and weigh 3200 pounds."

"Coo!" said the sorors.

"Isn't that rather heavy for a girl?" said Dolores.

"Who's a girl?" said Alice. "I'm a black and white guernsey."

"Coo!" said the sorors.

"Moo!" said Bridey Sigafoos.

Tally-Ho $1 Charge 'Necessary, Practical'

Charging a dollar registration fee to students who want to get the Tally-Ho but do not have their pictures taken is a necessary and practical procedure, according to yearbook editor Barbara Ayala.

She said that in past years many students did not pick up available yearbooks, leaving the staff burdened with a costly and wasteful surplus.

The present method, she said, provides a larger, better annual for those who want them."

Only as many copies as are needed to meet the demand are printed.

The practice of charging a registration fee, Miss Ayala said, is not unusual. Some schools follow this practice while others sell yearbooks on a subscription basis, costing between $10 and $15 each, she commented.

The dollar charge will not add appreciably to the Tally-Ho budget, the editor said, because the total budget is $22-000, obtained from student activity fees and advertising. The cost of one annual is between $11 and $12.

Miss Ayala asked that students planning to graduate in February should notify the Tally-Ho office of their forwarding addresses so that copies can be mailed to them in the spring.

Books Reserved Until Tuesday

Copies of the 1956 Tally-Ho will be held through Tuesday for students who reserved them last year, current editor Barbara Ayala announced.

Those including students who did not and their pictures taken or who reserved to receive copies, she explained.

Hours for distribution will be Mondays and Tuesday from 2 to 5 p.m. in the men's day student lounge of Lonumire, Miss Ayala said. Beginning at 8 a.m. Wednesday unclaimed copies will be given to students on a first-come first-served basis.

When it set up the picture-or-no-pic requirement Tally-Ho explained it would allow them to print only as many copies as would be needed, and thus stay within a budget.

New Library Dedication Set Nov. 9, 10

Library and Library School dedications are slated for the weekend of November 9 and 10 beginning at 2:30 p.m. that Friday.

Florida State University President Doak S. Campbell will preside over the ceremony which will take place on the library terrace, weather permitting, while Quincy Mumford, Director of the Library of Congress, will give the dedication address.

Follow-at the formal ceremony at which Robert Lawrence Geiler, Secretary of the American Library Association Committee on Accreditation, will also speak, a reception and open house will be held at the library.

Other events of the week-end include a pot luck dinner in the Suwannee Room, a Sibelius concert by the University Symphony, and a panel discussion by the visiting dignities.

United Nations Panel Set Here Tuesday

The International Club will hold a panel discussion Tuesday on a subject "appropriate for United Nations Day, October 24," according to president Juan Lopez.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Lonsmire Student Lounge.

Poll Shows

Majority Of Students Approve Integration

By JERRY FLEMING

Slightly more than 72 percent of Florida State University students indicated last year they would either accept desegregation as if there had been no change of policy or would endeavor to make integration work, according to statistics of an extensive poll made by the Board of Control.

This reaction differed less than one percent with the sentiments of University of Florida students.

The questionnaires, designed to gaither the feelings on every facet of desegregation, were sent to the students, alumni, faculties, and health service personnel of the three state universities, and to parents of the students.

Approximately 20 percent of FSU students who answered said they would drop out of school or transfer to a segregated college if Negroes were admitted. Only 14 percent of the Gainesville student body specified these feelings.

A smaller percentage of FSU students favored immediate admission of Negroes than of the University of Florida students—17 to 22.39 percent.

However, 46.30 percent of local students favored integration after a "reasonable period of preparation" while only 41.45 percent of U of F students expressed that opinion.

MORE INTEREST

FSU students showed slightly more interest in the integration question than those of the University of Florida. Of the questionnaires mailed out, FSU returned 8.22 percent against 75.31 percent for U of F.

Similar polls of the parents of university students drew much smaller returns — 67.44 percent for FSU and 46.81 percent for U of F. Alumni returns were equally low—48.46 percent for FSU and 83.86 percent for U of F.

The greatest response came from the faculties of each school. FSU faculty members returned 90.91 percent of the questionnaires contrasted to 86.76 for the University of Florida.

ALUMNI NEGATIVE

Florida State alumni did not favor immediate integration or integration after a period of preparation as much as the student body. Students favoring immediate integration were 17 percent; alumni, 12.99 percent. Students save integration after a period of preparation 46.30 percent to the alumni's 32.19 percent.

Alumni were stronger than the student body in rejecting integration under any circumstances —29.92 percent to 21.13 percent.

FACULTY FAVORABLE

The faculty feelings in favor of integration were stronger than those of any group polled. Immediate admittance of Negroes was advocated by 35.8 percent of the faculty and admittance after a period of preparation by 48.98 percent. Only 2.54 percent of the faculty felt that Negroes should not be admitted.

FLAMBEAU SPORTS

Alan Whitmarsh

Grid Status Is Rising

Way back in 1902, Florida State College defeated Florida Agricultural College in football, by the overwhelming margin of 6-0.

Now, that may not seem tremendously significant to you as a reader, but before you throw away the paper, let me tell you that was the beginning of football at Florida State.

However, the year after that, this noble institution became the Florida State College for Women, and skirts replaced football uniforms as the popular campus attire.

Few of the men who played on that 1902 team could foresee that today those two institutions would be the University of Florida (Fla. Agricultural College) and Florida State University.

Doubtless, none of them expected that 54 years later, before October 20, 1956, Florida State would meet Wake Forest on the gridiron.

In fact, very few of those men could see nine years ago that FSU and Wake Forest would ever meet on a football field.

No, the fact is, in the past nine years Florida State has made more progress in the publicity-minded world of football than any school in the country.

And they're not stopping here.

CLEMSON ADDED

The addition of Clemson to the tentative 1958 football slate leaves the Seminoles with a schedule which includes Wake Forest, Miami, Georgia, FLORIDA, and Auburn.

Next year, Abilene Christian returns to the schedule after a two-year absence. It was not an unhappy absence though for the Wildcats bounced the Tribe 13-0 in 1954 and 20-7 in 1953.

There are many who dispute the value of football, but none who can dispute the fact that a promising football team can boost the publicity of a university than any other agency.

There are even those who go all the way and say that football is practically the only value of football.

There was a time when the grand old gridiron sport was played strictly for enjoyment.

Then such men as Knute Rockne, Red Blaik and Bud Wilkinson began building their gridiron powerhouses and the wise fathers of their respective institutions discovered that a good football team can do much to put a school in the headlines.

For years ago, if you mentioned to a New York sports writer that you go to FSU, he might have asked you, "What's that, a disease."

However, we understand that last Christmas in a certain New York scandal sheet, that the Seminoles got some kind of a paragraph story complete with box score on a basketball contest with NYU in the Orange Bowl Arena.

This indeed is making great strides publicity-wise. To venture to say that there is even a possibility that FSU's forthcoming grid battle with Villanova (in Philadelphia Oct. 27) may even get a mention in the New York publicity sheets, and certainly quite a lot of mention in the Philadelphia dailies.

However, before some rash individual starts picking the Tribe to go unbeaten and lead the nation in one of the next two or three years, perhaps we'd better check on just if we're going to a solid football team to back the publicity with.

BEST IN SOUTH?

Indications are that in two years, maybe three, the Seminoles will be able to match most any football outfit in the Southeast point for point.

Repeated quotes from Tom Nugent have indicated that this year's Freshman team is undoubtedly the strongest the Seminoles have ever fielded.

Their games are recorded elsewhere on this page, but it suffices to say here that they will provide more than a little bolstering to next year's varsity returnees.

There are only a few truly outstanding players that there seems to be no more Bobby Renns among them.

A prime example of the growing status of Florida State in the realm of major college football came this week, as quarterback Lee Corso was named the back of the week in the country by the International News Service.

Two or three years ago, we daresay that a Florida State back would have to perform superhuman efforts to be named back of the week by anybody.

No, as one of the nation's major powers, and so aptly put this summer, "the Seminoles are moving along at a pleasing pace and the time will come when they won't have to call anybody mister."

That time may come sooner than anybody expects.

ABOUT WAKE FOREST

Switching to the main theme of Seminole sports at the moment, tomorrow's game will likely see the Tribesmen underdog for the third straight week.

Just the same, Wake Forest's Deacons haven't burned up any football gridirons since their first game of the season, and it seems quite a bet that they'll do it tomorrow in Doak S. Campbell stadium.

However, undoubtedly the stadium turf (and perhaps one or two Seminoles) will suffer somewhat from the ramblings of one Bill Barnes, Deacon fullback.

Barnes ranks 10th in the country in total offense according to the latest NCAA statistics, having rolled up 402 yards in the first four games of the season, three of which Wake Forest has lost.

The Deacons can also cause Nugent a little grey hair with their aerial game, mainly due to the passing antics of quarterback Charlie Carpenter.

Wake Forest coaches are claiming that Carpenter is the best passer the folks up that way have seen in some time.

Well, we've picked the Seminoles to win once and lost, and we chose 'em to lose and they won. What can you do? Here we go again.

Florida State 21, Wake Forest 8.

Tribe Ready For Another Scalp

Big Teams Seen In Tribe's Future

In the next two years, Florida State University's football team will attempt a giant step—a giant step which they hope will vault them into the elite circles of southern football.

The 1957 and 1958 schedules are loaded with some of the strongest football teams in the South, including the three sternest in recent years, Georgia Tech, Auburn and the University of Miami.

A win over any of these three teams would provide that push that will make the Seminoles of Tom Nugent a "tab" team in southern football circles.

In addition, the Tribe will play many of the teams on this and next year's schedule, including Villanova, Georgia, Ohio University, North Carolina State and Virginia Tech.

Looking ahead to next year, the Tribal attack line returns intact with the exception of graduating guard Al Pacifico, but there will be some holes in the backfield array.

There are plenty of hopefuls for Pacifico's spot on hand on the varsity and, the fresh, but there's no replacement as yet for Corso, Joe Hall and Buck Klotz who were a number starter.

The backfield and probable the whole Seminole offense will be built around Fullback Bobby Renn of Henderson, N.C., a boy still has two years of football left after this season.

Ray Pinna returns at quarterback but the surprise among returning prospects may be Joe Majors, a transfer from the University of Alabama.

Along with Renn, Stan Dobost, Bidy Weaver, and Eddie Johnson are the backs returning likely to see the most action next year.

However, there are a few outstanding backfield prospects on the freshman team, particularly Don Hill and Allen Smith who have performed at times from some Seminole coaches.

TWO DUP

Up front Nugent finds himself two deep at every position in the line with outstanding to the end stop including Ronnie Schoonmaker and Bob Neiuma.

Schoonmaker and Neiuma have been referred to by Nugent as two of the best centers in the South, and they will be backed up by Gerald Philip Bob Pounds and Jim Arnold.

The two veteran ends may have their hands full taking the starting position away from freshmen end Tony Rennella when Nugent names as the outstanding fresh prospect at any position.

Romeo and John Spivey of Panama City form a duo at the guard post that is the envy of many a breakaway into the clear with surprising quickness.

There are five returning tackles including starters George Bever and Bill Musselman. Tony Peasley, Don Roberts, and James Bryant are the three best Frosh tackle prospects.

With Pacifico and Fred Leonard who has also worked at center, there may be a slight shortage at guard. Leo Razzetti returns however, and there are a few top-notch frosh prospects pleasing for advancement.

The starting center, Trov Barnes, will also be back next season, but experience behind him is likely to be extremely limited. Paul Slaton is the outstanding center on the Frosh.

"We've got to add some manpower somewhere if we're going to continue in this fast league," Nugent admits, "and we hope some of it can come from the Freshmen."

"Our line will probably be just as strong as this year's, but we'll have to practically start from scratch on the starting backfield next year," he said.

"We know the schedule is just as tough or tougher than this year's," he continued. "If we can get a little rest between the big games, we're going to cause somebody some trouble."

Though the 1957 schedule will not be released for some months yet, it is known that Abilene Christian is on the slate, plus many of this year's opponents.

Then these that Florida game. It's a date that the Seminoles have been pointing at for a year now.

THE TIGER. Tony Romeo is tabbed by coach Tom Nugent as the outstanding frosh at any position on the Freshman squad. Romeo hails from Tampa and was an All-America high school player.

Intramural News

The campus tennis tournaments got off to an interesting start this week with the PDT-LCA doubles match and the TC-PEP doubles match furnishing the highlights.

LCA best PDT 6-3 the first set then lost the next two 6-4 and 7-5. TC won 6-2, lost the next 6-2, and won the 8-6 set. Sok KA 6-2, 6-3 ATO best SC 6-2, 6-4.

In the Dorm doubles the West Hall Freaks beat the Yets Club 6-2, 6-2. Magnolia Hall won from the West Hall Playboys 6-3, 6-4. Murrelle Hall's umpire man also beat the Playboys 6-0, 6-3, and the Methodists beat the Yets 6-0, 6-1.

Play continues daily at 3:30. Monday's schedule will report the recommendations for playing rules for the season which begins in early December.

A proposal to add wrestling and rifle to the program will also be on the agenda.

Tribe Away Play For 100,000 Fans

Florida State University's football team will play before their biggest crowd ever next Saturday when they meet the Villanova Wildcats in Philadelphia.

Because of a grocery store tieup, sales campaign, Villanova plays almost all of its home games before a crowd of 90 000 or 100,000 fans.

It will be the third meeting between FSU and Villanova. The Tribe beat Villanova 52-13 in 1953.

Receipts from the game will go to help the Olympic fund-raising drive to send American athletes to the Olympics in Melbourne, Australia.

NOTICE

Coach Tom Nugent announces that there is an opening for any ex-football player, or anyone else that is interested, to coach a Little League football team in Tallahassee.

Anyone interested in the position is asked to contact the sports editor of the Flambeau in Conner Hall or Coach Nugents office at the football stadium for further information.

BACK OF THE WEEK. Lightning Lee Corso, named as the top back in the nation by International News Service, goes around left end for yardage against the Virginia Tech Gobblers as the Tribe bowed to VPI 20-7.

Varsity Tracksters Paced By 14 Lettermen; Weak In Spots

The 1957 version of the Florida State track team will be paced by 14 returning lettermen, including the three top scorers from last year's team.

Track Coach Mike Long stated, "In past years we have generally tried to maintain balance, but this year we will have a definite weakness in the sprints and distances, both will bust us in the records."

Jack Terwilliger, a junior, will again be counted on to lead the team. In freshman, Jack was second in scoring honors behind all-time FSU great Carles Pranzarlorier.

Last year Terwilliger was named outstanding in the 100, 220, and 440 events to lead the team in scoring in every meet. Terwilliger has times of 9.9 in the 100, 21.3 in the 220, and 49.8 in the 440.

Vying for high scoring honors again with Terwilliger is senior Joe Davis. Davis was second high scorer last year, his specialties being the broad jump and the low hurdles.

The one hope is the distance for FSU lies in miler Mike Cosby. Cosby placed second in the Fla. AAU last year with a time of 4:21.3 or 6 seconds below the existing school record, however it wasn't official because he wasn't the winner of the race.

Help from the freshman track team is Pobby Bynson, high scorer of the Frosh and third place winner in the Fla. AAU broad jump.

Bryson is figured to be a key man in the race for high point man as he has good potential in the 100 and 220 yard dash in addition to being able to broad jump 21 feet.

Also up to help out the varsity will be Dovie Ruff in the 440, Don Turner, pole vault and Tommy Chivers in the hurdles.

Outstanding hopefuls for this year's freshman team are Emory Denmark, winner of the state 880 yard event, from Winter Haven; Charles Nye an Orlando boy who has been clocked in 10.5 for the 440 and Bobby Hurley, a transfer from Auburn who has done twelve feet.

On tap for the FSU trackmen will be meets against Miami, Furman, Florida, and a triangular meet against Georgia and Georgia Tech.

During the winter season a few of the top track prospects will be taken to the Atlantic Coast Conference Track Meet in North Carolina, and possibly to the Penn Relays in Philadelphia.

FSU, Deacons Meet Tomorrow

By JOE GREENE
Flambeau Sports Writer

With the fresh scalp of the North Carolina Wolfpack hanging from Seminole belts, Florida State's football team goes after the Wake Forest Deacons on its annual Homecoming scrap tomorrow afternoon at Doak S. Campbell Stadium at 2:30 p. m.

The game tomorrow will mark the first time these two schools have met on the gridiron. The Deacons of Wake Forest are members of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Although the Deacon's record does not appear to be among the top in the conference as yet, still a very dangerous opponent.

Wake Forest's record stands 1 and 3 with a 39-0 win over William and Mary, a 6-0 and 7-6 loss to Maryland and Virginia, and a 17-0 loss to Clemson.

Headed by the exceptionally fine running of fullback Bill Barnes, who has rushed for 347 yards in 58 carries and is presently leading the Atlantic Coast Conferences, the Deacons boast one of the most potent running teams in the nation.

LNS back of the week, Lee Corso, will direct the offensive attack for the Tribe Corso is the nation's 17th ranked offensive football player and has rushed and passed for 402 yards in four games.

RENN READY

Left halfback Bobby Renn who was limited action against North Carolina State appears to be ready and raring to go for the game tomorrow.

It is unknown at the present time as to whether fullback Joe Holt, who was injured against the Wolfpack last week, will be able to see action or not.

FSU's rugged defensive line fore do not re-occur, Florida State will have its first victory since the first time since the heartbreaking loss at the hands of the University of Georgia.

Nugent maintains that if the Tribe's spirit and skill in runs as high against Wake Forest as it did against State, the Seminoles will have a good chance for victory

Wake Forest makes the second Atlantic Coast Conference team in two weeks the Seminoles have faced and this make the fourth Homecoming under Nugent. In the three previous ones the Seminoles have gone undefeated.

In last year's Homecoming battle the Seminoles overwhelmed the Citadel by a score of 39-0.

Sophomores Backbone Of '57 Florida State Tennis Squad

"Sophomores will form the backbone of Florida State's tennis squad this year," Kevin Pritchard said, as he looked over the prospects for the 1956-57 net season.

The loss of Hal Surface, who out of school because of illness. graduated last year, is a big one, Pritchard declared, as the best tennis player in FSU's history. "We were really counting on Nordfjeld," the head coach said, really set the team back a notch. he was starting to develop into "When you lose your number one a real Ice player."

'Baseball To Be Heaven In '57'—Danny Litwhiler

A baseball team "as good if not better than last year's" is expected to be fielded by FSU next spring, according to head baseball coach Danny Litwhiler.

Fall practice, which was completed last week, indicated that Seminole prospects are in store for the 1957 Seminole diamond squad.

The pitching staff is expected to have more depth than last season, even though top-flight hurlers Max Long and Tony Arabia have graduated.

Forming the nucleus of this year's mound corps will be right handers Fred Kenney, Jerry Bass, Al Zois, Frank Slusser and Tom Garcia, and southpaws John Bristol Don Axon and John Ash.

Litwhiler is in the enviable position of having his entire infield returning for spring practice from last year. There are no casualties to report but Litwhiler thinks he has three capable receivers in Jim Sheppard, Hal Dyer, and Mike Cox, who played short stop last year.

At first base, Gerald Phillips, Wayne Long and Herm Bledsoe will battle it out, while Carlie Hendrix and Dale Koch are at second.

Phil Hunt and Gordon Caldwell are in third and Dick Howser is at shortstop in addition to Copas, who could alternate between either position.

IN THE OUTFIELD

Monty Padgett, outfield Fred Twomey and John Bishko are in left, Glenn McCallum and Hal Mathewes in center, and Bob Rozell and Riley Seevers in right.

Litwhiler also expects to have some help from boys who are now participating in football or basketball, and will report when those sports end.

Litwhiler is again counting very heavily on Lee Corso, who led the team in runs batted in last year and was the team's center fielder and clean-up hitter.

"Corso will definitely have a spot in the outfield, a starting position. He's the quarterback on the team. I'm glad we will have Lee for the entire baseball season as he was the spark plug that led us through a successful season," says Litwhiler.

Florida State was the Florida Inter-Collegiate Baseball Conference champion last year, and won the FSU Invitational tournament, competing with such teams as Wisconsin, North Carolina, Notre Dame, Illinois, West Virginia and Brown.

Last year's diamond crew went to the NCAA Tournament and lost to Duke. Their overall record, including tournament play, was 27 and seven.

Litwhiler says that as a whole the outlook is very good and should remain so for the next two years. "The freshman squad looks very good, especially the pitching and the outfield. It's the best freshman team I've had in the three years I've been coach," he declared.

Among the teams scheduled for 1957 are Florida, Miami, Rollins, Biltmore College, Florida Southern, Rhodes, Georgia and Georgia Teachers.

Duke, Yale Slated For Diamond Meet

Duke and Yale have been tentatively signed for the second annual Florida State Invitational Baseball Tournament, beginning March 28, 1957.

The Seminoles of Danny Litwhiler won the first tournament title last year by crushing Illinois in the finals, 12-0. Among last year's competitors, the University of Wisconsin has also been tentatively slated for the 1957 tourney.

It was Duke that defeated the Tribe two out of three in the NCAA regionals last year and Litwhiler's charges will be seeking revenge for those losses.

At least two more teams will be added before tournament time.

Some of the two-sport athletes at Florida State include Tom Garcia, basketball and baseball; Fred Twomey basketball and baseball; Gerald Phillip, football and baseball and Lee Corso, football, and baseball.

Cagers Faced With Toughest Schedule

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State University basketball squad will join the other athletic teams of the university in playing a big time schedule in 1956-57.

Coach Bud Kennedy has asserted that this will be the toughest schedule the cage squad has ever played, but added, "We are happy to be playing such teams."

The Seminoles open the season December 1, traveling to Pittsburgh to meet powerful independent Duquesne University. The Dukes had a 17-10 record last year, and are expected to be among the top teams in the east again this season.

The first home game in the new gym is set for December 12, against the powerful Texas A & M squad of Ken Loeffler, counted on as one of the top contenders for title this year's Southwest Conference title.

The schedule also includes such formidable foes as West Virginia, Furman, North Carolina State, Bradley and the University of Florida, December 10 in Gainesville.

Besides three tough out-of-state appearnts, the Seminoles also face a tougher time in the Florida Intercollegiate Basketball Conference.

In contrast to the five men lost to FSU by graduation, Miami, Stetson and Florida Southern lost only one man and Rollins none. Tampa will field an all-Senior club with plenty of experience.

OLEN'S GONE

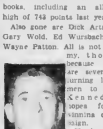
The big loss is Jimmy Olen the fiery guard from Kenonny Ind., who broke nearly every basketball record in the school's books, including an all-time high of 748 points last year.

Also gone are Dick Artmeyer, Gary Wold, Ed Wursbach and Wayne Patton. All is not gloomy, though, because there are seven returning lettermen to boost Kennedy's hopes for a winning season.

Heading the list are Bob Williams, 6-6 center Bob Gregory, 6-5 forward, Bob Ward, 6-4 forward, and Tom Garcia, 5-10 guard. The first three are Seniors, and Garcia is a Junior.

Bobby Watts, Darrell Mahoney and Fred Twomey are other lettermen who will see a lot of action.

There are at least five Sophomores expected to help and several transfers on hand.



The Sophomores are Hugh Durham, Tommy Dunevin, Jim Fred Woodward. The outstanding Williams, Dave Horton and Buz transfers is probably Larry Norton, a 6-6 center from Jacksonville Junior College.

Merrill Bryant, a 6-foot Mississippi junior college star and Joe Westmoyer a transfer from Cincinnati who sat out last year as an ineligible are also ready.

Jimmy Oler has talk in over as Frosh coach, and he will field one of the heaviest freshman teams that the school has ever had; also meeting one of the toughest schedules ever.

Mike Williams, whose brother Bob leads the varsity, is a top center prospect at 6-7, as is Tom Gregory of St. Petersburg, at 6-6.

Other top frosh are Jerry Holme, and Jim Savage both at 6-5; Bill Emrel at 6-6 Charles Rogers, and Tom Westmoyer at 6-2, Bud Cash at 6-2 and Tom Spies at 5-10.

THE MIGHTY MITE—Dick Howser whose playing weight is about 145 pounds soaking wet, will be back to lead the Seminole baseballers on the 1957 season. Last season Howser lead the Tribe on home runs and batting. He's at home in either the infield or outfield

Golfers Place Best Record On The Line

With practically the same team which compiled a record last year Florida State golf coach Dave Stone is out on the proverbial limb predicting a repeat in the coming season.

Although the 1957 schedule is somewhat different, similar to last year's card the Seminoles can expect to face such respectable opponents as Florida and Georgia Tech, as well as a few new ones.

Back for their final year on the links for the Tribe are Captain Jerry Jenkins of Tallahassee who was co-winner in the Florida Championships. He is also holder of the Tallahassee course record with a 67.

Bob Hyde of Miami, Charlie Oliveille New York a qualifier in the National Amateur is listed to play and a returning letter man in golf for FSU.

Sophomore Harry Stewart who hails from Chattanooga Tenn. and won the Mississippi Valley Championship in 1955, Jack Berry, letterman for the last three years from Tallahassee and Bob Stumpf of Atlanta, Ga. Among the Juniors are a three time letterman Bill Shelton of Anniston, Ala. Dick Hall of Homestead, Fla., who led the last year and Dave Morris of Tallahassee.

Morris played during the freshman year but did not play last year due to illness.

Rounding out the veterans are Bob Boyle of Hollywood, Ohio who only played one more match in the N.C.A.A. Amateur Championship qualifying for the Masters.

New faces among the golfers will be Albert Yaney of Tallahassee, Richard Overton, Jack Wiand, Clifford Cook, Wilbur Davis, Don and Phil Fagan, of Sebring, Ga.

Two transfers are Bill Thornton of North Carolina U. and Ted Boots from Purdue.

Before coming to Florida Stone was the coach at Duke. Dave Stone known as "Dee" was employed as a pro at the St. Louis Cardinal baseball club.

THEY WERE FRESHMEN LAST YEAR. Although not all of the frosh swimmers pictured above are back at Florida State enough did return to bolster the Seminole merman as the start of the swimming season draws near. A great many of these Sophomores will help coach Bim Stults to maintain his fine overall record.

Mermen Stronger Than Ever; So Is Competition

By DAVE EVANS
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State University swimming team, which students and faculty alike have been able to point to with pride for years, will be ready and rarin' to go when the season starts says coach Bim Stults.

Stults says the team is as strong, and possibly stronger than last year's edition, but the competition will also be tougher.

Texas A&M and SMU both have Olympic team members while Florida has a few all-American divers. Other teams scheduled are Rice, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Emory and Kentucky.

Returning from last year's team are Graham Thatcher, whose specialty is the 220 and 440 yard freestyle. Jim Julian, a sprinter who represented the Seminoles at the National AAU meet, and Ken Abbott, an all-around swimmer who also went to the national meet.

Diver B. B. Rhodes will be out of half the school year to intern and will miss the training, but should be able to equal last year's form says Stults.

Joel Jacobs will be starting his third year as the Tribe's leading breast stroker and Stults is counting on him to continue to rack up points for FSU.

Back again are Rube Waddell, who started last season as a backstroker but changed in mid-season to the middle distance freestyle, and Mike Tachirnic, who was a consistent starter for the Seminoles.

TWO SPRINTERS

Don Lewis and Glen Thatcher, two sprint freestylers swimming for the first time last year piled up points and should continue to give the older team members stiff competition.

Paul Hammond, another tanker that made a mid-season change from long distance freestyler, but changed to sprints in order to add more power to the Tribe's attack, is also back.

Moving up to the varsity from the Frosh will be Jim Westworth, Charles Gentry and Jerry Glaser.

The "G-men", as Glancy and Gentry are sometimes called, were highly impressive in their Freshman year and Coach Stults is counting on them to bring home the points for the Seminoles.

Stults started from scratch as coach in 1949 and in a period of a few years has seen his teams develop into one of the powers in the Southern United States.

In the past few seasons the Tribe has beaten such teams as SMU, Texas A&M, Kentucky, Georgia Tech, Georgia, Miami, and last year in the first dual meet between the two schools in any sport the Tribe defeated the Florida Gators.

Other victories include winning the state AAU, the Georgia AAU, and compiling a record of 28 straight victories in dual meets against top competition, have earned Stults the reputation of being one of the top swimming coaches in the nation.

Gym Team Eyes 6th National Title

Florida State's gymnastics team, a five time winner of national team championships has its sights aimed at making it six this year.

Returning this year for Florida State are last year's co-captains Bill Sauser and Richard Lecuona, brother of the 1952 and 1956 Olympic team; Jamie Ashmore the "Tumbling Texan" from Bolder, 1952 US Olympic team and Jack Miles member of the U. S. Olympic team, 1956.

Miles will leave Florida State sports to compete for the United States in the Olympics at Australia.

Other returnees include Joe Ruiz, Chicago, Ill.; Bob Murphy, Boston, Mass.; Chris Cox, Brooklyn, New York; Tom Macdonald, New York, N. Y.; Laird Hamilton, Atlanta, Ga.; Don Sweeney, Bolder, Colo.; Don Dansky, New Jersey; Roger Fox, Ohio and Juan Lopez, Havana, Cuba.

Newcomers to the gym team are Fernando Lecuona, a member of the 1948 Cuban Olympic team, Jim Malmin, 1952 Swedish Olympic team, Darwin Justice, Dick Mills, Jim Parker and Lee Price.

Their first win came in 1951 when the gymnasts took the NCAA championships at Ann Arbor, Mich., and competed the next year for the year by winning the NAAU in Detroit.

In 1953 they won the NCAA at Bolder Colo., 1955 the NAAU at Chicago and 1955 at Rochester the NAAU.

Last year at the NCAA the team finished third, being nosed out by only a few points for second place. However, the Seminoles gathered two first places Jamie Ashmore won the free exercise event and co-captain Ron Amster was first in the high bar.

The Tribe gymnasts took second places at the NAAU last spring with Chick Cicio as FSU's top performer. The native New Yorker took top honors in the free exercise competition.

Although the schedule for the 1956-57 season is not official Dr. Price says that the Seminoles will have more games at home this year than they have in many a previous season.

Some of the teams that may possibly battle the gymnasts here are Syracuse University, Michigan State, University of Illinois, (Chicago) and Georgia Tech.

This year's NCAA meet will be held at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., while the National AAU will be in Chicago.

The NAAU will probably be in April of next year with the NCAA a month previous.

Also this National Gymnastic Clinic is tentatively set for Sarasota and will be held sometime during the Christmas vacation. Part of this annual clinic will be a gym meet between the North and South which was won last year by the South.

The South, coached by Dr. Price won for the first time since the meets first began.

VETERAN GYMNAST—Tommy MacDonald stands by his favorite piece of apparatus. MacDonald is one of the top Tribe Gymnasts in the rope climb and a highly prized asset to the team.

BACK OF WEEK

Florida State quarterback Lee Corso became a prime candidate for all-America mention this past week when the International News Service named him their "back of the week" in the nation.

The 21-year-old Senior from Miami was chosen from among such college greats as Purdue's Len Dawson, Oklahoma's Tommy MacDonald and Mississippi's Paige Cothran, putting him in an elite circle of gridiron stars.

At the beginning of the year, there was considerable doubt that Corso could successfully make the switch from halfback to quarterback when Nugent announced the change.

Corso has succeeded so well that he ranked 17th in the country in total offense as of this week. He has picked up 402 yards in the first four games of the season.

The past two weeks have seen Lee honored in more than one way—on campus as well as on the gridiron. He was recently tapped for both Gold Key and ODK, two of the highest man's honorsries on any campus.

Florida State is only in its second year of major-college football, and needless to say the Seminoles have never had an all-American.

If Corso continues to play as he did in the North Carolina State game, he may be the one.

Volleyballers Out To Regain Lost Crown

Florida State's varsity volleyball team, which finished third at the national tournament this spring, will be trying to go all the way this season and regain the championship they won in 1954.

Returning for the Seminoles are three all-Americans: Bernie McCann (spiker), Fehmi Zeko (setman) and Eugene Lewis (spiker). This is the second year in a row that McCann has been awarded that honor.

Other players welcomed back by Coach Bill Odenveal are John Miller, George Rogers, Roger Clingerman, Matt Sullivan and David Hobe.

The Tribe's new faces include James McPitter, Duane Elvington, James Couch, Marvin McLean, Gary Kashner, Gary DuBois and Edgar Barnett.

Volleyball practice is already underway and Coach Odenveal has implied that a rough practice schedule awaits returnees and tryouts.

"I know we have plenty of power even though we did lose Lee Lasear (all-American for FSU) but I'm going to emphasize the defensive play much more this year," says Odeneal.

Florida State is the pioneer in collegiate volleyball and was the first university to place volleyball on the varsity level.

From indications around the country, volleyball seems to be heading for bigger things and I know FSU will be leading the way," says Odeneal.

The tentative schedule for the season is as follows:

Dec. 8 St. Petersburg Open	away
Jan. 29 Bowling Mi-Knoxville	away
Feb. 3 Pensacola Open	away
March 16 State AAU (St. Pete)	away
March 26 Crescent City -New Orleans	away

lers, and Jim Maddock. "If these boys can come through and play some good ball we may be in prove on last year's 8-7 record," Pitchford said.

Pitchford described this year's schedule as the most "ambitious" in FSU's history. The setters face such formidable foes as Miami, Michigan State, Duke, Indiana, Ohio State, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Rollins, and Florida.

A total of 27 Florida State students are trying out for the varsity basketball team. Coach Bud Kennedy might have a tough time deciding ten players he will carry on his road games. He can only take 10 of them.

Campus Architecture Displays Gothic, Contemporary Styles

By RUTH FRITCHIE

Praising these Gothic towers we love so well" as in some several Seminoles may have wondered the question in many minds as the existence of any Gothic structures on campus.

According to Dr. James V. McDonough, head of the art department, several structures on campus, including Westcott, Longmire, Dodd Hall, and the old Library are examples of "College Gothic."

College Gothic, Dr. McDonough explained, is "a very simplified and modified English Tudor Gothic."

English Tudor Gothic dates back to the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, he explained.

Dr. McDonough went on to explain that all college Gothic in America is derived from the English Tudor Gothic; the varied styles indicating the various needs, purpose, and times for which the buildings were constructed.

"Education is a growing process," Dr. McDonough continued. "Most other schools are adopting the attitude of expressing the present style of architecture" by using new materials such as steel and glass for construction of buildings.

The new buildings on campus such as West Hall, the Home Economics building, the new library and others to be begun soon, are "contemporary not modern," George F. Holschuh, professor of art, commented. These new building designs were chosen to harmonize with the old style, but are designed with no allusions to the styles of the past, he added.

RANDOM

ACP —The University of Delaware Review reprinted this obituary from Cal Tech: "There's so many how to's in life. How to be Healthy. How to be Happy (to Human). How to get better, when people were a new living they didn't have time to read books on how to!"

And this from the United Press: "In Delor Kansas: In Batavia, New York, a drum major flipped his baton into the air during a parade and was startled when it didn't come down. He looked around and found that the metal baton was buried to a 5,000 volt power line suspended across the street. It caused a 20-minute power failure.

Homecoming Queen To Be Revealed Tonight At Pow Wow

Party Scene

Students Going All Out For Biggest Homecoming

By MICKEY COLE

Everyone is going all out to make this year's the biggest and best Homecoming we've ever had. The house decorations are better than ever, the floats are more elaborate and the parties planned are the greatest.

DELTA ZETA claims the honor of holding the first in the round of Homecoming festivities. Last Wednesday night they gave the men on campus a chance to view all the lovelies in the Homecoming Queen competition by holding a reception in honor of all the candidates. A charming way to spend an evening—drinking coffee surrounded by beautiful girls.

The girls in Delta Zeta have had plenty to keep them busy this week. They managed to squeeze the initiation of their new actives in between Homecoming decorations and the coffee for the Homecoming candidates. Initiation was Thursday with a banquet in honor of the new members Monday.

The Cherokee Motel was the setting for the annual monthly banquet of ALPHA KAPPA PSI. This month's banquet was in honor of the new pledges. Kappa Alpha Psi Southeastern Counselor, Dr. Wesley Hatter was guest speaker.

There wasn't much time this week for anything but Homecoming decorations but when it's a party, there's always time. PHI MU managed to fit a party with SIGMA CHI into their tight schedule. The evening of music, dancing and singing was made memorable by a hilarious skit called the "Lighthouse Saga" in which a Phi Mu flapper is rescued from the hands of the cruel villain by her handsome Sigma Chi lover. In return for the hospitality, the Sigma Chis serenaded the Phi Mus with a group of campus favorites.

Baptist students and Alumni are invited by the BAPTIST STUDENT UNION to renew old friendships and make new ones at a "Funburner" party after the football game. Everyone who plans to join in the funmaking is to meet at the Student House. On the agenda for the evening are games, skits, songs, a guest speaker and of course, food.

Combo parties and record parties are the plans of the sororities, fraternities and resident halls tonight when they open their doors to the campus alumni and visitors. ALPHA DELTA PI, SIGMA NU, PI KAPPA PHI, and SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON have engaged combos for the evening. ALPHA CHI OMEGA, KAPPA DELTA, DELTA GAMMA, PHI MU, PI BETA PHI, and PHI DELTA THETA will dance to the music of their record sets.

The alumni will be special guests of KAPPA DELTA, DELTA GAMMA, PI KAPPA PHI, PHI MU, ALPHA CHI OMEGA, and SIGMA NU before and after the game. Banquets luncheons and buffet suppers are being held in their honor. PHI DELTA THETA will honor their alumni with a 7am Session after the game and a dinner Sunday. PI KAPPA PHI and DELTA GAMMA have banquets planned for Sunday. All sorority, fraternity and resident halls are having Open House after the game.

FSU FASHIONS

Wear Suits, Tailored Dresses For Homecoming Weekend

By MARGARET McLEAN

What to wear to Homecoming Weekend events? With tongue in cheek, I shall now describe, not what to wear, but amply what every coed usually wears to Homecoming and similar events.

It's perhaps strange, but inevitably true, that women feel much more secure when they are dressed just like other women present at a given function. Just to eliminate the possibility of anyone's feeling insecure this fabulous weekend, here goes . . .

To the Pow Wow and to the football game the next afternoon, coeds will be decked out in suits, tailored dresses, matching skirts and sweaters, and tailored dresses. The colors will be on the dark side—black, brown, gray, navy blue, and dark plaids, stripes, and prints. The lines of the clothes will be simple and rather plain. Heels will be worn regardless of dress, but hats, gloves, and furs will be absent from the scene, except—girls in the know will wear gloves—probably skiing gloves. Plain, tailored accessories, and a minimum of jewelry complete the scene.

USUALLY WELL DRESSED

Actually, girls at FSU generally look very appropriately dressed at football games and the like. Where the coeds seem to fall down the most as to appropriate costume, is in the instance of very formal occasions. It is always best to underdress rather than overdress, when in doubt. BUT when the word is clearly out that the event is going to be formal, coeds will go to any lengths to avoid the expected.

When one has the rare opportunity to dress up—why not? Next time there is an Artist's Series program, drag out the old black velvet uniform—ah, go ahead, it won't be fatal. Even clothes for very formal occasions are best when simple in line. This is, primarily, of course, personal opinion, but I'm not being especially presumptuous because fashion experts even suggest modernism.

VARIETY, INDIVIDUALITY

Variety and individuality can be had through texture, color, prints, or accessory, rather than by an unrelated mixture of these elements. Very fancy or ornate jewelry should always be worn with very severely plain clothes and accessories, no matter what the occasion. Try to emphasize one thing at a time. Rhinestone jewelry is never worn except for formal or perhaps semi-formal wear.

For receptions after the Pow Wow and the game it will not be necessary to change clothes. The typical costume worn to receptions not preceded by a consecutive event is, more often than not, a party dress, and always here. This includes afternoon teas, unless the tea is immediately after class. The outdoor bar-b-que will require the same costume worn to the game which immediately follows it.

FORMAL FOR DANCE

For the formal dance the appropriate costume is a formal, either long or short. Most FSU girls prefer short formals. Long formals are beautiful, but they are difficult to manipulate, and everyone steps on them at crowded dances. The type of formal worn is not especially important. Many men like to wear dark suits for formals. In this case a very fancy cocktail-type dress is appropriate. Check with your date about this. The don't is to wear informal street clothes.

Every scheduled event on the campus has a costume recommendation at least the type of event, if not the specific event in the Pow Wow ruling book. Consult this for absolute assurance when in doubt.

HOUSE DECOR PUTS WAKE FOREST IN HEAVEN, INFERNO

By MICKEY COLE

The Wake Forest Deacons —also known as Demons— are suffering outside the heavenly gates, in the fires of the lower world and to the music of Elvis Presley this week-end as FSU resident Halls, fraternities, sororities and student houses compete for house decoration honors.

Coach Tom Nugent is depicted by Gilchrist Hall as the guardian angel of the Pearly Gates who refuses to let the Deacons join him on his heavenly cloud.

Pogo and his friends are the angels guarding the Pearly Waters from the possum "Deacons" in the Baptist Student Union's sky scene.

The most popular place for the Deacons in below judging by the number of groups who sent them there. Phi Kappa Tau has a huge Seminole guarding the deacon to prevent his escape from the flames.

THE AXE

There isn't any John Smith around to save Wake Forest when Sammy Seminole puts his head on the chopping block according to the decorations of Kappa Alpha. Just in case the ax gets dull Coach Nugent has a monopoly on the ax-sharpening business in the same scene. The Sigma Phi Epsilon's are more merciful and have a Simple Simple pinning for their victim.

Wesley Foundation has Sammy Seminole as a judge passing sentence on the kneeling deacons from Wake Forest. North Cawthon doesn't give that "Demon" a "prayer of a chance" in their decorations.

Elvis is in on the decorations at the Newman House, Delta Zeta and Gamma Phi Beta as "My Favorite Song" played by Sammy Seminole on the juke box, is "Don't Be Cruel" at the Newman house, at the Delta Zeta House it's Hound Dog with a moving Elvis and Wake Forest Hound dog; and at Gamma Phi Beta it's "You ain't nothing but a 'toothpick' as the Seminoles sawmill turns Wake Forest trees to toothpicks.

MORE ROCK

Still on the rock and roll idea Sigma Alpha Epsilon has a huge record full of football players being turned by a phonograph from FSU.

It's in the book, says West Hall with a two story Bible foretelling the doom of the Deacons. The Alpha Omicron Pi book reads "dear diary — we beat Wake Forest! what a game" Alpha Chi Omega's 15 foot book is illustrated with a picture of Wake Forest's tombstone. The caption for the picture is "The Deacons time has come".

Theta Chi chose a magazine rather than a book for their theme. "Esquire's" cover of the month is a formally dressed man on a white horse with the caption "Let the fighting Seminoles carry us easily through to victory".

DROWNED

Wake Forest is "out at sea" on the decorations of Senior their Seminoles show any mercy Hall. Pi Kappa Alpha and the Delta Delta Delta. None of to the drowning Deacons.

It's in the cards of the Alpha Tau Omegas for FSU to help the Deacons to get the club, see diamonds, break hearts and finally give up the spade.

Lamba Chi Alpha brings back memories to the alumni when they show the change in West Campus to West Hall and the outcome of the games in 1948 and 1956.

Will Be Crowned With War Bonne

The traditional full length Seminole War Bonn will once again be the symbol of royalty as it is placed on the head of the 1956-1957 Homecoming Queen tonight at the Pow Wow.

Margaret Ann Bellinger, selected last year to reign over the 1956 Homecoming festivities, will crown her successor.

Selected by the student body from a large group of preliminary candidates, the five finalists are Paula Parsons, sponsored by Gilchrist and West Halls; Linda Jones, sponsored by Delta Tau Delta Fraternity; Anne Munroe, sponsored by Delta Sigma Pi business honorary; Layte Bowden, sponsored by Alpha Tau Omega fraternity; and Liz Armes, sponsored by Florida Hall.

All other titles will be pushed into the background tonight as the new queen is named and presented with one of the highest student honors a coed can receive.

Her duties will not end with the Homecoming activities for she will act as a representative of Florida State University during the entire year. Throughout the nation. Next year, she will ride in the place of honor in the Queen's float in the Homecoming parade and crown her successor.

Tonight at the Pow-Wow after a ceremonial dance in her honor by the Flying Seminoles and a musical salute by the Marching Chiefs, the Queen will be crowned by Miss Butler and Dave Bachman, student body president.

The new queen will receive a trophy inscribed with her name. The "Big Time FSU" title will be carried out this year by the maximum as the largest crowd of Florida State Alumni to attend Homecoming returns to Tallahassee for the Saturday game between the FSU Seminoles and the Wake Forest Deacons and the accompanying festivities.

All sorority, fraternity, student houses and residence halls will be open to alumni and guests of the University.

Liz Armes

By SUE MASSEY and SYLVIA WARD

Liz Armes, a Sophomore from St. Pete and a major in music education, is sponsored by Florida Hall. Liz has indeed a very active career at FSU in many organizations. In her freshman year she served as Secretary of the class, is presently serving as Secretary of her Sophomore class and is a member of Sophomore Council. She is an active member of the Wesley Foundation and Pledge Chaplain of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. Music is also in her line, and she is a member of the Marching Chiefs, Symphanic Band, Tau Beta Sigma, finance chairman for the band dance and social chairman for the School of Music. Liz's talent varies even more though, and we see that she also holds a major role in "South Pacific."

Layte Bowden

Layte Bowden, a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority and a Junior, is sponsored by Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity. She hails from Fort Lauderdale and is majoring in advertising. Layte was tapped for Sophomore Council and Village Vamps of which she is now secretary, and served on the University elections committee last year. This pretty miss was a member of the Miss Gymkana Court in her freshman and sophomore years. She is in the Honorary Colonel's Court and the Inter-Fraternity Council Coort last year.

Linda Jones

Linda Jones is a sophomore from Daytona Beach, and is sponsored by Delta Tau Delta fraternity. She is majoring in elementary education and is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. She was tapped for Village Vamps, is Secretary of Council this year, and a member of Student Senate. She held the title of Miss SNOKE SIGNALS and Miss Inter-Fraternity Council last year, and was Miss Valesia of 1955. She was alternate Miss Seminole her freshman year, and is a member of the Delta Tau Delta Court. Linda was sponsored by FSU for the Miss Texas Contest and won the title of Maid of Honor. During the past summer, she was second place in Atwa contests, Miss Southland, and Miss Seaside Fiesta.

Anne Munroe

Anne Munroe, a native of Tallahassee, is a member of Kappa Delta Sorority and is sponsored by Delta Sigma Pi business fraternity. She is a sophomore at FSU and is enrolled in the department of secretarial science. Anne is a member of Sophomore Council, Village Vamps and Judiciary. She was a member of the Miss Gymkana Court last year, and reigned as Freshman Queen during her freshman year.

Paula Parsons

Paula Parsons, a junior and a native of Miami, is being sponsored by Gilchrist and West Halls in the Spring calendar and also appears on the cover of the FSU football brochure. Paula has been a member with the Marching Chiefs for the past three years, is a member of Tau Beta Sigma band honorary and was a member of Sophomore Council. Paula is a junior commuter in Gilchrist Hall this year, and is also active in "Flying High."

BAND DRILL OFFICIALS MASTERMIND NEW MARCHING CHIEFS PATTERN

Whitcomb's Homecoing Show Had Unusual Beginning

By CHARLET POITEVINT

"M-I-C-K-E-Y M-O-U-S-E" chanted a group of music students dancing around a room in the Music Building last spring.

Hearing the strange sound, Manley Whitcomb, mastermind creator of the intricate drills by the Marching Chiefs, stopped to investigate.

Noting the popularity and cleverness of the Mickey Mouse TV Show, outline, aped impromptu by his students, he tucked the incident away as a possible idea for a future halftime show.

Thus originated the idea for the Marching Chiefs' Homecoming halftime show, "A Tribute To Walt Disney."

MOUSEY GRIN

Mickey Mouse will be the first featured sequence in the show, accompanied by the comic character's "Alma Mater." Giant ears, Mickey's main characteristic, will be part of the props used and the majorettes will form his smiling mouth.

Whitcomb, and assistant directors Robert Braunagel and Charles Carter started gathering idea material last June for the Homecoming show prompted by the desire to use Mickey Mouse.

"Dozens of ideas for show themes, musical arrangements, and drills were jotted down, then eliminated to a few workable ones," Whitcomb said.

'NATURAL'

"The Disneyland theme was a natural choice to tie the show together."

In the Mickey Mouse drill, the comic character himself was first visualized but sometimes it is a certain song or event that gives the planners inspiration for a halftime show.

In order to use the song "Never Smile At A Crocodile," tomorrow, the crocodile was first thought of as a formation, said Whitcomb, but because it lacked a quality of distinctiveness, it was substituted with a skull and cross bones depicting Captain Hook from Disney's movie version of "Peter Pan."

Another version of Disneyland by the Marching Chiefs will depict "The Great Locomotive Chase" featuring an authentic looking Civil War-period engine complete with smoke stack and red spinning wheels.

DIXIE'

"We even added a Confederate flag to make sure the crowd will know what the formations are," exclaimed Whitcomb. The music is "Dixie," and "Hi Ho, Hi Ho."

The song "When You Wish Upon A Star" provided the idea material for another drill. "We could make several formations, such as a star, to go with this tune," said Whitcomb, but we decided to spell out "Disney" as they play the Pinnocchio theme song."

A stunt gag will dance to the tune of "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf," in a sequence that Whitcomb describes as "not too distinguishable from the stands." He explained that it would be announced on the public address system, thus solving the problem.

"Dumbo" the flop eared elephant, will end the parade of Walt Disney's most famous movies, cartoons, and characters.

DRILL PLANNING

Sometimes the formation is visualized first, and sometimes the line or theme idea—there is no particular pattern," said Whitcomb. The final selections may be judged on a basis of cleverness, uniqueness, or popularity.

With the formation in mind, Whitcomb, Carter and Braunagel set out to incorporate their talents on scores and on charts for the band members to memorize.

Carter must write the musical arrangements to fit the drill. He plans where each musician will be on the field during every measure of the tune, writing the exact number of measures to put each Chief in the proper position the right time.

PLANNING BOARD

The imaginative trio get together to work out the shows on the planning board; a miniature football field complete with toy men laid out in the basement of the Music Building.

"Let's make Mickey's ears Wiggle," says one, and so here is where one of the many fine details are originated that make the Marching Chiefs outstanding among college bands of the nation.

Each of the band members' parts are worked out to the finest detail with the miniature models, and then they are charted on a paper dummy to be later mimeographed and distributed to the band.

With a set of these charts in hand and with music learned beforehand, the Marching Chiefs are ready to practice the halftime drill. It is each member's individual responsibility to know his position and memorize steps which have been written especially for him

FIELD PREPARED

On the chart, the field by the geology building is laid out according to boundary lines with yard lines criss crossed into sections of 10 steps. A precision method has been set up allowing eight steps to five yards. Lateral lines are marked with inserts. Oh the practice field small linoleum markers are nailed to the ground, but these are only useful until the band gets used to the drill.

From there, they rely on cues. These can be yard lines, or the person next to them, or the music itself since they know by routine where they are supposed to be at a certain measure

REVERSE DIRECTION

Whitcomb said the practice drills must be reversed to prevent the band from learning

COURT REQUEST

The opinion survey was made as part of an exhaustive project requested last year by the Florida Supreme Court when it conditionally accepted Virgil Hawkins, 46-year-old Negro, for the University of Florida Law School.

The Court unanimously accepted the United States Supreme Court ruling for integration but in a 5-2 decision ruled Hawkins should not be admitted until it could be determined whether his entrance would provoke harmful situations, Justices Elwyn Thomas and H. L. Sebring dissented, saying Hawkins' admission should have been immediate.

Turntable 2

By ROSS JAMISON

Well, gang, I have a startling announcement to make. Irving Feldman our self-styled record critic disclosed today that he is going to produce two new albums.

One of these will be produced right here on the FSU campus. Irv plans to take a tape recorder to class with him and get the makings of his Lectures to Sleep By album. The second album will consist of all the songs put out thus far by Elvis Presley and will be entitled Music to Strip Cars By. Both of these record albums, when made available, will be stocked at Baker's Music Center.

But on with the subject at hand—which is Stan Kenton this week. Irving listened to Stan Kenton in Hi-Fi and Cuban Fire, and told me that this is the kind of music you have to feel.

Irving's favorite selections in the Hi-Fi album are Artistry Jumps (Kenton's theme), Lover, and Concerto to End All Concertos.

Baker's Music Center has in stock every album Stan Kenton has ever put out.

The Cuban Fire album is just about the greatest integration of Afro-Cuban melodies and rythms that Irving has ever heard. He claims that while listening to it at Baker's he grabbed a pair of marimbas and would have mashboard out of the place, if he had not been stopped in his tracks by the announcion "You ain't nothin' but a hound dog" coming from another phonograph

ACTIVITY FEE: MAJORITY IS FOR SCHOOL COSTS

Survey Shows Students Pay $58 Each To Run University

By OSCAR JOHNSON

Students who plunk down their $75 Activity Fee each semester have often wondered just where their money goes.

How it is apportioned—who gets how much?

Each student who pays $150 this year will have his money spent as follows:

University Hospital — $24.
Matriculation — $38.
University Activities—$26.90.
Student Activities—$13.10.
West and Florida Hall payments—$16 new dormitory payments—$4.
special athletic fee—$6.

ACTUAL EXPENSES

The largest share, matriculation, is for expenses of running the university—salaries, buildings, equipment and other expenses. According to the Comptroller's office, this is the only amount that goes toward payments on the actual functions of a university—much of the rest is, so to speak, for sideshow attractions.

The Comptroller's office added that the matriculation payments account for only about nine per cent of the expense of providing a university for the student's. About 85 percent comes from state appropriations, and the rest from industrial research grants and other minor sources.

HELP BUT DORMS

Students may not realize when they pay their Activity Fee at registration that they're buying some of the dormitories, but the figures show that this is the case. In addition to current accounts on West and Florida halls and on the new dormitories to be begun this year, students have already paid for the Student Center.

Of the large share apportioned to University Activities—$26.90—the majority goes toward supporting intercollegiate athletics. Since this year's budget was based on an anticipated 6,000 students enrollment, athletics received $123,000 in student fees, which included part of the University Activities fee and the Special Athletic Fee. It will get an additional $30,000 if cash runs short the Comptroller's office revealed.

SPECIAL RESERVE

The $30,000 would come from a special Activities Reserve which, under the Florida State University budget set-up, is given to President Doak S. Campbell to spend as he sees fit during the year. Source of these funds is Activity Fee payments made by students in excess of the projected 6,000 enrollment. This year more than 6,500 paid Activity Fees, which threw about $13,000 into this kitty, addine to the $47,000 already there.

Thus, whenever there is an increase in student enrollment over that expected when the budget was drawn up, more is available for University Activities. In the past, this has gone mostly for intercollegiate athletics.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

The Comptroller's office said that the $13.10 alloted for Student Activities is given to student government to spend as it sees fit. In addition the students get to spend $13.10 for each student in excess of the estimated 6,000 enrollment.

The money alloted to student government will be spent this year as follows:

Swimming pool—$500. Class of 1959—$400. Class of 1958—$400. Class of 1957—$600. Class of 1958—$400. Collegians—$400. Cheerleaders—$225. Flambeau—$16,294. Forensics—$2,300.

CHORAL UNION

Choral Union—$400. Men's Intramurals — $1,400. Orchesis a

YOU HAVE TO COME TO CLASS

ACP — Freshmen and sophomores at the University of Connecticut are faced with compulsory class attendance this year. Under a new ruling, they're expected to attend all registered classes and if, for any reason, a Freshman's number of absences equals the number of credits for the course his case will be called and reviewed. Penalties will range from restriction and probation to suspension from the University officials think the new ruling will raise the standards of academic achievement among the freshmen and sophomores.

—$600; Smoke Signals—$5,225; Summer (1957) Flambeau—$1,500; Student Government—$4,389; Student Travel—$2,000; Tally-Ho — $23,910; University Singers—$650; Theatre Dance Group — $600; Women's Glee Club—$300; Graduate Class — $700;

Women's Division Univ. Rec. —$65; Tarpon club—$675; URA Activities — $1,200; Junior-Senior Prom—$3,500; Student Artist Series—$2,500; Women's "P" Club—$62; Speakers' Bureau—$2,000.

Money under the University Activities allotment is budgeted as follows:

Artist Series—$13,500. Reservation—$13,200. Group Activities—$4,200. Intercollegiate Athletes—$123,183; Marching Chiefs —$19,200.

Social Program—Student Center—$5,850; Summer (1957) Group Activities—$5,125; Student Activities Administration—$23,425. Student Alumni Building—$22,786.

APPROVAL REQUIRED

Money spent to these various accounts, both student and university, is allotted under budgets submitted by the departments and approved by the Business Office. The student department budgets, such as those of the publications and student activities, are reviewed by student government before being sent for final approval.

Most of the student organization funds are used for actual expenses of the activities they conduct. Few students are salaried, with the exception of the publication staffs. Highest paid students are the Student Body President, only paid student government official, who receives $15 a month and the Florida Flambeau editor, who usually gets an average of $80 a month.

Money given over to Student Activities Administration, under the University Activities division, is used for salary for the Director of Student Publications and other administrative functions.

3 Information Booths Open To Help Homecoming Visitors

Members of Sophomore Council will operate three information booths today and tomorrow. Harry Day, hospitality committee chairman, announced.

They will be at Westcott Gate, at the West Call Street gate near the old demonstration school, and at the Student Center.

Day said alumni stickers for automobiles, name tags, campus maps, and city bus schedules will be available. Free ice cream and grape juice will be given to visitors, he added.

The booths will be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. today and from 8 a.m. to noon tomorrow.

Day said students are asked to wear name tags, which have been distributed to dormitories, fraternities, and sororities.

Buses will be run regularly between the campus and downtown hotels and to Doak Campbell Stadium for the Pre-Game Show tonight and barbecue tomorrow, Day added. Schedules will be available to alumni and given at the information booths.

FSU's Development Called 'Remarkable'

Campbell's Speech Commends 'Team Work' Of Faculty, Staff

Developing Florida State University from what was only ten years ago a woman's college was called a "remarkable example of team work," by Dr. Doak S. Campbell in his address to the Garnet and Gold Key Banquet Friday night.

The FSU president, who came here in 1941, five years before coeducation, and will retire this summer commented that "Faculty members, administrative officers, staff, and maintenance personnel, worked with remarkable unanimity and enthusiasm toward the development of the University."

Dr. Campbell, who was given a standing ovation from the banquet audience of over 500 as he rose to speak on "The State of the University," was lavish in praise of the faculty and staff

FEW MONTHS

Dr Campbell said the actual conversion to coeducation was made in only a few months

"On Labor Day, 1946 Governor Caldwell, confronted with the full impact of overwhelming registrations of G. I students in higher institutions, asked whether the Florida State College for Women could provide educational services for approximately 1 000 veterans who were unable to secure admission to the University of Florida. Our reply was that we could supply the educational services if the state could provide physical facilities—housing, classrooms and transportation.

"In the spirit of the times a near-miracle was wrought. The facilities of the Dale Mabry Air Base were rehabilitated and made ready for temporary use. Buses and other equipment were secured from war surplus. Additional faculty members were appointed. In exactly one month students both men and women, were enrolled and the session was under way. The Tallahassee branch of the University of Florida was a going concern. It was only by means of such an arrangement that men could legally attend the Florida State College for Women

REMARKABLE SMOOTHNESS

"Although the Legislature did not declare the institution a coeducational university until May, 1947, the new cycle of development really began in September, 1946, just ten years ago. With the admission of male students a whole series of changes began to take place. The transition from a well-ordered, well-staffed college for women to a co-educational university although it involved many problems met and conquered concerned expansion of the campus, development of the curriculum, the change in administrative organization necessitated by co-education—problems which, had they been fully discussed in the beginning, would have tended to make us hesitant, if not, indeed, afraid."

Dr Campbell lauded the Graduate School for "special attention in respect to the growth in ten years from fewer than 30 to over 800 students and has served the library staff for an increase from 107,429 to 447,929 volumes during the time."

NOTES HISTORY

The president began his address with emphasis on his "epoch" approach to the history of Florida State College.

He noted the "beginnings of a program of instruction" between the establishment of the Seminary west of the Suwannee River in 1851 and the Civil War, the virtual extinguishing of academic fires" during that conflict, and the rebirth of the school after the war.

Little remains of the history of that epoch upon Civil War-time events, the fact that the Institution was kept alive in the face of many obstacles

"It was not until the 1880's that the semblance of a college course began to emerge. For a brief period during this epoch (1883-84) there was a foretaste of developments that would take place about the middle of the present century. Among the archives of our University is a catalog of the Florida University located at Tallahassee . . . included colleges of medicine and surgery, law, and a literary college as well as a theological institution, and a poly-technic and normal institute. This ambitious program lasted for only a short time.

FSC SUCCESSFUL

"Florida State College succeeded the West Florida Seminary and the institution continued under that name until 1905. The educational program, although considerably limited

Rain No Harm As FSU Holds Its Homecoming

By NANCY GENE BROWN

Gloomy grey skies and a steady downpour failed to dampen the Homecoming spirits of throngs of alumnis and students on the campus last weekend.

Starting the Homecoming ball rolling merrily was Florida's parade, with 42 floats and five bands. Prizes for floats were won by Hardi Word and ingenuity in house decorations gave prizes to Pi Beta Phi first, Alpha Omicron Delta second, and Phi Mu third in the sorority group. Winners of the fraternity house decorations were Pi Kappa Alpha first, Lambda Chi Alpha second, and Kappa Sigma third, with special mention going to Phi Delta Theta.

MAGNOLIA WINS

Magnolia and Ward Hall copped the honors in the men's residence division, with Florida Broward and Leonard Hall first, second, and third prizes respectively in the women's residence halgon The Baptist student group, Tallahassee day students, and Newman House won in student organization competition.

Copping first place for the most original float in the Homecoming Parade, was the Kappa Sigma fraternity. Honorable mention went to Pi Beta Phi.

Zeta Tau Alpha again took first place for the most beautiful float

Pumerup was Phi Delta Theta

Lyle Sanders, almost everyone with emotion was named Homecoming Queen at the Pow-Wow.

The Homecoming world awakened Saturday morning to a steady drizzle which forced the annual barbeque inside, on the threat of the ever demoralizing school The deluge continued throughout the day, drenching the umbrella-covered stadium and the approximately 14,000 spectators

The Men's platoon featured the ailterna stars and sparkling colored baths as Les Brown's Band of Renown played for the last time present at the dance Saturday night.

The budget called for the sale of 5,500, and that's how many were sold," said Miss Dean, Florida chairman of the Homecoming dance committee, who indicated the dance had lived up to all the expectations of the planning group.

ALUMNI

According to Miss Mildred Parrish, executive secretary of the alumni association an estimated 800 tickets for the game were sold to alumni. They registered in the alumni office in Longmire Building, returning alumni were shown a picture of the events of several classes which held reunions this year The art work was done by Miss Dorothy Kannon, staff artist for the Director of Publications.

In their business meetings held during Homecoming the alumni association elected five directors on the board of personnel directors, according to Miss Parrish. Re-elected were: District Two, Charles H Campbell; and District Three, Fred O Drake, Jr Elected for the first time were District Six, Edward M Emery; District Seven, Anne W Rauleson; and District Eight, Ruth M Arnold. No other association officials were elected at this time, Miss Parrish said.

Also serving as Homecoming activities co-chairmen along with Miss Parrish were Dr. James P Carr, associate dean of men, and Dr. Ora McBride

"We are very pleased with the co-operation and hard work that went into Homecoming, and we're grateful to all those who took part in making it successful", said Dr. McBride.

'We Like Ike, We Like Ike,' They Chanted Hypnotically

Republican Dwight David Eisenhower was riding high in the saddle last week.

The presidential polls had him way out in front in his race with Democratic candidate Adlai Stevenson — some had him ahead by bigger margins than in 1952. The "unbiased" Gallup Poll, for example, credited Mr. Eisenhower with 60 per cent of the votes in 12 populous eastern states. The New York DAILY NEWS poll reported New York state favors Mr. Eisenhower over Stevenson by 60.4 percent to 39.6 percent; the Detroit NEWS poll showed he was leading in state totals 56.8 to 41.3 percent; many other polls also gave him leads.

Candidate Eisenhower's seat in the saddle was given another boost by accounts of his campaigning. One non-bylined story written Thursday by one of the nation's largest and most respected wire services will serve to illustrate. It told of his campaign in the northwest in the following language:

"During his campaigning in Washington and here earlier he had confined himself to the 'happiness' theme that he became the overpowering charcteristic of this swing through the west.

"In Tamoco, Wash., this morning he addressed an audience of about 5,000, stressing the virtues of education, the nobility of womanhood and the high qualities of American youth.

"Heavy rains and sullen skies kept crowds thin as he motored through Tacoma, but in Portland where he landed just after the sun had broken through, his reception was a Pompey's triumph.

"He stood waving and grinning along a solidly-packed seven-mile route from the airport into town. At some points the crowds surged around his car and peppered him with confetti and streamers.

"Children's voices screamed 'we like Ike' and adults hailed him, then switched him pass with happily dazed expressions.

"At the end of his ride through Portland was the civic auditorium, a cardhouse of screaching, ecstatic party workers. 'We like Ike, we like Ike, we like Ike,' they roared, clapping their hands in hypnotic frenzied rhythm. When he finally stepped onstage, the shriek that went up had a knife-edge on it, and the hall became a sea of faces in the stampede of joy. Again the hysteric cry went up to the stamping of 7,000 feet.

"With difficulty the President, delightfully grinning, finally got them quiet.

"He was 'overwhelmed,' he said. 'If this great audience is made up just of Republican workers,' he went on, 'boy, I'll tell you, we're in.'"

We must admit, it has been some time since we've heard anything like this—if we aren't dreaming. Was it not Franklin Roberts got wound up before a big auditorium audience.

All Mr. Eisenhower has to do is stress "the virtues of education, the nobility of womanhood and the high qualities of American youth" and boy, oh boy, we're in!

Isn't it great to be one of the happy, ecstatic Eisenhower supporters who can bask in the warmth of his smile and repeat softly, "I LOVE Ike."

Integration No Problem At Los Angeles College

To the average City College student, integration is a word that has been read often, but other than that it is something happening far away. True in true because we live in a state that considers everyone free and equal.

The day and night student body, some 20,000, is made up of students from all of the towns where integration is being fought with tooth and nail, but here, there has never been so much as a murmur. That is democracy at its finest.

Integration is often thought of as a problem of on's the South. That is not true. The problem of integration has shown its ugly head since the beginning of man.

All through history you will find instances of one race mixing with another race, one culture mingling with another culture, one religion or breed living with another. Unfortunately many times it has ended in war and bloodshed.

In the United States, where every man is supposed to be created equal, it is hard to believe that this situation could exist but it does.

It is too bad that the people in the "deep South" cannot visit City College and see how well we are "integrated." They would find that not only is it possible for Negro and Caucasian to go to school under favorable conditions, but also to school almost every color, race, and creed under the same roof with the best results.

At City College segregation will never be a problem—except the worry of how the situation in the South will turn out.

Voting Apathy Shows Overall Kinship

The turnout of less than 2,000 students in the student government elections held Tuesday does not speak well of campus political interest.

But the apathy that exists here cannot be explained by mere repetition of the old complaint that student government has no power to do anything anyhow. It is part of a larger apathy shared by nonvoters everywhere.

Voting apathy, it seems logical to assume, stems both on and off-campus from a common source. Whatever its reasons, it exists in equal measure in the seeming isolation of college campuses as well as in the population as a whole.

There are those who seek to separate a university campus completely from the "world without". As in the Florida State University system of "campusment", virtue is assumed to reside within the cloistered halls and evil, conversely, must exist on the outside.

Things shared by both students and nonstudents, such as the negative example of political apathy, point up the essential fact that the lives of both are becoming more and more closely knit. As the college and university population increases in the United States, the role of the "student" is ever increasingly one of alliance with the outer world, rather than one of separation and aloofness.

Chiefs Could Utilize Talent In Many Ways

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Starting with the news story of "Mickey Mouse" the Marching Chiefs came up with an amazing half-time drill for the Homecoming Game.

Manley Whitcomb and co have shown they can take almost any subject and build a show around it.

This proven talent could be used for more than entertainment, however. For example the theater has been used to express opinion on matters of current interests, and The Marching Chiefs, should they find the inclination within themselves, could really have fun in this respect.

For instance what have you.

At midfield they collide, tripling over each other's feet, falling headfirst into drum heads, wrapping trombones around their neighbors' necks.

The announcers would silence the shrieks of the audience, and then say:

"Ladies and Gentlemen, the Marching Chiefs now call attention to the Florida State University traffic problem. Having formed a traffic jam in the field, they now play the hot song, 'Transfusion'."

THE FLYING Seminoles and majorettes would, of course play the role of campus cops.

Here's another:

Instead of sitting in the stands during the first half, the Chiefs would stand resolutely on one sideline. Before each play a bandsman would dash across the field and plant a hot dog.

At halftime, the announcer would explain, "Ladies and Gentlemen, the Marching Chiefs, in recognition of the Food Service, have been standing in line to see something to eat. And now they're a huge meat loaf to the tune of 'We Need Food To Survive'."

THE IMMINENT closing of Sadie's, popular, off-campus eating place, would be an appropriate subject for a meaningful half-time show. Gerdman has suggested the use of "Herbaddo's Hideaway" in that routine. The band could form a huge pinball machine with the majorettes and Flying Seminoles running around in imitation of the gong and the stadium lights flashing on and off for effect. A blast of dynamite could be set off under the stands to effect a "Tilt." This would be a most ambitious show.

I was going to suggest that the band do a tribute to the boy magazine which would earn them the eternal gratitude of West Hall's ninth floor. The most appropriate Playboy show however could not be performed in Campbell Stadium.

THE BAND has never, to some reason, recognized the fraternities who have added much to our campus culture. Therefore, one of these games, the band should form on a side of the field at all. Instead one should throw in the stands on the 50-yard line singing Smirnoff, and shouting "Marching Chiefs One Time!" etc

Letters To Editor

Tally-Ho Good Overall: Broderick

To The Students:

I have just seen a copy of my own publication, the 1956 Tally-Ho, and by this late date I hope all of you have yours. I had begun to despair that I would ever see the yearbook in any form but layouts and proof pages.

As Flambeau editor Oscar Johnson said a few issues back, it certainly isn't "bigger and better." I agree it lacks much to pull it in a professional category. But still I feel that its good points stand in favorable balance with the most obvious discrepancy, the horrible photography, and the relatively few "boo-boos" made in printing and layout. Although I must admit that some of the gaps lawere gone into a bit, they certainly didn't finish the way I'd planned them.

BUT I CAN'T completely agree with Editor Johnson that "Much of the publication is extremely good."

In many places the typography shows a lack of careful planning. I had hoped that after taking this long to complete it would be flawless, but I think it only fair to point out that the printer did have to work under a handicap this summer.

I couldn't be in Tallahassee to supervise the printing makeup, and he had to mail the proof pages to me for correction. The yearbook is time consuming, and placing of cutlines and copy and selection of type size I had to leave to the discretion of the printer, but I am satisfied with the relatively few grammatical and typographical mistakes in the book.

SURE PICKING the yearbook apart page by page anyone could probably make a long list of errors and poor features. But believe me considering all that happened last year to impede publication of a 1956 Tally-Ho, I'm greatly relieved to have it turn out as well as it did, and I'm not ashamed to have my name appear as its editor. And its acetable is to the credit of my staff, the Flambeau, which gave so wonderful support, every group, club, fraternity and sorority which tolerated many inconveniences and still cooperated completely; and every student on the campus who listened to excuse after excuse, stood loyal on line, paid $2 for a terrible picture of our nose at all—and waited without complaint for the yearbook to be published that the 1956 Tally-Ho is a acceptable as it is.

To each of you I apologize for its failings, and thank you for its good points. If most of you smile when you get it I'll feel satisfied. And I doubt if anyone to those organizations who worked had their group pictures or the copy omitted. Somewhere along the line from yea-book office to the printer, group pictures or copy was sidetracked. I'm certainly an unintentional omission, but I'm sorry it had to happen at all.

MY NAME TURNED out to be a guinea pig. Its inadequacy proved that you can't produce a professional yearbook for anyone among university like Florida State by putting control in sufficient facilities and careless contracting. Fortunately this year the photographers have been placed in the hands of professional yearbook photographers, a contract be been let to Taylor Pictures Area. But my book had to suffer before that point could be proved.

In closing I have one request to make of every student and organization of any type on campus. please don't take out your disappointment on Barbara Ann's and the 1957 Tally-Ho. Give her the full-hearted cooperation and cooperation you gave me last year. She's not what it takes to really publish an outstanding yearbook. If you're all behind her one hundred per cent.

Calling The Card

Hunts FSU Witches

By ARNOLD GREENFIELD

It has recently been brought to my attention that I am indeed in a unique position to help the Attorney General and also have free access to the campus most widely circulated newspaper—Flambeau.

I can thus make public various pieces of information which it is desirable to release. This is really important opportunity which I can avoid being ridiculed by simply saying what I want to say within the confines of my own column.

A good friend of mine and I desire to add an each of subversion: has recently suggested that I utilize my unique position to circumvent the insidious infiltrations of creeping and gallopin' socialism by exposing some of the local dangers to democracy in a direct message to my readers. This was conceived the instructor Hamming of the FSU Attorney General's List of Subversive Activities and Subversives.

THROUGH THIS medium I shall endeavor to root out the last vestiges of evil that may present place all of us 172-proof white American democracies in jeopardy. Surely, no effort is too great nor any sacrifice too great to point out the basic freedoms are in danger.

Therefore I shall be untiring in my determination to eradicate the corrosive elements of spiritual strength.

I have long been in the process of investigation and have personally unearthed some frightening facts. In addition, I shall fearlessly and unhesitatingly call upon witnesses to testify publicly through this column until the scourge of Red, Pink, Magenta, and Fiera Cotia propaganda has been totally eliminated from the hallowed confines of our University community. No one shall be spared! Any necessary heads will roll! Eh!

THE FOLLOWING criteria shall be employed to detect the manifestations of the menace to liberty. First, all things socialistic shall be suspect; socialism shall be defined as any deviation from the status quo. Secondly, all words or deeds which may be construed by me to continue to advocate to teach or imply such a modification of the status quo shall similarly be suspect. Thirdly, any acts, thoughts, or words smacking of subversion shall be unflinchingly investigated.

I would certainly appreciate any help offered by good citizens to aid in my fight against the foe. Allow me to suggest some easy ways to spot the enemy. Subversives tend to have lazier vocabularies, including such words as chauvinism, proletariat, etc. They tend to condemn our sacred institutions as inadequate and many are left-handed.

Next week I shall continue Freedom's fight.

LETTERS to th EDITO

Doesn't Like Paper's Changes

TO THE EDITOR:

As one of a substantial number of ex-Flambeau staff members, I have noted with interest the number of changes that have gone by "Florida's First Semi-weekly College Newspaper" since the Reign of Robert Mann last year.

Your publication is decidedly different in many respects from last year's, as a result of obviously strenuous efforts on your part.

"Good or Bad, It's Cool" is reported to be the battle cry of Vol. XLII, O. Johnson, Editor. Perhaps I am not the progressive and forward-looking type set forth in the Flambeau platform, but, notwithstanding my inadequacies, I should like to offer a few suggestions which, of course, to the casual reader, Ed Note that possibly may be low.

Perhaps it is asking much, but I should like to see the Flambeau some day do more than to wade through the front page three-column crowded tenament—It would also be nice to be able to find the lead story of first or second page. While an interesting variety can be found from one issue to the next, I should also like to mention the new and of course, different "Tag" adorning the top—all, just mention.

The editorials are lengthened, the photographic agreement adequate this year. I hope you don't mind if I have Flambeau staff pictures in every Tally-Ho done in the coming months—sometimes get the impression that the editorials or could measure be a subtle measure of admittance that march of intended editorial matter is considered as such?

I wish you success in your energetic quest for an American Press and that the Flambeau earned that be also included in the "chandelier policy"!

Folsom Ready To Fight

By OSCAR JOHNSON:

Alabama's governor James E. Folsom is, if wire service accounts are true, ready and willing to start a new version of a civil war.

In recent weeks, Alabama Atty Gen. John Patterson, whose father was shot by gangsters in the Phenix City scandal, has gone little over his head to obtain indictments against the state's gang of highway paving and repair contracts.

Folsom wants no "reckless investigations."

FOLSOM SAYS if his foes want trouble, "They'll need bigger tanks and guns than I have." As governor he is commander in chief of the Alabama State Guard. The Alabama leader evidently reserves the right to permit graft in the highway contracts if he wants it.

Those who read an article in Friday's paper about a cultural revivalization now going on in the United States may have been bewildered by the news. But this country still has a long way to go when compared with, say, Austria.

IN THAT FAIR location, the citizens are concerned with correct rendering of the classics. But the performers don't do a good enough job, they have to look out for their personal safety.

The latest instance of this happening was a demonstration put on at the plus new State Opera House in Vienna when a group of fans not only booed a Tenor but pursued him after the performance.

THE DEMONSTRATION occurred during a first-night performance of Wagner's Tannhauser. The Tenor didn't do too well, so after the end of the opera the angry fans stormed onto the stage gate and followed him through the streets with the shouts until the singer found refuge in a nearby coffee house. Last March opera fans booed the conductor, alleging that he had been neglecting the opera with his frequent trips abroad.

The Rains Came

Football coaches have bemoaned rainy days since the beginning of the game, but football is an odd sport which pays no attention to weather of any kind.

Oklahoma, Michigan State, Texas Christian, Miami or other team for that matter has trouble playing in the rain, but none as much as Florida State.

The reason is simple. Seminole coach Tom Nugent has built his offense around a wide open game, depending on scatbacks and a passing attack.

"You don't run wide and you don't pass on a day like this." Nugent observed from the dry shelter of the dressing room after Saturday's contest.

"We've built our running games on boys like Renn or Corso—broken-field runners. They don't go on a soggy field because when you try to cut back, you inevitably slip and lose yardage." he added.

Nugent pointed out that Wake Forest fullback Bill Barnes was in his glory on a day like this. "All the football books tell you to leave your scatbacks on the bench and run the big boys on a day like this, the low power, straight ahead runners."

Florida State has been notably deficient of power runners for a number of years now.

There's no doubt whatsoever that Barnes was the best runner the Seminoles have seen this year. He was compared to Miami's all-America prospect Don Bosseler in at least one visiting reporter from the Magic City.

However, the consensus here and in most other quarters is that on a dry field, it would have been a different story.

ABOUT THAT FIELD GOAL

A change in the football substitution rules in the last few years and a technicality which coaches have cursed for some time may have cost the Seminoles a victory Saturday.

When the football rules makers first abolished free substitution in college ball, they put in a stipulation that in the last four minutes of the second and fourth quarters any man could re-enter the contest, though he may have already gone out in the same period.

Under those rules, the Tribe's extra-point specialist Johnny Sheppard would have gotten the chance to kick that field goal in the fourth quarter Saturday.

The rules have since changed.

Now, present regulations, a man can re-enter the game in the same period only if he started the quarter. Here Sheppard does nothing but kick extra points, he'd not come in only after the second touchdown midway in the quarter and was therefore ineligible to re-enter.

The technicality which cost the Seminoles five points for too much time when they attempted the field goal is as follows:

A team is allowed but five time outs in the half. If they use all of these time outs, they must go through quite a bit of rigamarole to get the kicking tee on the field for a field goal try.

In order to get the tee, the quarterback must request the use of it from the referee; the referee informs him of this from the time of the request he has 25 seconds to get the play off.

The referee then runs over to the bench, obtains the tee, takes it back to the quarterback, who by this time has about 10 seconds get the play off.

It's quite impossible through this procedure to get a field goal attempt off without incurring a 5-yard penalty for too much time or delay of the game.

Seeing this, Tribe quarterback Lee Corso threw the ball off the field and attempted to run a play anyway, but the referee's whistle cut the time short.

As it turned out, Bob Nellums' field goal attempt was unsuccessful anyhoo.

WAS HE AWAKE FRIDAY?

In the dressing room banter after the game somebody suggested to assistant Miami scout Gordon Malloy that he picked after the Georgia-FSU game earlier this year that he "had trouble staying awake" and didn't see how either Georgia or Florida State could stay on the same field with Miami.

Strakes me that Georgia did a pretty fair job of staying in the same field with Miami Friday night, but Miami ran the Hurricanes off it in that 7-7 tie.

Seminoles Can't Hit Broadside Of Barnes

By FRANK RAMOS
Flambeau Sports Writer

Led by quarterback Lee Corso, the Florida State Seminoles came from behind Saturday afternoon, to tie Wake Forest, 14-14, despite two touchdowns by Deacon fullback Bill Barnes.

A homecoming crowd of 14,000 watched the Miami speedster direct the Tribe's attack throughout the cold and relentless rain.

Wake Forest scored their first touchdown after an exchange of punts gave them the ball on Florida State's 38 yard line. Billy Barnes, Wake Forest's all-American candidate, then took over from there, picking up 27 yards in five carries the 185 pound fullback climaxed the drive by slamming over the right side for the first score of the game.

Larry Brooks, the Deacon's left halfback made the extra point good.

Bob Nellum's recovery of Dean Hillenbrand's fumble of Bobby Renn's punt led to the first Tribe score.

Nellums recovered the fumble on State's 45 and when Hillenbrand threw a punch at Nellums the Deacons were penalized 15 yards for a personal foul.

After Renn picked up five yards on the first play, Corso completed a 26-yard pass to end Ron Schomburger on the Wake Forest eight.

Renn was then thrown for a three yard loss, and Corso completed a two yard pass to Schomburger. Renn then fired a pass to Schomburger that was incomplete. Pass interference was called against Wake Forest giving the Seminoles a first down on the one.

Two plays later Corso plunged into paydirt for the score. John Sheppard's kick was true and it was a new ball game, 7-7.

Billy Barnes came into the picture again when Nellums kicked off on his own 12 and running down the sidelines 66 yards to the Tribe's 22.

Barnes picked up a first down in two plays, putting the ball in State's eleven yard line. Daniels gained three up the middle and Barnes once again picked up four yards.

The first quarter ended as Barnes was piled up at the Big 7 yard stripe. Billy the Bullet promptly scored on the first play of the second quarter, going through the middle. Brooks booted the extra point, putting Wake Forest in front, 14-7.

Touchdown Drive

Late in the third quarter, FSU began their final touchdown drive. Beginning at their own 35 the Tribe quickly picked up a first and moved into Deacon territory. Metts and Renn each picked up five for another first down as the third quarter ended.

A Corso to Schomburger pass netted 22 yards and put the Seminoles on the 14. A keep play by Corso was good for a first down, and three plays later Buck Metts found his way into the end zone for the tally.

Sheppard placed the ball through the uprights to tie the score at 14-14 but a backfield in motion penalty called the play back. Sheppard's kick from five yards further back was officially good this time to knot up the game at 14-14.

The Tribe took over on their own 47 after Wake Forest punted. With seven minutes to go Priest Hipord to Corso, who had moved in halfback, for 18 yards. After an incomplete pass to Johnson, Vic McNelum on the 33.

Corso then took over at quarterback and picked up a first down. Metts and Corso contributed for a first on the 13. Corso's pass to Schomburger was knocked down but then Lee picked up two yards on the option play setting up a field goal attempt.

Coach Nugent tried to send John Sheppard in for the attempt but Sheppard was ineligible and FSU was penalized for delay of the game. Bob Nellum's attempt at the field goal was off and the final score read Florida State 14, Wake Forest 14.

Cagers Practice In New Gym, Kennedy High On Rebounding

With their first big-time basketball season only five weeks away, Florida State's cagers have finally moved into their new gymnasium for their practice sessions.

According to NCAA rules official practice began on October 15, two weeks earlier than last season, and the Tribe had to use the Florida High gym since the backboards had not been put up in the new one.

"I'm certainly glad that almost all the backboards are now up. We've got a very hard schedule and every moment of practice is important," says Coach Bud Kennedy.

The Seminoles have always used a five man weave with little emphasis placed on a buckeet man. Last year the key to Kennedy's attack was Jim Ollen, the high scoring guard from Economy, Indiana, who unfortunately graduated.

To date Kennedy is undecided as to whom the play will be centered around and will probably not make a choice until the start of the season.

Slated to see a lot of action this year will be Hugh Durham, a Sophomore from Lyndon, Ky., who averaged about twenty points a game last year for the freshman team.

The newest addition to the team is Larry Strom, a 6-6 center from Jacksonville Junior College. "We're counting on Larry to give us added strength under the boards," Kennedy adds.

"We should have those teams lots of trouble with Williams, 6-8, Gregory, 6-5 and Bobby Ward, 6-4 to go along with Strom," says Kennedy.

SCORES TYING TOUCHDOWN—Continuing to play what Tom Nugent calls "the most consistent game we have", Buck Metts scored the tying touchdown in Saturday's 14-14 mud battle by plunging over from the one midway in the final period.

'Harvest Hop' Square Dance Set Saturday

By STAFF WRITER

The Harvest Hop, annual campus wide square dance, will take place Saturday evening in the Women's Gym from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Sponsored by Sennor Hall for the Campus Chest, the dance will carry out a Halloween theme in the decorations. Built around this central idea will be the Florida Rhythm Boys, a seven piece combo, who will play for the dance. Claire Green and Marshall Lemmbe who will act as co-emcees.

Also performing will be pantomimist Ben Beach, singer Dennina Smith, and Ron Wills, who will do a parody on Elvis Presley. Dr. William Tait of the Physical education department, Jim Hadaway, Tallahassee recreational head, Brad Chasnin and Karl Edwards will do the dance calling. Some round dances will be given.

Climax of the night, said Senior Hall Governor Bob Morris, will be the crowning of the Queen of the Harvest Hop who will be selected by lot with everyone having an equal opportunity. The winner will be given a trophy and will preside over the remainder of the festivities.

Tickets may be purchased at the Westcott ticket booth or from any resident of Sennor Hall, Morris said. Price will be 50 cents stag or 75 cents a couple.

NEW EXHIBIT AT UNIVERSITY MUSEUM
Smith Calls Display 'Vital, Interesting, New'

Two Paintings

'Vital' Works Of Art Shown At Museum

By ANDREA BALL

Seldom seen or heard of art work is now on display at the University Museum, Dr. Hale Smith, head of the Anthropology Department, describes the exhibit as "vital, interesting, and new."

The display consists of paintings by two Creek Indians, Acee Blue Eagle and Solomon McCombs. Blue Eagle now teaches art at Oklahoma A & M University possesses a style that portrays the old customs of his tribe. He uses bright colors and illustrates interesting scenes. Though mixed with primitive art, modern influence the paintings still hold the old Indian charm of art. Dr. Smith commented McCombs, a student of Blue Eagle, follows almost the exact style of his teacher, said Dr. Smith yet lacks a main amount of the perfected style of Blue Eagle.

Other features of the display are Cherokee basketry and masks. Eskimo stone carvings portraying the customs of the people in such activities as fishing and hunting. Pueblo pottery and weaving. Apache basketry, and Iroquois jewelry introduced from Spain. All of these works are interesting and carefully planned said Dr. Smith.

The paintings by Blue Eagle and McCombs were borrowed from the artists themselves but the other pieces of the exhibit are from both the National Museum of Canada and the National Museum of Arizona.

The display of contemporary Indian art started last week and will run until January 15.

FSU Development 'Remarkable'

There were a few well-educated and dedicated Seniors. The figures measured in terms of its products, the school was successful. Numerous graduates during that epoch have achieved noteworthy success and recognition.

"There were many milestones, when, in 1905, with the passage of the Buckman Act all of the state-supported institutions were abolished in order that a new beginning might be made. However, the Act set the latter to prove a very statesmanlike move for the development of a substantial state system of higher education for Florida. A single Board of Control was created with power to locate two new institutions of higher learning, one for men and one for women.

"The new institution in Tallahassee, first known as Florida Female College and later the Florida State College for Women, began an era of substantial academic development which in a few years gained recognition both in the State and the nation. A strong faculty, a comprehensive undergraduate curriculum, a substantial physical plant, a large and rapidly growing student body marked this era which came to an end in 1946.

Dr Campbell approaching his retirement discussed the change from a women's college in the last decade and added, "Although a crucial analysis of the University as this time reveals many points at which improvement and some changes are called for, the condition as a whole appears to be wholesome and substantially sound. The decade of transition appears to have been accomplished. A new era is upon us. We look forward therefore, to what seems to be ahead."

Financial support was painfully small, but the State was profound some support. However developed considerable strength.

They recently received the RCA Victor record album, The President's Favorite Music. So they wired Eisenhower's opponent Adlai Stevenson, told him they had scheduled the album for broadcast, and offered equal air time for his favorite tunes. Stevenson accepted.

Baker's has an ABC Paramount album, The Eisenhower Story, with actual sounds and voices from great moments in his life.

ON ONE side of an album at Baker's of the music of composer Don Gillis is the story of The Man Who Invented Music. It's Poco-type music and narration seemingly for children but has something under the surface.

You may know contemporary composer Gillis for his Symphony No. 5½, which he explains is logically named because he wrote it after Symphony No 5, but before he wrote No 6.

FANS OF the late James Dean should be glad to know Baker's has the two albums, A Tribute To James Dean. It has a color picture of him on the cover and contains background music from his Warner Bros. pictures.

PANEL PAUSES DURING INTERNATIONAL CLUB DISCUSSION TUESDAY
N. V. V. J. Swamy, Khan Shamshad, Yvette Vasquez, Juan Lopez.

Much More Could Be Done

International Club Agrees United Nations Valuable

By NANCY GENE BROWN

The United Nations and its agencies have brought the countries of the world much closer together than they otherwise would have been, but much more could be done, seemed to be the consensus of an International Club panel this week.

Student representatives from Egypt, India, Iran, and Pakistan formed the panel, leading a group discussion as almost 30 International Club members met Tuesday night in the Louvre student lounge in observance of United Nations Week.

Frank Bean, foreign student advisor posed two questions for discussion: what personal contacts had the United Nations had with panelists, and how had the United Nations surpassed or the welfare of their countries?

Members of the panel were Ashraf El Bayoumi of Egypt; N V V J Swamy of India; Dr Enrico Cimenti, Italy; Khan Shamshad Pakistan.

VARIED RESPONSES

The questions brought a variety of responses. Some said United UN headquarters somehow received assistance directly from the UN — and others had had contact with the UN agencies only through their governments. They emphasized the work of various agencies relating to all the various activities, such as W.H.O., Work in Health Organization, UNESCO, and others in helping with reconstruction in their home countries. Others received technical assistance from the government and from the World Bank.

Other sources of international contact came through the Boy Scouts, of which Khan Shamshad spoke as "an international scout brotherhood providing opportunities to meet people of other countries", and the U.N. World Youth Assembly. Others, however, including India, tended to lean toward the admission of Red China in order to create more harmonious feelings and achieve more peaceful settlements of disputes.

A discussion ensued as to whether or not the U.N. is dominated by the United States. It was conceded by the Cimenti that in some cases it may be, while in others, it definitely is not. Another question was ventured to the effect that the U.N. could not be United States-dominated due to the fact that Russia has the power to veto its vote.

Bean summed several other ways in which the United Nations has contact with the nations of the world in education and culture. Through the fellowships it offers, students are able to visit universities in other countries for small. Other types of fellowships provide opportunities for people in the business and scientific fields to travel abroad for various lengths of time to study culture, technical means of operating businesses, and literature.

PRESS POWER

"Perhaps the most effective media the U.N. employs" said Bean "is the printed word. The U.N. agencies are always willing to supply all types of information usually printed in at least three languages." They also will lend visual aids, he said, to assist in exchanging cultures.

In lighter vein was touched in on the group's president, Juan Lopez, who asked for predictions of this year's Olympic Games results. Several countries seemed confident that their athletes were capable of gaining or retaining a coveted first in the various sports. The games will be held this winter in Melbourne, Australia.

"We're guarding our hockey trophy," said Swamy of India. "We have had it ninety years!"

Egypt usually presents itself in competition," said El Bayoumi. "We compete in weightlifting, and usually win in swimming."

Only flaky lacked confidence. The evening's activities were closed with refreshments.

Hotel Offers Student Rates

The Roney Plaza Hotel, located in Miami Beach, is offering special rates of $8 including a double room and tax to meals to students attending the FSU-Miami game November 2 said Barbara Jeffries, secretary of interior.

A dance the Saturday night following the game will also be free to FSU students.

Seaboard Railroad Company is also offering special rates to students attending the game. For groups of fifteen or more the cost will be $18 round trip. Those interested may contact Jim Miller of Seaboard, at 2-4935.

Infirmary Needs 200 Volunteers

By RUTH FRITCHIE

Two hundred Florida State University students are needed by the University Infirmary to volunteer for free influenza test vaccine shots, Dr. H. G. Hathaway, Chief Physician, announced yesterday.

"We do believe that this vaccine will prevent influenza or grippe, but we have no reason to expect this innoculation to prevent a common cold," Dr. Hathaway said. These shots are good for approximately one year, he added.

Students interested in receiving an innoculation may sign up at the University Infirmary any time during clinic hours. The vaccine will be ready for use within two weeks and will be administered on a first-come-first-served basis to the first 200 hundred students who sign up, and they will be asked to check by the infirmary every two weeks until May.

The vaccine which is being offered to FSU students at one time was given to 1,000 and proved since the first influenza vaccine was given to troops at Fort Bragg, North Carolina Dr. Hathaway said. The vaccine proved so successful that all members of the Armed Forces have been required to receive it since the Fall of 1945, he added. It is continued.

The infirmary hopes to compile statistics to prove whether the vaccine will be successful in Florida. Northern universities, including Michigan State University, have been using the vaccine for the past two to three years with a great deal of success. Dr. Hathaway said. If this experiment proves successful in preventing the usual influenza epidemic which frequents the campus, the vaccine will be offered to FSU students for 25 cents an innoculation, he concluded.

Travel Bureau Initiates Operations

The Student Travel Bureau has begun operations, secretary of the interior Barbara Jeffries said.

She said the service sponsored by Student Government, will coordinate students who have spaces in their cars for weekend or vacation trips with persons seeking rides.

Hours are 2 to 5 p.m. daily in the traffic court office in Lonmire, telephone 7-2191.

Dollar An Hour Now Top Pay

Maximum pay for student assistants will be raised to a dollar an hour on November 1, Student Body President Dave Bachman announced yesterday.

He emphasized, however, that no student can earn more per month than at present, since additional funds will not be available until the Legislature makes its biennial appropriation next spring.

Department heads have been informed they may if they wish, reduce student work hours in order to grant immediate benefit from the maximum wage increase.

25 CENTS MORE

Authorization to pay 25 cents more per hour than the current ceiling of 75 cents was given by faculty and administrative departments on October 10 by Mrs. Margaret Blair, chairman of the committee on scholarships, loans and student employment.

Effective November 1, which is next Thursday, minimum wages will be raised and maximum one dollar an hour. For the 337-odd students minimum will be 60 cents and maximum one dollar.

Student government has for several years sought an increase in student wages.

"I think this is as much of an increase as could be obtained at this time," Bachman said. He termed it a "definite step forward in terms of greater incomes in the future".

He lauded the administration for "wonderful cooperation."

"At all times," Bachman continued, "it displayed a sincere interest in the welfare of the students."

Mrs. Blair's memorandum recommended that wages higher than 75 cents an hour "be justified with a statement on the appointment papers."

"The students have been fine in working with us on the plan and recognize that frequently departmental budgets will not permit increases" the memorandum from Mrs. Blair states. "It is expected that departments will do the best they can within their framework and the existing situation to provide work for as many students as possible at the best rates possible."

"Please understand that there cannot be any additional salary funds available for student work," Mrs. Blair therefore, be necessary to decrease student work hours in order to increase you give in the hourly rate

EMPLOYERS RIGHTS

Mrs. Blair listed a list of regulations which she said "the employer has a right to expect of the students."

These were:

"A full hour's work for an hour's pay."

Work at the beginning and closing of semester or term, when it is most often needed."

"Steadiness or regularity on the job."

Work at "appropriate times."

"Some students think they can make up absences by putting in time at their own convenience. This time rarely fits the need of the job. At times it is impossible to provide make-up work for the student who has been absent so that he can earn his pay." Mrs. Blair declared.

LARGEST CAST SET FOR TONIGHT'S PLAY

'Skin Of Our Teeth' Features 46 Players; Ends On Tuesday

By DAVE FLETCHER

One of the largest casts ever assembled for a Speech Department production will open tonight as Thornton Wilder's "The Skin Of Our Teeth," tonight at 8:15.

Dr Lynn Orr, Director of the three-act comedy which will be presented for the August Festival, Theater, announced a cast of 46 players.

Featured in the presentation will be Suzy Saunders in the role of Sabina, originally created by Tallulah Bankhead. Stanley Devitas as Mr. Antrobus, the character originally portrayed by Frederick March. Margie Tunstall as Mrs. Antrobus, the role first played by Florence Eldridge. Caroline Williamson in the role of the Fortune Teller, which was first portrayed by Florence Reed and Ruth Harvard and Eli Ask as the two Antrobus children.

The remainder of the cast includes Reggie Ivory, Hank McCann, Bruce Jean McFall, Jack Phil Johnson, Ron Hurley, J. Jay Doe or George Soelvin or you, the average American at grips with destiny. The Antrobuses run a gamut of laps and mishaps, are as durable as radiators, and look upon the future with a disarming optimism.

HEROIC CHARACTER

Alternately bewitched, befuddled, and bedazzled, they are the stuff of which heroes and buffoons are made. They have survived a thousand calamities by the skim of their teeth. The play is a tribute to their indestructibility.

Recently revived on Broadway, the cast included Mary Martin as Sabina, Helen Hayes as Mrs. Antrobus, and Frederick March as his original role Mr. Antrobus. During its run, it was televised nationally by NBC.

Thornton Wilder has done much in the way of experimental theater work, but is perhaps best known for his satire "Our Town," which created a sensation in theater circles because it was presented without scenery, on a completely bare stage. Last season his play "The Matchmaker" was presented on Broadway.

"The Skin Of Our Teeth" is a comedy about George Antrobus his wife and two children, and their general maid. Lily Sabey. George Antrobus is John

Stevenson H-Bomb Proposal Shows Vision, Wisdom

We cannot say that tomorrow is a long way off when the subject of the H-Bomb is raised.

Ultimate destruction may be only vaguely comprehensible now; yet just 11 years ago men would have dismissed as nonsense the suggestion that a bomb as powerful as the puny ones exploded over Hiroshima and Nagasaki could be made.

Presidential candidate Adlai Stevenson has brought the matter up for discussion; not merely in relation to the hysteria of an arms race, nor to the proven hell of our current weapons, but also to the imminent physical danger facing the human race.

If elected, Stevenson is in a position to exercise authority over nuclear experiments. How he will use this authority is a legitimate political question. It is not a false issue. It is not, as one eminently biased Republican journal reported, "the appeal of a political candidate in search of an issue."

'Few Scientists'

That same publication haughtily sought to dismiss the logic of Stevenson's statements by saying that "although he has a few scientists in his corner," continued thermonuclear explosions are necessary if intercontinental ballistics missiles are to be tested. Russia, runs the theory, will have them; we, in save our necks, also must.

Carry this a bit further, however. Mr. Eisenhower himself has proved that Russia's A-bombs can be easily detected by this country. He has made such observations of such Soviet tests. Russia cannot develop IBM without testing, if the theory holds; therefore the answer is by no no better position than ourselves. She would have no advantage.

If we explode an H-Bomb, Russia knows. If she sets one off, we do. And meanwhile the world is polluted with deadly radioactive particles.

A few scientists! Who should know better what the effects will be? The scientists or the politicians? Wars can be fought with other weapons, but nothing can be done if the human race is extinct.

If more people would listen to the statements Mr. Stevenson makes concerning the H-Bomb, and not listen to the muddled puking of partisan critics, there would almost certainly be no criticism of his proposals. Their thoughtful and intelligent wordage should be accepted by members of both parties—yes, even Mr. Eisenhower—as clear and vital contributions to the national interests.

The comments of Mr. Stevenson himself, who may be called America's most wronged intellectual since Woodrow Wilson, are, in part, as follows:

"I am not only opposed to unilateral (one-sided) disarmament but I have felt that we should not put too many of our eggs in the atomic and hydrogen basket. I have felt that we should try to maintain sufficient balance, flexibility and mobility in our armed strength so that the secret of making the hydrogen bomb would spread around the world. Think what would happen if somebody, another Hitler, had the hydrogen bomb. And imagine what the consequences would be if a dozen nations were conducting hydrogen bomb tests and wantonly increasing radioactive matter into the atomsphere.

"There is little danger to national security involved because, if somebody else conducts further tests we would know it and, as I have said, would have no choice but to resume such tests ourselves.

"We would prefer to get rid of our stockpile. We would even add to it, as needed, from current production. We would continue to develop and test small, clean nuclear weapons. We should continue our research and development work on guided missiles, for the defense of our cities and for use in the field.

"I call your attention to the fact that many distinguished scientists, as well as other leading figures in this country and the world, share my views. On this matter the beginning and end of wisdom do not lie in the White House and its advisers.

Can't Hide Fact

"But what I find most disturbing is the President's desire to end this discussion which so deeply concerns all mankind. He said in his press conference last week that he had said his 'last word' on this subject. We cannot brush the hydrogen bomb under the rug. What we can discuss it seriously and soberly, with mutual respect for the desire we all have for progress toward peace. This is one subject on which there cannot be, there must not be any last word . . ."

This is not gambling with the security of the world. Mr. Stevenson has rational courage, not reckless complacency. The gamblers are in truth those who refuse to attempt what is necessary because the status quo has worked well enough to have not, as of this moment, destroyed them.

make this proposal for peace a political issue, but I think this is good. After all, the issue is mankind's survival, and man should debate it, fully, openly, and as democracy's established processes. Because there has been only negative criticism of this proposal from the Republican candidates in these campaigns, I want to return to it tonight.

Reasons Why

"These are the reasons why I think the time is ripe and there is an insistent necessity for the world to stop at least the testing of these terrifying weapons.

"First, the H-Bomb is already so powerful that a single bomb could destroy the largest city in the world. If every man, woman and child on earth were each carrying a 16-pound bundle of dynamite—enough to blow him to smithereens and then some—the destructive force in their arms would be equal to the force of one 20-megaton hydrogen bomb, which has already been exploded.

"Second, the testing of an H-Bomb anywhere in the world can be quickly detected. You can't hide the explosion any more than you can hide an earthquake.

"As the President has stated, 'tests of large weapons by any nation, may be detected when they occur.' In short, H-Bomb testing requires no inspection. We will know when it happens anywhere, and by studying the data from this explosion we can determine what progress the other country has made. This means that if any country broke away, we would know it and could promptly resume our own testing.

"Third, these tests themselves may cause the human race unmeasured damage.

Polutes Air

"With every explosion of a superbomb huge quantities of radioactive materials are pumped into the air currents of the world at all altitudes—later to fall to earth as dust or in rain. This radioactive 'fallout' carries something called strontium-90, which is the most dreadful poison in the world. Only a tablespoon shared equally by all members of the human race would produce a dangerous level of radioactivity in the bones of every individual. In sufficient concentration it can cause bone cancer and dangerously affect the reproductive processes.

"Fourth. The dangers of testing by three powers are enough, but there is another reason why it is important to act now. Last May, Mr. Stassen, the President's disarmament assistant, said that he was 'near the secret' of making the hydrogen bomb would spread around the world. Think what would happen if somebody, another Hitler, had the hydrogen bomb. And imagine what the consequences would be if a dozen nations were conducting hydrogen bomb tests and wantonly increasing radioactive matter into the atomsphere.

"There is little danger to national security involved because, if somebody else conducts further tests we would know it and, as I have said, would have no choice but to resume such tests ourselves.

"We would prefer to get rid of our stockpile. We would even add to it, as needed, from current production. We would continue to develop and test small, clean nuclear weapons. We should continue our research and development work on guided missiles, for the defense of our cities and for use in the field.

"I call your attention to the fact that many distinguished scientists, as well as other leading figures in this country and the world, share my views. On this matter the beginning and end of wisdom do not lie in the White House and its advisers.

All Nations

"Effective disarmament means universal disarmament—an open world, with no secret armies, no secret weapons, and, in effect, no military secrets. Progress on this statesmen do not risk the security of their countries for hope, which may prove illusory or promises that are worthless.

"But nations have become so accustomed to living in the dark that it is not easy for them to learn to live in the light. And all our efforts to work out any safe, reliable, effective system of inspection to prevent evasion of arms agreements have been blocked by the Soviet rulers. They will not agree to let us inspect them. We cannot agree to disarm unless we can inspect them. And the matter has been deadlocked there for 11 years.

"Yet if we are going to make any progress we must find means of breaking out of this deadly deadlock. We must come forward with proposals which will bear witness to our desire to move toward and not away from disarmament.

"It was with the hard, urgent need in mind that I proposed last spring that all countries concerned halt further tests of large-size nuclear weapons—which we usually call the H-bombs. And I proposed that the United States take the lead in establishing this world policy.

"I deliberately chose to make this proposal so far removed as possible from the political arena. It was made almost four months before the party conventions. It was made before the American Society of Newspaper Editors. It was made without criticism of the present Administration's policy for H-Bomb development.

"Others, and not I, have chosen to

Letters Hit Van Fleet, Tally-Ho, Eisenhower

General's Speech Distorted Picture

LETTERS to the EDITOR

TO THE EDITOR:

It is our wish to express here in these few paragraphs a bit of sound reasoning in reply to some of the statements of Gen. Van Fleet's speech last Tuesday morning.

His remarks for President Eisenhower as an individual of honesty, fair-mindedness, integrity, friendliness, etc., we found it difficult to conclude a clear and valid point of view in reference to his position as President of the United States. It is true and we admit, that any man nominated by his party does possess these admirable traits, but a President after he has held such an office for four years should stand above his record of service and unselfishly consider instead of his 'family.'

In the course of his speech Gen Van Fleet also stated that 'He (Pres Eisenhower) has been entirely successful in the role of partisan. . . he is a Republican . . . Eisenhower has given us a leadership which is as much Democratic as Republican.'

We feel that this is very inconsistent. His statement is running under the Republican banner, to state that he is not a Republican 'neither party.' Assuming that Eisenhower is neither party, i.e. does not reflect predominately the views which are associated with the Republican Party, he is denying the American people their rights of free choice.

Our fellow friends Is it not a fact that the basis of democratic government is based upon competition and controversial policies as reflected in our two party system? It is therefore assumed that in a country as diverse as ours the people are entitled to a definite choice of the direction which our government can and will pursue under that party which they deem most qualified to operate the federal government.

Gen Van Fleet also openly misrepresented the statement made recently by Adlai concerns the discontinuation of the explosion of the H bomb.

Women Expensive

By JIM SOLES

From an editorial in the East Central Junior College Tom-Tom we find that: The average smoker will consume one pack of cigarettes per day. Considering the average price, which can range from 25 to 31 cents per package, we see that smoking is an expensive habit. If they really want to investigate an expensive habit, they should check up on Women.

Some of the things we learn from other schools remind us of incidents here at home. From the Wake Forest Gold and Black we learn that the man of the house taking pictures for the college yearbook really doesn't waste any time. A boy walked in a girl's room, seated himself and turned to the photographer.

"How shall I pose?" the boy asked.

"Drop your trousers," reported the Photographer. "I've taken two pictures already."

AND THE UNIVERSITY of Texas received letter addressed to "Parking Authorities" and read: "Dear Sir: Please give a donkey permit as I am continually disabled to find a parking place. Very truly, Donkey." But when it comes to car troubles another student at the same university has us beat a mile. Alan Langford thought that the 1953 light blue Oldsmobile '88' he saw was the ideal vehicle for a friend of his to buy. He wrote, explaining a 168 dollar payroll check, under the front seat of the car. The car wasn't his friends and he hasn't seen it since.

We can all sympathize with the student of psychiatry at Yale who has asked a court in New Haven to approve a change his name to Edmund Lovaty. His name now is Edmund Looney.

WRTI radio voice of Temple University broan its ninth year with "Rock and Roll" music banned. It removed the music because it did not fit in with the quality programs its listening audience demands. Sounds like a good place to listen to the radio.

FROM THE UNIVERSITY of Michigan we learn that at least one man hates his politics seriously.

Bernard Ritzinger, a student there wanted to vote in the presidential elections. But local East Lansing officials refused to believe that he had been living in the college district for over one year, terming his residence "temporary" since he is a student.

"But," they said, "if you were married, that would be different. . ."

So Ritzinger, a man not easily daunted, advertised for a wife in the local papers. So far he has received thirty-seven answers.

Anyone for billiards? The Daily Texan relates A week of students instruction in the art of billiards was carried on this month at the University of North Carolina. Charlie Peterson, whose trade-mark is 'show me a shot I can't make' gave the students personal instruction along with some eye-opening exhibitions. No doubt the result of this was that the section filled up within ten minutes and the local pool room went without its customers for a week.

Calling The Card

On Life In PBK Hous

By JIM McINTYRE

Within shouting distance of my present domicile there are three fraternity houses and the same number of sorority dwellings. This is not an inconsequence by any stretch of the imagination, but it does from time to time cause me to look off in flights of fancy. It is one of these fancy flights that I would like to occupy this space with today.

It was the middle of rush week for the sororities and I had had all the same songs being sung with equal gusto all week long. The girls were all exhorting their wives to vote for their particular brand of enthusiasm to the innocent band of wide-eyed freshwomen. Across the street one of the fraternities was bringing to order some of the new crop on campus for the brotherhood. Then my imagination got the best of me, and I began to wonder what it would be like to attend a rush party for such a group as the Florida Alpha of Phi Beta Kappa.

I MENTALLY walked in the door of the PBK house. Just in time to be greeted with a warm handshake and a friendly smile in the name of brother-hood I received. Gloria of Gamma Omega "welcomed" and proceeded into the parlor where the festivities were going full swing. Miss Daisy Parker, the fraternity's rush chairman, was trying to introduce several of the notables in the house of impressing us with the number of members involved in campus activities.

"And this," she said, "is our president, Dr. Albert Leduc." Dr. Leduc arose, gave a short speech on the advantages that Phi Beta Kappa had over the other sororities, told of its natural research, and closed all his remarks to pledge up to now had finished there was a chorus of cheers until the president-leader, Dr. Marian D. Irish restored order with a gavel. "Phi Beta Kappa one time . . ."

DR. DOAK S. CAMPBELL . . . the next of the brothers to be introduced. Spoke of a number of Phi Beta's in the administration, told of the growth of the University from a small women's college . . . and remarked on the rich tradition that the local chapter had played in the University's advancement. By this time fed the assembled a rendition of "Is Everybody Happy?" with a railroad engine effect. Dean Frank S. Chesnut . . .

Now it was time to get down to the more serious business at hand. Dr. Lewis Killian got up, and with a very solemn tone of voice, "Now let's talk about brotherhood."

AS HE SPOKE of the spirit of fellowship, Dr. Blackstock and Dr. Nimkoff circulated among the prospective pledges and their poetic countenances quickly reacted to the grave tone of the whole. Dr. Kellogg was busy jotting down notes on the ongoing events while Dr. Cunningham was twitching his head. His eyes turned out to be merely his reaction to the bunting of a bee that surrounded his ear. He finished his speech.

Dr. Nimkoff followed then by Dr. Gunter. Dr. Gunter, you know, was the director of Herman Gunter. Dr. Gunter also had been the Beta Kappa who "You've Gotter Dream" When I Kiss Alone. He led the ruthless into the room as all the members sang "Come To Beta, so Phi Beta kappa's heart . . ."

I was then hurried back to reality by the realization that I had about as much chance to get into a sorority house as I had entered such a party. I went it, just the same.

THE COST OF COLLEGE

'ACP'—The board of trustees at Cornell University recently announced a tuition increase. Cornell Daily Sun editorial on the subject as follows:

"Tuition increases are usually disliked, by administrators and students alike, but they are necessary. But in the process of making a decision to increase fees, the question of increased fees have become necessary as they are unnecessary.

The University's recent announcement that undergraduate tuition would be raised from $ 600 in September, 1957, rose the question of why. It is now evident that spiralling costs of educational programs must somehow be financed from new sources. The single most important factor in the increase is faculty salaries . . . has risen steadily during the past few years and something had to be done to keep pace.

The drawers of skyrocketing tuitions are at once evident; eventually the University must be able to draw on only wealthy individuals and corporations for both mediocre and high salaries. Instead, tuition should be available to the best students from all income brackets.

Theoretically, of course there are no limits to the amount of money that can be paid for the privilege of instruction. Practically, the point is reached when involved when tuition costs become exorbitant. We certainly do not feel that next year's increase will appreciably affect the quality of the student body; moreover, we trust that the quality of instruction will improve. With promised increases in scholarship aid the University should be able to maintain itself as an institution of opportunity and high level education.

Rubin's Work Should Be Seen

Ed. Note: With this article, the FLORIDA FLAMBEAU commences what will be reappearances of exhibits and displays in the University Art Gallery and University Museum. The reviews will be written by Walter Sarbic, a sophomore majoring in speech education. We believe that this and the discussions to come will help stimulate interest in the Art Gallery and Museum.

By WALTER SARBIC

The second exhibit of this year in the Art Gallery, which is located above the Seminole Club has quite a striking impression as one enters the room.

A single study is mounted on a large suspended backing and below it is found the title lettered name. RUBIN!

The totality of the display is composed of a series in pure ocean studies dealing with sea and other vibrations. These series of art are created by a new professor at our own Florida State University, Mr. Irwin Rubin.

MR. RUBIN'S paper and leaf collages are fine to view and inspect, but most of them do not seem to be pertinent in accordance to the remainder of the exhibition. In fact, a few of these collages are "students-ish" in style and appearance. However, three pieces are probably his earlier studies in design.

To contrast the above statement, Mr. Rubin's red and Sarasota college on green mail board is "magnifico." Although it is composed of small strips of colored paper in vertical positions, it gives the viewer an illusion of circles being present in the study. This is more than lucky. Mr. R's most telling college work in this show.

OTHER COLLAGES in the exhibit are as follows: one is composed of a burlap and silk with eichings; another is a composition of metallic paper (scotch light), sequins, and vinyl polymer. (This collage would have a better effect on the viewer if it would be mounted in a more luminous location of the gallery); also there is a series of paper and ink collages (An astounding fact is their use—approximately one and one-half by three inches).

Two outstanding pieces of work are sculpture in plaster and polymer tempera worked into a study of horizontal pegs in high relief with "fireworks" color vibrations. It seems that Rubin's emphasis on these constructions is an interesting light and shadow.

ALSO PRESENT in the show are two oil studies. The oils and the two constructions definitely must be seen because one can not describe in words such pieces of work and give the reader a true valuation of Mr. Rubin's great artistic expression. In fact, all of the studies in the show should be seen by every student in education and drive. She does not yet have it quite under control, and

Tunes Of Hoffman Praised, Column Policy Reviewed

By RYAN EDWARDS

The senior recital last Monday evening of Miss Anne Hoffman, pianist, was chiefly remarkable in that it added a new dimension to this admirable musician as played in this column, we have always admired her ability to play in the spirit of the composer's intentions, but at times it is rather erratic, but in such compositions as the final movement of Beethoven's Sonata, Opus 31, No. 3 and the Allegretto del Gracioso of Ravel it was complete and exciting.

OF COURSE, to us the most gratifying moments of her program were found in those compositions which seem more deeply rooted in Miss Hoffman's spirit—namely the minuet of the Beethoven, which was performed with a naive conviction and sublimity very much as Beethoven must have intended it, and the Sarabande from Ravel's Le Tombeau de Couperin, which was played with great tenderness and delicacy.

The Bach Prelude and Fugue which opened the program was very clearly set forth, and the Brahms group quite more evidence of the artist's growing freedom when called upon to build tension and power.

PERHAPS ONE of the most exciting things about hearing the students of a large music school in recital is the happy discernment of just the sort of growth which Miss Hoffman's recital evidenced. Her senior program was a particularly gratifying one.

And now, having finally had the opportunity to review an event, we might take a moment to expound our policy.

In our opinion, every critic has three responsibilities: to his art to the artist whom he reviews, and to his public. In these three areas we have developed and specific service. He can influence the standards of his art, and prevent mediocrity; he can aid the artist in finding his particular place in his art; every artist has one); he can give praise where praise is due, and contribute to the general enjoyment and appreciation of art by his society by making people increasingly aware of the whole realm of abundant living and and why if their efforts are unsuccessful, and they are always more acutely conscious of any shortcomings or mistakes than any member of the audience could possible be.

In reviewing faculty concerts, we cannot help but say exactly what we think, colored only by the experience as professional critic, realization that teachers are always more sensitive to criticism as must spend more time studying than their students, and an opportunity to say exactly what we think, no holds barred.

These are the ways in which we hope to fulfill our desire to be worth at least threepence to the community of FSU.

Music School's Group Buzzing Over Programs

By JERI BRADFIELD

The School of Music has been functioning this year with a new gradiated busy rehearsing for their programs later this semester.

The men's glee club, known as the collegiate, were probably the first choral group to sing this year. They made their first appearance at the Pep Rally a week ago Tuesday night in Campbell stadium.

The Collegians, who are under the leadership of new director Robert E Howey, are rehearsing for a concert to be given in the auditorium with the Symphonic Band on November 9. Selections will be from some Cole Porter selections and take a quick tour through Europe with a Russian song in concert.

VESPERS PLANNED

The Women's Glee Club, directed by Miss Betty Jane Greene, is planning their annual Christmas Vespers concert to be presented in Westcott Auditorium Sunday, December 3 beginning at 5 p.m. The chorus will present a program of Christmas music in the coming of the Christ Child to Bethlehem. A wonderful quintet will start the program off with a group. Dr. Edith E Hatte, chairman of the department, will give the invocation and the benediction. The scripture will be read by Dr. Thomas Barton. During the last year as Florida State University's choir.

The University Singers and the Choral Union both under the direction of Robert Fountain are making preparations for a joint concert to be presented November 16 performance at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

The Choral Union is a group of 51 vocalists selected in tryouts. The Choral Union is composed over 150 members and is open to any one on campus.

FIRST PERFORMANCES

The "Hymn of Jesus," by Gustav Holst, will be the first to be presented and it will be accompanied by the University Symphony Orchestra. Second number will be the Vaughn Williams' Mass in G Minor which will be unaccompanied. This will be the first time that either work has been presented on the Florida State University campus, according to Gruber.

The University Singers are planning an out-of-town concert at Valdosta, Georgia, on December 2. The group will be a mixed choral service for the National Education Association.

The Choral Union will travel to Quitman on December 6 to perform the "Messiah". It has been a tradition to present this choral oratorio on campus each year and if there is enough public demand for it, this tradition will again be carried out this year, Gruber announced.

MARKING ON THE CURVE... AND WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT

Twonkey Crimscott was a professor. Choate Sigafoos was a sophomore. Twonkey Crimscott was keen, cold, and efficient. Choate Sigafoos was loose, vague, sidesaddle. Twonkey Crimscott believed in diligence, discipline, and marking on the curve. Choate Sigafoos believed in elves, Jay-Jee Mints, and marking on the sleeve of the right arm.

Yet there came a time when Twonkey Crimscott — mentor, sage, and savant — was thoroughly out-thought, out-foxed, out-maneuvered, out-played, and out-witted by Choate Sigafoos, sophomore.

It happened one day when Choate was at the library studying for one of Mr. Crimscott's exams in sociology. Mr. Crimscott's exams were murder — plain, flat murder. They consisted of one question only, and the question having four possible answers—A, B, C, and D. The trouble was that the answers were so nearly shaded, so intricately worded, that students more clever by far than Choate Sigafoos were often set to gibbering.

So on this day Choate sat in the library poring over his sociology notes, his tiny brow furrowed with concentration, while all around him sat the other members of the sociology class, every one studying like mad. "What a waste!" he thought. "All this youth, this verve, this bounce, chained to musty books in a musty library! We should be out in the fields and dancing and smooching and cutting didoes on the greensward!"

Then, suddenly, an absolute gasser of an idea hit Choate. "Listen," he shouted to his classmates. "Tomorrow when we take the exam, let's all — every one of us — check Choice 'A' on every question — every one of them."

"Huh?" said his classmates.

"Mr. Crimscott marks on the curve. If we all check the same answers, then we all get the same score, and everybody in the class gets a 'C'."

"Hmm," said his classmates.

"Let's get out of here and have a ball!" said Choate.

So they all ran out and let Philip Morrises and had a ball; and I wish you all too when you light a Philip Morris, for if there ever was a cigarette to lift the spirit and gladden the heart, it is today's new Philip Morris — firm and pure and fragrant and filled with true, natural, golden tobacco, lip end to tip end.

Well sir, the next morning the whole class did what Choate said and, sure enough, they all got "C's" and they picked Choate up and carried him on their shoulders and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and piled him with sweetmeats and Philip Morris and girls and put on buttons that said "I DOTE ON CHOATE."

But they were celebrating too soon. Because the next time shrewd old Mr. Crimscott gave them a test, he gave them only one question — to wit: write a 30,000 word essay on "Crime Does Not Pay."

"You and your ideas," they said to Choate and tore off his epaulets and broke his sword and drummed him out of the school. Today, a broken man, he earns a meager living as a camshaft in Toledo.

Students Cross Fingers As Picnics Are Planned

By MICKEY COLE

"Weatherman, please be kind!" was the wish heard all over the campus this week as several groups held or planned picnics. The Art Education Club, Education Department, and Wesley Foundation crossed their fingers and hoped that rainouts wouldn't be the attire for the day's outing.

Just in case the dew did get a little thick, the Art Education club planned a game night, part of their activities inside. The members spend the first hour painting a mural and later gathered for the picnic and songfest. The Wednesday night party at the Reservation was planned for the interns who leave this week-end for their practice-teaching.

The Reservation is to be the scene of the First Annual Education Department picnic tomorrow at 5:30 p.m. Faculty, staff, students, their wives and husbands will gather together for a box supper, faculty-student games, contests and square dancing. Buses will load in front of the Women's Gymnasium for all those who need rides.

Climbing aboard the picnic wagon before the picnicking season completely vanishes is the Wesley Foundation. Free transportation leaving from the Wesley Foundation at 3 p.m., plenty of food, relay races—who could ask for more to make a good picnic?

"And the witches will get you if you don't watch out." There'll be plenty of witches, black cats and Jack-o-lanterns at the Newman house tomorrow night when the Newman Club holds its annual Halloween party. The Kappa Alphas and the Alpha Chi Omegas are hoping that by wearing costumes they can outwit the witches for this Halloween season. Thursday night will be the big night for them.

Speaking of parties, the Sigma Nus and the Delta Zetas were "Elvis" the other night when the Delta Zetas entertained the Sigma Nus with an Elvis Presley Party. Everyone dressed in his "craziest" clothes and Elvis hats. Their costumes were supplemented by guitars, which of course, everyone played to perfection. There was even a white Cadillac on the table for effect.

This week is particularly special to two Greek letter groups for Kappa Delts dedicated its new house and Alpha Chi Omega will dedicate its new one Sunday. The Kappa Deltas received approximately 200 guests Wednesday night at the formal dedication. After the dedication, they entertained visitors at Open House. This week was chosen for the dedication because it was also the anniversary if the founding. The first party to be held after the ceremony will be tomorrow night when pledges and guests are invited to an informal combo party.

Tomorrow will be a big day for all sorority members on campus. Sorority girls will have an opportunity to pull on their best dresses, hats and gloves for the annual Panhellenic luncheon tomorrow at 12:30. Raymond L. Kappa Delta Opens New Chapter House

By DIANE DAVIS

The Kappa Delta's had planned on be proud of, as they opened their new home Wednesday.

The eight traditional Neo Georgian house is not the first home of the chapter here at FSU, however. The chapter was formed on campus Nov. 11, 1954, making it not only the oldest fraternity on campus but also in the state.

Prima Donna house had been planned over for about two years by many girls in an effort to get a permanent home. Mrs. Mariorie Moore Hall was Kappa Delta.

The interior of the home includes the most modern of furnishings. The spacious entrance hall is done in early American motif. Another modern touch is the wrought iron stairway. The formal drawing room has the same colonial motif as the hall with two love seats and furniture in traditional style. The 24-foot living room has quiet modern furniture and three sofas in a friendly room done in yellow and green. Tweed carpets in the upholstery and throw pillows help create a relaxed atmosphere. The dining room is done in the colors of the green and gold. Chairs are upholstered in a colorful tapestry. The library is done in the most genuine colonial manner. Bookcases are built-in and contain the chapter's many and well filled book cases.

Those responsible for the beauty of the house are the interior decorator, Mrs. Lester Hodges, and the housemother, Mrs. Ethel Bowden. Mrs. Bowden is a graduate of the home economics department of FSU.

Well, gang, if I can ever get Irvine to stop "Leap-Frogging" all over the place I'd like to get him to talk to me about the latest record discovery at Baker's.

I really can't blame the guy though. That Les Brown music was the most. We continued a conversation at the Homecoming Dance that commented Les Brown's style. The speculation was whether Brown could interpret Dixieland music.

I would like to go on record as saying that he probably could, but not with his present band. I happen to know for a fact that his band members can read music and that is taboo with a Dixieland group not only that, but they don't allow it either.

By the way, Les has some tremendous albums out, stocked at Baker's, of course. His "Sentimental Journey" album is probably the most popular of all. Fridman got this album from Baker's last year when Les Brown was here. Irvine thinks "Leap Frog" is one of the greatest he has ever heard. Also on the album are some good danceable favorites like "Sentimental Journey" sung by Doris Day, "Daybreak Serenade" and "Tenderly."

Now I'd better go grab Irvine before he gets himself into a comic strip character headed for the window.

LAYTE BOWDEN

Homecoming Queen Has An Outstanding Charm

By SYLVIA WARD and SUE MASSEY

Perhaps you haven't as yet had the pleasure of meeting Layte Bowden, our Homecoming Queen for this year. We all know that beauty is one of her most outstanding charms, but there is more to tell about this terrific little gal. Her interests, hobbies, social life, extra-curricular activities, and perspective careers are quite varied. For more details suppose we look in on Layte's past, present, and future.

In her high school days at Fort Lauderdale High, she showed much interest in her school activities. Layte was a member of Juniorettes, a girls service club, sports editor of her school newspaper, president of the Press club, secretary of Inter-Club Council, member of G.A.A. and Scroll, and secretary of the Wheel Club. Miss Fort Lauderdale High attendant, Homecoming Queen attendant and held member ship in the Tri-Hi-Y, Pep, and Latin clubs.

Since coming to Florida State University, Layte has become a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and was tapped for Mortarboard Council and Villaro Vamps, of which she is now service as secretary. Last year she served on the University elections committee, was in the Sophomore Queen's Court and the Inter-Fraternity Council Court. Layte has also had the honor of being chosen a member of the Miss Gymkana Court in her freshman and sophomore years.

With all of this it seems hard to believe that she can find time to fit in a variety of hobbies. But such is the story, for Layte loves water-skiing and horseback riding as well as the delightful and making most of her own clothes. When asked what her favorite sport was, Layte smiled and replied quite emphatically "football."

During the summers our Queen may be found working in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, or on a ment in Ft. Lauderdale, or on a department store college board. Layte has often thought of entering as a career, but quite recently decided to go into the field of advertising.

Friendliness, casual dress, serenity and "no lines" are all traits that are highly admired by our queen in men. By the way, she is partial to brothers. During all of the downpour of Saturday's game Layte's composure "never" dampened at all," and she describes the thrill of watching the game from the top of the grandstand as one thing she had in her entire life. "I had been in courts before as attendant, but never as a queen. It was the ultimate!" she exclaimed. Layte's favorite pastime is "just jack-pot!"

As the year rolls on, Layte will represent FSU in many activities. One such event is the Gator Bowl Contest to be held December 26 thru January 2 in Jacksonville. During that time she will be entertained with luncheons, receptions, etc. With her charming personality and good looks we can expect nothing but the best from someone so special as our 1956 Homecoming Queen.

Old Home Week

For more than one Florida State football player, and for coach Tom Nugent, tomorrow night's game is no trip to Philadelphia in general will be a sort of "going home."

There are several players on the team who hail from the general part of the country, Pennsylvania. New York, Massachusetts, etc.

Most of their folks will probably be down for the game, providing an added incentive to the fact that they are playing before such a large crowd.

Nugent has indicated that he has planned his first big reunion in 12 years or so, and many of the players might plan to renew old friendships.

This will added impetus to possible victory. Nugent seemed two Pennsylvanians to captain the Seminoles in the game, Al Pacifico of Altoona, Pa. and Ronnie Schomburger of Pittsburgh.

This strategy worked perfectly two weeks ago in North Carolina when Nugent selected native North Carolinian Joe Holt to captain the Seminoles against South Carolina State.

The Seminoles won the contest 14-0, and after the game Holt drew considerable praise from Nugent for outstanding defensive play.

STEPPING DOWN

There has been considerable anxiety here and there over what the effects of playing before such a large crowd may be on the team.

Along that line, but looking to next week's game at Miami, Nugent spoke to a Touchdown Club meeting in Columbus, Ga. last Monday, and one person asked him if he would feel for his boys to play Miami in such a huge stadium as the Orange Bowl.

"I'll be like stepping down after playing Villanova in Philadelphia this week," Nugent cracked. "They're supposed to have 100,000 fans there you know."

Considering the fact that Miami usually has 40,000 up and up for their home games in the Bowl, it is a bit unusual for a team to be "stepping down" when they play there.

RISING STATISTICALLY

In only their second year of major-college football competition the Seminoles are rapidly making themselves known in national football statistics.

The Tribe is rapidly establishing itself as one of the best defensive units in the country.

As of this week, official NCAA statistics show that the Seminoles rank seventh in the country in total defense, the interestingly enough, Villanova ranks eighth and Miami ninth at the moment.

Nugent's charges have permitted their opponents but 70 yards a game in total defense thus far, altogether 940 yards in five games. Records have been gained against FSU.

In passing defense, the Tribe is making an even better showing nationally. As of this week they rank second only to Mississippi and Texas Christian in pass defense record in the country.

Five opponents have gained only 196 yards through the air against Florida State. They have completed but 31 of 42 passes against the Tribe for a percentage of .307.

Individually, the Seminoles have made only one mark on the national statistic files—that lone entry by the quarterback Lee Corso.

Corso ranks 18th in the country in total offense, having accounted for 473 yards in 99 formations. This includes 283 yards rushing and 190 yards passing—17 completions in 33 tries.

SEMINOLE SLANTS

Michigan State may be added to the list of teams in the second annual Florida State Invitational Baseball Tournament this spring. Duke and Yale are already on the roster. . . . Don Veller's golf team is still awarting permission to move on the Tallahassee Country Club course for practice purposes. The club's long-awaited board of directors meeting is still in the offing.

Tribe In 'Grocery Bowl' Tomorrow

100,000 May See Seminoles — 'Cats

By RONNIE COLD
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State football squad embarked on their longest regular season trip this morning and will play before the largest crowd in their history when they meet Villanova's Wildcats tomorrow night before a crowd of 100,000 at Philadelphia.

As a result of fans being able to purchase tickets with grocery orders at local stores, the Wildcats are confidently drew crowds of 90,000 and upward.

If the weather is promising, the attendance could exceed 100,000 at Philadelphia's huge Municipal Stadium. All preseeds will go to the Olympic fund.

The crowd and the trip aren't the only things that are big—Villanova's mammoth line averages 213 pounds. "I believe they're the largest in the nation," stated FSU coach Tom Nugent. Physically, they're as tough as any we'll play."

"Two native Pennsylvanians will co-captain the Seminoles: Al Pacifico, a 200-pound senior guard from Altoona, Pa., and Ronnie Schomburger, 192-pound junior end from Pittsburg.

The Seminoles will be physically and mentally prepared for the 11th. We're in our best shape of the season, declared Nugent. Everyone is in almost 100% health condition and spirit is running high."

Injuries to Joe Holt and Ed Johnson to be healed, and half-

GAME CAPTAINS

Pacifico Schomburger

back Bobby Renn who was slowed last week against Wake Forest, is just about completely cured.

"This game will take our greatest effort," said Nugent. "They're equal to Georgia on the defense and could be in the same class with Duke this year due to their fine passing game and good running attack.

DEFENSIVE BATTLE

A good defensive battle can be expected—FSU is ranked seventh in the nation on total defense, and Villanova is ranked eighth.

Villanova's only loss has been to Texas A&M, a team that is conceded among the top 10 teams in the nation. The Wildcats have won their last three games, chalking up victories over Detroit, 8-7, Dayton, 19-6, and Boston U. 27-13.

Quarterback Bill Magee and halfback Davey Parr lead the Wildcat offensive attack. Villanova combines a solid running attack with a sharp aerial game, which should prove a good test for the Seminole's vaunted pass defense.

Florida State will be fighting the oddsmakers in seeking their third consecutive victory over Villanova. The Philadelphia papers are making the 'Cats two touchdown favorites for tomorrow night's contest. Last year the Tribe edged by 16-13 here at Tallahassee.

This year, the 'Cats will be on home ground, and if the wire the outlook is not too heartening for the Seminoles.

Last week against Wake Forest, the first Seminole backs were handicapped by the rain and mud, and came out of the skirmish with a 14-14 tie. Many observers contend that the Tribe would have taken the contest on a clear field.

Hoping for such a day of field this week, speed merchants Lee Corso and Bobby Renn will be trying to lead the Tribe in putting their arrows a record on the winning side.

Although the Wildcats are favored, Nugent expects a close game. "It should be a pretty well-matched contest, predicted Nugent. "I only hope our boys aren't looking ahead to the Miami game."

Frosh Seek Second Win Tonight

NEW VARSITY HOOPSTERS. Moving up to the Florida State varsity basketball team from last year's frosh are (left to right). Hugh Durham, Joe Williams, Dave Hortin, Fred Woodward, and Tommy Donovan.

Seeking their second victory Florida State's freshman football squad encounters Georgia Military College tonight in Milledgeville, Georgia.

Freshman coach Paul Odom, has shaken up the frosh lineup considerably. The interior line faces the most changes.

Joe Wallis and Royce Bryan will apea at tackles. Wallis is a 185 pounder from Albany, Georgia, and Bryan tips the scales at 207 and hails from Auburndale.

Two Miamians, John Jenkins and Jim Rogers, will start at guard position. Jenkins weighs in at 176 and Rogers at 198.

Fred Pickard a 190 pounder from Columbia, Tennessee, is slated to open at left half. Tony Romeo and John Bosley continue to hold down the end slots and Paul Slaton will again operate center.

The fullback position is still held by Terrell Traylor John Nevelle, who according to Odom, has put some fine ball, will start at quarterback.

Not much is known about Georgia Military according to Odom, except that they'll be fourth Odom or assistant is seeing how his boys will do against an almost all sophomore team.

"They're ready physically and their spirit is high" said Odom of the frosh squad. "This game will be closer than the last one."

The last game the Baby Seminoles played was against Eglin Air Force Base, a team loaded with pro and ex-collegiate stars. The Tribe dropped that one 25-13 but topped Mississippi Southern's 'B' team, 20-18.

The frosh are scheduled to meet the University of Miami's Baby Hurricanes at Mi Dora in about two weeks.

Scouting Report On Tribe Foes

Here's a brief report of what Florida State's future football opponents did this past weekend and their record to date.

VILLANOVA (Oct. 27-Philadelphia)

The Wildcats won their third straight game Saturday, subduing Boston University, 27-13. They have lost only to Texas A&M, 19-0, and own wins over Detroit (9-7) and Dayton (13-0) in addition to Boston U.

Reports from Villanova publicity director Bill Dudley indicate that a crowd of 100,000 fans or more is expected for Saturday's FSU-Villanova clash, with all proceeds going to the Olympic fund.

MIAMI (Nov. 3—Miami)

The Hurricanes of Andy Gustafson got off the floor in the final quarter to tie Georgia Friday night in the Orange Bowl, 7-7, leaving their season record at 3-0-1.

This compares with the Georgia-Florida State game when the Bulldogs produced a field goal in the final minutes to gain a 3-0 triumph over the Seminoles.

FURMAN (Nov. 10—here)

The Purple Hurricanes lost their fourth straight contest Saturday, to Newberry, 13-7. They had previously fallen before George Washington, 10-0, Auburn, 41-0, and Wofford.

AUBURN (Nov. 24—Auburn)

The Tigers held powerful Georgia Tech to a 7-7 deadlock for one quarter at Atlanta Saturday, but then succumbed to the Yellow Jackets' depth and a 27-7 defeat.

This left them with a 2-2 record, having beaten Furman (41-0) and Kentucky (13-0) and lost to Tennessee (35-7).

Frats, Dorms In Quarterfinals Of Intramural Tennis Doubles

In the Dorm tennis doubles the Feds, Magnolia Hall, Penthouse and Methodists moved into the quarterfinals of the winners bracket.

The tough match saw Ron Fisher and Dick Chandler of Magnolia best Guy Meidrick and Bill Vorries of the Rebels 6-2, 4-6, 6-1. APO and the Vets defaulted out of the tourney.

In the Frat doubles SN's Britt and Urus beat Fretwell and Bedsole of PKT, 6-3, 6-1. Dick Bee and Tony Reese of LCA beat Keller and Fulmer of SPE, 6-8, 6-6; Shrigley and Westbrook of KA defeated Carl Williams and Doug Allen of PKP, 6-4, 8-7, 6-4.

Bruce Jacobs and Dean Donesky, SC, beat Al Dares and Jack Pollock, KS, 8-4 7-5. 6-1 Bill McKenzie and Merry Alexander of ATO beat Larner and Schwartz of TEP, 6-2, 6-2.

Joe Guzic of the Feds beat Joe Turner of Co-Op House in the singles 6-1, 6-3.

Play continues daily at 2 20 on the varsity courts. Monday's leading matches are Dorm doubles. Feds vs Magnolia, Penthouse vs. Methodists, BSU vs Playboys, Senior Hall vs. Lutheans, Rebels vs Co-Op House.

BASKETBALL

The intramural basketball season will open Monday. Monday in the men's gym Games will be played at 7, 8:30 and 9:30 on Monday nights through Thursday.

The installation of the new basketball backboards in the new men's gym accounts for the fast action of the Intramural Board at their meeting last Monday, to open the season this month.

The executive committee will meet at MPE Room 213 next Monday at 4 P.M. to draw up team schedules for both University and independent divisions.

Teams wishing to play this season must have their entry in the intramural office by next Monday, noon with a roster of the players.

Reservations for practice time on the courts can be made by calling the gym switchboard, extension 7-6741.

Tribe's Opponents In Crucial Games

Several of Florida State's future football opponents play key games this week, many of which may affect the Tribe's chances for victory later in the season.

The busiest one of course is the Miami-Texas Christian game in Fort Worth, Texas. Should the Hurricanes, who are unbeaten and poor-tied defeat TCU, it would make them all the tougher for the Seminoles next Friday in Miami.

The Horned Frogs have lost only once however in Texas A&M by a slim margin of 7-6. They will no doubt rule slight favorites over Andy Gustafson's Hurricanes.

Auburn 2-2-1 goes up against a tough Houston team and there's an old asiom which says never bet against a Texas team. Houston led powerful Texas A&M two Saturdays ago, 14-14.

Mississippi Southern puts its unbeaten skein on the line against Chattanooga and Furman plays The Citadel this week, still looking for its first win and unlikely

Bobby Renn, scatback from Henderson, N C, leads the Tribe in rushing average per carry. Renn has gained 3-4 yards and has only been caught for a loss once. That a three yarder against Wake Forest.

Inter-Faith Fellowship Meets Nov. 28

The first meeting this year of the Inter-Faith Fellowship will be held Sunday, November 28, in Landmire Lounge from 4 to 5 p.m. Evelyn Moll, president, announced.

"All persons interested in working on campus-wide religion are invited," Miss Moll said. At this first get-acquainted meeting Miss Elenor Shannon of the Danforth Foundation will be a special guest. Refreshments will be served, Miss Moll said.

Other officers are Gordon Speed, vice president; Greta Sims, secretary; and John Carlton, treasurer.

The monthly programs are planned by an inter-faith student council which is composed of the executive officers, committee chairmen, and one delegate from each organized religion on campus, Miss Moll explained.

Projects for this year include the picnic, which was held during Orientation Week, Intelligent Faith Week, Infirmary visits and noon devotions which are held every day in the club room in Landmire from 12:30 to 12:50.

Van Fleet Eulogizes Ike, Virtues In Campus Talk

By STAFF WRITER

Retired General James A. Van Fleet Tuesday urged students to vote for President Eisenhower—the man who, he said, led America from a "long period of reckless government and mediocrity which preceded."

A crowd of 250 heard Van Fleet tell "Why the Southern Democrat Should Vote For Eisenhower" in an Amphitheatre address.

Van Fleet's address was a series of claims for the President based in general on the "peace, progress and prosperity" theme developed by the Republican Party. Eisenhower, he said, is "four-square, clean and honest" and enjoys an international popularity matched "by no President in our history."

"Eisenhower's character is unimpeachable," the speaker said. "His simple, forthright honesty is the same kind that helped make this nation great. Mr. Eisenhower's personality is warm and simple—there is no sign of pompousness.

"He's one of us."

UNWILLING PARTISAN

Mentioning Eisenhower's near-hundred, logical directness" and high sense of duty, Van Fleet declared that he "has been compelled to assume the role of the political partisan."

But he added, the President "thinks and acts above the level of pure partisan politics. He's simply an American—an All-American."

Van Fleet said that Eisenhower's international prestige makes him most qualified to lead the country. "The awareness that Eisenhower has fought and won a war has been a restraining influence on Russia," he stated.

The speaker went on that, under Eisenhower, the nation has led the world in both physical strength and moral strength.

H-BOMB RAISED

During a question-and-answer session following his address, Van Fleet said that power the United States could have physical leadership when the Soviet Union also possesses the power of the H-Bomb. The listener said that both countries are in tight competition for military leadership, implying that this competition might eventually lead to war.

Van Fleet answered, "We cannot weaken our military strength. The United States has always followed the policy of building military strength as protection against aggression."

He added, "Eisenhower has always been responsible for our armament, but we cannot let ours lag unless we know Russia will disarm also."

In reply to a question as to which major party is "softest" on segregation, Van Fleet said that Stevenson's statements have varied "according to the area he was talking in." His statement that Eisenhower "believes in the equality of man and equal opportunity for the individual," aroused a cheer from the student audience.

"Eisenhower will let the individual take care of itself through local leadership," Van Fleet added. "After all, the people must accept a law before that law is any good."

'Flying High' To Appear On TV Monday Morning

By CHARLET POITEVINT

Acts from "Flying High," Florida State University's student circus, will appear for the second time this year on national television over Dave Garroway's "Today" broadcast from New York City Monday, beginning at 8 a.m. (EST).

FSU will be represented by 20 students on the NBC network show, twice for ten minutes at 8 and 9 a.m. EST. Local viewers should watch the 8 to 8:10 performance. Because Sunday time changes may effect station program schedules.

"The Skating Semmoles," Rola and "The Imperial Four" trick cycle concert act, Coach Jack Haskin to perform on the show which will be televised live from the NBC studio in Rockefeller Plaza, New York.

Appearing with the circus acts will be the Marching Chiefs' "Flying Semoles," Ed Franklin and Dick Pendleton and sponsors Barbara Curtis, Patsy Zech, Paula Parsons, Kathy Kerns, Lois de Beau Ann Williams, Omne Jean Williams, and Head majorette Jackie Hadley.

The Marching Chiefs' 130-piece band and 14 acts of the "Flying High" troupe left this morning for Philadelphia where they will perform before an estimated 100,000 football fans in Memorial Stadium at the FSU-Villanova game tomorrow night.

Coach Haskin's troupe will put on their one hour pre-game show and Manley Whitcomb's Chiefs will present a combination of his Homecoming and Band Day drills

In addition to those mentioned are Faye Moses, Sue Hendon, Leonard Dorsey, Jackie Fortune, Ken Hein, George Martinez, Buddy Jordan, Fred Burkhart, Les Childs, Diane Wright and Ralph Atwell.

Circus members are planning to attend the Shelley TV show, "Big Top" on which some of them were featured in an hour long show this summer.

The hour long pre-game show will include the following acts: ladder, high bar, single trap, cloud, ballancing trap quartette rola, clown fire web, skate, whip, hand balancing, and double trap.

Oklahoman Discovers Way To Thwart College Instructors

(ACP)—Oklahoma Daily writer Ed Turner has come up with a new way of college living which, in keeping with the times, he calls "chairmanship." Briefly, he says, it means the knack of frustrating a well-meaning professor so much an extra class he will want to quit his chosen profession as an educator and go to work for a munitions factory. Here are some of his rules:

"First of all always be late to class. Upon entering NEVER look meek or apologetic for disturbing the class. Appear surprised as if this section was scheduled for a later time or even look hurt that they could act on such petty things as an accomplished classman has caused the professor to thumb quickly through his class bulletin to see if perhaps they should have met at 8:35 instead of 8:10.

Disagree openly with the professor. An economics instructor says in his most profound and sonorous tones: "The theories of Adam Smith are the foundations of our modern system of economics." You say in an audible whisper: But that's so passe . . . making him look as if he had an old pair of pinfouls and was shouting 25 smoo instead of delivering a lecture.

Leavemanship is another effective gambit that will add sparkle to every class room. About 10 minutes before the class is over slam your book shut zip up your notebook, tuck your pencil neatly in your pocket and begin tapping your foot spasmodically, whistling to yourself. If you are a poor whistler, At five minutes before the hour, scoot up to the edge of your seat, alternating your gaze between the wall clock and your watch, shouting "5 minutes five, X minus four, X minus three", right up until the end of the hour."

ODK, Mortar Board Sponsor Leadership Meeting Thursday

ODK and Mortar Board will sponsor its annual Leadership Training Conference next Thursday beginning at 7 p.m. in 124 Science Building, said Charlotte and Phillis Patten, conference chairmen.

The conference is organized to give students on campus holding offices an opportunity to receive constructive ideas pertinent to their duties. It is also for the purpose of discussing student problems in an attempt to find desirable solutions, the chairmen said.

"Freshmen are given an opportunity to train for leadership and to become acquainted with the various channels available to them," they added.

After a general assembly the group will divide into classes to discuss leadership ideas. Included in these small group meetings will be discussions on leadership training for social men, secretaries, treasurers, religious house leaders, and departmental organizations.

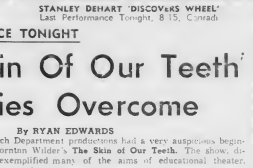
'The Skin Of Our Teeth' Difficulties Overcome



By RYAN EDWARDS

The new season of Speech Department productions had a very auspicious beginning the week-end with Thornton Wilder's The Skin of Our Teeth. The show, directed by Dr. Lynn E. Orr, simplified many of the aims of educational theater, simultaneously delighting capacity houses.

Technically, The Skin of Our Teeth is a difficult play to produce. But its dismembered aria and pell-mell plot line provided Dr. Orr with a virtual field-day. His cues to be precisely a diabolical, intricate, and fascinating spectacle.

Since Dr. Orr is renowned for his technical facility, this was not a big surprise. Anyone who remembers his productions of The Istwel Comedy, Life at Mea, and Hamlet was simply once more conscious of an expert hand at the helm.

But Dr. Orr's Skin of Our Teeth had real distinction not for the de-

'SOLID WALLOP'

The result was a brilliant theatrical experience which also packed a solid wallop. Playgoers will not forget its dazzling effect, but this effect will immediately bring to mind such moments as George Antrobus' sudden bewilderment at the thought of his son's fratricide, or Mrs. Antrobus' impassioned message of a bottle and loaves into the sea, to be washed up on shore of a future generation.

All this directed, taught with beautifully served on a large and uniformly competent cast. Each member seemed to have an understanding of the play and a well-defined note of ensemble pitch.

Those who contributed most to the warmth behind the play were Marjorie Tadell, as Mrs. Antrobus, and Suzanne Saunders, as Sabina. Miss Tadell never let the comic aspects of her part stand in the way of a beautifully tragic interpretation of her role. Her etcetera-ing and mother-hen fussing and despair as well as illustrate a good characterization. Miss Saunders' beautiful delivery of the monologue of warm concave demanded extra of such concave demands.

FSU Requests Center For Nuclear Research

Proposal Gives Collins View Shot In Arm

By STAFF WRITER

Governor LeRoy Collins' self-repeated urgings of nuclear development in Florida and the South were given a shot in the arm this week with requests for atomic study centers at Florida State University and the University of Florida.

The FSU request, which calls for a two and a half million dollar Nuclear Radiation Center unmatched in the South, is now being considered by the Board of Control. Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, executive secretary, said the FSU and U of F proposals will be considered soon by the board in a meeting November 9.

The U of F nuclear center could not compete with the FSU one, according to Dr Culpepper, because it would be oriented more specifically in an industrial direction.

He said as he understands the proposals, the FSU center will aim at the training of nuclear scientists while the U of F center will be geared toward studies developing nuclear energy in such fields as agriculture and health. Both will be used for basic research.

The university-level nuclear studies program will, he said, be designed to develop nuclear power "as a means of improving our way of life in peacetime."

J. Velma Keen, chairman of the Florida Atomic Development Commission, said a scientific advisory committee has worked toward completion of the proposals.

"Our commission is interested in the development of nuclear energy at the three universities in Florida," he said.

To build, equip and staff the FSU center during its first two years 1957-58 would require about 2.5 million dollars. Dr. Paul Backhaus, head of the Physics Department estimated. Funds are being asked of the Board of Control, subject to approval by the Cabinet Budget Commission and appropriation by the Legislature.

The principal coastal outlay, about 1.6 million, would be for the high energy nuclear accelerators and a building to house

Scientists Support, Query Stevenson H-Bomb View

By STAFF WRITER

Four Florida State University scientists have testily entered the H-Bomb discussion with statements supporting and questioning the stand of Adlai E. Stevenson.

Physics department head Dr. Paul Backhaus expressed the firmest agreement with Stevenson's view that radioactive fallout from thermonuclear explosions is of cumulative danger to humans. Speaking as a physicist with "no inside information," Dr. Schwarz said the H-bomb "is an extremely dangerous weapon to play with."

"Each H-bomb increases the danger to the human race as a whole," said Schwarz. "It is a very serious situation. Any suggestion should be followed very accurately."

He added, "I'm very much behind Stevenson's proposal."

GREEN QUESTIONS

The Chairman of Dr. Green, associate professor of physics, were in general with those of Dr. Schwarz. Dr. Green cited a study made by a committee of the Federation of Atomic Scientists as indicating that "insofar as we know, there is no excessive hazard by the amount of pollution in the atmosphere caused by current tests in relation to other radiation hazards such as those caused by use of X-rays in therapeutic examinations, cosmic rays and naturally present radioactive substances.

However," continued Dr Green, "there are so many unknowns involved with those of local concentration of fallout material by the possibility that a particular component might have a highly injurious effect, that one cannot in the least dismiss the danger."

Dr. Green said the committee study concluded in a report published in the February, 1956, Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, that the rate of testing could be expected to result in 100 babies to be born in the world per year incapable of reproduction. The committee considered this, Dr. Green said a very small danger statistically.

WORTH RISK?

The question of halting H-bomb tests, which seem to boil down to the question, he said, of whether the tactical danger of stopping them is counterbalanced by the statistical danger to human life as pointed out in the study.

"It is a political decision, he said. "I would have to know the total strategic position – the exact status of Russian development and the exact status of he United States' development.

"On the other hand, it would seem that a bold, well carefully devised, move at this time by the United States might break the deadlock in the international control of nuclear weapons without weakening ourselves appreciably."

Dr. Green added, "If we did no tests, we should check with them in a year by re-examining our policy to see if the move had been followed by further, more impor-

This is the 30th season of the Symphony which is under the direction of Robert Lindsey.

The third work of the evening will be one movement of the Concerto No. 1, in D minor, op. 15, for piano and orchestra, by Brahms. Edwards, of the studio of Carlisle Floyd and Phyllis Rapperport will play the Rondo Allegro con troppo movement.

Following the intermission, the orchestra will perform the Sibelius' Symphony No. 1 in E minor, op. 39.

The Sibelius Symphony will be heard for the next Friday, Nov. 9 at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall as the Sibelius Society Commemorative Concert during the new library build

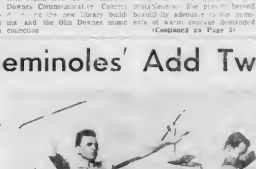
'Flying Seminoles' Add Two Braves

New Twirlers Train To Carry On Tradition

By CHARLET POTEYENT

From appearances, Florida State University's "Flying Seminoles" seem to be on the way to becoming a tribe. Or that's how it looked to students who saw four of the Indian baton-twirlers at the Homecoming Parade and Pow Wow.

The four extra strutting, twirling, dancing "Seminoles" are Wesley B. Carroll, better known as "B" and Ted Daniel, protegees of the original "Flying Seminoles." Dick Puckett and Ed Franklin who are training the new pair to carry on the tradition they began last year.



Manley Whitcomb, Marching Chief's band director who solicited Ted and "B" last May, kept them busy over Homecoming because he "didn't want the newness of them to be spoiled."

APPEAR AT GAME

Ted and "B" made their third appearance together at the weekend when they highlighted the Homecoming Relationship Ruth School football game in Cleawater

At the invitation of Stephen Yanetovich, director of the Clearwater band, who recently visited for three years, the pair put on, a pre-game show in full Indian costume and headdress and a halftime exhibition of one and two baton twirling.

We probably will concentrate more on twirling routines than ever before," he said. Ted and Dick and Ed do—flutes like juggling four batons between us or twirling five batons," said Ted of picked up enough twirling tricks plans for the future "Flying Seminoles" act.

"B" and I are crazy about the Oriental Indian dances, however, and we want to work up some new color schemes to go with them," he said.

WATCHED MAJORETTES

"B" became interested in twirling from watching majorette twirlers. He decided to take a few pointers from Bill Allen, noted baton instructor from Miami, and another boy, Norman Alexander. They had for two years an act similar to the "Flying Seminoles."

"I took one baton lesson when I was in the ninth grade, said Ted, but I learned mostly from a friend

"B" has studied dancing in his hometown, Statesboro, Ga., for a number of years and is proficient in ballet, ballet and now is interested in modern dance Ted doesn't claim to be a Fred Astaire, but he is currently taking modern dance lessons from head majorette Jackie Hasley.

LOOK ALIKE

When the two appear on the field, spectators will probably not be able to tell them apart. They are almost identical in size, both are 5'10", both alike and wear the same size clothes. Without "war paint" Ed can be distinguished from Ted only by his more compact, athletic build.

Dads' Day Program To Feature Game

By NANCY GENE BROWN

The Furman football game will be the main event as FSU students honour their fathers with the annual Dads Day, November 10

Jim Soles, student chairman, announced that the program is being planned to make the parents feel at home on the campus, and to give them a bird's-eye view of university life.

Registration for the weekend will be on November 9 from 1 until 9 p.m. and again on Saturday from 9 until noon in the Trophy Room at the Student Center. Opening the Dads-Day activities will be a picnic at the picnic grounds opposite the stadium beginning at noon. Reservations must be made in advance with tickets at one dollar.

Immediately following the picnic will be a concert by the Campbell Stadium Arrangements have been made for parents to sit in the student section with their sons and daughters. One ticket may be purchased for $3.50, using the student activities book date ticket. Other tickets must be purchased at the regular price of $3.50. Soles said.

Open house will be held during the evening in sororities, fraternities, and dormitories.

Concluding the Dads' Day program, a variety show will be presented beginning at 8 in Opperman Music Hall.

The student religious houses will invite parents who wish to remain overnight to attend Sunday morning services with their sons and daughters, Soles said.

Awards will be presented to the organization with the largest percentage of parents present, to the sorority or fraternity with the largest percentage of parents present, and to the dorm which received the longest distance to attend.

Working with Soles as subcommittee chairmen are Ann Bohler, publicity; Joyce Weatherspoon, picnic; Bill Wright; and James Bond, registration; Carolyn Cox, Saturday evening; Arnold Greenfield variety show. James Davis, housing; Betty Lou Whittle, secretary; and Barbara Hendrix, competition.

"We are hoping for a large attendance, however, the outcome depends on the students' interest in having their parents attend," said Soles.

Randel Talks On Near East At Coffee Hour

Dr. William Randel English professor who spent last year in Greece on a Fulbright Fellowship will show slides and speak on some of his experiences in the Near East at the English Coffee Hour.

The weekly program headed by Dr. W. H. Rogers, head of the English Dept., will be held at the Westminster House Friday beginning at 4 p.m.

While in Greece, Dr. Randel taught American literature at the University of Athens, and met with his family traveled extensively throughout the country and the Near East.

1956 Tally-Ho Still Available

Students may still get a 1956 Tally-Ho, whether or not they reserved a book last year, according to Barbara Ayala, editor.

There are 450 copies left, and those may obtain a book by presenting their 1956-57 ID card at Miss Day Student Lounge, Room 16 of Longmire Building, between 3 and 5 p.m. today and tomorrow only.

Miss Ayala will continue taking picture and yearbook registrations at the dormitories this week.

Schedule is as follows:

Today—West Hall, 7-8 p.m.; Gilchrist Hall, 8-9:30 p.m.; Gilchrist Hall, 9:30 p.m.

Wednesday — Jennie Murphree, 6-7 p.m.; Reynolds, 7:30-8 p.m.; Broward, 8-8:30 p.m.; Brown, 8:30-9 p.m.; S. Cawthon, 9-9:30 p.m.; N. Cawthon, 9:30-10 p.m.

Thursday — Magnolia Hall, 7-7:30 p.m.; Senior Hall, 7:30-8 p.m.

The University is not doing the students any favors by hiring them for administrative jobs. Even if it must put up with changing schedules and other minor difficulties, still it is getting highly competent help at a scale below the minimum governmental wage for even the simplest forms of labor.

It is appropriate that the authorities should have recognized the discrepancy which exists. There is no reason why the University should take undue advantage of the fact that there are many students on campus (and off) who have no alternative but to work.

That students are underpaid is widely recognized. It is so widely recognized, in fact, that it is not inconceivable that eventually the students would have taken things into their own hands through organization of their own labor union. We believe that such increases as the one now coming up offer the alternative to this eventuality.

If raising the maximum to $1 an hour is expedient, it is nontheless commendable. Again, it is welcome news.

RoundAndRoundH-BombGoes; Where It Stops . . . .

Retired Army [illegible] J. A. Van Fleet didn't blink an eye when a student asked him in the A[illegible] Tuesday whether President Eisenhower can really claim military leadership for this country.

"What kind of leadership is it," the questioner wanted to know, "when two countries have weapons with the force of the H-Bomb and are systematically building up tension to the point where its use will be forced?"

Van Fleet cleared his throat. "Can you repeat the question," he asked.

The questioner did.

Van Fleet squared his feet and replied: "We cannot weaken our military strength. The United States has always followed the policy of building military strength as protection against aggression.

"Eisenhower has always worked strenuously for disarmament, but we cannot let ours lag unless we know Russia will disarm also." That, according to Van Fleet, settles the H-Bomb issue.

We seem to recall, too, Mr. Eisenhower saying his "last word" on candidate Stevenson's disarmament proposal. So while generals Ike and Van Fleet have "ended" the issue flatly and finally, the H-Bomb race goes merrily on. Where it will stop, nobody knows.

Student Travel Service A Worthy Project

Thee S[illegible] Travel Bureau, which began operations this week, is one of the more notable projects of student government.

It is now more efficient than the method developed by students of posting notices of rides available or wanted. Such notices, however, are still numerous at various bulletin boards on campus.

Students who have or need transportation over weekends could do well to check with the Travel Service. It is free, swift and rewarding. Hours are 2 to 5 p.m. daily in the traffic court office in Longmire Building, telephone 7-2191.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

H-Bomb Tests Give Information

To The Editor:

As I was reading the lengthy editorial in last Friday's Flambeau I noticed several controversial statements. The most fantastic of all being "Effective disarmament means universal disarmament — an open world, with no secret armies, no secret weapons, and in effect no military secrets." This condition would be wonderful, but could only have been stated by a philosopher thinking of a perfect Utopia. Plato had a plan for governmental perfection, but has it ever come into being?

Here's another thought that should be taken with a grain of salt. That is the connection of scientific research with politics. Even in universities and other institutions of higher learning these two fields are classified in the realms of natural sciences and social sciences respectively. I leave this topic with a simple question: Do politicians have the right to obstruct the progress of a definately unrelated field?

In respect to the reactions caused by thermo-nuclear explosions, the author of said editorial took a very pessimistic and unscientific outlook on the whole program. These detonations are bringing forth data that can be used in many of the physical and biological sciences. Understandably, advances are being made in nuclear physics and nuclear chemistry because of these tests but discoveries are also being made in the relationship of how radiation affects the sciences of meteorology, zoology, medicine, botany and genetics. I'm sure that a program that brings forth information in so many different fields should not be thought of in such a one-sided manner.

SINCERELY,
BEN C. WITHERS

Ed. Note: Mr. Stevenson, though an idealist, is not as impractical as the isolated statement quoted in this letter would imply. Taken out of context, his statements lose significance —a fact which his detractors have used to create confusion about his stand.

We believe, with Mr. Stevenson, that in these dire times it is better to make strenuous attempts at progress rather than merely seek to maintain the status quo. The status is so bad at the present that a President is needed who will make more of an effort to improve it.

The Florida Flambeau will print all signed letters from students except those which are libelous or insidious attacks upon individuals. Letters over 250 words may be cut at the discretion of the editor if space is limited. In some cases, where a valid reason is given the name may be withheld.

SORORITY GAINS SUPPORT

(ACP) The Cornell University chapter of Sigma Kappa has gained backing in its fight to learn the reason for its suspension by the national council. The chapter was suspended but so far neither the members nor Cornell University officials have been able to learn the reason for this action. National officials have told the University that the suspension does not concern Cornell. Last Spring, the Cornell chapter of Sigma Kappa pledged a Negro student.

Support for the Cornell chapter has come from 91 percent of the University's school women. They passed a resolution saying they did not question the right of Sigma Kappa's national council to take such action, but that they felt the local chapter had not received a proper explanation for the suspension.

Ensemble Auspicious 'Series Start

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

The Solisti di Zagreb, a superb chamber ensemble, played before a small but highly enthusiastic audience in Westcott Friday night. Their program consisted mostly of unfamiliar or rarely performed works, but was nonetheless interesting throughout.

Antonio Janigro, who has already established an enviable record [illegible] solo cellist, is the organizer and conductor of the group and he has molded them into a single sonorous instrument. The 13 strings in the orchestra play almost as if they had been playing together all their lives, a minimum of conducting sufficing to bring out subtleties that must have required hours of rehearsal.

Janigro himself appeared as soloist in the opening Boccherini Cello Concerto in B flat. His playing was of virtuoso caliber and his musicianship was more than equal to his technique. While not possessing a really big, intense tone he made the instrument sing nobly and the long phrases were quite wonderfully set forth. Janigro's control was occasionally uneven when traversing wide registers of sound, but within a register it left nothing to be desired and his command of the upper reaches of the cello is almost without parallel among contemporary cellists.

THE ROSSINI SONATA for Strings in G [illegible] violas was a slight work but full of honest fun and youthful vigor. The slow movement was surprisingly sensitive. The concluding movement was played with spirit and zest but the ensemble in the 1st Violin section was a little shaky in the beginning.

Paul Hindemith's Funeral Music for viola and strings—written, orchestrated, copied, rehearsed and broadcast within twenty-four hours—was the high point of the whole program. The music bears no evidence of hasty or careless construction, on the contrary, it is one of Hindemith's noblest and most moving achievements. Coupled with Janigro's sensitive and profound interpretation, it was the sort of performance that can never be captured successfully on record, but must be lived and felt in person to be believed.

MILKO KELEMEN, a young Yugoslavian composer and fellow-countryman of the Solisti di Zagreb, was represented by a short group of Concertante Improvisations, composed just a year ago. In temperament and style he draws heavily on the Viennese school Schoenberg, Berg, Webern et al., but his idiom is not at all twelve-tone. He has a tendency to become preoccupied with his own devices but is still an engaging and clever, if not yet profound composer.

The Mozart Divertimento in D, K. 136, concluded the program, but in response to audience demand the Solisti played three encores: a Corelli "Badinerie," a movement from the Mozart B flat Divertimento, and a charming minuet by Boccherini.

AT ALL TIMES Janigro was in complete control of the group, and his conducting was sensitive and [illegible]. The dynamic range of the group is a wide one, and it was used to good effect especially in the ghost-like pianissimos and pizzicato passages. The Boccherini Minuet was played for the first time like a minuet should be played. Almost everyone today skims over them in a hurry to get to the Allegro — the Boston Symphony included — but the Solisti restored one's faith in the ultimate wisdom of the classic masters.

In short, a very auspicious beginning for the 1956 Artist Series. Let us hope we do not have to wait another five years for a chamber group to perform here.

The World Today

Poland Like Red China

JEROME BERNSTEIN

This November the General Assembly of the United Nations once again will face the explosive issue of admitting Communist China to the U.N.

NOT SINCE 1950 when Soviet delegate Jacob Malik walked out of the Security Council over this question has the United Nations been faced with such pressure over which faction represents China. Then Red China was only three months old while Nationalist China under Chiang Kai-shek was threatening to counterattack the mainland from Formosa.

During the years that have passed the world has seen Red China conquer Tibet, the northern half of Viet Nam, and the sending of Chinese troops into Korea to fight United Nation forces. However, today many of the smaller nations in the General Assembly, including Britain, Canada and Yugoslavia, would favor Red China's admission.

This question is of grave importance, particularly in the light of the present Hungarian Revolution against Soviet Russia and its puppet government. The issue is not just a question of membership, but a question of substitution of one government for another.

THE U.N. Charter speaks of the "Republic of China" as one of the five permanent members of the Security Council with its veto. Red China is known as the People's Republic of China. As long as the Republic of China exists, the United Nation Charter offers no direct way of substituting one Chinese government for another.

Today Chiang's China consists of a legislature, a President, an army of six hundred thousand men, an air force, and a population of eight million people. Even though this population compared with the six hundred million of the mainland is slightly more than one per cent of the combined population, the fact that they do exist gives Chiang his legitimacy to the Security Council seat.

THE MAIN TROUBLE is that few of the UN members believe that Nationalist China can make good on its claim to reoccupy the mainland. Red China, on the other hand, controls the mainland but not Formosa. Both factions claim Formosa as part of China.

The UN has no power to alter the Republic of China's claim to independence, but at the same time more and more of its members wish to make Communist China a member. Red China's Foreign Minister, Chou En-lai, has not asked for membership. He already claims membership through the Security Council seat which the UN allots to the Republic of China.

If the status quo between the two Chinas continue and with sufficient pressure already seen, a solution will have to be found. It might even mean a revamping of the present Charter.

WHAT, HOWEVER, does this have to do with the current unrest in the Balkans? If by chance the anti-communists in Hungary manage to gain or retain control of part of Hungarian soil, and they set up a temporary government in rivalry with the present government, which one would be entitled to United Nations membership? The same applies to Poland and Czechoslovakia.

In all the hubbub ove[illegible] Bombs, parity, and Rich[illegible] Milhous Nixon surrounding [illegible] election it seems that fe[illegible] any — are concentrating [illegible] attention upon the constitu[illegible]al implications of the cur[illegible] political [illegible]tion. Of co[illegible] such a cons[illegible]aration [illegible] bound to [illegible] rather [illegible]tive, but [illegible] so nebulo[illegible] political [illegible]entist as [illegible] cannot he[illegible] being aware of certain ba[illegible] pertinent facts.

This to me seems so [illegible]vious as to be axiomati[illegible] perhaps even trite, and [illegible] there are signs that respo[illegible]bility is disappearing from [illegible] scene of national politics.

THIS FACT IS contingent [illegible] on a second rather obvious [illegible]stitutional principle that [illegible] Chief Executive must be [illegible] responsible for the action[illegible] his subordinates.

It is here that we must co[illegible] down from the rarified ai[illegible] constitutional theory into [illegible] world of current Washin[illegible] affairs. Is Life Respectable?

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Life Magazine is owned by Henry Luce, considered by even his foes as a respectable, middle-of-the-roader, Good Joe (Not Smith) Eisenhower Republican.

We must therefore inform all the young citizens on this campus who are in danger of being polluted by Mr. Luce's respectable magazine that it isn't.

At least not according to the authorities in Fall River, mass., is it respectable.

A recent issue of Life contains, appropriately enough for its title, an eight-page display of famous art works which happen to be nude studies.

The display ranges from the Greeks almost to the modern.

IT'S NOT so modern that little boys couldn't tell that the thing on the cover and on each of those eight pages is a— shhh! nude woman. Nude not naked, please! Life will tell you there's a difference.

After receiving complaints from mothers, the Fall River police got the wife of the major newspaper and magazine distributor in the city to examine Life. She decided the issue was not "proper" for youngsters, [illegible] read the newspaper accounts and had the stuff hauled away.

THIS WAS a clever maneuver by the Fall River police. They didn't censor the magazine. They didn't close the offending stores. They just had the wife of the man who sells them exercise her matrimonial

Tribe Plays It Rough

PHILADELPHIA—The city of brotherly love was living but that down on the dwarfed playing field of Shibe Park Stadium here Saturday night.

Coaches and reporters alike opined that the FSU-Villanova battle was one of the roughest football games witnessed here in some time.

But that's no news for the Seminoles because opposing coaches have been telling Tom Nugent's men all year that they hit as hard as any team they've played.

It's difficult to say whether the cold weather affected any of the Seminoles seriously, but the ice cold and sleet strong wind blowing off the nearby Delaware bay was undoubtedly aided them several times.

Altogether, FSU kicked off five times, and had the ball with them three of those five times. The wind unquestionably played a heavy factor in the length of Bobby Ross's two quick kicks, one for 49 yards and the other for 46.

The weather may have had a special effect on two Northern boys who played key roles in the Seminole triumph, quarterbacks Ted Rodrique and Vic Prinzi.

Rodrique, from Lynn, Mass. and Prinzi, from Waverly, N. Y. surely had more previous experience in this type of football weather than Miami-bred Lee Corso.

Vic scored the first touchdown on an end sweep late in the first period of play, then "Rocky" passed to Bob Williams for the second score in the waning seconds of the first half.

An all-day drizzle Friday left the field in poor condition for the Seminoles' scheduled workout Friday night, and as a result the workout was cut extremely short.

However, the field appeared to be in good shape from its 50 yds (and we do mean lofty) confines of the press box at game time Saturday.

Municipal Stadium is a huge horse shoe affair with old-fashioned end zone stands at the North end of the field. Its barrels holds every bit of 104,000 fans.

The comparatively small crowd of 42,691 appeared completely lost in the huge arena. Poor pre-game promotion and the absence of the usual 'grocery sales' was blamed as the reason for the small crowd.

In previous instances, grocery stores had been giving away a ticket with a $10 purchase of groceries, but this time they merely accepted the tickets and attempted to sell them rather than give them away.

Speculation is that if they had gone through with their usual give away program, the crowd would have been over 90,000, as pre-game notices had advertised.

As a every ticket in the house went on sale for just $1, the purpose being to increase the amount of money going to the Olympic Fund.

Both universities had previously agreed to give all of the game profits to the fund, and this was carried out with a special halftime presentation to the secretary of the Olympic fund.

Which in all, the contest was a complete success in most any way.

CIRCUS, BAND, APPRECIATED

The Seminoles' world-famed circus, Flying High, and the talented 180 members of the Marching Chiefs, drew thrilling ovations from the fans present for their pre-game and halftime performances respectively.

Hardly a fan moved from his seat during the band's routine efforts, a most unusual thing to see at any football game. There was the "Chicken" Mouse" theme song, which the Seminole fans saw at the break of the Homecoming contest here last week.

QUAKER QUICKIES. The Villanova uniforms, navy blue and white, reminded this observer of the Chicago Bears' outfits, and many of the Wildcats looked big enough to join the pro standard bearers . . . At least two of the Seminoles were ill "casualties" of a rather rough-and-tumble tip in. All was peaceful until we approached Philadelphia, but a heavy overcast which stayed all weekend made the landing approach quite rocky . . . The first of the mid-40 temperatures was probably felt more in the high press box than down on the field Saturday. Bless the man who invented hot chocolate . . . One reporter upon arriving at the stadium commented that the press box itself must hold at least 10,000. It's a double-decked affair but unfortunately all open—no windows.

Seminole's last quarter pass interception was only the third of the season for FSU. . . . Two years ago, Lee himself tossed off six enemy aerials. . . . Nugent's "I" formation is a considerable share of the credit from Philadelphia sportswriters for the FSU victory. One pre-game story mentioned "Florida State 'I'S' Villanova Tonight"

Seminoles Pass For Two Tallies

By ALAN WHITMARSH

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 27—Florida State University's Seminoles overcome the obstacles of 45-degree weather and a vicious Villanova passing attack here tonight to defeat the Wildcats 20-13 before 42,691 fans in huge Municipal Stadium.

Ironically enough, the Seminoles stuck for two of their three touchdowns in the air themselves, as Villanova quarterback Bill Mazer ruined their national pass defense rating with 19 completions in 34 tries, good for 142 yards.

This is more than two-thirds of the yardage gained by the first five Seminole opponents in the air. Previous to tonight, the Tribe's pass defense had permitted an average of only 78.5 yards passing per game.

Tom Nugent's charges made up for the defect in passing by rolling up 227 yards on the ground however, 124 of which were turned in by halfback Bobby Renn, finally hitting his stride.

Renn went in, around and over the Wildcat defense through much of the second half, after the Seminoles picked up two Villanova fumbles to lead to their first two touchdowns.

WIN TOSS

After the Seminoles won the toss and elected to take advantage of a strong North wind for the kick off, the Wildcats immediately started driving and seemed to score the first time they got the football.

Mazer on the strength of the power running of fullback Jack Devereux and a 22-yard pass completion from Mazer to halfback John Bauer, Villanova moved to a first down at the FSU 27.

However, when Mazer went to the air here for the third time in the drive, Seminole quarterback Lee Corso was there at the FSU 4, and picked it off, giving the Tribe possession at their own seven.

Buck Mc-tis was snowed under for no gain on an end sweep, and then Corso elected to have halfback Bobby Renn golek kick. Renn's end over end boot dropped on the Villanova 44 and the Seminoles were out of trouble.

The Wildcats moved for another quick first down on the first drive of the second quarter, but Renn reeling off 18 yards in two plays and a Corso to Joe Holt pass completion putting the Tribe in business at the Villanova 26.

Renn got four more, and Ted Rodrique came in to pass for the Tribe. Rodrique hit Bobby Nelluns at the Villanova 13, but it ticked off Nellums' fingers as the Wildcat fans held their breath.

Another Rodrique pass failed, and Renn was forced to kick again, this time out of bounds at the Villanova 26.

FIRST BREAK

Then the Seminoles got their first break, with time running out in the first period. Wildcat halfback John Sapienza got two at the right side, but then fumbled and Bob Elliott pounced on it, putting the Tribe in scoring position at the Villanova 28.

Vic Prinzi a northerner who seemed to enjoy the cold weather entered at quarterback and immediately swept right end for 11 yards and a first down at the 17.

Halfback Billy Weaver went for seven more to the 10, but Bob Odom was called on for an 8 gain at the left side. Prinzi took over again, though and bootlegged in the final 10 for the game's first score.

Johnny Shepard kicked his 1[illegible] extra point of the season, and the Seminoles led 7-0 as the quarter ended.

Devereaux brought the kick to the Villanova 37, then almost personally accounted for two first downs to the Florida State 40.

In a word series of plays, Villanova fumbled and the Seminoles got it, the Wildcats almost immediately intercepted a Corso pass, then fumbled a second time and Bobby Renn got it for Florida State at the FSU 28.

Two plays netted only two yards though, and Renn quick kicked once more, this one deep out at the Villanova 40—a 60-yard boot.

The Wildcats began their second half march all the evening from that point, but after picking up four first downs, they lost possession on downs on the first down at the FSU 11.

WIN TOSS

Renn and Prinzi then quickly and poulted out of bounds at their own 42. At this point came the second powerful fumble by Villanova, this one by Bauer, with Sebastian Sapienza the hero for Florida State at the Tribe 43.

After Metts got one and Renn 10 for a first down on the Wildcat 44, Nugent's charges went to the airlanes again, Corso completing to Joe Holt to the 29, then fourth down quarterback Ted Rodrique took over

SECOND SCORE

Rodrique dropped back on the first play and lofted a 29-yard pass to Bob Nellums in the end zone, and the Tribe had a 13-0 Sheppard point of the year when the Villanova line charged in to block it. Rodrique hit 13-9 as the half ended.

Nellums

At the start of the second half the teams did little except exchange punts, until Weaver, then late in the third period, Villanova got control on their own 40 and marched to their first score.

Two aerials from Magee to end Glenn O'Dea put them up at the Seminoles' five-yard line, and after a series of plays and the perpendicular Jerry Ferrante went around end for the touchdown. The point after was good, 6 feet, making it 13-7 Seminoles.

Taking the kick to their own 25, the Seminoles immediately marched back up the field 75 yards for their final touchdown.

Renn was the big gun in the drive, rushing off the left tackle for 11 yards and a first down at the Villanova 5

From there Corso lired to Joe Holt in the corner of the end zone for the game-clinching touchdown. Sheppard made it good this time and the contest was all but over.

The Seminoles made one other excursion deep into Villanova territory in the final quarter mainly on the ball-carrying of Don Dobson, and midway in the period Villanova took over at their own 22 and began their final scoring drive

This time it was quarterback Jim Grannow who did most of the aerial warfare, and his passes led the Cats to a first down at the FSU 24

Then he dropped back to throw again, and a wicked interference penalty set up Villanova at the FSU 2. Beside the fact that Grasione never threw the ball and was smothered bath Bobby Odom was called for an interference and gave the Wildcats possession at the one.

It was apple-pie easy for Grasione to plow across from there but Kick's extra was wide and the score stood 20-13.

PDT, Feds Capture Intramural Swimming Championship Title

It looked for a short time last Wednesday at the intramural swimming finals as the DTD might oust PDT as the splash-dashing champs of the fraternities.

But the effort fell short. PDT proved powerful from the start, took the 30 back, the 75 medley and the deciding 400 freestyle and pulled away to add up the meet with a victory in the 150 yd. medley relay.

Actually fifth fraternities had a chance to come through, and six of the eight finals were sharp to decide which of the first 3 or 4 swimmers made the first team.

The team scores were as follow.

PDT 37½, DTD 27½, LCA 21, SAE 14, SN 3, ATO 4, TEP 4, SC 4, SA 3, KS 2, TC 2, PBP 0, PKT 0

In the diving Hank McCann, who's moved out Don Preuser, last years champ, 11.7 points to 110.7 points. In the 100 yd. freestyle Avery White, DTD and Keith Mulligan, PDT finished in a tie for first, with Gene Ferraro, LCA, one finger-length behind.

In the 50 yd. free White Ferguson, and Carson were only inches apart at the finish.

In the Dorm division the Feds carried away the honors re-placing Pentathlon, who failed to even enter the score sheet.

Freshmen Romp By Georgia Military, 42-0

Living up to his pre-season expectations, Florida State's Bobby Semmes smashed Georgia Military College, 42-0, Friday night at Milledgeville, Georgia.

The Baby Tribe's shining running attack mixed with a mild aerial attack, rolled with a mild downs.

Oddly enough the Irish's first score came on a safety. After the Tribe was stopped on the Georgia five yard line, Joe Semmes, the Georgia halfback was trapped behind the goal on the first play from scrimmage by Frosh center, Paul Slaton, for a safety and two points.

A few minutes later, FSU was knocking at Georgia's goal line again. Puppy Berman took a backfield to the Tribe's fifth touchdown. Pasquale picked up two yards and a break and his pretty soul touchdown of the night. Tom conversion was no good.

Gene McCormick, the third fresh quarterback of the night, directed the Baby Seminoles to their final touchdown drive. Meyerson, rolled out on the option play and poured up 21 yards and another score Pasquale placed the ball through the uprights and the Tribe led at the end of the first quarter, 16-0.

Bob Lemes started off the second quarter by smashing over for two yards and another FSU score. The extra point try was no good and the half ended with the trash leading 22-0.

With their defense still holding, the Baby Tribe pushed across another TD. John Neville climaxed the drive by smashing over. From the two Neville's kick was good and the score was upped to 29-0.

The fourth quarter saw Paul Pasquale directing the third team attack. Puppy Berman took a backfield to the Tribe's fifth touchdown. Pasquale picked up two yards on a sneak and his pretty soul touchdown of the night. Tom conversion was no good.

Before the first quarter was over, Paul Pasquale, one of the lone frosh quarterbacks who saw some first final touchdown drive. Meyerson, rolled out on the option play and poured up 21 yards and another score Pasquale placed the ball through the uprights and the Tribe led at the end of the first quarter, 16-0.

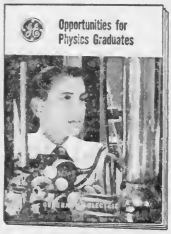
EVEN if you are just starting college in the "Class of 1960," we suggest that you take a long look at where you are going. Know, don't guess, what is offered by fields like engineering and science, finance, marketing and relations. Too often young people discover late in their senior year that they can't qualify for the career of their choice. Why be caught short? Selecting a career and knowing what is expected will make it possible for you to prepare for it now. Many graduates will find their place with industry.



General Electric is typical of many large industrial concerns. We employ over 27,000 college graduates from nearly 700 different colleges and universities. And our future, as the future of any progressive company, hinges on these people. Young men and women that have initiative, analytical and creative ability will make progress with industry. If you are interested, write for information about one or more of the programs listed on this page. These are the principal doorways to success at General Electric. The booklets can also be found at most college placement bureaus in a binder entitled "Career Information."

Dr. Karl O. Kuersteiner, (above) Dean of the School of Music, will address the Orlando Rotary Club tomorrow on the subject of "Universities and You." Study Suggests Moral Values In Education

A 21 - man committee of educators has released a study aimed at suggesting ways for teachers to inject more moral and spiritual values into their classwork.

The educators, including teachers from 14 of the 19 states through the universities in Florida, made the assumption that America's moral values have their basis in God and do not grow out of man's mass or "elite philosophy," according to chairman Dr Eugene Boyce, Dr. Boyce is principal of the Florida State University Demonstration School.

Published by the State Department of Education, the guide is described as a new beginning in Florida to attempt to define the acceptable role and function of the public school . . . in the realm of moral and spiritual training."

Dr Boyce told the Florida Flambeau, "Our purpose is to have the schools give guidance in developing the ideas predominant in American democracy and the basis of our moral value."

The guide sets forth five statements which it terms "fundamental in our nation a moral and spiritual foundations." They are:

1. Man is a spiritual being of dignity and worth by virtue of the fact that his origin and destiny is in God, his creator.

2. As a spiritual being of dignity and worth, man is to be treated as an end in himself and is not to be exploited to serve the ends of others.

3. If a student asks questions which require technological interpretation, the teacher should refer the pupil to a proper, rabbi or minister of the student's particular faith.

4. Teachers should deal with moral and spiritual subjects as they arise as an integral part of the classroom instruction and experiences, and in dealing with these subjects the instructor should avoid using any sectarian slant to the instruction.

5. In teaching moral and spiritual foundations sound educational principles should be followed. A teacher should include only those types of learning experiences appropriate to the development level of the students of each class.

6. As a further safeguard that guide recommends that local advisory committees be set up to assist teachers "even more definitely" guidance than is possible at the state level.

Speech Play

by the author.

Miss Saunders was marvelously sustained in a long and difficult part. Though she possesses a tendency to play everything at top voice, she can be equally effective in quieter moments. This was proved at the very end of the play where she made man's constant moral instability a fact almost too human to bear.

"CHAPLINESQUE"

Stanley DeHart, as Mr Antrobus, lent his role a somewhat Chaplinesque air. His best moments were in the second act, where he exhibited the remarkable ability to be ridiculous and sympathetic at the same time. His semi-comic talent is considerable.

Harry Antrobus, Miss Cain, was played with unusual technical finesse and much spirit by Elizabeth Smith in occasional moments, ing seemed a little unrelevant to what was going on about him. She was almost excused by the range he revealed in his final scene with his father. He was also the only member of the cast who was completely convincing when called upon to drop character.

Other fine performances were contributed by the perennially competent Bill Rice, stage manager, and Caroline Williamson, who was ebbling as the fortune teller. Also, Reign Jones, as the telegraph boy, made the most of a brief walk-on.

Charles Reimer's sets and Pat Cuth's costumes were superlative.

Senate Considers Rules Tomorrow

Student Senators will assemble at 4:15 p.m. tomorrow in 210 Longmire to draft rules of procedure and begin organizing committees, announced vice-president Bill Cullom.

A recently enlarged Senate will put about fill the chamber to overcrowding and may eventually cause the Senate's removal to another room, Cullom said.

There are 16 senators elected from classes, 19 elected from living areas, nine students, and one graduate class, and two vice-presidents who have voting and debate privileges. In the past years Senate consisted of six senators from each class and two vice-presidents. Capacity of the Senate chamber is about 40.

Cullom said it may be necessary to eventually adopt rules limiting debate, although that could be done on a meeting-to-meeting basis.

Student Body President Dave Barsman said Sunday he does not plan to deliver his address on student government until the subsequent meeting, a week from Wednesday.

ACPI—This one comes from the Ivory Tower: A home economist was asked on a test how she would solve the problem of making a small room appear larger. She answered: "To make rooms appear larger use thinner wallpaper."

400 Tallahasseeans Studying Spanish On Sunday Television

More than 400 local families have enrolled in a 13-week new conversational Spanish class which began over WCTV Sunday.

Taught by Dr Margaret V. Bingham of Modern Languages, the 30-minute class is given over the commercial television station as the co-operation of the General Extension Division of Florida at 8:30 p.m. every Sunday.

Miss Flynn, director of Radio and TV at FSU, explains that the objective of the 13 weeks series is to give the viewer a grasp of basic communication in Spanish—enough to make travel in Spain, Latin-speaking countries more meaningful."

Reception to the announcements of Florida State University's first venture into educational television was well received by the public as the 400 families' roll indicates.

"Early lesson," Flynn continues "is based on an object, which seen by the viewer, which is peculiarly Latin-American. Pronunciation and conversation is given to the object and viewer.

College To Modify Deaning System

WELLESLEY, Mass.—(I.P.)—Major modifications in the Wellesley deaning system will go into effect this year. The first significant change to affect the deaning system in 25 years provides for the permanent deans to advise all freshman and sophomore classes and one dean to serve both junior and senior classes.

In a recent interview, Miss Ella Kents Whitin Dean of the College and professor in the English department, explained that the new system would be particularly beneficial to sophomores. Under the present arrangement sophomores are put into the hands of a new dean previously unacquainted with them. The new deaning plan will remedy this discontinuity in advising by providing each freshman class with a dean for both their freshman and sophomore years.

The plan will be worked out as follows: Miss Jeanette McPherrin, Dean of Freshmen and lecturer in the French department, will continue to be Dean of the Class of 1959 until it completes its sophomore year. She will then become Dean of the Class of 1961 and will carry that class through its first two years.

Miss Eleanor R. Webster, assistant professor in the Chemistry department, has been appointed as the Dean of the Classes of 1960 and 1962 for their freshman and sophomore years.

Except for the Class of 1957 which is retaining Miss Jean Crawford, assistant professor in the Chemistry department, as its dean all sophomore, junior and senior classes will have Miss Teresa French, Dean of Students and associate professor in the Art department, as their dean.

In discussing the modifications, President Margaret Clapp said that the revised system "should be especially helpful to those sophomores who, in considering a major, begin to think intensively, perhaps for the first time in their lives, of their future career and place in life and who wish to discuss their social interests and problems more profoundly than one can on a slight acquaintance."

Pin the juniors and seniors, according to Dean French, "a closer connection between the student and her major department as well as the growing maturity and independence of the student" as sumptuous she expressed a hope that the faculty in the major departments will provide an advisor for each of their students.

"The purpose behind the entire advising system," Dean Whiting said, "is to help students to make the most of their own abilities and the opportunities for education which the college offers." President Clapp explained further that "the aim in adopting it not to solve problems for another but to help her to do her own problems and to handel them independently."

Students To Remove Mastodon Bones They Found In Wakulla's Depths

By OSCAR JOHNSON

A group of FSU students who explore the 250-feet deep-fissure of Wakulla Springs on weekends are planning to bring up several hundred pounds of ancient Mastodon bones they have found there.

The students, Henry Doll, Gordon Whitney, Garry Salaman and Wally Jenkins, found the bones, teeth and tusks by accident when they were exploring the underwater cave in December of last year. Utilizing scuba-lung breathing apparatus, they penetrated more than 400 feet horizontally into the deep cave to find the bones.

Remains of at least several Mastodons—giant, hairy beast which roamed the Earth thousands of years ago—are scattered together in the cave, according to Jenkins. He said the teeth and bones were of various sizes, indicating different ages. Scattered in with the Mastodon bones are bones of deer, elephants and other animals.

In addition, the students discovered in the cave 25 to 30 Indian spear heads made of deer bone. Each is about six inches long.

To prove their theory about man's existence at one time in Wakulla's cave, the skin divers have taken more than 1,000 color and black and white photographs. Many of them show bones lying on the bottom. Salaman said that most were left lying where they were in the theory that their placement might help to prove the existence of man there.

Many of the photographs were taken by Andy Harrold, feature editor of the News Bureau of the Florida Development Commission, who has led the students on most of their dives.

Jenkins said the bones are deep inside the fissure from which Wakulla's water flows. The mouth is about 103 feet beneath the Wakulla diving stand, and the cave slopes downward past the relatively small entrance at about 30 degrees. After the 180 foot depth, Jenkins said, the slope is more gradual. The bottom is dotted with large and small potholes.

Maximum depth the students have achieved is 250 feet, and a maximum penetration, 600 feet.

At that point, said the students underwater exploration is no job for children. The temperature is a numbing 68 degrees.

The work is done in pitch blackness. Only the feeble light from their flashlights pierces the gloom.

There is no company unless you can count the few eels and catfish which hide in the darkness. Your buddies seem to be the only life in existence. "You can't talk underwater, of course," said Jenkins, "but after you've gone down together a lot, you can get across what you want to say."

At the 250-foot depth, too, nitrogen narcosis impedes the efficiency of your work. "You get dizzy and sometimes hardly know what you're doing," said Jenkins. And always there is the relaxation that more than 200 feet of hard rock above block your way to the surface. The only way out is back through the long tunnel-like cave to open water.

Authorities of the Florida State University anthropology department and Florida Geological Survey, shown specimens of the bones, have not accepted the theory that the cave was once on land. The students were told the bones many have fallen from the limestone ceiling or rolled down the sloping entrance.

Jenkins said that he does believe that the 50 to 100 pound bones could have rolled down that far. There are too many of them to believe that the students agreed.

Presence of the spear heads has been explained with the theory that they could have been fishhooks. The students said that kind of point was not used for fishing.

As it stands now, the dry land theory can be neither proven or disproven, so the students are planning to bring the bones to the top.

Jenkins said if it were possible to go deeper into the cave, remains of man might be found. But the students have reached the limit they can explore.

As it is, they can only stay in the cave 11 minutes with safety. And they must decompress at 10 feet under for 35 minutes before leaving the water. With better equipment, they said, further entry would be possible. They already have a total of more than $3,000 invested in equipment and can afford little more.

The students said their views on the existence of man in the cave are "strictly an amateur opinion" but they would like to prove it is so.

CONNECTICUT STUDIES TEACHER USE

STORRS, Conn. (I.P.)—Ed Yard University and Wellesley, Dartmouth, Amherst, Williams colleges, have been awarded a study of the Storrs, Conn., campus from the Edward W. Hazen Foundation of New York City.

Dr. Faust, in explaining the awarding of $501,615 in grants, declared that the problems of recruiting more able people for college and university teaching, providing them with adequate preparation for their work, and utilizing their competence more effectively are the most challenging problems facing American education for the next ten or 15 years."

Faust, president of the Foundation, said the grant will help to prove the existence of man there are "strictly amateur opinion" but they would like to prove it is so.

Kahler's Closed; New Operator Not Revealed

Kahler's restaurant closed Saturday night, and there are no immediate prospects of another student "hang-out" to succeed it, the Florida Flambeau learned Sunday.

Fred H. Kahler, owner, who originally announced a closing date of November 1, suspended operations Saturday, explaining he had to have time to move out his equipment.

Plans to sell the business failed, he said.

Miss Katherine Killebrew, Tallahassean who owns the property at Copeland Street and Park Avenue, said she has received no offers to lease the building as yet.

"I just hope we can find the right person to operate it," she said.

City To Allow Parking Lots NearUniversity

City officials will recommend plans to allow commercial parking lots in certain residential areas, City Manager Arvah Hopkins confirmed today.

The action will be taken against lots already operating in these areas, pending approval of the plans by the City Planning Commission, he added.

Complaints were registered against the operation of a commercial parking lot on the north side of Jefferson Street, adjoining the campus, by annoyed citizens residing in the area, Hopkins said.

"Acute shortages of parking facilities make us feel that these lots should be encouraged," Hopkins added.

Business School Plans Reception Tomorrow authority.

Fall River, incidentally, is the very same place where Lizzie Borden allegedly gave her mother and father a total of 81 whacks with an axe, an episode since immortalized in grope, poetry, and ballet. She was never convicted, we might note, so either she was innocent, or maybe there's a double standard of morality in Fall River.

This business of protecting children from the facts of life, according to the Puritanism that has vestigial effects in New England today, cannot be anything but a sinful life, is no doubt well-intentioned but futile.

BY THE TIME a child is old enough to have thumbed the pages of Life he is going to have seen more in his own home than such fellows as the classical and romantic painters dared to set on canvas. They've found no way of keeping television out of Massachusetts yet. The only difference between popular and classical literature is that the words and sentences are shorter and thin is not always true—for example, Faulkner.

Nope There's no saving the kids. You might burn books or lower the hemline or do away with television, or perhaps not teach kids how to read. Sooner or later, however they're going to find out about it.

OF COURSE, we like Mr. Luce and the countless other pornographers might see the light and reform.

But what if one of those pure little kids wants to become a doctor?

Frosh Meet Set Thursday

Freshmen are urged to attend their first mass meeting of the year Thursday night, according to Mallon Hair, newly elected president of the class.

To be in Westcott Auditorium beginning at 7:30, the meeting is to introduce the new Freshman officers and the faculty advisors to the class, Hair said.

Another purpose Hair pointed out, is to list class goals for the year. Plans are already being made towards the possibility of sponsoring a dance, first semester, and for the annual Freshman Carnival next semester.

"We want to let the school know we're on the ball", Hair declared.

History Coffee Hour Slated Tomorrow

Phi Alpha Theta, history honorary will hold a coffee hour program tomorrow afternoon in Louvinie Clubroom, president Dirk Lukas announced. The program will begin at 4:30 p.m. and will feature the previes of a paper by Dr. Charles W. Arnade, new assistant professor of history. Dr. Arnade has not disclosed the topic of the paper, which is to be read in December before the American Historical Association.

FSU Egyptian Students Accuse Great Britain Of Creating Suez War

'British Conspired With Israel' Say Foreign Student Panelists

Two Egyptian members of a four-nation student panel Wednesday night accused Great Britain of conspiring with Israel to create a war situation in the Suez Canal Zone.

Thus, according to Mohammed Ashraf and Abdelhamid Youssef, was intended to give Great Britain an excuse to move troops into the Suez area.

They spoke in defense of President Abdel Nasser's decree of July 27 nationalizing the waterway between the Mediterranean Sea and the Red Sea and were supported by Iranian and Indian members of the panel.

The panel discussion attended the Suez discussion in Longmire Building was sponsored by Phi Sigma Alpha, political science honorary.

Dr. Marian Irish, head of the political science department was moderator. Other members of the panel were Mohsen Nemd, Iran; Emily Schofield, American-born Canadian; and Ken Lee, Hong Kong.

Ashraf opened the discussion by saying, "Anyone selling date tickets for the use of other people than students is guilty of deception to University Officials." The Civil Justice indicated that ticket scalpers would also be liable to suspension.

The procedure to be followed in the registration of fresh-man cars will be outlined to those involved by Dr. Harry P. Daniel, Assistant Business Manager in 104 Westcott Building. Those who attend to this clarification by Nov. 9 will not be subject to Honor Court prosecution, Manning said.

Starting November 9 an investigation will begin. Anyone found guilty of falsification of car registration will be liable to suspension from the University.

Manning also struck out at the misuse of student activity books.

"The Egyptians supported the British people in every effort during World War II . . . especially there would get their freedom," Ashraf continued. "But as English people usually do, they said no freedom."

EGYPT'S LAWS

Only six years from now, Ashraf said, guest operation of the canal would have reverted by agreement to Egypt. In addition, he said, his country's laws provide that the government may at any time nationalize a company.

"Egypt therefore will be compensated," Ashraf promised. "It is against the profit of certain countries" that has motivated the current issues, he said.

"It is very, very clear from the beginning that this [the hostilities beginning Monday] is a plan and the British had been faithful to the terms of a 1954 agreement that they would withdraw troops from the Suez area in two years. The British also built up the educational facilities of colonized countries including Egypt, she added.

Nasser Distrusted

She outlined extensive distrust among British citizens and officeholders for Nasser and accused him of going back on his word to keep it the canal open."

"None of us know," she added, whether British, France and Israel had conspired for the latter to invade Egypt Monday. It's all speculation," she asserted.

Much of India, said colonial British policy, had not benefitted the citizens of countries affected, He lauded the position taken by President Eisenhower in a national radio-TV address an hour before the panel discussion and said America will not intervene in the current Egyptian conflict.

"All of you must feel proud of the position the United States has taken," he said. "The peaceful policy of the United States is precisely the same sort India has been preaching."

MORAL SUPPORT

Egypt, he said, deserves the moral support of other countries.

He said it is possible that Nasser could control the canal in such as not vet the case. "It is for you to wait and see whether

Art Exhibit From Sarasota Opens Sunday

A display of selections from the Ringling Museum of Art in Sarasota opens Sunday for a month's showing in the Florida State University art gallery.

An unusually large collection of 32 paintings and two 16th Century German wood carvings have been loaned from the west coast museum for the exhibit, sponsored here jointly by the Florida State University Department and the Artist Series.

Dr James McDonough of the art department said he chose the works from the main collection on the basis of quality, the only restriction being, he said, was that he keep them to a size appropriate for the museum, which is located in the dining hall building.

The scope of the exhibit includes the early Venetian landscape, sweeping through the Italian Renaissance, 17th Century Holland, and 19th Century France.

Included are works by Van Dyke and El Greco.

Informal opening is set for Sunday afternoon, from 1 to 4 p.m. Gallery hours will be 8 a.m. through 5 p.m. Monday through Friday; 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, and 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday.

Guided tours will be given Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday afternoons beginning at 3:30 o'clock, by Dr. Adolph Riml and Dr. McDonough. Reservations may be made for the tours by calling the art department.

Open Library Sunday Nights, Roberts Requests In Senate

By CHARLET POITEVINT

A crowded Senate met for the first time Wednesday under the reapportionment bill passed last year, with new elected senators and those elected last spring present.

Gordon Wednesday's meeting was held under last year's rules of procedure.

Appointments submitted by Student Body President Dale Barnhart for approval were referred to the Elections and Appointments committee until next Wednesday's meeting.

Pending appointments include P. E. Jones for Undersecretary of elections; Dick Smith, for Undersecretary of Student Welfare; Jim Kauffman, for Undersecretary of Recreation; Evelyn Mettler, for Undersecretary of Funds; Norma Trippodo, for Undersecretary of Organizations; Jim McIntire, for Undersecretary of Honor and Ethics; Lorraine Bernstein, for Undersecretary of Veteran's Affairs.

Alan Whitmarsh, Ann Bohler, and Russ Parrish were submitted for approval as Board of Publications members.

Shirley Morgan was named to the Key Love Scholarship Associate Justice of the Honor Court.

The reapportionment bill provides for representatives to be elected from 16 living areas in addition to four senators elected at from each class.

Fred Roberts, newly elected senator from West Hall introduced a resolution favoring that the university library remain open to students on Sunday nights.

It was referred to the committee on Labor, Student Services and Education for further study.

Rules of procedure were introduced by Jim Soles and referred to a committee consisting of Soles, Pat Finley, and Gerry

Traffic Panel Is Considered

Reappointment of a student faculty traffic committee, once established last year, is being considered, Student Body President Dale Barnhart, announced today.

Composed of more students than faculty members, last years committee did much to improve the traffic situation on campus, Barnhart said. Suggestions which were later adopted included the one-way street system in connected area. The extension of parking facilities in North Cawthon lot. The re-designation of street area parking spaces and other several improvements. Barnhart said.

"The committee will be established to represent a cross section of the University community, with ample representation given to University traffic problems" the Student Body president announced. All academic classes will be represented, he added.

Editor Asks Student Views

Florida Flambeau editor Oscar Johnson yesterday called upon students to send in their views on the Presidential race for publication in Tuesday's issue.

He asked that any students who wished to send in statements in support of candidates Dwight D. Eisenhower or Adlai E. Stevenson get them to the Flambeau office, 213 Longmire Building, by Sunday at 5 p.m.

These statements should be in the form of logical, non-emotional reasoning," Johnson said. "We are planning to run articles in support of both candidates on election day -Tuesday- so that students who have not made up their minds by the time will have a final opportunity to examine the issues."

Auxiliary Formed By Frat Council

Inter-fraternity Council has formed an auxiliary group of fraternity vice-presidents to share IFC's work load it was announced this week.

Ed Hinson, Theta Chi vice president, was elected chairman of the yet unnamed organization Wednesday night. Bob Wollenberger, Delta Tau Delta representative, was named treasurer. Secretary, Sigma Alpha Epsilon vice president Charlie Ward was elected publicity chairman.

Wollenberger said the new group, which has yet to adopt a constitution and elect a complete slate of officers, will compile and distribute next year's rush booklet for freshman men and compile a brochure of fraternity service activities for national fraternities. Ward was named to head the rush booklet committee.

Dr. Randel Speaks On English, Greek Works 'Hour' Subject

By ARLEDA RIES

"Greece and English Literature" is the subject of today's English Coffee Hour at 4 p.m. in the Westminster House.

With the aid of color slides taken by himself, Dr. William Randel, professor of English will illustrate the literary associations and relations between English and Greece.

"Greece has some influence on all literature," Dr. Randel explains, "particularly on English. Writers go to Greece for ideas. In essence, it is part of our heritage. For example, Shakespeare makes reference to Greece in his writings, while Keats' Ode on a Grecian Urn is world renown."

Dr. Randel will read a few selections from Keats' poetry while showing slides, which number approximately 60. Out of the several hundred photographs taken in Greece recently over a period of 10 months, scenes depicting palaces, temples, baths, excavations, ruins, and islands will be shown.

RECENT FULBRIGHT

The recently returned member of FSU's English department was one of the three professors teaching on a Fulbright Scholarship at the University of Athens. Out of the thousands of students and teachers in Greece, only a very limited number are permitted to teach at the university.

Dr. Randel, who in the past taught at the University of Helsinki in Finland, hopes to go to Australia next. "I can't wait to go again" he asserts. "No one can fully understand another country unless he has been or lived there."

BS FROM COLUMBIA

After obtaining a BS from Columbia University in 1932 Dr. Randel acquired his AM at the University of Michigan in 1933, then returned to Columbia for a PhD in 1941.

He has taught at the University of Minnesota for nine years, then at the Missouri School of Mines for two years. In 1947 Dr. Randel came to FSU where he is Director of American Studies, an interdepartmental major.

He has also written many published articles and books on American literature and languages.

Coffee Hour, a weekly presentation of the English department, is open to not only students and faculty, but townspeople as well.

Nuclear Center Appropriate Here

Establishment of a Nuclear Radiation Center at Florida State University is a project to which the state should devote unhesitant attention.

The proposal deserves utmost consideration because of the benefit it offers the people of Florida. Importance of research and development in the ever-expanding field of the atom has been recognized again and again by top government officials.

Governor LeRoy Collins, in his opening address to the 1955 Legislature, had this to say about atomic research:

"Today we are living at the dawn of the nuclear age—an age that will bring changes more significant than anything brought about by industrial revolutions of the past. This age is founded upon atomic energy, and atomic energy in turn requires new fuels, new metals and new techniques.

"These fuels and these metals are to be found in Florida in generous measure. We lack the new techniques and knowledge to put these resources to work for the benefit of the people. Research is the key and the only way such techniques and knowledge can be developed."

Gov. Collins has backed up this viewpoint time and again with statements urging development of nuclear research. He established the Florida Nuclear Development Commission with the purpose of assisting in the quest for progress.

University level centers for nuclear research and development can become the foundation stones for the great and progressive state the leaders have envisaged for tomorrow's Florida.

As Gov. Collins has it, this is the atomic age. Those people who realize that and who plan for that are the people who will be leaders in times now just around the corner. Florida can be among them.

This state can use the fruits of the atom most readily than many of the other states. We have no cheap and ready source of power. With the atom on our side we would have energy — energy to run our factories, fill our land and create an easier existence. With the atom, Florida can be equal to the mightiest state.

Why should not Florida State University be the location of part of Florida's atomic development research?. Is there some kind of "natural" barrier to creating a scientific — technical — enterprise here?

We think not. Science has not been unknown here, nor should it be. It is one of the many fields entered upon by this university. Although there are other universities in Florida, none is more appropriate for a nuclear research center than this one.

Wildwood Outrage Crime Against Society

While men and women overseas are dying for liberty it does not behoove America that liberty should be denied anyone here.

There can not American citizens in the real sense of the term who must have taken Jesse Woods from his blood-spattered Wildwood, Fla., jail cell and, in all likelihood murdered him.

Woods' crime was the crime of color—he was born a Negro. He compounded this, it is alleged, by insulting a white woman with the words, "Hi, Baby."

Does it matter whether he was drunk? Does it matter whether he was intolerant? These are petty matters. And even were they capital, the orderly processes of law should be allowed to function.

We cannot prove that Woods is dead. Bloodstained clothes have been found, however. He jail cell—where he was put at his own request for protection—had been broken into; the lock smashed, the cot overturned.

From a humanitarian position, the fate of Jesse Woods is inexcusable because any person, white or Negro, or whatever color, must have dignity and freedom or else life is just short of slavery.

From a position far more grim, the crime against Jesse Woods is a crime against all of us. Where mobs can have their way, where human life is not safe from the hatreds of irrational persons, where slaughter is a lark, no man has freedom. The chain of democracy is no stronger than its weakest link.

The Tampa Tribune, a segregationist newspaper nonetheless an advocate of liberty, asked why Woods was not given personal protection by the Wildwood police when they knew angry whites had been following him.

The St. Petersburg Times said that the governor's investigation will undoubtedly present him with a grave decision—there are many possibilities—and that the people of Florida should affirm to him their belief in law and order.

It seems hardly necessary to point out the great harm that this deed represents. Any civilized person should see it clearly.

The uncivilized men who are responsible should not be allowed the protection of a society which seeks order.

Calling The Card

He's Not Really A TV Star

By JIM McINTYRE

There are numerous advantages to attending Florida State University. Among them being life. Life, that is, in the pursuit of extra-curriculars. One advantage occurred this week and served to further emphasize the distinguished state of a student of this institution.

On Tuesday afternoon last, I received via Uncle Sam's post, a fan letter from a former acquaintance of mine in a city quite distant from here. This dear lady from whom I have not heard for something close to two years wanted to tell me how much she enjoyed my performance Monday morning. She went on to explain how she likes to watch "Mr. Garroway" every morning when she gets the chance, and then continued she was to see my countenance etc appearing on the screen.

SHE WENT ON to inquire about my vocational interests, my musical talent and the purpose I seem to have acquired. Her intentions were classified after she suggested that I either sign with Rinaldo Bros. or stay in FSU and take over Coach Hassino job.

Now this is all fine and good. There is no one living who doesn't like to receive complimentary mail now and then. I appreciate her thoughtfulness and kindness. But the truth is, I am not now, nor have I ever been, associated with the FBI, crime in any way, shape or form.

I MIGHT LIKE to be in the group. I would certainly love to take a trip to Philadelphia every now and then, but I can envision the results of an attempt by yours truly at some of the intricacies included in a performance of "Flying Hour."

Were I to try to lift even the smallest girl in one of the adagio numbers, we would both end up in a flivver, but unfortunately beat. Imagining myself in the roller-skating act is about as difficult, since I have always needed two pair at the same time, one on my feet and the other a bit more appropriately placed. I might try the bars one time, but it would only be once. The unicycle would be a real accomplishment as I have never been able to completely control one with my hands and even had trouble in my younger days with those intricate bicycle numbers.

I MIGHT TRY balancing on the tight wire, but it is difficult enough for me to balance my rather limited budget. I don't even mention the flying trapeze act.

In short, the only place I feel that I could fit in would be as a clown. My roommate suggested at the first of the year that I try out for that position as he felt the only one that would not have to wear make-up.

All this leaves me sad, since I would very much like to be a circus participant. I don't think however that I'm nearly as sad as those young people who appeared on Garroway show. They're all wondering which one was mistaken for me. I can't say that I blame them for being sad.

What About Paper's 'Artist'?

TO THE EDITOR:

How disappropriately enlarged is an exaggerated article!

'Braak' The Word For Big Words

TO THE EDITOR:

To honor wisdom and knowledge is a good thing. To flaunt knowledge and intellect through the medium of verboseness with an air of pedantry is however most distasteful and is often best fitted with the music maxim favorite slang for that which he has a great dislike—Braak.

This seems to be the feeling of many people toward our most learned editorialist, Mr. Arnold Greenfield. However, I come to bury Mr. G. not to phrase him. Bury him in dark limelight. If it might—though not irrelevantly—the help of Sir Francis Bacon strike among the steel workers.

It is not likely that the food service employees will stage a strike for higher wages, but I do believe that Morrison's should give some thought to this salary matter before any more employees quit and look for jobs that will pay a respectable salary.

and his essay on "Of Seeming Wise" when he speaks of the pedantic and states "It is a ridiculous thing, and fit for a satire to persons of judgment, as a base shift these formalists have, and what preposterous to make superlatives to seem body, that hath denth and bulk."

Now it isn't that we don't appreciate Mr. Greenfield's high estimation of our low vocabulary, but it ain't that we don't appreciate his humble efforts to elevate the standard of writing in our newspaper. It is however that we perhaps do not have time to fit in the evenings and converse with Merriam & Webster.

To be specific! As to his legion "braak" and his framing it as satirical ideal—I suggest that he try a little iconoclasm himself by breaking down his own idolatry of baneful words.

SINCERELY AND
ILLITERATIVELY YOURS,
WILLIAM F. BECKER

THE NEED FOR STRONGER STATES

(ACP)—The governments of America's individual states must be strengthened in both legislative and executive branches if they are to meet the complex and vital parts of the federal system. That is one of the conclusions drawn in a report of Southern state governments published by the Duke University. The report recommends changes in terms, reapportionment of legislature and removal of what it calls "outmoded constitutional restrictions."

With the touchy problem of state governments and their relationship to race relations, the report says, "The state governments in the South have before and undoubtedly have the ability to alleviate the present tensions. The Southern Assembly which conducted the survey believes that state governments in the south must undertake, by all means at their disposal to preserve order and maintain public order."

In The Wings

Egypt Policy Wise

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Monday's headlines made a lot of draft registration cas weigh heavily in many pockets.

Orim jokes began to circulate that within a few mon Florida State University would revert to Florida State Col for Women after the manner by male students of governme invitations to a Mediterranean cruise.

Wednesday night, however, the president had he will have the United States intervene in the Egyptian free-fo He does not, he said, intend to call a special session of Congress. And the men stopped contemplating life under close-order drill and began to anticipate the weekend once more.

Because we are not now fighting does not mean we will not later find it necessary. The crisis has not abated. At this writing—which could well be outdated a few hours from now—much hangs in limbo.

IT SEEMS TO be a three way fight in Egypt. On Sunday Israel's troops poured into Egypt's Sinai Peninsula, avowedly to eliminate bases from which guerillas have allegedly been ra ing Israeli settlements.

It seemed like nothing but preventive war, which is inv sible in the powder-keg Middle East. Any "preventive w never could set off general conflict.

Britain and France warned Egypt and Israel to withd their forces at least ten miles from the Suez Canal, for two months the object of controversy subsequent to Premier Nass nationalization of the canal company. The two Europ nations threatened force if their ultimatum went unheeded

THE UNITED States went before the U.N Security Coun to urge that Britain and France restrain their fears, Israel Egypt lay down their arms, and everyone sit back to cool Britain and France said no; the Soviet Union, paradoxical voted with us. The government is in almost split in wo big three solidarity. The ultimatum went unheeded and Brita and France attacked Egypt.

What are the moral and legal points involved?

1. If Egyptians have been raiding Israel, their actions e unjustified.

2. If such is true, Israel's attack was still unwise and ha hardy; if such was untrue, Israel's actions were inexcusable.

3. If Israel's complaints are legitimate, Britain and Fra still have no right to order Israel to quit. There was no un nation among Israel Britain, and France to create an opportu for Suez intervention, the three are jointly guilty of an immo table risk to the security of the world.

I WE AGREED with Britain and France in 1950 to defe any victim of aggression in the Middle East. It might w well be that Great Britain, France, and Israel are a some extent both aggressors and victims. If this is true, have no moral obligation to honor the Tripartite Agreemen

If Yet the Suez Canal is in danger, and there is no doubt the west's economy depends on it moral considerations might very well be outweighed by those of self-interest.

If the present conflict assumes the proportion of a w war Russia—or a convenient satellite—might try to take ov the Middle East. It will then be a very difficult matter to fight however, is unlikely, due to recent events in Poland and Hu gary, and unrest in Czechoslovakia and East Germany.

I HAVE always had good regards for Israel and have be mostly critical of the Eisenhower administration's foreign cies. Mr. Dulles' vacillating policies toward Nasser whom should have known all along was an opportunist have ag gravated the whole situation.

I must admit, however, that our present policy of non intervention is wise and just. Let us pray that its a breach does not become necessary.

I surrender! I retract fully every statement made in th column last week. Little did I dream that a clipping (article) from another newspaper could get one into so much hot wa and then take matters over the headline writer the Florida Flambeau "Women Expensive" The clipping that aroused so much fury commented that anyone who thought smoking was expensive should consider women. So I repeated here. I apologize to the ladies. I for one certainly do not consider them expensive, just wonderful.

A student on the campus of the University of British Columbia published a questionnaire asking point during student council elections. He maintained that the personal background of candidates and a prove his point he placed the names "Klark Gable" and "Van Delinder." He shortened it for campaign purposes.

Kansas State College recently held their annual "Ag" Day Activities. Highlighting events is the selection of a queen who will reign over the festivities.

Girls vieing for the title must compete in such contests as milking cows, building hog troughs, pitching hay and driving a tractor. The winner of these events is then crowned "Ballin' Farmer Queen."

The Student Court at the University of Texas made it first ruling this week before a law unconstitutional. By a 5-2 vote the court ruled that any student who belongs to a number of people that could take part in a serenade was unconstitutional.

Letters to the Editor and Editorials in the last issue of the Furman Hornet urged more support of the Foothall team, and at the same time reported the resignation of an assistant football coach. We meet Furman here on November 10, which has been designated as "Dads' Day."

The council president recently declaring it was impossible to maintain a good grade average and discharge their duties. Wonder what our senators would have to say to that.

Downes Collection Now Available

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

The Olin Downes Collection of books, scores, and recordings — purchased for $18,000—is finally being made available to students by the University Library. At last count, over one hundred books had been received and placed in circulation, and about half as many recordings.

The reasons for the delay were legitimate ones, but it took a trip through the main library and an explanation of the cataloguing procedure and requirements to convince us. Standard methods of cataloguing are complicated and time-consuming, but necessary if cross-references and bibliographic material are to be useful and comprehensive. Add to that, the problems created when much of the material is not listed in Library of Congress catalog cards, necessitating original cataloguing, and the problem becomes a formidable one.

As of September, however, two library assistants were assigned full-time to catalog the Downes Collection, and material is now being made available at an increasingly rapid rate.

The most gratifying news, though, concerns the large collection of LP records. These will be catalogued originally by Decimal, and although this will have to be re-done according to standard procedures, a temporary record file on the music library floor. Because of numerous requests from students, the music library has decided to make the entire collection available immediately from the temporary catalog!

There are certain necessary stipulations however. Students will not be able to browse among the records or the Downes catalog, since this would take too much of the librarian's time and create a certain amount of confusion in the library after the time that a record file is kept. But students requesting specific recordings may do so at the desk, and the collection will be able to draw upon the un-catalogued section of the Downes collection if the record requested are present.

Tribe, Unbeaten Miami Tangle Tonight

FSU Rated As Two TD Underdog In Orange Bowl

By LARRY BLOCK
Assistant Sports Editor

Sporting their third victory of the season, Florida State's Seminoles invade the "Magic City" of Miami tonight in search of their first win against the Miami Hurricanes.

Tabbed as better than a two touchdown underdog, Tom Nugent's Seminoles are looking for the big win that will vault them into national prominance.

On paper, the Tribe is as strong as it ever was and has their best opportunity to halt the driving attack of Andy Gustafson's Hurricanes.

Powerhouse of the Miami backfield is 200-pound Don Bosseler a fullback who has been billed as the Hurricane's best all-America candidate in years.

But the Hurricanes can take to the air as second-string quarterback Bonnie Yarbrough proved last week with a touchdown pass against Texas Christian's Horned Frogs, as Miami upset powerful TCU, 14-0.

Operating at the halfback slots in the backfield with Bosseler and probable starting quarterback Sam Scarnecchia may be any of three men: John Varone, a 180-pound Junior, Claude Casey of West Palm Beech, a Suphomore or Senior John Bookman.

Switching to the line, Gustafson has a forward wall that averages 200 pounds per man. It is spearheeded by tackle Charlie Diamond at 220 pounds. Last week they held all-American Jim Swink to 2.7 yards per carry.

Singin' Sam Scarnecchia will probably be calling the signals for Miami at the quarterback slot. He has been a steady starter since the departure of Mario Bonefiglio.

Expected to bear the brunt of FSU's offense is its usual starting backfield of Lee Corso at quarterback. Bobby Renn and Buck Meets at the halfbacks and Joe Holt at the fullback post.

Leading the front wall charge will be ends Ronnie Schomburger and Bob Nellums whom coach Nugent says "could develop into one of the finest pair of ends in the South."

Expected to bear the brunt of FSU's offense is its usual portiant factor in the game as he has only missed one point after touchdown in 12 attempts. That one was blocked last week by the Villanova line.

Renn appeared to come into his own during the Villanova game as he picked up 124 yards in 18 carries for a 6.8 average.

BOTH HEALTHY

"Both FSU and Miami came out of last week's game unhampered by injuries though the Seminoles did pick up a few bruises from that hig Villanova line," says Nugent.

"There's no doubt that Miami will be the toughest team we have faced this year and f expect them to throw the ball all over the field. And we'll have to watch Yarbrough very carefully, as he will be he first left-handed passer to face us all year," commented Nugent.

There may be one change in the defensive line for the Tribe in the person of Bob Elliot whom Nugent said, was the defensive standout in the Villanove game".

Elliott might take the place of starting left guard Leo Baggett when Miami has the ball.

Nugent thought specifically that the Tirbe's blocking was the best he had seen FSU do all year. "Our blocking was probably just as good in the Ohio game. but Villanova is a much stronger and better football team than Ohio."

The Seminole coach pointed out guard Al Pecifico as playing "his best game of the year" and also praised Ronnie Schomburger and Joe Holt for their defensive performances against the Wildcats.

Nellums and Schomburger have gathered in 12 and 11 passes respectively to lead the Tribe in pass receiving. Nellums a 200-pound junior from Pensacola has picked off five touchdown passes and probably leads the nation in that department. He also leads the Seminoles in individual scoring with 30 points.

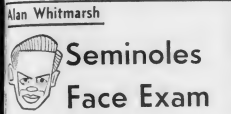
The ATO tennis doubles team moved into the finals of the winners bracket in intramural tennis Tuesday with a 6-2, 6-3 victory over SN. It was Joe Britt and Wade Cruz hitting for SN and Neely Alexander and Bill McKenzie winning for ATO.

ATO meets the winner of the PDT-SAE semi-final match, which is on for next Monday. Fred Singleton and Colin Phipps, SAE, moved into the semi-finals by beating Sid Stubos and Pete Ryan, TC, 6-1, 6-3.

Fletcher Exster and Bob Sistrunk of PDT nosed out Bill Hall and Dirk Porsee, DTD, 6-4, 7-5.



In the losers bracket, TEP with Mort Lasner and Don Schwartz, eliminated Dick Corvera and Charles Batcos), PKT, 7-5, 6-3. LCA's James Davis and Dick Bee eliminated KA's Bo Westbrook and Al Shrinsley, 6-3, 6-0.

In the 4-man division, Dick Chandler and Ron Fisher of Magnolia moved into the semi-final bracket finals by beating Ed O'Connell and Ron Mooton of JDP, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4.

Penthouse became their opponents for their match next Monday, when Tom Powell and Walt McCardy beat Jim Bradford and Dick Richardson of Methodists, 6-2, 6-0. Co-Op House defaulted to the Rebels and B. U. defeated to the Playboys.

The bedline doubles matches are on Monday with Magnolia meeting Penthouse and PDT playing SAE, plus the Rebels—Methodist match, and the Playboys-Senior Hall match.

Alan Whitmarsh Seminoles Face Exam

MIAMI—Florida State University's football team faces a test here tonight in the spacious confines of the Orange Bowl.

They've faced six other tests this year, but this one seems to be more in the nature of a final examination than just an everyday quiz.

The instructors (or pupils as it may be) will be some 21 or 25 gentlemen who profess to play football for the University of Miami, and who have done e more then acceptable job of it thus far.

Test is one time the instructors could fail, the test—maybe the bookmakers' odds and so forth which make the Seminoles a two or three touchdown (or more) underdog.

Nothing about the contest favors Florida State except the meager fact that they have everything to gain and nothing to lose, and Miami has everything to lose and little to gain.

Evan should they lose as most people expect, the Seminoles can gain a tremendous amount of prestige just by keeping the score close.

And when you think back thet Texas Christian couldn't even score against the Hurricanes, if the Seminoles should score and keep the score close, their prestige might skyrocket in some parts of the country.

But there is not a man on the 38-man team which left for the Magic City by plane yesterday morning which will be satisfied if Florida State lost, by any score.

There are several reasons why the Tribe stands in the best position ever to affect e victory in the game tonight.

First, the Hurricanes are fresh from a 14-0 triumph over Texas Christian. No team plays a football outfit like that and comes out of it without losing a little of its energy. A victory over any Texas team takes a lot out of a football squad.

Secondly, the Hurricanes are not taking us too seriously, despite frantic claims to the contrary by Gustafson, who has the mutual purpose of keeping his boys ready and increasing the size of the crowd by doing so.

They are firmly convinced that the Seminoles are just a break on one of the ruggedest schedules in their history, and doubtless expect not too tough e battle as they might otherwise.

We think they're in for some surprise.

People have been threatening to call the little men in the white coats every time f said this all week long, but I firmly believe Florida State can beat the Miami football team.

I believa we have nearly e 100 percent stronger football team and e much more experienced one than the one that lost to Miami 34-0 in the Bowl last year.

A great majority of the starters on tonight's FSU team saw a lot of action in that geme last year, and they're not forgetting it.

The difference might also be e speedy young man who has been performing like a potential all-America candidate at left halfback for the last two games, Bobby Renn.

That the Seminoles deerly miss Renn was no more vividly illustreted then in the Virginia Tech game when his absence prohebily had a lot to do with the Gohblers' 20-7 victory.

If you discount the fact that Georgia won though being outplayed by the Seminoles, Virginia Tech is really he only team that has beaten FSU this year.

Coach Tom Nugent and many other people, including all of the football team and this reporter believe they could have beaten VPI.

Renn makes a difference. He may make the difference tonight.

But we more firmly believe that the difference may be in spirit and will to win. Never have these Seminoles had a better chance to gain prestige with a victory and never have they wanted one more.

And so, I stand out on that precarious and well-known limb again. I hope they've long since outlawed saws here in Miami. I'd hate to fall off for a second time this year.

With a deep breath, FLORIDA STATE 14 MIAMI 7.

'The Mountain' Offers Thrills In Alpian Splendor: Reviewer

By GEORGE BRADLEY

THE MOUNTAIN (now thru Saturday, Florida Theatre) is about as close to heaven as a cinematographer can get. Filmed in Vistavision and Technicolor in the French Alps, the splendor of the rolling green hills, the snow covered mountains with their misty summits rising above the clouds and the local color of the small town and its surrounding rustic, time-worn farms, is almost too good to be true.

Spencer Tracy as a middle aged suede, now retired because of a 10 year old accident auto-brother grevolly clandestine, he fered while leading a mountain climb. climb, vows he will never an inward shame and ice. Tracy feels fear the mountain area. But his way along with the ability brother, Robert Wagner, just- of a silly soul stuff, squeezin, his after a soft life, schemes to the last ounce of suspense from climb the mountain and rob a the situation and the last drop plane wreckage that has been of composure from the tit-wrenchleft for hopeless by the authori- ly nervous audience. Naturally, ties. Presenting the idea to his as the advertisements spoorishly brother, and being turned down flagrantly, the two make it to the end, Wagner slaps him in anger wreckage and decides to go on alone. What happens after Wagner, knowing full well his losing partner gleefully among the brother will not leave him to razor morsus like an adolescent such a task. In no time flat, Capozzi Kidd, culling here. Wagner establishes himself as a cleaning there, picking and most unsavory sort of chap, one pocketing his loot, is not so who would pour kerosene over much of a surprise as in the Santa Claus and light a match manner in which it is pulled off. It is thus that makes The Mountain worth the climb.

Also showing:

SOLID GOLD CADILLAC -State Theatre, now thru Tuesday. Judy Holliday over-runs her business very funny.

TOO BAD SHE'S BAD -Rita Art, now thru Sunday. Sophia Loren and Vittorio De Sica in a neopolitan romp. Definitely not the best of its kind, but a lot of fun nonetheless.

POWER AND THE PRIZE -Florida Theatre, Sunday thru Tuesday. Mann's version of big business with Robert Taylor, Burl Ives and Elizabeth Muller getting most of it.

"THE MAN IN THE WHITE SUIT"

The Campus Feature Film for the coming week is Ealing Studio's delightful spoof on big business and modern science. "The Man In The White Suit." The person chosen to wear the suit is English actor Alec Guiness, and he is in and out of it, and some terribly funny situations almost constantly.

This production, which followed directly on the heels of Mr. Guiness' triumph "The Lavender Hill Mob" endears him to favoritism in the small art houses around the country, and endeared him to the hearts of college students everywhere.

Concerning a small town scientist who discovers a thread that is unbreakable, water repellent, dirt repellent and spotlessly white, the script finds him in all sorts of trouble as labor unions, factory officials and suit manufacturers descend upon him in fear and anger lest this new discovery close them and their goods out of business. How Mr. Guiness meets this situation makes up the last half of the picture.

Co-starring with Guiness is Joan Greenwood, Basil Sydney and a convolutedly intricate machine (nameless) that is a bleep-bloop at just the right moments.

The Man In The White Suit shows Monday at Florida Hall 7:30 p.m. Tuesday Evening at Landis Hall 7:30 p.m., Wednesday evening in the Old Library 7:30 p.m., Thursday Evening at 8 p.m. in Senior Hall and Friday Evening, the film is shown on the big screen at West Hall 8 p.m. This and other Films are presented free for the students on campus.

NEW ALPHA CHI OMEGA HOUSE—New Orleans traditional with numerous colonial and modern features, this sorority house at Florida State University seems to invite gracious living to the full

Alpha Chi Omega Dedicates New $139,000 Chapter House

By SYLVIA WARD and SUE MASSEY

Formal house dedication ceremonies for the new $139,000 Alpha Chi Omega sorority house were held Sunday.

Located on West Park Avenue, the all white, cement and steel fireproof structure is built along New Orleans traditional lines, complete with circular driveway and colonial white columns. The house is furnished along strong traditional lines, with modern fabrics used throughout the interior.

The entrance foyer and dining room both contain murals painted by Jay Harder of Jacksonville. The focal point of the spacious white room is the black marble fireplace, which blends with the plastic floor tiling of large black and white squares.

Adjoining the living room is the recreation room where the girls can relax in an informal atmosphere. This room contains the built-in hi-fidelity set of which the Alpha Chis are exceptionally proud, and has a brick colonial fireplace.

The dining room with its glass wall when open onto the cement and redwood patio adds to the atmosphere of gracious living to be found in the new Alpha Chi home.

Also on the ground floor is the chapter room, powder room, laundry room, guest room, kitchen and house mother's suite. This suite contains living room, bedroom, and private telephone, bath, and entrance.

Upstairs, a dual-construction plan allows a choice of regular study-bedrooms or davenport rooms with sleeping quarters on the jalousied porch. The color of each room was chosen by the occupants, with desks and accessories painted to suit their taste. The attic contains space for suitcases, trunks and has several large closets for storage of formal clothes.

Dr. Dook S. Campbell, Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, and Mrs. Elizabeth Lynn spoke as representatives of the university at the dedication. Kay Taylor, an Alpha Chi active, sang.

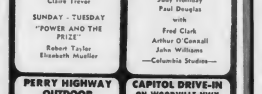
A symbolic key to the new house was presented by Mrs. Oscar Rawls, House Corporation President to Denise Sue Thompson, Chapter President. Miss Thompson, receiving the key, gave a short acceptance speech on behalf of the entire chapter. The mistress of ceremonies for the afternoon was Mrs. John W. Cusner, Jr., Province President of Alpha Chi Omega.

Immediately following the dedication, several hundred visitors attended open house, at which time refreshments were served in the recreation room and patio, and guided tours were taken throughout the house. The receiving line was composed of Denise Sue Thompson, Chapter President; Mrs. John W. Cusner, Jr., Province President; Mrs. Raymond L. Supron, National President; Mrs. Verne B. Fidler, Past District Alpha Chi Chairman; Mrs. Elmer Edwards, District Alpha Chi Chairman; Mrs. Oscar Rawls, House Corporation President; Mrs. Verle Turner, House Mother; and Mrs. Charles Malloy, President of the Alumnae. Greeting the guests were Miss Jane Adams, Miss Bryan Henry, and Miss J. E. Jernard, Jr. Miss B. H. Gibson, Dr. Helen Cate, and Miss Rovana DuPare were assisted in serving by chapter members.

ANTIOCH CENSURED

ACP—At its recent convention in Los Angeles, the American Legion again censured Antioch College for "permitting subversive programs and activity to function on campus." A similar resolution of censure was passed by the Legion in 1954.

This time, however, one of the original supporters of censure action, Ohio state representative Lowell Peoples objected to the Legion action. He said the Legion was talking about things that took place three or four years ago and that aren't taking place now. Peoples who helped bring about the 1954 censure said "The atmosphere at Antioch has cleared."



Antioch President Samuel O. Gould had thus to say about the latest censure action: "I do wonder a little, when our neighbors know so well what we are if it is necessary to tell them again that these charges are untrue. Let me say as strongly as I know how, that there are no subversive activities at Antioch." In an off-the-cuff comment, President Gould dismissed the Legion action with the words "It's the latest thing."

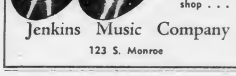
LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Bibler



STUDYING CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

Is studying bugging you? Do you have trouble remembering names, dates, facts, figures, and the location of the library? Dear friends, it need not be so. All you have to do is master the simple art of mnemonics.

Mnemonics, as we all know, was invented by the great Greek philosopher Mnemon in 526 B.C. Mnemonics, incidentally, was only one of the many inventions of the fertile Athenian. He is perhaps best known for his invention of the staircase, which, as you may imagine, was of inestimable value to mankind. Before the staircase, people who wished to go from floor to floor had to leap from springboards. This meant, of course, that aged and infirm persons were forced to live out their lives wholly on the ground floor, and many of them grew cross as bears. Especially Demosthenes, who was elected consul of Athens three times but never served because he was unable to get up to the office of the commissioner of oaths on the third floor to be sworn in.

But after Mnemon's staircase was invented, Demosthenes got up to the third floor easy as pie and took the oath—in Athens' normal, accustomed spot. Demosthenes, his temper shortened by years of confinement to the ground floor, soon embroiled his countrymen in a series of needless and costly wars with the Persians, the Visigoths, and the Ogallala Sioux. He was voted out of office in 317 B.C., and Mnemon, who had made his accession possible, was pelted to death with fruit salad in the Doomo.

But I digress. We were discussing mnemonics, which are nothing more than aids to memory—catchwords or jingles that help you to remember names, dates, and places. For example, any student of American history surely knows the little jingle:

Columbus sailed the ocean blue
In fourteen hundred ninety-two,

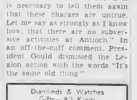
You see how simple a mnemonic is? There is no reason why you can't make up your own. Say, for instance, that you are proceeding with American history.

The Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock
In no less hundred twenty-four.

(This jingle is especially useful to medical students.) The next important event is the Boston Tea Party. Let us compose a rough-and-ready couplet about that:

Samuel Adams flung the tea
Into the briny Zuyder Zee.

You can see how simple and useful they are—not only for history, but also for current events. For instance,



In nineteen hundred thirty-six
It's the cigarette that clicks!

What, you ask, is the cigarette that clicks? Why, Philip Morris, of course! And why shouldn't it click? Could any cigarette be more pleasing to the palate? No! Could any cigarette be more tempting to the taste buds? No! A thundering, thumping, resounding no! Get some today, boy. You'll see.

(Max Shulman, 1956)

You won't need mnemonics to remember the wonderful natural flavor of Philip Morris Cigarettes, whose makers are delighted to bring you this column every week.

Students Cross Fingers As Picnics Are Planned

By MICKEY COLE

Halloween has come and gone and although the entire roll call hasn't been completed as yet it would seem that not more than one or two students were spirited away. This seems rather unusual considering the number of witches, ghosts, gobblins, and devils that were on campus during the week.

Two spooks opened the doors of Gamma Phi Beta's haunted barn to invite Alpha Tau Omega to join their Halloween fun. The invitation was accepted and games, dancing, and refreshments were enjoyed by the group.

Musical mixers, relays, games, apples on a string and toasted marshmallows were the ingredients for an evening of Halloween fun for Phi Delta Theta when Alpha Gamma Delta entertained Wednesday night. Comprising notes of the evening event were Kappa Alpha Theta and Sigma Chi. Sigma Chi presented a program of games, a skit by the pledges and dancing for the approval of the Kappa Alpha Theta guests.

Theta Chi turned its rec room into a spook house for Delta Delta Delta on the Haunted Eve. Needless to say there were one or two wet faces before the evening was over when those apples kept slipping around in the tub. Do they offer a course in apple dunking here?

Delta Gamma pledges entertained the actives at their Halloween party. There was competition between the pledges and actives as well as the usual round of games and refreshments. By the way, it was Delta Gamma which entertained Sigma Nu last week. My mistake, please forgive me.

Alpha Xi Delta pledges wore hats to represent their different personalities and interests at dinner the other night. After dinner everyone got together for an informal holiday party.

Delta Tau Delta celebrated the holiday a little early. It decorated the house as a haunted house, hired a combo and enjoyed an evening of dancing and good fellowship Saturday night.

An admission price of one apple was charged for the Gilchrist Halloween Mixer-masquerade. The apples were placed in tubs for dunking and prizes were awarded for the best costumes.

Alpha Lambda Delta, national freshmen women's honorary, held its first organizational meeting Halloween night. Means of carrying out the purpose of Alpha Lamba Delta, to encourage high scholarship and scholastic attainment among freshman women on campus, were the first order of business.

Sunday is the day set for the last party of rush for this semester. Girls who didn't pledge at formal rush will be entertained by the social sororities who have not filled their quota for the fall semester. Three informal parties are the program for the afternoon.

Monday is the last day for making reservations for the buffet supper the Vet's Club is planning for its members. All members and prospective members who wish to join the group when they sit together for the football game with Furman and the buffet afterwards may make reservations through the Vet's Club president, box 2031. The dinner, which is to be held in the trophy room, will be followed by a public dance in the Student Center. The orchestra for the dance will cater to the fathers present for Dad's Day.

• • •

Tomorrow night is the annual big night for the Sophomore class. The Sophomore Hop, which is free for everyone, is scheduled for Saturday night in the Women's Gym. The Devilaires are to be using the new circular revolving stage and the highlight of the evening will be the selection of the Sophomore King and Queen.

Informal Rush Starts Monday For 150 Women

Semi-formal rush, the last opportunity for girls interested in joining a sorority this semester began Monday. Approximately 150 girls signed up for the 60 available sorority places, said Senior Pan-Hel President Marion Benson yesterday.

In compliance with Pan-hellenic rulings, three parties will be held Sunday afternoon. The first will begin at 2 o'clock, the next at 3:15 and the final one at 4:30. Each party is expected to last approximately one hour.

The programs, which will be the same at each party will follow much the same form at all sororities.

Skits showing the advantages of the particular sorority and sorority life in general, singing of songs, and light refreshments are the general outline of events.

The general trend in attire is toward dressy afternoon clothing. The weather will be the final guide, however fall cottons and light-weight wools are the accepted thing in dress. Heels are a "must", with gloves optional. Hats are not worn.

Members of the sororities will wear light-weight wools, with some dressed in the traditional black.

Preference cards are to be signed in the Pan hellenic office Monday. Pledging will begin after 5 p.m. Tuesday.

This will be the last rushing of the semester. Next rushing will be held during February.

NEW HONOR SYSTEM

(ACP)—Columbia University's student board has given its support to the eventual establishment of an honor system in the hope of curtailing the strong competition for marks which is believed to be the cause of much of the cheating on exams. The board admits, however, that an indoctrination period of several years would be necessary before the program could be put into full force.

Board members feel that the strong competition for high marks has brought about a period of moral laxity, and that a sense of individual student responsibility should be fostered. They said the program would be part of an overall plan to emphasize the competitive aspects of Columbia life. However, others have expressed doubt that an honor system would remedy the situation. The opposition feels the school has a definite responsibility to make marks as reliable as possible.

Despite the opinions of many people regarding Coach Nugent's big switch of Lee Corso to quarterback, the Miami speedster has proved he can throw that pigskin. Corso has completed 17 of 35 tosses for 190 yards and two touchdowns.

Choose Clothes Carefully For Your Basic Wardrobe

By MARGARET McLEAN

After doing a little research on the situation, I am now able to assemble a rather definite formula for a basic wardrobe. This may appear to be a waste of precious time and space because everyone at FSU apparently has a reasonable facsimile. This is all very true, the value is in the future tense.

This article is being conceived to help our coeds shop wisely and economically. The clothes purchased with care and intelligent forethought have a habit of bestowing on the owner numerous rewards, satisfaction, durability, economy and comfort.

What type of clothes should go into a wardrobe? This component of a wardrobe (the type) is subdivided into two parts, the type of girl, and the function the garment is to serve for the girl. The type of girl means the figure type. Tall figures are concerned with avoiding awkward lines. Small figures are concerned with avoiding the midget look.

One obvious solution is scale of accessory size, big accessories for tall girls, medium-sized accessories for average girls, and little accessories for petite girls. The tall girl should break her height with sharp color contrasts of skirts and blouses, or wide contrasted belts, or with patterned fabrics (striped blouse and solid skirt for example), etc.

The small girl does the exact opposite by striving for unity of color, size, pattern, etc. I realize that the small girl will get very bored with always being one color and the girl is justified. The above rules are of course, idealized solutions (exceptions—only accessories are not for tall girls and the fashionably huge accessories are not for tiny girls).

The type of occasion dictates

COLLEGE PLACE, Wash. (UP)—Students at Walla Walla College may now devote the last seven days prior to final examination each quarter to review unhindered by assignments other than daily class work. Dean F. A. Moser announced here following a report of the Academic Standards Committee.

A new program is being introduced which will necessitate that students hand in all projects and term papers and complete all back work and make-up quizzes one week before examinations start.

Instructors will give quizzes only over the day's lesson, and daily assignments will be no heavier than those regularly given. Social functions during this week will be at a minimum to provide the student with greater freedom for study and to eliminate unnecessary demands on his time. Booster trips and choir and band tours will not be scheduled during that week.

choice even more because manufacturers consider the relation of height and size. (They assume that size #7 will be worn by a girl not over 5' 4". It is best to buy conservative clothes that can be mixed and matched and that can be dressed up or down via accessories.

Clothes should be selected, size-wise, to fit in the areas that would be the most difficult and expensive to alter. In a suit the shoulders should fit, the skirt can easily be lengthened or shortened, the sides can easily be increased or decreased, but shoulder alterations usually cost dearly and ruin the lines of a suit. Dresses should be bought by the length of the waist, the shoulders, or by the length of the hem. I have often ignored these factors because I liked a dress too well to be practical; however, I never felt, after the newness wore off, quite right in the dress and spent the evening tugging at ill-fitting seams.

Price is good to consider. Everyone knows what they can and cannot afford to spend on clothes. No matter how extravagant the budget, the rule remains the same, quality rather than quantity. It is better to wait until the really right thing can be managed, rather than buy the wrong thing simply because you can meet the price. Quality is more economical in the long run because the garment will last longer, wear better, and look better throughout the life of the garment.

A basic wardrobe consists of the following: coat, raincoat, several dresses, several pairs dressy suit, several skirts and blouses, several sweater sets, formal, semi-formal dress, sport clothes, lingerie, and accessories. The seasonal problem can be partially solved by buying year-round fabrics in party clothes (silk shantung is a good one). Buy wisely and eliminate from your verbal repertoire "I HAVEN'T A SINGLE THING TO WEAR."

Hungarian-Born Dohnanyi Marvels At Courage Of Anti-Russian Patriots

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

The name von Dohnanyi, professor of music, is among free-thinking men the world who marvel at the courage of the Hungarian anti-communists.

You can see [illegible] enhanced the white-haired but lively Hungarian musical composer, pianist, and conductor, "what Kids of us have had all these past years."

A musical star on Florida State University's faculty since 1949 he fled his native land to escape the Nazis in World War II and endured much misery in the Russian-occupied country.

Now 79 and Mr. Dohnanyi are independent but remote enough from the land that can determine the future of their homeland and of their relatives who still live there.

Dohnanyi and Mrs. Dohnanyi listen to short-wave broadcasts from the revolutionist country.

The Hungarian patriots who have ordered the Russians to leave much of them students some ill and undernourished men and women according to their broadcasts.

SOURCE UNKNOWN

"Where the get them I don't know," Dr. Dohnanyi said.

He added that Americans could help by sending medical items, blood and clothes and food.

Mr. Dohnanyi, who has been spending more time by the radio than his usual short-wave power said that added Russian soldiers are given good care in order and rations and as much as can be is given to civilian patients.

Dr. Dohnanyi, born 79 years ago in Pozsony, Hungary, now Bratislava, in Czechoslovakia, there received conservatory and university training in music. He studied piano with Istvan Thoman and composition with Hans Koessler.

He began his career as a concert pianist, conductor and composer, has a long history of devotion to freedom.

For centuries Hungary was somewhat of a subordinate nation within the Austro-Hungarian Empire but still exhibited the characteristics of a free nation—similar to the British constitutional monarchy. Dr. Dohnanyi declared. There were times when freedom was dear—150 years of Turkish occupation, 1 months' Tartar invasion in the 13th Century, and, in 1919, 41 months of communist regime under Bela Kun who was ousted by a revolt that began in the country and spread in to Budapest where Kun's power was concentrated.

MORE INTEREST

Hungarian students have been always a little revolutionary, Dr. Dohnanyi noted recently, more politically interested than American students.

It is because "they love their country" that the students and other revolutionaries have pitted office no more than their fists and bottles and such against heavy Russian weapons—with apparently successful results.

"They must be very brave — not be sad, write about politics or mention the fate of particular persons in their letters."

Dr. Dohnanyi said 150,000 Hungarians left during the chaos caused by the Nazi withdrawal and Russian entry at the close of the 24th world war. Since then, he said, it has been at the risk of life that any have gotten out.

Despite these intolerable conditions it was "quite surprising" that the revolt came about considering Red Army strength, Dr. Dohnanyi continued.

It came about through the Polish uprising," he maintained

'SOME DAY'

But now that the revolt has begun, and Russia must maintain her strength in other satellites to prevent similar uprisings, there is a chance for democracy now in Hungary, Dr. Dohnanyi asserted. And it can now, "it has to come some day."

If the Russians withdraw their military forces Hungarian patriots will see that no home-grown dictator assumes power, Dr. Dohnanyi believes.

The brief experiment with communism in 1919 and the subsequent rule of 25 years were "the result of lost wars," he said.

If freedom is the result in Hungary Dr. Dohnanyi may soon visit his homeland. He is an American citizen, however having received his naturalization papers in 1946, and, "I remain in Tallahassee."

Among his better known works are "Ten American Rhapsody" "Variations on a Nursery Rhyme," and "Suite en Valse." Dr. Dohnanyi is honored each year by the British Broadcasting Corporation with a July 27 birthday broadcast that not even World War II—with Great Britain and Hungary on different sides—interrupted.

He heard the 1944 broadcast as a refugee in an Austrian village. Later he played in Linz for Americans made his way to Paris, eventually to Argentina for two years, and to America in 1948.

BRAHMS PRAISE

During his early years he won praise from the immortal composer Johannes Brahms, who described him as "a most promising of great talent." He made an American concert tour in 1900 and toured the country annually from 1923 through 1927. His early years were spent in Pozsony, which was taken from Hungary at the end of World War I and renamed Bratislava of Czechoslovakia.

Among his pupils he has taught who are now well known in the United States are Boris Goldovsky and Edward Kilenyi. The latter a professor of piano at FSU.

Ohio University awarded him an honorary doctor of music degree at its Sesquicentennial Commencement in 1954, half a century after the University of Khaszeshazu in Hungary conferred his first doctorate upon him. The Ohio citation recounted Dr. Dohnanyi's 30 years as director of the Budapest Philharmonic Society."

'ACP'—A

A somewhat difficult situation existed recently at Louisiana State University. You can't say no to Uncle Sam so the school's military department was rather nonplussed when a prospective freshman turned down its offer of compulsory military training. The department sent an information form explaining that two years of basic military training are required at LSU of all physically fit male students up to the age of 25. In reply, the prospective freshman wrote: "Thank you for your generous offer to let me join the ECTC at LSU. I would you I would deem it the greatest honor ever to come to me. After giving the matter deep consideration I have decided it would be best if I declined your offer."

The freshman refused the offer because of the advantage it would give me over the rest on campus."

The red-faced military department plans no action in the case because the he turned out to be a she.

Suez War

Nasser allows you through the canal or not."

Melcher, who is writing a graduate paper on Israel, stirred the hitherto sorority quiet into brisk debate when he asked the Egyptian representatives if Britain would be unsatisfied in diverting the headwaters of the Nile, which are in her territory, because Nasser has allegedly stopped some canal traffic.

Melcher based his reasoning, he said, on charges that 70 vessels bound for Israel have been denied canal passage. This, reported Murty, is a situation "unlike from the technical state of war existing since 1948 between Israel and Egypt."

According to the Convention of 1888, Murty said, Egypt may deny passage of armaments goods to her enemies.

Fletcher, who spoke only briefly as an American representative, contended that another provisions of the 1888 agreement forbade any restriction on canal traffic.

UNSURE OF BRITISH

"I'm not too sure I trust the British," Fletcher said later. He attributed to former Egyptian Ambassador Lord Killearn a statement before parliament that "this agreement" with Israel might be one way of invalidating the nationalization of the canal company.

"Both sides are at fault" regarding the current fighting, Fletcher asserted.

Fashion Expert To Visit Here

Tully-Ho pictures will be taken at the Student Fashion Institute meetings this afternoon in the large lounge of Loogmire, according to Barbara Emmett, secretary of the Institute. Members are requested to wear dark skirts, pastel sweaters, heels and earrings.

During the meeting, plans will be made for the visit of Mary Brooks Pickins, president of the New York Fashion Institute of Technology, who will be on campus Thursday and Friday. She will visit the various fashion classes and speak on fashion careers, and will also be available for private interviews. Mrs. Pickens will be honored with a coffee on Thursday beginning at 7:00 in the Loogmire Lounge, Miss Emmett said.

Over 200 girls tried out for positions on the campus modeling squad. Two prelims were held before the girls were judged on a point system by a panel of judges, including Bertha Clark, owner and manager of Bertha Cook's Dress Shop; Tye Spivey, fashion coordinator and bridal consultant of Sevenseas; and Dick Baker, former Home Economics faculty member.

Freshman Found Following Suicide

Discovered At Blue Sink; Death Due To Car Fumes

George Wallace Bradley, 21-year-old freshman, was [illegible] dead in a parked car at lonely Blue Sink yesterday [illegible], apparently a suicide victim, according to au[illegible]

[illegible] Sheriff O. M. Clouser [illegible] Bradley was found slumped [illegible] the wheel of the car. A [illegible] cleaner hose had been [illegible] from the exhaust pipe [illegible] window which had [illegible] stuffed with a towel. The [illegible] ignition was turned on [illegible] tank was empty, Clouser said.

[illegible] County Judge Lawrence Ren[illegible] said Bradley apparently [illegible] his own life. Friends de[illegible] the youth both as "br[illegible] and "moody." He was [illegible] missed Sunday morning, [illegible] to Clouser.

[illegible] a graduate of Bowles [illegible] private institution in [illegible] where his mother [illegible] registrar, lived in a [illegible] off-campus.

[illegible] said Bradley's friends [illegible] landlady first missed him [illegible] morning. Police and [illegible] deputies were notified [illegible] Sunday afternoon. [illegible] said Bradley's landlady [illegible] again at 10 a.m. yester[illegible] claimed that her vacuum [illegible] hose was missing, and asked the deputy to search all isolated sinks and lakes he could think of. Shortly afterward the deputy said, he found the car several hundred feet southeast of the wooded sink hole just off the Crawfordville Road at the Wakulla Springs cutoff. The student might have been dead as long as 36 hours, the deputy said.

"Bradley had a good record as far as we know," commented Dr. Doak S. Campbell, Florida State University president.

It was fearned that Bradley wrote suicide letters in which he mentioned personal problems and that the letters were found in the car beside him.

BOP Committee To Consider 'engarde' Fate

Will Submit Briefs At Board Meeting

A Board of Publications committee will receive written arguments this week concerning a request for the establishment of a literary magazine.

Presenting briefs Thursday will be David Ward-Steinman, spokesman for the group seeking to publish a literary magazine, "engarde," and Marcello Truzzi, editor of Smoke Signals, humor magazine.

Don Heidel, chairman of the Board of Publications, said the magazine committee, headed by board member Laird Anderson, will duplicate the written arguments and submit them to the Board a week from Thursday.

Ward-Steinman is expected to advocate the establishment of a literary magazine as a necessary outlet for campus talent. Truzzi has contended Smoke Signals can print acceptable material of a literary nature, but cancelled an agreement with the "engarde" junction to turn one issue of Smoke Signals over to them for literary purposes exclusively.

Business, Education Buildings Start Soon

Campbell Names Prexy Committee

President Doak S. Campbell Friday app[illegible] a seven-member committee of faculty members to receive suggested names of men to serve as Florida State University president.

Dr. Campbell, who will step down from his post June 30, asked the members to receive names from other faculty members and gather information on them for submission to the Board of Control.

As of yesterday the new committee had taken no official action.

The committee, said Dr. Campbell, should "proceed in your own way" and become "the official channel of information and suggestions to the Board of Control" regarding the selection of a new president.

Members are Dr. Robert L. Briggs, Dr. Halen Cate, Dr. J. Fank Dame, Dr. Herman F[illegible], Dr. Alex Green, Dr. Lewis Ki[illegible]lian, and Dr. Vincent Thursby, chairman.

In other developments in the presidency selection, Dr. Eugene Lawler, head of the FSU branch of the AAUP American Association of University Professors, said the group will meet Monday n[illegible] to "consider possible methods the AAUP can use to make its influence felt."

He said a special AAUP committee had been appointed to study means of influencing the choice of a successor to Dr. Campbell and report to the faculty group as a whole.

"As of now," said Dr. Lawler, "the committee plans to submit four alternate ways in which the AAUP could move. The first would be to suggest requirements for a new president—experience and character."

He said the other methods could be to "do nothing," emphasize to members that they should suggest names to the Campbell committee, or appoint a screening committee to enable the AAUP as a body to nominate people.

Dr. Lawler added "The [illegible] may go further than that," but he does not expect it to do so.

The difference between the construction bids and the appropriation will be spent for architects fees, legal fees, and equipment for the buildings, the business manager said.

WEST OF CONRADI

Location of the Business school building will be west of the Conradi Building in the area where the Nursery School is now located, he said. The Education School Building will be located to the area west of the Geology Building.

Other expansion plans include the construction of two new dormitories to be located southwest of Florida Hall and northwest of West Hall, Shaw said. These however are not in the final stages, he added.

Two Dorms Slate Dances For Weekend

Two formal dances, sponsored annually by Reynolds and Landis halls, are scheduled for this week-end.

The Reynolds Harvest Moon Dance is to be held from 9 until 12 Friday night at the dormitory.

Highlighting the dance will be the crowning of the queen of the dance by Chris Ginocchio, dorm president, said Mrs. C. Goatley, Reynolds social director.

Vieing for the night's highest honor are Betty Brown, Doris Vermeulen, Mary Jane Will, Catherine Archibald, Norma Brown, Linda Cawthon, Betty Ann Kuhn, Athena Sailor, Pat Ferguson, and Carolyn Lay.

Decorations will follow the "harvest moon" theme and music will be provided by the Devilaires. Dr. William Tait will serve as master of ceremonies for the evening program.

Saturday evening the Landis hall recreation room will be transformed into swampland for the formitory's annual dance.

Vines, flowers, spanish moss, and blue lighting will be used in carrying out the dance decoration theme "The Enchanted Everglades," said Jean Worley, East Landis hall social chairman.

The G-Bach Strings will furnish music for the dance which lasts from 9 p.m. until midnight.

'Culture Exam Is Tomorrow

Required general culture examinations will be given tomorrow night in Westcott Auditorium beginning at 6:45 o'clock, the Test Service Bureau announced.

The test is obligatory for all juniors and seniors who have not taken it before, a spokesman said.

The test is designed to measure general achievement in science, mathematics, literature, fine arts, and history and social studies and consists of five sections of 25 minutes each.

There is no "passing or failing" but students are compared with others of their class and with a national rating based on representative schools, the Bureau said. Both the student and his academic counselor are told test results.

Air ROTC To Begin Flying Training Here

Florida State Universiyt is one of 43 educational institutions which have been tentatively selected to begin Air Force ROTC flying training during the 1956-57 school year, it was announced recently.

An announcement by Col. Howard J. Withycombe, professor of air science at FSU, said the training will become a principal feature of Air Force ROTC work. It will consist of 35 hours of light plane training.

Present plans, he added, call for instruction of senior cadets at Dale Mabry Airport. The flying will be supervised by the Civil Aeronautics Authority and cadets completing the training will receive private pilots licenses.

Other institutions in this area tentatively selected for the new training are Auburn and the University of Alabama, he said.

Contract negotiations on the new program are scheduled to begin this month. The remaining 137 Air Force ROTC units over the country are expected to be added to the program during the next two years.

Arnold Greenfield Rated Superior For Debating Ability

Arnold Greenfield, representing Florida State University at a debate conference of southern university students held last week at the University of Alabama, received superior rating in a discussion of foreign economic aid.

Twenty-six universities and colleges from Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, and Michigan were represented at the meeting.

Other FSU students sent to the conference by the Department of Speech were Jean Bleichner, Leeanne Reetz, Susie Flory, Francis Annis, Bart Durham, Melvin Peters, and graduate assistant Tom King.

Greenfield and seven students from other schools participating in the foreign economic aid discussion received the superior rating award.

Tau Kappa Alpha, FSU speech honorary, will attend a Regional Debate Tournament to be held at Auburn two weeks from now.

Alpha Kappa Psi Gives Barbecue

Alpha Kappa Psi, national professional business fraternity, gave a barbecue Thursday night for 22 Phi Mu social sorority pledges, an officer announced yesterday.

He said the barbecue at the Reservation was the first of a series of parties planned "to further relationships between the business honorary and sorority groups on campus."

Speaks To Senate

Bachman To Make Address Tomorrow

Dave Bachman, Student Body president, will address Student Senate tomorrow afternoon. The meeting begins at 4:15.

Bachman said he will make recommendations for legislation in his talk to the Senate members which he said concerns a broad topic directing the course of student government for the coming year.

The Student Body president said he will discuss "Where student government should go and what it should look for."

A resolution made by Fred Roberts, senator from West Hall, favoring the opening of the library on Sunday nights will be reported upon by the committee on Labor, Student Services and Education.

There will also be a report from the committee on elections and appointments regarding appointments submitted to Senate for approval, according to Bill Cullom, FSU vice-president.

Rules of procedure for this year's Senate meetings which were referred to Jim Soles, Pat Finlay, and Gerry Gordon last week will be discussed, Cullom said.

Appointments to be considered for approval include the nomination of J. P. Jones for Undersecretary of elections, Dick Smith, for Undersecretary of Student Welfare, Jim Kauffman, for Undersecretary of Recreation, Evelyn Nettles, for Undersecretary of Funds, Norma Trinnodo, for Undersecretary of Organizations, Jim McIntyre, for Undersecretary of Honor, and Jerome Bernstein, for Undersecretary of Veteran's Affairs.

Alan Whitmarsh and Russ Parish were submitted as nominees to the Board of Publications. Ann Bohler was also nominated to replace Pat Brady, board member who did not return to school this year.

Shirley Morgan was nominated to replace Love Scarborough, who is interning, as Associate Justice of Honor Court.

Anita Wall

FSU Alumna Chosen Queen

Florida State University Alumna Anita Wall was named Georgia Tech Homecoming Queen the Florida Flambeu learned yesterday.

Miss Wall, who graduated with a BA in advertising last year, reigned at the Homecoming festivities a week ago. A resident of Atlanta, she is employed in the advertising department of a department store there.

At FSU she was Miss Gymkana of 1954, a member of Tally-Ho's Miss FSU court of the same year, and on the Homecoming Court here in 1954.

She was sponsored by Theta Chi fraternity in the Georgia Institute of Technology Homecoming Queen contest. In 1953 she was sweet heart of the fraternity.

Miss Wall is 22 years old, five feet, three inches tall, weighs 110 pounds and measures 35-24-36.

TALLY-HO PICTURES

Students who missed appointments for Tally-Ho pictures may reschedule them for afternoons this week between 3 and 5 o'clock, by calling the office, 7-4841, editor Barbara Ayala said.

Biochemistry Lab Calls For Tadpoles

Florida State University's biochemistry laboratory needs more tadpoles for an important series of experiments.

Dr. Earl Frieden, who is conducting a research for the U.S. Public Health Service in chemical changes accompanying the change of tadpoles into frogs, said he would like to know the location of waters within 75 miles of Tallahassee where tadpoles may be obtained in quantity.

The research, expected to be helpful in understanding growth processes in organisms, has been under way for some time. The laboratory has used hundreds of tadpoles in the experiments but there is now a particular shortage of the swamp tadpole—a large black one several inches long.

Sixteen Coeds Selected For Model Group

Sixteen women were selected this week to serve on the Student Fashion Institute's Modeling Corps, according to Sara Atkinson, institute spokesman.

They will model for Tallahassee women's stores fashion shows given by campus organizations, and WCTV television advertisements.

Judges who picked the women from a field of about 175, were Bertha Cooke, owner and operator of Bertha Cooke's retail store, Ivy Savey, bridal consultant for Steyerman's, and Dick Baker, formerly with the department of Home Economics at Florida State University.

Those chosen are Donna Huggins, Denise Johnson, Sarah Boone, Jo Ada Williams, Mary Walter and Vicky Walter, Judy Dekle, Ruth Shuman, Jean Hayden, Serena Schad, Jean Kitchens;

Layte Bowden, Audrey Grant, Jane Kelly, Beverly Laureot, and Ava Fulsbum.

The alternate list consists of Sara Clardy, Jane Laurence, Barbara Bishop, Betty Jane Atkinson, Clarice Cook, Jan Hinson, Rae Sheldon, Leeanne Reetz, Lucille Massey, and Margaret McLean.

Grade sheets used by the judges may be seen by any contestant who wishes to know her score.

The sheets may be seen by contacting Ann Kirn, fashion institute sponsor or Sara Atkinson.

Tally-Ho Slates Institute Pictures

Tally-Ho pictures will be taken at the Student Fashion Institute meeting a week from today, instead of last Friday, as erroneously announced in Friday's Flambeau.

According to Barbara Emmett, secretary of the institute, the meeting will be held in the large lounge of Longmire. Members are requested to wear dark skirts, pastel sweaters, heels and earrings.

During the meeting plans will be made for the visit of Mary Brooks Pickins, president of the New York Fashion Institute of Technology who will be on campus Thursday and Friday. She will visit the various fashion classes and speak on fashion careers, and will also be available for private interviews. Mrs. Pickens will be honored with a coffee on Thursday beginning at 7:00 in the Longmire Lounge, Miss Emmett said.

URA To Start TennisMatches

The University Recreation Association will begin a series of co-ed tennis matches Thursday night, Celeste Webb, publicity chairman, announced.

She said a mixed doubles tournament will be held and trophies awarded to the winning couple. Matches will be held Thursday nights from 7 to 10 p.m. at the tennis courts behind the women's gymnasium. Closing date of the program will be December 6.

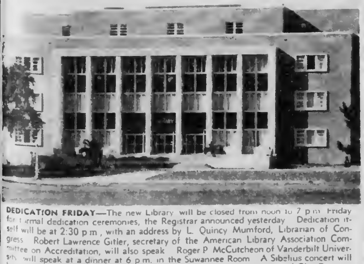
Miss Webb said co-ed bowling, volleyball, and golf have been scheduled for the remainder of the year.

Rotary Club Offers Foreign Aid Grant

The Tallahassee Rotary Club said yesterday it is accepting applications for this year's Rotary Foundation Fellowship for foreign study, worth $2,400.

The Club said students who will have graduated by October 1957, and who are under 28 years of age, may apply. A wide choice of foreign schools is permitted, a spokesman commented.

Interested students should contact Dr. R. R. Oglesby, Dean of Students, if they wish to be considered for the fellowship, he concluded.



Village Vamps To Sell Kisses

Another Campus Chest [illegible] gets underway today when Village Vamps begin selling Campus Chest Kisses.

Ruth Schuman, Chest publicity chairman, said that the Vamps will begin selling candy kisses as the second Chest project of this year.

The campus-wide drive which has a goal of $5,000 is under the chairmanship of Nancy Lee Young, who reports that many organizations [illegible] participating in the annual drive.

A trophy is given to the organization who makes the most money for the drive. Last year the social fraternity Alpha Tau Omega won. They will be presented the trophy at the Campus Chest Dance to be held in December.

DEDICATION FRIDAY—The new Library will be closed from noon to 7 p.m. Friday for formal dedication ceremonies, the Registrar announced yesterday. Dedication itself will be at 2:30 p.m., with an address by L. Quincy Mumford, Librarian of Congress. Robert Lawrence Gitler, secretary of the American Library Association Committee on Accreditation, will also speak. Roger P. McCutcheon of Vanderbilt University will speak at a dinner at 6 p.m. in the Suwannee Room. A Sibelius concert will be given at 8:30 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall, in commemoration of Olin Downes, late music critic of the New York Times, whose music library, bought by FSU, will be dedicated Saturday morning at 10 a.m.

AT CONCERT—Soloists and conductor at University [illegible] event in Westcott Auditorium last night are, l.-r., Audrey Blomgren, Robert Sedore, conductor, James Stafford and Ryan Edwards.

After 'Ike Day', Country May Recall Bickering, Boasting Of Campaign

After "Ike Day" is over and students can sit back and look at the situation calmly, they may come up with a few pertinent observations regarding the 1956 Presidential campaign.

Among them might be the thought that things weren't exactly as pictured by "the incumbent candidate, Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Four years ago, when Mr. Eisenhower promised "peace," the world situation was not entirely dark. There was trouble in Korea—serious trouble—but the free nations were united and were capable of handling the situation.

Since the Korean struggle ended, Mr. Eisenhower has not had too much difficulty preserving the belief among Americans that he, with the Republicans, would "take care of things" and Russia would gradually lose the battle for world supremacy.

So sure of his capability in world affairs was he, in fact, that he predicted before the campaigning began that domestic issues would predominate in the politicking.

Americans, however, have not. They have been able to see gaping holes form in the picture of peace and safety as Mr. Eisenhower's four years in office have gone by one by one. They have noted the deterioration of democratic power in many areas of the globe—deterioration which, though perhaps growing from happenings previous to the present administration, Mr. Eisenhower has been unable to end.

And it is significantly appropriate that, almost on election day eve, the incapability of the Eisenhower administration in the conduct of foreign affairs has been eloquently demonstrated for all to see. The events in Poland, Hungary and Egypt have cast their record in black headlines and they do not speak good for the United States.

In Hungary and Poland, as oppressed peoples fight for the freedom so taken for granted over here, Russians outright suppression threatens the beginnings of war. Are we now at another "brink" which will be revealed months hence in a magazine article?—that is, if worldwide fighting does not make it painfully obvious before then?

Where will Egypt's nationalism die? Will it end when enough Egyptian soldiers lie dead on the desert sands, killed by English air and sea might and Syrian land forces, so that the western nations no longer consider the country a military threat?

How unified are the countries of the free world when the nationalistic tantrums of a Nasser can pit ally against ally and split long-standing cohesions. Or can the Eisenhower administration say with a straight face of the English and French break with America that NOW "certainly American prestige and influence are at an all-time high"?

Such questions as these may well plague the Republican high command when it seeks to spread its aura of "peace." It is easy to imagine a group of worried, frantic men huddling together in Republican headquarters and hoping against hope that things will not break out of hand before election day. And repeating over and over again that Americans won't have sense enough to criticize a Secretary of State who on one day promises a United States opposition to aggression against Egypt which would the next day have us pitted against England and France—two nations which have so far stuck with the United States in opposition to Soviet Russia.

These thing might our hypothetical student mull over as he recalls the bickering and boasting which will have preceded tomorrow's election. And if it turns out to be an "Ike Day" as the pollsters predict, he may wonder whether he was too hasty in dismissing Frank Clement's prophetic words: "How long, O how long, America?"

Academic Liberties Deserve Careful Consideration

The American Civil Liberties Union has published a 12-page pamphlet dealing with civil liberties of students which we feel is deserving of the attention of all who deal with students.

Base theme of the pamphlet is that the exercise of civil liberties by college and university students is essential to their development as participating members of a democratic community.

Prepared by the ACLU academic freedom committee, which undertakes the study of restrictions on free discussion within college confines, the pamphlet grants that educational institutions "can and must exercise reasonable control over school use [of]... public forums" they are committed to "basic progressive withdrawal of authority."

"Students are taught to make independent decisions based on their increasing stock of knowledge and, since we live in a democracy, to assume increasing power and responsibility as citizens—both off and on the campus."

The pamphlet declares that the post-war emphasis on national security has resulted in an "increasing exercise of conformism by college authorities and governing boards over students.

"The ACLU believes that the gains to national security from such paternalism will prove largely illusory while the losses to freedom and democracy are likely to be real and substantial. If students refrain from joining organizations and from other activities, out of fear rather than out of conviction, it may induce feelings of frustration and reservation in students which that, in the long run, may undermine their belief in and commitment to democratic values.

"Human progress and democracy depend upon the free contest of ideas. This is as true on the campus as in the community at large. We cannot wrap the student's cotton wool to protect him against the hazards of freedom and at the same time habituate him to the making of intelligent choices among policies."

The ACLU pamphlet set forth a number of guiding principles concerning student organizations, student publications on and off campus, student speeches and form participation on and off campus, general disciplinary procedure of schools and colleges and the educational institution and public relations. These include

While college journalism is unique in that it is a kind of monopoly which requires special editorial responsibility", the school and college should avoid rigid and complete control of publications. Despite the irritations and controversy that "a free college paper almost inevitably entails," the institution should promote that vigorous, independent inquiry which is part of an educational program.

No disciplinary action should be taken against a student of a college for engaging in off-campus activities such as political campaigning, picketing, and participating in public demonstrations, providing the student does not claim authority to speak in the name of the college.

No student should be expelled or suffer other disciplinary action unless advised explicitly of the charges against him and provided a full hearing to answer the charges.

Regulations concerning the extracurricular activities of students should be adopted and implemented by a faculty-student committee. These regulations should be "fully and completely formulated, published and made continuously available to the whole academic community. Realistic and practical definitions should be used in place of such general criteria as 'conduct unbecoming a student,' or 'against the best interests of an institution' which allow for wide latitude of interpretation and hence confusion."

Controversial situations which embarrass an educational institution's "public relations" should not be resolved by restricting the academic freedom of the campus.

Ike Credited With Record Of Peace, Progress, Prosperity

TO THE EDITOR:

I think it's time some Republican sentiment ventured across this page. In the past few weeks we have seen Adlai Stevenson portrayed as the wise, steady, humanitarian who would make a wonderful administrator. President Eisenhower has been classed as a lucky, smiling, boob, who regards Hydrogen warfare as desirable.

In reality, we find Mr. Stevenson: a professional ex-governor, a man of many faces who flits from Walter Reuther to Herman Talmadge, from Eleanor Roosevelt to Senator Eastland. He is a man whose highest federal post was at sub-cabinet level. His Governorship in Illinois was marred by a 13 million dollar tax scandal and horsemeat rackets. In 1952 he won millions of friends with his earnest, idealistic speeches. The Stevenson of 1956 is certainly a different man. He has attempted to rake in all the hopelessly divided minorities of the Democratic party. He pledges: mor federal spending but no taxes; a strong defense and a stern attitude toward Russia, yet end the draft and stop nuclear tests, (meantime trusting Russia to do the same.) His personal platform might be expressed: millions and millions for everything and everyone plus a tax cut; advantages and privileges for all, duties and responsibilities for none.

In President Eisenhower's case, the record speaks for itself. He was appointed by a Democratic President to the highest, most sensitive job in the European war—the leading of the coalition of the Allied nations. He became President in time of stalemated war and crushing inflation. McCarthyism had split the nation. The Welfare State threatened the initiative and incentive of our citizens. Now, the stalemated war is ended, and the country has given us over a time to a peace time economy. Millions of Americans are working at more jobs for higher wages and with fewer strikes than ever before. Six percent more of the total national income now goes to the laboring class of people. Inflation is controlled and the budget is balanced. Socialism is dead. Social security has been broadened with a minimum of government regulation and regimentation. Mr. Eisenhower has demonstrated to the world America's dollar for peace. He has offered time after time disarmament proposals (proof of his sincerity) that Russia has refused. This man, trained profe. sional for war, has proved himself a man of peace.

Calling The Card

No New, Old Books

BY ARNOLD GREENFIELD

We had a very interesting experience the other day in our new modern airconditioned quarters. We found either old magazines or new magazines, they have just what we want. It just happens that the old ones are at the old library and the new ones are at the bindery. We really don't want to sound scrid, but it is so much nicer to read magazines about philosophy or history in the Micropalantology Digest.

We were also interested to learn certain facts about the University of Alabama during our visit there this past week-end. First of all they are not the radical exponents of segregation they are so often pictured as being in the outside world. They have Negroes and women in their night and furthermore rumor has it that intermarriage between these groups often takes place.

NEXT WE WERE pleased to learn from one of their students that last year's Autherine Lucy incident had not hurt or affected the university in any way. On the course of the conversation, however, he did hear of certain curious "coincidences." For example, the year a certain outsider left Alabama to enter from new admissions although Alabama has always previously had a large northern increment. This is to keep the taxpayers' money from the spirit or evil of state people.

Also certain fraternities and other groups on campus were outstanding exponents of segregation at first and subsequent events to make clear their respective positions in the matter. Interesting items of all many professors resigned soon after the departure of Autherine from the campus.

IT WAS certainly good to learn that an educational institution can go completely unaffected after an incident of this sort.

* * *

And at last, the final item on my agenda for today. I sincerely want to apologize to reader Becker for any difficulty I have caused him in the past few issues of the Flambeau. It was absurd of me to think that college students knew the subtle meaning of such unusual words as lexicon. I was seriously pleased to learn first that such a clever satirist could be found among my readers and secondly that someone who is conversant with Plautus and Horace could have trouble with my relatively literate efforts. This is particularly true in light of the fact that much of Bacon's stuff is written in Latin.

Officer List Would Get Out Of Hand

By OSCAR JOHNSON

When the 300 members of one of the campus' most enthusiastic student groups get together recently to elect officers, they weren't looking around. They wanted to take care of everything.

So after electing the usual series of officers—president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, publicity chairman—they decided one more and named five "Miscellaneous Chairman. Every month they officially appoint a task force of officers to take care of the miscellaneous details the others forget.

THE IDEA, however, could be extended. Some groups on campus have known to be so concerned with satisfying all members that each member gets a position. This, of course, makes for long lists of officers, but still, nobody gets that "left out" feeling.

Instead of thinking up new names, such as "Miscellaneous Chairman," it might be easier to just make subdivisions in the ordinary list of officers. For example, Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, Letter-Folding Secretary, Stamping Secretary, Mailing Secretary. Checking in Post Office Box Secretary. Typing Secretary, and maybe Typewriter Ribbon Secretary. Inserting Missives Secretary. Corresponding Secretary. Letter Opening Secretary. Filing Secretary. Getting Cup of Coffee Secretary. Answering Telephone Secretary and Finding Paper Clips Secretary.

THIS WOULD eliminate duplication of work and lead in greater efficiency. It would merely require that 70 or so secretaries attend group meetings to perform their functions. Other positions could also be subdivided.

Another way to solve the problem of finding titles for the excess members would be to divide the existing titles by periods of time, as President for November, President for December etc.

One difficulty with the whole scheme is that it might get out of hand. It might eventually be that the group would have to name a Chairman in Charge of Making Up Names for Officers.

PEP RALLY SET

Head cheerleader "Slicks" Steinberg said yesterday a pep rally for the Furman game tomorrow night has been set for Thursday night in Westcott Circle, beginning at 10:15. Cheerleaders, the Marching Chiefs, football team, and Coach Tom Nugent will be present, he said.

Also, a pretty freshman pomtom will be given ten extra minutes, until 10:40 p.m., to enter their dorms.

Hoover, Jr., Is Capable

By PIERCE LEHMBECK

When a cancerous intestine subdued Secretary of State John Foster Dulles late last week the problem of his successor was not on the shoulders of hitherto unnoticed undersecretary Herbert Hoover Jr.

Working in the shadow of the elder Dulles throughout his precoci administration, a foreign relations efforts, Hoover's man not readily known to the American public.

Is he capable of handling the great tasks now in his hands? Many factions—especially the Republican administration—seem to think he can.

Hoover Jr. was one who avoided capitalizing on his name. His father was a former president and reached success by his own efforts. He refused several tempting offers before he finally consented to accept as a result of his father's prominence.

AN ENGINEER like his father, Herbert undergraduated faithfully and he took no part in limelight. The result was that the general public hardly knows this quiet, self-effacing son of President, even after he had gained the recognition in engineering circles.

He made his professional mark as an investor and administrator in the fields of mining, radio and electronic engineerings.

He developed devices used in finding oil and became an advisor to a number of foreign governments due to his knowledge of the oil business, to your persistency and to your knowledge of the oil business.

SERVING AS a trouble shooter for the State Department Hoover played a major part in settling a three-year-old British-Iranian oil dispute in 1954.

The settlement was a diplomatic victory for the United States and its aims for the rich Iranian oil of the Mideast.

President Eisenhower told Hoover that the unfamiliar problem was "dine in significant measure to the lack of knowledge of the oil business, to your persistency and to your knowledge of the oil business.

Shortly after the success of that work, Hoover was named undersecretary of State, with unanimous confirmation by the Senate.

THE YOUNGER Hoover is a graduate of Stanford University and a Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, started his rise early. By the time he was 26, he was chief engineer of Western Air Express, one of the companies that formed to form Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc.

At 46 he was president of two large engineering companies, directed geophysical and consolidated Engineering—on special consultant to several foreign governments, including Venezuela, Iran, Brazil and Peru, on exploration and production of oil.

Zagreb Reception Good

BY RYAN EDWARDS

Although it may be a little late to be commenting on the concert of I Solisti di Zagreb two weeks ago, that concert certainly quite a few ancient gripes which had long been bothering a sense of hopeless frustration. Happily, they started in a manner which made us feel perhaps our musical taste wasn't so hopeless after all.

The size of this extravation was the audience. It was unnumbered about five hundred persons, and a very small percentage of those persons were students. But even in face of these handicaps, I Solisti played their hearts out.

It was the first time in nor ten years at FSU that we have ever seen an audience rise to its feet two-thirds of the way through the concert. Many of the listeners immediately set up to leave, even before the artist was well off the stage.

We can find several factors that probably contributed to this astonishing display of good manners. Most important is football presented the most distinguished musical performers we have ever heard at FSU; and a great performance always commands respect.

Also, the only people who came were people who really wanted to come. For this reason, they were more concerned with the music than with themselves, their appearance, or the fact that they were attending a "cultural" affair.

Lastly, the enthusiasm of a good many "brevol"-shouting and "encore!"-callers may have included proved contagious.

But should such influences as these be necessary for a listener's ability to show good manners? Are the students of the townspeople who attend concerts here so ill-bred that they must always display despicable taste, with only one exception in a decade?

Of course, there are influences at these concerts which will on the side of disrespect and impoliteness. For one thing the stuttering system is incomprehensible.

Mitch Miller, Village Vanus, and the other organists who perform this duty are lovely, well-meaning, and deserving of gratitude. But their job is unsatisfactory simply because they cannot be so told music as they are always closed between music beams, not in the middle of the first selection; that is, sometimes we are seated between compositions; and that seems to be wear noisy crinoline petticoats and then swish in and out of the seats regardless of what is happening on stage.

Also, someone should tell our conscientious stage-hands that brilliant plaid sport shirts, casual slacks and white bucks shoes look exceedingly garish beside the impeccable formal dress that performers usually wear out of respect to their audience.

Perhaps we should begin to show a little more courtesy and breeding before we complain about our Artist Series. It would be so easy to do!

Florida State Backfield Boasts Singer In Fullback Joe Holt

By BOB WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State backfield is probably one of the few backfields in the nation to boast a singing fullback.

A baritone in Florida State University's Collegians, and a former musical fraternity pledge, Joe Holt, holds down one of the most bruising positions on the gridiron.

A lightweight compared to the beefier men which usually man the fullback slot Holt carries only 185 on a short 5-8 frame. Soft spoken, amiable, seemingly quiet, Joe Holt hails from the tiny hamlet of Graham, North Carolina, where he first aroused attention in the football world by being named to the North Carolina all-state football squad in high school.

Undecided as to which university he would attend, Holt cinched his decision after a springtime trip to the FSU campus for the Garnet and Gold football game in 1953.

Contacted by a former high school coach friend, Wm Siegfried, who had just joined the coaching staff, Holt was offered and accepted an athletic scholarship to FSU.

Now a senior, and a fixture in the Tribe fullback slot, Joe is majoring in Marketing. Although a marketing major, he intends to become a construction engineer with his uncle's construction firm in North Carolina.

Unlike many sweat factory graduates, he hopes to study engineering elsewhere for a graduate degree.

Besides his activities in the Collegians and on the gridiron, Joe is also active in his social fraternity. This year he was elected vice president of ATO fraternity.

According to Holt, one of his best games of the year was in his home state against North Carolina State, three weeks ago. Playing in the Tarheel state as team captain, he played an inspired game, pulling down three passes. Two weeks later, the Tarheel speedster caught three passes against Villanova, one for a game deciding touchdown.

Running from Tom Nugent's pet formation Holt, as a fullback, rarely gets an opportunity to carry the pigskin.

From the "T" formation, he functions as a blocking back. In Nugent's split "T" Joe operates as a flanker, racing downfield as a pass receiver or blocking on the running plays.

Holt and the other fullbacks sardonically term themselves "wing guards."

'Power And Prize' A Powerful Movie

BY ALAN KASS

A big sleeper called "The Power And The Prize" arrived at the Florida Theatre on Sunday. "Power And The Prize" is a powerful story of conflict in the world of big business. For some reason it is only playing three days. A slick production such as this certainly warrents more playing time.

Power And The Prize" is primarily about an American industrial tycoon who has picked a young executive to follow in his footsteps. The Exec is sent to London to execute a shady business deal, instead he falls in love with a shady woman The girl is cleared of all charges as the picture ends. At the conclusion, the older man tries to destroy the younger man, only to fall to forces of decency.

Robert Taylor, in cast perfectly as Cliff Barton; the hard driving executive. An attractive newcomer Elizabeth Muller, is costarred. Both do fine acting, except that Taylor seems a little too old for this part. Also in the cast are the folk singer Burl Ives and oldtimers Charles Coburn, Mary Astor and Sir Cedric Hardwicke.

This is Metro's first picture in black and white. Cinemascope and the picture's lenghth comes off quite well At first the shock of seeing a wide screen movie in black and white is hard to adjust to. The dialogue is pretty strong stuff, while the participants seem quite real. "The Power And The Prize" will not please everybody but it will certainly gather a following.

At the State Theatre, ending its week run, is "The Solid Gold Cadillac". This is also about big business except that here big business is played strictly for laughs. Not since Alec Guiness and his "Ladykillers" have there been such a lovable bunch of crooks as the-e top men in a stock department. The antics of the top five men in a wall street stock market set the stage for grade comedy from Judy Holiday.

Miss Holliday has ten shares of stock and as interested in the welfare of the company. This, as you know, is common practice with anybody having ten share of stock in a company. Judy, gets the goods from the crew, until she in the last reel finally heads the company. There are several great comedy sequences, and a fine narrative by George Burns. If you miss this one you will miss out on many laughs, solid gold laughs that is.

LOOKING AHEAD

Tomorrow, both theatres change pictures The Florida will bring in an action drama "Toward The Unknown" and the State will welcome "Guys And Dolls" to Tallahassee.

"Toward The Unknown" deals with a World War II pilot who must prove himself after some Red brainwashing. The rewards for his confidence come in the person of Virginia Leith.

"Guys And Dolls" will be taken up next time in this corner.

"Meet Me At The Mecca"

Turntable 1

By PATTI WISENER

Have you met Robert Clary? He's the most exciting young male vocalist to come out of France in a long time. Also the shortest—just 5'2".

He first made a name in America in the New York review "New Faces of '52" when he played the role of a schoolboy and sang so appealingly "I'm In Love With Miss Logan."

In his latest album at Baker's, Meet Robert Clary, he sings a miscellaneous collection of songs, from "Have You Met Miss Jones" to "If I Only Had a Brain." His style is a mixture of soft French and bubbling American.

Eartha Kitt also started her popularity climb in New Faces. It's been said that Eartha is so good with a French song, she's the only singer the French readily forgive for mispronouncing their language. As Rex Harrison says in My Fair Lady, "The French don't really care what they do, as long as they pronounce it correctly."

Our personal favorite French female vocalist is Miss Vicki Benet. In her Woman of Paris album she sings French and English ballads, many in both languages. A chorus of French, then one in English, make convincing claims that "It's So Nice to Have a Man Around the House."

Whether or not you understand French, you'll like Vicki Benet, and the other albums of French music, all at Baker's.

Not Enough Parking Places, Says Campus Traffic Group

A student-faculty traffic committee met for the first time this year Wednesday afternoon, their problem understated thus by a member: "There just aren't enough parking places for the cars."

Appointed to the Board were students Karl Edwards, chairman; Ray Hemann, Sandra Rowenberg, Mattox Hair, and Bob Porter, faculty members Dr. Merritt Oelke, Dr. Elda M. Devviney, and Dr. Robert Briggs; assistant business manager Dr. Harry Dey and Dr. James Carr, associate dean of men.

President Donk B. Campbell, who made the appointments last Tuesday, said, "A similar committee rendered most excellent service during the previous school year in improving traffic conditions on the campus."

He added, "the problem is of such nature that it will need the attention of a continuing committee through the rest of the year. It seemed to be very satisfactory last year for a student to be chairman of this committee. I am, therefore, asking Edwards to serve in that capacity again."

Edwards said the committee "might be confronted very soon with the necessity of revoking the freshman car privileges" and added that by being made of parents of freshmen whether they approve or feel the ban unfair.

The committee was told the freshman car restriction was recommended by it last year to the president. He, in turn, handed it on to the Board of Control, as a boost to scholarship as well as a partial solution to the parking problem.

The committee took no action but discussed possible plans for alleviating the shortage of parking places to cars on campus ratio.

DISCUSS SOLUTIONS

Among those brought up for later consideration were allowing freshman cars but keeping them off the main campus, and limiting crowded-area parking to faculty, seniors, and graduate students.

Committee members said violations and evasions of the blue-black sticker system are a serious problem which might be met with more full-time and student police and a more stringent system of registration.

Students False FeeStatements Said Cheating

Thousands of dollars are being deprived the state by students falsely declaring Florida citizenship, a University spokesman said yesterday.

The spokesman, who said he wishes to remain anonymous, said the false declarations are made to avoid payment of the University's out-of-state tuition fees.

Charles H. Walker, registrar, declared yesterday that a general investigation has been started to uncover these cases.

According to Board of Control regulations, parents of single students must have established legal residence in this state at least twelve months immediately prior to admission of the student. No single student may establish legal residence in this state while he is a student.

Under the Honor System, out-of-state students who are not paying proper tuition and who are guilty of deception, it would be turned over to the Honor Court for disciplinary recommendation.

Except in cases where out-of-state tuition has been waived by the board of control, all non-Florida students are required to pay out of state tuition, Walker said. Tuition may be waived in some cases in the following categories: graduate students, graduate assistants, graduate fellows, graduate assistants in research assistants, athletic scholarships, insurance and hardship cases.

Registration to vote in the state of Florida does not, of itself, constitute proof of residence for registration purposes, Walker said. Students in doubt as to their correct status can inquire at the Registrars Office.

'SIGS' RHUBARB SHAPING UP

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

A controversy is shaping before the Board of Student Publications whether Smoke Signals, humor magazine, is an adequate and acceptable medium for campus literary talent.

Briefs were submitted yesterday to a special committee of the Board in which a group seeking to publish a literary magazine attacked Smoke Signals and in which the magazine editor contradicted their argument.

Spokesmen for the literary magazine, which they would call "En garde," are David Ward-Steinman, Arlene Rae, Margaret McLean, Dick Park, and Brent Benstock, the latter a faculty member. Arguing in favor of Smoke Signals' adequacy as a literary outlet is Marion Truzzi, humor magazine editor.

The literary magazine faction is seeking an appropriation from the Board of Publications, while the staff of the magazine fears its present appropriation may be cut.

Both briefs will be presented by the committee to the Board at its meeting Thursday.

PRESTIGE CITED

Ward-Steinman, in the "En garde" argument, said "there is no 'prestige' outlet on campus for serious or literary endeavors. The only medium available is the so-called 'literary' issue of Smoke Signals, which is, at best, a catch all.

"In support of this contention we append last year's literary issue. Note that only ten pages out of thirty-two are devoted to literature, less than a third of content."

"There is much literary material on campus of sufficient caliber to be included in an independent, mature serious literary magazine," Ward-Steinman said, alleging that 36 pages of material "that would otherwise be available to Smoke Signals" has been submitted to the "Engarde" faction without request.

"A campus of this size should have a quality magazine capable of competing successfully on a national level with other similar university publications," the "En garde" group declared.

OPEN TO ALL

They said En Garde would be open to faculty and staff as well as student talent. Last year's winning short story, they charged, was written by a faculty wife who "did not want her real name associated with Smoke Signals."

The "Engarde" advocates said many persons don't think a humor magazine is the proper place for serious material.

They said "En Garde" would be run on a "workshop basis," with contributors helping to decide make up, policy, and content.

Truzzi, in a brief filed at the same time, argued:

1. Most universities have a combined humor-literary publication.

2. "Editorial objectives" are the same.

3. Members of the "En Garde" group are willing, he said, to contribute to Smoke Signals.

'SUPERIOR' ISSUE

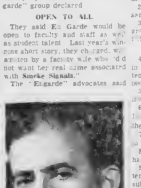
4. The Literary Issue is already in progress and appears to be potentially far superior to any past issue.

5. Smoke Signals has an "reasonably organized and qualified" staff.

6. The Smoke Signals Literary Issue "has reach acceptance" by the student.

7. Smoke Signals has no difficulty in securing advertising.

8. The magazine's literary issue has won "national recognition."



9. Lack of extensive literary contributions is due to a lack of submitted manuscripts.

10. Smoke Signals will print "all types of material" according to Truzzi and their student interest" in each issue Truzzi maintained.

AROSE LAST SPRING

The demand for a literary magazine was first voiced last spring by Ward-Steinman, Park, Benstock, Miss Rae and Miss McLean. The question was dropped when Smoke Signals agreed to turn over one edition to the "En Garde" group. Earlier Bill Truzzi defended the semi-annual satirical weekend issue, less adult literary fare.

Dr. Elda M. Devvinney, chairman of the committee, said she would not wish her real name associated with Smoke Signals."

Open Stadium Access Road For Everyone, Not Boosters

For years students and visitors waited patiently to park their cars at Campbell Stadium for football games. That is, they waited years for a decent approach road to be constructed.

Then a broad, two lane road was added to the system of three narrow, congested entrances and football fans began to anticipate an easier time of it.

It seems that no one likes to walk to Campbell Stadium, particularly in rainy, cold weather, when the nearby fields dissolve into mud.

But dreams of a decent traffic system vanished. The brand new highway running from the new Dem School to the northwest edge of the parking lot was set aside for limited use.

The Boosters' Club gets that road, which was built by the State Road Department, presumably with public funds.

So, while traffic piles up as much as a mile from the stadium, on Woodward clear over to Tennessee Street, the Boosters drive leisurely through their wide road and park without difficulty.

Now it must be admitted that the Boosters do a lot for the football team and should get something in return. But enough is enough, and closing that beautiful road to the mass of ordinary folk is more than enough.

We don't see why everyone couldn't use that broad road to get to the game, with the university still saving part of the parking lot for the Boosters.

67-Senator Plan Repudiation Shows Voters Want Fairness

Florida's two-to-one repudiation of the asinine 67-Senator plan shows just what its citizens think of such attempts to throttle fair representation.

If the plan had been approved by the voters, then Florida's government would have from then on been responsive to the voices of a few small counties. Since all legislation must pass through the Senate, even if passed by the House, a tiny band of power-holding small county Senators would have been able to block anything the state government tried to do — including changing the 67-Senator set-up.

The voters' refusal to accept such an anti-democratic proposal also disrobes the excuses of the few small county senators, who now form the majority block in that chamber, that their over-representation is to the best interests of Florida. It is now evident that, were these senators to allow the people a chance to speak, the senators would not long hold the high cards they now possess.

They are no longer able to hide the fact that their refusal to allow a fair reapportionment of the House and Senate is merely the last-ditch effort of a group of small-minded men who are more anxious to preserve their own special interest than serve the welfare of the state in which they live.

Dad's Day Program Worthwhile

When more than 200 fathers of Florida State University students visit the campus tomorrow, they will find a Dads' Day program expanded over what it has been in the past.

This year's committee has tried to add various activities to the day in addition to the usual football game. Events planned include a picnic at the reservation tomorrow at noon (students with tickets can go parents or no) and a variety show at 8 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

Parents of students are one of the few groups in the state who have a genuine right to come to this campus. When any large group convenes here the equilibrium is upset to some extent, but it is to the students' advantage for their parents to be more familiar with the workings of this institution of higher education.

The efforts of those working on Dads' Day to make it more comprehensive will help the parents to understand the spirit and character of FSU. A university must be 'aloof' to the degree of preserving its integrity, but friendly enough to be familiar.

We cannot in good conscience condone all the congregations of various organizations on this campus. But we do believe Dads' Day should have the support and approval it deserves.

Exams Upset Students' 'Bibleritis'

By OSCAR JOHNSON

IT'S THAT time of year again, and the students know it.

Books in hand, you see them trudging solemnly toward secluded places of study. For mid-terms are here. All week long it's the same story — read. And when the weekend comes, red-eyed begrimed students peer slowly about and mutter, "It's over for two more days."

The problem is a serious one. It deserves even the attention of student government. A committee is needed to study how to get the weekends closer together.

Not all students are, of course, irked by such normally foregone activities.

HOWEVER, THE MAJORITY, seemingly, of students have an unreceptive attitude toward these things called tests. The tongue-in-cheek Dick Bibler (author of Little Man on Campus ... etc. in this paper Tuesday) pictured the reaction of such students in portraying an instructor dodging rocks being thrown through his window while his startled wife bemoans the fact he had turned in mid-term grades so soon.

We cannot say whether Bibler's little man exemplifies the college student of today, but our observation has tended to confirm this suspicion. To Bibler, the college student is a man who stumbles about his daily campus life, shunning all forms of scholarship as evil per se, hating alarm clocks with destructive passion, stymied at every turn by a complex mass or university rules and regulations, thwarted by demonical instructors, and possessing a completely wild, reckless and carefree attitude.

CAUSE OF IT ALL
Dick Bibler

IT TAKES, according to Bibler's notion, quite a while to cultivate this outlook. It does not come naturally. The Freshman arrives expecting the worst, finds eventually that en masse, he can effectively sink lower and lower into a malaise of drifting Biblerism. That is, the authorities who are supposed to keep him studios are unable to keep him perpetually bridled.

So it is that as the students gradually go through this process, those who have been here longest are most affected by the mid-term outbreak. They are further along the line toward complete subjection to Bibleritis.

Through it all there is little they can do but mutter and groan: the books must be dusted off. There is only one comforting thought — things could get worse. This could be final exam week.

"How Long Have You Been Having This Nightmare?"

Carding The Call

Pens 'Ode To Ike'

By ARNOLD GREENFIELD

I write this immersed in a miasma of gloom. Perhaps therefore I may be excused for the exposition of a few modest proposals which float through my woeful conscience.

As I write, the returns come in faster and faster, completing the Eisenhower deluge. This fact plus the world situation and some personal headaches accounts for some cheerful thoughts indeed.

Now that Ike is assured of a lifetime tenure in the White House, I feel that it is only appropriate that an ode be composed in his honor. Perhaps a fitting title might be borrowed from D. W. Griffith's old picture — you guessed it — "Death of a Nation." I think of Dickie in the driver's seat and think of Orwell's 1984 and its sequel The Reign of Little Brother.

I think of the Cabinet during the next administration, composed of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner, and Beane. And next I think of the Atomic Energy Commission: Batten, Barton, Durstin, and Osborn. I think of the probable new U. S. Secretary of State, former Cabinet members Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby—author of that best selling humorous novel Is There A Polio Problem?: these thoughts are enough to turn my attention from the Washington scene.

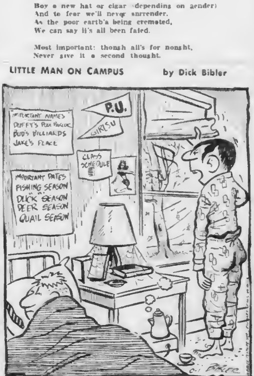
I NOW BEGIN TO concentrate on the rosy world situation —this is even cuter than the domestic picture. Thousands of Hungarians slaughtered by Russia while Bulganin & Co. know we dare not do anything about it even if we wanted to or cared. Our staunchest allies oppose us in the U. N. and justify the Soviet by their belligerant aggression. Each situation is a tinderbox which might plunge our little oblate spheroid into the comforting warmth of a hydrogen bath.

Despite these factors our "leaders" tell us that everything is swell, U.S. prestige is at its all time high, and "everything is booming but the guns." Things are reminiscent of the good year 1930 when America's then foremost economist analyzed the scene and concluded that the depression was all over and business was ready for a rapid upturn.

AT ANY RATE, I am going to begin taking camel riding lessons and am becoming increasingly pious as a precaution. Quite seriously, the pressing concerns of the world's peoples shrink our every day busywork to even smaller importance than usual. The bottomless potential tragedy makes me want to do less fluttering about and more thinking.

Each morning we drag ourselves out of bed facing another hectic day. Then we proceed to drive ourselves into an ulcerous frenzy trying to do sixteen things at once, and always worried about "what people will think" of course. We seldom pause to take note of the rather solemn facts of life—or of the stark insignificance of our dawn to midnight routine.

A CHARMING WAY to prepare children for life in the carefree modern world would be to give them a construction toy designed to prepare them for life's future experiences. With this special type erector set the child would gradually get oriented to modern society, because any way he put it together it would come out wrong.



And oh yes I almost forgot about the ode—

Hydrogen bomb got you feeling blue?
Here then is the "thing to do."
Tear off a boxtop while you're able,
That will make the world stable.

Buy a new hat or cigar (depending on gender)
And to fear we'll never surrender.
As the poor earth's being cremated,
We can say it's all been fated.

Most important: though all's for nought,
Never give it a second thought.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

Symphony 'Sawed' At Performance

TO THE EDITOR:

That old phrase, "sawing on a violin" was applicable to the attempted performance by the University Symphony last Monday night in Westcott Auditorium.

An audience of some 400 persons listened in vain to hear one true tone from a violin section that constantly sounded as though it were playing for the catfish in the Mississippi River—under water, at that.

Most noticeable in Tschaikowsky's piano Concert No. 1 in B-flat Minor was Mr James Stafford's inability to execute an accurate arpeggio in the upper octaves. One found oneself counting Mr Stafford's mistakes which in no wise served to enhance the beauty of what was presumed to be a composition of Tschaikowsky.

Miss Audrey Blomgren, who attempted to render the violin solo of the Mendelssohn concerto, was laboring under a very great handicap—that of not being able to play the violin. In this, she succeeded very little better than did the instruments accompanying her.

Brahms piano Concerto No. 1 in D Minor was barely saved from total ruination by Mr. Ryan Edwards, brilliant playing. For the first time during the evening, an appreciative audience heard something akin to music. It is to be predicted that Mr. Edwards, provided he is given some semblance of support by future orchestras, will add something beneficial to the field of classical music.

It is to be hoped that University Symphony will have had repeated practice sessions before it ruins a good Sibelius symphony twice in succession, as it plays Symphony No. 1 again tonight at the Sibelius-Downes Commemorative Concert in Opperman Music Hall.

To overcome its difficulties, University Symphony is indeed fortunate to have Dr Robert Sedore as its conductor. Dr. Sedore is to be commended for having the instruments finish together at the close of each composition. Allowances are certainly to be made for the youth of the performers. Youth must learn—we hope they learn before another performance.

However, one good thing can be said for Tuesday's concert. The symphony boasts an excellent kettle drum.

'Did I Do Wrong?': Coe[d]

By JIM SOLES

An RPI co-ed wrote to a teenage counseling column thus: "I am only 19 years old, and I stayed out until two o'clock the other night. My mother objects. Did I do wrong?"

Her letter was answered thusly: "Try to remember"

Along similar line of thought there was an incident at Wake Forest last week. In a criminology class the professor was discussing the restrictions placed on a criminal. He said that some prisoners are allowed to go to their homes for short visits if it is absolutely necessary.

"What happens of they don't report back to the prison at the appointed time?" one student inquired.

"They're campused," a bitter co-ed volunteered.

After their trip here recently for the very wet FSU-Wake Forest game, one of the Wake Forest cheerleaders was overheard to remark that her uniform was no longer Old Gold and Black", but is now "Old Mould and Black".

• • •

Other schools have problems too. At Syracuse University officials opposed to the Bermuda short craze that has swept the ivy league college are really on the ball. They have been making militant inspections at periodic intervals, even of girls with top-coats on: the campus bare-knee movement seems to be losing out.

• • •

Elvis (ugh) Presley has been gathering his share of space in college newspapers too. The Daily Tar Heel at the University of North Carolina reports that he has been admitted to membership in the university's Philanthropic Literary Society. And the Michigan State News comments that most Texans have four Cadillacs—one for each direction. "Elvis the Pelvis" Presley has six—still one for each direction.

• • •

And in Hungary, where "the dead and dying were about everywhere", university and high school students comprised a large portion of the rebel army attempting the overthrow of the communist government. On the spot reporters have a 19 year old college co-ed in charge of the rebel troops in one area, in another a 12 year old boy manning a machine gun. Despite desperate pleas for aid from western powers the last message from the rebels at the battle of Pecs road "We have neither guns nor ammunition left. . . Blood alone is not enough." The "Freedom Radio", voice of rebel troops went silent Tuesday. But it was a reverent and honorable silence not to be compared with the silence that their desperate pleas met from "the freedom loving countries of the West".

Calling The Card

Harry For FSU Prexy

By JIM McINTYRE

It seems to be the vogue these days to attempt to choose a president. The nation chose one last Tuesday, the boys to the south of us chose one last year, and now it seems the Board of Control will be picking someone in the not-too distant future to guide the destinies of these hallowed halls, gothic spires, etc.

It promises to be an exciting event, what with the AA emerging as a powerful lobby, Dr. Campbell exerting no small amount of influence, and the usual unpredictability of the Board of Control.

There are those who would prefer elevating someone from the present administration to the post. Others favor a nationally known educator. The Executive Secretary of this same board seems to be very much in the running at the moment. But the fact is, the Board could offer the post to one particular figure and make the destiny of FSU. That man is Harry S. Truman.

JUST IMAGINE, if you will, the University under the rule of the ex-president and ex-haberdasher from Independence.

Westcott now takes on the atmosphere of Tammany Hall with the new Dean of Students, Carmen DeSapio, running in and out, cigar in hand. The vice-president in charge of finance, Mr Averell Harriman, sits pondering the high cost of a football team. He is tempted to give it up and go back to work on the railroad, but sees hope yet for a championship low budget issued.

Dean Acheson, suave as ever, enjoys his post in the Public Relations office, Department of Regaining Friends Lost During the President's Good-will Tours.

THE RESERVATION has been changed in name to "The Deep Freeze" and has a new gate with bars trimmed in mink. Joe McCarthy scratches out a bare existence by taking care of the place. He has been known to get violent at times, but students have found that if they leave him alone and ignore him completely he soon becomes tranquil. There is some talk about adopting him as the official school mascot. Sort of like the West Point jackass.

The music school, however, is the place where the most drastic changes have occurred. Mr Truman has pensioned both Drs Kilenyi and Dohnanyi and has installed himself as the one and only sole teacher of piano. All the choral groups have been disbanded as it has been decided by popular demand to allow daughter Margaret to fill all their engagements with solo performances. The students are eagerly anticipating these appearances.

AND THE ATTITUDE of the students? They are understanding in their bitterness. They sort of think of Harry as being a landmark and an object of pitying protection. The alma mater is officially changed to the following, sung to the tune of (what else?) "The Missouri Waltz."

All around the Campus
Things have gone from bad to wuss,
Harry says "you must"
And if you don't, he starts to cuss,

He writes notes in a temper,
But tyrannus sic semper,
He's our Point Four Ward.

And the beauty of it all is, no coach will allow his team to win over FSU in an athletic contest. They're all afraid of receiving one of our prexy's "S. O. B. letters."

Let's hope the Board of Control acts wisely and judiciously.

The Dissenter

Everybody A Queen

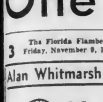
By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Americans like to boast of many things but of two in particular: in this country evolved the practice of holding a full-scale general election and surviving it, and we presumably originated the bathing beauty contest, since not even Russia will claim it.

Alas! Alas! America! Our elections are indeed incomprehensible but the idea of picking a beauty queen for every occasion is centuries old.

It all began with the ancient Greeks and Romans. To be sure, they did not suit their young women in scanty attire, parade them about for best effect, and then choose a winner. But our tradition descends from theirs.

They were fun-loving people, in a time when religion was simpler than it is now. Rather than creating a single god and then apportioning him three ways, they created separate deities. There was a god and or goddess for everything: the hunt, drink, athletics, sunshine, moonlight, and you-can-guess-what-else. And each of these gods had to have a ceremony—here was undoubtedly their real purpose.



THEY HAD TO have a god to hold a shindig. The only thing different about our society is that we feel we have to have a god or goddess if we throw a party. In addition, we consecrate our industries, our schools, and our professions by electing a queen for each of them, and threaten to outdo the Greeks and Romans in this respect.

Each city has its Miss Podunk and each state has its Miss so-and-so. The opticians elect some girl who looks good in spectacles. Coeds from Florida State University—all of them charming and eligible girls—have been honored with such titles

One Good Performance Deserves Another

Kennedy Has Woes?

Seminole basketball coach Bud Kennedy has a problem. In fact, he has quite a few problems these days as he prepares his cagers for their December 1 opener against Duquesne University at Pittsburgh.

One of the largest of his problems is in a way a blessing which we imagine more than one basketball coach in the nation would like to be so unfortunate as to have.

Right now, Kennedy has 22 men trying for the five starting berths and 10 traveling spots on his team. This is a lot of basketball players but Bud has to find among them the 10 best for his traveling team, and it represents no small task.

"This is frankly the first time in the nine years I've been coaching that I have no idea at all as to who will be on my starting five," Kennedy admits.

"It's difficult, maybe even possible to find replacements for some of the boys we lost such as Jimmy Oler, Jack Artmeier and Gary Wold," Bud adds thoughtfully.

"We've got a bit more balance this year and probably a little added height on the first team, though I still have no idea who that first team is going to be."

The veteran Seminole mentor, who has produced teams with 22-4 and 16-9 records in the last two years, has considerable praise for two newcomers to the Florida State basketball camp, Merrill Bryant and Larry Strom.

Strom, a 6-6 center, comes from Jacksonville Junior College, the second man to be picked up by Kennedy from the Dolphins in the past two years. The first was Sid Gregory, a returning letterman this year.

"Strom seems to be fitting into the picture very well, and appears to be a good prospect for one of the inside spots in our double post setup," Kennedy says.

The other newcomer drawing praise is Merrill Bryant, a 5-11 graduate of Itawamba (Miss.) Jr. College Bryant may turn out to be a threat to several lettermen for a starting guard spot.

BEAT FURMAN OR BUST!

The Seminole football team took a beating last weekend in Miami—from 33 Hurricane gridders—and from the Miami newspapermen.

No matter what they do or who they beat from here until the close of the season (and they may not beat anybody they can't make up for that horrendous first half when they picked up a paltry 33 yards to the Hurricanes' 248.

It suffices to say here that we picked them to win because we honestly thought they were good enough to beat Miami.

This has unfortunately been a "should have" team most of the season. They "should have" beaten Georgia, but should have" beaten Wake Forest and in one person's opinion at least they "should have" beaten Miami—they played a half decent game.

But they didn't.

Now comes the powerful (1-5) Furman Purple Hurricanes. After sputtering and stuttering and generally accomplishing nothing for four games. Furman rallied to the cause and stunned mighty Citadel 7-0.

Then they played an impossibly good game with South Carolina, holding the Gamecocks to a 13-6 victory after being scored on twice in the opening minutes of play.

Now, they will undoubtedly arrive here a two or three-touchdown underdog, and rightfully so. BUT, they could upset us with little trouble at all.

FSU has everything to lose and nothing to gain in this contest. Nobody will rake notice one way or another if we should trample Furman, but if they should beat us, the consequences are staggering.

It is literally "beat Furman or bust."

PRINZI OUT

Florida State's second team quarterback Vic Prinzi of Waverly, N.Y., was operated on yesterday for the removal of a ruptured spleen in his stomach.

Prinzi received the stomach injury Tuesday in practice, and after keeping him at the hospital for two days of observation, doctors elected to operate yesterday.

It is considered only a minor operation but this means that Prinzi will probably be out for the remainder of the year, that leaves Tribe coach Tam Nugent with three quarterbacks; Lee Corso, Ted Rodrigue and Len Swanie.

Nugent also indicated that regular right end Bob Nellums may not open against Furman tomorrow due to a shoulder injury.

Nellums, who is tied with Ron Schoenburger for the lead on the team in pass receiving, has been kept out of contact work all week due to the injury.

If Nellums is not able to start, Nugent said 187-pound Sophomore end Bob Fountain of Cheshire will likely get the starting nod.

Seminoles Host Furman In 2nd Dad's Day Battle

By FRANK RAMOS
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's Seminoles will be aiming for victory number four tomorrow afternoon when they entertain Furman's Purple Hurricane at Campbell Stadium in the second annual Dad's Day contest.

The Seminoles will go into the game a solid two touchdown favorite, but recent injuries may keep the Tribe from going at full speed.

Leo Baggett, a normal starting guard, will not see action nor will quarterback Vic Prinzi. Both sustained injuries in the Miami game last week.

Al Pavlico, a 205-pounder from Altoona, Pa., the other starting guard, will not be able to go at top speed for the Furman game either. The same is true of second string guard Bob Elliott.

Both Pavlicko and Elliott will see limited action. Bo Leonard, a 182-pound center from Ocala, is another doubtful Seminole player.

Taking over Baggett's position will be sophomore tackle Jerry Graham, a 205-pounder from Chicago. If Pavlico can't start, Joe Mettz, a sophomore from Raleigh, North Carolina who tips the scales at 191 pounds, will open at right guard.

Prinzi received the stomach injury Tuesday in practice, and after keeping him at the hospital for two days of observation, doctors elected to operate yesterday.

Last week the Purple Hurricane almost ran traditional foe South Carolina off the field, but lost a close one, 13-7. The Gamecocks scored two touchdowns and Furman held them in check the rest of the afternoon.

Leading the Purple Hurricane attack are halfback Jerry Penland and fullback Jimmy Grant. Grant, according to the Furman coaching staff, is a real hard hitting fullback and may really go places. He is only a junior.

Penland, a 173-pound halfback, leads Furman in rushing, picking up 185 yards in 72 carries for a healthy 5.1 average.

The Purple Hurricane employs three freshmen in their starting line-up. Walter Eaves a 203-pounder from Elberton, Georgia will start at end.

The backfield finds Billy Baker of Roseville, Georgia directing Furman's split T and belly series from quarterback. The third freshman in the starting line-up is right halfback James Jennings, a 172 pounder from Americus, Georgia.

Nugent believes the Seminoles are improving steadily and are looking better all the time. FSU's head mentor also believes that whichever team wins Saturday will have to push across three touchdowns.

Bob Nellums and Ron Schoenburger starting Seminole ends are tied in individual receiving with 12 apiece, but Nellums' 156 yards gives him a slight but surely catching up with them. Holt now has nine for a total of 81 yards and one touchdown.

HE'LL CAPTAIN TOMORROW. Senior halfback Buck Metts of Sanford flows the running form which is sure to cause Furman's Purple Hurricane plenty of headaches tomorrow. Metts has been named game captain for the Dad's Day meeting.

Rafael Lecuona, co-captain of last year's Florida State gymnastics team will be leaving for Australia and the Olympic games very shortly and will represent his native Cuba.

Two former Jacksonville Junior College graduates may turn out to be the stars of the Florida State's basketball team this year. They are Sid Gregory, a 6-5 Senior and Larry Strom, a 6-6 Junior.

Metts Captains Tribe In Tomorrow's Game

By RONNIE GOLD
Flambeau Sports Writer

Captaining the Florida State football team against Furman tomorrow afternoon will be Buck Metts, 20-year-old Senior halfback from Sanford, Florida.

Buck, a Physical Education major who plans to go into coaching upon graduation, decided to come to FSU after comparing Florida State and University of Florida.

A scholarship winner, Buck was named to the little all-State football squad while playing for Sanford High and also participated in the North-South high school all-star game.

Metts, who packs 176 pounds on a five foot nine inch frame, is spoken of very highly by football mentor Tom Nugent. "As an all around football player, Buck is as good as anyone we've ever had," declared Nugent.

"He's a good, sound defensive player, a fine blocker, a hard dangerous runner and is among the top three best pass receivers on the team. He does everything and handling half the punting duties," continued Nugent.

"He's a nice guy, and never gives me a bad time."

"He's a great competitor and we hate to lose him."

Buck doesn't compete in any other varsity sports, but he is active in the intramural program of his fraternity, ATO.

Buck considers the Citadel game last year when he scored three touchdowns the best game of his college career and thinks his best performance this year was in the VPI contest.

His greatest thrill came in his sophomore year against Stetson when he ran 78 yards for a touchdown with only four seconds remaining in the game.

The friendly, likeable Metts dislikes "cats hunting and "all sports" as his favorite hobbies. Steak, french fried potatoes and iced tea are tops on his favorite foods list.

ATO Vs. SAE In Fraternity Net Doubles Finale Monday

It will be ATO vs. SAE in the fraternity tennis doubles winners' bracket finals next Monday. ATO beat SAE SN, 6-2,6-3. Colin Phipps and Fred Singleton of SAE won a tight 6-4, 7-5 victory over Bob Sistrunk and Fletcher Eyster of PDT.

In the losers' bracket Bill Lewis and Dick Pococco of DTD eliminated Bob Stubbs and Dave Ryen of SAE, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3. TEP, with Mort Larner and Don Schwartz, upset Dean Donnelly and Bill Pool of SC, 7-5, 6-3.

In the first singles Jack Curties of Theta Chi won his way into the winners' finals by beating John Armel of LCA, 7-5, 6-3.

In the losers' bracket Pat Ivey of SAE eliminated Tom Babjak, SPE, 8-0, 6-6. SC eliminated SN when Buck Bryan beat Tom Rogers 6-1, 6-2.

In the singles, on Tuesday LCA meets the SAE-DTD winner, and SC meets the PDT-KA loser. Wednesday TC meets the PDT-KA winner.

In the dorm-independent division Marcial Lavina of the International Club defeated Joe Davis of the Penthouse 6-4, 8-0 to win his way to the tournament final in singles.

In the losers' bracket, Joe Cunic of the Feds beat Bill Lasso of Senior Hall, 6-1, 8-6 to eliminate him, after Lasso had beaten Donald Turner of Co-Op House by the same score 6-1, 6-3.

BASKETBALL

The hot game in the Fraternity basketball last Tuesday was the SAE-KA contest with SAE nosing out 66-64. Both teams had chances for double free-throws in the closing seconds but failed to make any of them good.

SAE led at the quarter 16-12, at the half 26-24 and at the 3rd quarter 36-35. Don Joyner was high man with 18 for SAE while Bill Payne and Bob Loftin got 12 each for the losers.

Two contests were runaway affairs with LCA swamping PKA 48-17, Frits Eigl of PKA still managed to score 14 of his teams 17 points. Bannan had 16 for LCA.

DTD defeated TEP, 69-16. All the DTD's got into the scoring. ATO got by SPE 32-22, but it was not until the last quarter that SPE slipped back to a 10-point deficit.

It was 18-12 at halftime and 23-17 at three quarters R. Manzi scored 14 points for the losers and Chuck Fielding had 12 for the winners.

Everybody Picked On J. Paul Sheedy* Till Wildroot Cream-Oil Gave Him Confidence

"What's this I hear a vulture breaking up with your girl?" asked Sheedy's roommate. "I don't know," wailed J. Paul, "She gave me Buck my diamond ring and told me to hawk it. What makes her cart-on so?" "Because your hair is mess," said his roomie. "If it looked as good as Wildroot Cream-Oil, it's true." So Sheedy went to the store and picked up a bottle. Now he's flying high with his sweetie again, because his hair looks handsome and healthy, the way Nature intended. Neat but not greasy. Wildroot contains Lanolin, Nature's finest hair and scalp conditioner. So don't use tacky rock nor taking chances with messy hair. Get a bottle or handy tube of Wildroot Cream-Oil the next time you're at the store. The girls at home be takes you what a hunk-hood you are!

LANGUAGE MADE SIMPLE: No. 1

In this day of swift international communications, like radio, television, and the raft, it becomes increasingly important for all of us to have a solid grounding in foreign languages. Accordingly, I have asked the makers of Philip Morris, just as full of natural goodness as the cigarettes they make, "Of course, fond boy, you may occasionally forego levity in this column and instead use it for a short lesson in language!" said the makers and tossed me up and down in a blanket until, rosy with laughing, I bade them de-ist, and then we all had basins of Swiss and smoked Philip Morrises and sang songs and the campfire had turned to embers.

For our first lesson in language, let us take up French, which has been called the lingua franca of France. We will approach French in a new manner, because, to be brutally frank, the way it is taught in our colleges is archaic and obsolete. Why all the emphasis on grammar? After all, when we get to France does it matter if we can parse and conjugate? Of course not!

So for the first exercise, translate the following real, true-to-life dialogue between two real, true-to-life Frenchmen named Claude (pronounced Clode) and Pierre (also pronounced Clode):

CLAUDE: Good morning, sir. Can you direct me to the nearest mork?

PIERRE: I have regret, but I am a stranger here myself.

CLAUDE: Is it that you come from the France?

PIERRE: You have right.

CLAUDE: I also. Come, let us mount the airplane and return ourselves to the France.

PIERRE: We must defend from smoking until the airplane raises itself.

CLAUDE: Ah, now it has raised itself. Will you have a Philippe Morris?

PIERRE: Mercy.

CLAUDE: In the garden of my aunt it makes warm in the summer and cold in the winter.

PIERRE: What a coincidence. In the garden of my aunt too!

CLAUDE: Ah, we are landing. Regard how the airplane descends itself.

PIERRE: What shall you do in the France?

CLAUDE: I shall make a promenade and see various sights of cultural and historical significance. What shall you do?

PIERRE: I think I shall try to pick up the stewardess.

CLAUDE: Long live the France!

SERVICES AREA OPEN TO SENATE: BACHMAN

Dave Backman, Student Body President, proposed three areas in which Student Senate can work this year in an address delivered to Senate Wednesday.

Backman told the Senate the fields of recreation, foreign student affairs, and student facilities and services were wide open and have been almost "untouched so far by student government.

Previously, he said, the senate has functioned in such areas as wages, women's rules, and traffic problems.

He pointed out that senate should extend its interest to all university organizations to serve as a representative of the student body. By doing this Senate could exert more force on the campus he said.

Citing as an example of what student government could do for recreation, Backman proposed the idea of an outdoor cooling area near the campus and the setting up of an office to handle a recreation program.

"In the field of foreign student affairs we could expand a great deal. At only our buddy system to the orientation of the kids in the country," he said.

"Last year we sent a representative from Florida State to a conference on foreign student affairs in Chicago.

"In the field of facilities and services, student government a work active but a lot more can be done," the president said.

REQUEST FOR BROADCAST

Public relations director proposed of the senate in Florida week. Valerie Alger directed by the Florida-TV Workshop has studied in a program to be broadcast on WCTV next semester, according to Backman.

He cited as senate-sponsored student services now functioning the student artist series, value, professors, at Ohio University, Bureau, and the buddy system. Also sponsored by student government is the building up of the honor system and sending delegates to the press convention in Cleveland.

Backman said he has hopes for the semester

NO CHANGE In Cut System —

(ACP) — No change will be made in the present cut system at Ohio University. After discussing proposed alterations, the Men's Union Governing Board has decided against an unlimited cut system for the school. The board against unlimited cutting at Ohio University is that the system is not on a plane with its custom in schools that offer such a system. Said Phillips, "We're not a highly selective university like they are and therefore the plan would not work."

Phillips said that individual the student artist series value, professors, at Ohio University, Bureau, and the buddy system. Also sponsored by student government is the building up of the honor system and sending delegates to the press convention in Cleveland.

He added that no action is to be permitted three cuts during ings from the classic period of the Hokokam Indians, about 1300 A.D.

The discovery has put archeologists in something of a quandary. They feel the find is definitely worth excavating, but they have to take into consideration the fact that a Negro women's dormitory is due to be started in the area next month. Present plans call for a road to be built right over the area. However, officials now say that they'll hold off construction of the road as long as possible, although the dormitory will go up as planned. They also say that most of that which is believed to be Indian burial ground will be under parking areas rather than the building. That means that future excavation will still be possible.

Group Named To Investigate Food Services

Morrison's Subject Of Senate Study

By CHARLET POITEVINT

A committee was appointed in Student Senate Wednesday to study Morrison's Food Service, operator of the Student Center, Seminole Club, West Hall Snack Bar, and Soda Shop.

Dick Crawford, senator who introduced the resolution, said many students have been concerned over the new Student Center policy of opening at 8 a.m. instead of 7.

"This inconvenience a great many students who live or have early classes in the student center area, who must go out of their way to eat breakfast," he said.

A second part of the resolution calls for a study of student employee wages. Students are paid 66 and two-thirds cents per hour, the same rate received last year when the university managed the eating establishments.

PAY NOT ENOUGH

The resolution states, however, the payment is not sufficient considering that the amount a paid for in meal tickets, not redeemable for currency.

Any other complaints called to the committee's attention will also be studied.

Secretary Rose introduced a resolution to Senate calling for further Senate study of methods to compensate junior counselors.

IDEA NOT NEW

Vice-President Close pointed out that the idea is not a new one. "We have never been able to propose a solution acceptable to the administration," she said.

Junior counselors duties are similar to those of the house fellows in men's dormitories who receive compensation for their services.

Senator Jim Moore moved that the committee on Labor, Student Services, and Education begin studying the Student Insurance contract which expires this year.

Absent from the meeting were Senators James Baird, Frank Falk, Alden Gilmore, Pat Mickler, and Charles Van.

Building Trimmed As Criticism Flies

By STAFF WRITER

The necessity of trimming five construction items from the proposed School of Education building at Florida State University to bring construction cost within appropriation has subjected architects to a fiery barrage from two state cabinet officials.

Secretary of State R. A. Gray and School Supt. Thomas D. Bailey declared it was time the architects were told to hold the line and keep their plans within the funds appropriated for buildings.

"I want to put them on notice that when they bring these kind of plans in I'm going to vote to turn them down and pay the architects nothing," Bailey said.

The architects should be told flatly not to draw plans we can't pay for," Gray added.

LEGISLATURE VOTES SUM

This is how the situation arose.

The 1955 Legislature appropriated one million dollars for the construction of the School of Education building. Architects went to work on drafts of the building.

But when the plans were presented for building construction companies found it impossible to meet the one million dollar cost limit. The lowest base bid was Jack Culpepper of Tallahassee was $1,048,000

In order to come under the appropriation, it was necessary to exercise five deductive alternates in the specifications. Ruscon Construction Co. of Jacksonville presented the low bid of $874,018.

URGENTLY NEEDED

Both Bailey and Gray agreed to accept the Ruscon bid after the deductions but said it was only because the new building was urgently needed by the University.

Gov. Leroy Collins said he was in agreement that architects should try to fit the plans to the money available.

THE QUESTION OF CO-EDUCATION

(ACP)—New York University is faced with the question of whether co-education is desirable. There seems to be at least a faction that the school not long a citadel for males . . . will start admitting female students

Experts who conducted a $250,000 study of the University's operations have urged co-education at the earliest possible date. In support of that they presented the following argument: "Co-education would make our students gentlemen. . . . Our students as a whole have been a bit boorish."

It would improve the social life of the campus.

On the other hand, opponents of the co-education move revealed that the committee that they call "the desired separation of the student from his own environment." They contend that the University's chief advantage is that it is not co-educational and that to change this situation would be to rule out this advantage. They also say that male students might lose detachment if the girls moved in.

'Guys And Dolls' Top Flight Reviewer Says

By ALAN KASS

It took nearly a year by "Guys And Dolls" finally came to Tallahassee. The Samuel Goldwyn MGM Cinemascope production is playing thru Wednesday at the State theater.

Based on the fictitious Broadway stories of Damon Runyon, this classy musical is top flight every respect. It has great music, comedy, dance numbers with vitality.

The plot revolves around the efforts of Nathan Detroit who has to set up the oldest establishment in mankind. Gaming right in the New York in order to outwit the visiting gamblers in the big city. Needing $1000 to start, Detroit promptly bets Sky Masterson he can't take a certain missionary doll to supper— in Havana, Cuba to make things interesting.

Since Sarah's mission, the Save-A-Soul Mission, can't find many sinners in New York's 8 million inhabitants, it will have to close. Masterson promises Miss Sarah a dozen genuine sinners in exchange for the dinner date. In Havana, they fall in love and are joined by Detroit and his lad-in-waiting of fourteen years. This puts a happy ending to a happy picture.

The largest surprise of the picture was serving Marlon Brando sing. It was almost an understatement. Brando has a low pleasant voice coupled with his charm, magnetic face and fine feminine appeal. Marlon as the Runyon gambler turns in only an adequate job. This was the first picture I've ever seen that Brando does not completely dominate the proceedings.

Frank Sinatra also fell below par, seemingly playing down the role. Joan Simmons was wonderful as the soul-saver. The person that stole the show from everyone was Vivian Blaine. It's little wonder since she played the same role for thirty-one months on the Broadway stage.

In the scenes where the bitsome bookies roam around you get some of the flavor of typical shady New York characters. Incidentally, it's well worth reading the humourous book if you want more information from the loving crew. Nicely-Nicely, Big Jule, Benny Southstreet, Harry the Horse and Society Max were all taken from the original cast.

The score, written by Frank Loesser, is about the same, with the addition of three new songs, as the original show. The standout song was clearly "A Woman In Love". This tune however, was omitted from the show. Other notable songs are "I'll Never Know" Sit Down You're Rockin' and Simmons sing Vivian Blaine and the Goldwyn girls contribute "Take Back Your Mink" and "Pet Me Pappa".

The picture has some slow minutes in its three hours and twenty eight minutes but they don't hurt. This reviewer's advice to people who have already seen "Guys And Dolls" is simply, see it again. "Guys And Dolls" is big time entertainment, that has all the merriment to make it a superior movie musical.

Turntable 2

By ROSS JAMISON

"Merry, merry, merry, time to prepare for the semester exams." So cries Irvine Feldman as he drops his Frank Sinatra album In The Wee Small Hours, on the turntable.

Take an orphaned street about 4:00 in the A.M., a couple of out of newspapers blowing about a melancholy mood, a good rhythm singer Frank, agitate a minute beat, and you come up with a real fine album.

The album jacket shows Sinatra in an empty, dimly lit room, the loosened, short open, casual clothed jacket, and looking as if the stray dog that he just gave a scrap of food to bit bitten him. There are many fine rhythmic down and out, Cloud Nine type songs on this album. The most notable of these is "In The Wee Small Hours."

Baker's has many fine albums by "The Voice," but for studying or gathering moonbeam, Feldman says that this is the most. Irv claims that this is one album that he can listen to while hitting the books, and not lose his train of thought. "Even," Irv says, "if I don't think it would be any great loss, the darn thing was never on time, anyway."

Unify Your Accessories For Effective Costuming

by MARGARET McLEAN

Fashion term "accessories" is to those articles of that are either worn or bed exclusive of the essential ment.

ual accessories are; hats, shoes, purses, belts, and ides of adornment, i.e., jewelscarves, flowers, furs, etc. obvious fact that accessories gerative and apart from the ual garment is to be completely ignored. Accessories to be regarded as the unifyfactor for successful appear- Accessories also lend va- accent, interest, and Accessory selection is not be taken lightly because accessories can literally "make or the effect of a costume.

AGREE IN TYPE

ct as the subject and predi- of a sentence must agree in and number, so must a ct agree in type and color accessories. The rule of ory selected accessories is a one, in other words, it doesn't go over. In the following paragraphs I shall deal the separate components ms up the collective term ensemble".

The most important accessory item is the shoe because can hardly avoid wearing on. For class-room wear and ternoon attire, low ded shoes are worn. Loafers, ble-shoe, sneakers, sheltie, sandals will also do duty.

oders and saddle-shoes can worn only with very tailored ses and this means a tailor-shirt-blouse or sweater and ght tailored skirt. Neither are appropriate with unsuitabilities, dressy fabrics, full ns or dresses. They are designed for tailored, active wear. Ivy League cotton skirts are straight are the only real ption to this wool skirt rule. ters look best with Ivy ue skirts and Bermuda

HEELS FOR PARTIES

ccasional or week-end dates, ons, teas, receptions, dances, any occasion for which room type clothes are not ropriate. The three-inch heel is a regular favorite in for the less awkward more comfortable heel ty. The means also that tall gal can wear heels more

The really tiny girl is the one for whom the "spike" ieved shoe is intended; she ends all the extra height she can get in order to compete with our tall generation. When he problem of a toe-shortening-heels exists, unless then the only solution is rsize shoe. Wear low heels that look a little more special than loafers.

Fancy or extreme shoes are best for more formal occasions.

Tailored pumps are best the majority of the time and more practical all the time because they can be worn with a greater amount of the clothes in one's wardrobe. Here's another hot tip—white shoes and spectators are for summer only.

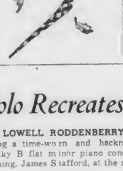
PLAIN BELTS BEST

Belts are best when plain, the same color as the garment, and when not over two inches in width. The very wide novelty belt is a thing of the past. Belts are worn with just about everything but very fitted or no-waist clothes. A belt is always worn with a skirt when the waist line is visible and a belted-in sweater is very smart.

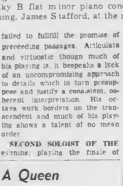
Shoes, belt, and purse usually are color matched. Evening wear is the exception here. The purse can be smaller than usual, fancy in color (silver or gold, etc.), and highly decorated but still matching the shoes in some way, and the belt can be fancier too. The best rule is to match the shoes and purse and contrast the belt (contrasted to the shoes and purse not the garment-more ideally).

JOURNALISM AT THE HIGH SCHOOL LEVEL

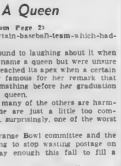
"ACP", an assistant professor at the State University of Iowa (and a major recently that Journalism should have a place in the teaching of English at the high school level. That's the opinion of Lester G. Benz. He said that many educators are opposed to the teaching of Journalism in high schools as a result of many impressions and because they consider journalism only a vocational subject.



"Despite the attitude of these educators," said Benz, "it should be the function of the high school to develop the art of reading a newspaper. Many people with high school educations cannot competently read today's newspaper."



Benz then went on to show what is the main advantage of journalism in relation to the study of English. He said that journalism does meet the basic aims of English and that it also provides incentive for students to write.



To support this stand, Benz offered results of a teaching survey conducted by a large high school. "This survey," he said, "definitely proved that average students who took journalism in high school had less trouble with English than good students who did not. Ground." In conclusion, Benz said "Journalism has something for every student, as it teaches responsibility, cooperation, tolerance and valuable experience in everyday living."

Stafford's Solo Recreates Old Work

By LOWELL RODDENBERRY

The problem of recreating a time-worn and hackneyed work like the first movement of the Tschaikowsky B flat minor piano concerto was admirably solved the first soloist of the evening, James S Stafford, at the recent University Symphony formance.

The form of the movement a ver- diffuse obviously section- and the best moment in work, surprisingly is the ena which assumes an im- first part in the architecture. Mr. Stafford took many lust- like liberties which served to ntially his concept. His feal- to certain details, how- ten an incoherent element the interpretation. This was ularly evinced in the ca- in which, disappointingly, failed to fulfill the promise of preceding passages. Articulate and virtuotic though much of his playing is, it frequently lack of an uncompromising approach to details which in turn prompsense and hastily a consistent, coherent interpretation. His octava work borders on the crasaccident and much of his playing shows a talent of no mean order.

SECOND SOLOIST OF THE EVENING

Ivins, playing the finale of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto, was Audrey Blomgren, concertmistress of the orchestra. Her ensemble was for the most part impeccable and much of the playing exhibited a delightful Mozartean finesse.

Particularly grateful to this reviewer was her tone inflection, which is all too rare in student violinists. If certain passages failed to project, then the fault can be attributed not only to the fact that the violinist is a female, but to the handicap of an instrument other than the Omnes. Miss Blomgren is a musical education major, and were all music education majors of her calibre, then the future of public school music would indeed be in most competent hands.

Ryan Edwards, as the third and last student performer of the evening, appeared in the rondo movement of the Brahms D minor concerto. The formidable task of merely beginning this particular finale constitutes a major problem in that the pianist must establish a rapport with the audience with no introductory preparation

THIS OBSTACLE was negotiated with a relaxed aplomb that prevailed all of pianist Edwards' playing The easiness of his talent is a musical maturity that belies his age. Restraint, synonomous with musical maturity in this sense, is a hardwon virtue in any case, and Brahms, of all composers, is laden with lush pitfalls that invite the young musician into becoming a gratuitous pianist.

The piano sound was not at all times pleasing, and the treble had a tendency to overbalance the bass Mediocre instruments cause bad tone primarily and most reviews have stressed that the concert grands in Westcott were delegated. Mr. Edwards, despite several problems, gave a fine musical and technical performance

THE UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY, conducted by Robert Cundiff, is in many ways the best orchestra ever assembled in the history of the school. At least in this reviewer's four year sequestuated Purdue. Particularly were the woodwind and brass sections, and in specific, the French horns. The opening bars of the Tschaikowsky were worthy of some professional orchestras we've heard. The cross rhythms in the Sibelius First Symphony which closed the program.

The Sibelius, incidentally, will be performed today in Organ Music Hall for the Olin Downes dedication concerts. Space, unfortunately, doesn't permit other than a cursory mention of the symphony and it will be reviewed later.

It is a reviewer's chore to criticize and praise. The vindication of Tony Swain, first clarinetist, is in order. Swain made a correct choice for the concluding bars of the Sibelius Symphony which sounded like an obvious faux pas. Suffice it to say, it wasn't.

Campus To Dance All This Weekend

By MICKEY COLE

The campus is dancing 'till it can't stop this weekend. There are two big dormitory dances scheduled, an informal at the Student Center and numerous dance parties at the social fraternity and sorority houses on the social calendar for this week-end.

Reynolds Hall's annual "Harvest Moon Formal" is tonight beginning at 9 o'clock. The recreation room will be decorated in fall colors with the center of interest on the bandstand and the Queen's throne. A new Queen will be selected by the dorm residnts and crowned by the dorm president.

"The Enchanted Everglades" is the theme for Landis Hall's annual Formal.Blue lighting will edd an erie and swampy atmosphere to the recreation room. Spanish moss, vines and tropical flowers will complete the rest of the effect. There'll be music, of course, plenty of entertainment and refreshments.

Immediately following a Buffet Supper in the trophy room, the Vet's Club will play host to the student body in the Student Center. The Vets, who are sitting in a block for the big game, are paying special tribute to the Dads visiting on campus. The orchestra will play some of the danceable tunes of a couple of years ago for the Dads and the older students. There'll be bop for the moderns, and it's all a free. Vet's Club's treat.

With these three dances, the ones at the sorority and fraternity houses, the Sophomore Hop last week and the Jr. Panhellenic dance next week, these dancing shoes aren't getting much chance to rest.

In the Greek column the Sigma Nus are doing their share to add a dancing note to the week-end. They're planning a Shipwreck Party tomorrow night. To give the house atmosphere they're draping fish nets, life preservers, palm fronds and all sorts of shipwreck material all around. Everyone will dress like he's been or just happened to be on a passing island and dropped in for the party.

Dads will be special guests this week-end at the Delta Gamma house. They'll be introduced to the campus at Open House after the game and special guests at dinner Sunday. The Dads will meet the new pledges and give their ideas about the Soap Box Derby which comes up this week-end. Delta Gamma is teaming up with Kappa Sigma for the big race.

During the week the Alpha Chi Omegas entertained Sigma Chi. Zeta Tau Alpha has been caught in the party whirl the past weeks with a desert party with the Pi Kappa Phi. a costume party with Sigma Nu and a "jail break" party with Phi Delta Theta. Tonight they'll be the guests at the Theta Chi house.

Costumes were a must for their party with the Phi Mus. Kappa Sigma learned. Sinister gangsters, dapper-kins, pirates, Indians, Daniel Boone, and a pledge-class of mountain climbers filled the house. The mountain climbers stole the show by coming roped together and entering the room singing "Alvarado" in close harmony.

The Sigma Chis were guests of Alpha Chi Omega Wednesday night and are planning an informal tomorrow night at the Tallahassee Country Club. Devilaires will provide the music.

Chest Drive Opens With Dances, Kisses, And Shows

KISSES SOLD AS CAMPUS CHEST PROJECT
Roy Randolph Gets One From Denise Johnson

Variety Show, 'Ugly Women' To Spotlight Future Events

The Marching Chiefs' half-time show tomorrow at the Furman game will be dedicated to promoting Campus Chest, officers of the annual fund-raising drive said yesterday.

Part of the half-time will be given to the Chest committee to explain goals and methods of the drive, which has set a goal of $5,000 this year.

Senior Hall's recent Harvest Hop and Village Vamps' candy kiss sale preceded the actual drive, according to Rush Shulman, publicity chairman.

The stops will be pulled tomorrow, Village Vamps will circulate in Campbell Stadium, collecting donations, Miss Schuman said. Alpha Phi Omega's "Ugly Woman" contest begins Tuesday. The Sigma Kappa Variety Show is set for Thursday night. Gymnastics will hold a Turkey Run Friday.

The Sigma Kappas, whose last year netted the largest sorority contribution, $250, said each fraternity and sorority that entered an act, Trophies will be awarded to the winning fraternity and sorority, according to June Silley, chairman.

The show will begin at 7 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium with admission at 25 cents. Cleire Green and Rod Willis will be masters of ceremony.

Officers of Gymnastics said each sorority, dormitory and fraternity may enter a team of one man and one woman in their "Turkey Run," a series of contests such as a wheel barrow race, leap frog and a "large turkey," but entry fee is three dollars. Time for the contest is 4 p.m., and it will be held on the field by the women's gymnasium.

A meeting of representatives from entering groups will be held Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in 208 men's gymnasium, Gymnastics said.

Future events for Campus Chest, Nancy Lee Young, general chairman announced, will include the Alpha Chi Omega pancake supper; North Cawthon spaghetti supper; Kappa Delta spaghetti supper; Zeta Tau Alpha cake walk; Kappa Alpha tell aside vs. Blockade on Copeland Street; Pi Delta Theta-Alpha Gamma Delta soap box derby; Alpha Omicron Pi sample part; Sigma Chi Derby; Pi Beta Phi softball game; Kappa Alpha Theta kite flying contest; Delta Zeta shoeshine, Gamma Phi Beta house cleaning, Chi Omegas car wash and Sophomore Council auction.

Forty per cent of Campus Chest goes to world university service, which benefits students overseas. The remainder is divided among domestic charities and non-profit funds.

Ted Rodrigue, the sparkplug of the Tribe's TD drive against the Hurricanes, and probable second team quarterback tomorrow has completed 16 passes in 36 attempts for 212 yards. He is second only to Lee Corso in completions and is only 14 yards off Corso's total.

'Ugly Woman' Photos Due Monday: APO

Pictures of entries in the Alpha Phi Omega "Ugly Woman" contest must be turned in by Monday at 5 p.m. according to president Sonny Sellers.

Sellers said three four by six-inch prints must be turned in at the APO box in the Langmire Building director's office. Any organization may sponsor an entry, he said.

Entry blanks, obtainable in the APO office in Langmire, must be turned in Monday with the photographs, Sellers said voting will be held November 14 through 22.

He said that organizations planning to sponsor "Ugly Woman" entries should take pictures showing the entries' most ghastly smile." A 14-inch trophy will be awarded the group sponsoring the winner. The winner will receive a key.

Florida Flambeau editor Oscar Johnson said that "before and after" photographs of the winner will be printed in a later edition.

Placement Interviews

Representatives from the following organizations will be on campus to interview seniors and graduate students for jobs, the office of vocational guidance and placement said:

Monday, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. to interview Phi Phi's and Masters in Chemistry, Biochemistry and Biophysics, as well as those receiving Bachelors degrees in June.

Tuesday, Miss Margaret Morrison, Delta Airlines, to interview girls for stewardess positions.

Thursday, J. A. Sharp, Jr., Crane Co. to interview Business majors and liberal arts students for sales positions.

Friday, F. Holder, Columbia Southern Chemical Corp., to interview students with bachelors, Master and PhD degrees in Chemistry, and with PhD's in physics.

Appointments may be made by calling 7-3281 or seeing Mrs. Hollister in 203 Westcott.

Student Artist Series Books Billy May Band

The Billy May orchestra will present two concerts on campus November 29 as the first event of the Student Artist Series, it was announced yesterday.

Joan Cunningham, undersecretary of student events, said the concerts by the popular dance band will begin at 7 and 9 p.m. in Westcott auditorium. The 29th is a Thursday.

She said the 15-piece band will feature two soloists and leader Billy May, who founded the orchestra, is now an executive of a recording company and chose Donahue to succeed him, she explained.

Admissions will be sold at 90 cents a person.

The Student Artist Series was established last spring to supplement the university Artist Series, considered an academic function. Founders of the Student Artist Series, whose first program will be the Billy May concert, said the purpose would be to bring more popular entertainment to the student body.

The judge's expression was not unkind as he leaned over the bench and addressed the money little man before him. "So you're a locksmith?" his honor mused. "And pray tell, what was the locksmith doing in a gambling dive when he was arrested?"

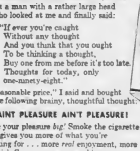
The prisoner, taking courage, grinned back. "He was making a belt for the door."

Next Play

'Sabrina Fair' Cast Selected: Dr. Davee

Members of the cast of Sabrina Fair, the next Speech Department production, have been chosen, announced Dr. Paul Davee, who will direct the play.

The cast includes Betty Caldwell as Sabrina and Jack Rockett as Linus; Mary Gail Baas, Maude; Ethel Gifford, Julia; Ron McCall, Lairabee; Faye Pierce, Margaret; Phil Johnson, David; June Silley, Gretchen; Ralph Nolen, Fairchild, Eli Ask, Paul; Reasie Ivey and Jack Terwilliger, young men, and Ann Drummond and Sally Pasman, young women.



The play will be presented in Conrad Theater on December 7, 8, 10, and 11. In charge of settings will be Charles Reimer, with Miss Patricia Clift in charge of costuming.

Written by Samuel Taylor, also author of "The Happy Time," Sabrina Fair's hit Broadway version of 1953 starred Margaret Sullivan and Joseph Cotten. Audrey Hepburn played the part of Sabrina in the later Hollywood version.

A CHANGE IS NEEDED

ACP.—Charles Thomas, who writes in the Richmond Professional Institute's Proscript, doesn't like some of the theme assignments given to freshman English students. He rebels against the idea of themes entitled HOW I SPENT MY SUMMER VACATION or AN INTERESTING PLACE I VISITED ON MY SUMMER VACATION or MY HAPPIEST DAY THIS SUMMER. Thomas has given the problem some thought and come up with some ideas. He suggests titles like HOW TO SPONGE OFF YOUR PARENTS FOR A SUMMER, HOW I RAMMED MY MOTORCYCLE THROUGH A POLICE ROADBLOCK —or, finally, THAT BIG ALL-NIGHT BEACH PARTY. I think you'll agree they'd produce some very interesting reading.

JULIE ANDREWS says:
"Verily, a Professor 'Iggins among magazines!"
Julie Andrews, twenty-one-year-old British girl, plays Eliza Doolittle in the sensational Broadway success "My Fair Lady"—a musical adaptation of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion."

Q. Miss Andrews, had you ever been away from your family before you arrived in this country two years ago?
A. Never, and I still become dreadfully homesick. But I do talk with them several times a week.
Q. By phone?
A. No—by phonograph. We talk into recording machines, and airmail the records. They are so clear I can even hear my brothers arguing in the background about whose turn is next. It is as if we were all in one room.
Q. You never exchange the usual kind of letter?
A. Very seldom. I'm afraid. But we pour back and forth bits of particular interest—like newspaper reviews, and favorite articles from The Reader's Digest.
Q. Just the Digest?
A. Oh, no, there are others sometimes—but the Digest is our magazine. Mummy and Daddy have always read it, and I began when I was twelve, playing music halls. I had to miss school, and my governess went through every issue with me on the run. It was part of my lessons.
Q. Do you still read it on the run?
A. Oh, yes—waiting for assignments, waiting for buses, even waiting for curtain cues. I hope I never have to be without it. When I wish to be amused, the Digest amuses me; and when I need to be scolded or instructed I can always find an article that talks to me like—
Q. Like a Dutch uncle?
A. No, much more delightfully—more like Professor 'Iggins in "My Fair Lady" showing a new world to Eliza Doolittle.

Mabry Heights Students Seek Community Council

Elimination Of Speeding First Objective Set

Residents of Mabry Heights are seeking the establishment of a Community Council for the 99 unit housing area open only to married students with children.

Don Russell, chairman of the committee seeking the council's establishment and one of the 10 nominees for its offices, said the number one objective would be to eliminate speeding on Mabry Heights.

Other nominees are Mrs. Sara Graybill, wife of a student, and Roy Wynn. Russell said.

The Council will consist of a president, secretary, treasurer, social commissioner, and publicity commissioner. Since only the persons were nominated for the Council, due to a "lack of interest," residents will only be able to indicate which of the nominees will hold what office, Russell noted.

Mabry Heights students and wives will have no escape during the general election December 4 and 4, however. Russell said. Ballots will be left at each of the 99 homes so that residents can mark them at leisure and deposit them at the department's central housing office.

They will be given a constitution to vote on at the same time, he added.

Each representative organization that were been elected in Mabry Heights, Russell said.

He said the university has tentatively agreed to cooperate with the proposed Council by appointing 10 residents as traffic policemen.

Speeding motorists are a grave problem to the Mabry Heights residents, who must have children to be eligible for the inexpensive, university-owned homes that were once officers' quarters for the Dale Mabry Air Base during World War II. It is now Tallahassee Municipal Airport.

Russell said traffic control now is limited to "shouting them down." He said speeding is at its worst after football games and in Campbell Stadium, when many motorists, irritated at waiting in long traffic lines, cut into the Heights west of West Hall to reach Tennessee Street.

He said the Council may also ask for the placing of a traffic light on Tennessee Street at Hull Drive, which curves through Mabry Heights from West Call Street to Tennessee.

Student Government Ponders Social Assistance Service

Establishment of a central office to assist students in planning recreational and social events is contemplated by Student Government, president Dave Bachman disclosed yesterday.

He said, in a preliminary proposal submitted to Student Government and University Administration officers, that the Recreation Majors Club will staff the office.

Among the services would be the compilation of lists of trucks for hay rides and floats available, bids from caterers, band agencies suggested chaperones, and party equipment.

"It is understood that the socials must be approved in the same manner as prescribed at the present," by the social director, Bachman added.

Bachman

Financial support could be provided by the Recreation Majors Club and by student government, Bachman said.

The office would be located in the new men's gymnasium, "so that the recreation majors will have easy access to the faculty and reference materials of their department," Bachman said.

Preliminary negotiations by the committee appointed last Wednesday appear encouraging. Bob Eiting, chairman, said. Recommendations are now being considered by the committee.

Board Of Control Requests FSU Budget Of $17.7 Million

Singers, Choral Union, Symphony Set Performance Friday Night

The first choral group concert of the year will be presented Friday night in Westcott auditorium, featuring the combined University Singers and the Choral Union, together with the University Symphony.

The concert, which will begin at 8:15 p.m., will start with Mass in G Minor, by Ralph Vaughn-Williams. Soloists will be Margaret Yeats, soprano; Chris Bryan, alto; Sam Jordan tenor; and Lee Liming, bass.

The second number on the program will be The Hymn of Jesus from the Acts of St. John, which is set to music for two choruses, semi-chorus and orchestra by Gustav Holst. The Hymn of Jesus will be accompanied by the University Symphony, under the direction of Robert Sedore.

The combined choruses will be under the leadership of Herman Gunter Jr., who is the director this year of both the University Singers and the Choral Union.

The concert will be free and open to the public. Gunter said.

Tally-Ho Beauty Contest Reset After Holidays

The Tally Ho beauty contest, scheduled for this week, has been cancelled to be held at a later date.

Due to Gymkana's "Aloha" and other conflicting events, Tally Ho has decided that the contest would best be held at some time after Thanksgiving holidays, said Sally Lou Carlson, yearbook spokesman.

The contest is open to all FSU coeds, except those who have appeared before in the annual's beauty section.

Judging will be held over a period of two evenings. During the first judging, contestants will appear in street-clothes and heels while the first selection of the second evening will be based on evening dresses. Call-backs will appear in shorts, blouses and heels.

Names of entrants, with their addresses and classes may be filed with Belly Lou Carlson or Mary Ann Lassiter at the Tally Ho office.

The contest will be open to the public.

'Can Get Along With It' Campbell Says Of Amount

The State Board of Control Friday recommended authorization of $17,720,818 in operating funds for Florida State University for the two years beginning July 1, 1957.

The budget was described as adequate by President Doak S. Campbell. "We believe we can get along with that budget," he told the Florida Flambeau.

The FSU budget compares with $7,761,906 requested for the University of Florida.

The board's total request for higher education and its other units amounted to $104 million. It was an increase of 15 per cent over operating funds for the current two-year period. The Legislature will be asked to provide $70 million the rest coming from user fees.

$64 MILLION CONSTRUCTION

In addition, $14 million is asked for new construction.

The board restored $600,000 in operating funds to the FSU budget after trimming it off the original budget submitted by the university. Acts to the board Vice-President A. B. Martin appeared before the board in support of the addition of J. Wayne Reitz, President of the University of Florida, appeared to request $7½ million which also had been removed. The board granted his request.

BEING REVIEWED

The FSU budgets were referred by the board back to the respective bureaus for processing. Dr. Campbell said the FSU budget was being done over at the present time.

Most of the funds the board had at first removed provided for various administrative and faculty positions, Dr. Campbell said.

Educational and general funds were increased 83 per cent for FSU and 78 per cent for the University of Florida. Florida A&M University was allotted $2,802,600 in operating funds with an educational and general budget up 25 per cent.

DISCUSSED SITE

Discussion of the college site spreads up again yesterday and supporters of the Bell-Shaw tract on North Tampa Bays which would require two million dollars worth of fill and over one million for water and sewer connections were given until Nov. 20 to inform the board whether they will accept the proposal so it costs the state no more than the Temple Terrace site, which is on hill, rolling land, includes 1,734 acres and is partly on the Hillsborough River.

A final decision is expected at the Dec. 6 meeting of the board of Tallahassee.

The board also looked toward establishing new state colleges on the lower east coast and the Pensacola area. It budgeted $240,000 for planning new units probably will be located in Broward or Palm Beach County and 946,000 for preliminary surveys and planning in Escambia County.

Derby, Cake Walk Are CC Projects

Among Other Events Slated By Campus Chest This Week

Activities for the Campus Chest drive this week include two spaghetti suppers, a cake walk, a variety show, and a soap box derby.

Tonight North Cawthon is sponsoring a spaghetti supper in their recreation room for 80 cents per person.

On Wednesday the KA's will "slop over" with their annual Rebel Tail Gate, to collect money for the campus-wide project.

As their project the Zeta Tau Alpha's will present their annual cakewalk at 8 p.m. Wednesday around Westcott Pool. Tickets will be sold for 10 cents a walk.

The Sigma Kappa Annual Variety Show is featured Thursday beginning at 7 p.m. in Westcott with admission of 25 cents.

Entertainment is to be presided at the Kappa Delta spaghetti supper Wednesday at 5 p.m. Tickets costing $1.00 may be obtained from any KD member.

Friday the Alpha Gams and the Phi Delts will pool their efforts to come forth with a Soap Box Derby.

At the end of the week the Gamma Phi Betas will start cleaning fraternity houses.

Junior Chorus To Hold Concert

The annual fall concert by the Tallahassee Junior Chorus will be held tomorrow night in Opperman Music Hall at 8:15 p.m. announced Miss Lois Schnoor, director.

The chorus is composed of fourth, fifth and sixth grade boys and girls living in the Tallahassee area who have been rehearsing for this concert since the middle of September.

This is the first year the chorus has undertaken a quest for compositions by children. Miss Schnoor said. The four submitted were programmed. The contributions, from both individuals and classes, each feature original music and some of the compositions have original words.

Dr. John Boda, a member of the faculty of the School of Music, has written a number especially for this group. Tomorrow night will be the first time it as ever been performed.

Randel To Give 'Greece Report'

Dr. William Randel, professor of English, will continue a two-year cultural interchange with a "Report on Greece" Thursday night in the library lecture hall beginning at 8 o'clock.

Dr. Randel, who is head of the Florida State University American Studies program, spent last year in Greece as a Fulbright Professor of American Civilization at the University of Athens.

Color slides he photographed will be shown to illustrate his lecture, Dr. Randel said.

He noted his discussion of Greece fulfill the concept of a "two-way street" of cultural interchange describing American life to people abroad, and in turn describing their life to Americans.

Dr. Randel recently gave an illustrated talk at the English Coffee Hour on the relation between Greece and Evelish literature. His address Thursday will be more general, he said, showing the "old and new in Greece," ancient ruins, scenery, villages, the islands, and the people.

Flu Vaccinations Start Wednesday

The University Infirmary clinic for gulping influenza vaccinations will be open Wednesday from 10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 4 p.m., announced Dr. R. D. Preston, head of the clinic.

Any student who is interested in receiving the vaccine and has not signed up yet may still register at the infirmary. Registration for students in the inoculation and there is enough vaccine on hand for 250 students, Dr. Bashaway said.

Preston Offers Cooperation In Morrison Issue

Investigation of complaints concerning Morrison's Food Service is meeting with apparent success, Bradford Preston, Dean of Men, Bachman said yesterday.

Morrison's representative Richard D. Preston has expressed his willingness to cooperate in rectifying legitimate complaints, Bachman announced.

Members of the committee will present a list of complaints at a meeting to be held tomorrow with the Morrison's representative.

Complaints are being considered by the committee including the recent several tickets for services rendered by students, the opening of the student center an hour later in the morning, and the price increase which has been established by the new system.

Gorin Lacks 'Great' Voice, Has Excellent Taste: Critic

By DAVE WARD-STEINMAN

The first regular Artist Series recital was presented in Westcott Thursday night, close on the heels of the eminently successful I Solisti di Zagreb. This recital featured Igor Gorin, baritone, and his accompanist, Williard Straight.

Gorin does not have a "great" voice and his technical equipment is not always completely adequate for the music he uses what he has to great effect. He has an unusual sense and makes very dramatic use of color, contrasts and dynamics, especially in such things as the Handel "Come to Me, Soothing Sleep", Moussorgsky "Evening Prayer", and Richard Strauss' "Thine Am I".

In the opening Falconieri aria he had a tendency to clip words at the ends of phrases as he did in several of the other songs. Also his pitch control occasionally faltered on long, held notes, as in the Handel aria "Ah, Mio Cor" and in Blaze of Noon." But his phrasing was in excellent taste and there was much that evinced a high order of musicianship.

WAS AT BEST

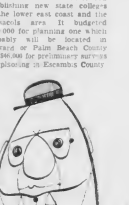
Gorin was at his best in the three Dvorak Biblical Songs excerpted from the cycle, and the folk songs of his native Slovenia. The contrast in the Wagner and Verdi arias the thinness of the lower register contrasted markedly with the full and resonance of his middle register tones. And in the Strauss "Serenade" the opposite was true. The tops of his phrases the high notes stuck out and occasionally broke the line completely, but this is a problem that only the greatest of the virtuosi have solved with any marked degree of success.

The program presented did not flatter the audience. It was typical of a Community Concerts program, or in other words, just a cut above the material usually presented for women's clubs. There was no real meat on the entire program, just excerpts. The last group should have been saved for encores the encores for a high school assembly program. There was no important contemporary music and no complete cycle or group the pacing seemed dictated by Broadway, i.e. almost every slow piece was followed by a showy, exuberant one as if Gorin were afraid of putting his audience to sleep.

SHOWED IMAGINATION

Nevertheless, Gorin showed great imagination and sensitivity in the interpretation of his material. He effectively emulated a child's voice in the Moussorgsky "Evening Prayer" and actually sang dialogue in "two voices" in the "Jolly Carter" folk song, greatly enhancing the presentation. And in Figaro's famous aria from The Barber of Seville and the encore of the Dvorak songs he was properly exuberant and enthusiastic, as he was in the Slovenian and Irish folk songs.

BEAUTIFUL TONE



Straight's solo group consisted of the Chopin F Sharp Major Nocturne, Opus 15 No. 2, as labeled; Prokofieff Toccata, and the brief Chopin A Major Prelude. Straight got a beautiful tone in the Chopin and, though taking a slower tempo than usual, still made the piece unusually expressive. The Prokofieff did not fare as well, undoubtedly due to the stiff and unyielding action action of the inferior piano in Westcott that visiting artists are forced to contend with.

The large audience responded warmly to both Gorin and his accompanist, due we suspect, as much to Gorin's charm and showmanship as to his voice.

Tennesseans To Study FSU Government

Five student government officers from East Tennessee State College at Johnson City were due to arrive last night to study Florida State University student government.

Jan Kaminis, secretary of state, and the five, whose names were not available in advance of their arrival, were to participate in discussions this morning in 216 Lonnmire with Student Body President Dave Bachman, Max Kimmas, Evelyn Cass, Arnold Greenberg and Ann Cubbon, all of whom are cabinet members, and Frank Bean, foreign student advisor.

Should U.S. Intervene In Hungary?

Pro

United States Hypocritical In Not Sending Troops

Three times in the last 50 years the United States has waged wars to preserve democracy abroad and keep aggressors from reaching the coasts of Maine, California, and Florida.

We can honorably say our intervention tipped the scales of World Wars One and Two and kept South Korea free.

But in the first two cases, at least, we waited until our allies were almost annihilated. Britain in 1914 and 1941, was fighting on little besides courage. We had allowed ourselves, in the preceding years, to be encircled by potential enemies while we desperately, but unrealistically, waited for the belligerents to solve their own problems.

All members of the staff of the FLORIDA FLAMBEAU could not make up their minds about the advisability of the United States' intervening in Hungary. Consequently, spokesmen for both sides are presenting their views so as to present the issue before the student body.

We must now solemnly ask if we have not faltered too long, in regard to Eastern Europe.

The inspiring rebellion of Hungarian patriots is all but crushed. Soviet troops, all but expelled from the enraged former satellite, marched in with overpowering strength and with foul murder in their hearts. Hardly ever before has there been so marked a clash btween freedom and tyranny.

While the Hungarian patriots, fighting often with only their fists, begged for aid, Americans lauded them for their spirit—and sent no aid.

We have long prided ourselves on being the staunchest defender of democracy. We are indignant if someone suggests the Declaration of Independence was only rationalization for an economic schism.

We have, through the Voice of America and our support of Radio Free Europe, preached to the captive peoples of the satellite nations that democracy is something worth fighting for.

We cannot look ourselves in the face any more. We had our chance to prove our words with deeds and took the coward's way out.

Should Have Helped

We should have sent troops and weapons into Hungary through the organization of the United Nations, as we did in Korea. In the Oriental country our men fought Russian weapons and communist troops. In Hungary they would have been fighting Russian weapons and Russian communist troops. A Red aggressor is not different because of nationality.

It is a reason's assumption that Russia would not have re-invaded Hungary if (1) our own election had not been so close at hand (with a "Peace and Prosperity" theme the center of it) and (2) England and France had not followed a course in the Middle East which demonstrated an obvious break with the policies espoused by United States statesmen.

With the Big Three western alliance divided, Russia felt confident she could pillage Hungary unmolested.

Some will say that the sending of American troops to Hungary could only have been sheer folly; that it would have caused a Third World War, and, at worst, an atomic war.

Always Risky

The whole business of international politics involves a certain amount of risk taking, and our policy for the past decade has been one risk after another.

We have followed a program of "containment," i.e., preventing, through economic and military assistance, the spread of Kremlin influence into friendly or neutral nations. This whole approach was based on the hope that the satellite nations would tip the balance of power in our favor by revolting against the Russian bear.

Therefore, when one of the satellites did revolt, we could have helped ourselves by helping her. The chances Russia would have waged a full-scale war were small because it would have given every other satellite nation an opportunity to revolt. Wars have caused changes in government. The Russian Revolution itself could not have come about except because of World War I, when the Czar simply could not maintain internal security.

And as for atomic holocaust, the odds are against it. No nation wishes to conquer a radioactive desert. The Kremlin leaders are scheming, evil men, yes, but ambitious men who would hardly throw away all if they were losing a little.

But, if Russia can consolidate her grip on the satellites, and the west demonstrates, as it just has, that it will not help the captive peoples, they may very well resign in despair. And then Russia can gobble up other nations one by one, nations that do not see in the United States a trustworthy ally and would rather be secure with the stronger power than aligned with a vacillating weaker one.

Soon Be Isolated

In a few short years we would be isolated in a hostile world. And then it would not matter whether Ivan stormed our shores or not; we would be economically bankrupt and reduced by fear to a mean position; hopeless of resurrecting democracy and fit prey ourselves for the hypnosis of communist dogma.

Hungary has been abandoned, her spirit broken, her people crushed. Imre Gomorey, Czechoslovakia, and the other slave nations, who breathlessly watched the tragedy of Hungary, are likewise broken in spirit. They dare not revolt. We will not help them. And for years we have promised direct assistance to any victim of aggression.

We are reduced to the role of the hypocrite and the coward, and it will be very, very hard for us to assume once again a moral and responsible leadership. Let us hope that it is not altogether too late.

Con

Aid Would Have Resulted In War; Decision Was Wise

Today, after the Hungarian revolt has been crushed by Russian might and Rebel holdouts have been driven into hiding, the conscience-stricken American mind asks a question. "Couldn't it have been different?"

From the rubble of a defeated camp comes an answer: "Yes, yes! If we had only acted."

Reasons the weary voice: The Foreign Policy was wrong. We should have taken up arms . . . . against the Russians who threatened to once again enslave the Hungarian peoples. It was our moral obligation. We betrayed as a symbol of freedom from tyranny, but we did nothing to aid them.

Question the wisdom of the proposed action and the voice fades away, suddenly.

The oracle of the rubble has little to say concerning the possibility of a third world war, or the near unsalvageable remains of the "liberated" country which could have resulted if a campaign had been launched against the Russians in the name of Hungarian freedom.

It is reluctant to venture an opinion on the outcome of such a battle which would have most likely resulted from such intervention. The Western "Big Three Alliance" has been shattered by a series of political faux pas while attempting to remedy the Suez Canal crisis.

Internally Divided

The United Nations stands divided internally. At this point, it is open to question whether the UN is more powerful than its unsuccessful predecessor, the League of Nations, in preventing aggression and wars.

"They looked for us for help, and we did nothing!" echoes the voice. Evidently dissenters of the American Foreign Policy do not remember President Eisenhower's offer of short-term emergency aid and long-time economic aid to the Rebel governments of Poland and Hungary.

While armed intervention in Hungary would not have been feasible, to prove a point, the United States has not ignored the fight for freedom in Western Europe.

The peoples of Hungary, and other satellite countries, have witnessed the benefits and some have tasted the sweet fruit of freedom. They may be repressed, but they gather strength for another rebellion, but they will not forget what they have seen, nor give up hope.

Gaze At Sky

Those who would have plunged into Hungary bearing lethal weapons as a badge of authority attempt to rationalize their stand. Without turning their head to either side to contemplate the international situation, they gaze at the sky and apparently try to lessen the prospects of war by "positive thinking."

By mental rationalization they would make the consequences of military conflict with Russia seem no more ominous than a children's fight with corn-cobs or pebbles. We cannot in any degree of sincerity subscribe to the idealistic stand.

It is too much a parallel with Aesop's tale of the "Sour Grapes".

Instead, we feel that the administration has acted wisely. For once wisdom has been shown in carrying out this country's "foot-in-mouth" Foreign Policy.

'Signals Stand Given

TO THE EDITOR:

Upon reading your handling of the "controversy," Smoke Signals staff had felt there to be a difference between a controversy and a column. However since you obviously fail to differentiate, we submit the following statement certain clarifications and rectifications before your readers.

Although deleted in your correspondence, the question of the briefs per magazine Smoke Signals was not to present an attack upon Smoke Signals or upon En Garde, nor was it in the nature of an argument. The spokesman for En Garde had withdrawn any request for help through Smoke Signals thereby its budget at the earlier committee meeting. Their brief was to be a presentation for the case of an independent magazine. Smoke Signals, however, presented its brief as an aid to the Board in their decision by outlining the present circumstances surrounding our own Literary Issue. This was mentioned in our brief.

It should be commented that the term "intervention" is no way

Symphony Critic Criticized By Letter Writer

Critic 'Half-Baked, Misinformed'

TO THE EDITOR:

Helpful hints to a miscalled student and an unqualified reviewer:

It is good to know our School of Music symphonic concerts have an abundant audience composed in part of a proud and embarrassed student body. These very performances become the young music students' aim, which is the result of long and patient hours spent in a class referred to in the catalogue as "ORCHESTRA." Under these circumstances alone it is stupid to assume such performances should become the object of a half-baked, misinformed student who considers himself a member of the brotherhood of free spirits. The church in this case was not free, but very expensive.

Mr Sedore is indeed a magnificent conductor. Is it then to be presumed that he has not the wisdom to choose a competent violinist—one from his own studio? The string program is weak in our entire state. The aim is to encourage young students to attend FSU has certainly not been aided by such elimination and will not be. May this hint also be dropped: A university is set up to help students, not to harm them. Honest criticism is a product of the love of the subject, not the dislike of an individual. Also a newer of any orchestral work should at least remain throughout the entire performance If any self-appointed critic wishes to acquire an unfair and unwise choice of the wrong words in our English vocabulary, he may find himself reading the letter in the Flambeau blasting the symphony concert of last week However, such a person must best blast "Underwater Basket Weaving" and be experienced in such before writing.

Turn to the orchestra: thanks for giving a bit of great music to an undiscriminated audience. Maybe after repeated hearings, true judgement may be built.

Finally, a sincere attempt to see how many nasty things can be said in order to receive all of this attention.

Lacks Sincerity, Appreciation

TO THE EDITOR:

I have given much thought to Mr. Strecener's critical review of last Monday's concert given by the University Symphony and I find that he lacks a certain sincerity and real appreciation of the efforts rendered by hard working earnest musicians.

For being closely related to music all my life, though not participating in music as is not Mr. Strecener, I found the concert most enjoyable. Granted there were a few minor errors, as is possible when the human element is involved, but I am quite sure Mr Strecener would admit himself the victim of error making even in his own illustrious and reknown career as a music critic.

I inquired of a friend, who is a music major, what he thought of the constructive and helpful criticism given to Miss Blomgren, the Concertmistress, by Mr. Strecener's tactful and discreet opinion He replied "Oh that thing I had to laugh when I read it. It's the most childish form of that sort I've ever read." You had certainly made a profound impression Mr Strecener. Without a doubt you have done much to improve Miss. Blomgren's talent.

I noted that near the end of Mr. Strecener's letter he stated that the concert was on Tuesday night. Perhaps what he meant was that the University Symphony was the soloist of the Tuesday night lanifer's shop and sang vocalize over an empty cellophane cracker package Mr. Strecener's a popularly keen and trained musical de-

Should Try Playing Himself

TO THE EDITOR:

Who is this Wonder Boy who comes forward in your Letters to the Editor column to bewail the slaughter of great music at last week's Symphony concert?

In order to avoid any similar catastrophe in the future, may we suggest that our Champion of Better Music appear as soloist in an entire concerto on the next concert, then, in his spare moments, he could mount the podium and lead the orchestra to a triumphant finish!

After all, who knows? Perhaps we have a budding Mitropoulis in our midst.

Be Realistic; Have Open Mind

TO THE EDITOR:

The next time the University Symphony gives a concert here on campus, I advise people who refuse to be realistic to stay away and be content to shout their disapproval to a "Hi-Fi" set, since they may forget or fail to recognize that a student orchestra is not a professional group. There is absolutely no reason why such people who feel so miserable over a particular performance should try to make other people miserable too Even if some members of an audience are not up on Beethoffian scrambling, they can be allowed to enjoy a concert by a not-to-excellent orchestra, it seems to me.

If one does case, on the other hand, to be realistic and see human beings play some classical music right here at F.S.U. then he may select to go to the next University Symphony concert. But having chosen to be realistic, he will go with an open mind

Southern Key Game

Florida State's Seminole gridders face the key game of their 1956 campaign this Saturday when they tackle Auburn Mississippi Southern here.

True, Southern hasn't overpowered any of the nation's more outstanding squads, in fact very few of their victories have come against teams most football fans have ever heard of.

The only team on their slate which has ever gained national mention to speak of is the University of Alabama, whom they meet next week.

The days of Alabama's national glory went out with the exit of Harry Gilmer, who in 1946 led them to the Rose Bowl.

Still, the Southerners have racked off 14 straight victories since the middle of last year, and that's no mean accomplishment in anybody's books these days.

Most notable of their conquests this year have been the 34-8 triumph of Abilene Christian and a 33-0 win over Memphis State, a team incidentally whieh Mississippi could take only 26-0 this past weekend.

Before concerning ourselves more directly with the Seminoles for a moment, Saturday's fiasco in the confines of Doak S. Campbell Stadium was anything but a football game from where we sat.

It bears mention in passing that despite being outscored by a 42-7 margin, Furman gained more yardage in total offense than any team except Miami, Virginia Tech and Villanova this year.

Since Miami and VPI both defeated the Tribe (by identical scores) and Villanova put up a considerably tougher battle than Furman, it appears as if Furman might have been swamped in score only.

It also might be noted that most of the Purple Hurricane yardage came against the Seminoles' second unit. However, lest someone besides ourselves get pessimistic, it must be admitted that all was still rosy after the rough rout of the South Carolina visitors.

Here's a wish that it will be the same after the Auburn game next week.

DOWN HE GOES. Florida State halfback Bobby Renn is brought down by Furman's Ronnie Brown after picking up eight yards on the first quarter Tribe center Troy Barnes (52) is poised above pileup. Renn was the big gun for the Seminoles in its running attack. Art Tom Sawyer

Purple Hurricane 'Blue

Tribe Goes Outside, Inside, In 42-7 Win

By BOB WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Writer

Coach Tom Nugent's Seminoles proved their offense to be no fantasy as their first and second scoring units reeled off six touchdowns to mangle Furman's Purple Hurricane 42-7, Saturday afternoon.

With Lee Corso running, passing, and kicking, together with FSU's "Mr. Inside", Bobby Renn, evastating the Hurricane defenses, the Seminoles easily sailed down their most impressive win of the year.

A sun-capacity Dad's Day crowd watched little Lee and his cohorts razzle-dazzle the South Carolina offering with a potent offense and a wall-like defense on the sun-drenched sod of Campbell Stadium.

The starting Seminole backfield combine set the initial pace as they shocked the Hurricane with a touchdown in the first five minutes of the game.

Finding themselves in trouble the first time they had the ball Furman ricetied to kick from their own 14. Bobby Renn gathered the ball in and drove down to Furman's 45 yard line from his own 47. Halfback Buck Metts jumped around left end twice for 8 yards to set up the first Seminole scoring drive.

Renn drove through the inside for 11 yards, Metts got 6, and Renn broke between tackle and end for five more and a first down. Lee Corso stepped back to pass and was promptly swarmed by a host of Hurricane tacklers on the Furman 20.

Corso's second attempt was more successful. Spotting Renn alone in the flat, Corso stepped back again and fired a pass to Renn, who evaded several tacklers in his romp to the goal line to score

Extra point specialist Johnny Sheppard converted successfully to put the Seminoles ahead 7-0 with 10 minutes left to play in the first quarter.

FURMAN ROARS?

Furman roared back with full intent to erase the FSU margin after taking the Seminole kick. A trio of backs, Freshman quarterback Billy Baker, fullback Jimmy Grant and halfback Jerry Penland led the march to the FSU goal line. The Furman Odom for 18 yards to the FSU punch penetrated to the Seminole 12 before it bogged down and 42-Odom then took the handoff and cut 39 yards off tackle to a strong pass defense.

Early in the second stanza, the Seminoles found themselves in possession of the ball on the Furman 45. Running their plays off the "T" and the split "T", FSU drove 40 yards in 6 plays. From the five, Corso passed to flanker Jot Holt for the TD. Sheppard again came on the scene to kick the ball between the uprights for a 14-0 score

Several minutes later, the FSU second unit got its one. Deep in their own territory, the Seminoles, headed by Ted Rodrique, launched a predominantly aerial attack against the young Furman outfit.

With three minutes left in the half, Rodrique unlimbered a short pass to halfback Billy Ferguson for 18 yards to the FSU 42-Odom then took the handoff and cut 39 yards off tackle to the Hurricane 39

Then at the crucial moment with the FSU offense poised for a quick killing, the Seminoles were penalized for having an off the "T" and the split "T", illegal receiver downfield back to the Furman 44

Leo Swantic entered the game replacing Rodrique and promptly unleashed a pass to reserve fullback Eddie Johnson. Protected by a screen of blockers, Johnson raced the 44 yards to score FSU's third touchdown.

Swantic's Passes Impress Nugent-More Action Slated

By FRANK RAMOS
Flambeau Sports Writer

By completing four out of five passes, good for two touchdowns and 85 yards Saturday, against Furman, Len Swantic moved up in Florida State's plans for its final two games.

According to the Seminoles' head coach, Tom Nugent, Swantic will see a lot more action in the next two games.

We're counting on Len against Auburn and Mississippi Southern. He seemed to regain his passing accuracy Saturday against Furman," says Nugent.

The 28-year old senior started his athletic career in high school at Columbus, Georgia, where he starred in football, basketball, and baseball.

Len then get the call from Uncle Sam and continued his football and basketball while in service. He played for the 16th infantry rangers, for 2 years in Europe and one year in the states

Following his discharge from the Army, he met the girl that he now calls Betty Jean Swantic. They will be married four years this January, but they have no children.

In February of 1953 Swantic entered Florida State to begin playing football where he had left off in the service.

BUST GAME

The Villanova game in 1954 is the best game that the 175 pound quarterback has ever played, Len says. He completed 13 passes in 17 attempts, three of them going for touchdowns, and he ran one over himself.

Last year Swantic and Buck Metts were tied for Tribe scoring honors, each scoring nine paydirt four times for 24 points. Len also ranked 41st in the nation last year in pass completions with 37.

"Len is a smart ball handler and directs the team well. He is our most experienced quarterback."—stated Nugent.

Dr Don Veller, head Seminole golf coach, has accepted the chairmanship of the American Association of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation President's Committee on the amateur standing of physical education instructors. The committee is composed of a group of the nation's leading physical education instructors

After graduation Swantic doesn't know exactly what is coming next A physical ed. major, he wants to coach, but is waiting to see what offers he receives before making any moves.

Playboys, Feds Top Dorm Cage League

After dropping their first two games by less than a point, the Penthouse finally came through with a win last week with a 22-18 win over the Vets.

Winner West Hall team, the Playboys won their third straight, and are now formerly undefeated. SAE 2 was a big 24-11 first win, and that started the trick. TEP closed the gap in the last Thursday's 14. Vets' 13 and their 12 points paced the winners while Hal Mangin's and Cecil Burch helped the losers.

Also today the Lutheran's and Demons lowered the boom on the War Rebels 26-23 for an upset victory. Dave St. John hit double 12 points for the Rebels but the team was held to 8 points in the last two quarters, after leading 20-10 at halftime

The Feds look like the team to beat in Dorm league now as they have won 3rd straight, this time Methodist 31-24.

A five high in free throws was set with the Feds making 21 out of 30 shots and Methodists 12 out of 25. Methodists enlivened the game when the field 11-8.

Methodist won a squeaker over Dodge House 31-27. It was tied at the half, but in the closing minutes Ouzoler and Stefen hit scoring points for Magnolia Hall.

Hall won a 45-34 game over APO that technically went to Delta.

There are no dorm games this week-end in Gwinnana.

FRAT CAGERS

ZTA blasted up a big 25-8 first half and coasted to a 52-35 win over KS. Buttnano had 12.

Fred Bailey 10 each, and Gus Ford 8 for the losers.

Delta PKP an overtime period game with TEP 33-32 after leading the way. It was their work at the free throw line that saved the day as they sunk 11. TEP hit 14 field goals to 11 for PKP

PDT ran up a record 71-16 win over outmanned PKA.

The game that brought out a big crowd and the true to "high tension" form was the ATO-DTD battle. Hall control won for the Delta in the end. It was 7-5 at te quarter 14-12 at the half, 22-18 at the 3rd quarter and Delta at the end 27-20. Berry had 5 field goals to lead the scorers.

TENNIS

Darkness stopped the tight double matches between Dick Chandler and Ron Fisher of Magnolia in their match with Jim Broadmeier and Walt McCurdy of West Hall Penthouse with the score 6-0, 12-14 but the Magnolia team came through on Friday to win 6-4.

Meanwhile the Feds team of Ron Metzler and Ed O'Connell beat Lutheran Gamma Delta 6-4, 6-3 to stay in the tourney. Last night the Feds were playing the Methodist with the losers eliminated.

Tonight the winner of that match plays Penthouse and that winner gain a crack at Magnolia tomorrow at 3:30 for the title.

In the dorm singles, Joe Gusie of the Feds was playing Frank Bradbury of Magnolia. That winner plays Joe Davis of Penthouse tonight at 3:30 and that winner meets Marcial Lavina of International Club on Thursday for the title

In the fraternity doubles the TEP team continued their upset march by beating PAT, 2-6, 6-4, 6-0. This evening SN plays LCA. Tomorrow the winners plays TEP-PAT winner and that winner plays the SAE and ATO loser on Thursday.

'I'm Getting Out Of Here,' Actors Declare In 'Back From Eternity'

By ALAN KASS

"Back From Eternity"

The jungle adventure, "Back From Eternity" concludes its three-day run today at the Florida Theatre. Robert Ryan, Rod Steiger and Anita Ekberg are starred in this absorbing drama. In the supporting cast are Gene Barry, Phyllis Kirk and Keira Ander.

The plot revolves around a plan load of people who crash into an unexplored part of the Junale. After many days of labor on the plane the crew find that some of the survivors will have to stay and face certain death. Of the ten, which five return to civilization? If you're interested in this crucial question see "Back From Eternity."

COMING ATTRACTIONS

This corner has paid little or no attention to the recent opening of the Ritz Art Theatre. The lease was simple. There was nothing worthwhile to write about.

This week, however, the management is bringing in a real prize movie entitled "Wages Of Fear." The same people who were responsible for making "Diabolique" produced and directed this thriller.

"Wages Of Fear" made a lot of excitement several years ago, and if sitting three hours and twenty-eight minutes is not your pleasure, head for the Ritz.

At the State this week start-Wednesday is a drama called "The Unmarried Mother." Ethel Williams heads the cast and from the previews she looks quite pleasing without her bathing suit.

"War And Peace" will be the topic at the next class.

Didn't anybody at FSU see "The Search For Bridey Murphy"?

It would not surprise me if more adults go to the kiddie show on Saturday than children.

In case your interested in "Love Me Tender" Elvis does. No matter how many times I see Gina's last name in print I still can't remember how to spell it.

When was the last time you saw Montgomery Clift in a movie?

Despite the fine acting Thorton Wilders' "Skin Of Our Teeth", was the first speech play I ever walked out on.

Smoke Signals Stand Explained

a true picture of the Smoke Signals position on the earlier agreement. Also, "lack of cooperation" was the subsidiary reason for the dissolvement of the agreement. The primary one was that it was disfunctional and maleficent.

The picture painted by your writer would make it appear that I alone, as a sort of dictatorial edtor, stand in the way of the progress planned by the multitudes. However, I as editor am merely spokesman for my staff, as is Mr. Ward-Steinman for that of The Ea Garde. The only difference being that while I signed only my name to the brief, Mr. Ward-Steinman signed those of his staff. It might even be mentioned that upon questioning three of the five persons whose names appear upon the Ea Garde brief, it was discovered that they didn't know the full nature of the contents of their brief, and that upon further interrogation admitted that certain items were not agreed upon as to their validity.

Furthermore, in relation to their issue of the "pseudonym" used by a faculty wife in last year's contest, Mr. Steinman himself has withdrawn this issue as being the result of an unintentional misrepresentation of the facts due to misunderstanding.

The contention raised by the Smoke Signals brief "the important elements of which were also missing from your coverage" is that any issue of "controversy" is due to the same thing, misunderstanding of theSmoke Signal's position. For example, out of thirty-two pages there were humor. There would not have been these if more literary material had been contributed. It impresses us as ironic that previous to thrir wish for "their own magazine none of the Ea Garde members ever tried to help the then existing Literary Issue (see no non critique

Once more, we would like to repeat our offer to extend staff and or contributing positions to the Ea Garde individual. That is, to those who have not already accepted.

Again, we would like to point out that these briefs are not final—briefs from the first exchanges of the misunderstanding between Ea Garde and Smoke Signals. If the Flambeau wishes to write a news-story, it should not attempt reconstruction from these briefs, but seek the facts from those involved.

There is only one real difference between proposands and advertising. You don't know who is putting out propaganda. advertising is openly sponsored and paid for.

This column is an advertisement. We don't pretend that it isn't. Nor do we insult your intelligence by trying to trick you into thinking it's a news column. That's why we have a title instead of a headline. And why you find Baker's "standard" very plainly at the bottom of each ad.

Many forms, such as patent medicines, use what's called the "reader advertisement" to set up like a news story, with headline and all. Then in very tiny letters you see "Advertisement." Something like that seems somewhat rather nasty and dishonest and not quite nice.

Baker's Music Center pays for this space in each paper. They hope it will encourage you to buy records at Baker's, or create a favorable attitude toward the store or at least arouse your curiosity so you'll stop in and see what they have.

We think these goals can be best reached by giving you more information about the records than you would find in an ordinary display ad.

We hope these columns serve three purposes — to inform, to influence, and to entertain. We hope you like us and trust us . . . for after all, the only reason for existence of Baker's and Turntables 1 and 2, is you.

Students To Get 75c Hourly; 'Time-Riders To Be Dropped

By DAVE FLETCHER

Plans for student pay raises to a minimum of 75 cents per hour were announced this week by Richard D. Preston, manager of Morrison's Food Service.

Answering a proposal by a Student Government committee appointed to investigate complaints concerning the food service, Preston said that tentative raises to 70 to 75 cents per hour would be in effect next semester.

Next year a 7¢ minimum will be in effect. Slow food servers will be moved under the interstate e-commerce minimum wage laws, Morrison's would hire double help for less, he pointed ou.

Approximately 150 students will be affected by the raise, he said.

To effect the raises, he pointed out, "time riders" would have to be dropped from the payroll. No wholesale cuts in staff will result, he added. Preston defined a "time rider" as one who puts in his time but accomplishes little

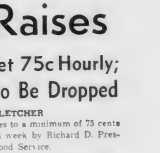
MEAL BOOKS HIT

Under the present pay system, student employees work 3 ½ hours for a 50¢ meal ticket book at a rate of 46 2-3 cents per hour. Senator Dick Crawford, committee chairman, pointed out. The present rate ranges from a minimum of 46 2-3 cents to one dollar per hour with a majority of the students receiving the minimum rate.

Other proposals recommended by the committee included paying students in cash instead of in meal books, and the cheaning of the opening hour at the Student Center from 8 to 7 a m.

Preston went on record as favoring a change of student remuneration to cash payment. He pointed out that a bunch a change in decored by a majority of the student employees, cash payment would be subject to deductions for social security and income tax. Polls are being taken by the student government committee to determine the popularity of the idea among the employees Florida Wider Up, democratic organ of Labor, pointed out that no opinion written by Attorney General Ervin of Florida states that employees paid by token or merchandise must be paid the option of receiving payment to cash.

CENTER OPENING



Another proposal considered concerns the opening hours of the Student Center. Preston s a id that in a survey by Morrison staff of the morning business at the Student Center little demand was shown in the hour between 7 and 8 a. m. A compromise was then reached, and Preston announced that the Student Center will open at 7:30 a m following the Thanksgiving holidays.

Complaints concerning rises in the price of foods were mentioned. Preston said that in most cases, any raise in the price of a particular dish compressed for an increase in the size of the portion. Preston cited an increase in the amount of pie per cut. Preston added that any complaints concerning prices or the size of individual portions should be brought to the attention of the line supervisor immediately so that an adjustment may be made.

PROMISES COOPERATION

Preston expressed appreciation to the committee for bringing the complaints to his attention. He stated a desire to cooperate "as far as is practical" in the adjustment of complaints.

Committee members appointed by the Student Senate include Senator Dick Crawford, chairman; Senator Jack Lana, Secretary of Student Welfare Bob Edlin, Tom Bruckman, and Dodeneerdery of Labor Lynn Wilder.

Sam Donahue

The Student Artist Series committee said tickets will go on sale Monday in the Westcott ticket office at 90 cents each for the concerts of the Betty May band November 29 in Westcott Auditorium. Performances will be at 7 and 9 p.m.

Campus Sing Representatives Meet Tuesday

Co-chairmen of the annual Campus Sing have set for Tuesday evening a meeting to plan the choral contest which will be held on March 2 and 3.

Dolores Symasek and Reb Short, representing Sigma Alpha Iota and Phi Mu Alpha music fraternity, asked representatives of interested groups to meet at 4:45 p.m. in the small lounge of Longmire Building.

"Any fraternity, sorority, residence hall or co-ed group which may derive from its membership a male or female chorus, including campus church groups, honoraries, and other organizations, is eligible to enter," Miss Symasek said.

She said Tuesday's meeting will concern rules, music, rehearsals and other matters.

Trophies are awarded each year to first, second, and third place winners in men's and women's categories.

BULLETIN

The Board of Publications unanimously rejected a request for the publication this year of a literary magazine. Eta Gamma yesterday afternoon. The committee recommended Smoke Signals, humor magazine, devote one of its four issues exclusively to literary material. The Board left open the possibility of a literary magazine in following years.

Prexy Party Set Tonight

A campus tradition may end tonight when the Senior Class President Dinah R. Campbell s birthday party at his home. The 68 year old millionaire will retire in June

Paul Ort, Senior Class president asked all members of the class and their dates to arrive at the president's home off Tennessee Street by 7 p.m Dr Campbell will be presented with a gift and a cake by the class, Ort said.

Dress will be semi-formal. Seniors need not remain late, Ort added

It will be up to succeeding classes whether the tradition of giving the FSU president a birthday party is maintained. Dr. Campbell's successor could, however, end it by having a birthday in early June or early September, when no classes are held.

Boosters Road Could Become Public

Again If Public Spoke

Tomorrow afternoon when students are fighting heavy traffic to get to Doak S. Campbell Stadium for the football game with Mississippi Southern, they may find cause to complain of the reservation of one access road for members of the Seminole Boosters Club.

They will not question the right of that active organization to some special privilege as a reward for their support of the team. Staunch fellows and true that they are, they should be recognized for their pains.

But the complaining students will wonder over the advisability, if not the legality, of the Boosters' commandeering of a publicly-financed road for what amounts to private use.

If these wondering students become sufficiently embittered by the error of the Boosters' Way, they may reflect that the seemingly natural tendency at the university is toward taking privileges from students. There seems to be little discrimination involved in the parceling of these privileges, but many things have occurred in recent years that have deprived students.

Among them have been abandonment of the privileges of choosing whether or not to join ROTC, having cars (in the case of Freshmen), living off campus and disregarding regulations. In most cases, the source of these changes has been hard to pin down; they were simply "announced."

Thinking over these things, the student on his way to the stadium may well ask in despair if there is any course open to those who oppose such moves as the establishment of Boosters' Road. There is.

The course involves the building up of public opinion—and if there is enough opposition voiced, then Boosters' Road can once again become public.

United States' Hungary Policy

Shows Empty Promises

We hope that members of the student body realized some benefit from the symposium in Tuesday's paper over whether the United States should have intervened in Hungary when the revolutionists appealed for help.

Although some members of the staff do not agree, the position of this paper is that the United States should not have turned its nose at the valiant Hungarians who risked—and in many cases, lost—their lives over what turned out to be a bunch of empty U. S. promises.

That the Hungarians are sincere is not to be questioned. That the United States is, is very much in doubt.

As a result of the United States' failure to carry out its moral and diplomatic obligation to these peoples, our words of sympathy are rapidly becoming a harsh and bitter joke for those who still carry on the struggle. In Hungary, Poland, Egypt and, no doubt, most of the rest of the world, the people are wondering just how far this country can be counted upon to back up its smug boastings of righteousness. Our policy of the glad hand, they surmise, may conceal a knife in the other hand.

In the field of foreign affairs, the range of alternative diplomatic choices is vital —there must be as many alternatives as possible to the prospect of war. Yet the United States has shown stagnancy of thought, blunders and pursuance of outdated policies, allowed the range of choices to diminish to the point that the President finds it necessary to call a special meeting to discuss the imminence of war.

It seems that somewhere we should stop, think a minute and then follow a course designed to get us (and the world) out of the mess. The Hungarian revolt would have been a good opportunity to calmly and rationally assess the balance of world power and move so as to cut off the source of part of Russia's power.

In its argument against intervention, the Tuesday "con" editorial said that if those who favor intervention are reminded of the possibility of a Third World War they will commencing their voice suddenly "fades away."

We have, contrarily, answered this falsity with the realistic argument that the Soviet Union does not want war any more than we do and would not have deemed its lost cause in Hungary a sufficient excuse to risk war.

The United States should realize the implications of its policies and either stick by them or abandon them.

The World Today

Russia Closer With Each Conquest

By JEROME BERNSTEIN

Italian Foreign Minister Gaetano Martino said a few days ago "An international police force might be required in Hungary should the Soviets not give sufficient guarantees for free voting there."

Eastern European unrest today exists as it did over a hundred years ago. In 1848 news reached the United States that Metternich had been ground down under the Hapsburg might.

STATE LEGISLATURE—Enthusiastic democrats called for American action. A movement in the Democratic Party sprang up urging United States intervention. Only inaction was one thing the action another.

People in arms, will cheer when an oppressed people rise up, but they fall quiet when it means more spending blood. They would cheer Hungary in the days of the Hapsburg oppression, but they would not die to defeat it. Is this to happen again?

Communist Russia, perhaps feeling she would fare well with Germany, Britain and France invaded Egypt has shown she can take what she can get. The difference between the actions of the three latter and Britain and France have served to withdraw their forces. Russia with Israel, is now a U.N. police force moves in.

THE SOVIETS, so far, have not only defined a U.N. fact-finding team entrance into Hungary but they have even refused to let in much needed medical supplies from Austria.

Three times the assembly has called upon Russia to get its army out of Hungary and cease fighting the Free Hungarian revolt.

Three and more times the Hungarian government, before it was replaced by a Russian puppet, appealed to the UN for help.

In the balance in the Middle East and Hungarian crises have existed, the United Nations has created an international force to be stationed along the Suez Canal and the Israel-Egypt frontier. Hungary is still a debate.

THIS WRITER is a veteran. He does not like the idea of going back into service and perhaps getting killed. There are many veterans here on campus who feel the same way. Many share his fear that the veterans and buddy die. They also know that the fight in Hungary is their fight too.

Last Monday was Veterans Day. A day set aside to honor our Armed Forces for what they have done in the past. One hundred thousand sons who left home to defend their national freedom.

HUNGARY TODAY is fighting not only for its national freedom, but ours as well. If Soviet Russia is allowed to get away with her murder of a free people, she will sooner or later look about for another victim. Each time she gets away with a crime, she will be one step closer to our home.

This is 1956 not 1848. Must history always repeat itself or will the advice of Mr. Martino be taken?

Words are not enough!

Calling The Card

U.S. Getting Intellectual?- Nope, Says He

By JIM McINTIRE

In a speech this past week to the Associated Collegiate Press convention in Cleveland, Ohio, Mr. Carey McWilliams, editor of the magazine "Nation", spoke out on the role of the critical journal in American society, saying "Today there is a good reason to believe that the critical journal of opinion in America is finally coming into its own."

He added, "For one reason, people are becoming bored with the standardized, stereotyped treatment of the news and of opinion which they get in the newsstreeklies and in radio and television newscasts."

Now, Mr. McWilliams is undoubtedly better informed on the subject of the opinionated magazine than your humble correspondent, but one tends to feel that he has let his desire for profit overrule his sense of perspective when hearing words of this nature.

It would be ideal, we must admit, if a renaissance would come about in the minds of the American people, but it seems safe to point that the indications are few and far between when viewed from the magazine situation.

WE WERE NODDING in agreement with Mr. McWilliams while listening to his speech when the young man seated next to us leaned and whispered, "What is this 'Nation' magazine? I've never heard of it." This coming from a business manager of a large collegiate weekly, jarred the need to discuss the imminence of the revival of interest in critical opinion is not quite as outstanding as Mr. McWilliams would have us believe.

The learned gentleman proceeded to support his case by stating that magazines are usually breed a revolt against the passion for "give the babe-ish gratification" and "amusement" and the half tales told by Madison Avenue hucksters. Here seems that Mr. McWilliams is being a trifle naive in his analysis of human nature.

CERTAINLY BOREDOM is one of the major factors in any magazine's (theoretical) movement but one of the greatest motivations for action is the lack of it. Campus Needs Literary Mag

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing in regard to the creation of a literary magazine, "Encarde", proposed by Florida State students. It is obvious that an institution such as this requires such a periodical, and it is equally obvious that the campus humor magazine, Smoke Signals', while of some use which use, however, does not appear to to me, does not now, and cannot serve the purely literary purposes for which "Encarde" is designed.

In conclusion, I hope that you use the "Flambeau's" influence for the cause of pure art and literary excellence on the F S U. campus.

RESPECTFULLY YOURS,

Alfe, a long time I would say:
"I have forgotten you."
If you are displeased
"I am longing for you so much.
But I have forgotten you."
If you still blame me,
"I have forgotten you,
because I could not trust you."
Yesterday, today, I could never forget you.
Yes, . . . after a long time,
"I have forgotten you."

Texans Aye Zsa Zsa

By JIM SOLES

Zsa Zsa Gabor will make three public appearances at the University of Texas this week, and will appear as some 1700 university students voted they wanted to see her...in the $15,000 gown she wore at Las Vegas.

The dress, for those of you who haven't seen pictures reveals a remarkable amount of Miss Gabor's charms. When asked if she would wear the dress Zsa Zsa said, "Of course I will wear ze dress if ze university students want me to!"

"If ze campus has more male students than female," she continued, "zey will want me to!" The Daily Texan ran a ballot to decide whether she should wear the dress.

Evidently there are more males than females at the university

At Loyola University, New Orleans some interesting information has been gathered recently that will prove interesting as you watch people's reactions to your jokes.

It seems that your sense of humor tends to indicate how well-adjusted you are. The person who seldom finds anything amusing in joke, cartoons or everyday situations is likely to be maladjusted. According to sense of humor tests and intelligence tests, the theory that the better-than-average sense of humor goes hand-in-hand with higher intelligence was substantiated.

Prior to the election, the Young Republicans at a large Southern university had some 12,000 "I Like Ike" sunshades printed up to be distributed at an afternoon football game. It rained. They are now looking for a market for their product. Anyone interested should contact them at the U of T.

The University of Arizona Wildcat has an unusual lead to an editorial. It states "Come to the Glamorous University of Arizona! Play school of the Southwest!" Land of prettiest and fleet! Plenty of fun organized. The editorial goes on to tell the good party boys and girls too: for their poor attitude.

Later they mention that the main point is the attitude. They say that "It is reached the point where someone takes his studies seriously is considered a social outcast. It's a privilege to be mediocre! It's an honor to get by!"

They forget to mention that those students who have such an attitude seldom even get by to semesters.

A LETTER
Hits Movie Column

TO THE EDITOR:

To reach the exalted level of the movie critic must be a wonderful thing! Imagine that a person can, in only twenty-some years, develop knowledge of such a magnitude that he is able to offer the uninformed public the benefits of objective analysis in cases such as mine. Where my native intelligence is inadequate to enable me to know what is best for me, I refer to Mr. Alan Kass and his marvelous account in The Flambeau of Nov. 12.

Who can blame him for paying us his attention to the newly-opened Ritz Theatre. Certainly "I am a Camera" was "nothing big while Ivy while Ivy" and "National pluralists notwithstanding."

To a point, I was able to keep up with Mr. Kass, but things did get a little fuzzy. I suppose I am a typically uninitiated movie-goer, but was overheard to made to "War and Peace" when, in mentioning "Wages of Fear", he suggests that I attend three hours and twenty-eight minutes, I was not getting a whisper of the title.

According to Mr. Kass "The Unsuarded Moment" promises to be an eye-opener, as "from the previews and Esther Williams' llama' looks quite pleasing without her bathing suit!" I assume she appears in the nude.

I did think it a shame, however, that while he considered "Skin of our Teeth" to reveal "fine acting" it was the final speech play he ever walked out on. I thought it was fine acting, too, but nevertheless I forced myself to stay to the end.

The remainder of the article was devoted to a "glossary of useless information" which fleshes the reader the impression that 'Alan's Aisle" is in really some kind of "Burma Road." He can't spell Gimax last name, can't think of a better movie title than "Gone With The Wind" but defies us to name a more clever title than "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?" Above all, he is not surprised if more adults than kiddies go to the Saturday kiddie show.

Of course, for the sake of common current copy, there is a modicum of sense in what Mr. Kass even sustenia Presley for the Academy Award.

Suffice it to say that this humble reader is of the opinion that 'Alan's Aisle" "Al" Winchell leaves much to be desired.

RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED
DON SHOWERMAN
GEORGE FILLER

Seven Seniors In Final Home Game

Tribe Vs. L.A. Rams?

When Mississippi Southern's mammoths trot out on the field tomorrow, a few Seminole fans might get the idea that perhaps our Seminoles are up against the Los Angeles Rams or somebody similar.

A quick glance down the roster (particularly the age column) and a little digging reveals that the Southerners resemble a professional team in more than just size.

It seems that at least a few of the visitors are trying to break Barney Poole's old record. Poole you know was a big and who visited several institutions of higher learning trying to decide where he should spend his collegiate days.

In the long run, Poole ended up playing eight years of some type or other of intercollegiate football. There are several Southerners doing their best to break that mark.

One of those struggling for the honor of the man to win the most football for the most teams and spend the largest amount of time in school is a center-guard named Burnett Blackmon.

Blackmon played at least two years that we know of at Hines (Miss.) Jr. College—whara ha was a teammate and friend of Harry Massey, a Seminole graduate of a couple years back.

Then he spent a semester at Florida State, in the spring of 1954, playing as a matter of fact in the spring game with Miami that year.

However, he was a naughty boy at times and the Cops at Seminole U. decided they no longer needed his services

So, we are told ha trotted off to Tulsa for a year or so, and the naxt time wa hear of him, ha is a second string center at Mississippi Southern—now.

The best is yet to come. He is now listed as a "promising Sophomore prospect." How long can this guy keep playing football?

There are also nasty reports circulating hither and yon that one of Southern's monstrous tackles (he's 6-0, 234) P. W. Underwood, has been elsewhere to school.

We hear that he once attended Mississippi State for awhile, and considering his size, he surely played some football there.

We happened to mention the big Southern fullback, Bo Dickinson casually saying something to the effect that after all, he was only a Sophomore.

One of the Seminole coaches cracked at that point, "Yeah, but most of their Sophomores probably have at least or four years experience behind them."

So when head coach Tom Nugent says: "They have good depth, size, good team speed and plenty of experience—take that experience part seriously.

Why they're practically pros.

IT'S SOUTHERN

Switching to the game itself as the main source of comment, it isn't size alone that makes this Southern team one of the toughest that the Seminoles have faced.

Any team that reels off 14 straight wins has got something in that little bag, you can bet on it.

Should anybody doubt this, taka the instanca of Southarn's hatrla (7) with Chattanooga.

The same Chattanooga team which scored three touchdowns on Tennessee (the nation's number one team this week) failed to score against this same Mississippi Southern team.

As mentioned a couple of weeks ago, and it still holds true every time we pick the Seminoles to win they lose and each time we say they'll lose, they win.

So, if they go according to form they should win because we don't think they will.

MISSISSIPPI SOUTHERN 28 FLORIDA STATE 14

Can Tribe Upset Favored Southern?

By BOB WOLFENBARGER
Flambeau Sports Writer

Seven Florida State Seniors will play their last football game before the home folks tomorrow when the Seminoles meet unbeaten and untied Mississippi Southern at Doak S. Campbell Stadium at 2 p. m.

Center Bud Leonard of Ocala has been named game captain by Tribe coach Tom Nugent, as he is a former Mississippi high school student.

The seven who will play their final home game will be quarterback Lee Corso, halfback Buck Meiss, fullback Joe Heil, lineman Bud Leonard, quarterback Pete Tillis, halfback Billy Odom and guard Al Pacifico.

The Seminoles will undoubtedly face their biggest task of grant billing this season.

The Southerners, who are unbeaten and untied in 7 outings, sport a starting team which averages better than 200 pounds to the man.

However, the Seminoles may be minus the services of starting guard Lee Rassett and end Bob Fountain. Coach Tom Nugent said of Rassett, "Lee was still limping a little when practice started this week, and it looks doubtful that he'll be able to start."

The Seminoles, after disclosing a potent offense against Furman will undoubtedly launch a predominately air assault on the huge Southerners. Lee Corso and Left Halfback Billy Odom are expected to direct the Seminole attack.

Nugent was long in praise on the Southern team. "This football team surely ranks with the best in the Southeastern Conference area," says Nugent. "They have depth, size team speed and above all plenty of experience."

"We know we'll probably go into the game a two-touchdown underdog, but we believe we have an even chance to come out on top," the Seminole coach continued. "We think we're ready for one of our best games of the season."

The Southerners have more than an ample supply of beef where it counts—in the line. the heaviest is their tackles, Don Owens (240,6.4) and P. W. Underwood (234).

"Owens is a top-notch professional prospect if I've ever seen one and I understand he has already been drafted by one of the pro teams," Nugent said.

With Underwood and Owens in the starting line are Bob Clark (198) and Curry Owens (190) at the ends, Al Tingle (195) and Dave Fitzgerald (198) at the guards and 207-pounder Bill Martin at center.

The Southern backfield contains 6.5, 220 pound quarterback Bobby Hughes together with another 200-pounder Bo Dickinson in the fullback position.

The other backfield starters are relatively light—Dallas Whitfield (170) and J. C. Arban (180) at the halfbacks.

The probable starting lineups.

Miss. Southern		FSU
Clark (198)	LE	Senomby (192)
Owens (240)	LT	Mussett (215)
Fitzgerald (198)	LG	Elliott (190)
Martin (207)	C	Barnes (198)
Tingle (195)	RG	Pacifico (205)
Underwood (234)	RT	Boyer (225)
Juneau (205)	RE	Nelloms (205)
Hughes (220)	QB	Corso (180)
Arban (180)	LH	Renn (165)
Whitfield (170)	RH	Meiss (180)
Dickson (215)	FB	Holt (185)

With five touchdown passes, end Bob Nelloms is just one away from tying the all-time Seminole mark of six for a season, set by Tom Feamster in 1954. Nelloms, however, hasn't caught one in the last two games.

LAST PERFORMANCE. Bud Leonard, a 5-11, 192-pound Senior center from Ocala, will captain Florida State in his last performance before the home folks tomorrow when the Seminoles tackle Mississippi Southern.

Leonard Is FSU's All-Around Player

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Writer

All coaches agree that physical ability and the desire to play are the two main qualifications of a successful athlete.

Bud Leonard, a 22-year-old senior football player at Florida State University, has a quantity of each of the fore-mentioned attributes.

Proving this statement is the fact that Leonard has played four different positions in his four years of football at FSU. According to head coach Tom Nugent, Bud's desire to be in the game and his performances on the field convinced him that he should be somewhere in the lineup.

Bud came to the Seminole squad as an all-conference guard from high school. At this time the FSU team was well fortified at the guard position, but Nugent seeing Bud's desire to play amassed has earned him the distinction of being named the captain for the Mississippi Southern game tomorrow. This oughta to be quite a thrill for Bud because this will be the last home game of the season and his four years.

In a short evaluation of Leonard, Nugent said, "Bud deserves this honor of being captain for the last game of his college career; he has worked hard and has shown also his best effort for the ten n".

"Leonard is quick, agile, and has a lot of class" added coach Nugent, "besides being an outstanding linebacker he always does a consistant job on offense."

The consensial Leonard, who is well liked by his teammates is a physical education major and a member of ATO fraternity.

Intramural News

The Magnolia Ball team of Chandler and Fisher beat Mollay 12-0 Tuesday to win the intramural tennis doubles championship, 7-5, 6-4. Wednesday

In another dorm league match, Magnolia ousted Penthouse from the singles race by 6-2

The fraternity matches saw Jack Curtis, ATO, defeating Jerry Millard of PDT in straight sets 6-4, 6-2, DTD beat SC 6-1, 6-2, and in a doubles game the TEP's went down at the hands of LCA 6-4, 6-4.

Frank Bradbury of Magnolia eliminated Joe Quinn of the Pads 6-4, 6-2, while Bryan of SC put out Lem Hoover of KA 6-0, 7-5.

Jackie Overton of DTD won by default from LCA. Ed O'Connell and Ron Mellmon of the Pads beat Don Rutledge and Jim Braddock of Methodist, 6-1, 7-5.

Hal Dyer and James Davis of LCA eliminated Wade Frews and Ralph Atwell of SN, 6-2, 6-4.

Next Tuesday both the fraternity singles and doubles tournamal finals are booked for 3:30 on the varsity courts

TOUCH FOOTBALL

The intramural touch football leagues will begin on Monday Dec 3rd, according to Intramural Board action last week

All teams who hope to compete are required to have a representative present next Monday Nov 19 at 4 p. m. at MPE 212 at the Board meeting. At that time official entry cards and drawings for league positions will be made.

President Bill Renner will also report on the committee recommendations for playing rules for this year's championships. One of the main issues up for vote is on the question of using "leg" type play or the "flea tackle" type of play.

The remainder of the year's basketball schedule will also be furnished managers at Monday's meeting and the schedule for the playoffs

The basketball schedule for next week is

MONDAY
7:30—Co-Op vs. BSU and Magnolia vs. Senior Hill.
8:30—Pinehaven vs. Vets and Pennhouse vs. Lutherans
9:30—Methodists vs. Rebels and APO vs. Pads

TUESDAY
7:30—PPT vs. SAE and SN vs. TC
8:30—SPE vs. DTD and PKP vs. ATO
9:30—SC vs. PKA and KS vs. PDT.

Renn Leads Tribe In Rushing Statics

Sophomore halfback Bobby Renn of Henderson, N. C. moved farther in front in individual rushing as a result of the 119 yards he picked up in Florida State's 12-7 rout of Furman last week.

Despite missing one game entirely and playing only sparsely in one other, Renn has rolled up 451 yards in 74 carries for a 6.1 average thus far this season.

An oddity of the statistics recently released is that the Tribe has secured an equal number of touchdowns on the ground and in the air this season. They have 11 TD's via each route.

First ailing quarterback Lee Corso continues to range out in front in individual passing with 36 completions in 70 tries for 577 yards and five touchdowns

Head football coach Tom Nugent is expecting his wife, Pete to present him with their eighth child "just about birthday time for the Autumn game, November 24." This keeps Nugent far out in front in the obstetric department's "children derby."

Frosh Gridders, Miami's Baby Hurricanes Meet At Mt. Dora

Florida State's freshman football team will be gunning for win number three tomorrow night at Mt. Dora when they tackle the University of Miami's Baby Hurricanes in an all important game.

This contest might indicate not only how strong the frosh eleven is this year, but how strong the varsities of '58 and '59 will be.

Miami's frosh defeated Florida's freshmen squad earlier this year and if the Baby Tribe can get by Miami it may throw some light on how the varsity of '58 will do against Florida.

Freshman coach Paul Odom has made a few line-up chances for the Miami game. Paul Pasquale returns to the starting quarterback slot, replacing John Navelle who was injured in the last freshman game.

Don Hill also returns to the starting line-up Hill will open at right halfback replacing Fred Pickard. Louis Wallis is slated to start at left tackle for the Tribe

Outside of Navelle, who will still see plenty of action, the Baby Tribe is in top flight physical condition.

The Baby Hurricanes use the same offense as the varsity, the Miami drive and Miami defense is a big line to go with their fleet-footed backs.

An oddity about Miami's quarterback situation is that all three of their signal callers all throw from the left side

To be coach Paul Odom believes the game will be close and that the Tribe has a good chance to win.

Lecuona Competes For Cuban Team

Rafael Lecuona, outstanding side horse and parallel bar performer on the Florida State University gymnastics team, left Friday via air for Melbourne, Australia, and the 1956 Olympic games.

Lecuona is participating in the Olympics as a member of the Cuban team.

The 5-8, 128-pound Havana native was a member of the 1948 Cuban Olympic squad, and since coming to Florida State has been a key performer in the continued successes of FSU gymnastics teams.

He captained the Florida State team as a freshman in 1952, and was the main performer in FSU's upset win over the Swedish Olympic team in 1952.

Lecuona has captured several South American titles in his high bar and side horse specialties.

Seminole back Lee Corso was one of 47 halfbacks submitted to the Associated Press office in New York for all-American honors this year. Corso is currently of course a quarterback

STUDENT CRITIC SAYS

Ringling's Masterpieces Form Novel Gallery Display

By WALTER SARIC

If any student had been walking across Landis Green on Sunday afternoon, November 4, he would have heard chamber music floating like calm waves through the air.

And if the student had arrived like one of the children from the town of Hamlet he would have been led by these melodious tones to the second floor of the Seminole Club where he would have found, not one, but three Pied Pipers However each tune was playing upon a different instrument, one a violin, another a flute, and the third a piano.

These musicians were performers for the formal opening of the Art Gallery's third exhibition for this year. Masterpieces from Ringling Museum. The idea was quite ingenious and seemed to be quite successful in its purpose of getting a genuine atmosphere for the viewers.

Two high relief wood carvings of German Art are the first pieces of work seen by the admirers of the masterpieces. These reliefs were created in the 14th Century and then deal with religious matter. It is fascinating to inspect these works and see all the detail which the artist so painstakingly produced.

Practically all of the paintings in the exhibition have good perspective qualities. Some outstanding examples are as follows: "A Romantic Landscape," Hazar in the Wilderness." A Study for a Celina Decoration" and "The Dream of Joseph."

A few of the paintings possess good anatomic features of the human subject matter. Structures such as the weak line upper limbs the hands, and the facial features in personages are marvelously created by the artists. Two excellent examples of the above characteristics can be found in "The Dream of Joseph" and "St. Matthew Writing the Gospel."

One hundred thousand dollars is the amount for which Christ on the Cross" is insured. In this masterpiece, El Greco used his noted techniques in a religious scene. Technique number one is the elongation of the figures. However, he is not satisfied with just elongating them, but has also twisted the body out of shape to give it an even more cheaply feeling. Last of all, the artist has not forgotten to use his distinguished stormy sky.

Insured for half the sum of "Christ on the Cross" is the Florentine painting, "Madonna and the Child with the Magdeline." This work contains the most beautiful red pigment that one has ever seen and probably the most beautiful red that one will ever see in a painting or elsewhere. Another interesting feature about this work is the use of an architecture eye on the three figures. Also a sort of disturbing fact is that the Christ Child has a serious expression on his face instead of the "baby look" which most individuals are accustomed to seeing.

Andrea van Dyck's "St. Andrew the Apostle" is a very dynamic painting and contains the techniques of elongating and twisting the hands and fingers of the Saint. However, much of the beauty of this painting has been lost by what seems to be a poor restoration of its colors.

Other paintings in the gallery which are of interest, include: "A Stormy Sea," "Venice—The Piazza Within St. Mark's, "Portrait of a Cardinal," A Rive Scene," "The Martydom of Bishop Stein," and "The Sutters."

Although some of the works of art are not too good, most of the exhibit is an excellent selection and it should be very broadening to all on campus who get a chance to see it. This display from the Ringling Museum will be in the Art Gallery until December 2nd

ALAN'S AISLE

War, Peace' Meets Tolstoy's Challenge

By ALLAN KASS

Paramount's film extravaganze, "War and Peace" opened before a near-capacity audience Wednesday afternoon at the Florida Theatre indicating that the public is well aware of fine film fare.

This Leo Tolstoy-based movie comes as close to being the best picture of the year as anything since "Moby Dick". Director King Vidor made a fine condensation of the 600,000-word book into a neat three-hour-and-28-minute movie with drama, comedy, tragedy, spectacle and talent. The challenge was met, and the results are overwhelming.

The story is twofold, revolving around Napoleon's conquest and defeat at Borodino and the love of Natasha, who was the symbol of a free and peaceful world. Interwoven in these stories are many other stories dealing with the lives and customs of the people of eighteenth century Russia.

The screen is a thing of beauty. Visually, "War and Peace" could not be improved.

ACTING BIG FLAW

The big flaw in the production was the acting. Henry Fonda was definitely miscast as Pierre, the lover of life. Although "Mr. Robert" that is, Mr. Fonda, plays the part as well as he can, he just can't be made believable. When you hear his Kansas brogue, the illusion of Russia is gone.

Equally miscast is Barry Jones as Count Rosov, who sounds as if he is praising Queen Victoria of England rather than the Czar of Russia. The acting laurels have to be given to the husband and wife team of Mel Ferrer and Audrey Hepburn as the young lovers. I can't recall seeing a girl completely dominate every scene to the extent that Miss Hepburn does.

If possible, see the time table of the picture and go in at the beginning.

AROUND THE TOWN

Playing tonight for the last time is Howard Hawks' immortal "Sergeant York". This picture made no big an impression about World War I as "From Here To Eternity" did with World War II

COLLEGE STUDENTS SAID TOO SMART

SOUTH BEND, Ind. —(UP)— Some college students are too smart and efficient for their own good, according to Edward R. Quinn, head of the department of testing and guidance at the University of Notre Dame. Students with superior mentalities sometimes become frustrated in choosing a college course and career, Quinn says, "because of their intense interest and outstanding aptitude in several fields of learning."

Tailoring Tricks Add Fun To Fashions—Try These

By MARGARET McLEAN

Here goes with some fun ideas for "collegiate" fashion. Try one, try two, or try them all—the real point is to have fun.

There can be more to clothes than covering the body. This is only a starter. Think up some wild ones using these as the boost.

1. Over a bright striped T-shirt wear a "man-tailored shirt"; leave it unbuttoned to the waist, roll up the sleeves to elbow length, tuck the shirt tail up in the back and tie it into a tight knot in the front; add a belt.

LEAVE NECKLINE

2. Leave the neckline of a silk shirt (silk shirts are it, this year, so says Vogue) open to the third button and fill in the space with lots of crystal rope beads.

3 Next summer here's something to do to the horrible levis. Cut a long narrow slash down the outside leg seen and make it wide enough that the edges rick-rack or ball fringe.

4. Bead or trim a pair of sandals, espadrilles, pumps, embroider at spaghetti straps, monogram a sweater with metallic thread, or better yet hand stitch braid or cotton lace in vertical bands along the opening of a sweater (i.e., the buttoning opening).

5. Try wearing the dyed to match shirts and colored long stockings that Haymaker is promoting now. The bare stockings are intended to be worn under Bermuda shorts, but the main fun idea is to wear them with a matching skirt and maybe matching shoes too. The stockings are made just like a bread and fit from toe to waist because they are stretch-nylon.

STOCKINGS NEWS

6. Colored stockings of the sheer variety are in this year and they look wonderful in any shade provided they match the whole ensemble. Lace stockings look best with tweedy tailored clothes—they are semi-sheer and usually cable knitted.

7. Make a long street-length shirt-waist dress of chiffon, satin, silk organza, or brocade and wear it as a formal. Wear a full length wool fullish skirt that can also be done with 72 inch wide wool felt. It is also interesting to applique, embroider, or stitch on trim like flight designs.

MAKE SKIRT

8. Make a circle skirt out of a wool blanket in solid, stripes, or pattern. Hemming isn't necessary and nothing could be easier. The skirt won't have any seams, so the only necessary stitching is for the zipper and for the waistband. The very same thing can also be done with 72 inch wide wool felt. It is also interesting to applique, embroider, or stitch on trim like flight designs.

A GUIDE FOR THE UNMONEYED

R. L. Sigafoos was a keen, ambitious lad, and when he finished high school he wished mightily to go on with his education. It seemed, however, a forlorn hope. Crop failures had brought his father to the brink of disaster. (R. L.'s father raised date palms which, in North Dakota, is a form of agriculture fraught with risk.) Nor could R. L.'s mother help; she had grown torpid since the death of Rudolph Valentino.

R. L. could go to college only if he worked his way through. This was a prospect that dismayed him.

... while actresses dreaming In the front of theatres ...

Racked with misgivings, R. L. paced the streets, pondering his dilemma. One day, walking and brooding, he came upon a park bench and sat down and lit a Philip Morris. There is no occasion, happy or sad, pensive or exuberant, when Philip Morris is not entirely welcome, as you will discover when you go to your favorite tobacco counter and buy some.

R. L. was suddenly interrupted by a small, quavering voice which said, "My boy, you are troubled. Can I help?"

Seated beside R. L. was a tiny, gnarled man with wispy, snow-white hair. His skin was almost transparent, showing a delicate tracery of fragile bones beneath. His back was bent, and his hands trembled. "Do you think, sir," said R. L., "that a boy can work his way through college and still enjoy a rich, full campus life?"

"Why, bless you, son," replied the stranger with a rheumy chuckle, "of course. In fact, I did it myself."

"Was it very hard?" asked R. L.

"Yes, it was hard," the stranger admitted. "But when one is young, all things are possible. I, for example, used to get up at five o'clock every morning to stoke the furnace at the SAE house. At six I had to milk the cows at the school of animal husbandry. At seven I gave a fencing lesson to the Dean of Women. At eight I had a class in early Runic poets. At nine I gave haircuts at the Gamma Phi Beta house. At ten I had differential calculus. At eleven I posed for a life class. At twelve I watered soup at the Union. At one I had a class in Oriental languages. At two I exercised the mice in psych lab. At three I gave the Dean of Women another fencing lesson. At four I had qualitative analysis. At five I went clamming. At six I cut meat for the football team. At seven I inhaled at the morgue. At eight I had my ears pierced so that at nine I could tell fortunes in a gypsy tea room. At ten I had a class in astronomy. At eleven I tucked in the football team. At twelve I studied and at three I went to sleep."

"Sir," cried R. L., "I am moved and inspired by your shining example!"

"It was nothing," said the stranger modestly, shaking his frail white head. "It was just hard work, and hard work never hurt anybody."

"Would you mind telling me, sir," said R. L., "how old you are now?"

"Twenty-two," said the stranger.

Beverly Laurent Shortest In Contest

Orange Princess Already Busy

Size short was no handicap in the year's Orange Bowl Queen contest, at least not for FSU's Beverly Laurent. "I was the shortest girl in the contest," says the 5-foot, 3-inch, Junior from Barlow, Florida one of four princesses chosen among 26 finalists. Beverly is already having to find time for the many Orange Bowl activities. She was flown to Miami Wednesday night immediately after a Gym-Jam, showing for a fitting of the Junior Bowl gowns and official costumes. She had to be back Saturday for another Gymkana performance.

The Queen and the princesses will play a major role in the 1957 Junior Bowl activities: the official presentation of the court, Christmas week festivities, the nationally-televised Orange Bowl parade and game on New Year's day, the horse races and bowl revues.

Besides the fun of the eight-day event, the Queen and princesses will benefit materially. They'll receive as gifts all the formals, costumes, suits and dresses designed for them by nationally-known designers.

Beverly as a member of the 1956 Gymkana court, her second time as has been in the court of the Alpha Signals Quiero Cruisel, Kappa Chi Derby, the Interfraternity Council dance, the Military Ball, and to the Tally-Ho beauty section.

FSU'S BEVERLY LAURENT CHOSEN PRINCESS
One Of Four To Reign At Orange Bowl Festivities

*party scene

by MICKEY COLE

This week will undoubtedly go down as one of the peaks in social activity this year. Campus Chest is in full swing, the pre-Thanksgiving festivities are beginning and the usual round of before the-after-the-game parties are scheduled. It's also the week of Dr. Campbell's birthday party and Gymkana.

Sigma Kappa's annual Variety Show was last night; Zeta Tau Alpha's cake walk was Wednesday night, Alpha Gamma Delta and Phi Delta Theta are sponsoring the second annual Soap Box Derby this afternoon, and the newest idea in "Ugly" contests is well under way according to Alpha Phi Omega.

The Senior Class and their dates will honor Dr. Campbell on his birthday tonight at the Campbell home. The semi-formal party is especially important as it is the last time Dr. Campbell will celebrate his birthday as President of FSU. Paul Ort President of the Senior Class will present him with a birthday cake.

Gymkana is its usual success but this time in a new setting. The production has moved from the old Women's Gym to the newer, larger Men's Gym which has been moved to dockside in Honolulu. Tomorrow is the last night.

Gamma Phi Beta celebrated the anniversary of its founding 82 years ago with a buffet supper for the chapter members and local alumni this week. The chapter house was the scene of an informal party Tuesday night when Gamma Phi Beta played hostess to Delta Tau Delta. As their contribution to Campus Chest the members are invading some of the Fraternity houses and giving them a thorough cleaning. Phi Kappa Tau was the first to be scrubbed with Sigma Nu and Kappa Sigma the next on the list.

Phi Kappa Tau took time out from its house remodeling for a little pleasure when the pledge class gave a hay-ride and a weiner roast.

Kappa Delta was hostess to its former faculty advisor this week. She is now serving as a National Counselor. Kappa Delta was also busy this week with its Campus Chest project, a spaghetti supper.

The theme for the Alpha Xi Delta-Delta Tau Delta party Wednesday was a night club with all the trimmings, including a floor show, party games and refreshments.

Delta Gamma entertained Kappa Alpha before an open fire Wednesday night in typical Hill Billy style. Singing, dancing and games all followed the mountain theme. Delta Gamma used the occasion to show its newest addition to the trophy case, the trophy for the attendance for Dads' Day.

After-the-game parties are on slate for Kappa Alpha and Theta Chi Saturday night. The Theta Chi house is still talking about the two parties it had last week and what a good job the pledges did turning the house into a French nightclub. This week the house was transported from France to Hollywood for a "movie" party with Sigma Kappa.

The "Lone Ranger" was an honored guest for the Sigma Nu-Kappa Alpha Theta Western party Wednesday night.

COLUMBIA MOVES TO STOP CHEATING

NEW YORK N.Y.—(I.P.)—Columbia's Student Board has given its support to the eventual establishment of an honor system in the hope of curtailing the strong competition for marks which is believed to be the cause of much of the cheating on exams. The board admitted, however, that an indoctrination period of several years would be necessary before the program could be put into full force.

Counseling Set Dec. 3-20

Students must arrange second semester class schedules with their faculty counselors between December 3 and 20, Dr. Melvene Rinker coordinator of counseling announced yesterday.

Registration will be from January 9 to 22. In order to sign for classes students must present their final schedules with approved courses indicated and signed by the counselors.

Dr. Rinker said students unsure of the names or office locations of their counselors should see the office 7-5321 or 7-5331, in the Westcott Building.

300 Listed As Junior English Exam Evaders

Three hundred students may be hindered in registering for classes next semester unless they have their names removed by next Wednesday from the Junior English Examination delinquent list.

Miss Martha G. Chapman, director of the Junior English program and secretary, said that possibly half the number may have valid excuses or were placed on the delinquent list by error.

The university requires passage of the examination before graduation. Those who do not take the exam twice when they are first eligible in second semester sophomore or at succeeding make-up examinations are considered delinquent and must pay a fine of $5.

Miss Chapman said the list is posted on a bulletin board on the main floor south wing of the Home Building.

Those who may be taken from the list without having to pay a fine included veterans who took the examination under their old testing system, especially those who are not required to take it. Those who missed it because of illness or unavoidable accident, and those who may be incorrectly listed, also were exempted.

"It is only those students who have official excuses for their absence that will be given this privilege," Miss Chapman said.

Prof Defends Fraternities

ACP—A New York University Professor, Richard Mallery, recently defended fraternities during a speech before a YMCA in that city. Approval was requested to write them off. Hemann and Dr. Reid Montgomery faculty advisor for

"If there are other things that are wrong with fraternities, let's correct them. Don't destroy them. Fraternities are the basis of democracy in the United States and serious consideration should be given to them during the past century in the history of American education."

The Professor went on to say that the congenial environment found in fraternities is of great importance. He also added that "evidence on campus should be a base requisite for college life."

Professor Mallery emphasized the fact that although a limited number of students live and work together in a fraternity house for differences of opinion, high standards of taste, and good conduct are developed. He also declared that by Democratic self government in the chapter house "fraternity men become better fitted to assume the major responsibilities of the student council and other college organizations."

Mallery told the YMCA audience that a limit should be placed on the number of members in a chapter. "If there are over thirty," he warned, "the chapter will be headed for trouble."

A questioner asked the professor if fraternities are the major cause of bias groups. In reply he said that "students in fraternities should be allowed to rank their own friends."

Publications Board Supports 'Signals'

Resolves Humor Magazine Publish One Literary Issue

By NANCY GENE BROWN

Plans for the publication of en garde, a proposed literary magazine, were discarded at Tuesday's meeting of the Board of Publications.

The decision followed prolonged discussion for and against the literary publication. Representing Smoke Signals, which favored devoting one of its issues exclusively to literary material, was Editor Marcella Trunzo.

While recognizing the need for a literary production in the future, he explained a strong opinion that a separate literary magazine this year would result in duplication of material and would cause advertising and other financial difficulties due to the fact that the Board of Publications has no official way of appropriating funds for the proposed en garde.

HITS QUALITY

David Ward Strohmaier, heading the en garde faction declared there would be no duplication of material submitted to en garde for publication, since most of their contributors would be unwilling to write for Smoke Signals, a humor magazine. He said that he already had over fifty pieces of material that is said to be used in Smoke Signals.

Also, he charged, there are personality conflicts that would make the combining of the Smoke Signals and en garde editorships difficult, if not impossible.

However, Trunzi said he could foresee no friction between the staffs and said that Smoke Signals would offer a fine opportunity to issue to en garde, to use in the way they want to.

Bonny Meyer and Ann Anderson, also a member of the special committee to study the problem said: "If funds are available, one experimental issue of the literary type this year would be beneficial."

QUESTIONS POLL

He proposed a poll be taken to find opinions on the feasibility and desirability of the publication of an en garde in the future. Also, that other universities of FSU's size are able to support both humor and literary magazines.

Another investigating committee member, Jim Whitfield proposed publication of en garde this year, while agreeing with Anderson that eventually the FSU campus should have both types of publications.

Dr. Elston Roudy, a faculty member of the board, in presenting a proposal said that the controversy also: "Continuation of this discussion will prolong only heat, not light."

His resolution seconded by Dr. Richard Seibert, and other faculty member continued the Board's recommendation that one future issue of the Smoke Signals be devoted exclusively to literary material with a literary format that is widely published through the Florida Collegiate Action WFSU-FM, and bull-tin boards so that potential contributors of literary material, poems, high key photographs, and art work will be aware that a literary issue is forthcoming.

The resolution, which will apply only to the academic year 1956-57, was passed unanimously.

BAD ACCOUNTS

Also taken up during the business session of the board was the writing off of bad accounts owed to Talls-Ho. According to Roy Hemann, Tally Ho business manager, there are several accounts which have been ruling two or three years, with no success in efforts to collect them. Approval was requested to write them off. Hemann and Dr. Reid Montgomery faculty advisor for LINDA JONES—Crowned as "Miss Gymkana" Friday night, the 18-year-old Education major, she was chosen from among 158 entrants. She wears an Alaskan costume she designed as part of the 1956 Gymkana ceremonies. Runners-up in the contest were Myra Ann Lay, Carol Ann Brown, Jan Hinton, Ann Kilpatrick, Beverly Laurent and Vangie Carruthers. Miss Jones was 5'5" in Kay Sigma Queen" last year and a member of the 1956-57 Homecoming Court.

Pow Wow Post Applications Set

Applications for the position of editor of the 1957 Pow Wow will be accepted by the Board of Student Publications starting next Monday, announced Don Reid, board chairman.

Those desiring the position on the student information handbook will be given three weeks to file. Applications should be turned in to Dr. Reid Montgomery advisor to student publications in the Longmire student lounge by December 14.

Qualifications for the position include an overall 2.3 scholastic average or achievement of this average in the semester preceding application, and two full semesters experience in a responsible position on a student publication.

Chairman Heidel said applications will also be considered from students who do not strictly meet the two semester publication requirement because the Pow Wow editorship is a relatively senior position compared to other student editorships.

The Board will interview all qualified applicants at a regular meeting. The Pow Wow editorship is a paid position with a $50 annual salary.

student publications were questioned by the board concerning bookkeeping and auditing methods.

In refusing to recommend writing off of the bad accounts at this time, the board unanimously passed a motion to require written evidence of the non-collectability of the bills before they are written off. Also it was pointed out that according to the Constitution, publications business managers are required to present monthly reports to the Board of Publications.

In the last action of the day, a motion to put the Talls-Ho assistant business manager on the FSU payroll was passed unanimously.

52 Men Delinquent In ROTC Program

Talks Slated For AWOLs

By JIM McINTYRE

Fifty-two sophomore and freshman men are unaccounted for in the ROTC program this semester, according to Dean Charles Davis, military co-ordinator for the University.

According to academic regulations, begun in 1954 all male students who are under 22 years of age and are not veterans are required to enroll in the ROTC basic program. Requirements include successful participation in the programs for four semesters.

An initial list of all sophomore and freshman men not in the program was prepared by the military personnel on campus approximately one week ago. Steps were taken through the office of the Dean of Men this past week to eliminate from the list those who, because of age or past military service, should not be following the same regulation. This final elimination reduced the list to approximately 52 men not enrolled in the program who should be, Davis said.

Steps are being initiated today to obtain the dates of the AWOL's in the College of Arts and Sciences to interview each man on the list and account for his failure to enroll.

Dean Davis urged all male students who do not like their status in regard to the military requirement to check through the offices of the Army or Air Force ROTC units, located adjacent to the Administration Building.

'STICKS' STEINBERG VIEWS PEP

Southern Game Tops For Head Cheerman

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

To head cheerleader Maurice "Sticks" Steinberg, Saturday's game with Mississippi Southern was a strange but rewarding experience.

The senior veteran found himself with a crowd that was attentive and enthusiastic. And that was like eating steak after a bread-and-water diet.

During the last few minutes of play, when Southern was driving for its last va touchdown, Steinberg and the cheerleaders had to quit; the fans so that the Southern quarterback could make his agonizing heave.

"That, incidentally, was a legitimate request as far as the coaches were concerned," Steinberg said. "They were genuinely worried the Seminoles would be penalized."

He was, however, "very, very happy" when he popped-up cheering from the stands.

"This was my last ball game. It was a good one to go out on."

said Steinberg, who is the only graduating cheerleader.

He said the Southern game was "one of the most exciting in four years and the most fun from the standpoint of the hard-working and usually ignored cheerleaders.

"Everybody knew darn well we would win the game," he realized.

By contrast, the Furman game a week earlier seemed to Steinberg to be the worst. From a cheerleader's point of view, in four years. Fans don't get very excited over a one-sided game however.

Despite Saturday's vociferous tribute, the student body still has according to the graduating cheerleader, "a long way to go" before it can think seriously of even showing the amount of spirit we have."

Education Vital To Florida Collins Tells State Chamber

Governor LeRoy Collins last Tuesday told members of the Florida State Chamber of Commerce that education is a larger role in the future of Florida.

Here is a partial text of his remarks made before the Annual Banquet of that group in Jacksonville:

In our promotional efforts over the nation to bring to our State new businesses, I have been impressed by the lack of consideration which most exist between university programs and the planning of business expansions. And business must look to the Universities for their training and preparation.

I can never be satisfied until Florida's universities are the best, because by making them the best, we can in a large measure insure the excellence of all our other standards.

Someone has said "I'd rather my child be educated by a professor in Dry Tortugas than oak tree than by a poor teacher in a marble palace." How true. To have our Universities excel we must bring to them and retain in them, teachers who excel. There is no easy or cheap way to do this.

With college enrollments beginning to grow at a rapidly increasing rate—as the so-called "war babies" start to enter college—the competition for the best professors will become correspondingly more keen.

Only those universities which offer special attractions will have a real future in the competition.

A study of last year showed that full professors in 18 comparable State Universities receive salaries about 25 per cent greater than those received at the University of Florida at Florida State University.

(Governor Collins gave examples of Florida college instructors who had quit their jobs because of higher pay elsewhere).

These are all people in hurt our school system to lose, not only for the loss of their individual talents but for that small measure of prestige that left our universities with each of them. And most of them were people who would have preferred to continue in our own universities but who felt obligated out of respect to the needs of their families to leave.

I recently asked one of our college teachers what it was that made a university attractive to truly gifted individuals—people of the sort who elevate the whole tone of a State, and incidentally—people who can serve the needs of industry both directly and indirectly.

Basically he said, it lies in a respect for the research he genuinely respected. One indication research be genuinely respected. One indication that a university is truly an institution of learning for him was that time for research and study should be great enough to avoid the danger of stagnation and to permit continued intellectual growth. That is, of course, an internal problem to which our university administration must always be sensitive.

The second factor he mentioned was salary, a problem primarily for the Legislature. On this score, the chief responsibility of the business men alone with our citizens is to help mold favorable public opinion when the Legislature moves in that direction.

Third, he mentioned the necessity for good students, standards that cannot help but exist to stimulate students to real creative thinking rather than spend their time corrective spelling.

Florida universities cannot expect to keep their outstanding scholars or to attract others who are recognized as leaders in their fields without some bold and imaginative program toward that end. I want us to make Florida an intellectual center, a place of learning and scholarship, no less than the nation's favorite vacation land and a growing center of business.

URA Plans Canoe Trip

The University Recreation Association will sponsor a canoe trip on the Ochlockney River (Georgia), December 1, according to Celeste Webb, URA spokesman.

Canoers will leave in buses from the women's gymnasium at 8 a.m. and will return at 6 p.m. A registration fee of 50 cents will be charged. Lunches will not be provided.

Miss Webb said interested students should sign up in 202 women's gymnasium before 5 p.m. next Thursday. Restraints must be made to the gym pool at 8:30 the next night for canoe tests and further information about the trip.

5 Applicants Hurdle First Fulbright Test

Five students have passed the first level toward winning Fulbright scholarships for study abroad next year.

Ryan Edwards, Jim Staples, David Ward-Strohmaier, E. Lorron Ilsley, Jr. and Hildegard Wagner were recommended recently by the university Fulbright committee to whom they first applied.

Dr. Albert Leduc, chairman of the committee, said their applications must now be approved by state and national authorities and by the countries where they hope to study.

Edwards and Ward-Strohmaier, both senior music majors want to study music in France. Staples, a graduate music student, has applied for a Fulbright in Italy.

Knox, a senior language major, intends to study in France. Miss Wagner, who is a doctoral student in literature, wants a Fulbright to Germany.

Dr. Leduc said Florida State University has two graduate university abroad under Fulbright sponsorship. They are Franklin Adams, studying art in France, and James Chatham, studying in Spain

Fulbright scholarships provide for all fees, expenses and travel for an academic year abroad.

Collins' Business Aid Idea Could Benefit University

G[illegible] Collins' appeal for more [illegible] for the state university [illegible] with interest [illegible] and administration.

In a [illegible] before the Florida State C[illegible] at its annual banquet a week ago in Jacksonville, Collins remarked that [illegible] should assist the universities for its own interest, if not in the interests of the community as a whole.

Such support—and he outlined specific means whereby business could support the universities—could mean a lot to the pr[illegible] of Florida State University as well as the other state universities.

Budget administrators with the state Legislature are very strict with their allocations for higher education, as well [illegible] be. They have been generous with [illegible] amounts, but have not met the need. Yet there is only [illegible] much money to go around.

This dilemma could [illegible] solved in part through increased [illegible] from other sources. Governor Collins has shown he realized the importance of such diversified assistance for higher education.

Florida needs education. Along with other states of the South, it has shown itself to be, in general, not up to the intellectual level of many other parts of the country.

In his speech, Governor Collins cited an example of a college professor who outlined to him his definition of the quality Florida seeks in higher education. "Basically, he said, it lies in a respect for the academic life, which requires that teaching and research be genuinely respected," Collins quoted him. "One indication that a University is truly an institution of higher learning for him was that time for research and study should be great enough to avoid the danger of stagnation and to permit continued intellectual growth."

Florida is fortunate to have a Governor who places so high an esteem on educational progress. We hope that members of the Chambers of Commerce find themselves in a position to respond to his remarks.

Is It Wrong To Be An American In Jefferson County, Florida?

Recklessly he declared, "I cannot and I will not sacrifice my own integrity and self respect on the altar of economic security."

So it seems the Jefferson commissioners have taken him at his word.

Browning has said, "If it's wrong for me to express my opinion publicly then it's wrong to be an American."

There is no true American who can read of the reign of bigotry, superstition and [illegible] in Jefferson County without a feeling of outrage. Freedom is far more than the right to speak and say what the majority believe. Freedom demands the defense of the persecuted. Browning has fulfilled his obligation to the American Way of Life which his own persecutors seek to destroy.

Combined Concert Good In Spots

The F[illegible] the combined forces of the U[illegible] Choral Union and University Symphony was in many respects [illegible] first time to our knowledge at [illegible] Westcott that these groups have performed together and it was [illegible] that [illegible] Vaughan Williams Mass and Gustav Holst Hymn had ever been performed on campus.

[illegible] Vaughan Williams Mass in G Minor [illegible] the program and it was performed [illegible] accompaniment. Th[illegible] seemed to [illegible] a weak work deficient in cont[illegible] and dependent upon ob[illegible] effect.

[illegible] combined chorus was not completely sat[illegible]. Attacks were sloppy, intonation fa[illegible] in[illegible]. B[illegible] at times the [illegible] good and [illegible] moments of ge[illegible] excitement. Wh[illegible] mostly [illegible] feeling of e[illegible] enthusiasm f[illegible]. In a[illegible] did not e[illegible] of t[illegible] words it [illegible]

The [illegible] Hymn to Jesus, for double ch[illegible] and orchestra comprised th[illegible] the program. Many of the d[illegible] on the obvious side but th[illegible] and imaginative use of [illegible] heightened interest and kept the piece from dragging.

Apparently the stimulus of the orchestra was beneficial to the choruses, for they sang with much more spirit and intensity.

Robert Sedore conducted the combined groups in the Holst. Herman Gunter conducted the Vaughan Williams Mass and prepared both choruses.

More out of curiosity than anything else, we dropped in on the Tallahassee Junior Chorus concert Wednesday night and to our surprise wound up staying for the entire program. These kids, with their untrained voices and limited techniques, have something that none of the choral groups on campus have. And that is an obvious and refreshing enthusiasm for the music they sing and an evident love for the pure joy itself of singing.

In addition their entire program was performed from memory, and they had been working on it no longer than any of the FSU groups before presenting a concert. The Women's Glee Club is the only choral group on campus (among four) that regularly memorizes its programs. The fact that the singers don't have their noses buried in music adds immeasurably to the rapport with both audience and conductor, not to mention the obvious showmanship value.

But one can only wish that our blase, ultra-sophisticated college choristers had one-tenth the energy and obvious joie de vivre that Lois Schnoor's Junior Chorus kids have. Music is a living thing. It cannot be properly recreated without living people.

States Have Responsibilities, Not 'Rights'

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

It's amusing how many people—legislators, congressmen, and newspaper editorial writers—have developed a purely academic interest in "states' rights" of late.

Their pronouncements all go like this: "Segregation has nothing to do with it. It's just that too much power in Washington is a dangerous thing."

It is quite possible to hold an academic discussion on the nature of power in a federal system of government. Such a topic would concern wether the centralized government of many persons can remain democratic and efficient. It would involve equality or representation. It conceivably has well-briefed advocates on both sides.

It's never heard.

FOR SOME reason, the m[illegible]tude of governmental scholars never concern themselves with "states' rights" unless their prejudices and pocketbooks are in danger.

Federal aid to schools, for roads, and to agriculture is wonderful—but let the Federal government attach a few reasonable restrictions and — ye gods!—the Constitution is suddenly in peril.

For instance, for many years no one cared who controlled the few miles off our coasts [illegible] o[illegible] was discovered under those shallow sea beds. The states affected, notably Texas, Louisiana, and California, claimed possession, which the Supreme Court denied. So pressure was brought [illegible] Congress to give the so-called "tidelands" to the states.

LARGE OIL companies produced their share of [illegible] experts on states' rights. I was then "public service" to elaborate on states' rights.

I prefer to [illegible] of states' responsibilities instead of states' rights.

[illegible] of states' [illegible] to rely on Thomas Jefferson who opposed a strong central government. They neglect his basic premise, that the states could best guarantee individual liberty. Jefferson had been acquainted with the centralized power of Britain.

BUT TIME has shown that the Federal Government rather than the several states, has been the greatest defender of individual liberty. Furthermore it has grown into an industrial colossus Jefferson never foresaw. His personal ideal and his prophecy for the nation was a country mainly agricultural.

The influences upon the federal government to act in the best interest of all are many. Most significant is the fact that all minority groups, all economic interests, and all other concerns are directly or indirectly represented. Washington houses a government representative of everyone. This could not be said of Mississippi's government.

THE STATES' righters are fighting a lost and foolish cause. State government is not sufficiently big enough to meet the pressing demands of the nation, not broad enough to deal in matters of social and economic concern which have their effects overseas such as segregation, which makes us enemies in Asia and Africa, nor great enough to resist the demands of a few interests.

It is because it is so self-limited that most of the states' rights faction idolizes it.

Hungary Stand Is 'Emotionalism'

TO THE EDITOR

Re your editorial of November 16, concerning United States policy toward Hungary.

1. Just what promises has the United States made either the rebel government or the [illegible] government of Hungary?

[illegible] you propose "to [illegible] the source of part of Russia's power." What can [illegible] Russia's God-less [illegible] except more of [illegible] from the [illegible] of [illegible].

[illegible] opinion that Russia [illegible] war based on [illegible] foundations of the Communist [illegible] own writings or the speeches of the B-K Circus?

4. Finally how would you d[illegible] such as an [illegible] or one bottle of iodine to revive [illegible] of the Hungarian [illegible] when the Hungarian [illegible] used six days to allow [illegible] from [illegible] W[illegible] to enter their country?

Your [illegible] as a global po[illegible] analyst appear to be based on an unflatteringly ignorant emotionalism.

MR. ROBERT E. HOWEY
Instructor
School of Music

Our unflatteringly ignorant emotionalism works like this:

(1) The United States has followed (vocally) for years a policy of encouraging Communist-dominated countries to become independent. We have financed tremendous publicity campaigns aimed at making enslaved peoples cognizant of the worth of the United States. The Voice of America, United States Information Service, and even "freedom balloons" have been means toward publicizing this country.

Additionally, politicians and officials of the United States have made it a mark of righteousness to criticize Russia for its imperialism. To cite just one clear example, President Eisenhower said on August 23 in his speech accepting re-nomination by the Republican Party—"the ports of long-range principle, not short-term expediency"—that collective security is "an imperative of peace."

He said "The heart of the collective security principle is the idea of helping other nations realize their own potentialities—political, economic and military. The strength of the free world lies not in cementing the free nations into a second monolithic mass to compete with that of the Communists. It lies rather in the unity that comes of the voluntary association of nations which, however diverse, are developing their own capacities and asserting their own national destinies . . . .

"There can be no enduring peace for any nation while other nations suffer privation, oppression and a sense of injustice. . . .

"We must actively try to bridge the great chasm that separates us from the peoples under Communist rule."

Hungary voluntarily asserted its right to develop its own capacity, but the United States' long-range principle of actively assisting seems to have meant long-range principle only so far as it doesn't interfere with short-term expediency. Mr. Eisenhower's practice of non-intervention is delicately to the short-term good since it will keep our youth at home rather than in military action. But in light of the United States' similar policy prior to World War I and II, with its consequent repercussions, the long-term advantage of non-intervention is questionable.

(2) Our proposal to "cut off the source of part of Russia's power"—in other words, to help its satellites achieve independence—is precisely to apply a little "barbaric might" of our own.

(3) Said policy, in our opinion, would not lead to war since the B-K regime realizes the horrors of nuclear holocaust. We believe anyone who thinks Russia wants outright warfare, with all that it entails is underestimating their intelligence.

So much faith have the Russians in their ideology of the eventual triumph of socialism over capitalism that they think short-term gains can be foregone in the knowledge of eventual triumph. Thus the loss of Hungary would not be viewed as so disastrous that war would be the only alternative.

(4) Food, clothes and medical supplies are now flowing into Hungary. Mr. Eisenhower has asked for pledges of these things, plus financial assistance, employment opportunities and housing for refugees who are anticipated in this country due to emergency immigration measures.

In conclusion, we should like to ask of the more learned global political analysts on this campus, who disagree with us that the United States should have intervened with military force in the early days of the Hungarian rebellion, these questions:

1. How long can the United States hold its world esteem when it does not practice what it preaches?

2. Is methodical consideration of power, and actions based on that consideration, describable as ignorant emotionalism? Or can moralistic statements of "non-intervention" be so described.

Wants Men Who 'Say Something'

TO THE EDITOR

Another building has just been dedicated at FSU. It must be the fifth or sixth of these grandiose projects that have been built, dedicated and occupied since I've been here. In addition we are told many more buildings are on the way. However buildings do not make universities.

In athletics, football is being rapidly built into a monster machine. Along with this, no expense seems to be spared the trappings that go with Saturday afternoon spectacles. It is colorful, beautiful, eye-pleasing, soothing, popular. It is grandeur. Why even the less grandiose projects are born and nurtured. The university now permits students to have their own artist series committee. Apparently the other artist series group wasn't bringing enough commercial entertainment to FSU. However, athletics and commercial entertainment do not make universities.

What does make universities is the bringing together of minds and stimulating intellectual activity. FSU leaves much to be desired along this line. There are even those who suspect that the university doesn't do this because some elements in the administration don't care to have unpopular or unfamiliar opinions aired too much on this campus.

One way to help this seeming one-sidedness would be to bring to FSU others of the sort of Henry Steel Commager or D. F. Fleming who [illegible] something to say. There [illegible] been very few speakers of [illegible] sort brought to FSU in r[illegible] years. Some students feel [illegible] university needs to place [illegible] more emphasis along intel[illegible]tual lines as well as other things.

It is at times more considered conducive [illegible] work that I must ma[illegible] to produce anything. [illegible] at these times my wo[illegible]ly even worse than ord[illegible].

Now happens to be just such a time. I am feeling happier than at any time recently for various reasons, and thus must content myself (and any readers HA!) with a collection of the [illegible] flam that pass through [illegible] leged mind.

I have just returned [illegible] little excursion to Aub[illegible] where the FSU debate t[illegible] engaged in the Southe[illegible] Tournament for this [illegible] always striking when I [illegible] other campus to comp[illegible] layout with ours, in [illegible] Auburn the compa[illegible] heartening indeed. T[illegible] found a university of o[illegible] students (considera[illegible] than our institution b[illegible] in some things we [illegible] come to take for grant[illegible].

FOR ONE THING I [illegible]gated a rumor that K[illegible] gone up north to Ala[illegible] found that this was no[illegible]. Secondly they lack the advantage of an FSU [illegible]dent Center and I d[illegible] a single person "bopp[illegible]" my stay. A much m[illegible] problem common to [illegible]puses I have visited was the absence of coeds [illegible] to say this was exh[illegible] the females in our en[illegible] rather drab as far as I [illegible]cerned.

One of our young [illegible] female type debato[illegible] around all weekend ca[illegible] sign saying I CAN'T [illegible] VERY WELL BUT BOY [illegible] I KISS! This created [illegible] little stir among the [illegible] the "loveliest city" and [illegible]parture from Alaba[illegible] hastened by bei[illegible] cha[illegible] drooling mob of en[illegible] majors.

THE SAME YOUNG [illegible] who chased this fu[illegible] group of Auburn men [illegible] one has to do when [illegible] the woods is [illegible] right which you will be [illegible] north. I being rath[illegible] thought this illogical [illegible] audience was only too [illegible] to experiment with the [illegible]

Unfortunately [illegible] "victim" who never [illegible] under the circumstances [illegible] judge only hears the d[illegible] not the previous conver[illegible].

I HOPE MY lovely [illegible] cohorts won't take the [illegible] remarks too seriously [illegible] one with my phys[illegible] needs a beautiful femal[illegible] league. [illegible] to emphasize the word [illegible]lon, in reality they [illegible] have scholastic records [illegible] make mine seem feeblen[illegible] by comparison.

At any rate I wish to [illegible]clude with an example of [illegible] charming, if undeserved [illegible]tery I remarked in an [illegible] to be humorous that if I [illegible] a beautiful young girl I [illegible]n't need my present co[illegible] around during tournam[illegible] she replied that if she w[illegible] beautiful young girl she w[illegible]n't need me around d[illegible] tournaments. Senior Victory

[illegible] Florida State football [illegible] rose to great heights [illegible] Mississippi Southern [illegible] afternoon was one of [illegible] gridiron [illegible] that has ever played on the [illegible] Campbell Stadium [illegible].

[illegible] of [illegible] coach Tom Nugent, it was [illegible] seniors who inspired [illegible] triumph over a power [illegible]-favored Southern team.

For some of the seniors, it was a glory-filled final day before the home folks—for others, the frustration of sitting on the sidelines with an injury and watching their teammates enact a hard-fought victory.

[illegible] Buck Metts, a 5-9, 180-pound halfback from Sanford, [illegible] a long series of fine performances. Metts has un[illegible] been the most consistent Seminole gridder all season [illegible] fact underscored more than once by Tom Nugent.

[illegible] Joe Holt, a solid [illegible] performance worth noting [illegible] fact that a [illegible] Southern line prevented him [illegible] his third touchdown of the season in his final [illegible].

[illegible] Len Swantic, on his final day one of his greatest performances. The Columbus, Ga. veteran passed for two of the three touchdowns and engineered his team to a game-winning fourth quarter touchdown.

[illegible] Billy Odom, spurts of brilliance in his final game. His [illegible] pulled the Tribe out of dozens of spots this year, and [illegible] those once or twice Saturday.

[illegible] Bud Leonard, compliments from Nugent for his longest [illegible] performance of the year. Elected game captain by the [illegible]. Leonard saw more action in that one than in [illegible] this year.

[illegible] senior quarterback Lee Corso of Miami—frustration. [illegible] by a hip injury late in the second period. Corso was [illegible] only three plays in the second half, on one of which he [illegible] for the extra point, the one that defeated Southern.

[illegible] also quite a little frustration. Though he [illegible] quarters of the game, he was forced to [illegible] fourth quarter with a knee injury originally [illegible] the Villanova game.

[illegible] finale [illegible] home season 3-1-1.

NO BOWL LIKELY

[illegible] received at least two bowl "feelers" [illegible] Southern, more could [illegible] strengthened.

[illegible] El Paso, Tex., and [illegible] Tangerine Bowl [illegible] Florida State as one of [illegible].

[illegible] Bowl you remember is where the Seminoles made [illegible] losing to a powerful Texas West[illegible] 47-20 January 1, 1955.

[illegible] Tangerine [illegible] to accept [illegible] such an event [illegible].

[illegible] moment, other teams considered by the Orlando [illegible] include Virginia Tech (20-7 conquerors of FSU), West [illegible] State, Mississippi Southern, and Lenoir Rhyne.

[illegible] that the Virginians would [illegible].

[illegible] that any of the other [illegible] mentioned would [illegible] Sun Bowl.

[illegible] no official proclamations from the FSU athletic [illegible] have come forth on the subject, and it will prob[illegible] the signing of a major-college school to bring such [illegible] forward publicly.

[illegible] Atlantic Coast Conference [illegible] be [illegible] type of opponent [illegible] New Year [illegible] so we should [illegible] end [illegible].

GOING FOR YARDAGE. Florida State's Buck Metts, Senior halfback from Sanford goes for plenty of yardage against Mississippi Southern after taking a pass from quarterback Lee Corso in the first half of Saturday's game. Running interference for him is tackle George Boyer (77).

Renn, Metts, Philp Score; Swantic Passes For Two

By FRANK RAMOS
Flambeau Sports Writer

John Sheppard applied his usual magic touch Saturday and booted the Seminoles to a 20-19 victory over Mississippi Southern with his [illegible] conversion in 19 tries.

Len Swantic, who took over for the injured Lee Corso, passed for 65 yards and two touchdowns. Swantic hit Bobby Renn in the end zone from 11 yards out to cap the final touchdown drive.

The march started at Florida State's 36. Swantic passed 10 yards to Ron Schomburger after he had lost two yards on a sneak.

A Mississippi offside gave the Seminoles a first down. Then Len completed another pass, this time to halfback Buck Metts at the Southerners' 44.

A keep play by Swantic netted another first down on the 35. After two incomplete passes, Swantic hit Metts again for 10 more yards to put the ball on the 25.

Renn picked up three yards and a first down. Metts and Renn combined for another first down at Mississippi's 11. Then Swantic hit Renn for the score. That is when the all important extra point was kicked by Sheppard.

FIRST SCORE

The Seminoles' first score came when Buck Metts intercepted a Bob Hughes pass at Southern's 40, and raced the final 40 yards for the score.

Sheppard's kick was good and FSU led 7-0 with only two minutes gone in the game.

Swantic's first touchdown pass came in the same quarter. Len hit end Gerald Philp with a pass from six yards out to up the lead to 13-0.

The second touchdown drive started on the Southerners' 39-yard line. Stan Dobosz and Billy Odom combined for a first down putting the ball on the 26.

Odom then picked up six and Dobosz five for another first down. After an offside penalty against Mississippi moved the ball to the six, Swantic uncorked his touchdown pass.

Stan Dobosz attempted the extra point conversion but the kick was tipped and went wide.

The Southerners' first score came when Doug Barfield slammed through the left side for three yards and the score. Dallas Whitfield's kick was off to the left and Mississippi trailed 13-6.

The highlight of the drive was a 25 yard run by fullback Harvey Seligman.

MISTILS IT

Southern's second score came in the third quarter when Barfield picked up five yards on a keep play and another touchdown. This time Whitfield's kick was true and tied the score, 13-13.

The march was sparked by three first downs. Big Bo Dickinson, J C Arban and Barfield accounted for almost all of the yardage gained in the 48 yard march.

The Southerners' started their final touchdown drive when tackle P. W. Underwood recovered a Len Swantic fumble on their own 48.

Bob Hughes, a 6-5 Senior, completed a pass to Arban good for a touchdown, but a backfield in motion penalty nullified the score.

Hughes then completed two straight passes accumulating 57 yards. A 24 yard pass to end Jerry Taylor and a 33 yard pass to Don Watts set the scene for Hughes to sneak over for the score from the one yard marker.

Then the important extra point try was muffed when the pass from center was high and Hughes, holding the ball, was smothered by the entire forward wall of FSU.

The Tribe had another chance to score early in the game, but was stopped four times in a row from the one yard line. It was the first time the Tribe has been stopped [illegible] within the ten yard line according to Tom Nugent.

Nugent called the win a "Senior victory. The Seniors provided the inspiration to win."

Varsity, Freshman Cage Tilt Nov. 27

The first varsity game between the Florida State varsity basketball team and the freshman squad is slated for November 27, in the Men's Gym at 8:00.

According to head coach Bud Kennedy this game has a two-fold purpose. The first objective of this game is to give the players of both squads some actual game experience and to also give them a chance to see how they can work under the lights.

The second purpose of the game is to enable the home fans of the seminoles and Tomahawks to get in early look at the stars for the first home game on until December 15.

The starters for the varsity in this game will probably be the starters for the opener on December 1.

Opening at the pivot post is transfer veteran Bob Williams of Wellington who stands 6-8 and is the tallest man on the squad. Is being counted on heavily this season.

LETTERMEN START

Lettermen Stu Gregory of Pensacola, Jerry Shrine will start at one of the forward positions. The other forward position will be manned by Fred Twomey or Bob Ward.

Little Tom Garcia will open at one of the guard posts while senior Bob Waits will start at the other. Also slated to see plenty of action are Hugh Durham, fresh sensation last season and transfer Joe Westhafer.

In order to gain all the boys a chance Kennedy will also use Joe Williams, Merrill Bryant, Jim Schorge, Bill Mahoney, Bud Davis and Tom Donovan extensively.

Coach Jim Oler of the fresh squad has not set a definite starting lineup but expects it to be among the starters is 6-7 Mike Williams who is the little brother of Bob Williams.

FROSH PROSPECTS

Tom Gregory, Jerry Holme, Jim Schorge and Bill Engle are highly touted freshman who will be making their first appearances on the Seminole court. Also Charlie Rogy, Bud Cash, and Tom Bore will work a bit against the varsity.

Another interesting sidelight is two Freshmen forwards Tom Westhafer also will be playing against his brother Joe Westhafer who is a guard on the varsity.

The game is free and all students and faculty members are urged to attend Coach Kennedy promises a game with plenty of action.

LARRY STROM AND STU GREGORY figure highly in Florida State basketball plans for 1956-57

JJC Grads Gregory, Strom May Start For Seminole Five

The key factor in Florida State University's basketball hopes for 1956 could well be on two graduates of Jacksonville Junior College who will probably be on the starting five when the Seminoles open their season Dec. 1 against Duquesne, in Pittsburgh.

A year ago the Seminoles acquired Stu Gregory from the nationally-ranked Dolphins and this year Coach Bud Kennedy garnered Larry Strom away from a half-dozen other colleges to round out the Jacksonville duo.

Last season the 6-3 Gregory played in every game and wound up with 138 points, making him fourth highest scorer on the team.

Solve the three players who scored more points than Gregory won't be back this year, he will be expected, according to Kennedy, to pace the tribe.

Strom, who was second highest scorer on the Jacksonville team which placed fifth nationally last year in junior college competition, will be expected to take over one of the inside positions on the double post set up.

Accordin to Kennedy, "Strom a coming down extremely well and we hope he'll be ready when mid season opens in two weeks."

Other new men Kennedy will be counting on when the season opens are Merrill Bryant, a 5-11 guard from Havanna. Most recently College, Joe Westhafer, a junior transfer from Cincinnati, University, and Hugh Durham, the Sophomore sensation who averaged almost twenty points per game for the freshman club last year.

These men will form the nucleus of our club this season and the success or failure of it may depend on how well these men come through for us," says Kennedy.

Hip Injury May Sideline Corso For Auburn Game

One of the fiercest competitors on a Florida State football team has ever seen probably played his last game for the Seminoles Saturday afternoon, and has forced him to watch both end if from the sidelines.

Despite the fact that the Tribesmen have one more game left, with Auburn this weekend, Senior quarterback Lee Corso will probably not likely see much action on the gridiron.

And should he dress for the game, it will be probably only because of his fierceness of bolding for extra points, for a hip injury in the Mississippi Southern battle will prevent him from any contact action.

Miami speedster will get one last chance to hit the headlines this season, and to put Florida State in those same headlines.

Should his hip injury heal sufficiently by then, and the odds are that it will, he has been nominated, and accepted, to play in the annual Blue-Gray game at Montgomery, Ala., this December.

This will be the last of a number of things which have happened to Corso in four brilliant years of college football, and most of the honors have come this year.

BIG SWITCH

Switched to quarterback this season after two years at left half, and a Freshman season at quarterback, Corso has consistently been the key to a hot and cold Seminole attack.

He personally engineered the North Carolina State game, when he led the Seminoles to a 14-0 triumph, earned him the International News Service rating of national "Back of the Week," the first such honor ever to be bestowed upon a Florida State player.

Through the Saturday game, Corso had a total offense gain of 996 yards, 384 on the ground and 332 yards surprisingly enough in the air.

When Corso was first moved to the starting quarterback's role at the beginning of the season, the consensus was he couldn't handle the job due to a passing deficiency.

The Jerry Miamian has since proved his critics wrong, passing for two touchdowns in each of two games. He has completed altogether 30 of 55 tries, good for 332 yards and five touchdowns, by far tops on the team.

WEDDING BELLS

Going off the football trail for a moment, the next big moment in Lee's life is coming up December 4 in Tampa when he will wed Betsy Youngblood of that same city.

He is currently trying to obtain a graduate assistantship of some type and stay on for graduate work at the university, in which case he would probably join Tom Nugent's coaching staff as an assistant coach.

Corso was incidentally, one of 47 men submitted to the Associated Press New York office as a potential all-America at halfback, a position he no longer plays, of course.

The possibility exists undoubtedly that he may gain an honorable mention all-America yet.

It would be a fitting climax to an outstanding college football career.

SENIOR QUARTERBACK Lee Corso of Miami has been selected to play in the annual Blue-Gray football classic in Montgomery, Ala. this December to climax a brilliant Senior year at Florida State.

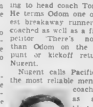
Pacifico, Odom Play Last Game Saturday

Saturday afternoon against the Auburn Tigers Al Pacifico and Billy Odom will wear the Seminole headdress for the last time.

The loss of these two will be a heavy one for the Tribe according to head coach Tom Nugent. He terms Odom one of the finest breakaway runners he ever coached as well as a fierce competitor. There's none better than Odom on the end of a punt or kickoff return," says Nugent.

Nugent calls Pacifico one of the most reliable men he's ever coached as well as a good blocker and an outstanding defensive player.



Both Odom and Pacifico are graduate students at Florida State. Pacifico has completed a degree in education and is now undertaking an administration Odom is a major in science education.

Pacifico plans to leave here in February and return to his home town in Altoona, Pennsylvania to go into business. He is married and has three children.

PRO OFFERS

Thus far Pacifico has had pro offers from the Pittsburgh Steelers, Cleveland Browns and the Toronto Argonauts in Canada, but has turned them down.

Pacifico started his football career in junior high school. He played four years of high school ball for Altoona Catholic, four years for the Marines and four years for the Seminoles.

Pacifico

In rhyme with Nugent's praise of Odom and his ability on punt and kickoff returns he said that Odom holds the record at FSU with an 89 yard kickoff return against VPI last year.

Odom returning kickoffs last year.

Besides that, he was ninth in the nation in punt returning.

Odom is much respected by the opposition as a breakaway runner. Against Georgia this year, he almost pulled the game out of the fire with a 33-yard Jaunt on the next to last play of the game.

Majors Termed Top Prospect By Tom Nugent

A second member of one of Tennessee's most famous football families, the Majors, seems ready to make his move into collegiate football circles beginning next season at Florida State here.

Hoping to follow in the footsteps of national fame made by his brother John an all-American end at Tennessee, Joe Majors, a Sophomore from Hunt land Tenn. looms as a prime prospect for the Tribe's starting quarterback role next year.

Majors transferred here after a year at the University of Alabama this fall, and has already drawn considerable praise from Seminole coaches for his work as a "scout team" quarterback.

A 6'-165-pounder who can literally thread the needle with a football, Majors has drawn most of the praise on his ability to throw the football.

Majors appears to be a much better than average football player with a particular ability to throw the ball," says Tribe head coach Tom Nugent.

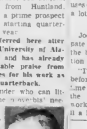
COOL PASSER

His passing ability seems to be outstanding but we don't know too much about his defensive ability or now he blocks because he works with the scout team and consequently doesn't see much contact," Nugent says.

He handles the ball well, much better than average I'd say." Nugent commented, "has average speed and as an all-round quarterback has a good chance to break in as starting quarterback next year."

Assistant coach Hugh Adams, who has been working with the scout team much of the season echoed Nugent's praise of Majors' passing ability, and added that "I think he makes a real good field general. He's a smart quarterback."

Joe played a year of freshman football at Alabama last season, then came to Florida State in his words "because the university and the coaching staff both were highly recommended to me."



"I was a tailback in high school where we ran the single wing, but I never could punt too well, and I realized that a team like Tennessee needs an all-round triple-threat tailback," Joe says.

T's TROUBLE

That's the main reason why I didn't follow my brother to Tennessee. I like to throw the ball, and I figured a team which used the split-T or the "T" as Nugent says, needs a passing quarterback a lot more" he added.

Joe admits that he may anticipate some difficulty in learning the base plays of the "T" formation as employed by Nugent.

"I'd never worked with the "T" before I came here, and the only time we've used it this year with the scout team was when we worked Furman plays. They use it a little bit in their offense."

A few projects are scheduled later on for second semester, however. The Women's P Club plans a box supper in April; Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, whose Woody Herman concert netted $450 for last year's chest, will bring another band to campus March 3; and the Delta Delta Delta sorority has indicated it will hold a project second semester.

DERBY CHAMPS

On Friday, a soap box car entered by Gamma Phi Beta sorority and Delta Sigma Pi, business fraternity copped first place in the Soap Box Derby. The Gamma Phi Beta driver, Nancy Herold, came from among the second place cars of the five preliminary heats to defeat the first place winners in the finals and semifinals. Alpha Gamma Delta and Phi Delta Theta, sponsors of the Derby, estimated it made $225 for campus Chest, with 13 racers entered at $15 each.

Delta Tau Delta fraternity spokesmen said $30 was bid by Coeds to buy members of the fraternity during the "Greek Slave Auction" Friday afternoon. Auctioned Delts had to slave for an hour after purchase time. Luckier coeds waited on tables at sorority houses; others were sent swimming in Westcott Fountain.

PENNIES ADDED

Mortar Board said it will donate possibly $50 to Campus Chest from the proceeds of Penny-a-Minute-Night Friday, which netted $290. Approximately 400 coeds (but probably their dates) paid one cent a minute for permission to stay out as late as 1:30 a.m. A scholarship worth $150 to a women student is to take up part of the proceeds.

Sigma Kappa sorority reportedly earned over $200 on their variety show Thursday night in Westcott Auditorium.

No accurate accounting of total Campus Chest proceeds will be available for at least a week, according to Miss Young. She observed, however, that "Things are going all real well."

Holiday Hangers - On Can See 'The Killing'

By ALAN KASS

This past summer Universal-International re-released two old action pictures by Mark Hellinger. They were called "Brute Force" and "The Naked City." Both of these pictures were directed by Jules Dassin. These pictures met with unexpected success and U-I decided that another pair of thriller pictures were in order.

Thus we have at the STATE for the last day today "The Killers" and "The Sleeping City." Both these pictures were made in 1948 or '49 and as that time were strong movie-fare. If you should go and only have time for one "The Killers" should get the nod.

For the people that stay in Tallahassee during the holiday I would like to suggest a picture that is, perhaps the sleeper of the year. It is playing Thursday thru Saturday at the PERRY outdoor. The name of the picture is "The Killing."

The plot revolves around a band of ex-convicts that join forces to rob a race track. The story is told in flashback form in the minds of every participant. This picture leads into a surprise ending that leaves you gasping in amazement. My only regret is that it is not being played at a better time, so that more would benefit from this thriller.

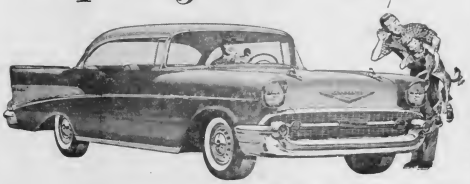
It's that new V8 in the '57 Chevrolet. It's as quiet as a contented cat and as smooth as cream . . . and it's cat-quick in response when you call for action!

No household tabby sitting in a sunny window ever purred more softly than Chevy's new V8 engine. You can scarcely tell when it's idling.



But when you nudge the accelerator, you know it's there, all right! It's right-now response keeps you out of highway emergencies. It overpowers steep hills with such ease they seem like level landscape.

This new Chevrolet V8 puts up to 245 high-compression horsepower* under your command! It's sassy, sure—but as tame to your touch as a purring pussycat. Come try the smoothest V8 you ever put a toe to.

What young people are doing at General Electric

AUEN J. CLAY joined General Electric in 1950 after receiving a B. S. from the University of Virginia in 1947. A staff officer during World War II, Clay managed the Charlottesville, Virginia, office from 1950 to 1955.

Young engineer sells million-dollar equipment to utilities

Selling electric equipment for a utility substation—a complex unit used in power transmission and consolidation—requires extensive technical knowledge of the products involved. Many who sell such complex equipment must also know a customer's requirements, what will best fill his needs, and how to sell the merits of their products to the executives who buy such apparatus.

One such man at General Electric is 31-year-old Auen J. Clay, an apparatus sales engineer serving the electrical utility companies in the Philadelphia-Allentown area.

Clay's Work Is Important, Diversified

For Clay, technical selling is not a door-to-door job. As a representative of General Electric, he must be ready to discuss customer needs with vice presidents or help solve intricate problems with skilled engineers. His recommendations are based on his own engineering background, and are backed up by the know-how of the Company's best application engineers. His interest in working with people carries over into his community life, where he takes a part in many local activities—Rotary, Community Chest, Boy Scouts, and his University Engineering Alumni Association.

27,000 College Graduates at General Electric

Allen Clay is a well-rounded individual who has come to be a spoke-man for General Electric wherever he goes. Like each of our 27,000 college-graduate employees, he is being given the chance to grow and realize his full potential. For General Electric has long believed that. Whenever fresh young minds are given freedom to make progress, everybody benefits—the individual, the Company, and the country.

Job-Getting Seminar Set For Nov. 28

By ARLIEDA RIES

Opening its three-day schedule on Wednesday, November 28, the Eighth Annual Job-Getting Seminar is expected to acquaint over 800 students with business recruiters.

Sponsored by the Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement, which begins planning for the next year's seminar as soon as the most recent one has been completed, this University service offers many meetings and interviews Thursday and Friday.

Representatives of approximately 50 organizations from business, industry and government, a substantial increase over last year's 35 representatives, will be here to interview seniors and graduates for positions.

After the representatives have met informally with heads of departments and deans at a coffee in Longmire on Wednesday afternoon, a seminar will be held in the Suwannee Room on Thursday and Friday at 8 and 8:30 a.m. and 1 and 1:30 p.m. Individual interviews of 30 minutes each are being scheduled for the Suwannee Room on both days. These run from 9 a.m. to noon and from 2 to 5 p.m. The various concerns will be seated alphabetically and numbered accordingly in order to enable the students to locate easily the recruiters they are scheduled to see. Assistance will be provided and materials are being put by the recruiters to present name tags to the interviewers.

ARTS SCHEDULING

Gladstone Comstock, James Hardy explained that seniors are also being asked to sign up at their leisure for interviews.

"This has been done in an effort to alleviate congestion on Wednesday night of the seminar."

Representatives of the following firms and organizations will attend the Seminar this year: American Red Cross, Army Map Service, Arthur Anderson & Co., Atlas Auto Finance Company, Bell Aircraft Corp., Bibb Manufacturing Co., Blue Cross of Florida, Inc., Boys' Clubs of America, Boy Scouts of America, Bloocker Air Force Base, Bausouris Co-op, Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Co.

The Chemstrand Corp., Columbia-Southern Chemical Corp., Crawford and Company, Davison-Paxon Co., Eglin Air Force Base, Florida Merit System, Florida Parole Commission, Florida State Employment Service, General Foods Corp., Haskins & Sells, Hercules Powder Co., Home Insurance Co., Ins. Shoppe, IBM Corp., Maas Brothers, Inc.

Morrison Food Services, National Cash Register Co., New York Life Insurance Co., J. C. General Accountants Office, Veterans Administration Area Medical Office and Young Women's Christian Association.

To Appear On Panel

"Employment Roundup", the title of the Job-Getting Seminar panel discussion to be held at 8 p. m. in Opperman a week from tomorrow, will employ the speaking talents of six visiting speakers.

Acting as panel moderator, Thomas M. Brownlee, Executive Manager of the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce, has had many years experience in public relations and with chambers of commerce in Florida. A graduate of Southeastern Institute, Chamber of Commerce executives, Brownlee was the 1955 recipient of the Distinguished Service Award from the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Representing communications, Marcus Bartlett, Director of WJHG-TV at Atlanta, Ga., received his A.B. in journalism from Emory University. After serving as Public Relations Officer in the Sixth Naval District and the Naval Air Command in Jacksonville, Bartlett associated with WSB in 1950.

Director of the Fifth Regional Civil Service Commission since 1954, Hammond Smith, representing governments, received his BS from Georgia Tech. He has formerly been radio broadcasting, retail store executives, the armed service and the civilian personnel division of the Army.

Representing management, Andy Robertson, vice-president of Crawford and Company in insurance adjusters of Atlanta, graduated from Mercer University with an AB and from Atlanta Law School with an LLB degree. Special Chairman of the Georgia Bar Association Commission on Insurance Ethics and Practice, Robertson has served as Mayor and Police Court Judge of the City of Decatur for 10 years.

Vice-President of Graham-Jones Paper Company of Jacksonville, M. L. Clements, representative sales, has worked with the Sunshine Biscuit Company, and with the Pensacola Branch of Prudential Life Insurance Company.

Representing technology, Joseph T. Allman, Assistant to Director of Industrial Relations for Rivet Textile Corporation in New York City, has recently been named Personnel Director of the Glass Division. After serving with the U. S. Navy in World War II, Allman became Personnel Counselor of the Western Electric Company, after which he served as Educational consultant for the National Council of Industrial Management Clubs.

FOOTBALL: ITS CAUSE AND CURE

At next Saturday's football game, while you are sitting in your choice student's seat on the ten-yard line, won't you give a thought to Alaric Sigafoos?

Who, you ask, is Alaric Sigafoos? Come closer, sit down, light a Philip Morris, savor that natural tobacco goodness, sigh contentedly, cross your fat little legs, and listen.

Alaric Sigafoos (1868–1874) started life humbly on a farm near Enid, Kansas. His mother and father, both named Ralph, were bean-gleaners, and Alaric became a bean-gleaner too. But he soon tired of the work and went to Memphis where he got a job with a logging firm. Here the ex-bean-gleaner worked as a stump-thumper. Then he drifted to Texas where he toiled up oil fields (pipewiper). Then to Arizona where he strung dried fruit (fig-rigger). Then to Virginia where he was a research assistant (rock-looker). Then to Long Island where he dressed poultry (duck-plucker). Then to California where he lectured young women who were about to get married (bride-chider). Then to Minnesota where he cut up frozen lakes (ice-slicer). Then to Nevada where he determined the odds in a gambling house (dice-priest). Then to Milwaukee where he packed camera lenses together (Zeiss-spliser).

Finally he went to Omaha where he got a job in a tannery, beating pig-skins until they were soft and supple (hog-flogger). Here he found happiness at last.

Why, you ask, did he find happiness at last as a hog-flogger? Light another firm and fragrant Philip Morris, taste that first luscious flavor, puff, relax, let sweet lassitude possess your limbs, and listen.

Next door to the hog-flogger was an almond grove owned by a girl named Chimera Emrick. Chimera was pink and white and marvelously hinged, and Alaric was hopelessly in love the moment he clapped eyes on her. Each day he came to the almond grove to woo Chimera, but to no avail. He tried with all his vigor and guile, but she, alas, stayed cool.

Then one day Alaric got a brilliant idea. It was the day before the annual Omaha Almond Festival. On this day, as we all know, every almond grower in Omaha enters a float in the big parade. The floats always consist of large cardboard almonds hanging from large cardboard almond trees.

Alaric's inspiration was to stitch pieces of pig-skin together and inflate them until they looked like big, plump almonds. "These sure beat skinny old cardboard almonds," said Alaric to himself. "Tomorrow they will surely take first prize for Chimera, and she will be mine!"

Early the next morning Alaric came running to Chimera with his inflated pig-skin almonds, but she, alas, told him she was not entering a float that year. In fact, she had just sold her almond grove and was moving East to try out with the Boston Red Sox.

Alaric, upon hearing these glum tidings, flew into a violent rage. He started kicking his pig-skin almonds all over the place. And who should be walking by at that very instant but Abner Doubleday!

Mr. Doubleday, who had invented baseball some years earlier, was now trying to invent football, but without success. The trouble was, he couldn't figure out what kind of ball to use. Now, seeing Alaric kick the pig-skin spheroids, his problem was suddenly solved. "Eureka!" he cried, and ran to his drawing board, and the rest is history!

STUDENTS DANCE IN 'SOUTH PACIFIC' REHEARSALS
Beverly Brown, John Zilles Don Costumes For Opera Guild Show

Set Next Friday, Saturday

Technical Problems Faced In Guild's 'South Pacific'

By RUTH FRITCHIE

South Pacific, according to its producer, will be the most complicated show a technical standpoint that the Light Opera Guild has ever attempted.

The Rodgers and Hammerstein [illegible] musical will be pre [illegible] next Friday and Saturday [illegible] n Westcott Auditorium. [illegible] Beverly Brown and Richard [illegible] leading roles.

[illegible] is the big problem [illegible] South Pacific stage crew [illegible] reported. Dr. Robert L. [illegible] director and music direc [illegible]

[illegible] ngs are done as scenes [illegible] often done in musical [illegible] and certainly no simple [illegible] However, in this particular [illegible] ngs are presented and im [illegible] the story goes on with [illegible] scene is never [illegible] stage. The technique of the lap dissolve, borrowed from the movies, is used. The next scene starts before the preceding scene is finished.

ONE ON CURTAIN

One man will do nothing but operate the great sky cyclorama curtain which furnishes the background for most of the scenes. It must be raised and lowered alternately to give the change of scenery process and the timing must be perfect. Another man devotes himself to the operation of a dozen stage curtains which opens and closes at the precise moment—required 22 times during the production.

Penny DeBoll coordinates the activity by following a script and a musical score and signalling the crewmen at the proper time for the various duties they perform. Her function includes signals to the operators of the curtains the cyclorama and the work lights. All must occur with perfect accuracy and sometimes with only seconds to spare.

Stage direction is by Miss Betty Jane Grimm, assistant professor of voice. Scenery construction is under the supervision of Maurice Berg, scenic student in theatre education, who will also act as stage manager for the production. Lighting is by Miss Estes and Byron Nichols.

FAMOUS ROLES

Miss Brown is cast as Ensign Nellie Forbush the role made famous by Mary Martin. Waif plays the French Planter Emile de Becque, who on Broadway was played by Ezio Pinza.

Supporting parts are played by John Zilles as the versatile "big time" Seabee operator, Luther Billis. Miss Grimm as Bloody Mary. Sheldon Tarn as Lt. Joseph Cable, USMC whose love for the native Liat played by Liz Armes, is one of the truly tender phases of the show. Chris Monroe as the hard-boiled commanding officer. Captain George Brackett USN, and George Goldstein as the executive officer, Commander William Weber.

CHILDREN PERFORM

The role of Ngana, one of the children's parts played by a child will be played on alternate nights by Gayla Waugh and Cheryle Thompson, students at Bealey elementary school in Tallahassee. Mark Gelfond also a Bealey student plays Jerome. The Bergen's other child.

All in all South Pacific has three plots: the romance of Nellie and Emile; the love between Liat and Lt. Cable which is hindered by a racial problem; and the effect of World War II on Henderson and Bradley.

Space has been used to tell the story. Events and words were being [illegible] completely both in dialogue and lyric, and many scenes are played by the orchestra as well as the actors.

For instance, when Emile is trying to make up his mind whether to ask Nellie to marry him, or when Nellie is walking to the beach and passes her friends on there way to a dance the conductor and his orchestra are telling the story along with the actors.

SOUND EFFECTS

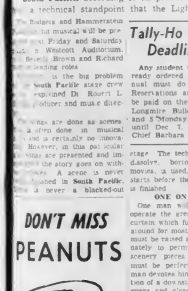
Darrell Hasbaum, graduate student in music, is responsible for sound effects and amplification. The audience will be aware only of amplified voices, but also of various sound effects appropriate to the different scenes provided by a radio set on stage.

The makeup and wardrobe staffs will not be able to rest after the show starts for a number of characters play alternate roles and must have complete changes of costumes and makeup during the evening. Makeup is under the supervision of Miss Grimm. The costume is supervised by Phyllis Miller.

Tickets may be purchased in advance at the Western Ticket Office or from any member of Gamma Alpha Iota, professional honorary fraternity for women in music, which sponsors the Light Opera Guild.

FULL HOUSE EXPECTED

According to Dr. Briggs, the ticket sale for "South Pacific" was begun earlier than usual this year due to the advance demand for seats. Because of the popularity of the show, a capacity house is anticipated for each night.



Several Florida high school choristers have already indicated a request for blocks of seats. Seats will also be sold at the box office on performance nights if any remain.

Past productions by the Light Opera Guild include "The Mikado," "Roberta," "Sweethearts," "Carousel," "The New Moon," and "Da Piedermaus".

New Fraternity A 'Possibility,' Dean Declares

Officials Study Ten Prospects

By Staff Writer

University officials are studying the possibility of adding another fraternity to the campus. Ten national social fraternities are under consideration.

Miles Deao, fraternity counselor, said the Faculty Committee on fraternities voted this summer "to determine whether FSU's increased male enrollment would justify a sixteenth fraternity, and if so, which it should be."

Named as possibilities were Acacia a fraternity formerly for Greeks, Alpha Kappa Lambda, Alpha Sama Phi, Delta Chi, Delta Sigma Phi, Kappa Nu, Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Pi, Theta Xi, and Tau Kappa Epsilon.

Dean said those were chosen from various national organizations because they had shown interest in establishing FSU colonies within the past four or five years.

THE MOST ACTIVE

Of these, Tau Kappa Epsilon has been most active in attempts to colonize here, but a recent poll of established FSU fraternities showed TKE to be in their dislavor, 10-4.

Dean of Men Dr. Sam Neel adds the reasons cited by the students for their disfavor of TKE were offered in confidence.

Only the university president, he explained, can invite a fraternity to establish a colony. The offer would probably be made at the suggestion of the Faculty Committee. The wishes of Inter-Fraternity Council, while not binding upon the faculty, would be considered, Dr. Neel emphasized.

Dr. Neel, Dean, and IFC President John Ware are presently in New York attending the Annual Inter-Fraternity Conference. Before leaving, Dr. Neel said the FSU representatives would be willing to talk with spokesmen of any national fraternity in addition to the ten leading contenders.

"ANOTHER NEEDED"

IFC president Ware said "The general feeling is that another fraternity is needed."

The last fraternity admitted to campus was Tau Kappa Epsilon, whose membership of 19 is one short of the quota for full campus recognition. TEP was colonized during the 1953-54 term. Phi Kappa Phi fraternity was given permission to colonize in 1954-55, but they did not exercise the option. Another fraternity request was turned down that year, Dean noted, because of unfilled membership rosters among the established fraternities.

There are 841 fraternity men presently, with spaces available for 1,121, he explained. Three years ago, however, there were nearly 600 fraternity pledges and actives.

Dean said each FSU chapter is limited to 75 members. A motion to increase the quota was defeated at a recent IFC meeting.

SEPTEMBER POSSIBLE

The counselor said that while FSU may be granted that year to some national fraternity to establish an FSU colony, it could probably not be established before September, 1957.

A colony, he said, generally has to be on campus one year, attain a cumulative average, and meet other criteria before being chartered and admitted to the local IFC.

Camp Jobs Now Available

Students interested in positions as summer camp counselors should apply promptly, according to Miss Mary Frances Bullock, Jr., Women's Physical Education Department.

She said applications may be made in room 202 in the Women's Gymnasium Building from 2 to 5 Tuesdays and Thursdays from 2 to 4 p.m.

"We have requests for counselors in music, arts and crafts, sports, waterfront, nature craft, nature lore, dramatics, dietitics, nursing, and general counseling," she said. "We also have requests for office help."

Miss Alexander said that preference as to the type of camp and the section of the country will be taken into consideration.

Phi Beta Kappa Founder's Day Celebration Set

The members of Alpha of Florida Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, of Florida State University, will hold their annual celebration of Phi Beta Kappa Founder's Day Wednesday, December 5.

This is an annual event commemorating December 5, 1776, when the Society was organized at the College of William and Mary in Virginia.

The event will take place at the Presbyterian Westminster House, at the corner of Dorchad Street and West Park Avenue, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Speaker for the evening will be Dr. Alex E. S. Green, Professor of Physics. Chairman of the arrangements is Miss Ann Andrews, Dr. Victor R. B. Oelschlager, and the Founders' Day Committee. Coffee will be served at this time.

Students To Register As State Lobbyists

Symphonic Band, Collegians To Share Billing Tonight

The Symphonic Band, made up of members of the Marching Chiefs, and the Collegians, men's choral group, will share the billing in a concert beginning at 8:15 p.m. tonight in Westcott Auditorium.

The Symphonic Band will be under the direction of Manley Whitcomb. Robert E. Howey will lead the Collegians.

The program will feature a band composition by Gordon Jacobs, "Music for a Festival," in which a brass choir will be used, Whitcomb said. William Cramer will lead the featured instruments.

The 80 handsmen will have the first half of the program, the 40 Collegians will present the concluding selections, including three songs by Cole Porter.

Chest Slates Derby, Dance

Although far from its $5,000 goal Campus Chest is still planning many money making projects for the near future.

Tomorrow the Sigma Chi Derby gets under-way at 2 p.m., to be followed by a dance that evening. Phi Mu's will sell box suppers at the derby, with all proceeds going to Campus Chest. On the hockey field securities will vie for first place and trophies for each event, such as the four legged race, chicken chase, or the egg drop.

On December 8th the Campus Chest dance will be held in the Suwanee Room from 9 to 12 p.m. for one dollar per couple. SAE's will crown the Campus Chest Queen whose contest they sponsored, at this time, while the ATO's will be awarded the Campus Chest trophy that they won last year.

Chairman Nancy Lee Young urged all organizations who have not sponsored projects to turn in their money to Kaier Meeting at Florida Hall.

Scullions Slate Candlelight Dance

A candle-light dance, sponsored by the Scullions, is scheduled for tomorrow evening at the Student Center.

According to Joe Osborne, social chairman for the restaurant-hotel club, the dance will be held from 8 p.m. until midnight. Music will be provided by one of the campus dance bands.

Return From Holidays

STUDENTS MET BY METERS

By DAVE FLETCHER

Parking meters confronted students returning from the Thanksgiving holidays when they resumed their struggle for parking spaces.

Meters have been installed by ten parking spaces in front of Westcott to make it easy for persons who must make short visits for business purposes, Dr. Harry Day, director of service units, announced.

No immediate plans for additional meters are being considered, Day said.

Since only visitor parking is allowed in the Visitor's circle, the meter system should be a great help to students conducting business in Westcott, Dr. Day said. The meters allow six minutes parking time per penny, and a total of two hours for seven cents. For the convenience of people who do not have pennies, the meters take dimes and will credit the full 42 minutes for ten cents. The meters do not give change.

CONCERNING FINES

Fine-o-Meters are provided for the convenience of violators. Special violation tickets with attached envelopes may be placed with fine enclosed in the boxes provided on the backs of the meters in front of Westcott. Since the violation and meters are similar to those used in the city, violators should take care to place only their University citations in the box, Dr. Day recommended.

The meters were first recommended by the city and student-faculty traffic committee and a bill to adopt the system was passed by the Faculty Senate. The meters have been on order since last year and finally arrived during the holidays, Dr. Day said. The meters are owned and operated by Fine-o-Meter Company, and are being installed on a three months trial time and percentage basis, he added.

REGULATIONS

Regulations concerning meter parking will be issued by Dr. Day's office, are as follows

A time limit of 42 minutes has been set on all meters.

Any person is eligible to park at the meters; this includes blue and black stickers faculty staff, students and visitors.

Regular blue-sticker time limits will also apply to the metered spaces. Dr. Day added in case a person "feeds" a meter up to and past one hour the will still be issued a ticket.

Senate Probes Longer X-mas

Good Will Program Planned By Senate

Student Senate voted Wednesday to send Florida State University lobbyists to the State Legislature when it meets here in April.

Senior Class Senator Jim Moore, who proposed the action, characterized his motion as a "long range program to bring good will to the university." He said "We have a good opportunity to make this effective and beneficial to the interests of the students."

Named as the delegation were the student body president and the Secretary of State, Dave Bachman and Jan Kaminis respectively, and Student Senator Bob Murray.

According to Florida law, they will be required to register as lobbyists in order to represent an organized group.

Murray, son of late Speaker of the House Perry Murray of Polk County, is considered well qualified for the position as he is acquainted with many legislators and has worked as a page during sessions.

Moore contends the university should take advantage of the legislature meeting here every two years to "go all out" to make a good impression for FSU.

Moore cited the instances where such representation would benefit the students. He explained so the possible banning of all cars on campus and the possibility that campus traffic might be placed outside of students hands into Tallahassee jurisdiction.

Grad Recital Set Monday

Russell Wilson will present a graduate organ recital Monday, in Opperman Music Hall beginning at 8:15 p.m.

The concert will be free and open to the public.

Now organists at the First Baptist Church of Valdosta, Ga., Wilson will play "Prelude, Fudium, Fugue and Ciaccona by Buxtehude, "Cantilena in E Major, No. 1," by Franck, Larghetto" Hymne Action de Grace, "Te Deum,". Hindemith's Second Sonata, and Bach's Fugue in E Flat Major the "St. Anne."

Wilson, a student of Ramona C. Beard, received his A. B degree here with a major in psychology. He is a candidate for the degree of Master of Music.

Juniors To Eat, Sing At Campfire Supper

A spaghetti dinner, group singing, dancing, and a special skit will be the feature attraction at the Junior Class Campfire Supper next Friday night at the Reservation, according to Sarah Jane Griffin, committee chairman.

Buses will leave the campus from the Student Center at 5:15, 5:30, and 5:45 to provide transportation to the university camp for juniors and their guests.

Students go on sale today in all dormitories, fraternity and sorority houses and may be purchased from junior class representatives for 85 cents. Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, tickets will be sold at the Student Center.

"The supper will be over by 8:30 p.m. and students desiring to do so, will be back in time to see a movie or to attend other functions," said Miss Griffin.

She stressed the fact that the campfire supper is not a date affair. "Everyone is encouraged to come and bring their friends," she said.

A special spaghetti sauce without meat will be served for Catholic students," according to the chairman.

The Campfire Supper is taking the place of the usual Junior Class Picnic.

TRANSPORTATION OPEN FOR PRE-MED STUDENTS

Transportation for a "limited number" of pre-medical students to an Open House at the University of Miami School of Medicine Saturday, December 15, may be arranged, officials said this week. Pre-med students should contact Norman Fain, Box 1592, Senior Hall.

Legislative Lobbyists New Idea, But Could Better Students' Lot

Student Senate's decision to send representatives to the next session of the Florida Legislature is a unique proposition.

It seems, however, that the idea is not unfeasible. Registered lobbyists could do much to advance the interest of the student body.

The Legislature considers many matters of vital concern to students. Why not, then, have the students represented. Other interests send lobbyists to promote their causes.

The system of lobbying is not as undemocratic as some would have it. This country is founded on majority rule, along with protection for minority rights. Implied is a give-and-take, a continual struggle among competing groups to amass the most power. Thus, although a given group may seek legislation toward its own interest, pressure from other groups may counterbalance this action. Provided each is given a chance to speak, the group or groups which demonstrate the most backing will win.

Through public relations and consultation with legislators, FSU students may better have their interests served.

Less Painful Way Could Be Found For Students To Give To Charity

As many students have learned the hard way, Campus Chest, with all its act vities, has hit Florida State University.

These students who have participated, and will participate, in activities raising money for Campus Chest, have put long hours of effort into the events. Although some have fun doing it, others realize that the effort detracts from their classwork.

It seems that some of the events are staged in a spirit of willingness and enthusiasm. The burden of others, however, is borne by often unwilling students who feel they can not let the group down in the competition to see who can raise the most money for Campus Chest.

Everybody believes in giving money to charity, but it is time that the school considered a less painful way for students to give their share than spending their scant time in such activities.

Dignity Out On Capital Hill; Lipstick Now A Necessity

A number of honorable and distinguished United States Representatives had their dignity outraged in Washington the other day.

The mild-mannered but bumptious officials were conducting a hearing—usually a serious and non-offensive occasion—when a woman witness stormed in to demand that Congress either remove the luxury tax on lipstick or start soaking men for their shaving equipment.

Now it is easy to realize the consternation this caused the Representatives. Things like this don't usually happen in Washington. Usually the officials, practically all males, gather together in a spirit of camaraderie and discuss—when a woman witness stormed in to demand that Congress either remove the luxury tax on lipstick or start soaking men for their shaving equipment.

Now it is easy to realize the consternation this caused the Representatives. Things like this don't usually happen in Washington. Usually the officials, practically all males, gather together in a spirit of camaraderie and discuss—

So when Janet Meyers, speaking for a New York cosmetics firm, challenged the implication in the excise tax law that face paints and powders are a luxury where as shaving is a necessity, the all-male House subcommittee was somewhat unnerved. Miss Meyers further added to their dismay with the assertion that if men didn't like to pay tax on shaving gear, let them wear beards.

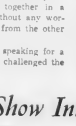
Her appearance was before a House Ways and Means group studying tax proposals to urge repeal of the 10 percent tax on cosmetics and other toilet articles. The tax "unjustly discriminates between men and women," she maintained in righteous indignation.

We sympathize with the injured gentlemen of Capitol Hill. After all, it isn't every day that a Representative has to listen to such a consterning theory as that lipstick has become a necessity to today's women.

Calling The Card

Students Show Intellectual Lacking

By ARNOLD GREENFIELD



The last Artist Series show—The Best Of Steinbeck—emphasized for me a feeling that had been growing within my somewhat fevered brain since the beginning of school. The feeling is that we are distinct with an insensitivity and/or immaturity of local audiences, especially including the university "population."

One would suppose that in the world outside our little island people believe the training of university communities to be at least somewhat better educated than the population as a whole. This may or may not be a valid assumption, but if it is true that we are the intellectual cream of the crop of the world music really be in sorry shape.

THE STEINBECK show was admittedly not the most excellent dramatic production in history or even in history of this semester at FSU. This fact is however largely beside the point. There seems to be a tendency for campus and Tallahassee audiences to be receptive in situations where none is intended. The most mild enthusiasm that I can generate for publication is that it indicates the total lack of good taste.

Some cases in point were the scene from The Grapes Of Wrath and that concerning Mice And Men. Both of these I am convinced by past reading and movie versions are intended by the author to be serious even emotionally touching scenes. Significantly, both were wrongly interpreted by the actors and laughed at by a large portion of the audience.

SOMEBODY'S FAULT is see anything funny in the hardships of indigent itinerant farmers or in a deluded moron having his brains blown out by his only friend. Yet both scenes were greeted with indications of amusement. Of course the last name of the audience was paralyzed and catered to by the bad taste of some section of the evening's script, but this in itself was no excuse. If staring dramatic emptiness is not a have reason to believe that immature people think "funny" is the audience to be funny they would exclude it from their ranks. Thus the laughs of some of the prevalent "humor" is directly attributable to viewers as well as the performers.

The truth of this is illustrated by the fact that FSU students have been known to laugh at truly fine dramatic productions. For example when Cry The Beloved Country was performed I actually witnessed laughter at this story of a paternalistic child murderer. Now if this is a subject to be thought of as humorous or perhaps cute, then I must have a grotesquely distorted sense of values.

Somehow I feel confident that most people would tend to side with me in the feeling that these are somber themes indeed and definitely not humorous to reasonably mature human beings. If I am optimistic enough to suppose that even those who laugh would upon later reflection realize their actions were over infantile. Nevertheless there are still people who have not reached the least comprehension of their own impropriety.

AS LONG AS this continues, mass entertainment will continue to cater to low standards of audience appeal, and college students will have no right to complain about the incredible debase of horror genre "entertainment" served up for their approval by the local movie house operators.

The Threepenny Critic

Steinbeck Reading Not Worth Effort

By RYAN EDWARDS

"The Best of Steinbeck," last Tuesday night's Artist Series offering will have to be chalked up as something of a disappointment. And a bitter one, too, for judging from the size of the audience the whole campus was anticipating an exciting theatre experience.

We were certainly eager to see it. We had heard a lot about these small, still experimental reading groups that seem to be setting a trend in modern theatre, and we had enthusiastically relished the complete recordings of Don Juan in Hell and Jane Brown's Body, the two productions that started the ball rolling.

But just because a bandwagon has made a lot of noise there is no sign that a change of heart will get the same results the next trip around.

THE STEINBECK band was hampered by a lot of things. First and foremost was the material. O. B. Shaw and Shepherd Wherret were distinguished writers. Steinbeck is not. He is a colorful, picturesque, sometimes profound, but never really distinguished.

And this is a telling point, for his work needs nothing more desperately. By limiting himself to a certain colorfully populated and broadly defined social and geological area, he has made of himself a writer of fable and allegory. Without a profound literary style, the most cleverly contrived fable is empty and meaningless.

HOWEVER, THIS could work to the actor's benefit, for fabulous characters are ripe for the flesh-and-blood of a personal interpretation. Robert Blaine provided just that throughout the evening. His Pirate and Lennie were played with conviction, warmth, and admirable subtlety. They emerged as significant allegorical figures, worthy perhaps of a permanent place in American literature.

The other actors were not so successful, and Steinbeck's emotional superficiality worked against them. Frank McHugh had some entertaining moments as Lennie's friend, George. In Of Mice and Men, but this portrayal was somewhat inappropriate to the darker selections on the program.

CONSTANCE BENNETT, for all her technical refinement and youthful appearance, never seemed real. Though she was delightful to watch as Molly Morgan, the mimicked ending of the sketch only pointed up her emotional inadequacy.

Ted Andrews was adept enough as being faithful to the author—all his interpretations were as stereotyped as Steinbeck wrote them.

The stage was well-handled and the music was well-chosen. They helped make the evening interesting and colorful.

Steinbeck and inadequate acting made it not quite worth the effort.

Meters A Drag

TO THE EDITOR:

I have just found the answer to the F S U parking problem. This is the installation of metered parking throughout the campus. I am fully advantages of this system are in. First it would offer a considerable source of revenue, it would also discourage the driving to school of those students who force them to stop when they run out of dimes. But to me the most advantageous purpose of all is the income derived from it. Let's take a hypothetical case. One student, eager the pursuit of a higher education, drives his or her car to class at 8 o'clock in the morning. He has these meters for a forty-two minute duration making it a physical impossibility to attend three class periods. Assuming a minimum of total revenue derived from one violation would be sixty cents. With all upon the meter and fifty cents fine, if paid within twenty-four hours. Let's say two hundred students receive an income of $9,600 a day. Considering complementary tickets and the faculty advantages of this system are in. All us poorer students, approximately half the metered space would be utilized. The total daily revenue now being $4,800 or $24,000 a week. From this amount will be will deducted a small increase in police force, maintainence and purchase of meters. Let's say this amounts to $4,000 a week, the total income $19,200 a week. With this added income we could do away with all upon the meter and better buildings, perhaps lowering the tuition, and we could CARE packages to some to the government, and even send CARE packages to some to the government.

If I sound bitter it is because I am. There is a minimum of overcrowded and inefficient parking meters on spaces that beyond force were allocated for the use of students shows me the student population is for one reason or another is not concerned enough sleep nights for I have paid my debt to society by putting a dime in meter #4 and paying my fifty cent fine. I am sure that the thinking willingly to the Florida Flambeau Promotion a Schwinn bike, hoping there will be reduced meter rates on bicycle parking.

Hungary Debate Continues

TO THE EDITOR:

I'll admit, if you will, that a continuation of our little debate can be of no practical value, now that the Hungarian situation has apparently stabilized into one of more or less complete victory for the Russians in that unhappy locale.

While not posing as representing any of the learned global political analysts on this campus, I would like to offer some answer to the questions you asked in the November 20 issue of the Flambeau.

1. The United States has never preached the application of armed force as a method to be used in countering Communist expansion or oppression. The one time it practiced it in recent years—Korea—lives in our memories as proof of the modern axiom that you can't fight a successful little war. The esteem in which the United States is held was never demonstrated with such concrete clarity as by England and France in their Suez fiasco; both countries planned and executed their scheme without ever informing their esteemed ally, but when the scheme soured and their all support must fall below national needs, both countries cry out for the United States dollars—and tankers. This sort of esteem is not dear to me.

2. The methodical consideration of power that you mentioned was just the item that prohibited United States' armed intervention in Hungary. This is another area of the facts of life upon which you are incompletely informed. Our military capabilities in Europe, North Africa, and the Middle East are such that we could inflict heavy casualties during a heroic stubborn retreat. We are not capable of forcefully occupying Communist real estate if you don't believe me, read what our generals, whose business it is to know, write on the subject.

I couldn't find anything in the quote from the President's speech that promised military intervention in any of the trouble areas of the world. Neither could I find anything in your article about what the Communist have said will be their course of action; only what you, in your opinion, think they think.

I answered your first editorial on the subject because it represented a case of wishful thinking standard emotionalism. I'm convinced that I can once again sleep nights for I have paid my debt to society by putting a dime in meter #4 and paying my fifty cent fine. I am sure that the thinking willingly to the Florida Flambeau Promotion a Schwinn bike, hoping there will be reduced meter rates on bicycle parking.

Just Two Penalties!

Florida State's Seminole footballers probably missed a trip to the Gator Bowl this December 31 by two 15-yard penalties and a one-in-a-lifetime freak play.

No one may seem like hasty reasoning, to say that a team with one mark missed a big bowl game by such a small margin. But think it can reason out this way:

The penalties we refer to are a 15-yard holding penalty which cost the Tribesmen a touchdown against Georgia and a 5-yard setback for an illegal shift which cost them one against Miami.

The freak play we mentioned came last weekend at Auburn. It was when halfback Billy Odom with a clear field in front of him ran his own man, quarterback Trey Barnes, who had turned around to block the last Auburn man.

When Odom ran into Barnes he was in the clear for a touchdown which would probably have tied the score with the Tigers. They were tied at the time 7-0.

Since the Seminoles went on to score in the fourth quarter, that touchdown would have probably given them an upset 14-13 triumph over Auburn.

Now the Gator Bowl reasoning. Without the penalties and the freak play, FSU would have wound up with a 7-2-1 mark in the eyes of Georgia and Auburn.

This coupled with a 20-14 showing against Miami we feel would have been enough to induce Gator Bowl authorities to offer the Seminoles a snack at the classic.

Notwithstanding these breaks the wrong way, it is safe to say that local hearts were satisfied with the outcome of the season.

At least one climax of the season is that the Tribe's quarterback Lee Corso has been nominated by North Carolina coach Jim Tatum to play in the annual Blue-Gray all-star game December 21 at Montgomery, Ala.

This to our knowledge is the first time a Seminole man has been considered to such an event, and it should bring the school a great deal of favorable publicity.

Next year is a long way off, but it should be mentioned that a strong freshman team (3-1-1) will have in fill some gaps in the backfield if next year's gridiron effort is to be as successful as this year's.

The close shaves with Southeastern Conference clubs Georgia and Auburn and a better than average battle with powerful Miami brought the Seminoles quite a bit of publicity this year, and it is evident that Florida State is beginning to make a name for itself in major-college football circles.

It won't be long now.

Intramural Football Starts Next Week; Basketball Continues

The intramural sports schedule moves another notch when the whistles swing Monday when six fraternity games touch off the touch football season.

Because of the conflict with classes currently running, the touch football will be played on Tuesdays and Thursdays with the exception on Monday and Wednesday.

The fraternity teams will play football on Monday and Wednesdays at 4:15 and basketball Tuesday and Thursday.

Games will be timed with each team playing two games each week. Campbell and Florida Gymnasium and the University Field. Both practice fields will be used. Games start at 4:15 and the last game is at 6:30 deadline for forfeiting.

Managers are to meet tomorrow at 2 p.m. at Campbell Gymnasium PKT will play SN and KA at 4:00 to demonstrate rules and regulations. All team players and managers and all officials are to attend.

The opening games on Monday Dec. 3rd are: ATO vs PKP, DTD vs TEP, SN vs SPE, KA vs PKA, TC vs LCA, SAE vs PKT.

On Tuesday the schedule is BSU vs Lutherans, Rebels vs Vets, Penthouse vs Magnolia, Methodists vs Playboys, Sr. Hall vs Feds.

Full schedule is on the Student Center Intramural Board.

SOMETIMES A GIRL NEEDS A LIFT. The FLAMBEAU'S newest sports writer, Bess Weller, solves the problem of how to interview basketballer Bob Williams (she's 5-1, he's 6-8) with the aid of a footstool.

Williams, 6-8 Center, Primed For Big Year

By BESS WELLER
Flambeau Sports Writer

Bob Williams, key Seminole cager, is primed for a great year as the 1956-57 basketball season gets underway. The 6-8 senior is expected to help put the Seminoles on victory road in their first year as a major college team.

Hampered by weak ankles throughout the 1955-56 season, Bob's action was somewhat restricted. His ankles strengthened, he is looking forward to a challenging but promising year.

Statistically, Williams played 22 of the 25 games scheduled last season, and ranked second on the squad in total rebounds. He had the fourth highest shooting percentage, and scored 102 points.

In the past two years the big man, particularly Rick Benson and Gary Weld, have seemed to develop and play their best ball in their senior years. Coach Bud Kennedy hopes that this will apply in Williams' case also.

Williams hails from Covington, Indiana, where he moved toward the end of his sophomore year. Having previously played basketball in New Mexico, he joined the Covington High School squad.

Named on the All Wabash Valley team his senior year, he was offered a scholarship by Florida State.

Following in Bob's footsteps is his younger brother Mike. Mike played four years of varsity basketball for Covington High School and is now at FSU on a four-year scholarship.

He shows great promise among the Frosh teamsters, and is probable starting center this season, says Frosh Coach Jim Oler.

While at Florida State Bob is studying pre-law and economics. After graduation he plans to study law at Indiana University and his greatest ambition is to practice law with his father in Covington.

The quiet, amiable cager had little to say about this year's prospects. Bob said he is expecting a rough season, but that he has high hopes.

He picked the University of Florida as the Seminoles' best rival, and North Carolina State as the toughest team scheduled.

Having played on the starting team much of the time for the past two years, Williams has a wealth of experience. Coach Bud Kennedy says, "I'm counting on Bob for a great year."

Tribe Cagers Open Slate With Duquesne Tomorrow

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Writer

An untried, potentially powerful Florida State University basketball team opens its season tomorrow night in Pittsburgh against the veteran-laden Iron Dukes of Duquesne.

Then on Monday, December 3, the FSU squad moves over to Ohio to meet, small but highly regarded, Steubenville College.

FSU head coach Bud Kennedy views Duquesne as the toughest opener the Seminoles have ever had. But Kennedy added "we are happy to be playing a team of Duquesne's caliber."

The Dukes, who amassed an overall 17-10 record last year, have been weakened by the graduation of all-American Si Green. But head Coach Dudley Moore has nine returning lettermen, which makes Duquesne a very dangerous and experienced team.

WILLIAMS STARTS

Bob Williams, 6-8, will start at the pivot post for the Seminoles. One of seven returning letterman for the Tribe, Williams is being relied on heavily by Kennedy.

The guard positions will be handled by senior Tom Waits and scrappy Tom Gorca.

Adding more experience to the Tribe's attack will be 6-5 veteran forward, Stu Gregory. At the other forward post will be either letterman Bob Ward or sharpshooting sophomore, Hugh Durham.

Also slated for plenty of action are Larry Strom, Fred Twomey, Joe Williams and Joe Weathers.

The Duquesne squad is led by Dave Ricketts. Ricketts has a big job in filling Green's shoes as top scorer, but he is rated a very capable performer.

REBOUNDING

The rebounding work for the Dukes is handled by 6-2 George Smith who is assisted by 6-3 John Sauer. According to Coach Moore, Bernie Matthews and Bill Ryan are good fast-break men. Moore, in twenty-two years of coaching, has never ended a season below the .500 mark.

Steubenville, which had a 22-4 record last season, has a team which revolves around Jim Smith. Smith was their top scorer last year and was listed sixth in rebounding for the nation's minor colleges.

A national magazine has nominated Smith for honorable mention all-American.

Volleyballers Play In Atlanta Tourney

Florida State's volleyball team will participate in the Peach Bowl Volleyball tournament in Atlanta on December 1.

It will be the first time that the Seminoles have ever been in this tourney.

Coach Bill Odeneal will start his two all-Americans Felmn Zeko and Gene Lewis, along with James McFatter, Bernie McCann, Marvin McLean, John Miller, Duane Eby, Mark Sullivan and Edgar Barnett.

In their only appearance to date the volleyballers defeated Graham Air Force Base in three straight games as they try to regain the national championship crown they won two years ago.

According to coach Odeneal the team has a more diversified attack this year with the addition of returning letterman James McPatter, just back after four years of Navy duty, and a left-handed spiker Duane Eby of Dayton, Ohio.

"With solid blocking and deceptive smash serves the Seminoles should be hard to handle this year," says Odeneal.

On December 8 the volleyballers travel to St. Petersburg to avenge the one game loss to St. Petersburg Recreation department which denied them the championship last year.

LITTLE STORIES WITH BIG MORALS

First Little Story

Once upon a time when the inventors of the airplane were very small boys, the roof on their house developed a terrible leak. A repairman was called to fix it. He set his ladder against the side of the house, but it was a very tall house and his ladder was not quite long enough to reach the roof.

"Sir, we have an idea," said the boys who even at that tender age were resourceful little chaps. "We will get up on top of the ladder and boost you up on the roof."

So the boys climbed to the top of the ladder, and the repairman came after them, and they tried to boost him up on the roof. But alas, the plan did not work and they all came tumbling down in a heap.

MORAL: Two Wrights don't make a rong.

Second Little Story

Once upon a time a German exchange student came from Old Heidelberg to an American university. One night there was a bull session going on in the room next to his. "Ach, excuse me," he said timidly to the group of young men assembled there, "vher vhat is that heavenly smell I smell?"

"Why, that is the fragrant aroma of our Philip Morris cigarettes," said one of the men.

"Himmel, such natural tobacco goodness!"

"It comes in regular size in the handy Snap-Open pack, or in box size in the new crushproof box. . . Won't you try one?"

"Ja-bestenlish," said the German exchange student happily, and from that night forward, whenever the men lit up Philip Morris Cigarettes, he never failed to be present.

MORAL: Where there's smoke, there's Meyer.

Third Little Story

Once upon a time Penelope, the wife of Ulysses, had herself a mess of trouble in Ithaca. With her husband away at the Trojan War, all the local blades were wooing Penelope like crazy. She stalled them by saying she wouldn't make her choice until she finished weaving a rug. Each night when her suitors had gone home, Penelope, that sly minx, would unravel all the weaving she had done during the day.

Why don't you hide in this One?

Well sir, one night she left her rug lying outside. It rained buckets, and the rug got all matted and shrunken, and Penelope couldn't unravel it. When the suitors came back in the morning, the poor frantic woman started running all over the house looking for a place to hide.

Well sir, it happened that Sappho, the poetess, had come over the night before to write an ode about Penelope's Grecian urn. So she said, "Hey, Penelope, why don't you hide in this urn? I think it's big enough if you'll kind of squinch down."

So Penelope hopped in the urn, and it concealed her perfectly except for her hair-do which was worn upswept in the Greek manner.

Well sir, with the suitors pounding on the door, Sappho had to move fast. She whipped out a razor and cut off Penelope's hair. The suitors looked high and low but they couldn't find Penelope.

MORAL: A Penny shaved is a Penny saved.

KA Serenade Ends Night Tussle With Sorority

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

SORORITY ROW, Tuesday, Nov. 27—The soothing Southern strains of a Kappa Alpha serenade ended a night of warfare between the gentlemen of Lee's Legacy and the Delts Delta Delta sorority.

For their spoils the damsels claimed one warbling, if somewhat ashtrays, a cup, a knife, and a beer can opener taken from the Kappa Alpha mansion. They also boasted the scalp of a KA.

And the Kappa Alpha prize?

Possibly a world's record—the clipping of the hair of 30 sorority girls. At one time. In one place. Despite overwhelming odds. Sho'nuff.

It began about 7:30 p.m. When the KAs raided the Tri-Delt house and made off, not with the Tri Delta, but with their trophies.

"War!" Agonizing reappraisal! Tri Delt actives led the pledge class in a bold charge on the Kappa Alpha mansion ("Across with the mostest, and like that. We wanted to find our trophies," explained a Tri Delt. "And they weren't expecting us.")

But the KAs held the line like Stonewall Jackson. "Pour or five," explained a KA leader, "normals!" the invaders downstairs at the door while reinforcements were hastily sent for. The invaders were herded into the basement and held there, "which was a job," the battered KA leader admitted.

One by one they were taken out and subjected to the clippers. "Just a little but enough to make a mess," a shorn Tri Delt colonel admitted.

Then the girls were released, but their coat pockets contained the assorted lamps, ashtrays, mops, knives and beer can openers. The wash tub, it seems, had been commandeered early in the fray.

A KA soldier made the mistake of perching on a Tri-Delt automobile fender all the way back across no man's land, and when the troop transport reached sorority row he was seized and rendered heroic on his hair. "He was scalped", explained a Tri-Delt.

Then, as the poppies grew 'n Flander's Field, peace and charity returned. The KA's called a disk jockey to dedicate a song to the Tri-Delts. And the Tri-Delts returned the favor. And despite freezing weather, the KA's serenaded the Tri-Delts.

BULLETIN

As of Wednesday evening, the KA's claimed the trouble had been returned and the Tri Delts still wanted to know where their trophies were.

'Attack' Realistic Film War Thriller

By ALAN KASS

Several years ago MGM released "P.O.W.", a picture depicting the story of prisoners of war. The flick incurred the wrath of the Department of Defense which claimed it was a distortion of the atrocities committed in Communist POW camps during the Korean War. It did lack reality, and in turn was just another war picture.

By contrast we have at the State a new and great war picture, "Attack." In an exciting adventure that distinguishes itself as one of the truly realistic war pictures of our times, its realism of reality is so great that the Pentagon tried to censor "Attack".

It shows an Army officer in a bad light, depicting one captain Cooney as a coward unable to exercise correct command.

It seems the picture remained uncut and the results are powerful.

The movie makers named Jack Palance for the lead role. In this picture as in the past, he emotes with such strong conviction that people believe he hams up the proceedings.

The supporting cast does a fine job particularly Eddie Albert as the coward and newcomer W. Lyam Smithers. Other familiar faces are Buddy Ebsen, Lee Marvin and Robert Strauss.

The plot deals with an infantry company commanded by a cowardly Captain, who is trapped behind the line during the battle of the Bulge. Several times many lives are lost because the Captain shows poor judgement in his decisions. The men grow to hate him and at climax the captain gets him. "Attack" is arm realistic, entertaining movie-fare.

A recent Time movie review called Elvis Presley a combination of a sausage, a living corpse and a Walt Disney gold fish. This, of course, brings the movie "Love Me Tender," running until Wednesday at the Florida.

The movie is one medium in which Elvis does not belong—as evidenced by his comparatively small speaking part, as the younger of the Reno boys.

He handles his scenes quite well but when he speaks he just shatters the dream.

I was quite disappointed by the movie since I thought it was written for Elvis. Apparently the only thing written for him were the songs, which he wrote anyway. The story is weak, the plot point, the cinemascope not in color so all there is is Elvis.

Over at the Ritz is some fine holiday film-fare entitled "The Holly And The Ivy," with Ralph Richardson heading the English cast.

You'll be surprised when you go into Baker's and see how many special Christmas albums they have. But the record companies must have run short of original titles . . . there are at least 3 different albums entitled Merry Christmas.

One is by seasonal stand-by Bing Crosby, doing the same Christmas songs he's been rimming since his success with "White Christmas."

Capitol's Merry Christmas album is by Jackie Gleason. And contemporary, popular Christmas song are used to say Merry Christmas from Lawrence Welk and his Champagne Orchestra.

Perry Como has a nice, relaxed collection of old favorites on an album at Baker's called Merry Christmas Music. Or if you prefer something more formal than Como, Mario Lanza Sings Christmas Carols on an RCA Victor album.

If you don't care for Christmas with Crosby Gleason, or Como you might like Christmas at Liberace's. His album contains music which he feels expresses the Christmas spirit in the family, and on the record jacket Mother Liberace tells about the celebration at their home.

You'll like A Christmas Sing with Bing, especially if you heard last year's CBS Radio Show when Crosby did music from around the world.

A Decca album at Baker's features two narrations that were originally radio programs. Loretta Young reads The Littlest Angel, by Charles Tazewell. And Gregory Peck tells of a Lullaby of Christmas, the story of a modern Christmas miracle.

We'll talk more about Christmas music in the next Turntable In the meantime, stop in at Baker's to see and listen for yourself.

University Rejects Holiday Extension

Scheduling Problem Cause Of Refusal, Martin States

By CHARLET POITEVINT

A controversial Student Senate proposal to extend Christmas holidays until January 7 was rejected by the university administration this week.

The vacation period will remain the same—from noon December 20 to January 3.

Vice President A. B. Martin, speaking for President Doak S. Campbell who is out of town, said yesterday the extension was not granted because of scheduling difficulties.

Dr. Martin said any days missed on this case, January 3 and 4, would have to be made up sometime during the school year.

He pointed out students wishing to obtain special permission to leave school a week early in order to work may do so.

One of the reasons Senate requested the vacation extension concerned the limited days students will be able to work during the holidays. There are only working days before Christmas and eight days afterward.

It appeared the resolution would have given students another extended before returning to campus.

The resolution was first introduced in Senate last month by Betty Faye Bittner, Polly Arraez, and Pat Finlay. The Labor, Student Services, and Education committee, headed by Don LeVea, was appointed to study it.

LeVea reported back to Senate that week that the extension was "possible," and Student Body Vice President Bill Cullom called for further investigation.

Discussion in Senate revealed that students have an abbreviated vacation period, 10 days allowing for days for students who live in distant places to travel. Resolution sponsors also said other state universities received a longer period than FSU.

The proposal to extend the Christmas holidays has been proposed by Student Government for previous years, but has had little success.

Seniors To Vote On 'Who's Who'

Seniors will vote Thursday to select 22 of their class for Who's Who among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

Joan Becker, chairman of a ten-member nominating committee, said 68 seniors' names will be on the ballot.

Polls will be at Westcott Building, the Student Center and the Seminole Club, open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The elections committee will conduct the election.

Miss Becker said any ballot with more than 22 names marked will be disqualified. Winners will not be announced until the publishers of Who's Who confirm the selections, she added.

Seniors nominated were Don Alford, Charles Alley, Jamie Ashmore, Barbara Ayala, Dave Bachman, Margaret Ann Ballinger, Marian Benson, Ann Bohler, Claudette Carley, Jane Chapman, Carolyn Clore and Lee Corse.

Also, Delores Cosio Bennie Jo Cowart, Nancy Cubbon, Marian Dyckman, Ryan Edwards, Frank Fansler, Ellen Frank, Ann Gregory, Gail Hanshaw, Ray Hemann, Emilie Hudson, and Bruce Jacob.

Also, Barbara Jeffries, Nancy Johnson, Oscar Johnson, Jo Jones, Gretchen Kerr, Bill King, Harold Lander, Gloria Lantz, Rafael Lecuona, Bill Manning, Mitzi McCullough, Buck Meiss, Jane Nelson, Bill Nolen, Jack Everyn, Mell, and Barbara Harlee Moore.

Also, Jim James C. Moore, "Jem" James Z. Moore, Shirley Morgan, Faye Moses, Virginia Nesmith, Evelyn Nettles, James Nowell, Paul Ott, Pacifico, Charlotte Patterson, Phyllis Patten, and Bob Porter.

Also, Kathleen Pearas, Charlaine Ralston, Carolyn Rhodes, Herb Rinehart, Fred Roberts, Ruth Hrothen Rosser, Pat Rooney, Love Scarborough, Greta Sims, Jimmy Soles, and Jack Sprott.

Also Liz Stainer, Nancy Steen, Sidney Stribling, Tony Swain, Polly Swain, Joe Taylor, Margie Tindall, Norma Trapnell, Cathy Turgle, Ray Wasner, David Ward-Steinman and John Ward.

'Signals Issue Ready Soon

The first edition of Smoke Signals will be published on schedule—to be available on the campus before the Christmas holidays, according to editor Marcella Trunzi.

"The printers already have all the copy, including the advertising, which caused the most trouble, as usual. However, we expect to have the Smoke Signals distributed within two weeks" said Trunzi.

In past years, the fall issue of Smoke Signals has been late. Concluding from this that it is impossible to get it out earlier. Trunzi said "We removed the first publication date back in shortly before Christmas. Therefore this issue is not late, as some people believe, but is actually coming out according to schedule."

Trunzi

He said the main emphasis of the magazine will be social and literary satire ads, humor, poetry, prose, social events and university life will be featured. "We will use the same type of jokes only better ones in an effort to raise the standards of humor in the magazine," said Trunzi.

Board Requests FSU Buildings For $6 Million

Budgets calling for $6,354,844 in new construction and $15,662,716 in operating funds for the next two years at Florida State University were requested Friday by the Board of Control.

In budgets filed with the Budget Commission, the Board revealed the amount of money it hopes to obtain for FSU for 1957-58 Previously preliminary budgets had been submitted the Board by FSU for consideration and revision.

The Board also requested $12,417,848 in construction funds and $41,238,522 in general revenue funds for operations for the University of Florida Operation funds received in 1953-57 were FSU, $11,434,439, and U of F, $26,307,574.

In all, the Board asked for $18 million in capital revenue funds for state universities, of which $71 million would go for operating expenses and the rest for buildings and $36 million in trust funds for operations. The grand total is up $29 million over the current biennium.

In its total $41 million higher education construction budget, the Board also allotted $12,200,000 to build a new university in the Tampa Bay area, $740,000 to plan a new university on the Space Coast, and $46,000 for preliminary surveys for another one in West Florida.

HAVE PROPERTY

Top priority in the FSU construction budget was assigned to a $1,963,500 mathematics and meteorology building.

Other projects, listed in the order of their priority ratings, assigned by the Board of Control:

Social sciences classroom building, $996,600; completion of the new school education building which had to be curtailed because of higher costs $280,000; provides classrooms on top floor of ROTC building $57,900; providing psychological research laboratory on fourth floor of old education building $28,500

RENOVATE BUILDING

General renovations to old education buildings $42,000; remodeling old science building (mainly air conditioning laboratories) $42,592; air conditioning new home economics building $70,000; air conditioning Conradi theater $22,000; air conditioning machinery for new school of business building $46,766.

Also staff building for Oceanographic Institute at Dog Island, $24,840; laboratory extension for Oceanographic Institute $30,000; Oceanographic pier extension $5,000; acquisition of land facing campus and between main campus areas $150,000; married student housing facilities on dairy farm property $1,360,676 to be borrowed on revenue certificates.

Also, a men's thirty unit dormitory $1,911,800, of which half would be borrowed money is needed dormitory is planned under a federal loan already approved; bookstore and post office addition $75,000 all borrowed; and additions to the Demonstration School to provide expanded teacher training facilities. $139,000

The FSU share of operational budget calls for $3,854,266 in general revenue tax money and $2,-000,000 to be produced from borrowing on self-liquidating loans. The U of F total is $10,580,308 $8,852,650 in general revenue and $3,817,000 from loans.

FSU Nuclear Center Asked As State Program Develops

The Board of Control Friday asked for $2,619,800 for a nuclear research center at Florida State University as the State Nuclear Development Commission threw its backing to an "overall nuclear energy program."

The FSU request was expected to be followed up with another for about $12,000,000 for a nuclear reactor center for the University of Florida. Included in Friday's request was a budget of $1,000,000 for a Cobalt 60 source at Florida Agricultural and Mechanical College.

These requests will be left to the Legislature to consider. The Development Commission said, but it voted to recommend to Governor LeRoy Collins that an overall program be begun which will include study fellowships at state universities and employment of a full-time director.

The Commission's report called the "outstanding training center" for nuclear research. Acting on the report from the Advisory Committee, it voted to recommend establishment of 20 graduate fellowships in the nuclear energy field, divided equally between FSU and U of F. The fellowships would have a value of about $2,500 each per year, or a total of $100 000 for the coming biennium.

The $2,600,000 FSU nuclear research center is part of a total of $6,500,000 worth of new buildings requested for the 1957-59 biennium.

The principal capital outlay will be for two high energy nuclear accelerators and a building to house them. Physics department head Dr. Robert Schaerf said in October, when FSU revealed its wish for a center, that the two accelerators will supplement each other and "give us a versatile source of nuclear radiation"

SERVE EVERY DEPARTMENT

He added both will serve every department of the university and will be used in studies into the properties of the nucleus experiment to improve nuclear technology, radiation chemistry and radiation and food preservation studies. There is now no comparable laboratory anywhere in the South, except at Rice.

In its report Friday, the Nuclear Development Commission suggested the state continue to rely on a citizens committee for guidance in development of nuclear energy for Florida but appropriate $50,000 additional to the governor's office expense fund to hire a full-time staff and a salaried director.

WOULD SPUR INTEREST

Another recommendation was for the governor to appoint a state committee on high school science and mathematics to stimulate interest in the high schools and for the state to "fulfill its responsibility" in formulating programs for insurance safety, public health and regulations involving nuclear installations.

The State Board of Health, which would be responsible for public health in the program, would need $66,200, and the State Development Commission is asking $80,000 to aid in the program of attracting nuclear industries to Florida.

The commission also would have a three-day seminar on the campus of one of the state universities early next year to explain the full program.

Home Ec Event Slated Today

The student open house committee invited all students taking home economics courses to an open house event will be held in the new Home Economics building from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. today.

There will be guides to conduct tours through the laboratories and class rooms in the buildings. Refreshments will be served in the large lounge, Room 21..

On 100th Anniversary Of Birth

Talk To See Wilson As' Idealist, Realist'

The 100th anniversary of President Woodrow Wilson's birth will be observed tomorrow night by Phi Alpha Theta, history honorary, which will sponsor a Centennial Program in Outpersuit Music Hall.

Dr. Victor S Mamatey, associate professor of history, will deliver a speech, "Woodrow Wilson —Idealist and Realist." The program will begin at 8 p.m., according to Dick Lukas, Phi Alpha Theta president.

Dr. Mamatey, who received his master's degree from Harvard and his Ph.D. from the University of Paris, joined the FSU faculty in 1946. He is the author of the Wilson commemorative issue of the FSU faculty studies series, published this year, contributors to which include Dr. Thomas Graham Pfiffner of the speech department, Dr. Elston Roady, political science, and Dr. Paul Pickrel, English visiting lecturer now with the Florida Citizens' Tax Council.

Dr. Mamatey is author of a forthcoming book Woodrow Wilson and the Birth of the New Nations of East Central Europe, 1914-18; A Study in American Diplomacy and Propaganda,

Senate's Holiday Request Should Have Been Granted

It is unfortunate that the university administration chose not to grant student government's request for an extension of the Christmas holidays. A great number of students who had counted upon working during the holidays will suffer.

Even harder pressed, however, are those many students who live in the northeast, midwest, and far west. To return by 8 a.m. Thursday, January 3, they will have to leave early New Year's Day, possibly before.

Now it is not necessary to argue the obvious dangers of driving on a holiday, or to call to mind the fact that New Year's is always New Year's and that no one should have to stir from beneath his ice pack the next day. It is one of those holidays that, traditionally, are spent with one's family, and if the university cannot extend the holidays it ought at least to make things easier for the out-of-state students. Perhaps the ridiculous one-sixth - course - credit-penalty-for-missing-first-classes ought to be waived.

In coming back on the 3rd of January, students will have two days of classes before the weekend, and then a class day on Monday. Tuesday will be a holiday—the inauguration of the Governor.

The university should have forgotten those three days and extended the holiday to Wednesday morning. While it is true that students attend college primarily to study, the academic year has been lengthened this term. Commencement will be June 1 instead of May 28, for example. The Christmas holiday begins later. Conceding to Student Government's request would not have been at all unreasonable.

Infirmary Should Add Services For Dental Care, Eye Cases

The State of Florida's wise investment in an infirmary at Florida State University was based on the fact that healthy students will learn more than students afflicted with various ills. Accordingly, to most student government leaders, however, this philosophy is not followed to its logical conclusion.

Secretary of Student Welfare Bob Elting pointed out this week that there might be sufficient need for a dental service at the University Hospital to justify a request to the State Legislature. It should be done, he said, with a fee service already in existence dental care would necessitate only a small additional investment, which would pay ample dividends.

Not having a dental service, and, for that matter, an optometrical department, is like providing only three wheels for an automobile of conventional design.

The basic costs of preventive dentistry are small, yet prevailing prices downtown are such that students cannot afford necessary examinations. This need could be accommodated on campus. Minor work, such as filling, could easily be performed for a small fee, while it would be no less than reasonable to refer students to Tallahassee specialists when dental surgery and bridge-fitting are needed.

The case is similar for care of the eyes. Surely a university that expects students to study, assuming it is willing in the first place to provide a "socialistic" infirmary, ought to provide some optometrical care. While the filling of prescriptions would still have to be done elsewhere, because of the cost, students would be spared time and greater expense if they could be examined on campus.

Such matters are certainly ones that Student Government officers ought to consider. The opinions of the Student Body would aid them in this consideration and reinforce any requests they may make to university and state authorities.

How about some comment?

Calling The Card

Ban On Villanova Doesn't Add Up

By JIM McINTYRE

We hope the attitude of S. U. never reaches the stage that our good neighbors at Georgia Tech suffered through last year in regard to the Sugar Bowl game in which Bobby Grier was to participate. Grier, as you will remember, was a fullback on the Pittsburgh team who happened to be a Negroid.

His presence on the Panther squad created that protector of arrest traditions Roy Harris to become concerned over the welfare of the Tech football team. Under pressure from the Board of Trustees, of which Harris was the most vociferous member, the governor forbade participation in the bowl by the Tech team.

THIS AROUSED the ire of the Engineer following somewhat, and the downcasting their contempt for Mr. Harris and the governor by burning them in effigy and marching on the gubernatorial manor. This won immediate publicity for the institution and the state, none of it favorable.

And now we hear that if Villanova has Negroes on their squad next year they will either have to leave them home or the game will have to be played in either Philadelphia or Havana, Cuba.

NOT POSSESSING THE pecuniary resources for a trip to either place, we begin to wonder about the sensibilities of this policy. We is not claim to be enlightened as to its origin, but suppose it to be a law arsen us by our state legislature and not our school.

Now the wisdom of the regulation begins to come under fire. As far as we can see, the principle of interaction does not enter into the picture at all, unless one finds that participation in an inter-racial football game will open the floodgates and lead to intermarriage, miscegenation, mongrelization, amalgamation and like that.

IT SEEMS to bring to mind another interesting point. Professional athletics may be carried on with participation of any race in any field indiscriminately. Satchel Paige has been invaluable to the Miami Marlins this past summer. Signing training for major league baseball teams brings a majority of the teams within the confines of the prejudice states. The pro football teams play exhibitions before the season starts in Dixie and in Florida cities when the old Tallahassee rebels of the Florida International League had Negro participants.

These ventures are obviously different in the minds of the enlightened men who sit in session on the hill. The principals involved are professional athletes, beyond the point of undermining loyalties, the revenue from all these ventures, aside from the resultant publicity, is enough to warrant their continuation.

But Florida State can't entertain a team with one or two Negroes on the squad. It just doesn't add up.

'Tekes' Give Views In Fraternity Issue

TO THE EDITOR:

Might I take this means to convey to members of the student Body a personal appreciation.

An article in last Friday's Flambeau was the story of the possibility of a new fraternity at Florida State. As stated in that article, my fraternity, Tau Kappa Epsilon has been most active in attempts to colonize here.

For the past two years, a small group of students have been anxiously trying to establish a chapter of T.K.E. As reported in Friday's article, the established F.S.U. fraternities have recently voted 10-4 against our efforts. For this, naturally, we are very disappointed. But the vote has been taken, and we are prepared to withdraw.

It seems most fitting at this time to convey our thanks to the members of the Interfraternity Council, who have certainly been most receptive to our group. We fully realize that for the past two years we have taken up a great deal of their time. To the providence of the local chapters, we extend our warmest thanks for the time they individually gave our petitions. We appreciate talking with them, and members of their chapter, about Tekes. It is no easy matter to listen to a person tell you his plans for the year or that he and the F.S.U. should not be without one; but here they did, and together we discussed the pros and cons.

To the four fraternities, and their presidents, who have voted in favor of our petition from the beginning, my personal and humble thanks I shall never forget your efforts in our behalf, and your friendships and associations will always be the same.

To those fraternities who found room in our petitions on some occasions, and on other occasions found reasons for voting against it, we have no ill feelings toward you. To us it definitely showed that you were being conscientious in your vote. It is only natural for us to be more grateful to those who voted consistently with us, but we do appreciate your consideration.

To those fraternities who found cause to vote continually against our petitions we realize your stand, and are proud that you took it so firmly. You have won your colony and we deliver our congratulations. For our differences, we can only say it is an honest difference. We are proud to know your stand, and look forward to washing your chapters arms and proper.

Mr. Miles Dean, fraternity counselor, has been most helpful to our group. His stand on this situation is a great asset to the fraternity system on this campus. It has been our pleasure to have worked through him and we shall long remember his suggestions and helpful criticism. We have trouble, Mr. Dean's office for the past two years, and we are sure it has been no picnic for him. For your time and trouble Miles, we are very grateful.

Dr Sam Neel has had this problem in his office for the past year and a half. His handlins of this situation is most encouraging for our fraternity system. My personal esteem for Dr. Neel has been greatly raised. If that is possible, during these past events. No other person has been bothered more with our problem. Dr. Neel has talked with me, and others in our group, visited with members of our national office when they were here on campus, and studied the fraternity situation in every possible way. For the findings of Dr. Neel and the Faculty Fraternity Committee, we are very humble, and very much appreciate their combined efforts. They have handled the situation in a most astutious manner, and we extend our personal thanks and the thanks of our National Office.

The Fraternity System will soon forget our efforts, and rightly so, but before we close this phase, I might add this thought. I feel the Florida State University is heading for greatness, and the Interfraternity Council is planning with speed to meet the tremendous growth we shall experience. From the manner in which our group has been received on this campus, although unwanted, we detect it. It's main benefit, we know Florida State will soon find itself as a top fraternity minded university.

Naturally, we feel we have a good fraternity, and we have attempted to begin a good chapter. We feel we have the necessary alumni, the necessary leadership, and the necessary backing from our National Office, to give to Florida State, and the fraternity system, a fraternity both could be justly proud of. We still feel this, and shall at any time be prepared to begin a new fraternity. It is our great desire to become a part of this fraternity system.

The fight is over, and we have lost. Best of luck to the Interfraternity Council May your present be one of calmness, and your future one of true fraternalism Long live the fraternity system! !

YOURS FRATERNALLY,
ROBERT W. POPE

THE DANGERS OF COLLEGE LIFE

(ACP)—Soma suspected activity during Freshman Court" at Brigham Young University put two freshman students in the hospital with injuries recently. The Freshman Court . . . a mock trial with fraternity men are tried by seniors . . . turned into a melee when several students started throwing eggs, flour and buckets of water. The two students who were injured were hit by flying buckets. One of them suffered head lacerations and the other a broken clavicle.

It's been recommended that student body groups be given a free hand in investigating the trouble and then forward suggestions to the University administration. No action is expected by the University until this has been done. Commenting editorially on the melee, the Brigham Young Daily Universe had this to say:

"These boys, who seem to need a means to be recognized by people, and who apparently haven't the ability to distinguish between thoughtless, destructive acts and constructive action, managed to embarrass the freshman class and make a shambles of the careful planning by the senior class. It is hoped that this incident will give all students a little pause so they might remember and consider the possible consequences of acts which are juvenile at the same time they are dangerous."

Cosio Recital Was 'Elegant'

By RYAN EDWARDS

Among Webster's definitions of the word "elegant:" there are two which we feel render the word applicable to the senior recital of pianist Dolores Cosio last Saturday night. These definitions are "correctly fine" and "fastidiously tasteful."

MISS COSIO did nothing on her program which could be called insecurely, and there was never a disturbing tempo, a poorly turned phrase, or an offensive inflection. In a few widely-spaced moments, one might have been willing to sacrifice some of the correctness for a bigger sound, a more convincing bravura technique, or a more versatile emotional expressiveness.

But these lacks were more than compensated for by Miss Cosio's "fastidious tastefulness" which was at all times completely natural, graceful and unpretentious.

This sort of "elegance" being her forte, the Chopin Andante Spianato and Polonaise was naturally the pianist's piece de resistance. But the fine facility and graceful lyricism of this performance was almost equalled by her tonally beautiful and movingly expressive reading of Beethoven's Sonata, opus 111.

THESE TWO performances were the high points. The Bach Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue, for all its excellent sectionings was somewhat lacking in momentum, and the Iberia Suite of Albeniz would have profited from a more virtuosic bravura.

But both of these had the same beautiful tone, natural lyricism, and glittering technique that characterized the entire program. The evening was one of rare elegance.

The Dissenter

Need Sorority, Not New Frat

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

There is room for doubt whether Florida State University needs another social fraternity. Among the 15 already established are several whose existance is tenuous, and, according to officials, there is room for 1,125 men on the various membership rolls, yet 26% of them pledges are unoccupied.

THIS INDICATES either that most of the fraternities are lacking in some essential quality, or that the majority of FSU male students feel no compulsion to become Greek. Possibly both these conclusions are relevant. Whatever the case may be, there would seem to be a very small, unorganized fraternity in campus with all likelihood of success. But it would have to sustain a great deal of criticism from those who are not and who choose to remain independent. At present there is a fraternity to meet nearly every man's need, and only a superior group could hope to establish itself as a social leader.

There is more of a case to be made for the addition of another sorority. Panhellenic Council Rush Week figures generously estimates that there are only 20 vacancies among the 16 flourishing sororities. Yet they entertained limited pledging quotas in order to fill most of the approximately 440 girls who signed preferential cards at formal rush. One hundred and fifty competed for 45 bids during informal rush. There are a few hundred girls who feel hurt and deprived, and it cannot be assumed they would not make a social asset of themselves.

A MAN DENIED a bid to a fraternity can shrug his shoulders and swear a bit. It seems by contrast, however, that a sorority girl cannot do this to a friend and still keep her self-image unbruised or hurt more deeply.

And perhaps one of fraternity's principal attributes is the area of belonging — security. If you will — that it provides its members. There are at least enough girls unaffiliated who feel its need that they could build a sorority of reasonable size.

THE GREAT danger in any fraternity system is that its members will become more their attitudes more toward the fraternity than to the university and the rest of their external environment. Since fraternities and sororities are by nature selective and often unfairly discriminatory, a university must keep the total enrollment somewhere less than half in order to remain sovereign. The problem does not confront FSU, however, for the majority display no interest in being Greek.

And, no matter what their percentage of the campus population, all Greeks have an obligation to remain aware of how about them and not withdraw into a nicely ordered world that cannot last forever.

In The Wings

Collegians, Band At Best

Friday night marked the first appearance of the Symphonic Band and the Collegians, who presented a joint concert in the auditorium. The band, under the direction of Manley Whitcomb, gave a performance of serviceable, if routine, fare while the Collegians concentrated on light folk and popular fare.

The opening number by the Symphonic Band consisted of selections from Gershwin's Porgy and Bess. Featured in the choir and band. Excellent use was made of the auditorium for acoustical effects, with the band and choir placed in the balcony, and the full band on the stage. The brass group, directed by Bobby Sapp, was featured at times, as if to "Wallace" placed behind the eyeglasses, a peculiar, "muted" Lewellen acoustic phenomenon.

Also featured in their part of the program consisted of a piece from Oren Reed's "Fiesta Mexicana," Morton Gould's "Hora Decasmus," and two numbers from Darius Milhaud's "Suite Francaise."

From the standpoint of performance, this was about the best the band has presented in this section, especially. All of were sharp and simultaneous, balance and blend were excellent, and the group showed enough good except for some inescapable out-of-tune playing from the six section, especially the altos.

The music presented was light but solid for the most part. The Gershwin medley was pleasing to the ear, and Fred Reed became tiresome as the composer overly extended them. The suite of Milhaud was definitely rhetorical and pompous.

The strongest material on the program, we felt, was the Milhaud "Suite Francaise." Its typically Gallic wit and spirit were all there, and the band played well and we found ourselves wishing the complete suite was being performed.

The Collegians, under the direction of Robert Howey for the first time, performed their entire program without music. Becoming the second choral group on campus to do so . . . Which will the University Singers—technically the best chorus on campus—take up?

THE COLLEGIANS, a men's size club, were plagued by the usual difficulties besetting an amateur group, but were in not be denied the fact that two numbers were performed well enough to not feel justified in complaining.

The two "Oh! Man Trilogy," a Sex Chantey, and the Cole Porter bit of vaudeville, "Brush Up Your Shakespeare." This performance of these two was as good as anything that has been done recently on this campus, and certainly head-and-shoulder above anything any former Collegians have done.

Ignoring for the moment the musical value of the music, we can try to be objective about the wonderful spirit of the Collegians, their precise attacks, the good intonation, and the incredibly intelligible pronunciation. The Collegians caught fire and were definitely singing above themselves. Our complaints, and perhaps a few of the audience, was that the rest of the program was not up to the level of these two odd songs.

MEN OF THE Collegians consistently raise the performance level of their future programs to that of those two songs; they will be the equal of any professional men's chorus in the country. It will be interesting to watch their growth under their new director, who has already proved himself a welcome addition to the conducting staff.

25 – Point Underdog?

Saturday night in Pittsburgh saw the start of an- basketball season for Bud Kennedy's cagers. How- sort of got off on the wrong foot as the Tribe w 15 points to Duquesne's Iron Dukes.

Iheen points is a lot to lose by in any sport, but the kers had the Tribe as anywhere from a 25-point- going on up. They really thought a lot of FSU.

The Tribe's first year as a big-time basketball n will undoubtedly see them at underdogs in most their games, which includes their defense of the rida Intercollegiate Basketball Conference crown ich they've held since its inception two years ago.

According to advance reports all the other teams make up the conference (Tampa, Rollins, Florida ern, Miami, and Stetson) have improved greatly last season.

In fact, Miami's cagers are the favorite this season.

Any team that loses its top three scorers as Florida n did, without picking up someone to take up the ack is going to have to go some to hold its own in e FIBC race.

Tom Garcia, an off again on again starter last year, ems to be the man around whom the offense is built, ho the only thing against him is his size (he's 5-9).

Before anyone jumps down my throat, I remember well last year when a 5-9 guard led the state in ring, and was well up in that department in the ion.

ATCH DURHAM

And we venture to bet that before long sophomore ntout Hugh Durham of Lousville, Ky., will be at the starting guard position for Kennedy's five.

For those of you who find this name a strange one. ad last year's frosh team in scoring, averaging over points a game. Durham was one of only four freshn to move up to this year's varsity and one of two make the traveling squad.

Kennedy labels Durham as "a hustler all the way hen he's out on the court and is a definite threat for a ting berth." That's high praise for any newcomer.

ig front is anybody's guess as to who will be a con- tant starter, perhaps no one will. There's plenty of s around; Williams, 6-8, Gregory, 6-5, Strom, 6-6, rt, 6-4 and Westhafer at 6-3½.

And as anyone that knows basketball will tell you. ontrol of the backboards is where you win ballgames.

But it's only the beginning of a new season and anyg can happen.

Lavina, Crew Intramural Tennis Singles Champs

Marcial Lavina, International Club, won the Independent tennis singles over the holidays, by beating Frank Bradbury of Magnolia Hall, 6-3, 6-3.

In the doubles Dick Chandler and Ron Fisher of Magnolia beat Ed O'Connel and Ron Moisten of the Feds 7-5, 6-4. The Feds had a 5-3 lead only to lose.

The fraternity doubles went into an extra-final as Neely Alexander and Bill McKenzie of ATO beat Colin Phipps and Fred Shepherd 6-4, 6-3, in the regular final, giving each team a loss.

SAE had won the first match 6-4, 4-6, 6-3. ATO beat LCA in the losers' final 7-5, 8-1.

PRAT TENNIS

Wednesday afternoon Jackie Crew of DTD took the finals of the fraternity tennis singles from the TC's Jack Cunard 6-1, 6-1.

The finals of the fraternity tennis doubles will be played Tuesday at 3:30. The ATO's vs. SAE

BASKETBALL

In the dorm league basketball Wednesday night the Playboys and the Feds remained undefeated. The Playboys downed the Methodists 38-23 and the Feds fought off a late surge by Senior Hall to take that one 30-41.

In other games the Vets won over the Co-Op 41-24, Rebels beat Magnolia 42-18 and the Lutherans forfeited to the B.S.U.

In fast games played Thursday night the SN's knocked the PKT's out of first place by downing them 71-44. This puts the SN's in a tie for first with the SN's who beat the SSE's 37-31.

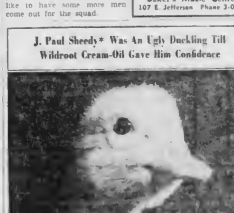
In other games SC beat LCA 36-19, DTD beat PKP 38-19, KS beat the PRA's 36-32 and the SPE's downed TEP 36-32.

The regular schedule of the touch football began Monday, with the fraternity league playing the all around.

FSU Garnet-Gold Swim Meet Friday

The annual Garnet and Gold swimming meet Friday night will signal the official opening of the 1956-57 swimming season.

The Garnet and Gold teams will be composed of swimmers equally divided from the varsity and freshman teams.



The intra-quad meet will preview a team that, according to Coach Bim Stults, will face one of the toughest schedules in the eight year history of the squad.

On tap for the Seminoles this season include such formidable foes as Rice, Texas A&M, Kentucky, SMU, and Florida.

As to the prospects for the varsity this year, Stults has most of his big point getters back and has some good sophomores in Glenn Thatcher, Jerry Glancy and Rube Waddell who were ineligible last year for varsity competition.

As far as the freshman prospects as Stults said that there is a definite lack of candidates for the Frosh team and would like to have some more men come out for the squad.

Can Cagers Brake W. Va. 'Hot Rod'?

West Virginia, one of the nations' top cage powers, plays host to the upstart Florida State University Seminoles, tonight in Morgantown, West Virginia.

The Mountaineers who had a 21-9 record last season, have won the Southern Conference championship two years in a row and are expected to repeat this season.

Hot Rod Hundley, colorful senior forward is the main scoring threat for West Virginia. Last season Hundley, who is known for his clowning antics on the court, had a 24.4 scoring average. He is a leading candidate for everyone's all-American team this year.

Head coach Bud Kennedy of FSU claims that Hoo-Rod will possibly be the best player the Seminoles meet this season.

The starting lineup for the Seminoles will be the same as it was for the first game except that Hugh Durham might break into the lineup at the guard position Durham, along with Tom Garcia, has been "the" spelling light for FSU so far this season.

Garcia

EXPERIENCE SHORT

The Tribe, hurting from lack of experience, will be trying to prove that there is a major Kennedy asserted that. "West Virginia is a well-coached, well balanced team with plenty of class and will be one of our toughest games". The Mountaineers beat VMI 71-47 in their opener Saturday.

The two sophomore guards give the Seminoles plenty of speed and both are good shots from outside. The FSU five have some height in the form of Bob Williams, 6-8, Sig Gregory, 6-5, and Larry Strom, 6-6.

Paired with Hundley at forward is Clayce Kalbaugh who, even though he is a consistent player, is overshadowed by Hot-Rod. The starting guards are Don Vincent and Joedy Gardner both 6-1.

TRIBE LOSES

The Tribe opened their season last Saturday night against Duquesne Coach Kennedy's charges took a 70-55 lesson from the fast sharpshooting Dukes.

FSU stayed with the Dukes the first half mainly on the strength of superior rebounding, but in the second half the Tribe defense weakened and Duquesne opened a big lead.

Bob DePalma Duquesne center was the high scorer for the game with 21 points. Garcia hit for 18 to lead the Seminoles, followed by Durham with 12.

There's an album or special interest at Baker's for all of Liberace's "slobbering fans" as Al Capp calls them!

It's music from the new Broadway musical Li'l Abner. Edith Adams Mrs. Ernie Kovacs in Dacey Mae Peter Palmer is Li'l Abner.

The play brings the comic-strip citizens of Dogpatch to mainstream life, retaining their same tongue-in-cheek view of civilization.

Music was written by Gene de Paul with lyrics by Johnny Mercer. Songs from the show already popular are "If I Had My Druthers," "If'n," and "Namely You."

In addition to the Broadway show album at Baker's, you'll find a big stock of movie sound tracks.

The Paramount movie War and Peace may not have met your expectations of the Tolsoy novel but you'll find the Columbia recording of highlights from the sound track completely satisfying.

Original music by Dimitri Tiomkin for Friendly Persuasion is nice listening. Whether or not you saw the movie On the other hand the sound track from The King and I is an album that is sure as enjoyable if you saw the movie.

Incidentally Baker's now has the Acrivox Production records from The Research Period Pamilua to most FSU Humanities students. The Acrivox system is the history of classics, music, put out by a German recording firm. They're usually hard to find . . . but Baker's has them now.

Formula For Westerns Demonstrated In City

By ALAN KASS

In America, going to the movies and watching cowboy pictures has become as popular an institution as eating eggs for breakfast. Yet of all motion picture entertainment the western is the most cliche-ridden.

The basic formula of the western is stereotyped from beginning to end. It matters little if the process is Cinemascope, Superscope, Widescreen or Vistavision with stereophonic sound.

The true connoisseur can spot the Bad Man, the Good Man and the In-Between the Two-Man before he knocks off his popcorn box. The experts can tell when the screen will explode with such gems as "He went thataway." "Where's the saloon, Blackie?" etc., and if he's really smart, can sing along to the words of the title song.

This perhaps is one of the troubles with foreign pictures. They have yet, except in some isolated instances like "Carmen Jones," a very morbid western from B'nail, and "Fanfan The Tulip", a spoof on American westerns, even attempted to make like a rootin'-tootin' cowboy. Part of the reason is that in England there aren't any wide-open spaces, nor are there any cities like Tombstone, Dead Man's Pass or Triple Creek Bend. And Eastern Europe, though wide enough, it is not sufficiently open, especially these days.

There's the foundation of the plot.

The interesting part lies in determining who is who and which is which. On this basis you will have no story, no plot

WON'T KNOCK THEM

I would be the last person to knock the success of the western movie since many have been extremely popular and profitable. Every year you will find a western included in any poll of that years best films, that year included. In recent years pictures like "Viva Zapata", "High Noon," "Shane", "Vera Cruz" and, this year, "The Searchers" have won critical acclaim. Those pictures didn't quite follow the pattern of the typical western. They were different and thus quite well received.

In the past five days, no less than four different Westerns have galloped into Tallahassee. At the STATE we have "Fury At Gunsight Pass" and "The Desperados Are In Town". Both these pictures are at there best only fair, but on Sunday afternoon there was hardly a seat to be found. Both employed the usual technique.

To demonstrate how easy it is to make a cowboy picture, we will discuss the little gem picture at the FLORIDA Theatre, "In Love Me Tender" we have the Reno boys robbing a train station in the Southwest. So we have our Bad-Men. To try to recover the money we have some investigators on the Bad-Men's path. They of course are the Good-Men. The In-Between-Tne-Two-Men is Elvis Presley, as a good man then a bad man, just plenty of action, suspense, plots of prairies. This pattern western, even with Elvis during the Mexican Revolution and his four songs, will be laid to rustle in the cellar of any true western-lover's memory.

The last of these four western "Bandido", is by far the begin of action.

Senate Views Relief Plan For Hungarians

By CHARLET POITEVINT

Possibilities of an organized relief fund for Hungarian refugees to be sponsored by the Florida State University student body are being looked into by the Student Senate.

Students have voiced a lot of enthusiasm about this idea, but there doesn't seem to be any central organized fund plan," senator Jim Moore, who made the motion in Senate Wednesday.

Interfaith Fellowship is sponsoring a clothing drive for the needy, however.

A special committee composed of Moore Bennie Jo Chanet, and Sandra Lawrence was appointed to study the issue.

Senate also appointed a committee to investigate the price and quality of student directories. Discussion revealed students were disappointed to find the omission of home addresses in the latest edition.

CABINET AIDES

Senate approved the appointment of the following Cabinet assistants: Dick Smith, administrative aide; Jim Kauffman, executive aide; Evelyn Nettles, funds; Anna Typpodo, organizations; Jane Bernstein, veterans affairs.

Approved for Board of Student Publications were Also Whitbeck Ann Bohler, and Russ Parker.

Shirley Morgan was appointed to serve as Honor Court associate justice.

Election committee members approved were Organizations, Chairman, Carol Jane Chapman; Bee Bruckner, Don Westbrook, Jim Johnson, and Bart Durham.

ELECTIONS

Elections committee, John Smith, Jean Harmon, Sandra Brooks, Rufus Jennings, and Barbara Chambers; Secretary of Student Welfare committee, Lamar Cox and Tom Bruckner; Secretary of Recreation committee, Anita Anderson, Martha Grimsley, and Richard Derby; Secretary of Labor committee, Jim Wicker; Honor committee, Cuba Glenda Briscoe Dave Masterson, Marion Ward and Robert Kunsky.

Senate from Wednesday's meeting were Senators Perry, Arnold Pizzo, Fean, Godin, Lassiter, Turner and Williams.

Dr. Hay Asks Clothing Aid For Refugees

Student, faculty and administration were this week given opportunity to participate in Hungarian relief in two announcements that warm clothing will be collected on campus.

Dr. Marcus Hay, professor of Education and a voluntary relief committee will accept clothes donated. Warm clothing should be left at room 125-A, Education Building she said.

She added, "There are 100,000 refugees and thousands of people inside Hungary who need these clothes, and we're planning on sending all we collect there the quickest way possible." Clothing donated will be sent both to the Hungarian and to the Austrian receiving center, she said

A separate drive to collect winter clothing for Hungarian refugee students in Austria has been initiated by Inter-Faith Council. A committee chairman announced.

"The object is to get as much there as soon as we can," declared Sue Lovell. She asked that donated clothes be "in fairly good condition."

The chairman said members of the Inter-Faith Fellowship in all denominations, fraternities and sororities will arrange for the placing of boxes in their respective houses. Students not given an opportunity to donate that way, may leave clothes at Sue Lovell's residence, South Carrlton Apts.

She said World University Service the major beneficiary of FSU's Chinese Closet has received similar donations from other universities throughout the United States. The drive will end December 14. All clothes collected will be sent to New York for processing and shipment overseas.

Miss Lovell added that summer as well as winter garments will be accepted but asked that students bring heavy clothes because of the present season.

Set Crew Builds 'Authentic' Gate, For Sabrina Fair

By DAVE FLETCHER

Weeks of hectic preparation culminate tonight when the curtain raises on the Speech Department's second major production, Sabrina Fair.

Technical crews under the supervision of Technical Director Charles R. Reimer have reproduced the walled garden around which the plot revolves. Reimer's demands for detailed accuracy in set building not only enhance the beauty of the setting, but have brought to the FSU campus an authentic sealed design of the wrought-iron gate bounding an old English castle. Adorning the gate-posts are the remnants of the old chandelier which once graced the hallway of the old History building. Pieces of area with parts dating as far back as twenty years have been taken down, dusted off, scraped and repainted, to be pressed into service in the forthcoming production.

CHAUFFEUR'S DAUGHTER

Sabrina Fair, one of Samuel Taylor's most recent hit comedies, is the story about Sabrina, the daughter of the chauffeur to a very wealthy family living on Long Island. In the play the girl emerges from her menial background, has graduated from a fine women's college, gone to Paris to work for the government, and has returned to her home over the guitar of the family estate. The social tastes she has developed while in Europe lead her into many amusing escapades with her class-conscious father, his class-conscious employers, and their not so class-conscious sons. Romance enters when the sons vie for her affections, and things really come to a head when her French lover flies to America to see her.

Hall Of Fame Choice Group Is Selected

Student Body President Dave Bachman has organized a committee to choose this year's members of the FSU Hall of Fame.

Bachman said Junior Class President Bill Weaver will chairman the nine-member committee according to a constitutional provision which assigns that responsibility to the head of the Junior Class.

The Constitution defines selection to the Hall of Fame as "The highest honor bestowed on a senior who exemplifies the ideals of leadership, scholarship and service." No more than 10 seniors may be chosen.

Other members of the committee must include five juniors representing areas of student government, Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby, Dr. Sam Neel as dean of men, and Miss Katherine Warren, as dean of women.

Juniors appointed by Bachman are Arnold Greenfield, president's cabinet; Martha Grizzard, judicial branch, Don Lewis, Senate, Jim McIntyre, publications; and Joyce Weatherup, student organizations.

The Constitution stipulates that seniors named to the Hall of Fame must have at least 2.3 academic averages, and have been active in two major fields of campus life and a "minor" field. Fields of interest are defined as politics, organizations, publications, athletics, dramatics and speech, university functions, music, and scholarship (a B or better average)

SENIORS

Absolute deadline to order graduation announcements for seniors whose commencement is in February is Next Friday, Senior Class President Paul Ort declared.

Driving Privileges Suspended For Ten

Traffic Court Takes Action

Campus driving privileges have been suspended for ten violators of University traffic regulations, Student Traffic Court announced.

The action was taken. It was revealed, because the students had each received six citations for violations. The court has ruled, in accordance with student statutes, that a sixth valid ticket will cost a student his right to drive.

Meanwhile, Traffic Court Chief Justice Patty Pascual warned the three-member court will not accept negligence or ignorance of the law as excuses, and said three cases heard so Tuesday night's session involved fraudulent blue sticker registrations.

They were referred to Honor Court and fined $10 each, she commented. It is within Honor Court's power to suspend a student from school for falsifying information to university authorities.

14 APPEAL

Traffic Court heard 14 appeals Tuesday, referrin three of them to the Dean of Men's office for more suspensions on the sixth violation rule.

Nine of the tickets discussed that night had been issued because the student motorist has neglected the traffic rules, declared Mrs. Pascual.

"It seems," she said, "that violators hope to gain dismissions by using excuses such as 'I meant to get my registration changed' or 'I didn't know the requirements of the offense'." Nealisence of any form will result in prosecution ...

LENIENCY

The Dean's Office has designated that part of the campus bounded by Woodward, Call, Copeland, Tennessee, and Jefferson streets as being "out of bounds" for those who have had their campus driving privileges suspended. A list of the illeene tags of prohibited vehicles has been furnished to the Campus Police who will enforce the ban.

Coffee Hour Views Cuba

"Cuba-Dictatorship on our Doorstep" will be discussed by Dr. Paul Scoakes of the English department today at the Episcopal Coffee Hour.

WON'T YOU HAVE A TICKET TO THE CAMPUS CHEST DANCE?
Buck Metts Buys Ducat From Majell Hinson, Campus Chest Official

Sellout Assured

A sellout of "South Pacific" tickets was expected yesterday afternoon, according to ticket officials. Only 30 Friday night tickets and about 100 for Saturday night were left at 3:30 p.m. No additional shows are planned, however, Dr. Robert L. Bright, producer, said

Chest Drive Ends With Dollar Dance

With the goal for the Campus Chest drive set at $5,000.00, the Campus Chest dance tomorrow evening will be culminating event for this year's main drive.

The dance, which is strictly informal, will be held in the Suwannee Room from 9:00 to 12.00 p.m., admission will be one dollar stag or drag.

Providing the musical interests the Desilaires feature a variety of music ranging from waltzes to rock 'n' set the pace for a night of dancing.

Also slated on the agenda, states dance chairman Junior Gangloff, is a top-flight entertainer from Miami, who is a freshman here, Sandra Dee.

During intermission the Queen of Campus Chest will be crowned by the SAE's, which is their project for Campus Chest.

The Queen will be chosen from sixteen contestants, one representative from each sorority. Booths displaying the contestants' pictures are set up at the Student Center, Mecca and the Seminole Club. Votes will be a penny each with the total amount going to the Campus Chest, while the winner will receive a trophy.

Also during intermission the trophy will be presented to the ATO fraternity for contributing the most to Campus Chest last year.

Next Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday the Delta Gammas and the Pi Kappa Phi's will again hold their annual Co-ed College-Betty Co-ed Contest to raise money for Campus Chest.

This contest is to find the most typical college girl and boy on FSU's campus. The sororities are asked to enter one boy and the fraternities one girl. Tables will be set up at the Mecca Student Center, and the Seminole Club.

Votes will be a penny per vote with the winners to be notified Friday night and the trophies will be presented Saturday.

O'Brien Death Said Accident

The two-month-old cause of the death of an FSU student, after a fist fight was closed Wednesday when the Leon County Grand Jury reported it found no grounds for a criminal indictment.

Gerald Marlene O'Brien died in Tallahassee Memorial Hospital October 15, ten days after being hurt in a fight outside a restaurant near the campus.

A coroner's jury ruled he died from a blow on the head suffered in a fall after being hit by Ted Williams Jr., who has since been suspended from the university. No charges were placed against Williams, but the coroner's jury recommended the Grand Jury investigate the death.

Band Poll Being Conducted

A list of recommended bands for the 1957 Homecoming Dance is being polled from students living in residence halls, fraternities, and sororities Gold Key president Bob Eiling said this week.

He said the most popular bands indicated by men's residence halls, women's dorms, fraternities, and sororities will be listed for reference. The most popular band will be contracted provided it is available. If it is unavailable, the next most popular band will be signed, Eiling said.

He said three or four bands will undoubtedly receive most of the recommendations.

Gold Key is traditionally responsible for the Homecoming Dance, which Eiling said will be held October 19 next fall.

'Pacific Star Loses Accent, Wins Lead

By ANN DYE

Beverly Brown is the girl who lost her hair and her southern accent to become a star.

Beverly stars in the forthcoming Light Opera Guild production of South Pacific, today and tomorrow in Westcott Auditorium.

She is cast in the leading role of Ensign Nellie Forbush, an Arkansas nurse, who, in the middle of World War II and the South Pacific, falls in love with Emile, a French planter from the islands.

"When I auditioned for the part they told me that if I could get rid of my southern accent, I would be right for the role" she explained.

Then, she had to cut her long brown hair. The part calls for her to actually wash her hair on the stage, while singing, "I'm Gonna Wash that Man Right Outa My Hair." She laughed as she told how she experimented with different shampoos, to see which is the cleanest. "I've washed my head—s-hipped men's shaving lather will be best," she said.

ENJOYABLE PART

How does it feel to re-create that part?

Beverly, without hesitation, declared it. "One of the best parts I've ever had. Nellie's so exuberant, but so aware. Its just lots of fun to do."

Actually, she went on to explain, "Its more of a dramatic role than a singing role." But, of course no one can forget the wonderful songs, Bloody Mary, the original Nellie, introduced to the public, including, "Wonderful Guy."

"Wonderful Guy" is as a matter of fact, the song Beverly sang when she first auditioned for the part. Going back to her southern accent, she exclaimed, "That's a funny thing I had to get rid of before I could sing and Richard Waff had to acquire a French one."

Richard Waff, from Tallahassee, is the baritone lead, and Beverly's leading man.

OWN INTERPRETATION

Is Beverly going to try to play Nellie as Mary Martin did in the film? Emphatic creation of the role? Well, I listened to records to see how Mary Martin sounded in the part, but I'm definitely doing my own interpretation," she explained.

The cast has been in rehearsal for the show for two months.

Besides rehearsal, Beverly has made a number of personal appearances to publicize the production. Last week, she sang at sides starring in several high school productions, she had the soprano lead in the FSU production of "Carmen," and she appeared in the choruses of Susannah," and "Carousel."

Beverly a junior, is a music major, and, after graduation hopes to make the stage her profession. She plans to appear this summer in summer stock, either at Cape Cod, Mass., or in Atlanta.

Clinton Mob Betrays Craving For Self-Made Superiority

Three weeks before the day when men celebrate the birth of Jesus of Nazareth, the Prince of Peace—a minister was beaten by a mob for defending the government of the United States.

Fortunately, the Rev. Paul Turner, Baptist minister of Clinton, Tenn. was not seriously hurt. He had been attacked by a group of men after escorting six defenseless Negro students to Clinton High School.

"They," he explained later, 'the Negroes, have a moral right to attend school unshackled and unmolested by un-Christian people . . .

"Segregation is a complex problem that is arguable both ways. I personally feel the Negro students to school to let my presence be testimony that as long as the law is what it is and as long as they, the Negroes, have a desire to go to school it is their moral right to come unhecked and unhindered."

The Rev. Mr. Turner's faith is a sound one, founded on his belief in moral principles and in the basic law of his country.

By contrast, what kind of faith prompts grown men to threaten and persecute children whose only offense is a circumstance of birth? What kind of beliefs justify a physical attack by many men upon an unarmed man peacefully supporting his government? Is it reason that accepts the law only when convenient to one's prejudices and dislikes?

Shows Weakness

It is neither reason, nor faith, nor belief nor citizenship. It is a weakness—a pathetic, pitiful inability to rise above the human tendency to fear something. It is the consequent craving to achieve security in self-made superiority. It is the choosing of the easier road of brutality and self-interest rather than the harder one of humanity and justice.

It is what marle possible the crucifixion of Jesus. It is what motivated the Nazis.

Segregation in the South is a habit-pattern. It cannot be expected that southerners will rapidly shed its effects, centuries in the breeding. The majority of them, however, are not entirely in the thrall of fear. Given the decision of our highest court that segregation is contrary to our Constitution, they were courageously prepared to subordinate their traditions to the higher ideal of democracy. For most, this course of action conforms to what they, in their hearts, know to be right.

It is the minority who violate principles of justice and citizenship thought by most to be sacred. This terrified minority is led by men who ought to know better. The Nazis were a minority. The hardcore Communists of the USSR are only three million among 200 million.

Hoodlum Minority

The violent segregationists themselves are a discredited minority. At the polls Tuesday in Clinton, even as the hoodlums swarmed about the Rev. Mr. Turner, the citizens defeated by a four-to-one margin the slate of city candidates endorsed by the rabble-rousing, double-talking Citizens' Council.

And on this note we take encouragement. There are indeed fine people in Clinton. Now is when their voices must be heard. They cannot always wait for the Federal Government to intervene, with its trained agents, its contempt of court proceedings, and its vigilance. It can only take action after the crime is committed.

Must patriots like the Rev. Mr. Turner be beaten, and innocent Negro children be persecuted before the people are roused to action? Such, at least, is not the case everywhere.

Louisville Noble

In Louisville, schools have been successfully integrated on a voluntary basis. Still, only 20 of the 73 schools are all-white or all-Negro.

Louisville, a southern city, thus stands as the noblest example of American democracy. Their effort is all the greater because of the prejudices they had to overcome. And in refusing admission to a white boy admittedly sent to Louisville to stir up trouble, the School Board was legitimately preserving the public safety.

Thanksgiving of a turbulent year has come and gone, Christmas is close at hand. Justice, humanity, and charity—the world's biggest problems—pose to us bigger challenges on such holidays because of the ideals to which we have consecrated them—giving thanks for blessings; the giving of gifts; the remembrance of Christ for the Christian; and renewed devotion to that which is good for all. Let us put it off no longer. Now is the time for all who call themselves human to atone for what has happened in Clinton.

'Lobbying Reaches The Campus', Says St. Pete Times

(FROM THE ST. PETERSBURG TIMES)

Students at Florida State University have decided to send their own lobbyists to Tallahassee when the Legislature convenes.

But they're not going to press for mandatory passing grades from professors, free football tickets, or longer vacations.

The object of student ire is a plan to take enforcement of campus traffic laws from the hands of the student government.

Despite the jokes about coeds and college boy lobbyists that may be passed around the back rooms of Tallahassee, the decision of the Student Senate to send lobbyists shows an understanding of an old American principle: every citizen has a right to petition his government.

This means the campaign may well be based on the old word, "lobbying."

stems from petitions which benefit special interest groups to the detriment of the public interest.

We aren't well informed about the pros and cons of the students' grievance about traffic rules. But we applaud their initiative in wanting to tell their legislators about it. If more private citizens "lobbied" for what they think is right, there would be less need for John Q. Citizen's constant grumbling about what goes on in the legislative halls of Tallahassee and Washington.

Texans Rip Park Meters

By JIM SOLES

Police attempting to put parking meters in front of dorms at the University of Texas aren't coming along so well.

The first meter was pulled from its base before the cement hardened, but was finally recovered by the police after a wild chase through a men's dorm. During the chase, Police were pelted with raw eggs by other students sympathetic with the thief.

Two other meters stolen that night have still not been recovered and the local mayor has been deluged in effigy . . . with a slat about his neck which read, "Take Your Meters Back to City Hall." Seems the students methods were very effective.

A new kind of track record was set by a group of Idaho University students recently. Upon arriving for their advertising course the students discovered the terrifying note, "quiz today." So they sat down to wait for the axe to fall and this simple question was asked. "How long will it take for this class to leave this room?"

* * *

At Wake Forest University there has been a lot of kick lately concerning the "parking" rules around the girls' dorms. If a girl is caught in a parked car after dark with a male companion (even under the flood lights) she and said companion are sharply rebuked and often drassed inside for a reprimand.

* * *

One coed declares that she is going to buy a three-acre lot on the campus for her parking purposes . . . a day student said that she would gladly rent half of her garage for said purposes . . . many coeds feel that a girl who is pinned or engaged has a perfect right to "park" at the dorms and discuss plans for the future . . . And one optimistic coed suggests that girls who are not pinned or engaged should also have this privilege so that she might acquire this "envied status."

* * *

At another university a young coed has been scaring her dates away and not intentionally either. When she registered for school she said that registration always amuses her easily so put down what she thought was her phone number. Now when fellows call a deep throated voice informs them that they are talking to the local rebel of police.

* * *

In a recent survey printed in the Ball State News it was revealed that one-third of your life is spent sleeping five months in total slumber—six months for both cardplaying and telephone calling six years in eating and drinking, and three years in being sick. Sorry gals, but men spend four years in conversation while women spend five years in the same enjoyable pastime.

* * *

The HTJB student union at the University of Washington, has added a new feature with its Music-Library area. Browsing, recreational reading and relaxed music listening will be realized when the room is put into operation. Three phonographs will offer records from popular songs to classical ones . . . This might be called Elvis Hater's Haunt. Speaking of Elvis, the Akron Beacon Journal recently ran this little quip: "All of Elvis' Fans should form a club and beat themselves over the head with it."

There has been quite a controversy at Wake Forest concerning attempts of the State Baptist Convention which owns the school to ban fraternities. The president came up with this question this week: "Have you heard about the new book called, I WAS A FRATERNITY MAN FOR THE BSU?"

Instructors Have Better Deal Than They Think

By OSCAR JOUNSON

THOUGH YOU wouldn't know it by the size of their gripes, university professors are in one of the most advantageous positions in our society.

WHEN YOU overlook such trifles as salary and working conditions, the source of most gripes, it becomes apparent that instructors are in a position that many an "outsider" would covet. For instance, being an instructor automatically assures one of being a success as a joker.

Whoever heard of a student who didn't laugh at his professors' jokes? Even the rarest of freshmen know that if they want to pass the course they'd better cooperate. So even after the instructor stumbles through his pet talk uses the wrong words and forgets the punch line, his hardiome expression of anticipation at the end is all the students need. A cataclysm of laughter spills the class and the professor chalks up another one.

MANY A harried politician would give nearly anything to achieve similar results.

Another thing. To many people a professor is the next thing to God. Out in the piney woods country, a professor is looked upon with something akin to reverence.

Consequently, anything the college instructor does is looked at as something different and apart from the ordinary world. Strangeness, eccentricity —these latter are expected. Anything the professor does is all right.

THE INSTRUCTOR, therefore, can do as he pleases, with no blistering consequences for what people will think of him. This is a great advantage over the rest of the average person.

Wilson Showed Poise At Recital

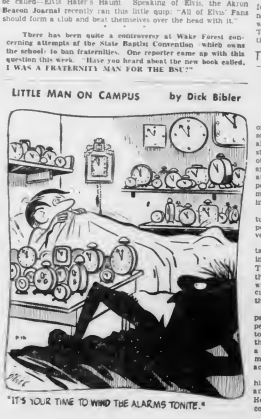
By RYAN EDWARDS

To us, the problem of giving a successful organ recital has always seemed virtually insoluble for two reasons. First, the organ is and always will be something of a mechanical monster. It is incapable of any but the most obvious tonal nuance, and its system of tone production creates a longer pause between performer stimulus and instrument response than any other instrument.

Also the worthwhile literature consists of the organ compositions of J. S. Bach, and very little else.

But the organ holds a veritable fascination for many musicians themselves included: and a sizable portion of the public. The reasons for this fascination, as opposed to the inherent awkwardness of the instrument, were beautifully set forth in the graduate recital of Russell Wilson last Monday evening in the Music Hall.

MR. WILSON, while feeling the necessity of paying his respects to organ literature of various periods in music history, had the common sense to begin and end his program with works from the Baroque era, the only period to produce a sizable quantity of compositions of genuine musical value and inherent "organistic" characteristics.



The two works with which he chose to frame his evening's music were equally grand in scope, and also almost equally successful in execution. However, Pachelbel, like any other Baroque composer, seems possessed of a certain crudity when juxtaposed with Johann Sebastian Bach.

THIS CRUDITY notwithstanding, the Fugue, Fugue, and Chaconne of the former certainly has its share of structural beauty, unlike the effect of a massive Baroque railroad with its painstaking repetition of design and cumulative grandeur. Mr. Wilson played it with admirable purity of registration and a sense of restraint in its emotional content.

The so-called "Saint Anne" Fugue of Bach which closed the program was also well-played despite the fact that this performer seemed understandably a little tired from the strenuous efforts which had preceded it. He was rewarded with an eye to its grandiose proportions and tempi were well-paced and executed.

THE NUMBERS in-between these two masterpieces suffered from the comparison. Leroy Bennett's Air by Wayne of Cesar Franck Particularly remarkable was the performance subtle and completely convincing understanding of the organist's only direct expressive device, rhythmic nuance.

The penultimate work, Hindesmith's Second Sonata, was well-enough suited to the instrument to suggest that the contemporary composer might possibly be the answer to one of the organist's problems, but was also dull enough to preclude that its scholarly and meticulous structure is not commendable.

Grid Slate Slipping?

The 1957 football schedule was released Sunday, and a quick look over indicates to us that next year's slate is going to look more like one of the major-college "feet" acquired by the 1956 array.

The Seminoles dropped Georgia and Wake Forest of the 1956 slate and added Abilene Christian and Tampa, to be a slip in intercollegiate caliber.

Abilene Christian: It's true always puts out a creditable team, in fact what Texas team doesn't, but they can hardly be called a major-college squad. The Seminoles have lost both previous games to the Wildcats and another defeat would certainly not help the Tribe's national standing any.

And we still say, as we did last year, why play Tampa? The Spartans are a team which is going nowhere, in status or anything else.

Whether FSU beats the Tampans means nothing one way or another, and a loss to them could set up a permanent road block in the Seminoles' road in the 1957.

The feature of the 1957 slate will be the Tallahassee appearances of both Auburn and Miami for the first time, and the five-game home slate is admirable if the bulk of the schedule does not seem so.

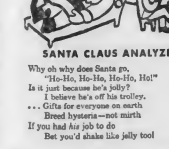
There is a question at the moment as to whether the Villanova game now slated for Tallahassee, will actually be played here.

The Wildcats have at least one colored boy on the team. Yet the die-hard southerners hereabouts will surely raise the dickens if a team playing on the sacred Tallahassee turf (though not officially) has one of the players themselves would have any serious objections to the idea.

Perhaps the game may be played in Havana, Cuba (why, we don't know) or maybe back in Philadelphia.

A WINNER

While Seminole athletic units have been rising in the public favor since the Florida State sports publicity department hasn't been on the job for many years, the various athletic teams have yet failed in the year the FSU football brochure was judged the best job in the nation by the American College Public Relations Association, and recently another honor came its way.



In action shot of Billy Gibbon end guard Leo Ezzerzi was named best lettsrer in its category—ball carrier and blocker in the country by Sport magazine, which selected nine top stars from 150 submitted by colleges all over the country.

Ezzerzi want to get corny. I guess you might call it another honor for the sports publicity department.

ODDS AND ENDS

Dr Howard G. Danford, FSU athletic director, has received an invitation from the Adjutant General in Washington to conduct volleyball clinics in Europe this winter, for the armed forces. . . . Auburn athletic director Jeff Beard thinks FSU's ace halfback Bobby Renn is better than any of the backs including Simpson and Dennison. . . . Clay Boyd Kennedy was athletic business manager when he first came to FSU in 1946. . . . The only individual scoring record for 40 minutes in basketball when Jimmy Oler does not hold is most points in a game, set by Ham Wernie with 14 against Tampa in one game. . . . Surprising enough it was a fullback who set the lead on the FSU football team in pass receiving. Joe Holt and end Ronnie Schoonbarger were deadlocked with 5 apiece. . . . Another oddity: Schoonbarger didn't grab a touchdown pass out of the 16 . . . Congratulations to Tom Nugent and his wife, blessed with their fourth boy this weekend. They also have four girls . . . Also congratulations to Lee Corso, who tops off a brilliant season with wedding tomorrow in Tampa. . . . Tomorrow night's meeting between Florida State and Bradley in basketball is the first athletic meeting between the two schools since Seminole guard Leo Nazzeris was named to VPI's all-opponent first team recently.

Bradley, Florida Next For Cagers

By BEN BALSER
Flambeau Sports Writer

In the next three days the Florida State basketball squad will have two chances to gain its first victory of the season. The Seminoles meet Bradley in Peoria, Ill., tomorrow night, then they return to play Florida at Gainesville Monday night.

The Bradley Braves, with plenty of speed and height, are rated among the top teams in the Missouri Valley Conference Bradley's hopes seem to ride with forwards, Barney Cable 6-7 and Shellie McMillen 6-5. Cable is hailed as the finest prospect in Bradley's basketball history.

Starting at center for the Braves will probably be 6-9, Gene Hoerner. Flanking Sedgwick and Bobby Joe Mason will be opening at the guard posts. Behind these five men are reserves Dave Emerson 6-7, Dick Dhabolt 6-5 and Gene Morse 6-3.

The Braves' head coach, Chuck Osborn, believes his team has plenty of depth and poise, and of course plenty of rebounding power.

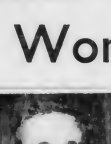
Monday night will mark the first basketball game in history, regularly scheduled between FSU and the University of Florida. The two schools opened athletic competition last year when the rival swimming teams met.

The Gators are leading contenders for the Southeastern Conference title this season. Florida head coach John Mauer has four starters returning from last year plus seven other returnees from the 56 season.

Bob Emrick, who had a 17.8 average last season, will be at reply against the Seminoles. Joe Hobbs, second leading scorer for the Gators last year, will open at guard along with newcomer Ron Sokler.

The mascots of Florida a re-bounding will be done by the tall-est man on the team, 6-7 Jim Zinn. Dick Hoban, an all-state from Miami High, will be Zinn's co-worker. During the '56 season Zinn had a 13.5 rebounding average.

Florida also has plenty of bench strength in the form of Buck Touchberry 6-4, Jerry Henderson 6-3, Wayne Williams 6-4 and two hot rookies Chuck Bendler and Newell Fox.



According to assistant basketball coach Mike Long, FSU will probably be at full strength for both games. The Seminoles' starting guard Tom Garcia missed the West Virginia game because of a bad charley-horse and Bob Waits missed the same game because of a slight sprained ankle. Both are expected to be in shape to play tomorrow night.

Bob Williams, Stu Gregory, and Larry Strom will be the other likely starters for the Seminoles. Also slated for plenty of action are Hugh Durham, Joe Williams, Bob Ward and Joe Westhafer.

Tuesday night Hot Rod Hundley broke a West Virginia scoring record and the backs of the Seminoles by hitting for 25 points while leading the Mountaineers to a 89-54 win.

According to Long the West Virginia team employed a fast break which the Seminoles had trouble slopping. FSU played without the services of Garcia and Waits.

Larry Starm was high scorer for the Tribe with 17, followed closely by Hugh Durham with

LARRY STROM—6-6 JJC grad led Seminoles with 13 in losing cause against W. Virginia

12. Loyd Sharrar, 6-10 center for West Virginia, dominated the rebounding. He also scored 15 points.

FSU went down to its second defeat of the season Monday when they were overcome by Steubenville College 79-64. Four men hit the double figures for Steuben ville. Among these four was the game's high scorer Bobby Florsa, who dropped in 19 points.

Garcia, for the second game in a row, was high point man for FSU with 14 markers. Strom fin ished the game with 12 tallies.

Although the Seminoles have dropped their first three games the future is not completely dark. Coach Long asserted that "we have learned by our mistakes and our next few games will show definite improvement."

Frosh Cagers Face Jax U., Baby Gators

The acid test for Jimmy Oler's freshmen cagers will be made in a city noted for friendly the fortunes of Florida State freshman basketball squads

Starting their first travel to meet their cross state nemesis the Seminole yearlings will face Jacksonville Junior College. Always rugged, the Jacksonville team will have the advantage of a fast veteran team, undefeated thus far this year.

Thus far this season, the Jax team has blasted Cibjola Junior College 92-74, and sunk the Jacksonville Navy team by a 60 point margin. The Jax team uses a full court press and a fast break, according to Oler.

James Barber, a six foot, three inch guard and John Pittman, a 6'3" forward lead the Jackson ville attack. Baker, a veteran of last years Jax team scored 26 points against the Navy team.

Frosh coach Oler predicted, during the usual "freshman-ish" pre-game willies. "I figure if we can get the first quarter, I think we can beat them."

Oler listed as a possible starting lineup, Charley Rozeta and Tom Munson at guards, Mice Williams or Tom Gregory at center; and Jerry Hohne and Jim Savare probably will start at forwards.

Monday in it, the freshman tackle Lee and Dan Holland of Florida freshman outfit in Gainesville. They'll be tough!" promises Oler.

Seminole Veterans Lead Both Teams

By DAVE EVANS
Flambeau Sports Writer

The annual Garnet and Gold meet will see the varsity and frosh men men pair off for their first taste of competition this season tonight at eight p.m. in the Woman's Gym pool.

The meet is an annual event held in December to give the team competitive experience and allow Coach Bib Stolla to see how fast they are progressing and the swimmers the chance to work out in meet swimming habits before the season gets started.

Since the freshmen lack sufficient depth Stolla will be unable to set them against the varsity. However, they will be used on both the Garnet and Gold squads.

Elected to lead the Gold team in emphasis are junior breaststroker Joel Jacobs, speedy senior freestyler Mike Tachiret, and Don Lewis, sprint freestyler.

The Garnet team will be captained by senior distance freestyler Graham Teachke. Florida AAU backstroke champion Ken Abbott, and Jim Julian a senior who specializes in the sprint freestyle events.

EVENTS

The 400-yard medley relay will set the Gold's Southeastern Jacobs, Tachiret and Hammond against Wentworth Abbott, Fillmore and Ray for the Garnet.

Mike Metz and Rube Waddell will make a bid to humble the Gold ahead of Graham Teachke, who holds the school record in 220-yard freestyle.

The 50-yard freestyle should turn out to be a rat race with four each from the varsity and frosh men vieing for first place. Don Lewis and Jim Bullard will go for the Gold with school record holder Jim Julian and Glen Thatcher giving tough opposition.

Mike Tachiret will oppose Rodney Fillmore swimming for the Garnet in the 200-yard butterfly while Lewis and Hammond go against Julian and Thatcher in the 100-yard freestyle

Jerry Glazier is favored over freshman Paul Stoffregen of the Gold team in Glazier's specialty, the 200-yard backstroke

Metz and Waddell will team up for the second time in one night to try to upset Teachke in the 440 freestyle, in which he also holds the school record.

Joel Jacobs should totch out first for the 100-yard breaststroke for the Gold against freshman opposition.

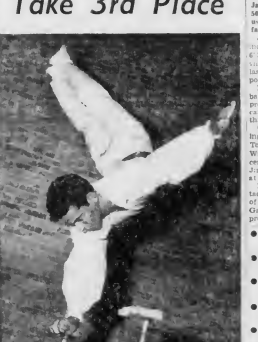
In the final event, the 400-yard freestyle relay, Tachiret, Bullard, Hammond, and Lewis swim for the Gold against Thatcher, Julian, Ray and McKeown.

Gymnasts Take 3rd Place

With only three men competing, Florida State University's gymnasts finished third in the annual Midwestern championships in Chicago this past weekend.

The Semanoles' nine outstanding gymnastic champions, Jamie Ashmore, Chris Cirio and Ronnie Amis accounted for four titles and 61 points to place FSU behind only Illinois with 91½ and Iowa with 77½.

Ashmore, 1955 NCAA free exercise winner, won the last horse and still rings competition, finished third in the all-around and third in tumbling at the meet.



Amis, 1955 NCAA tiga bar champion won his specialty in the meet, and also finished second in parallel bars competition.

Cirio also was victorious in his specialty, winning the free exercise as he did in last year's National AAU meet, beating teammate Ashmore.

The gymnasts open their regular season under Coach Hartley Price December 19 in Tallahassee against Michigan State, which he'll battle Pitched with in the Midwest Open with 18½ points.

Altogether they will have five home meets, the other home opponents to be Western Illinois, Georgia Tech, Illinois Chicago and the Pensacola Naval Air Station

The gymnasts are defending champions in the Florida AAU which they have never lost, the Georgia AAU and the Southern Intercollegiate

TWO EVENT WINNER—One of FSU's top gymnasts Jamie Ashmore led the Tribe to third place in the Midwestern Open at Chicago last week as he took first place in the long horse and still rings. Last year, Ashmore was NCAA free exercise champion.

Physics Head Tells Purpose Of Proposed Nuclear Center

By ANN DYE

"An active research program improves an entire campus. Professors active in research work are better professors." Dr. Guenther Schwartz, head of the FSU Physics Department, stated in an interview yesterday.

Dr. Schwartz spoke in relation to the FSU nuclear research center planned for construction in the near future.

He emphasized that the center will by no means be exclusively for the Physics Department. "Many of the departments of the university will benefit from the center," he said.

In elaborating, he explained that, for instance the chemistry, food and nutrition, meteorology, biology, geology, oceanography, and mathematics departments will benefit from the center.

Exemplary of the work which will be conducted by other departments through the facilities of the center is research being conducted on food preservation techniques by Dr. Betty Watts, Department of Food and Nutrition. The center will include an electronic computer, which will be of particular value to the Mathematics Department, Dr. Schwartz noted.

However, central in the plans for the new center are two atomic accelerators.

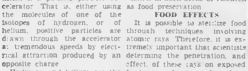
EXPLAINS FUNCTION

Exactly what will these nuclear accelerators do?

Dr. Schwarz explained that the two accelerators will be complementary. The larger accelerator, a 5.5 million volt instrument, is a positive particle accelerator. That is, either using the molecules of one of the isotopes of hydrogen, one of helium, positive particles are driven through the accelerator at tremendous speeds by electrical attraction produced by an opposite charge.

Hydrogen and helium are the two simplest elements. The nucleus of a hydrogen atom consists of only one proton, about which an electron revolves. It is relatively simple according to Dr. Schwarz, to strip away this electron, that producing a positively charged particle, which can be accelerated. The process is still with helium, which contains two protons and two neutrons in its nucleus, is similar. The alpha particle is a helium atom stripped of two electrons, and thus carrying a double positive charge.

SLOWER RAYS



Alpha particles, compared to beta particles, which are negatively charged electrons and gamma rays, similar to X-rays, are much heavier and slower. Because of this, they will not penetrate as deeply through gases, or metals, as the other two rays. But because of their size, they are very destructive to the molecules or cells they may come in contact.

The other accelerator, designed for experimentation with beta and gamma rays, is capable of producing 3 million volts. In this instrument beta particles can be used directly, or X-rays may be produced. In this instrument, beta particles are extremely important that scientists determine the penetration and energy of these rays. This accelerator will be particularly valuable for instance, in such areas of research as cancer therapy.

FOOD EFFECTS

It is important to realize food that on irradiation of food, helium, positive particles are driven through the accelerator at tremendous speeds by electrical attraction produced by an opposite charge.

HAPPY TALK

As we all know, conversation is terribly important on a date. When lulls in the conversation run longer than an hour or two, one's partner is inclined to grow logy — even sullen. What, then, does one do?

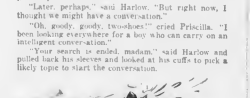
If one is wise, one follows the brilliant example of Harlow Thurlow.

Harlow Thurlow prepares. That is his simple secret. Before his date, he goes to the library and reads all 24 volumes of the encyclopedia and memorizes the contents on his cuffs. This he makes sure that no matter what his date's interests are, he will have material to keep the conversation alive.

Take, for example, Harlow's first date with Priscilla de Gasser, a fine, strapping, blue-eyed broth of a girl, lavishly constructed and rosy as the dawn.

Harlow was, as always, prepared when he called for Priscilla, and, as always, he did not start the conversation immediately. First he took her to dinner because, as everyone knows, it is useless to try to make conversation with an unfed coed.

So he took her to a fine steak house where he stoked her with goblets of Black Angus and mounds of French fries and thickets of escarole and battalions of petits fours. Then, at last, dinner was over and the waiter brought two finger bowls.



"I hope you enjoyed your dinner, my dear," said Harlow, dipping into his finger bowl.

"Oh, it was grandly-dandy!" said Priscilla. "Now let's go someplace for rifle."

"Later, perhaps," said Harlow. "But right now, I thought we might have a conversation."

"Oh, goody, goody, twoodoos!" cried Priscilla. "I been looking everywhere for a man who can carry on an intelligent conver-sation."

"Your search is ended, madam," said Harlow and pulled back his sleeves and looked at his cuffs to pick a likely topic to start the conversation.

Oh, woe! Oh, lackaday! Those cuffs on which Harlow had painstakingly transcribed such diverse and fascinating information — those cuffs were nothing now but a big blue blur! For Harlow — poor Harlow! — splashing around in the finger bowl had gotten his cuffs wet and the ink had run and not one word was legible! And Harlow broke out in a nigh-sweat and fell dumb.

"I must say," said Priscilla after several silent hours, "that you are a very dull fellow. I'm leaving."

With that she flounced away and poor Harlow was too crushed to protest. Sadly he sat and sadly lit a cigarette.

All of a sudden Priscilla came rushing back. "Was that," she asked, "a Philip Morris you just lit?"

"Yes," said Harlow.

"Then you are not a dull fellow!" she cried and sprang into his lap. "You are bright! Anybody is bright to smoke such a perfect dull of a cigarette as today's rich, tasty Philip Morris, which is brimming-full of natural tobacco goodness and fresh unfiltered flavor. . . Harlow, tiger, wash your cuffs and be my love!"

"Okay," said Harlow, and did, and was.

The makers of Philip Morris Cigarettes, who bring you this column each week, are very happy for Harlow — and for all the rest of you who have discovered the true tobacco goodness of today's Philip Morris!

Wilson Tried To Express American Ideals, Interests

Woodrow Wilson was pictured as a statesman who "sought both to express American ideals and promote American interests" in a centennial address Wednesday celebrating the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Dr. Victor S. Mamatey, associate professor of history, told an audience at a program sponsored by Phi Alpha Theta, history honorary, that Wilson was both an idealist and a realist, depending on the definition.

"If by idealism is meant that Wilson sought to promote moral aims, the answer is yes, he was an idealist," said Dr. Mamatey. "He believed that basic motivation of policy both at home and abroad should be moral, and amply proved it in his domestic and foreign programs. However, by idealism is meant that he was a star-struck utopian dreaming after phantasmagorias and dragging a reluctant American people after him, then the answer is no. Wilson sought to promote policies that were all within the realm of practical possibilities. There was nothing utopian about either his domestic or foreign policies.

Mamatey

"Now, was Wilson a realist? If by realism is meant a lack of principle other than self-interest, the answer is no. If, however, by realism is meant a readiness to face facts and adjust one's aims to them, the answer is yes. Wilson called himself a 'practical idealist' and a 'liberal with the reins on.' He understood well that compromise is the essence of democracy."

AUTHORED BOOK

The historian, author of a forthcoming book to be published by Princeton University Press, on Wilsonian diplomacy, noted that interest in Wilson has been revived since the Second World War after he had been called the "most forgotten man" of American politics.

Even before the beginning of World War I, Dr. Mamatey stated, the American president was "at the center of the nation of Europe." There were innumerable Wilson avenues, Wilson boulevards, and Wilson squares in European cities," he said.

NOT FORGOTTEN

"Moreover, there is evidence that even today he is not forgotten behind Iron Curtain. In the last few years Communist histories and propaganda have published a whole host of books seeking to destroy what they call the 'Wilsonian legend' in Eastern Europe."

Dr. Mamatey traced Wilson's life from the time of his birth in Staunton, Va. Dec. 28, 1856, through his academic career as head of Princeton and his political career as governor of New Jersey and as president for two terms.

Although best known for his achievements in the field of foreign policy, the speaker said, "by his domestic legislation he was well-prepared for leadership in the domestic but not in foreign policy."

Wilson told a friend shortly before his first inauguration, Dr. Mamatey said, "It would be an error of fate if my administration had to deal chiefly with foreign affairs."

Wilson, said the speaker, "considered himself the servant of the whole American people. He sought both to express American ideals and promote American interests. I believe he did both well. I am confident that history will bear it out."

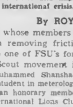
Clubs Remove Friction Of Nations: Student

(Editor's Note: This is the first of many features the FLORIDA FLAMBEAU hopes to print concerning foreign students whose views and impressions have special meaning at a time of international crisis.)

By ROYE RHODES

Clubs whose members live in many countries are important in removing friction between their nations according to one of FSU's foreign students who helped the Boy Scout movement in his country.

Khan Muhammed Shamshad, a doctoral student in meteorology, was made an honorary member of the International Lions Club for his Scout service in Pakistan.



One of the ways in which scouting serves to aid the exchange of ideas are international conferences held annually and attended by Pakistani representatives, he explained.

He joined the International Scouts in preference to the separate National Scouts in 1952 because of the value of international associations.

As one of four chairmen over 3,000 International Scouts in Pakistan, Shamshad has been awarded the club's highest honor, the Wood Badge. While attending Aligarh Muslim College in India, he popularized scouting by conducting camps during vacations and leading hikes through the mountains.

He was able to introduce and teach air scouting in Pakistan through donations from Pakistan citizens "who respect scouting. Following that it teaches boys to be responsible and self-reliant."

An officer of Pakistan Meteorological Service, he has published a book, now in collaboration with a Pakistan professor, The Climate of Karachi and How to Live In It.

Shamshad

Shamshad said he plans to return to Pakistan after completing the work for his doctorate recently he commented another book, A Sojourn in America, in which he gives his impressions of the United States as compared to those in his native country.

Dem School Parking Slated For West Hall

By NANCY GENE BROWN

The provision of adequate night parking for New Cawthon and West Hall residents was considered by the Student-Faculty Traffic Committee met Monday afternoon.

Also discussed was the problem of students who have classes in the Education Building and must catch the university bus at the Student Center and who turn to campus in time for their 8 o'clock class.

The bus must leave the Student Center exactly at 10 minutes before the hour in order to arrive back at campus before classes begin, said Karl Edwards, chairman of the committee. Therefore many Geology Building students miss the bus.

Jane Salley, secretary of the committee, suggested that the bus could run Woodward Street prior to the time of departure. Edwards said that students a few additional seconds to get outside the building before the bus leaves.

A suggested method of staggering class schedules was put before the group in theory only, and was discussed no further. That plan would utilize 50 minute periods with 15 minute breaks, instead of the present 10.

To solve the night parking situation, it was noted that Dealy Street from Tennessee Call to available for parking. The primary problem is lack of lighting. He said that to solve the night parking problem, there is a plan under consideration to stop parking on the Woodward Avenue sidewalk in the Florida High School parking lot to make room for West Hall overflow.

A motion by committee member Sandra Rosenberg, request be submitted to the administration for a building study of existing traffic-parking problems was passed through.

Edwards and that 12 additional lighting boxes will be distributed around the campus, and urged that continue ideas for the solution of campus parking difficulties.

In a clarifying statement Edwards said, "The parking situation in Westcott Circle were intended merely as a convenience for students and townspeople who want to visit Westcott for a short period of time, and is not be a permanent policy. The confuse and frustrate students

DistrictSenator Resigns Post

Harold Williams, senator from district 14, submitted his resignation as Pre-President Bill Coulton this week.

Williams explained that he has changed his residence, thereby ruling himself ineligible for the present senate seat. He formerly lived at the Kappa Sigma house.

Student Body President Dave Blackmon said he would make a recommendation for Williams' replacement at the next Senate meeting.

FSU Spinning Merrily With Many Parties

"Parties make the world go round", they say, so it would really be spinning now—considering the number of parties that have been given here since Thanksgiving.

The Theta Chis are out front in the running for party boys' of the year. Since the holidays they've had two parties with another scheduled tomorrow night. Last week was 'guest week' for the Theta Chis at the house.

Alpha Delta Pi's, Delta Gamma and Phi Mu. The themes for the parties varied from an Ivy League affair at the Alpha Delta Pi to a scavenger hunt with Delta Gamma as the informal mixer with Phi Mu. This week Theta Chi was host to Alpha Chi Omega and Alpha Omicron Pi. A Hawaiian theme was used for both parties with leis, nuts and pineapples adding a touch of reality to the house decorations. Tomorrow night there'll be a dance party at the house for the brothers and their dates.

Kappa Alpha Theta is keeping up with Theta Chi in the party race. Wednesday night they were the guests of Phi Kappa Tau and Thursday the Lambda Chi Alpha's visited the Theta's for a "Before the Theater" party. Last week Kappa Alpha Theta and Alpha Xi Delta joined for an unusual party. The girls and their dates had dinner at the Alpha Xi Delta house and then went over to the Kappa Alpha Theta house for a radio party. After the party the actives of Kappa Alpha Theta swapped rooms for the night with the pledges and let the pledges spend the night in the active house.

Last week-end was a big one for Gamma Phi Beta. They had added two new trophies to their case and it is at the end of "Peanut Week." To celebrate, Gamma Phi Beta spent the night at the Reservation. All during the week the girls did little favors for a secret sister "Peanut", with the names of each girl's "Peanut" a secret until the week-end when they were presented with a small gift. The biggest attraction, however, was the new trophies from the Sigma Chi Derby and Soap Box Derby. During this week, Gamma Phi Beta were the guests of Pi Kappa Phi.

This week was rush week for Kappa Sigma. A steak fry, discussions groups and singing occupied the first part of Thursday evening with a party with Kappa Alpha Theta finishing off the rush night. Tonight the men and their dates will be in the Men's Gym to meet their team on in the Sigma Chi Kappa Sigma challenge game. Afterwards it'a back to the house for dancing and refreshments.

Anything that happens this week at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house would be eclipsed by memories of last week-end. The annual S.A.E. Sweetheart Dance climaxed a week-end of fun. A huge new trophy was presented to this year's sweetheart, Carol Ann Brown.

Delta Gamma is working hard keeping up its tradition of unusual and interesting parties. So far they've been very successful. Last week they entertained Theta Chi with a record party and "Okla-hama" skit. This was a ship-wreck party with fish-nets, anchors and sea hats for the Phi Delta Theta guests and the girls went on the calendar. Delta Gamma and Pi Kappa Phi are hosting the finishing touches on their annual Betty-Co-Ed-Joe College which is to start next week as their Christmas Chest project.

Phi Delta Theta's annual Bowery Ball is their big event this week. The house will become a "French Inn" and the men and their dates will don French costumes, slim pants and slit skirts for the occasion.

Pi Beta Phi and Zeta Tau Alpha entertained their Province Presidents this week. Mrs. Marjorie Parks, Pi Beta Phi Province President, spent two days with the FSU chapter on her annual visit of chapters in her province. Mrs. A. Izsak, Zeta Tau Alpha Province President spent three days visiting, having interviews, dinners and alumna meetings.

Junior class officers and chairmen have been busy this week making plans for the Spaghetti supper at the Reservation planned for tonight. After the supper there will be group singing, dancing and a special skit.

Show Held Wednesday

Coeds, Escorts, Clothes: Fashion

By CARLET POITEVINT

Take a group of pretty coed models, add a few handsome escorts, dress them in a complete college wardrobe, and you have the material for a fashion show.

Gamma Alpha Chi and Alpha Delta Sigma combined the latest women's and men's fashions with the theme "Moments to Remember" to present a show with a purpose in Longmire Auditorium Wednesday night.

Campus Chest was the reason, and the national professional advertising fraternities collected $10 in donate to the charity drive, said director Lois Friedman.

Door prizes, awarded during the show, were won by Miss Claire Beiva won a hooded tee shirt from the Village Shop. Claudette Carley received a velvet bracelet courtesy of Nancy Scott's. Carol Keck won a Revlon lipstick case from Bennett's, and Dick Joel, son of Professor Richard Joel, received a ten dollar gift certificate from Brown's Mens Wear.

MOMENTS TO REMEMBER

Six "Moments to Remember"—familiar to all college students—were woven into the program. The models displayed the proper attire for New Year's Eve, football games, dates, walks, the bedroom, winter, and movie date.

Models from the Fashion Institute included Jean Hayden, Ruth Shannon, Jo Boone, Judy Delle, JoAnn Williams, Lizzie Bowden, Audrey Grant, Dinnie Johnson, Jean Kitchens, Ann Pinkham, Donna Hinsons, June Kelly, Mary Wilson and Vicki Walker.

planned.

This type of accelerators FSU expects to use have a particular advantage over the nuclear reactors widely used in atomic energy research. With the fusion type of reactor, all radiations are produced simultaneously, including neutrons, which the FSU accelerators normally will not produce. But, no particular mass can be isolated, and therefore little basic research is practical with the fission reactor.

BASIC RESEARCH

Basic research in nuclear physics, radiation chemistry, and nuclear biology will be important in FSU's research center.

"Scientists want to isolate causes and effects," Dr. Brownwarts said. "With our accelerators we can expect to set clean experiments—one radiation at a time."

The atomic research center will be primarily for graduate and faculty research but undergraduate students will be introduced to the laboratory as soon as possible.

How To Simply Look Better: Change Your Hair Style

By MARGARET McLEAN

One problem that may arise in the daily scheme of things is the one that goes like this—"How can I look better without starting from scratch, different without startling my friends, and how can I achieve all this with a minimum of effort and a maximum of results?"

The solution can be as simple as learning to manage a lipstick brush or as complicated as going on a diet, changing addresses, and having plastic surgery. Probably everyone could stand up under a little change no matter how gorgeous the original. Here's a very simple thing anyone can do and it really will work wonders. Change hair styles!

The girl with the oval face will have no problem. She can wear any type hair arrangement she chooses because her facial shape is considered ideal. The girl with the long oval face should avoid a long straight style or wearing the hair severly away from the face. She needs fullness at the sides of her face to break her already too long line. The girl with the heart-shaped face is so nearly perfect she can pretend her face is oval. All three of these basically oval shapes can wear bangs and some modification of a "page-boy" the long oval should wear a shorter fuller page-boy.

NEED HEIGHT

The round and square face have the a-face-too-short-for-the-width situation. These two obviously need to add height to the crown of the head and avoid any fullness at the sides of the face. The Italian hair style so popular several years ago is good for both of these shapes. Please avoid straight bangs and curls or fullness along the cheek bone line because this is the widest point of the contour. The square face should strive for a soft look at the jaw line. This can be done by wearing either the fullest part at the sides of the forehead and the narrowest point at the chek.

The tougher facial shapes are the diamond- and pear-shapes. For the diamond-shape the best style is the very short "Lesbi Cacia Cut" with a center or slightly off center part in the hair. The pointed, shaggy, bang-like hair at the brow line should be brushed up and flipped over allowing the points to rest on the forehead past the actual hair line. This creates an illusion of a wider forehead because the narrow brow line is concealed by the bangs.

The pear-shape face has in common with the diamond shape the very narrow brow, but the pear-shape has a very full cheek-to-jaw line. The pear-shape can wear the very same shagey cut. The diamond-shape has a better range for change, however. The same scheme for the bangs but the rest of the hair can be varied in numerous ways: page-boy short, full page-boy, pony tail, etc.

Here's some general information concerning hair. Use spray nets as sparingly as possible because they make the hair dry sticky when exposed to moisture, and the hair will be dirty very quickly because dirt particles cling to the lacquer. Bobby pins tend to split hair ends and so does a comb! A comb should only be used for parting the hair.

USE BRUSH OFTEN

A brush should be used as often as possible to stimulate and polish the hair. Rinses and dyes or bleaches should be considered as poison because they will damage the hair if used too often, and unfortunately once started the process must be kept going. The hair should be washed as soon as the hair begins to look dull or oily! the average time between shampooings is about three days.

Slightly longer or shoulder-length hair is smart now and the full page-boy is the smartest way to wear the longer hair. Try wearing the hair without any part. When a pony tail is worn the hair should be pulled up as tight and as high as possible (it is best to fasten a pony tail with a rubber band for the neatest look). Do not ever wear spit curls because they are really corny and especially avoid the very new kind—the spit curls dangling in front of the ears with pony tails dangling in the back. Wear the hair in a style that can be easily managed, and looks it too.

upon some assertion. One of the people in the party carried a camera into one of the installations on the NYU campus and was promptly escorted by a guard. It seems that no one is allowed to take pictures in this area without permission. Otherwise I'm not kidding—it's said that this is a necessary precaution for undesired reasons. You simply must try to understand.

Things just aren't what they used to be, and are very good reasons. The basic ideals of Americanism were taught in the formative of our nation it turns out that many of our founding fathers have recently been discovered to have been subversives. Professor Henry Steele Commager points out that judged by today's standards William Lloyd Garrison would have prevented from participating in anything, let alone a racial football a locally prohibited.

SOME OF those dangerous characters were Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton and George Washington. Jefferson was an advocate of violent overthrow of the government, even mathematically figuring out how often revolutions ought to occur. He was also a religious non-conformist — obviously a dangerous man.

Hamilton was blackmailed for being an illegitimate child, and thus was susceptible to being used to such secret information scandals. As against Paul, Washington was probably the worst of the lot. He actually led a revolution. Moreover he believed in a strong central government and was a member of secret societies!

So you see dear, things are not quite as simple as they seem. When you say that a Washington's Birthday doesn't mean anything to your friends, you are not taking into context of the times into consideration. Students must be mature enough to see more profound meanings in facts. You must take a leap to conclusions of the days.

ARNIE

tween rehearsals, theater preparations, and his regular classes pointed out that the play deals with some rather fundamental questions of our times, such as: "Is productivity of the individual or corporation sufficient justification for its possession of power or control? Is there a spiritual and human factor which must also be involved and considered for the power and productivity to become moral meaningful and worthy? Are business and ethical behavior necessarily incompatible? Can they be combined?

"For a fun, producing and thought provoking evening, Sabrina should be very satisfying."

Tickets for the production may be obtained at Westcott central ticket office and at the door. Student admission is 40 cents with activity stub.

Designed Locally

Ruge Chapel 'Home Made'

By RUTH FRITCHIE

Students who participate in Ruge Hall activities may now help do so in their own, home-made chapel.

"Everything in the Chapel of the Resurrection was designed locally except for the light fixtures," said the Reverend Harcourt Waller, chaplain of the Episcopal Student Center.

This chapel which was finished late last month and dedicated November 28 has been built in the contemporary style which is predominant among the new buildings on this campus.

The planners for the Chapel of the Resurrection was begun in February 1955, three months after the Chaplain Waller came to the Florida State University Campus.

A committee including the Chaplain, William Watson of the art department, and the Reverend Harry Doudlas gave suggestions, plans, and thoughts to Prentiss Huddleston, a local architect.

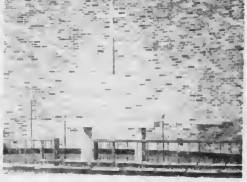
Mr. Huddleston was at the center of all our planning and out of his creative ability has come the chapel," Chaplain Waller said.

The preliminary plans were submitted to the Bishop and architectural committee of the Diocese of Florida. The plans were approved and a few minor changes were suggested.

Work was begun on the first of May 1956.

Chaplain Waller noted that two members of the FSU faculty had given invaluable time and energy toward the planning of the chapel." "Mr. William Watson of the arts education department is a talented and devoted churchman whose ideas and criticisms have helped to mold the resulting chapel" said Chaplain Waller.

One of the most unusual features of the chapel is the stained glass windows. Watson explained that the unusual stained glass windows were used for economy and enrichment rather than for a source of light.



The colors of the glass are primarily earth green with yellow-reds and red-blues for accent. These colors were chosen to blend in with the colors of the exposed brick walls.

The windows are 16 feet high and 16 inches wide. There are four horizontal metal bands placed in each window opening for strength, but the appearance is one of a continuous vertical band. This is accomplished by using dark glass along the metal bands. The resulting window rises base to ceiling apparently uninterrupted symbolizing "growth upward."

These windows blend well with the basic architecture which is pre-aesthetic There is a suspended cross over a free-standing white marble altar. The interior is solid brick with the pulpit, lectern and altar rail of wrought iron and white oak.

The chapel's bath seats 300 is air conditioned and heated.

Within a year a pipe organ will be added to the choir loft.

Buy yourself a Christmas present. The Columbia Book-of-the-Month Record at Baker's Songs of Christmas by the German Luboff Choir. It's a regular 12-inch album of hymns and carols, but as a Columbia Book-of-the-Month it costs only $2.50.

The Robert Shaw Chorale recorded two volumes of Christmas Hymns and Carols. Many of the selections are traditional ones, carols from the medieval times. You'll find one "What Child is This," the English ballad-tune "Greensleeves."

Joy to the World, by the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, Warner Chorale is one of the nicest albums at Baker's. Many of the selections are less known folk tunes and carols. "Angels We Have Heard On High" is supposedly the only purely Christian hymn of the church.

Of course Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians are represented at Baker's at this time. Fred Waring's Star, Song of Christmas, tells the story of the Nativity told in Christmas songs, carols and Biblical verses.

On the lighter side Waring and his group offer Twas the Night Before Christmas, including the title song, plus carols and Christmas popular songs.

But for a really different Christmas record, listen to Mahalia Jackson's album of negro spirituals representing Christmas in the Tropics. They call it Caribbean Christmas.

City Flicks Go Ape, Mole, As Fans Fawn

Universal-International has once again put the jackpot. In the past three months they have turned out several very successful science-fiction horror thrillers. Among the many were "It Came From Beneath the Sea," "The Island Earth," and the "Creature From the Black Lagoon."

Since director Virgil Vozel believes he can push things a bit further, he created a new and double feature horror show. "Curucu Beast of the Amazon" and, the better of the two, "The Mole People." As a science fictioner, it is unusual featuring some clever gimmicks and a fine make-up job by Bud Westmore.

The story starts with Dr. Frank Baker, winner of the Television award for the best educational program in 1955 explaining that it is possible that a civilization could exist beneath the earth. If any thing, this adds a stamp of reality in the proceedings.

The plot starts when a member of a scientific party falls into a dark cavern somewhere in Asia Lo and behold we find a lost city vanished centuries ago, rediscovered. Also discovered are a group of Asians and their slaves, a race of mole people.

John Agar, Hugh Beaumont are the main stars, barely escaping the peril of a earthquake that will seal off the city from the rest of the world. I wonder what the sequel will be like. I base a fine title in mind. The Mole Men Meet The Man's Men" or "Who Cares."

The city of Rio de Janrio and the jungle are photographed most effectively in Curucu, Beast Of The Amazon. The main plus for this picture is that it has several thrilling sequences.

The thin pint tries to trave why the natives desert the plantation and run back into the jungle. Meanwhile, back in the jungle, a lady scientist is leading in the same direction looking for the cure of cancer in the formula used in the natives to shrink heads.

John Brownfield is starred as Rock Dean adventurer extraordinary. He of course is the hero. Beverly Garland plays straight girl to a Boa constrictor, a water buffalo, a giant spider and other hazards. However Dean braves all these horrors to come out of the jungle in love with Rock Dean Anyway with that name you have half the battle won.

We never find out what happened to the cancer research. My guess is that instead of going back into the jungle, they packed Martin and Lewis up do a television marathon.

The play's the thing even when the play is unsuccessful Last on Roadway, Edtin Sondergaard premiered. A Roomful Of Roses" to mixed critical acclaim.

The plot lasted some months but proved a slight financial loss Wisely the people at 20th Fox grabbed it and transformed it into an enormous movie "Terrace Rose."

The story basically is about young adolescence. The title is somewhat misleading since you might expect to find a search pushing into the wave and lows of juvenile deliquency. Generally though the title is correct since the daughter does rebel against her mother to a great degree in the beginning of the story.

The acting laurels are dominated by four new youngsters, two of them from the original play Bette Lou Krim as Dodie reacts a sincere portrayal of a girl wemmually frozen out of her young society. Rusty Swope as the young brother dislokys a great flair for comedy completely stealing every scene that he's in. Warren Berlinger and Dianne Jergens round out the wonderful teenage cast.

Ginger Rogers is excellent as the mother while Michael Rennie is quite disturbing for the small time he appears There are also brief selections from two rock & roll songs, one of them being the title song.

"Teen Age Rebel" combines comedy with strong drama to create a very moving emotional story.

When the Fallons get their daughter for three weeks they see a very icey girl. This has been brought about since Miss Rocco summarily walked out on her at a tender age Thru bribes the kids next door Mr. Fallon sets up a true romance between Dodie and Dick After love finally marches thinds peaceful a very humiliating circumstance arrives and Dodie Fallon once again In the last reel Dodie comes of age and of mind and goes back to the Fallons who truly love her.

Board Chooses Temple Terrace As School Site

Rinehart, Ballard Voice Opposition

The State Board of Control has selected the Temple Terrace site in Tampa as the site for Florida's new four-year university.

The decision, reached over the objection of two board members, climaxed months of heated consideration. Hollis Rinehart, Miami, and J. Lee Ballard, Pensacola, favored selection of a waterfront site on Tampa Bay.

Consideration of the board's choice will now be undertaken by the State Board of Education which has power to make the final recommendation to the State Legislature.

Governor LeRoy Collins chairmen of the Board of Education, said Sunday he has not decided whether the Temple Terrace would be the best place. Tallahassee Mayor Collins said he could see no reason for other members of the Board of Education, but remains for himself. "I don't know we are prepared at this time to make a final decision on the best question of creating a university."

If the Board of Control's report is carried, $12 million will be used to build a university.

Rep. Collins said more money is needed for elementary and high schools, expansion of junior colleges and improvement of the three existing universities on the State Board of Education. The Legislature must take into account the whole picture and base its decisions on the first that needs first."

The Temple Terrace site is the site of an industrial area where a water brewery will be constructed soon.

FSU Mexican Study Set Up For Students

Florida State's University is again arranging a six-week summer course at the Instituto Tecnologico de Monterrey, Mexico, Dr. Heberto Lacayo, FSU professor of modern languages, announced yesterday.

Several FSU students attending last year's session Courses in Spanish, Spanish and Latin American literature, folklore and even mathematics are taught in Spanish with more popular courses in architecture, arts and crafts, English geography, entertainment and lawyer, Latin American history, and teaching methods offered in English.

This year's program to cost $240 will begin July 14 and end August 24. Dr. Lacayo said. Getting to and from Monterrey will be the student's own responsibility, but Dr. Lacayo said efforts can be made to arrange group or special rate transportation. The $240 fee will include tuition, room, meals, limited medical attention, laundry, recreational facilities, and excursions.

Coffee Hour Speaker Says

Revolt Is Student Pastime

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Cuban high school and college students have their own peculiar extra-curricular activity—revolt against the government—a Florida State University professor who here Friday.

Dr. Paul Stoakes, back from Cuba on a teaching assignment at America's largest Caribbean Studies said Cuban young people are willing to engage in protest but one-sided and dismisses clashes with a tyrannical government as "merely part of the future of the country in short."

They feel they have no future in a country run by dictator Fulgencio Batista, the professor told an English Coffee Hour audience.

Dr. Stoakes and a typical police battle begins when students organize a parade on the occasion of a national holiday. The inevitable shouting of anti-Batista remarks and the lack of parade permits soon confronts them with a police barricade.

Pretty soon something happens. Dr. Stoakes commented. The Cuban police don't believe there's any way to handle students except with force.

ONE-SIDED

And he noted that students usually come out on the long side of the casualty list.

Tradition gives them one advantage however, the professor said. The police somehow cannot enter the campuses of the three state-owned universities and that makes attending the excited students to abandon their sanctuary.

Dr. Stoakes, who spent the ten years as an English professor at three Universities in Santiago, said this professors' autonomy was violated for the first time in 35 years a few days ago. Both his campuses and the University of Havana were invaded by police who confiscated the files of the student newspaper, wrecked its printing shop, seized administrative records and attributed it all to students who "got there before them."

"The government later gave the university $20,000 to help repair the damage, however."

BATISTA'S REGIME

Dr. Stoakes said the Batista regime is ruthless toward its opponents. Batista, who first came into power by a military coup in 1952 and ruled through several attack Dr. Stoakes continued. And so the task of resistance falls to them.

Because family discipline is strong, it's clear they have the tacit blessing of the parents, Dr. Stoakes declared.

Hundreds of students have been killed and injured, others captured and tortured, perhaps relieved or perhaps shot, the professor said. He exhibited a copy of the University of Havana student newspaper with pictures of dead and wounded student martyrs.

REVOLT DIFFICULT

Because Cuba is a long narrow island, with only a single track railroad and a heavily controlled two lane highway running its length, and the telephone and telegraph are state-owned, Cubans have little chance of organizing a revolution, Dr. Stoakes said.

Such security measures are rationalized by Batista, Dr. Stoakes said, with the threat of an invasion by the Dominican Republic. Such an invasion for which there is no provocation and which would not be permitted by the 21-member Organization of American States is a preposterous idea but it serves Batista's purpose, the professor declared.

"It's really a dictatorship and they don't pull any punches," he charged.

Gifts from the kitchen" will be the topic of discussion at the Home Economics club meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. in Longmire, announced Phyllis Shaddick, publicity chairman. Mrs. Ruth Ferguson, food and nutrition department head, will be the demonstration. Christmas music will also be featured, added Miss Shaddick.

Mabry Hts Group Picks Head, Cops Snag Speedsters Campaign Begun By Married Students

Residents of Mabry Heights have banded together to curtail speeders in that area, Allan Russell, Mayor of the newly formed Mabry Heights Council, declared.

Speeders hurtling through the area constitute a grave danger to the lives of children playing in the streets of the married students housing project, Russell pointed out. To meet these and other problems, the residents have formed the Mabry Heights Council, and have elected Russell as Mayor. Also elected to the post of Commissioner were Roy Wynn and Mrs. Bruce Grathl.

Administration officials and the Student Traffic Court have been asked to cooperate with student police officers appointed by the council in enforcing the speed laws around the housing project, Dr. Harry Day, Director of Student Union, announced. One student policeman has already been appointed and a second, Russell said. Warnings are being issued this week, but persons observed speeding or driving recklessly will be issued citations thereafter, he cautioned.

Present plans call for expansion of the recreational facilities nex men, all of whom will work without salaries and on a strictly voluntary basis as interested members families, Russell said. The men will act in the capacity of citizens to bring in offenders of the traffic regulations.

Speed limits posted in the area have been raised from 10 to 15 m.les per hour to accommodate cars with automatic transmissions, Russell pointed out, and this regulation will be strictly enforced.

Complete organization of the residents has been a little slow in being achieved, but the housing project now has an active community council, which is working for the safety of its residents. The council is proposing the installation of a traffic light at the five point intersection where Hull Drive meets Mabry Heights, Russell said.

Mabry Heights Council members are also working for general betterment improvement of the project and to help provide for the resident families are to know each other and work together on community projects, he added.

The division has 90 housing units now occupied and soon will be. All are occupied by married students with children.

Fresh Debaters Tulane Tie For Tourney First

Four freshmen members of the debate team tied for first place with Tulane University in the Pensacola Junior College debate tournament this past weekend at Pensacola.

They are Jean Sue Brubaker and Bob Wynn, arguing against the continuance of foreign aid, and Rose Castro and Linda Arnow arguing in favor of foreign aid.

Both the FSU and Tulane teams lost one out of each debates. Other schools represented were the University of Florida, Florida Junior College at Marianna, Florida Christian College, and Pensacola Junior College.

Miss Castro placed first and Brubaker second in oral interpretation competition. Wynn ranked second in after-dinner speaking.

Tally-Ho Final Registration Set

The final deadline for registering for a Tally-Ho is Friday, announced Barbara Ayala, editor-in-chief. Less than 400 students have registered so far, and those wishing an annual must do so by Friday, she said.

Graduate Club Dinner-Dance Slated Friday

The Florida State University Graduate Club will stage its annual Christmas dinner-dance Friday, at the Los Robles clubhouse of the Tallahassee Woman's Club.

All interior students at the university are invited to attend the event with their partners, announced Jim Cook, club president. Don Spilis.

The dinner, limited to 200, will begin at 7 p.m. and the dance at 9 p.m. All tickets are on sale at the Westcott Ticket Office. Deadline for dinner tickets is Wednesday.

Special invited guests include Dr. and Mrs. Doak S. Campbell, Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Mauldin, Dr. and Mrs. Milton Carothers, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Witherspoon, Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Cason and Dr. and Mrs. Vernon Fox.

The Jerry Koehler orchestra will provide the music. Marjorie Cook, social chairman of the Graduate Club, will be in charge of arrangements. Members of the FSU Dance Club will decorate the clubhouse.

Campus Chest Queen Picked

Carolyn Brown, sponsored by Delta Delta Delta, was crowned Campus Chest Queen Saturday night by Campus Chest dinner announced Junior Gaugloff, dance chairman.

Tomorrow, Thursday and Friday the Delta Gammas and the Phi Kappa Phi's will hold their annual Joe College-Betty Co-ed Contest to raise money for Campus Chest. This contest is in lieu of the most popular college girl and Joe College contest. Tickets for votes will be set up at the Mecca, Student Center and the Seminole Inn.

Votes will be a penny per vote and may be cast by anyone Friday night and the trophies to be presented Saturday.

The Campus Chest annual Charity Bowl game will be played between Theta Chi and SAE in Cummer Stadium at 2 p.m. The 35 cents admission will be given to the Campus Chest, announced a SAE spokesman.

Nancy Lee Young, general chairman urged students to participate in these projects planned for Campus Chest so that the $5,000 goal is reached.

Comp Concert To Feature Opera

REHEARSE FOR "SEE THE WIND"
Sam Jordan, Mary Jane Marriott To Star In Opera

See The Wind' Set Thursday

The second annual Campus Composers Concert will be presented by Phi Mu Alpha in Opperman Music Hall Thursday night, beginning at 8:15 p.m. Compositions to be performed are all by students or faculty members.

"The purpose of the program," explained chairman David Wardstedman, "is to make the student body aware of the work being done by local composers as well as to provide a formal opportunity for public performance of the better scores written during the year."

This year's program will present the first performance of Ryan Edwards' one-act opera, See the Wind. The story has a local, North Florida setting, and features Phyllis DeKalb, Mary Jane Marriott, Sam Jordan and Peter Peek in principal roles. Richard Shaffer plays a small role as policeman.

Edwards, who is directing the production will also conduct the 20-piece orchestra. Shawn Franz is the University Symphony.

"The highly performable last work in Quincy was very successful," said Edwards, "and the singers should be in top shape for Thursday's full-scale performance. The singers and orchestra have been very cooperative about rehearsals, and I think that the performance will be an exciting one."

The first half of the program will be devoted to solo and chamber compositions, including voice and piano.

Of special interest will be the performance of two arias from Carlisle Floyd's Susannah, premiered here two years ago and last recently presented by the New York City Opera at City Center, with outstanding success. Miss Marriott will sing the second Gian-Carlo Menotti and called Susannah's Secret for Flute, two songs by Howard Wilson and one movement of a piano sonata by Mary Armistead.

Previews To Show Movies On Prejudice

The weekly film previews will feature three films on the theme "Problems of Democracy" tonight at 7:30 in the library lecture hall.

"Heritage", the first of the three, is a short cartoon which emphasizes the natural rights of man, the sponsoring motion picture department announced. It points out not only what these rights are, but how they may be maintained as well.

The second film, "Challenge", deals with the question of civil and personal rights as relationships between ethnic and racial groups.

"Can We Immunize Against Prejudice" is a film depicting the ways and means three sets of parents use as they set out to create in their children the attitudes that will keep them from becoming prejudiced.

Students and faculty who attend the weekly film previews are charged no admission but are asked to rate the films in subsequent discussions. The audio-visual department buys some of them for campus and statewide use partly on the basis of audience reaction.

X-mas Dance Set By West

Scheduled for Friday night is the annual West Hall Christmas Dance.

According to Hank Curel, dance publicity chairman, the affair is to be held in the main lobby of the 11 floor men's dormitory from 8 p.m. until midnight.

Music and entertainment will be provided by the "Mr. Mack." The semi-formal dance is open to the public. Admission is free.

New Student Photo Group To Get Charter

The Florida State University chapter of Kappa Alpha Mu, national photo-journalism honorary, will receive its charter in ceremonies December 15, president Tom Castuina announced.

Castuina said the group was organized a year ago and has had a number of meetings. To obtain charter members will be initiated by the University of Miami KAM chapter headed by national president David Glenn, on Castuina said.

He added that other students interested in joining as pledges may contact faculty sponsor Earl McIntyre at the School of Journalism or himself. Meetings are held every two weeks for active members interested in journalistic photography, whether in television, newspapers or other communications media which buy photographs, Castuina added.

Future KAM plans include several with representatives from major photographic companies, news picture services and professional photographers.

FASHION FLICK

A movie "Fashions," will be one segment of the Student Union Fashion Institute meeting this afternoon at 5 o'clock in 310 Westcott, a spokesman announced.

Art Gallery Shows Oils, Batiks, 'Colors

An exhibit of paintings, water colors and batiks by Joe Almyda, graduate art student, opened Friday in the University Art Gallery.

Included are 16 paintings, 10 water colors and four batiks which are color designs on fabric executed with wax.

Rich colorful and wide range of subjects with romantic flavor characterize Almyda's paintings.

Several queens and knights and even a clown and chickens are presented along with windmills and maritime scenes. Some of the water colors were done at St. Marks fishing village and one at the Natural Bridge historic site near the campus. He now teaches art at Georgia State College in Atlanta.

The show is part of his work in qualifying for a master's degree in art which he hopes to get in February. Almyda received his AB in art in 1949 at FSU, then went on to the Art Institute in Chicago. He spent several years doing commercial art before returning to FSU as a graduate assistant the fall of 1955, continuing his graduate work until accepting the teaching position in Atlanta several months ago.

Two of the paintings in the exhibition won "honorable mention" at the Southeastern Annual Exhibition in Atlanta. One bright-key painting called "Parrot" in 1955, and the oil still-life called "Front Parlor."

The young artist earned money for his education doing freelance work. One of his best sources of income for a number of years has been creating Dolphin Greeting Cards. He also did fashion illustrations and layouts for department stores in Miami, Dallas and Los Angeles over a period of three years.

VETERANS MEETING

The Veterans Club will elect officers and consider revisions to its constitution at a meeting graduate assistant the fall of tomorrow night beginning at 8 p.m. in 126 geology building, an officer said.

Construction Of A&M Stadium Would Waste Taxpayers' Money

The Board of Control has finally approved construction of a new $360,000 stadium at Florida Agricultural and Mechanical University here in Tallahassee. Money for the job was appropriated by the last Legislature, but final decision to build has been stalled with debate over whether the Legislature intended all the money to be used for a stadium.

Not much has been said about it, but the decision to build a new separate stadium for Negroes runs head-on into the U. S. Supreme Court segregation rulings.

How long, one may wonder, will state officials be allowed to flaunt their rejection of the United States Constitution?

There is, moreover, another point to the issue. Rep. James S. Moody of Plant City, chairman of the state house appropriations committee, has noted the existence of one large university stadium in Tallahassee—Doak S. Campbell stadium. Moody said he wondered if it wouldn't be wiser "to spend $1,000,000 at FSU and work out some form of joint use."

We agree with Mr. Moody that joint usage of one stadium by the two state universities would be a sound business proposition. It is ridiculous to build another Florida A & M students having played at our stadium a number of times before.

Certainly the idea of building one big stadium should appeal to FSU officials. FSU has long been bent on becoming "big-time" in football — the accent has been on increasing size, expansion.

Why then, is the logical question, has it been decided to build a second inadequate stadium it, Tallahassee? The answer to that one, we suppose, will merely be written into the record books as one of those things of great mystery and confusion, incomprehensible to the average man.

Too Many Student Activities Can Overdo A Good Thing

Students who tried to attend the many events staged on campus this weekend were faced with an odd problem at FSU: too many activities.

For instance, on Friday the Juniors held their class picnic, the English department its weekly Coffee Hour, the Light Opera Guild its annual production and a guest speech department, its second play of the year. To top it all off, the annual Campus Chest dance was scheduled the same night.

Enough of a good thing is enough, and, as Friday's agenda eloquently demonstrated, sometimes it can be too much.

While we would not suggest anything so radical as reducing the number of student activities (such a thought would be un-American), we point out that the scope of such activities can actually choke itself to death by sheer dead weight.

Enough of a good thing is enough, and, as Friday's agenda eloquently demonstrated, sometimes it can be too much.

Newspapers' Handling Of University Decision Showed Nature Of Bias

We wonder how many noticed the front-page articles Friday in two Florida daily newspapers announcing the Board of Control's decision to recommend Tampa's Temple Terrace as the site of a new state university.

The papers to which we refer are the Tampa Tribune and the St. Petersburg Times. These papers represent cities which competed strenuously for location of the new university.

When the Board of Control last month decided on Hillsborough County instead of Pinellas County (St. Petersburg) it did not end the dispute. The Times still editorialized vigorously for location of the university on North Tampa Bay, just across the county line from Pinellas. Tied in with this site was St. Petersburg's offer of its $3,500,000 former Maritime School and other contributions. Tampa, on the other hand, still favored the inland Temple Terrace.

When the story broke, here's how the two papers led off their stories:

Temple Terrace was selected by the board of control today as the site for a new four-year university.

"Five members of the board voted in favor of an 1800-acre tract, which comprises a portion of Henderson Airport, while two members stuck with their contention that marshland west of the city on Tampa Bay was the ideal spot for a new university."

The other: "Five of seven State Board of Control members voted for Tampa's inland college site here Thursday, after brushing aside a $10 million-plus waterfront offer on technical grounds."

We leave it to the reader's guess as to which newspaper authored which story—and in thinking it over, to visualize more clearly the nature of bias in today's news.

FSU Students Can't Go To Paree

By OSCAR JOHNSON

FSU OFFICIALS who turned thumbs down on the students' request for a longer Christmas holiday period overlooked at least one factor in favor of the change.

Although it is likely few students would be able to take advantage of it, a group of men in Washington, D. C. have hit upon a note idea on how to spend New Year's Eve. They're sponsoring a "men only" junket to Gay Paree, guaranteeing that those who go will "see Paris the way a man should."

A FLEA-OLD Washington printer gave birth to the idea in a newspaper ad and a short order had set up a party. The men will leave Washington by air Dec 29 arrive in Paris the next day, and return early Jan. 2. With this junket an FSU student could get back to Tallahassee by the required Jan. 3, but it won't likely.

Explaining the idea the printer Ted Stevenson said he had been thinking of what a dull place Washington is to spend New Year's Eve. From response to the ad quite a few other men were thinking the same thing. One of the first to sum up, he said, told him, "I've got to keep this quiet because my old lady thinks I'm going duck hunting." Stevenson maintained that the passenger list would be top secret.

STEVENSON WAS asked what was meant by the line in his ad reading: "See Paris the way a man should." He was quoted as replying, "Well Hun! That means, of course, you we're arranging tickets for the Folies Bergere and all those girlie shows." Most of the capacity anticipated load of 66 seats have never been to Paris, he added, "but, boy, they've heard plenty."

The men only" promise applies even to a ban on stewardesses. Explaining this Stevenson said, "You wouldn't take sandwiches to a banquet." Pari-mutuel and other arrangements are being made by an international travel agency.

Stevenson concluded that the stags will have some time to kill on their own, but "This shapes up as a pretty imaginative bunch of boys and I figure we'll do all right."

OF COURSE, inability to take part in this excursion shouldn't bother FSU men, Staunch, unselfish citizens that they are, they wouldn't think of it. It's practically un-American to talk the way Stevenson does.

The price of the all-expenses-paid round trip is $145. It's $50 down and the balance payable at $18 a month, in case you're interested.

'Pacific' Was One Of Best

The Light Opera Guild's production of South Pacific was one of the most successful shows in its history. From the standpoints of audience appeal both the Friday and Saturday night shows played to enthusiastic, capacity crowds and last night's show was expected to do the same.

The production as a whole, though, was rather uneven, especially in the acting. There was enough imagination and freshness in the staging and blana "business," however, so that many of the subtleties and inflations of a non-professional production were minimized.

The best all-around job of singing and acting was done by Richard Waff as the French planter Emile de Becque, a role originally played by Enzo Pinza. Waff has a voice of large proportions though the lower register sometimes fails to project, as in "This Nearly Was Mine." It was unquestionable the best voice in the show, though Beverly Bowen's pro-incisal Nellie Forbush was close behind as far as pure theater goes.

Miss Bowen's characterization of Nellie, from the standpoints of acting and interpretation, shallow and lacked emotional conviction in the moments of deepest dramatic worry, however, was just right for the part and demonstrated a rare degree of adaptability in projecting or "getting" different types of songs.

Some of the unevenness of the show was due to the rather tasteless over-acting or to be blunt, "hamming" of some of the cast. Notable offenders were Jim Hutchinson as Commander Harbison and Chick Cicio as Stewpot.

SOLID, COMPLETELY competent performances were turned in by Betty Jane Grimm as Bloody Mary a role she has performed with the National Company and Craig Hall as the barrister but restrained performances too much. Captain Brackett—John Zilles, as Bills, showed a remarkable improvement in ease in versatility over his lead in Carousel several years ago. Much of his stage "business" was due to the fine direction and was indicative of the fresh approach given this production.

We felt that Zilles was not quite convincing as the "big-time operator" Bills is supposed to be but was successful in delineating the other aspects of Bill's character. Jerry Armes was a poignant Liat, and Sheldon Torn, as Joe Cable, was a versatile and properly embittered victim of society's inhumanity to man.

THE CHORUS was the best-trained, most alive group we have seen in Guild production. Credit for this goes to Betty Jane Grimm, who also handled the staging. Credit for a well-orchestrated performance that never overpowered the singers is due Robert L. Briggs, who also produced the show.

Play Credit To Participants

Whenever a group of inexperienced actors take the stage several things almost always happen. For one, timing suffers from the unexpected reactions of the audience. For another detailed aspects of characterization get lost in the effort to put across a few ideas. Also the audience is liable to control the players sometimes rather than the other way around.

All these things were to some extent true of the speech department's production of Sabrina Fair, by Samuel Taylor, which opened a four-day run last Friday night in the Augusta Conradi Theatre.

BUT INEXPERIENCED actors, given a good script and a good director can also provide some unexpected delights. This was also true of Sabrina's cast, who reflected much credit on Dr. Paul Diver, director, and on the entire speech department curriculum, which evidently does a fine job of preparing its students for the challenge of being in a play.

The most surprise was provided by Ethel Clifford as Julia, who made the most of an Auntie Mame-ish role. She had some of the play's best lines, and delivered them with aplomb. Also, she displayed a fine talent for emphasizing salient traits of character with appropriate gestures and vocal inflection.

FOLLOWING HER a close second was Ron McCall, as Linus Larrabee. Mr. McCall is one of the few members of the cast with any appreciable previous experience and this was evident in the ease with which he projected the cantankerous humor of his part. Though his beautifully controlled voice was a trifle high for a seventy-year-old man, and his gestures were a little exaggerated, he provided a nice foil for the other members of the cast.

The two leads, Betty Caldwell and Jack Rockett, were attractive and for the most part effective. Mr. Rockett was at all times calm and controlled, perhaps too much so. Miss Caldwell displayed a lovely voice and a beguiling insenuousness. She can hardly be blamed for not quite carrying a show which overshadowed as a vehicle for Margaret Sullavan and Audrey Hepburn. She is to be praised for ending close to it.

MARY GAIL BYAS was lovely as Mrs. Larrabee. She was attractive and for the most part was who could be called a veteran, showed a laudable ability to attune himself to his fellow players. He was particularly effective as the maid

Ralph Nolen achieved a very touching modesty as Sabrina's father, and several other smaller parts were well-handled Ann Drunagle, who spoke the prologue, provided a particularly nice moment.

All these people showed exciting promise, and we look forward to seeing them do bigger and better things. As for the present, they have given us a show that may not be one of the speech department's most exciting productions, but is certainly one of the most attractive and entertaining.

FSU Could Help Hungarian Refugees If It Really Wanted To

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Sunday's arrows in Bedlined Florida State University's announcement of the sighting to football scholarships of six high school athletes, beneficiaries of the compassion was the picture printed in one paper of the Hungarian refugee who had been awarded a medical scholarship by the University of Chicago.

Chicago, obviously to atone for its not having any football scholarships, has set up ten scholarships for Hungarian refugee students.

Yale University students within days after freedom loving Hungarians began streaming across the Austrian border, held a rally. One could tell it was a pep rally. They collected hundreds of dollars and promises of thousands more for scholarships to recognize the fight of students for freedom.

TO BE SURE, those students who fought against Russian tanks and guns were not given or raised a dangerous flight to freedom, probably couldn't hold a line or master the intricacies of the forward pass. But surely FSU could find some gimmick to justify the establishment of a scholarship for at least one of them.

America, not having stilled an unfurnished people in their vain but noble battle for freedom, can at least recognize those who survived it. The enthusiastic welcome they have received at northern points of debarkation, the offers of financial, educational and employment aid, the remarkable relaxation of our immeasurably strict immigration regulations, provided for them in their struggle inspired.

There is not a university in the land which wouldn't participate.

ABOVE MERELY rewarding fighters for freedom, FSU well could benefit itself. Many of our students are generally apathetic and indifferent to or appear to the ordinary blessings of liberty they scarcely care who running for the University of Hawaii in football.

Dr. Paul Stokkes, are so aware the country's future is their future they are willing to die for it. Bringing to this campus a student who has suffered the persecutions of despotism and seen his friends die attacking it would effectively shame those whose lives are oriented solely upon the coming weekend.

We need not do this by weakening the scholarships awarded to football players and deserving students of Confederate Civil War descent. The Hungarians involved could be shashed We could force on the planning of plum trees, which are obviously unfortunate to Tallahassee's climate anyhow. Or we could economize in entertaining garden clubs, successful restaurant operators and school superintendents would be wooed. We could abandon plans to play the University of Hawaii in football.

UNFORTUNATELY, prospects for FSU following the lead of other universities in reards to the Hungarian refugees are pretty dim. Perhaps if there is no genuine spirit of recognition and friendship among the students, faculty and administration it is best to admit it and not hypocritically appropriate money it would brutalize.

Student government leaders are pessimistic regarding the chances of collecting money from the students themselves. Campus Chest, they point out, always falls short of its goals, even with a policy of feeding and entertaining people in return for his few dimes A money drive in addition to Campus Chest would sell. Campus Chest itself can not turn over its proceeds to Hungarian relief, and most of the money is already promised to national charities and World University Service, which gets 40 per cent, will probably see most of its fee in Florida. So FSU can be of good conscience; we have done all we can.

Enough of these pessimistic thoughts Just 12 shopping days left till Christmas . . .

Calling The Card

Charity Bowl Is Unique

By JIM McINTYRE

Of all the curses of modern higher education, probably the current is the periodic choosing of young women of fair countenance and correct figure as queen of this, that and the other.

Each organization or semblance thereof feels that its year is incomplete if it hasn't picked a queen, sweetheart, or plain "Miss." Clubs have been known to lose their heads when the membership split over just who's girl would be the sweetheart.

THERE ARE, in fact, so many queenships that a girl could naturally feels as if her collegiate career is incomplete if she hasn't been elected queen of the royal consorts.

In more than one instance, opportunistic young men have used these contests to their own advantage.

Take, for instance, the kins of last year's dormitory potentates, Hans Tews. Hans for several years practically ran the selection of Hall's candidate for Homecoming Queen. What girl, aspiring to the queenship, would not feel a certain pulsating throb for Hans when she thought of the $20 notes Hans was encased in those eleven-story walls? Hans had very little trouble finding a date during the two or three weeks prior to the selection of the Hall's candidate. Variety pleasure is fine, but he never seemed to mind.

THEN, AFTER the selection by the men of the dorm, Hans was usually stuck with the candidate as a fairly steady date until the time of the coronation. Strangely enough, he never seemed to mind that phase of the activity either.

The Homecoming Queen contest is one of the few races of the type that is conducted on a sane basis. Instead of having a bevy of feminine pulchritude parade unashamedly before a group of leering, objective judges, the pictures of contestants are placed on a booth and each student is allowed one vote for whom he condone.

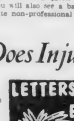
BUT SUCH a thing as winning the "Miss Campus Chest" title is ineffective of neither campus approval nor of merit. It is therefore with a feeling of thanksgiving that we view the forthcoming coronation of the queen of the ATO-LXA Charity Bowl Football Game.

We are in no way connected with either fraternity, but feel that there is much to be said for their method of choice in the selection of thus particular queen. She will be chosen not by the number of pennies put in her jar, nor by the manner in which she walks. The sole judge will be the number of tickets to the bowl game sold by her particular organization.

THIS IS using a form of achievement as a basis of choice. Granted it is not the most desirable form of achievement but it is the most workable basis in view of the circumstances. To choose on the basis of academic achievement would limit the field so much that it would be no contest.

We would recommend to all that attendance at the bowl game, to be held in the Florida High field this coming Saturday afternoon, might be one of the most unique experiences in a long time. Not only do you get to see a queen chosen on an entirely different basis, but you will also see a battle royal between two groups who are quite non-professional in the art of knocking each other.

It should be quite a sight.



Flambeau Does Injustice

LETTERS to the EDITOR

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is written in protest of a gross injustice to Richard Waff. A front page article by Ann Dye in the Florida Flambeau, December 7, devotes its entire coverage to one Beverly Bonn, "the girl who lost her hair and Southern accent to become a star," in the Light Opera Guild production of South Pacific.

In my opinion of this kind a great deal of work and a great number of hours are involved on the part of the entire cast. The greatest prese-are however, is Mr. Waff, who not only has lead role, in a Broadway production unsurpassed vocally, and of course Mary Martin's name sold many as part of the theatrical deal, I do not believe, however, that Miss Brown, the girl who lost her hair and her Southern accent to become a star, is at present much of a star except in the eyes of a few misguided sorority sisters. Dye

Waff was on stage wandering around in the shadows of Miss Brown, and singing a minor role that was once starring in a obscure character.—Ernie Pinza

In fairness to all, I believe it is time a protest for a fair publication in publicizing other activities, to give a fair share of publicity to one of probably several outstanding members. When so much is involved and such a commendable performance is given on the part of all concerned a little more discretion would seem justifiable.

Respectfully submitted
